Wartime Food Production Is Keynote of Farm Show

—Harrisburg—

The ability of Pennsylvania farmers to shoulder their share of the war emergency burden will be displayed on a gigantic scale here during the 35th annual Pennsylvania Farm Show to be opened by Governor James H. Duff on Monday, January 8, to run five days and four nights in the 20-year-old Farm Show Building.

The 1951 Farm Show, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the old State Fair which originated here in 1851, is designed to provide inspiration and guidance to farmers for advancement of Keystone State agriculture, according to Miles Horst, chairman of the State Farm Show Commission.

"Our farmers are preparing now to meet demands for increased production of food in the coming year," he declared. "The Farm Show comes at a time when it will be of greater value than ever to rural people. If weather is favorable we can expect more farm folks than ever before because this Farm Show will serve to point the way to wartime food production."

The coming agricultural exposition is really a "Pennsylvania Week for Agriculture" because it presents the cream of Pennsylvania farm crops, livestock and poultry within the 13-acre Farm Show Building as the largest mid-winter show of its kind in the world, Secretary Horst added. It shows Pennsylvania agriculture on parade.

Weeks before the scheduled opening of the 1951 Farm Show the Commission found the event would excel all others in size and scope. This show will have the largest cash premium total in history, the largest livestock and dairy cattle entry list ever known, the most complete display of farm machinery ever assembled at any Farm Show, largest number of cash awards, and more vocational school competitive exhibits. New features include the first State Championship Sheep Shearing Contest, a spring wild life demonstration plus a sheep herding demonstration with sheep dogs.

Present day farm problems, including the increasing shortage of skilled farm workers, will come up for discussion at many of the annual conventions or meetings of 30 state-wide farm organizations to be held during Farm Show week. These sessions begin Monday morning and continue through Thursday evening. A total of 127 scheduled meetings and events guarantee there will not be a dull moment at the Farm Show.

Among prominent speakers at association meetings will be Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, newly installed president of the Pennsylvania State College. He is to address the annual banquet of the Pennsylvania Dairywomen's Association on Wednesday evening. Although the Farm Show doors open as usual on Monday morning, formal opening by Governor Duff will be that evening in the coliseum or large arena, followed by a display of military hostmanship by mounted troopers of the Pennsylvania State Police. More than 10,000 will jam the arena for this and each of the other evening events which include the following:

Tuesday, the sixth annual Rural Talent Festival "Song of a Century," tracing Pennsylvania's part in the development of the American fair, the founding of the State Fair in 1851, opening of the Farm Show in 1917 and its 35-year development. More than 800 rural people will participate, including the Keystone Future Farmer Band of 100 pieces. Wednesday, the State Championship horse pulling contest. Thursday, the State Championship horseshoe pitching, log sawing and sheep dog herding contests and sheep dog demonstration, following the annual parade of prize winning livestock. There will be another big year for rural youth and farm women at the Farm Show. Exhibits and participation in scheduled events will exceed all other shows. (Continued on Page Four)

U. S. Fighting Man Titled Man of Year

—New York—
Time Magazine has selected "the U. S. fighting man" as man of the year. The magazine's January 1 cover carries a four-color portrait of a grim-faced helmeted soldier against a battle-torn background, symbolic of all the U. S. armed forces. A special report praises and criticizes the soldier as "An American, in the bitterly unwell-known role of the fighting man. The U. S. fighting man was not civilization's crusader, but destiny's drattee."

Duff Urges Protection of Civilians

—Harrisburg—

Pennsylvania's 1951 Legislature which convened Tuesday afternoon heard a solemn warning from Governor James H. Duff that its first attention should be turned to civilian protection in the event of World War III.

The outgoing governor, who leaves office January 16 to go to the United States Senate, departed from custom in his final address to the General Assembly to impress upon it the gravity of the situation in which civil populations soon may find themselves.

He did not define a pleasant prospect, and he did not hold that the whole duty lies with either Washington or Harrisburg.

"Every community must assume responsibility for organizing on its own and solve its own problems with aid and counsel from the state Federal Government," Governor Duff said.

To this end the governor now is having prepared by the Department of Justice a legislative bill, if adopted, will create a state military and civil defense commission with power to force Pennsylvania municipalities to act in unison for the protection of their populations.

The governor at a dinner caucus of Republican state senators, was reported to have told the gathering that plans for underground shelters against atomic bomb attack were wasteful. The eight minutes which authorities promise as a warning would not give time for the population of a city to reach large underground shelters.

The Legislature has adjourned until January 15 when John S. Fine will be inaugurated governor.

