Convenient to All, Necessity for Many-That's Story of Hot Water

By IRA MILLER Farm Electrification Bureau

Hot water is both a convenience and a necessity on thousands of mod-ern farms. And to have it at the turn of a faucet increases its use and value. For few farmers will use the amount of hot water they want or require if they have to heat it by the kettleful on the kitchen range.

CLEAN MILKING UTENSILS—demand an abundance of hot water.

City dwellers will find it hard to understand running hot and cold water problems. If they do have such troubles, the plumber usually solves them without much difficulty. It's different on the farm. For running water—hot or cold—wasn't possible on most farms until comparatively recent times.

The coming of electricity, however, has brought many city conveniences to the country. Running water is one of them. For electric power opened the way for the installation of pressure water systems. As a result, running water in the house, in service buildings and in feed lots is becoming the rule now rather than the exception. High line power also makes possible the use of automatic electric water heaters.

The entire family benefits through the use of a pressure water system and water heater. Together, they have improved the water heaters.

The entire family benefits through the use of a pressure water system and water heater. Together, they have improved the health conditions of farmers by more than 50 percent. The availability of running hot water for personal cleanliness, as well as for washing clothes and dishes removes the farm from the "Saturday bath night era," and saves the farm wife many hours of drudgery. The latter point is understandable when it is realized that for only one of these household chores—washing clothes—the average farm wife uses 88 gallons of water per week. Wash day becomes quite a chore when those 88 gallons must be heated on the stove—after being pumped and carried to the house from the well.

Electric water heaters can be installed anywhere—in the kitchen, in the basement or even in a closet.

On the dairy farm, pressure water systems and water heaters go far beyond the point of convenience. Here they amount to necessities. For cleanillness is at the root of premium grade milk, And an abundance of hot water is needed to keep milking utensilis clean. Grade A herds and Grade A pastures don't necessarily add up to Grade A milk, The payoff comes later. Clean equipment, plus prompt and proper cooling of milk, helps protect farmers against rejection slips.

BORDERLINE DEFICIENCIES

Leading poultry authorities state that 4 out of 5 poultry flocks suffer from borderline deficiencies of vitamins and minerals. These authorities tell us that only 20% of our poultry flocks are receiving adequate nutrition to permit them to produce maximum growth and egg production. In most instances this is in spite of the fact that poultry raisers are buying expensive balanced commercial rations. These experts further advise that these "borderline deficiencies" are caused, in general, by feedstuffs produced on depleted soils; poor weather conditions; drought; exposure of feeds during transportation; and unsatisfactory storage conditions; and are not necessarily due to any fault of the feed manufacturer or the poultryman. Of course, some instances are due to improper feeding practices of the poultry raiser, such as feeding too much grain with mixed feed . . . but in general the above-mentioned conditions, which are beyond the control of anyone, are the main factors.

To combat this all-too-common condition, the Dr. LeGear Medicine Company, pioneer in the field of poultry and livestock medicines, has introduced a product, "PLUS for POUL-TRY," especially designed to prevent and correct all of these common deficiencies. The product consists of Vitamins A, Ds and Riboflavin (Bs), as well as Calcium, Phosphorous, Manganese and Iron. In addition to these, it is fortified with Vitamin Bs and Antibiotic Feed Supplement to obtain maximum growth and egg production. All of these ingredients are provided in amounts carefully calculated to overcome any of the common "borderline deficiencies," "borderline deficiencies,"

Recent laboratory and field tests have proved the need for such a product. For example, in the broiler field its use consistently shows increased profits of from 15% to 25% per bird; while in egg laying tests, increases in production of as high as 30%.

The danger of "borderline deficiencies" of Vitamins and Minerals cannot be over-emphasized, particularly in starting and growing rations. The future of laying hens and the profits of the poultry industry depend on getting birds off to a good start.

Baron Stiegel Cultural Pioneer Of Pennsylvania

"Both the birthplace and the grave of Pennsylvania's cultural pioneer, Baron Harry W. Stiegel, are unknown," says Henry W. Shoemaker, President of the Pennsylvania Folklore Society, State Museum, Harrisburg.

"He arrived as a bookless."

Pennsylvania Folklore Society, State Museum, Harrisburg.

'He arrived as a bookkeeper at Brickerville Furnace, a handsome ingratiating stranger with rumors of noble birth and valiant military achievements. He married the ironmaster's daughter, Elizabeth Huber and after the marriage he took over much of the management of the furnace, calling it 'Elizabeth' after his beautiful, young wife. Later he became an ironmaster and builder of good roads at Charming Forge and Boiling Springs; a glassmaker at Manheim, which town he laid out, and a utilities mag nate at New Judea, now Schaefferstown, where he established the first water system in North America. One of his prerevolutionary war wooden water pipes is now in the State Museum.

'He arranged his home in Mantain like a European nobleman's called Franklin stove.

