Origin Of Bellefonte's Name Told By Historian

—Harrisburg— Henry W. Shoemaker, President of the Pennsylvania Folklore Society, State Museum, Harrisburg, told the Centre County Legend of Prince Talleyrand, French statesman, and how he gave the name of Bellefonte, "Fountain of the Belles," to the village of Springport, at the head of Spring Creek.

"Exiled from England in 1793, as he had already been from France because of the French Revolution, he came to Pennsylvania to try to assemble some 100,000 acre tract of timberland, overlaid with coal and iron, to resell through French bankers to groups of French Colonists," Shoemaker said.

"In Centre County he attempted to deal with Samuel Wallis, in the purchase of the Valley of Wallis' Run, from Wingate to Snow Shoe, but nothing came of it, and the area, later becoming the Snow Shoe Land Company, enriched the Burnside, Curtin, Mitchell, Valentine, Reynolds, and other Centre County families.

"At Springport Prince Talleyrand and Bon-Albert Bometz, his secretary, took up their residence at the old Mountain Springs tavern, the changing place for stage coach horses, across the road from the Mammoth Spring, the source of Spring Creek, then heavily stocked with huge white trout, an earlier 'fisherman's paradise' where Talleyrand, constructed his own flies for his fishing expeditions.

"Already famed as a Bishop, diplomat, statesman, financier, orator, writer, and traveller, C. Mau. Talleyrand, as he signed himself in Pennsylvania, found the class of people at Springport to his liking and marveled at the beauty of the women in this remote mountain settlement.

"A movement had started to give the village a post office, and he at once secured popularity by suggesting it be called Bellefonte, or 'Fountain of the belles,' and soon had the entire community back of him.

"Sending to Philadelphia some specimens of Pennsylvania gold, found by Indians on Wallis' Run, he had it moulded into a golden apple by a French goldsmith, and this he proposed to give to the 'belle of all the belles of Bellefonte.'

"The finding of this gold, and its disposal to Talleyrand spoiled his chances of buying the land, but he accepted his defeat gracefully, knowing in his heart little more gold would be found there, and the personal inspection of the area by Bometz, who was a geologist, made him feel that the so-called 'mine' was salted, probably by the Indians to gain Talleyrand's favor.

"When the golden apple, to be worn from a gold chain around the fair winner's neck, was received, and passed around, it was greatly admired, and envied by the young girls, who might have a chance to possess it. Invitations were sent to 12: Anne Florey, Anne Miller, Phoenicia Benner, Leona Levy, Polly Wistar, Delilah Dunlop, Petrenella Walker, Emine Koons, Abigail Harris, Hepzibah Lamb, Delicia Mitchell, Jodie Gregg, for six o'clock dinner at the coaching inn, judges were to be Wallis, whom Talleyrand still hoped to influence into selling, Mrs. Wallis and Bometz; also Sheriff Duncan and Judge Jonathan Walker, Miss Patty Meyer, the town dancing teacher, and a few of the village officers, 21 in all were invited, all the private coach inn dining hall could contain. There was to be trout killed by Bometz and himself also truffles and champagne, which the great diplomat brought from France for just such occasions.

"The dinner was a gracious affair in the best manner, after which the fair candidates, Judge Walker and Sheriff Duncan crossed the road to watch the Prince cast with a newly made May fly, which, he called a 'Perigold Ephemer,' while the judges deliberated.

IN INFANTILE PARALYSIS DRIVE . . . The Pennsylvania campaign for the March of Dimes in the fight of infantile paralysis is discussed in Philadelphia by, (left to right) Warren D. Coss, national director of fund raising; Victor H. Blanc, vice chairman of the Philadelphia chapter; and Edward G. Fox, Pottsville, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, who has been named associate chairman of the drive in Pennsylvania.

"The girls dressed in their best laces and flounces with flowers in their hair, high waisted, and bare armed, stood by the spring, where floated the lazy trout.

"The Prince made a cast and despite the belief that an artificial May fly does not deceive the fish, hooked a two pound beauty, and as he swung it caught in Phoenicia Benner's corage, and in trying to disentangle herself, girl, fish and all plunged into the deep fountain of icy water. The other girls, as if seized by a nervous impulse of helpfulness, all sprang into the water to save her, and were floundering about like frightened water sprites. Phoenicia got herself out, the struggling white trout still hanging to her, followed by the other wet bits of loveliness, gowns clinging to them like modern bathing suits.