For their leaders, members of the Senate chose: GOP State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor, president pro tempore; Senator John M. Walker, Oakmont, majority leader; Senator John M. Jeannette, minority leader; Senator Fred P. Hare, Somerset, majority whip; Senator John Haluska, Cambria County minority whip.

Members of the House voted in, as expected, Representative Herbert P. Sorg, St. Marys, speaker of the House; Representative Charles C. Smith, Philadelphia, majority leader; Representative Hiram G. Andrews, Johnstown, minority leader; Representative Albert W. Johnson, Smethport, majority whip; Representative Joseph A. Scanlon, Philadelphia, minority whip.

State Draft Quota For March 5, 657

—Harrisburg—
Pennsylvania's draft quota for March has been fixed at 5,657 men.

Colonel Henry M. Gross, state draft director, announced at the same time that some 15,000 doctors, dentists and veterinarians who have not yet registered for the draft probably will be called upon to register June 15. This will include all men of the three professions who have not yet reached the fiftieth birthday.

Commenting on Pennsylvania's draft program, Gross said a total of 14,941 men were inducted into the armed forces during the four months of September through December—522 more than called.

Quarters Prepared For Eisenhower

—Paris—
Decorators and carpenters are converting the Astoria Hotel into temporary headquarters.

The Astoria, only a few yards from the Arc de Triomphe, was used by German officers during the Nazi occupation and was taken over by the U. S. Army at the 1944 liberation. It was built in 1906 with German capital.

Eisenhower is expected in Europe soon after the New Year, after conference in Washington.

What will the Country do Without Saturday Night?

While talking to Jim Thomas, our local "Electricier extraordinaire," recently, particularly about nothing, he dug into his wallet and came up with the following gem:

There is, we believe, a lot of good, everyday horse-sense expressed:

A big-city idea, the early closing of stores on Saturdays, is reaching out into the country towns and provoking warm discussion. The inland small town is usually a trade and service center for the farm people who live around it. In planting and harvesting seasons farmers are often pressed for time, and Saturday night offers the only convenient time to do their shopping. By custom it has become a sort of social occasion also. Folks who live miles apart have a chance to meet and exchange news and gossip.

One protest at the manifestation of progress was recently voiced by the editor of the Appleton, Minnesota, Press in the following editorial:

"It is none of my business, perhaps, but it seems to me that the merchants of the smaller communities and towns are taking a big chunk of pleasure out of life in their communities by heading into a program of closing their places of business on Saturday night. For local and rural residents, going into town on Saturday night is an institution of as long standing as the Saturday-night bath, and as beneficial to improved social relations. There isn't anything I can think of at the moment that does as much for keeping town and country contacts, which so many talk of as important, on a sound basis."

82nd Congress Convenes in Crucial Session

—Washington—

The 82nd Congress went to work Wednesday amid Democratic pleas for national unity and Republican demands that President Truman clarify his international aims.

Reflecting grimly on American casualties in Korea, the Senate and House began organizing their ranks for two years of grappling with vital problems which may lead the nation to devastating world war or peace.

Stronger in both Houses because of their victories in the November elections, Republicans have clear signs that they will move to force a reassessment—and some possible changes—in American relations with other countries.

Senator Taft of Ohio, scheduled for re-election as chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, told a reporter he thinks the major problem of the new Congress will be to "bring about a determination of military and foreign policies."

Taft foresaw Congress almost complete absorption with the issues of rearming against the threat of soviet aggression—such questions as military appropriations, new taxes, economic controls and changes in the draft law.

He gave little chance for legislation to expand Federal health, education and other activities, although he said he himself will offer measures of this kind.

Senator McFarland of Arizona, elected Tuesday as Senate Democratic leader, told reporters he thinks the chief thing to be accomplished now is to achieve national unity. His election was a blow to Truman forces.

McFarland declined to forecast the trend of legislation until President Truman reports on the state of the nation—and the world—at a joint meeting of both Houses Monday. The President will outline his program then and in budget and economic messages later.

The old Eighty-first Congress passed into history Tuesday after voting a huge new 20-billion outlay in defense funds and approving a $3,100,000,000 home-front preparedness bill for President Truman's signature.

Reds Push Toward Battle Rages

—Washington—
General Walton Harrison Walker was buried Tuesday in a grave close by those of other famous soldiers who rest in Arlington National Cemetery.

By an act of Congress at the request of President Truman Walker was buried as a four star general. He was promoted to that rank posthumously only an hour before the funeral.

Defense Secretary Marshall stood with others who had served with Walker in war, including General Dwight D. Eisenhower and General Omar N. Bradley. Only a few paces away were the graves of men who also had been his comrades-in-arms—General John J. Pershing and General Henry H. Arnold.