"The designs on his stove plates were varied and striking; his stoneware indestructible; his glass of beauty and durability, ushered in a golden age of American artisanship. He was known as Pennsylvania's cultural pioneer, but in addition was a husbandman and helped perfect the Conestoga horses from German Oldenburgs and English pure breds; made improvements in harnessess, saddles, and even horse shoes, and the hubcaps and circular springs on the Conestoga wagons and coaches rendered travel over bad roads safer and easier.

"Then came the Revolution and often starred for them in regular games.

The same was true in basketball. When Fred Hatch and his first class of girl aspirants introduced basketball to the community, a handful of high school students were on hand to take part in the informal contests.

During the winter of 1907-08, Waynesburg College started the Inter-School League on College Heights. Competing teams were the Freshmen, Seniors-Juniors, Sophomores, Business College, Academy and the High School.

The Freshmen, with stalwarts like Inghram Hook, John Ross, Harvey Andrews, Bird Clutter and Carl Biddle, won in close competition. The following year, they formed the college's first varsity team.

Playing for the first umofficial, and evidently coachless high school squad in 1907-08 were Harry Dunlap, Bill Hunt, Herb Wallace, Arthur King, Ed Patterson, Elmer Daily and Charles Hoge. The collegians took advantage of the youngsters and beat them often putting the scholastics in the cellar of the league that year.

Although basketball was just lowing year the present four-year style course was instituted.

Immediately following 1900 Waynesburg was, excepting Koebert's independent between the style of the season. The letic community. Then Edward Martin, first athletic director at Waynesburg College, instituted his well-known policles.

With athletic standards anywhere, coaches and athletes were pretty much on their own. Nobody told them when to begin practice and when to open the season. No restrictions forbade athletes from competing on any number of teams, yet they knew better than to play professional ball while still amateurs.

Greensboro Little League Granted National Charter

Granted National Charter
The six-team Little Baseball League of Greensboro has been granted a charter incorporating it with the national setup of Little Baseball League.
The announcement was made by Albert Hood, past president of the Greensboro Lions Club and commissioner of the Greensboro
Little Baseball League.
The Lions-sponsore d loop which operated successfully last year, is expected to begin its season some time in May. Later in the summer, champions of the league will compete with district teams for the right to participate in the Little League World Series held annually at Williamsport.
Boys participating are between the ages of 8 and 12.
The Little League is a pet project of the Greensboro Lions Club. Last year they invested over $800 in uniforms and equipment.

Jefferson Falls Before Carmichaels High, 8-1

Carmichaels High, 8-1

Carmichaels High School, behind a fine four-hit hurling effort by Jim Moore, dropped Butch Biery and his Jefferson Rockets from the undefeated ranks with a decisive 8-1 lacing at Carmichaels last week.

Carmichaels, with an inexperienced team this year, wasted no time at all in securing victory as they scored five runs in the first inning. Eddle Cipcic had three costly errors to help the Mikes' cause.

Besides allowing only four hits, Moore fanned 12 men during the fray.

the Pittsburgh Pirates. Looks like Branch Rickey once more

Although basketball was just begining everyone went for the game in a big way. It was customary to stage not only double-headers, but triple-headers for the same evening.

Unfortunately, the high school's pioneers in basketball were not succeeded immediately by enthusiasts and no team was formed for two years.

Three weeks before Christmas of 1910 Lawson Bash was chosen man an age or of the Waynesburg schoolboy, Shigeld Tanaka, from an age or of the Waynesburg shigh team and, with 18 boys, he organized a team. They were to compete only in the college league.

In so doing, however, he missisted was a basic of the same of th compete only in the college league.

By January, Bash needed help and John Ross, who had become star of the college varsity, volunteered aid. Late the same month, they decided to put the sport on a varsity basis and scheduled Washington High School.

This was a period of tension between the Waynesburg and Washington communities, particularly in sports. Unlike Wash. Jeff, which didn't like to play in Waynesburg, Washington High agreed to a game here.

Transportation was a problem and so was a decent playing floor. Basketball was drawing large crowds, so authorities chose the rollar rink on Morris street, site of the bus depot today.

crowds, so authorities chose the rollar rink on Morris street, site of the bus depot today.

Carrying Waynesburg's colors was the team of Lawson Bash, Allen Hill, Carl Headlee, Edgar Frye, Jack McCullough, Smith and Kelley, and annexed a thrilling 24-21 win over Washington before a packed house.

Officially, the team played only three games that year and won all of them. Against Washington Academy, Bash looped 16 field goals for a school record, bettering John Ross' 14 goal mark set in college league competition.

The season of 1911-12 was also li mited, Waynesburg winning both games with Washington (another close one, 14-12) and the Academy. Managers Bash and Ross, however scheduled several informal contests for practice.

there was no suitable place in Waynesburg to play basketball, all Waynesburg's games would be played away.

Carl Headlee captained the 1912-13 team through a mediocre season. Most of schedule consisted of teams from College Heights. The intrepid scholastics even challenged the college variety, but the youngsters were soundly beaten.

