

The Pioneer History of Greene County, Penna.

By L. K. EVANS

On the farm of Barzilla Stephens, near Newtown, there is a little graveyard verging on a hundred years old. Three persons were buried there, and the place marked by setting up some rough stone as the custom was. Mr. Stephens says he mows around them every year, and at one time had some shrubbery planted there, which, however, did not grow.

There is a very vague tradition that at an early date in the settlement of this part of the county a man, by the name of Baldwin, built his cabin near the site of this little graveyard, and with his wife and child was enjoying peace, pleasure and prosperity. But all of a sudden an alarm of Indians reached them. Preparations were made to flee to the fort in great haste. His wife and child had been mounted on a horse and were in the act of setting off when they were fired on by the Indians. Baldwin and his wife and child were killed and scalped by the merciless foe.—L. K. EVANS.

Wayside Gleanings

Early in the history of the Muddy Creek Valley, one John Kennedy, a land jobber from Franklin County, located what is commonly known as the "Anderson farm," near the present site of Carmichaels, since owned by James Stephenson. He procured titles for these lands, but never occupied them nor became a resident of these parts. He died suddenly while sitting on his horse near the intersection of the Brandywine with the State line. Such are the facts in evidence developed through various litigation.

John Flenniken, who was appointed one of the Associate Judges upon the organization of Greene County, was comparatively speaking, an early settler. He was at first a resident of North Carolina, and was conspicuous among the first Americans to agitate Independent and Republican forms of Government. He was the John Hancock among the signers of the celebrated Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence in the year 1775. He heard of the death of his brother, James, who had cast his lot in these parts. James was reputed to be rich in lands, and John came on to pay a last tribute of respect to his deceased kinsman and look after the estate. His land speculations, however, proved abortive, through insufficiency of title and the coveted estate netted but the meager sum of $35.

It is related that Colonel William Crawford, an old and esteemed friend, induced Mr. Flenniken to this locality by the present of a fine farm of some hundred broad acres contiguous to the one on which he himself resided. Thenceforward they were life-long neighbors and inseparable friends. They mutually shared all the dangers and hardships of the times. They were ardent patriots and made common cause against the attacks of British emissaries and their savage allies, and the seditious and insurrection of the Tories in their midst.

Judge Flenniken was a very intelligent and influential man, and has bequeathed to succeeding ages a long line of enterprising descendants. He had eleven children, three of whom were born in North Carolina. Samuel settled in Ohio and arose to the distinction of Judge of the Court. Dorcas was the first wife of Benjamin Jennings, a life-long citizen of Waynesburg, whom all our older citizens remember as a most worthy gentleman. Aldey was allowed to remain in North Carolina. James was the father of the Honorable John C. Flenniken of this place. Andrew settled in Ohio. Isaac went first to Ohio, and then to Arkansas, where he died. John N. is still living in Iowa. Honorable Robert P., now living in California, and three times elected to the Pennsylvania Assembly by Fayette County, and was Charge-de-Affairs to Denmark under President Buchanan's administration. Mary, better recognized as "Polly," married Nathaniel Jennings, who for many years owned the beautiful farm one mile west of town, now belonging to J. A. J. Buchanan, Esq. He built a mill on the premises before the town of Waynesburg was laid out, relics of which still remain. He also built the stone house which Mr. Buchanan has recently remodeled and converted into a palatial residence. Hannah, who is living, is the widow of Rev. Asa Brooks, a Presbyterian minister. Rebecca is a maiden lady of our town, and is familiarly known to all as "Aunt Becca Flenniken."

Elias and James Flenniken were brothers, and among the first settlers of Cumberland Township, and were cousins of Judge Flenniken. I am told that the mother of Elias A. Flenniken still resides on the property originally located by his ancestors.

