Lt. Gov. Furman Addresses County Township Officers

Lieutenant Governor Roy E. Furman discussed the state highway system at the annual meeting of Greene County Association of Township Officers Friday in the Greene County Courthouse.

Mr. Furman declared: "I am in favor of modernization and expansion of the road system, including feeder roads into dream highways, but not at the expense of secondary roads."

The new State administration, he said, will in all probability take advantage of President Eisenhower's new federal highway matching program.

Speaking of his part in sponsoring legislation for the State Turnpike, Mr. Furman stated the privilege of use and not taxes pay for such a highway. He favors legislation to assure that when paid for the Turnpike will not revert to the State Highway Department, because "they have enough to do."

Mr. Furman was introduced by Judge John Inghram Hook, who gave him the oath of office at the inauguration recently.

During the morning session, talks on the county's Civil Defense program and the role which townships have in that program were given by Assemblyman Stephen McCann of Carmichaels; John A. Stoup of Waynesburg, county Civil Defense director, and Ross I. Webb of Erie, western director of the State Civil Defense Council.

McCann also spoke briefly on a bill he helped inaugurate and which subsequently became law, to raise the pay of auditors in second class townships from $6 to $10 a day.

He said that some townships apparently have been paying their auditors the $10 rate since it became law, but that they have been doing so improperly.

Under the law, he said, auditors holding office at the time the bill became law were not entitled to the raise until their term of office expired and they were re-elected.

Mr. McCann is chairman of the education committee in the House of Representatives.

Calvin Heasley, president of Waynesburg Chamber of Commerce, welcomed members of the organization.

L. E. Fox of Perry Township, was elected president at the afternoon business session. Other officers named were Willard Mason of Alleppo Township, first vice president; D. Clyde Haines of Jackson Township, second vice president, and Warren H. Roberts of Greene Township, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

H. A. Thompson, secretary of the state association, outlined the importance of townships having state appropriations continued during the next session of the Legislature.

Other speakers were Milton DeLancey, editor of the State Association publication, "Pennsylvania Township News"; D. A. Bally, State township engineer; Glenn Carson, president of Washington County association, and S. L. Sharpnack, secretary of the Fayette County organization.

A banquet was held in the Fort Jackson Hotel. Twenty townships were represented.

The two year feud between natural gas and coal companies which started in Greene County over storage of gas in the Pratt pool near Clarksville, has come to an end.

Over the week end officials of both industries announced they will seek a broad regulatory law to be enacted by the State Legislature and one that is acceptable even to the United Mine Workers of America. Bills will be introduced in a few days.

The proposed law has been hammered out by all interests after months of negotiations.

The agreement came as a surprise since the coal men attempted to get legislation in 1953 that would have put a flat ban on storing gas underground. Although the bill passed the lower house, it was defeated in the Senate.

The legislation on which the parties have agreed will come in two packages.

One bill will change the name of the State Department of Mines to the Department of Mineral Industries. The change would be implemented in the other bill by the establishment of an Oil and Gas Division with a deputy secretary to administer it.

The second bill also will spell out the joint program. It provides that both industries have wanted a drilling and plugging law.

The drilling and plugging law lays out broad requirements for well drilling, abandonment and reconditioning for storage. It will mean that, in the future everyone will know where wells are and what their status is.

The proposed law also gives gas storage operators the right of eminent domain to acquire wells for storage pool development.

The company will get the right of eminent domain only when it has acquired 75 per cent of a gas sand that is at least 80 per cent depleted. This will protect the small gas operator whose holdings might be taken for storage.

Many safety factors also will be included in the bill. It requires storage operators to operate their pool in such fashion that no gas can escape into coal seams.

Upon insistence of coal dealers, it will hold storage operators responsible if gas gets into coal mines through the acts of non-gas people if it results from leakage from an uncharted well.

Coal interests admit that if an uncharted well were to cause an explosion in a coal mine, they would have a hard time proving it. However, by placing this responsibility on them, coal interests feel that gas people will find very well.

The bill will affect only gas storage under or within 2,000 feet of active coal mining operations. Storage operators under unworked coal will get ample warning when coal operators plan to move in over them.

Coal operators will get a tight state control over one of the more dangerous aspects of storage—testing out a depleted sand to see whether it is suitable for development of a new storage pool.