For the third consecutive year the team had victories over neighboring Washington High School.

A debacle occurred at Claysville when that team tallied 81 points a record which stood for more than three decades, and worse, Edgar Frye was injured in the game.

On New Year's Day, 1914, the high school announced that the roller rink, formerly the Garden vaudeville theatre, had been remodeled for basketball games through the courtesy of Manager Albert Hoge. Waynesburg wasted no time in celebrating the new quarters by trouncing Cumberland High. Bill Throckmorton led the team which included Jim Pollock, Norm Zahniser, Dinsmore, Brown and Forest Scott.

Cumberland's lineup had listed Williamson and McMinn, forwards; Davis and Helmick, guards; and Crago, center.

In this 1913-14 season, the local high school "hired" its first basketball coach. J. Inghram Hook took charge of the quintet and they lost only two games. Again the bitter rivalry with Washington High favored Waynesburg with Muck Zahniser showing the way.

It was under Hook's reign, too, that one of the most unusual ball games ever played took place. Waynesburg High defeated Waynesburg College, 21-0, in February 1914.

Bill Throck morton scored more than half the points. On the college team were Walter and Worthy Scott, Allen Hill, John Blair, Ralph Spinning and John Lively. The college boys just couldn't penetrate the high school's defense, and when they did, they couldn't sink a basket or a single four try.

The season was a good one for Hook's boys. Of their two losses, one went to another bitter rival, Cannosburg, on their floor, (but later avenging the defeat on the rink floor), and toonly home loss was to the Waynesburg Independents.

In the latter loss, Coach Hook left the bench to play for the Independents, and he teamed up with his former collegiate standout, John Ross, to teach the scholastics a few tricks.

On the eve of World War I, Waynesburg High School was establishing itself as a basket ball power in the county and district.

Raiders Stop Hitting the High Spots Maples, 12-3 By JACK HAMMERS

Local organizations should model their sports programs after that of the Greensboro Lions Club. Recently this club had their efforts in Little League Baseball rewarded when they received a National Charter. Junior athletics have been going on for some time in Waynesburg, but one man, "Buck" Berryhill, has been carrying most of the lead. Nearly every organization in town has donated money, and fans, too, have chipped in their pennies, but there their efforts stop. As a result of this an undertaking that could be a big thing for the community has, so far, been just fairly successful. What "Buck" needs is more help in directing the sports and teaching youngsters to play them. Baseball season is once upon us and as usual "Buck" will do his best to form a Junior League You may not know it but the so-called Little League that now operates so successfully got its start in Waynesburg. It could no come back, too, if some organization or groups from organizations would get behind it. Nearly Waynesburg High School's Red Raider diamond squad hit hard and often to down Mapletown High School at Mapletown last week, 12-3. Jim Wagner held the Raiders scoriess for the first three in-nings but weakened in the fourth as the Raiders found the range to come from behind to nail down the victory.

$117.00 From State
Greene County residents who trapped and hunted predators during the month of March, received $117.00 for their efforts from the Game Fund according to reports from the Divisional Headquarters for the ten southwestern counties at Ligonier, Westmoreland County. Six weasels, 19 gray fox, and 8 great horned owls were probated by the successful hunters and trappers of the county.

This amount is part of the $10,367 paid out to claimants for the month of March in the entire state.

Steelers Sign Two To Football Contracts -Pittsburgh-

The Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League have signed center Bill Walsh and former Baltimore Colt lineman John ("Bull" Schweder to 1951 contracts. Pittsburgh recently obtained the 230-pound Schweder, former University of Pennsylvania star, from the Colt player pool.

Koski's Contract

The Pittsburgh Pirates have bought the contract of Bill Koski, 19-year-old pitcher from New Oreleans of the Southern Association. The sale permits a 30-day trial period. Koski, a right-hander, won eight and lost two with Mayfield, Ky., in the Kitty League last season.

coach at the college, was toastmaster.

The work which Waynesburg College is doing in getting its comprehensive physical program under way was cited by Captain Thomas Hamilton, former Navy officer now athletic director at the University of Pittsburgh, as an important contribution to the nationwide work of colleges in getting better qualified young men and women from a standpoint of physical fitness and mental alertness.

President Paul R. Stewart reported the college has made phenomenal advances in many phases during the past eight years—equal in some ways to those made in the preceding 92 years of its history. He was especially enthused, he said, by the gifts from so many more in dividual persons than heretofore, adding that it indicated the widespread support which the school is now receiving.

John Wiley, former Waynesburg grid star now with the Pittsburgh Steelers, praised the ability of the late Coach Frank Wolf.
Roger Jorgensen, basketball coach and physical education director, reported on the records of varsity sports teams and the work being done in physical education.

Arrangements were in charge work being uone acceptance of william Vale, president of the chapter; Mr. and Mrs. William Paul, Mr. and Mrs. Tho mas Johnson and Angelo Rattini.