In the month of September 1789, it is recorded that two brothers, Nathaniel and Josiah Davidson, went on a hunting expedition up the Ten Mile. As was the custom they built a camp to lodge in at night and where all the game was collected and dressed. On the morning of the day on which they intended to return home, they named an hour at which they would return to their camp, and then proceeded into the forest in different directions in search of game. At the appointed time Josiah arrived, but Nathaniel had not yet come. He awaited patiently for a while, but still his brother did not appear. Becoming uneasy lest some accident had befallen him, he set out on what proved to be a fruitless search. He then hastened home and procured assistance, but still the missing man could not be found. Having put forth every effort to discover traces of his fate to no purpose, the search was abandoned as hopeless. But in the following March while John Reed was hunting in the same vicinity he accidentally found the corpse of the missing man. He had been shot and scalped, and notwithstanding he had lain out for a period of nearly six months he was but slightly torn by wild beasts, and was readily recognized. This is the substance of the record, and I have searched in vain for tradition in relation to the incident. Whether any of the many Davidsons of our county are descendants of Josiah's, or in any way related, it would be very interesting to know and I shall yet hope to elicit some information on the subject.

Among the early settlers of Cumberland Township were the Shepherds, Armstrongs, Andersons, Murdocks and others whose names do not now occur to me and doubtless of whom many interesting things might be written were I but in possession of the facts. As yet I have had no other motive and have collected such facts as these hurried sketches reveal merely for the love of it, with no prospect of other compensation.

Many friends have suggested the propriety of preserving the facts by making a book of them; but that would incur much expense while the subject matter is necessarily local and unless I could realize that there would be a very general demand for the work among the citizens of the county and vicinity, of course I would not dare venture on the enterprise.

There are yet some very interesting traditions to be written up; events, the knowledge of which is still extant and has been promised, but for some reason long deferred. If the necessary facts are furnished, I may yet publish some stray sketches.

In the preparation of the forty-three sketches in this series, there are a number of persons to whom I am indebted for kind assistance. To the general public I feel profoundly grateful for the kindly spirit it has manifested towards my work, and for the many encouragements I have experienced from assurances of appreciation. To the Press of the country I am under deep obligations, not only for generous notices and extended republication of my sketches, but especially for the withholding of that unfavorable criticism to which they might have been so justly subjected.

Texas Eastern helps put thunder in the Thunderbird!

TEXAS EASTERN SERVES THE COMPANIES THAT SERVE YOU

Assembled Thunderbird engines, Y-block V-8, 198 h.p. (with automatic transmission); 292 cu. in. displacement; 4-barrel carburetor; dual exhausts. Natural gas is supplied Ford Motor Company's Cleveland foundry and engine plants by The East Ohio Gas Company, a customer of Texas Eastern.

From a standing start Ford's Thunderbird can hit 80 plus in a quarter-mile. Combining beauty with performance, this little "personal" car, 52.2 inches high — available with two types of engines — is built for rugged duty. For example, the Y-block of its famous V-8 engine and all the cast parts are heat-treated and stress relieved in natural gas-fired furnaces. Ford uses natural gas in its annealing and drawing furnaces at the Cleveland engine plant, because gas can be precisely controlled, yet is flexible — and is more economical to use than any other suitable fuel!

Automatic Controls Take on Added Farm Chores; Here are Examples of New Uses

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Automatic controls are the heart of today's "push-button" farming operations. Without these sensitive and accurate electric guardians of factors to which Nature alone holds the key, farmers would be hard-pressed to keep up with the parade of agricultural progress.

Let's look at some of these "wonder workers" and see what they are Automatic controls are used widely in electric milk coolers, and may be wired directly to the refrigeration motor. The temperature element in the cooling tank operates the motor to maintain proper milk temperatures.

Electric heating thermostats often are located in milk houses to operate electric heaters and heat lamps to assure comfortable working temperatures without wasting electricity.

AUTOMATIC CONTROLS . . . keep this refrigerated storage room at proper temperature.

do to ease the farmer's burdens. There is a simple, dependable control system which operates barn ventilation fans according to interior temperatures. They help keep barns cool in summer by turning on fans when the indoor temperature gets too high. In cold weather, they automatically shut off ventilation systems when temperatures drop below the comfort point for cows.

Other controls are used in fruit and root storage houses to provide ventilation only when the outdoor air is cooler than that indoors. In doing this, they provide maximum cooling and eliminate the chance of drawing warm outside air into buildings. Also, there is a combination humidity controller and water valve which operate together to add moisture to the air in egg storage rooms. High moisture content of air is essential in such locations.

Livestock farmers, too, find that automatic controls play an important part in operating heating elements to warm stock waterers. Temperature controllers have many uses on the farm. They watch over soil heating operations; keep the hot blast of crop dryers in line, and operate motors, electric heaters and electric relays according to temperature requirements.