The coal operators, however, made a major concession when they dropped their demands on stipulated limits to which depleted sands could be pressurized.

Both gas and coal operators don't expect to find any real difficulty in getting the bill through the Pennsylvania Legislature.

Coal interests want to see a quick enactment of the bill.

It is believed the coal interests were willing to reach a compromise because the investment in home and industrial gas furnaces was too great for the coal people to disregard.

Most of Pennsylvania's natural gas supply comes into the state by pipe lines. The storage pool system is necessary to establish a uniform flow of gas during the winter peak periods.

A. W. Conover, Equitable Gas Company president, said that gas stored in the summer in Pennsylvania and West Virginia helps supply Western Pennsylvania's heavy winter gas demands.

He said the nation's pipe lines are able to carry 19 billion cubic feet a day. He said the demand for more than 30 billion cubic feet on cold days must be partially filled from underground storage pools.

The Pioneer History of Greene County, Penna.

By L. K. EVANS

Mr. Gallatin lived in New York City many years before the close of his life as a private citizen, and enjoyed the confidence and gratitude of the nation. He died in 1849, at the ripe old age of 88 years, and though he seems to have passed quietly from the stage of action, as to worldly pageantry, "unhonored and unsung," there is no public man of our illustrious dead more truly enshrined in the affections of all readers of history.

The following characteristic anecdote was told of Mr. Gallatin by the Honorable John L. Dawson with great merriment. He left his home in the early days of his experience at Friendship Hill to go to the salt works on the Kanawha River to procure a supply of that necessary article. Much of the way consisted of a single path cut through the dense woods and thickets. He had equipped himself with five horses caparisoned with pack saddles. He rode one and drove the other four single file before him. On his return trip he met a man somewhere in the southwest part of Greene County, near the site of Blacksville. As was the custom of the times, the stranger halted and enjoyed an occasion of the most familiar social chat, to learn any news of interest that either might be in possession of. It appears that during Mr. Gallatin's absence an important political convention was to be held some where in his district to nominate a candidate for some important office before which Mr. Gallatin's name was expected to be presented. He was therefore solicitous for information as to the result. And he inquired of the stranger if he had any news from the convention. The stranger, who had been down the river at Greensboro on a trading expedition, replied, "I heard them say down there that a man by name of Gallatin was nominated, and, stranger, they do say that he is the d...st ugliest man in the district." "Get up, Ned!" was Gallatin's exclamation, and the two men parted as they met, without either knowing the name of the other.

In the year 1824, General Lafayette revisited the United States and was everywhere greeted with the most passionate enthusiasm. In the summer of 1825, he paid a visit to his distinguished countryman, Albert Gallatin, at Friendship Hill. The people at Greensboro extended him a cordial invitation to visit them and made the most elaborate preparations for his reception. The streets were thoroughly cleaned—even swept with brooms from one end to the other. But for lack of time the distinguished gentleman did not become their guest. But he stopped for a short time at the village tavern in New Geneva—the house now owned and occupied by George Yeager, Esquire. All the country around—men, women and children—were there to pay him their respects and express their gratitude for his unselfish devotion to our Revolutionary cause. Greensboro and Greene County were represented in force, and many a Revolutionary veteran pressed through the surging crowd to shake the hand of the gallant old French General. Among them was Adolphus Eberhart, Sr., of Greensboro. Upon grasping Lafayette's hand he exclaimed, "God bless you, General, I helped to carry you off the field at the battle of Brandywine, when you were wounded." "And God bless you," said Lafayette, "I recognize you as one of the three men who bore me from the field on that eventful day," and with clasped hands they both stood speechless for several moments, and tears, awakened by an incident which occurred fifty years before, traced down the furrowed cheeks of each. This Mr. Eberhart was one of the original party of Georges Creek glass blowers and was the father of the Rev. Albert Gallatin Eberhart, now of Illinois. Lafayette remained over night at Friendship Hill and it is said that upon retiring, he was wrapped by Mr. Gallatin in the "Stars and Stripes," and that the relics of the identical brave old flag are still preserved in the old Gallatin mansion. "The Star Spangled Banner long may it wave; O'er the land of the Free and the home of the Brave."—L. K. EVANS.