In a field dispatch received Wednesday night International News Service War Correspondent Robert Schakne quoted a high U. S. Eighth Army officer as declaring:

"To the best of our knowledge at (Eighth Army) headquarters, a Red breakthrough of the United Nations line north of Seoul is definitely not the case."

However, units of a 500,000-man Chinese and North Korean combat force swept down Korea's east-central corridor 30 miles south of Peralai 38 in a growing threat to outflank and trap the defenders of Seoul.

Upon the outcome of this threat, front dispatches said, depended whether the Eighth Army's American and other UN forces would fight to the last or nearly deserted Seoul.

Full Cupboard For U. S. Seen

—Washington—
The Department of Agriculture has this advice for housewives—do a cupboard.

The standard hearing was only a waste of time. Officials said the national cupboard is full and there is plenty of food for everyone.

They forecast confidently that there will be no need for food rationing next year. Even if the 1951 crop fails, they said, the present banking of food surpluses would carry the nation over until the 1952 crop is harvested.

A department survey showed there should be ample food to fill domestic, military, and foreign needs. It showed the nation has or will have shortly:

A surplus of 1,447,000,000 bushels of wheat. (Domestic consumption averages about 800,000,000 bushels a year.)

A surplus of 3,965,000,000 bushels of corn which guarantees near record crops of meat and poultry.

A 1951 pig crop of about 100,000,000 head.

More than 2,000,000 more cattle in 1951 than this year.

Poultry, milk, butter, and cheese in abundance.

The Agriculture Department already has said there is more sugar than the nation can use.

New Year Death Toll Is 424

The nation's 1951 toll of accidental deaths started out on a par with 1950.

Accidents killed 424 persons across the nation during the three-day New Year's week end, a final tabulation shows.

This was one less than the 425 killed a year ago. But it fell sharply below the total of 724 violent deaths during the long Christmas week end.

The combined Christmas New Year's death toll this holiday season was 1,148, including 849 traffic victims.

Pennsylvania had 20 accidental deaths in traffic.

28th Is Ready Strickler Says

—Lancaster, Pa.—

The 28th Infantry Division is ready to perform any task to which it is assigned, Major General Daniel B. Strickler, its commander, said Monday. General Strickler spent the New Year's holiday at his home here.

"Actually, the former Pennsylvania National Guard outfit which is in training at Camp Atterbury, Ind., won't be fully trained for combat until next April," Strickler said. "But these are times of emergency and we must always be prepared."

Strickler described the morale of his men as generally high. "Everyone definitely realizes his responsibility and is eager to learn," he said. "The conduct and behavior of the men is the highest to be desired."

Strickler, a veteran of two world wars, said the men under his command "are the finest groups I have ever worked with." He based that conclusion on two things.

"First," he said, "we were aided by the fact that the 28th Division was taken into the U. S. Army intact. It is built around a nucleus of trained men who are used to working together. Second, the men realize that the better training they have and the better team work they practice, the better chance they will have to perform upon the battlefield."

40 Farm Trainees To Graduate

A record class of 40 trainees in the Greene County veterans farm training program will be graduated at the third annual commencement exercises at 8 p. m. Thursday, January 17, in the township high school auditorium.

Colonel Charles I. Faddis, Waynesburg, a veteran of both world wars, and a former congressman, will be the speaker.

Special music will be provided by the Richhill township high school band under the direction of Mrs. Lillian L. Cooper.

Seventeen members of the graduating class attended farm training classes at the Waynesburg center, 14 at Wind Ridge and nine at Rogersville.

There are still 62 active trainees preparing for a farming future in the nine full time classes being conducted in Greene county.

Last year 16 veterans were graduated and in 1949, six men were in the graduating class.

(COPYRIGHT, 1950, By HOWARD L. LECKEY)

THE HOGE FAMILY

There are a number of excellent genealogies on branches of the Hoge family, two branches of which came to Greene County. We have more than an outline of the beginnings of the Hoge family in Frederick County, Virginia, abounds in records. William Hoge. Also there are excellent records of the American ancestor, who was born in Scotland and settled first at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, where he went to Chester County, Pennsylvania, where he settled in the Shenandoah Valley. William Hoge was married to Elizabeth, who was named for him, such as Hoge's Creek, where he died about 1740. He was buried in Winchester, Virginia, in Will Book 1, pp. 338. He was married to his wife, Barbara, and eight children. His children were John Hoge, William Hoge, Jr., a daughter that married Neal Thompson, another daughter that married Robert White, Alexander Hoge, James Hoge, wife's name Agnes, George Hoge, and Juster Hoge.

