State Declared Natural Site for Defense Plants

Harrisburg—Governor Leader has opened a campaign to acquaint defense industries with the natural plant protection offered by Pennsylvania's mountains in the event of nuclear warfare.

"Many industries interested in locating or expanding in this state want a site that offers natural protection against the major threat of modern warfare," Governor Leader said in a statement.

He said Pennsylvania has natural defense advantages over other states through location of plants in the "deep valleys" between the state's many parallel mountain ranges.

Maps showing the depth and locations of mountain valleys in Pennsylvania, the governor said, have been prepared by the Federal Department of Defense.

These maps, he explained, will show the natural protection advantages of Pennsylvania and prove a selling point in bringing new industry into Pennsylvania.

Adjutant General Anthony J. Drexel Biddle developed the maps for all states while associated with the Defense Department before becoming Pennsylvania's head military man several weeks ago.

"It is as if nature built a series of walls covering almost every section of the state," Biddle said of the natural plant protection in the commonwealth.

Many of the natural protective sites, Biddle said, are located in the hard and soft coal regions of the state.

Two Marianna Youths Killed In Car Crash

George Haldin, 23 years, and Dominic L. Rossi, 18, both of Marianna, were killed early Sunday morning, June 5, when their automobile left Route 19, on a curve about six miles north of Waynesburg, and finally crashed into a utility pole.

A passing motorist, Carl Sheck of Fairmont, W. Va., discovered the wreck at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. A wrist watch on one of the youths stopped at 3:20, indicating the crash occurred about then.

Haldin starred in football, basketball at West Bethlehem Township High School before his graduation. He returned six months ago from the service and was a first baseman for Marianna in the Pigeon Creek sandlot league. He is survived by a mother, three brothers and three sisters.

Rossi was a basketball player on West Bethlehem's team. His father, Antonio, was killed a year ago in a fall from a coal mine tippie. The boy's mother, two sisters and a brother survive.

Polio Shots Better, Dr. Salk Says

New York—Dr. Jonas E. Salk said Friday polio vaccines now in use "are better than those used in the field trials." He added that they should lower the rate of paralytic polio.

An analysis of the field trials of the Salk vaccine last year showed it between 80 and 90 per cent effective against polio.

Dr. Salk told a news conference that probably more cases of so-called polio would be reported than ever before. Other ailments are often mistaken for polio, he contended, just as many other disturbances are referred to in winter as influenza.

The vaccine is intended to guard against paralytic polio, Dr. Salk continued, and figures should be kept of both paralytic and non-paralytic polio.

Earlier, on the same theme, he told an international public health conference here:

"There will be an awful lot of polio, probably more than you have ever seen before, but when you separate the wheat from the chaff, you will find it very interesting."

"There must be a distinction between polio and paralytic polio and unless it is the latter type you cannot be sure."

Colonel Charles I. Faddis Writes 'Indisputable' History Of Battery

The following article on the history of the roving Hoover's battery was prepared for the Republican by Colonel Charles I. Faddis, president of Greene County Historical Society. The cannon was finally replaced at the Taylor monument at Jollytown on Memorial Day.

The story was told to Colonel Faddis by A. L. Moredock, M. E. Carroll and others who were acquainted with its early history in the county and from his own knowledge.

HOOVER'S BATTERY

This gun or light fieldpiece is a type of horse drawn artillery in common use during our Civil War. It is loaded from the muzzle by means of a rammer and fired by the use of a primer or fuse in the touch hole. It is about 4.3 caliber and rifled. It shot a round ball of iron.

In 1880, when General Hancock was running against James A. Garfield for president, the Democrats confidently expected a victory. Honorable Morgan Wise, who was then a member of the House of Representatives from the district in which Greene County was situated, secured the gun by means known only to himself, from an arsenal in New York, and sent it into Greene County for the purpose of celebrating the anticipated victory.

The gun was sent alone without the limber chest which was ordinarily a part of it. Hancock was defeated and therefore the gun was not used for the purpose for which it was procured.

It was cared for by a Captain Hoover from whom it took its name. Later, Oliver Simington, who had been an artilleryman in the Union Army, became its caretaker and officiated by firing it upon patriotic occasions and to announce Democratic victories.

I remember it in the parade during the Waynesburg Centennial and in various parades upon Memorial Day and the Fourth of July, and can yet see the portly Oliver perched upon the trail with the sponge staff in his hand as the gun was drawn along by a team of horses.