Lot Leonard

William Leonard migrated from Holland to the state of New Jersey so early in the settlement of America, it is said, that he came into the possession of the lands now occupied by the city of Princeton, which he left by will as a legacy to his male descendants forever, making it a condition that title should never pass out of the name, but should be transmitted from generation to generation for all time. He was appointed by the King of England, a Justice of the Court of the Province of New Jersey.

About the year 1748, his son Lot was born, of whose youthful experience in the state of New Jersey there are still some interesting traditions. He is said to have been an extremely active and agile boy. Once while out in the woods in search of the horses, he heard the bells and was approaching the sound when he discovered that the ringing was a decoy of a couple of Indians who had taken the bells from the horses. Both Indians fired on him, but without effect. He betook himself to flight, but found himself hemmed in by a deep ravine which it was necessary to cross in order to get away from the Indians. Arriving on a cliff of rocks some twenty feet high he threw away his gun and made a desperate leap landing in the brush and a collection of leaves below, without injury. The Indians were amazed at the venture and dared not follow. So he clambered up the opposite bank and made his escape.

On the next day he got his brother Amos to go with him to find the horses. Now Amos was a queer kind of a genius. So reserved and reticent that it was with difficulty that an answer could be got out of him. Having found the horses a long way from home, they were proceeding homeward, Amos in front of the horses and Lot behind them. At that day it was deemed necessary, on all occasions, to keep the "eyes skinned" for savages. Lot perceiving that Amos was proceeding carelessly along, observed to him, "Amos, why don't you watch?" He replied, "When I travel I have to walk." But before the two boys got home they were attacked by a panther. When discovered by Amos it was close to him in the act of crouching to leap upon him, when he made such a wild and terrible scream as frightened the animal away. This incident became the joke of the neighborhood—that "Amos Leonard had made a noise in the world!"

In those days it was the custom to go armed to church. A portion of the males with guns would precede, and the balance follow the women and children and thus guard them from the attacks of Indians or wild beasts. On one occasion in the experience of Lot Leonard, the party of worshippers were actually attacked by a band of savages which, after some skirmishing, was driven off by the whites.

At the age of about 21 years Lot Leonard, having married Elizabeth Hoge, (who was a sister of Thomas Hoge, the father of the late John Hoge with whom many of us were acquainted), moved to these parts and took up tomahawk improvement the tract of land known as the Caldwell Houlsworth property, on which Houlsworth's mill now stands—including the Still Smith farm and other adjoining lands. This was about the year 1769. His brother, Benjamin, came out with him, but settled finally on Pigeon Creek, in Washington County.

Is he kidding?

No, nobody ever asks us to insure only one end of his house against fire, windstorm, etc.

But, in effect, many people DO carry insurance on only a fraction of their property.

We mean, they carry only a percentage — perhaps 40% or 50% or 60% — of as much insurance as they should.

They insured their property when property was worth much less. Insurance should be carried not on original cost, but on present replacement costs, less depreciation. (This depreciation is normally very little for well maintained property.)

Natural Gas Utilities to Spend $39,504,750 for Area Expansion

Natural gas utilities plan to spend $39,504,750 in 1955 for improvement and expansion of gas service in Western Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania Natural Gas Men's Association has announced. This represents an average capital outlay of approximately $42,000 for each of the more than 950,000 natural gas customers in the area.

As in recent years, largest portion of the projected capital expenditures for 1955 is budgeted for additions to transmission pipelines and continued expansion of underground gas storage reservoirs to meet winter peak load demands for gas space heating. PNGMA company budgets indicate expenditure of $7,202,100 for transmission and $7,785,000 for storage, for a total outlay of $14,987,100 to improve gas supply facilities. This is exclusive of capital outlays totalling additional millions of dollars for expanding natural gas deliveries to Pennsylvania to be made in 1955 by the national pipeline companies.

The search for additional natural gas in the Appalachian Area (Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky) and the drillings of new production wells has been allotted $9,056,500 in the PNGMA member-company budgets; this total likewise is exclusive of unbudgeted outlays by independent drillers and producers.

Enlargements and additions to utility distribution systems to serve new customers and meet the growing gas needs of present consumers will cost $12,699,500 in 1955. Miscellaneous capital outlays, for offices, warehouses, equipment, etc., total $2,761,650.

PNMGA pointed out that more than 85 per cent of the capital budgets of its gas company members ($33,951,250) will be spent in Western Pennsylvania, thus providing jobs as well as improved gas service. The remaining $5,553,500 is planned to be spent in West Virginia and Kentucky for improvement of gas supply and facilities to serve Pennsylvania customers.