William Hoge, II, was born about 1700. On April 16, 1748, he and his wife, Ann, whom he married on February 9, 1723, removed from Virginia to Bucks County, Pennsylvania, bringing a certificate from Opequan Monthly Meeting to Richland Monthly Meeting. Friends records certify to these births of William and Ann Hoge's children.

William Hoge, born December 6, 1724-5.
 William Hoge, 3rd, born January 4, 1726, married Esther Ewing.
 Solomon Hoge, born March 21, 1729, married Esther.
 George Hoge, born February 6, 1733, died 1805, married Elizabeth Blackledge.
 Joseph Hoge, born December 1, 1735-36.
 Zebulon Hoge, born April 15, 1738.
 Ann Hoge, born December 26, 1740-41, married Everhard Roberts. These records are from Richland Monthly Meeting in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and are as reported by Clarence V. Roberts in "Early Friends Families of Upper Bucks County." Ann Hoge died in Bucks County March 21, 1759, and William Hoge, 2nd, returned to Virginia in 1760. His sons, James, William, Solomon, George, Joseph, and Zebulon Hoge, either went with him or had preceded him in the migration back to Virginia. Before the end of the Revolution at least two of these sons came to the Tenmile, while a third seems to have removed to Fayette County. William and George Hoge, sons of William and Ann Hoge, after a short time in the vicinity of Rices Landing, took up land near Fort Bell on a branch of Ruffs Creek, where George Hoge had warranted to him on February 9, 1785, a tract of land he named "Deer Park." William Hoge on September 22, 1787, received a warrant for the adjoining tract under the title of "Smithfield" which later was patented to Thomas Hoge. Zebulon Hoge seems to have stopped for a time in Fayette County.

Family of William Hoge, III

Through Bible and Hopewell Monthly Meeting records it is learned that William Hoge, 3rd, born January 4, 1726, married Esther Ewing. Their children were:

- John Hoge, who on May 14, 1778, married Mary Jenkins, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Jenkins of Frederick County and later Hampshire County, Virginia, where Jacob Jenkins died about 1795, leaving a will, found in Will File No. 36.
- Asa Hoge, who married December 11, 1799, Mary Griffith.
- Jesse Hoge.
- William Hoge, 4th.
- Solomon Hoge, born in Virginia March 4, 1767, died in Greene County, Pennsylvania, July 7, 1813. He married March 5, 1794, at Hopewell Monthly Meeting, Mary Fisher, daughter of Barak and Mary (Butler) Fisher. Mary Fisher Hoge was born March 19, 1761, and died in Greene County, September 12, 1847. Solomon and his wife are buried in the Smith Cemetery near the Childrens Home.

Children of Solomon and Mary (Fisher) Hoge

- Barak Hoge, who died before 1850. His wife was Experience Doty, daughter of Anthony and Mary Doty. They are probably both buried in the old cemetery at Grimes School House, where a marker shows that Experience died October 13, 1859, at the age of 55 years.

Children named in O. C. Docket 3, pp. 154

- William Hoge.
- Experience Hoge.
- Sarah Ellen Hoge.
- Elizabeth Hoge.
- Samuel Hoge.

Family of George Hoge

George Hoge, son of William and Ann Hoge, was born February 6, 1733, and died in Greene County, Pennsylvania, about 1805. While living in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, he married on December 9, 1756, Elizabeth Blackledge, born in 1727, who died in 1804. She was a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Randall) Blackledge. On January 11, 1773, George Hoge was disowned by Hopewell Monthly Meeting for bearing arms. This does not seem to have weighed heavily upon him for he served in the Revolutionary War, followed in Captain Benjamin Stiles' Militia Company from Morgan Township on March 20, 1798, he and wife Elizabeth joined in a deed of a part of "Deer Park" to Thomas Adamson, and then shortly before his death he and wife Elizabeth made a deed on December 2, 1803, for the balance of "Deer Park" to his son, Thomas Hoge. (See Deed Book 2, pp. 415.) He and his wife are probably buried in the Adamson Cemetery but no markings are shown. A Bible record copied by Norval Hoge and sent to this author by Miss Tillie Hoge gives the birth dates of each of the children of George and Elizabeth (Blackledge) Hoge.

Gen. Bouquet's Birthplace Unmarked, His Grave Lost

—Harrisburg—

Henry W. Shoemaker, president of the Pennsylvania Folklore Society, State Museum, Harrisburg, tells this story of General Harry Louis Bouquet, the victor of Bushy Run, August 4-6, 1763, whose birthplace is unmarked and whose grave was destroyed by a tidal wave.