"Just at that minute, Bometz appeared to announce to the Prince that the judges had reached a decision and for all to return to the dining hall.

"Phoenicia, followed by the Prince, and still struggling to unhook the wiggling trout, led the way, and once inside, Dan Beyers and other Negro waiters, unfastened the trout. 'It is well,' spoke up Wallis, at the head of the table, 'one must make room for the golden apple,' as the award for the 'belle of all belles' had been made to Phoenicia Benner. She was a popular, well-liked girl, and came forward while Mrs. Wallis placed the lock around her neck, still dripping water. She was loudly applauded and the other contestants crowded about her in a body and kissed her.

"Of the many legends of Prince Talleyrand in Pennsylvania, 1793-1795, his giving the name of Bellefonte, and the awarding of the golden apple of pure Pennsylvania gold to the town's loveliest girl, will long remain outstanding events in Pennsylvania folklore and history."

THE GIFT

As children in the home we soon come to realize that our gifts at Christmas time represented to us the love of Father and Mother. Every true Father and Mother will do their best at Christmas time to give the gift that is most needful and that will bring the greatest happiness to the children. There may be limitations as to ability to give but what ever it is that is given, even a mere trinket or a handmade gift, it represents the love and thoughtfulness of the parents.

In John 3:16 we have this statement: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Let us take this text of scripture and analyze it. I never heard a Christmas sermon from this text but it seems to me that there would be no greater text for the Christmas thought.

The first thing we note about this text is that back of the Christian religion and back of every religious observance there is God, who is our Heavenly Father. This heavenly Father has an undying love for humanity. His desire to do that which is best for us. His eyes are ever upon us. His love is every manifesting itself to us. That love was so great that He gave.

Someone has said that "The gift without the giver is bare." How true it is. We remember that Jesus observed the gift of the Poor Widow who gave the two mites. To Jesus it meant more than the large gifts that the wealthy were able to because it represented her all. God so loved that He gave. So may our gifts be out of a heart of Love.

The third thing we note about God's gift is that it was a gift worthy of God. The most treasured possession he had. His only Son was the gift. It was given to a world that was in rebellion against Him. A world that hated, a world that was selfish, a world that had trickery and every evil of which the carnal mind could conceive. Yet God loved so much that he gave his son for its redemption. He gave the gift that met human need.

We are now interested in knowing how we can secure or lay hold upon this gift. The text tells us that "whosoever believeth in him shall not perish but have everlasting life." Notice that "Whosoever." Your name and mine is not mentioned but "Whosoever" includes everyone who will meet the conditions.

Army May Fight Cold With Plastic Underwear

—Washington—

The Army has developed an experimental plastic underwear which military scientists hope may win the long battle with cold, wet weather.

Four Army technicians, including a Doctor of Philosophy, christened the underwear for the benefit of reporters and cameramen by leaping into a Potomac River lagoon.

The new garment, a two-piece plastic outfit that looks like a foam rubber version of old fashioned "long undies," employs a new "vapor-barrier" principle to keep men from freezing after they get wet. Worn under the regular field service uniform, which it was in the demonstration, the outfit enables the wearer to float with ease.

When the men climbed out of the lagoon the temperature on various parts of their bodies ranged from 52.7 degrees to 67.2 degrees. Five minutes later the average skin temperature had risen about 12 degrees.

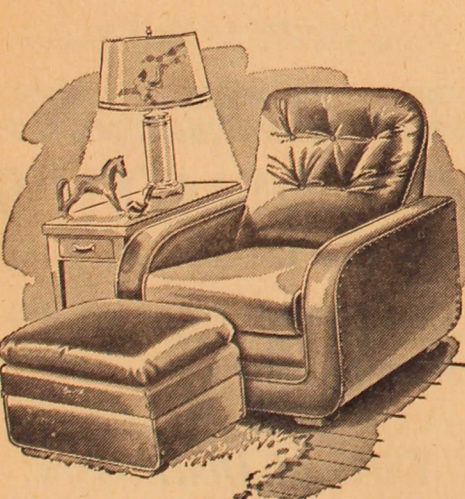

Quartermasters working on the garment said this tended to prove their point, which is that even if a man wearing the underwear receives a thorough drenching his normal body heat will warm him up again quickly.