Restless?

By DEAN N. R. HIGH MOORE
Have you ever travelled all day and suddenly felt your tiredness fairly groan within you? Then, perhaps, you have discovered that the rest of you were seeking was not so much physical and spiritual. By some mystic unfoldment it was revealed to you that YOU needed rest more than did your body, although it too, craved respite from thronging hours and exacting demands upon your time and energies.

Perhaps you thought that rest by an open hearth in some quiet retreat, in a cottage by the sea or in the hills would meet every clamorous need. You thought that would suffice but it did not. When such hours visit us and the spirit is jaded, it is a joy to walk alone along a lonely lane; sit by a babbling brook; observe the gentle swish of wavelets on barren sand; or recline amidst the verdure of a gently sloping hillside.

And, as you take your eventide excursion into the heart of nature, you note the gilded shadows playing, like children, a game of hide-and-go-seek in the treetops, over the green grasses, behind the boulders, among the pebbles along the seaboard.

And, in the sky, sunset gleams dart shafts of glory from a far fire. Then the winds, mere zephyrs now, with wandering voices, whisper of quiet, and your spirit knows joy and peace.

Suddenly you feel within you the rising of an awakened response. The REAL YOU has come into its true home. YOUR REAL SELF has come home to rest. The owner claims his mansion. The threat and strain of the day that had usurped the mastery over your life are banished to their servant quarters. Peace reigns. You and your Sovereign Maker are mysteriously intermingled. Light comes. It is yours, a gift from Him. It is a Light that does not fail, and, in It, you shall see Light.

Patchwork Quilts

Remember when the gay design of the patchwork quilt spread across the bed? It reminded every member of the family of clothes they had worn in the days gone by. Patchwork quilts had a genuine sentimental value and were often "handed down" to one of the children when they started housekeeping. Remember?

Our service is built on a sympathetic understanding of your burden and a sincere wish to do all possible to ease that burden.

Van Cliburn, Young Pianist, With Symphony

VAN CLIBURN

A mild-mannered, rangy young Texas pianist, Van Cliburn, has set the music world ablaze during the past year. He plays it in such a manner as to excite audiences and critics alike.

Nineteen-year-old Cliburn will make one of only four orchestral appearances this season when he plays the Tschalkovsky minor concerto with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra this Saturday night and Sunday afternoon at Syria Mosque. Two previous appearances, with the New York Philharmonic and the Cleveland Symphony were received with glowing accounts of his advanced skill and poetic feeling for his music.

When he was 18, he appeared as an unknown soloist with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. The following morning, the reports were so spontaneous and persuasive that they were picked up by other papers all over the country.

Only last December, after his first appearance with the Denver Symphony Orchestra, Allen Young of the Denver Post exclaimed, "Tear out this name, write it somewhere, get to know it: Van Cliburn. This is one to reckon with, one musician whose prodigious talent marks him as the most important young pianist of his generation, one whose journey is sure to lead him to the top ranks of musical artists."

The lad upon whom all this praise was showered was born in Shreveport, La., in 1934, and showed musical talent at an early age. He was reared in Kilgore, Texas, and after graduation from high school, went to New York where he began studies with Mme. Rosina Lhevinne at the Juilliard School of Music. Until this time, his mother had been his only teacher.

In 1952 he won the Koscusko Chopin Award and the Juilliard Concerto Contest. During 1953 and 1954 he won many other awards, allowing for continued study at Juilliard. Last year, he became the first Leventritt Award winner since 1949, no talent having appeared until Cliburn's which could measure up to the exacting standards of the awards committee.

On the same program, William Steinberg will conduct the orchestra in "Souvenirs" by Samuel Barber and the Symphony No. 5 in E<sub>b</sub> Major by Sibelius, in celebration of the composer's 90th birthday anniversary.

Girl, 8, Writes Ike, ---And Gets Results

—Chicago—

Renee Denicola, who is eight years old, has learned early in life that when you have a complaint, it's a good idea to take it to the top for prompt action.

When a "ham" radio operator interfered with her favorite television programs, Renee wrote a letter to President Eisenhower, saying:

"I am eight years old and I wish you would help me. I am having so much trouble with a ham station interfering with my TV programs. I can't get any picture and all I hear is CQ, CQ. He's always on.