"Born at Lyon, France, June 15, 1714, instead of Rolle, Switzerland in 1719, as frequently stated, General Bouquet's parents fled with him to Lake Lemane when the child was about a year old, hiding for a time in the Mountains near La Grande Chartreuse after many years of persecution as Camisards or Huguenots.

"Bringing a family letter to the Reformed Church at Rolle, young Harry Louis was confirmed in 1726, and became a devoted member of the congregation, his name and age being inscribed in the church register. Bouquet's baptism occurred in Lyon but his birthplace is unmarked.

"Soon after confirmation young Bouquet became a Swiss military cadet at Neuchatel and as a coronet was transferred to the army of the King of Sardinia. Transferring from there to France he served on the staff of Marshal Maurice de Saxe. In 1750, he secured a Major's commission in the army of Holland.

"Given increased rank and pay, Bouquet joined the Rifle Regiment, later the Royal Americans, which exists today as the 60th Royal Rifles of the British Army. This typically American outfit was attached to General John Forbes' expedition for conquest of Fort Duquesne in 1758, Colonel Bouquet serving as second in command.

"Quickly assimilating Indian warfare methods which had been repellent to General Braddock and most of his staff, these Continental officers, all speaking German and French, and as in the case of Bouquet, Italian, gave an elan and thrill to their continental followers, which covered General Forbes and his command with deathless glory.

"To celebrate the fall of Fort Duquesne, General Forbes named it Fort Pitt, and the surrounding settlements Pittsburg. General Forbes did not long survive his victory, being carried back to Philadelphia on a litter. Colonel Bouquet assumed nominal command on the return march.

"After General Forbes' passing on, the Royal Americans successfully campaigned in Cuba and Canada between 1758 and 1762, when they were recalled for the reconquest of Fort Pitt again in French hands and marched to western Pennsylvania, encountering a strong force of French and Indians at Bushy Run, near the present town of Jeannette in Westmoreland County. In a three days' battle, Bouquet's forces, fighting in Indian fashion, prevailed and the power of France on American soil was forever at an end. Fort Pitt was found deserted and burned when Bouquet's army reached there and the conquerer set out to rebuild it, including the famous Redoubt, still standing and soon to be the centre of an imposing park at the point.

"Commissioned Brigadier General, Bouquet followed up his victories at Bushy Run and Fort Pitt by chasing the defeated foe clear to Indiana, where occurred a general capitulation including the return of all white children captured by the Indians.

"Bouquet soon after left for Florida to take command at Pensacola, where he was able to adjust some critical situations that had arisen between the white settlers and the Cherokees, Creeks and Seminoles.

"His services there were brief, as he was soon stricken with typhus and died after a few days' illness, far from family and friends. A victim of pestilence, he was hurriedly buried in the Protestant corner of Pensacola's Military and Naval Cemetery. No stone was placed to mark his grave and a tidal wave washed out that part of the cemetery so it can be said that the Victor of Bushy Run, called by many leading historians "the most decisive battle fought on the American continent," rests not in an unknown grave, but no known grave."

The program entitled "Absolute Music" was led by Mrs. William Wood. Her pianist, Miss Winifred Stiles, played "Finlandia," "Crescendo," and "Winter Wonderland." The program of record recovery and restoration under way in Auditor General Weldon B. Heyburn's department in Harrisburg has unearthed priceless historic treasure troves of the Revolutionary period—and it has also uncovered two complete "surprises."

The first surprise was a century old "mystery" with which the Auditor General's department is now confronted.

The second is a collection of original steel engravings for the printing of money, the surfaces of which are unetched and in perfect condition.

Auditor General Heyburn disclosed the two "surprises" today and said:

"We have recovered a volume dated 1844 and entitled 'Small collateral inheritance tax book' in which is recorded the accounts of the county registers of wills. One of the department auditors making a routine check over a hundred years ago, on behalf of the Commonwealth, apparently noted something that disturbed him considerably for he firmly wrote beneath the record:

"Something very mysterious in this account."

"Checking collateral records, it appears that nothing was done to solve the 'mystery' of the account. So now it appears that we have a 100-year-old mystery on our hands in the fiscal affairs of the State. We won't become unduly alarmed, however, because the sum involved was but $217.83 and all concerned, including the auditor who noted the mystery but failed to solve it, have all long since passed to the final accounting."

"The second surprise was a collection of perfectly preserved steel engravings with which money was printed during the days when the State was in the 'money business' and bank notes were issued 'secured by the deposit of public funds' and the money issued was 'countersigned and registered by the Auditor General.'"

"Most of the plates are for $5 and $20 bills, with five notes on each plate. There is one plate however, that has a $20 and $50 note engraved on it."