Finally after Oliver became too aged to manipulate the piece it was stored in a shed belonging to Waynesburg Borough behind what is now Calls Grocery. After the erection of the present Waynesburg Armory General Martin, then a Major in the 10th Pennsylvania Infantry, placed the gun in the basement of the Armory to preserve it. By this time the woodwork was becoming quite decayed.

May 30, 1917, while Company K, 110th Infantry were awaiting orders during World War I, a group of them decided to fire a national salute from the hill behind Waynesburg College. A team was secured and the gun was taken to the desired location. As the sun rose the old gun began booming as rapidly as it could be served. After about a dozen rounds the barrel separated itself from the carriage and lay upon the ground. Nevertheless the gun crew continued to fire in this position until the required twenty one rounds had been fired. I was one of the crew. We brought back the remains of the gun and returned them to the Armory.

Major Martin was somewhat perturbed over the treatment of the piece and took me to task. His action came to the ears of M. E. Carroll who came to me and said, "You tell Ed Martin that gun does not belong to him. It belongs to the Democratic Party. You boys shoot it all you care to and as often as you please. When it is broken down you let me know and I will take up a collection and we will fix it up. You take what is left of it down to Allison King and have him fix it and tell him to send me the bill." This was done and the gun was repaired. Upon the Fourth of July the same year the gun was taken to Duvall's Hill and there a national salute was fired and the gun again broke down. It was repaired and paid for by Mr. Carroll and others.

When the Greene County Historical Society was formed and located in its present quarters in the basement of the Long building upon the request of the Armory Board the gun was taken into the custody of the Society by the curator at that time, Frank Jones, and was stored for a time in the stable of the Dr. Brock property across Morgan street.

At the time of the dedication of the monument to Jesse Taylor, 7th West Virginia Volunteers, in which regiment many of the first volunteers from Greene County served during the Civil War, a request was made for the gun to be placed on one side of his monument which was to be flanked on the other side by two mortars which were known as coehorns. The gun was then loaned for this purpose to the community of Jollytown, Gilmore Township, in perpetuity by the Five honorary degrees will be conferred at the 104th annual Waynesburg College commencement ceremonies Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the campus.

Recipients will be: Ellen Reid Carter of Waynesburg, for many years associated with the Department of Applied Music as head of violin, and now director of the school, Doctor of Music.

Mrs. Carter was born in Rochester, N. Y., and was educated in schools in Chicago and Boston, and under private tutors. She studied violin in Chicago at the age of seven and later studied in New England Conservatory of Music for several years, as a pupil of Carl Peirce and Felix Winterreitz. She received her orchestral training under George Chadwick, director of the Conservatory, and ensemble work with Eugene Gruenberg.

Removing to Albany, N. Y., Mrs. Carter coached several years with Charles Ehrlicke, eminent violinist who was a student of the great Leonard in Paris. In 1911-12 she made a concert tour of the New England States.

Mrs. Carter came to Waynesburg College School of Music in 1913 as instructor in violin and ensemble. In 1923-24 she was a student at the Conservatoire Americaine, Fontainebleau, France with Guillaume Remy, head professor of violin in the Paris Conservatory, and also with Maurice Hewitt.

From 1925 through 1928, Mrs. Carter was director of the School of Music and was again appointed in 1954, following the death of Nelle Pyles Reinhart.

In 1925, she was united in marriage with Charles S. Carter, prominent Waynesburg attorney whose death occurred last summer.

Several of Mrs. Carter's pupils have won scholarships in Julliard School of Music in New York, and also high rating in the Forensic and Music League in this state. She was listed in the 1951 and 1953 editions of "Who's Who in the East."

Paul Gregory Benedum of Pittsburgh, prominent oil man and geologist, Doctor of Science. He will also give the commencement address.

Rev. William R. Johnston, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Uniontown, who will deliver the baccalaureate at 11 o'clock on commencement day, Doctor of Divinity.

Rev. J. Franklin Weaver of Baltimore, Md., native of Muddy Creek, Greene County, and graduate of Waynesburg in the class of 1915, and for many years a Presbyterian minister in New Jersey and Maryland, Doctor of Divinity.

Dr. Edward M. Phillips of Wheeling, W. Va., prominent surgeon who is a native of Spraggs, Greene County, and a graduate of Waynesburg College, Doctor of Science.