"You're the best president we ever had. I love you very much." Renee's mother, Mrs. Girard Denicola, commented on her daughter's letter:

"Of course we thought nothing would come of it. But imagine our surprise when a few days later a letter arrived addressed to Renee. It was signed by a secretary of President Eisenhower. It thanked her for reporting the matter and said her letter had been referred to the Federal Communications Commission."

The FCC investigated and found the "ham" was Anthony Shragal, inspection foreman for a radio and television manufacturer, whose hobby is operating Station W9SEF.

Shragal explained: "I didn't know my CQs (calling other 'hams') were being heard on anyone's TV set, but as soon as I learned of it I sent my son, Robert, over to show them how to eliminate the interference."

Mrs. Denicola said: "Who would have thought the President of the United States would answer a little girl's letter."

Said Renee: "It was nice of him."

Talks on Care Of Children

Xi Lambda Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Fred Smith of Washington street. Presiding for the business session was Miss Ruth Kerr, president. Mrs. Thomas Mering was given her exemplar degree. The theme, in charge of Mrs. Charles L. Bryner and Mrs. Mering, was "Our Children." The guest speaker, Dr. Donald G. Stitt, pediatrician, gave a very interesting talk. Highlights of his talk were:

All children are different and the main reason for giving them special care is to present a child mentally alert, physically fit and socially acceptable.

Most deaths of children occur in the first year of life, 50 per cent of which are in the first month of life.

First year care of formula is most important and in the second year nutrition care is highly important.

Also mothers should always see that babies are given their immunization shots during the third, fourth and fifth months. Lack of finances is no reason for not getting these shots. Most doctors in this area will gladly give these immunization shots free of charge to help babies reach a sound physical stature and be mentally alert.

Vaccination should be given in the first year in urban areas, but in smaller communities can be held off until the third, fourth or fifth year. Vitamins should be continued as long as the child is growing.

Leading cause of death after the second year of life is accidents, 58 per cent of which could be prevented by reasonable care. Dr. Stitt brought out that iron tablets, that many adults take, are quite a potent poison when taken in large quantities by a child. These tablets should always be put out of the reach of children.

Accident prevention is also the greatest job during school years. The pre-adolescent child should be given a regular vitamin intake and should be prepared for their role as future adults.

Dr. Stitt answered many questions after the meeting. The next monthly meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Emil Felski.

A Useful Gadget

A charming story, illustrative of the uses to which electricity can be put, comes to us from the Manchester Guardian.

An elderly lady, living alone in a cottage and totally unacquainted with electricity, recently had it installed in her home.

In due time the collector came to check up and take the money from the meter, but to his amazement he found only a shilling.

His curiosity aroused, he sought out the lady and asked her if anything was wrong with the electricity—did she dislike it, or how was it so little was used?

He received a surprising answer, "Like it, like it!" said the old lady. "I don't know how I've managed without it all these years. I should think I do like it. I put it on every night to see to light my lamp."

Fifty-Year History of Greene County Sports

By GEORGE N. THOMAS

GREENE COUNTY TENNIS

More than a dozen years before national and international tennis competitions were established, the game was being played in Greene County.

True, it was on a limited basis but the community had reared some of the finest tennis players for miles around.

In the mid 1890s, tennis was a minor sport. Baseball was just reaching the hinterlands and had just begun being called "the American game." And the Pittsburgh Pirates were near the cellar.

Football was spelled in two words (foot ball) and Waynesburg College, through the pleadings of an upstart named Tom Whittles, had just played its first game.

In politics, Waynesburg Republican headlines cried, "Republicans are making sweeping gains." The year was 1895.

About the same time, two groups of outdoor-minded citizens agreed to organize lawn tennis clubs.

In Waynesburg, W. M. Hudson was chosen president of the first club. At the Fairgrounds, they prepared courts "fine as can be found in the state."

A long series was established between Hudson's club and Carmichaels, which developed some pretty fine and fast players.

Despite Carmichaels' diminutive size, they began making a habit of defeating the touted Waynesburg crowd.

And they did it often enough that it wasn't funny to the county seaters.

Especially adept with forearm and backhand swings were John Gwynn and Dr. John Laidley of Carmichaels.

They had just established their county-wide superiority when, in a hunting accident, Gwynn lost a foot through amputation.