"Ordinarily it was the custom to deface the surface of the plate when it was turned in. But these plates were returned in perfect condition. Issuing bank notes The Petroleum Bank of Titusville, the Mifflin County Bank and the Farmers Bank of Mount Joy, among others."

"Most of the plates are dated 1863 and 1864."

"When the recovery program has been completed and all the historic material assembled and classified, the plates will be placed on display and the heretofore 'closed mystery' will also be 'exposed' and placed on view."

Fifty-Year History of Greene County Sports

By GEORGE N. THOMAS

THE PASSING OF WAYNESBURG COLLEGE BASEBALL

It is a good thing indeed that the pulse of Waynesburg College has not been measured by its fervor for baseball. If it had, the school might have died in the early 1920s.

Old time diamond enthusiasts, however, will argue into the dawn that it was not baseball that let down the college, but rather that the college let down baseball. Be that as it may, the facts signify that before the athletic board of the school officially decreed in 1925 that baseball would be replaced with track on the spring agenda, baseball had been "dead" for two years and only the mourners remained for the wake. Some mourners supported summer, or normal teams, for a year or so.

It was an inglorious end to a glorious history. From Orange and Black baseball ranks of the Grecian Benders of 1869, through the twenties, which saw the last rites, came many great men.

Senators, governors, congressmen, college presidents, lawyers, doctors and statesmen learned fundamentals while playing on diamonds in the district.

Following three years of no baseball teams because of World War I, Greene Countians began clamoring for a college team. Not only that, but they wanted a good team—like the one twenty years before. Taking their appeal to heart, the school sought to re-establish the diamond sport to its once coveted supremacy. It hired the best available coach, Camden A. Sims.

Coach Sims must have been the superior coach everyone called him. He was a good pitcher, too, and he was fortunate to have another mound ace, "Babe" White, enrolled at school that spring. Together they skyrocketed Waynesburg through a hurried six-game schedule and won five of them.

Citizens who had advocated return of the team were elated because the victories were no flukes. Arch rival California was the first to fall, followed by Juniata, Duquesne, Wash.-Jeff, and Dick Guy's Pittsburgh Collegians. In the second game of a Decoration Day doubleheader with the Collegians—also the last game of the year—spoiled a perfect season for the locals. They lost to Dick Guy's pros, but only after they had whipped them earlier.

Playing for Coach Sims and being toasted all over town were Ross Minor, George Black, Doc

White, Babe White, Tony Crouse, P. Crouse, Mack, Alley and Benny Stagers. Although very well liked, Sims was relieved of his managership but retained as a player the following season.

Rumors persisted in the spring of 1921 that an all-time great of Waynesburg College would be the next coach. The rumor was somewhat substantiated when "old friend" Jimmy Ganear visited town from his post as policeman with a steel company in Monessen.

It was never proven that he wanted the job, but in any case Jimmy didn't get it. Instead, a friend and former team mate, Joe Hooker Phillips was signed. Joe had coached the college nine in 1914 and helped build the team with finesse that came along a couple of years later.

Phillips inherited Sims, both Whites, Minor and George Black from the season before. He was handed players with tremendous potentials in Harry McHenry, Tony Crouse, Tony Kendall, Halle Long, Sheeney O'Neil, Grover (Ossie) Thomas, Morgan Hunnell, Crago, VanHoyan and Day. Coach Phillips still had some zing in his frame and was a valuable utility man.

Hooker carried his big league ideas onto the campus. He promptly scheduled a 10-day swing through West Virginia and Pennsylvania above the loud protests of the faculty who already felt that athletes should spend more, not less, time in the classroom. The team won more than half of its games on that trip and also during the season, celebrating with a traditional parade through town climaxed by a bonfire at the field.

Phillips was a true hero to the campus, but professional ball lured him away as manager. Just about this time, on another campus, at another state college, a young man patiently waited as most of his classmates received their diplomas at graduation. Then came the W's and he stepped forward. He was Frank Wolf and the school was Penn State.

Coach Wolf could coach almost any sport and he loved baseball. After an informal football season he summoned his baseball material. He observed before him a most rugged group. Few college teams had ever claimed such a solid front of men with "know-how."

McHenry, Sims, Minor, Long and Henderson were back. New faces were Joe Varesko, Albert (Red) Irvin, Bill Reid, Ralph Scott, Paul Masters, Ernie Clark, Paul Hogan, Wally Rhine, Bill

(Chip) Helmick, Walter Main, Frank Havanas, Budget Tustin, Brown, and John O'Malley.