Two early day Waynesburg College students who went on to medical school before completing their undergraduate work will receive bachelor of science degrees.

Dr. Haines was born February 15, 1865, at Kirby, a son of Cyrenus and Mary Ann Haines. Dr. Phillips was born in Wayne Township, near Sprags, a son of Jessie and Deborah Spragg Phillips.

Their careers have many interesting parallels as both taught public school in their home communities before completing their medical courses, a practice quite common in that time. Both have also remained quite active in their profession and Dr. Haines is one of the oldest practicing physicians in the United States.

Dr. Haines graduated from the former Western University of Pennsylvania (now the University of Pittsburgh) medical school in the class of 1903. He practiced for 20 years at Allentown, near Monessen, and since March 1924, has resided and practiced at Charleroi. His wife, the former Simidia Haines, is a native of Perry Township. Their son, Clyde Haines of Pine Bank, graduated from Waynesburg in the class of 1912.

Dr. Phillips first practiced in Blacksburg, W. Va., after graduating from Jefferson Medical School in Philadelphia. He has practiced in Morgantown about 35 years and has been active in community and professional affairs.

$10,000 GI Insurance May End

Washington—A special House committee has proposed bringing all servicemen under the regular Social Security system, and doing away with their present $10,000 free life insurance.

These were two keys points in a sweeping overhaul of military survivor benefits drafted by a special committee after months of study.

Chairman Hardy, Democrat of Virginia, said he believes the program will have Administration support. The committee talked over the bill with President Eisenhower Friday.

The legislation is aimed at re-vamping what Pentagon officials have called a confusing patchwork of payments into a simpler and fairer system.

It would cut out two of the five present survivors' benefit programs and generally liberalize the three others as Hardy explained it.

About 606,000 survivors—widows, children and dependent parents—are now getting some 425 million dollars a year on compensation rolls. The new program is expected to cost the Government about 43 million dollars a year more to start with, but to taper off below the 425 million later on.

The bill would cut out the present system of free $10,000 life insurance available to servicemen. These benefits would be replaced by expanded payments from other sources.

The bill would bring the military under Social Security with the servicemen and the Government each paying a Social Security tax, as is done in industry.

Assemblymen Get Jackpot Pay

Governor George M. Leader, without a word of comment, signed the bill to increase their expense accounts by $100 a month, to $250 a month or a total of $3,000 a year.

The bill made the increase retroactive to last January and means that the senators and members of the House picked up expense checks in the amount of $1,750 each.

The total payout in expense checks for the first period of the biennium will be $445,000. And the total increase for the year will be $221,000.

The Pioneer History of Greene County, Penna.

By L. K. EVANS

Just about the time peace was concluded with the Indians, the notorious Whiskey Rebellion began. Then the manufacture, sale and use of spirituous liquors were regarded by all classes as legitimate and honorable and the imposition of excise upon it by the Government, was an act as odious to them as was the Stamp Act which made the pretext for the Revolution. They believed in the sentiment expressed by the Congress of 1774, that "an excise law was the horror of all free States." And when the Congress of 1791 imposed a tax of four pence per gallon, it was deemed excessively oppressive and was interpreted as an insult to Western Pennsylvania, since this section alone was so deeply interested in the traffic. In 1798 the territory now Greene County, had seventy registered distilleries. Hence, the interest involved was enormous, and in the light of this fact their act of resistance and rebellion may, to a certain extent, be palliated and excused; and yet it was unwise and rash, and involved many of them in a sea of troubles which led to humiliation.

From a military standpoint, Greene County has acquitted herself in every emergency with credit. As early as 1782 a company of volunteers from the Ten Mile participated in a disastrous expedition of Colonel William Crawford to the Sandusky Plains. Many of her citizens were soldiers in the Revolutionary war. A company of choice soldiers under Captain James Seals served with distinction during the campaigns of "Mad Anthony Wayne," which terminated in 1794, all Indian hostilities east of the Ohio. In the war of 1812, she was represented by many brave and effective men, as also in the Mexican war of 1846.

As regards the late civil war of the great rebellion—its stirring events and the gallantry of Greene County's numerous volunteers, are so green in the memory of you all as to preclude the necessity of any further allusion to them here.