Tennis play continued in the county as the Spanish-American War waged overseas.

In the summer of 1898, the Lawyers Tennis Association of Uniontown staged their first tournament on their new court.

The Rev. W. M. Hudson, who had now become affiliated with Carmichaels' team, joined with L. T. Laidley as this county's entry. They already had captured the county championship.

After taking preliminary foes into camp, the Rev. Hudson and Laidley were pitted against a pair of unbeaten Uniontown attorneys, Samuel Boyd and Thomas Hudson.

Betting naturally was against Greene County's unknowns, but in a hard fought match they upset Uniontown's pride.

Of course, the news was received with great joy in Carmichaels and far corners of the county.

But greater accomplishments were on the way for the minister and Laidley.

Late in September, they defeated Professor Harmon and M. L. French in the first round of the Tri-County Tennis Tournament in California, Pa.

Meanwhile, Uniontown's Boyd and Hudson beat Professor

Chubb and Mr. Crayey to enter the finals.

Once again it was Greene County's best against Fayette County's champs, and the outcome, too, was the same, Laidley and Rev. Hudson won.

When these lawn tennis stalwarts laid down their racquets, the sport lost a considerable part of its following and attention.

For years it never regained prominence on sports pages. So far as Greene County was concerned, tennis never again drew many plaudits in the first half century.

About a half dozen years after the war ended and Waynesburg had dropped out of the Penn.-Ohio-Maryland Baseball League, Waynesburg College made an effort to revive tennis by conducting an intra-college tourney.

So far as it went, it was successful. John T. Silveus and Harry F. Baily won the top honors.

But apparently athletic officials were preoccupied with the new track and field trend as well as baseball, that tennis became a second-fiddle sport.

That was true not only on the campus but throughout the many communities.

Occasionally, churches sponsored junior tennis teams, hoping it could divert youngsters from other neck-breaking sports.

In 1923, the generosity of Miss Mary Sayers—whose property lay adjacent to the College Quadrangle—made it possible for the college to have its own tennis court.

At the same time, there had been some desire among students for a tennis team and this seemed to be the answer.

Miss Sayers said that the college may have use of the lot near her house if college officials would prepare it.

Well, officials themselves didn't grade it, but students dug in quickly before she could change her mind and it became such a nice court that it was necessary to make reservations to use it.

Of course, Miss Sayers, in her religious and academic mind, worked out regulations: the court was only for Waynesburg College students, who were required to wear tennis shoes and register the day before they desired to play.

Further, the use of tobacco in any form, smoking or chewing, was absolutely forbidden on the court. And, finally, there was to be no playing on Sunday, during the Chapel or Bible instruction periods, and when such students were scheduled for recitations.

It wasn't exactly a set of rules, the Hanna Hall crowd would set up.

Waynesburg College Grapplers Defeat Millersville State Teachers College, 22-6

Jacket Cagers Defeated 76-39; Upset West Liberty

Coach Ray Williams' Waynesburg College basketball squad dropped a 76-39 decision to Steubenville College, and then upset highly-favored West Liberty College 95-85 in games last week.

Paul Brownlee, sharpshooting Steubenville forward, hit seven times from the floor and seven more from the foul line for a high point total of 21, to pace the winners. He was trailed, on his own club, by the Smith brothers, Jim getting 16, and Bill 12.

Johnny Kelly led the Jackets with a total of 18 points, all of them scored from the field. Previously beaten by West Liberty, the Yellow Jackets came from behind to cop the game played on the losers' court.

Nick Raynovich, Yellow Jacket center, led the scoring parade for the local five with a total of 22 points. Kelly was close behind with 19 points.

Waynesburg outscored West Liberty in field goals, 35 to 25, and had a better foul conversion average making 24 of 29 tries, while the host five made but 35 of 52 attempts.

Rocket Grapplers Defeat Mikes, 49-12

Jefferson High School's mat squad had things pretty much their own way as they easily defeated the grapplers of Carmichaels High 49-12 in a dual meet last week.

Carmichaels took two of the 12 bouts, with Bill Hancock winning the 88-pound clash and Steve Fabry racking up a win in the 165-pound tussle.

Jefferson matmen scoring falls were Tom Dollar, 95; Frank Rumble, 103; Jim Dollar, 112; Carl Fischer, 154, and Chuck Gower, 185.