One of the largest opening day crowds in the schools history flowed into college field in mid-April to see this bunch slug out two runs in the ninth to beat Westminster, 5-4, on the hitting of Minor and Masters. Hogan, transferred here from W. & J., was a standout in this and other games, but he never realized his dream of beating his former team mates. Washington and Jefferson wouldn't play Waynesburg that year.

Mac McHenry, Helmick, Havanas, Varesko and Irvin were a murderers' row at the plate. Chip Helmick, Wally Rhine and Walter Main threw tricky stuff that baffled foes as Waynesburg won the first six straight. Overconfident, the college boys accepted a challenge from Carmichael's Independents and were handcuffed by a country pitcher named Grable. But the team lost only one more game that season.

Anyone who doubted the ability of this aggregation was proved wrong at the end of the summer. Joe Hooker Phillips took command of this crew and guided them through 38 wins and two ties in 45 ball games in tri-state independent circles.

The death knell for college baseball was to ring here at the close of the '23 season. It all began with a parade led by the Waynesburg Juvenile Band down Morgan street to the ball park with the opener with Westminster. Waynesburg won easily and thus they were not beaten in an opener during the twenties.

Again the team won more than half its games. Most significant win of the campaign came at Morgantown where the locals triumphed by a lopsided score. Red Irwin's long homerun over the bleachers is still remembered by residents there. He, Vic Latriam and McHenry were the leading hitters that year. Latriam, Stanley Granger and Beryl (Mike) Willis were newcomers to an already fine club.

No team was organized in 1924. The school was in midst of its football hysteria. As the community awaited the decision for 1925, college officials settled the issue by announcing that track had officially replaced baseball "indefinitely" because track was cheaper.

As it turned out, "indefinitely" meant a quarter of a century. After World War I, Coach Ace Wiley, Buck Murdock, and Roger Jorgensen made a gallant attempt to give the sport a new birth of voice and vitality. Whether their labors will sustain baseball long enough to call those years an "era" remains to be seen.

The bustling early twenties were fruitful, however. If they did not serve to keep baseball at Waynesburg College, their worth may be measured in terms of the county leagues and other baseball leagues that were formed because campus baseball was an incentive.

After college was out, players like McHenry, Varesko, Hanavas, Irwin, Helmick, Tustin, Rhine and Main, joined county nines to foster the growth of teams and leagues. Those in turn helped develop many rivalries such as the Sackville Stogies series. Hooker Phillips never stopped bragging that his 1922 independents, made up wholly of local collegians, could beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

He may have been right.

Michigan Beats California In Rose Bowl Tilt, 14-6

—Pasadena, Calif.—

Michigan, facing defeat for the first time in the Rose Bowl, exploded for two touchdowns in the final minutes of the game New Year's day and whipped a bruised and broken California eleven, 14-6, in the 37th edition of this post-season classic before 100,000 fans.

Trailing by six points and with little more than 10 minutes remaining in the game, halfback Chuck Ortman sent the Wolverines whirling 80 yards to tie the score and then Michigan's conversion artist, Harry Allis, won the game to all intents by booting the extra point.

The touchdown and conversion thus handed the Golden Bears their third straight loss against the Big Ten in the big bowl and brought the Big Ten Conference its fifth straight victory in the five year pact with the coast loop.

The second Michigan touchdown in the final three minutes was an anti-climax and a gift, but well earned on three line plunges for the tally.

Big fullback Don Dufek scored both tallies.

Allis added his second extra point and Michigan fans a moment later swarmed onto the turf and took possession of the goal posts.

California took its six point lead early in the second quarter on a beautiful pass for 39 yards from quarterback Jim Marinos to right end Bob Cummings.

But that margin was not enough and for the third straight time in the Rose Bowl, the fourth quarter jinx struck California and sent them out of this famed old football arena trailing in defeat.

Two years ago Northwestern scored a touchdown in the final period, and a year ago, Ohio State's field goal in the final two minutes and 20 seconds was the heartbreaker.

California, the slight betting favorite and coast champion, dominated the game in the first half. Michigan had the ball only four times—for only one play in one instance, and merely to run out the clock at the end of the second quarter in another.

But the intermission came back and the scene with 16 first downs to one for the Bears. It was a typical come-from-behind performance for a Michigan team which waited until the final game of the regular season to win the Big Ten title.

The California touchdown followed a break. One of Ortman's throws was intercepted by California guard Ray Solari, on the Wolverine 39.

Marinos, no master of the pass, stepped back on the next play and sailed an arching toss over Dufek's head into the arms of Cummings. He caught it on the two and fell over.

All-America linebacker Les Richter tried for the extra point, and a groan went up from the Bear rooters. It was wide to the left.