Prior to separation from Washington County, our territory was divided into Morgan, Cumberland, Greene, Franklin, and Richhill Townships. While sustaining that relation John Minor, a resident of Cumberland Township, was elected to Legislature in 1791, was again elected in 1793, and again in 1795. Henry Vanmeter was chosen Commissioner in 1788, and Zachary Gapen in 1792, and the following named persons held Justice of the Peace commissions: James Bell, Levi Harrod, Eli Baily, Thomas Hughes, John Minor, Henry Vanmeter, James Archer, David Gray, Samuel Hyde, and Thomas Ryerson.

The struggle for a separate existence commenced in 1791 when Colonel Minor was first elected to the Legislature. He was chosen three times and defeated twice on the same issue. Twice he succeeded with the people but failed with the Legislature. But during his third term the measure passed both branches of the Legislature and received Governor Thomas Mifflin's approval on the 9th of February, 1796. On the same day David Gray, Stephen Gapen, William Meekirk, Isaac Jenkinson and James Seals were commissioned Trustees of Greene County and authorized to purchase a tract of land near the center of the county, not exceeding 500 acres, upon which to erect a court house, county jail, etc., and until these conditions were complied with, the several courts of the county were to be held at the house of Jacob Kline, on Muddy Creek, on lands now owned by Eli Long. John Minor and John Boreman were commissioned to administer oaths—their commissions bearing date March 17, 1796, are the first entries made on the county record. John Minor, John Flenniken, David Gray and John Badolet were appointed Associate Judges—John Boreman was commissioned Register of Deeds, Prothonotary, Clerk of the Orphans' Court, Register of Wills and Clerk of the Court and Oyer and Terminer and his bond is recorded with James Carmichaels, William Crawford and Charles Anderson as sureties, and witnessed by John Minor and Samuel Hyde. At the same time Thomas Sedgwick, Abel Cary, William Lee, William Seaton and William Inghram were appointed Justices of the Peace—James Hook was made Sheriff and James Boone Commissioner. And thus the new county stood fully organized.

The trustees proceeded at once to secure a proper site for the county seat, and according to a deed on file dated October 28, 1796, bought a tract of land called "Eden" from Thomas Slater and Eleanor, his wife, containing 158 1/2 acres, at a cost of $2,376, had it surveyed, plotted and named Waynesburg. They then proceeded to erect a log court house, which is still standing in a remarkably good state of preservation, and makes a comfortable dwelling for the family of Daniel Anderson, on Greene Street.

For a time after the organization of the county the population increased very rapidly. Villages sprang into existence and mills and factories were instituted, and Greene bid fair to rival her neighbors in enterprise and progress. Greensboro and other places along the Monongahela were important shipping points and did a thriving trade. But in the years succeeding 1818, the Great National Turnpike having been opened up through Washington and Fayette Counties, the currents of trade began to be diverted from us to find their centers in towns located along the line of that improvement. While this lent a magic impulse to the advancement of our neighbors, it caused a corresponding depression and decline with us. From that period the evidence of rapid progress began to wane, the din of the work shops grew less demonstrative and the spirit of enterprise began to drop. Failing to put ourselves in communication with the great thoroughfare by any better means of transportation than an ungraded mud pike, almost impassible half the year, it was impossible to compete with those enjoying such superior facilities. Thenceforward, from sheer necessity, we were driven to adopt the only pursuit practicable to be followed without better means of transportation—that of raising horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, a product possessing the means of locomotion and that could be driven to market without the mediation of such devices as modern railroads. This pursuit we have prosecuted with much success and have acquired enviable celebrity as a stock raising county. It is an unsavory duty to chronicle the mistakes of our fathers, but the faithful historian cannot shun to declare the whole truth. Had they, in the days long ago, grasped the idea now so patent to every observer of human affairs, that highways for rapid and cheap transportation is the one great essential to progress, how different might our condition be today. We shall never know the vast capabilities which might have been demonstrated had the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company been permitted to construct that mighty engine of power and influence through Greene County, and may we in thus reviewing the past, heed the lessons it teaches.

In general education Greene County has followed the lead of the most advanced rural districts and her public schools rank favorably with those of our neighboring counties. The importance of advanced education was felt at a comparatively early period, and measures were inaugurated which resulted in the establishing of Greene Academy at Carmichaels in the year 1809. This time-honored institution was the harbinger of great good and diffused a halo of light over a then benighted land. Subsequently Waynesburg College added increased luster to our educational horizon, in which, the new luminary Monongahela College is just beginning to rise. Greene County is perhaps unrivalled in her appreciation of the value of education, and the tendency is to a lofty standard of learning among the masses.