Summary: Carmichaels 12

Millersville, known to have a better than average wrestling team, was no problem to the Yellow Jacket squad, which last week turned in an impressive win over Ohio State University.

The Teachers scored their points on decisions in the 130- and 157-pound classes.

Waynesburg's points came on falls in the 137-pound and heavy-weight classes, and decisions in 123, 147, 167 and 177-pound bouts.

Mike Cagers Defeated Twice

The Carmichaels High School basketball squad suffered two defeats in WPIAL Section 18 play last week, bowing to the East Beth High five 74-46, and to Centerville High's cage squad 56-27.

East Beth was in the lead all the way in their contest with the Mikes as Ed Corrazi with 15, and Bob Corrigan, with 27, took down scoring honors for the winners.

Carmichaels was paced by Jim Walters, with 16 points, and Arkie Smith, with 12 tallies.

Centerville put on a great defensive show by holding Carmichaels to but 14 points in the first three quarters of play to gain their victory.

Tom Halligan led the scoring parade for Centerville as he tallied 16 points, one less than Walters racked up for the losers.

Rocket Quintet Split Section Tilts

Coach "Butch" Biery's Jefferson High cage squad split two WPIAL Section 18 contests last week, bowing to Bentleyville High 52-34, and then topping Ellsworth High 58-54.

Although the first half ended with a close score of 24-23, Bentleyville pulled past Jefferson in the second half of the contest to cop their win. Ron Salvitti, with 22 points, took scoring honors for the winners, and Tekave, with 14 markers, was high man for the Rockets.

Ellsworth made a gallant effort to close a big gap in the final period against the Jeffs but the Rockets hung on to nail down the win.

Al Rota had 21 points to pace Jefferson and Dick Van Voorhis garnered 15 points to pace the Ellsworth five.

Rattle My Bones!

Greene County Lions Clubs will stage a stupendous, spectacular and fabulous "Pajama" Basketball soiree at the Waynesburg High School Gymnasium Thursday evening, starting at 8:00 o'clock and lasting as long as the contestants or their pajamas.

Doc Joe Stewart, local osteopath and president of the Waynesburg Lions Club, would have no ulterior motive in this prolonged contest, as he is not in the pajama business.

Waynesburg, Rogersville, Carmichaels and Greensboro Lions Clubs will participate—as long as the sacroiliacs last.

If your husband is participating, or your father, just send your fifty cents or twenty-five cents—and save yourselves the agony of seeing them as they are, and not what they pretend to be!

Pray for me—I'm one of them! In all seriousness—it's for a good cause. Come out and watch us make fools of ourselves and money for the needy.

Red Raider Five Scores Two Wins In Section Play

Coach Jack Cassidy's Waynesburg High School cage crew racked up two wins in WPIAL Section 4 league competition last week by topping Trinity High 52-29 and edging Dormont High 46-45.

Jim Chastain had 18 points for the Red Raiders, 10 of them being scored in the third period. Wise and Johnson with eight and seven points respectively, paced the Trinity five.

The battle with Dormont was decided in the final minute of play with the winning point being a foul shot by Gary Milliken which made the score 46-43 in favor of the Raiders after ties at 40-40 and 42-42. A last second Dormont field goal cut the margin to 46-45.

Milliken also led the Waynesburg scoring with 12 points, but scoring honors for the game went to Tom Malony who tallied 14 points for the losers.

There it is—still shining through the mists of passing years—the old home town as it used to be: the hickory smoke rising blue from the hearth fires, the sawmill's whine, the clean streets, the wide porches . . .

All gone—and you can't go back! The machine age, with all its advantages and disadvantages, is here to stay. It has given us more leisure time—and more heart disease. It has given us modern homes—and broken homes. It has shortened distance from miles into seconds, and it has increased man's loneliness.

Well, if we can't go back to the good old days, what can we do about this new, perplexing age? We can criticize, we can turn our backs—but the discontent remains. We can plunge deeper into it—and blindly hope that somehow happiness will come.

We can go to Church. There, the old principles still count. They apply to this age. The Church can help us make machines and their products our servants, not our masters. Churches can help us to use happily and rightly our increased leisure time. Churches can help us to learn to live again.

Come to Church! That's not a cry from the "good old days." That's sound advice to a new, young world whose best future is still ahead, if its people will turn again, in sincerity and faith, to their God.