But California's great backfield terror, Pete Schabarum, Jim Monachino and Johnny Oleszewski, continued to grab yards on the ground and Marinos was good enough for a while to keep the visitors defense loose with his aerials.

Even in the third quarter it appeared that one touchdown might be enough.

Then Ortman went to work.

Tennessee Rally Tops Texas

—Dallas, Texas—

Hank Lauricella, a string-bean with power in every ounce, swept Tennessee to a touchdown with three minutes to go Monday as the Volunteers whipped Texas 20-14 in a battering, slashing Cotton Bowl game.

The little fellow brought Tennessee a victory no one in the jammed bowl thought could happen—especially after the first half.

A frenzied Texas drive died on the Tennessee 22-yard line with only 17 seconds to go to throw the crowd of 75,349 into pandemonium.

Heralded as a defensive struggle, the game turned into one of the big offensive shows of the year. The percentage boys of Tennessee, making no mistakes, cashed in on a Texas fumble for the deciding score.

The forward pass, supposed to be quite foreign to Tennessee, proved a weapon that really put the Vols across.

The game was played in a drizzle of rain that made the field and the ball slippery. But it did not hamper either team appreciably until late in the battle.

The Tennessee ground game snapped to 295 yards while the Vols gained 45 in the air. Texas smashed to 146 rushing and 97 passing.

Clemson Clips Miami, 15-14

—Miami, Fla.—

Sterling Smith, stocky guard from Greenville, N. C., tackled Miami's Frank Smith behind the goal line for a safety Monday to give the unbeaten Clemson Tigers a 15-14 victory in the 17th annual Orange Bowl football game.

A record crowd of 65,181 saw Clemson pull the game out of the fire with great defensive play after Miami had exploded for two quick touchdowns to go into a 14-13 lead.

The play came after Miami had been penalized three times deep in their own territory. A clipping penalty put Miami back on the six and later a 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness set them back to teight.

Jim Dooley swept around end to the 19 but another clipping penalty put the ball back to the four, where Smith, five feet nine and 205 pounds of muscle, smashed through to save the game, and give Clemson an unbeaten record in three bowl appearances.

Clemson rolled up 19 first downs to seven for Miami and gained 178 yards passing to 100 for the home team.

Accidental Discovery Leads to Winter Farming—Hotbed Style

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

How it came about, nobody seems to know. But, about 1922, a Norwegian farm specialist discovered a new principle for heating hotbeds electrically. The first heaters were crude affairs. And, although perfected to some extent later, were not what south side. To conserve electricity, all four sides may be of double thickness, with insulation between the boards. Be sure, too, that the corners fit snugly—a strip of rubber inner tubing at each joint will help reduce heat losses.

EASY DOES IT—the electric hotbed way.

farmers needed as a replacement for the old manure beds. Agricultural engineers went to work. Out of their experiments came soil heating cable, complete with thermostat controls to provide clean, precise, convenient warmth. The installation of such a system, and the construction of a suitable hotbed are neither difficult, nor expensive. Here's how it's done:

Electric hotbeds offer automatic and dependable control of heat, regardless of weather changes. Also they are permanent and seeds germinate in them from 20 to 30% faster than in other types. In cold climates, well-constructed hotbeds will use from 100 to 150 kwhrs per 3x8-foot sash, per month during the January-February period. Power consumption drops sharply in warmer weather, falling to about 30 kwhrs per sash, per month in April.

All Woman Panel Begins in Madison
—Madison, Wis.—
It was a clean sweep for Madison Tuesday as an all-woman panel of city officials took over the local government. The housewives rode to victory on a "Clean Clothes for All" campaign. They promise that Madison folks will have everything clean now from shirts to diapers. Seven out of the eight city officials sworn into key jobs are women. The mayor is Mrs. G. L. Crawford. Mrs. Crawford explained the phenomenon of the ladies' victory this way: "Last October, we women decided something needed to be done about the town's water supply. In some sections the water left all laundry with a dingy, yellowish color. That kind of water also discolored sinks, bathtubs and other appliances."

District Forester Offers Wide Variety Of Spruces and Pines
According to District Forester Loren R. Brown, Uniontown, the winter weather offers farmers and land owners an excellent time to plan for future planting of pines and spruces. Such plantings are particularly attractive at this time of the year and often they shelter buildings and provide splendid windbreaks. Particular favorites for planting are Red Pine, Norway Spruce, White Pine, White Spruce and Austrian Pine. Each of these species is available from state forest nurseries at the production cost of $6 per thousand trees. To obtain trees send a postal card to the District Forester. Free booklets will provide information on planting methods, species to select and growing data on each of the 25 species available.