Another type of control keeps a "weather eye" trained for frost which might damage orchards or crops. When the temperature drops suddenly, it sets off an alarm to warn the farmer to take emergency measures. Without these and other similar devices, the farmer, who thinks he should be at least two men to get all his work done, would have to divide himself into several more personalities to handle the jobs that controls do for him automatically.

has been ill for three weeks, is slowly improving.

Headley; "A New Crimp in Tarts," Mrs. Helphenstine; "Ten Ways to Ruin a Rug," Mrs. Walter McKerrihan; "Kitchen Ques-

Punctual 'Prof' Dismays Judge

—Doylestown, Pa.— Judge Edwin H. Satterthwaite admitted he was disappointed when Laurence H. Eldredge appeared right at the appointed time in court. During a recess, the judge explained that Eldredge had been his first professor at the University of Pennsylvania law school. On opening day, Judge Satterthwaite recalled, his train was late and he came in 30 minutes after class started. "And you," the judge reminded Eldredge, "stopped your lecture and dressed me down something awful. You said a lawyer had to learn to be on time. Yes, you gave me quite a ride." And, continued Judge Satterthwaite, "when I heard you were coming here, I was waiting to see what time you came in. If you had been late..."

Farms Life Aids Marital Bliss

—Madison, Wisconsin— Mrs. Orpha Chandler Moore, 88, who has been married to William Moore, 92, for 70 years, says the trouble nowadays is that husband and wife don't see enough of each other. She advocates a back-to-the-soil movement. "The happiest married life is where a man and his wife can farm together, where their interests are the same," she says. Mr. and Mrs. Moore have spent 50 of their married years on a farm.

U. S. First Cowboys Worked Near Boston

—Chicago— The cowboy is thought of as a symbol of the West, but the American Meat Institute says that the first cattle drive was in the East. It took place along the Old Bay Path between Springfield and Boston, Mass., in 1655 under the direction of John Pynchon, the first American meat packer.

Streams Closed for Trout Stocking

Fishermen are reminded by the Pennsylvania game commission of the Act of 1949 which prohibits fishing in any waters of the state from midnight March 14, to 5 a. m., April 15, except rivers, lakes and ponds not stocked with trout.

Under the provisions of the present law, even though a creek has never been classed as a trout stream and has never been stocked with trout, it still comes within the provisions of the law and is closed during this period. Rivers, lakes and ponds not stocked with trout remain open.

The 1955 season officially begins at 5 a. m. April 15, and extends to July 31, inclusive. All trout either brook, brown or rainbow, must be six inches long to be legal and eight of either or combined species is the creel limit for one day's catch. Eight trout is also the limit anyone may have in his possession at any time.

District streams to be stocked with trout before the season are: Washington County—King's Creek, Aunt Clara's Fork, Ten Mile Creek; Greene County—Dunkard Fork of the Wheeling Creek, and Beaver County—Traverse Creek in Raccoon State Park.

Fifty-Year History of Greene County Sports

By GEORGE N. THOMAS

COMMUNITY GOLF

Early golfers in Greene County were a fun-loving group. Most of them left their "serious" side at their business establishments.

When they drove out to their new country club, it was for fun and relaxation as well as healthful exercise.

But to make golf interesting, they often wagered on an individual's or team's outcome.

In 1924, for instance, when the club was just two years aged, Mr. Hillis arranged "Red" and "Blue" teams for a round with the losers buying the winners' dinners.

J. I. Hook captained the winning "Red" team, and C. B. Stryker graciously led his team to the cashier's table after the stuffing. The "Red" group gave Dr. W. C. Brown a place of honor at the "free-load" because his victory over Dr. Frank S. Ullom decided the match, 12-10.

A couple of weeks later, as the fate of golfers often goes, the "Blue" team won, and they were on the receiving end of the dinners.

In 1925, John N. Zahniser and Roy J. Waychoff were selected to captain opposing squads.

Thirty-nine teams squared off, a total of 78 men—a pretty fine number for a club that size. Zahniser's team won the first tourney, and they tied the second time around.

Randolph Scott turned in the best score. Best score! It was a fat 94!

Inter-club competition was introduced at the Greene County Country Club in 1926, when Washington golfers invited them over for a match less hostile than battles ordinarily staged by scholastic and collegiate teams from the two communities.

Washington won on their own greens, the Greene Countians copped the return match and they let things go at that.

E. M. Powell, Jr., won the Chamber of Commerce cup as the best county golfer for 1926. Conrad Huffman was runner-up. Other finalists were John McCracken, Roy Waychoff, A. M. Nichols, John C. Gwynne, T. W. Shannone, Berty Bayard and E. M. Brubaker.

The following year the club expanded its extra-curricular activities taking on, besides Washington to whom they lost on dear old Greene County soil, Monongahela and St. Clair as well, with whom they split.

Ed McLeod, George Keller, John Keller, Jim Deal, Eck Anderson and George Bathie gave best performances.

George Bathie was designated the pro at the club in 1928 and he did much to lower the scores of members.

Occasionally, he would insert an item in the newspapers stating that local golfers had "lowered their scores considerably since May."

Alas, though, Washington still was able to come across the county line and beat the club's best on their own once in a while and not only take home with them the victory but a well-rounded dinner as well.

Women from Waynesburg organized a golf association in 1929, and not only chose teams among themselves but invited a similar group from Morgantown for a match at the club.

The women, to be sure, took golf less seriously than the men. They were gracious hosts in everything but the outcome of the match. They won by a point.

Andy Velican took command as the new pro at the country club in 1930 and he was considerably talented.

Right off he qualified for the

Cleveland Site for 1959 Pan-Am Games

—Mexico City—

The Pan-American Congress has awarded the 1959 Pan-American Games to Cleveland, ending a three-day wrangle over the site.

The decision to hold the Olympics of the Western Hemisphere in the Ohio city was made unanimous when Brazil, Chile and Guatemala withdrew their bids and Argentina threw its weight behind Cleveland. Other cities which had been considered were Rio de Janeiro, Santiago de Chile, Guatemala City and Houston, Texas.

Jacket Matmen Second in 4-I Tourney; John Barish Wins Heavyweight Title

Waynesburg College's wrestling crew, with but four members participating, scored 26 points and had one individual champion to take second place in the 4-I Tournament at Cleveland last week.

Grabbing a title for the Yellow Jackets was John Barish who won the heavyweight crown by pinning Douglas of Lock Haven.

In the finals of the 137-pound class Joe Nicoletta was decided 7:3 by Twark of Kent State.

Chuck Williams gained the finals in the 191-pound class before dropping a 5-1 decision to Reese of Lock Haven.

In the semi-final rounds, Nicolletta decided McIntyre of Lock Haven 5:3, and Williams won a referee's decision over Jim Barclay of Rochester Institute of Technology, former Waynesburg High School matman.

Elroy McMannes, former Jefferson High grappler, was stopped after two earlier wins in the semi-finals when he decided 4:0 by Hess of Illinois State.

The team scoring: Lock Haven, 35; Waynesburg, 26; Ohio University, 23; Cortland State Teachers, 22; Toledo University, 21, and Kent State, 20.

A telecast not carried in the home district of one of the televised teams shall not count as an appearance against that team, this exception being granted only once.

NCAA Submits Television Plan For Football

The television committee of the NCAA Monday announced it has drawn up a part-national, part-regional plan for televising football games this fall.

The committee's plan, which will be submitted to a mail vote of all member colleges, calls for eight national "game-of-the-week" telecasts and five dates on which a different game will be telecast in each NCAA district.

If a team does not appear on a national telecast, it may appear twice within its NCAA district.

In the last two seasons, only "game-of-the-week" national telecasts were permitted.

Other features of the new plan: Sellout games may be telecast in the TV areas of the home and visiting teams and also the area of the game if it is played off-campus, provided no damage is done to other collegiate games.

A team playing more than 400 miles away from home may telecast the game back to its TV area, provided there is no conflict with other games in the area.

SHE'S WATCHING "A MIRACLE"

Twenty minutes before this picture was taken, a man named Edward Higgins was lying unconscious on Route 17, New York. His car was overturned in a ditch. The intern riding the ambulance didn't think Higgins had a chance. But he ordered the nurse to ready him for a transfusion.

Now you see her watching "a miracle." She sees an expressionless, near-dead man coming to life. His eyes are opening, his body stirring uneasily and the color is slowly coming back to his cheeks.

Every day thousands of people are given transfusions. Like Edward Higgins, they owe their lives to others who have answered the call for blood. Giving blood is easy, safe and painless... so give blood now.