In point of moral and religious culture our people have always stood in fair repute. The Scotch-Irish Episcopalians and Presbyterians and the German and Welsh English Baptists who first possessed the land, diffused such rigid, moral sentiments and inculcated such orthodox Bible doctrines as have been productive of wholesome results to the present day. Notably, be it remarked that no son of Greene County has ever expiated a felony upon the scaffold.

In natural advantages, God has dealt most lavishly with Greene County. She has a most healthful and delightful climate. In fertility of soil she has no superior. She has no waste places—no sterile mountains nor desert plains. Her forests of oak, poplar, walnut and maple were unexcelled. Coal, lime and sandstone abound in copious profusion. Water, clear as crystal and pure as life gurgles from almost every field. Her majestic creeks afford power sufficient to propel the machinery of the world two-thirds of the year round, while the deep, still, navigable Monongahela lays the entire extent of the eastern border. With all the munificent gifts, it would be strange indeed, had we not attained to considerable wealth and culture. But alas! we have been too content with our endowments and have failed to cooperate with nature by using sufficiently the energies of art. Our vast resources have lain dormant, our capital has rusted and our industry has been comparatively fruitless because of isolation from the marts of trades; and if we could but signalize this Centennial year by the introduction of a railway to the county seat, nothing short of prophetic vision could conceive the probabilities of the incoming century.

The political influence of Greene County was much more potent during her first forty years than it has been since. And for this, I conceive two good and sufficient reasons: First, until demonstrated that we were destined to isolation from the world of enterprise, this was a promising land and attracted men of culture and influence into it. Second, at that day positions of public trust and responsibility sought out the man best fitted for the place. As you all know it is not so now. To illustrate this idea, let me adduce the fact, that Albert Gallatin, a pure and able statesman, though a resident of Fayette County, was repeatedly elected by the district of Allegheny, Washington and Greene to represent them in the National Congress. On the first occasion he did not even know that he was a candidate till apprised of his election. John Minor, a man of sound discretion and sterling integrity was Representative for the third term and exercised enough influence in 1796 to secure the passage of the new County bill against the most strenuous and persistent opposition. Isaac Weaver, Jr., an honored resident of Muddy Creek valley was speaker of the House of Representatives in the year 1800. In 1802 to 1806 he was state treasurer. He was elected to the state senate in 1800 and served four years, elected again in 1812 for two years, again in 1816 and during which term he was speaker, and was again elected in 1820. Rees Hill, one of the ablest of Greene County's illustrious men, was elected to the House of Representatives for several successive terms and was speaker of that body in 1816 and again in 1819. William G. Hawkins was elected to the state senate in 1824 and served ten years and was chosen speaker in 1830.

Maxwell McCaslin was speaker of the Senate in 1854, the only instance that we have had the speaker of either house in the last forty-five years. We have been represented in the House by a constant succession of politicians but most of them, notwithstanding, are now unknown to fame. We have been represented in the State Senate by C. A. Black, M. McCaslin, John C. Flenniken and A. A. Purman. Andrew Buchanan, Enos Hook, Jesse Lazear and J. B. Donley have figured in the National Congress. C. A. Black was secretary of the commonwealth in 1853. Justus F. Temple was elected Auditor General in 1874. James Lindsey was President Judge from 1861 to 1865, when his career of usefulness was cut short by the hand of death. In the convention to amend the State Constitution in 1873, A. A. Purman was a delegate at large, and C. A. Black was a representative delegate.

But I weary your patience and must close. One hundred years ago the area of 384,080 acres which compose Greene County, was an almost unbroken forest of towering timber—the haunts of deer, wolves, bears and Indians. The mighty forest has long since been subdued, and all the vast area converted into cultivated fields. Elegant farm houses bestud the land and thriving villages grace every valley. Churches, school houses, mills and bridges are wherever needed, and flocks are herded on a thousand hills. One hundred years ago the population of Greene County could not have exceeded 1,000 souls. Now we approximate 30,000. Then were dangers, privations and hardships—now security, luxury and ease. Such are the changes of the hundred years gone! What of the change of the hundred to come?—L. K. EVANS.

Davy Crockett's Rifle Not Lost In Alamo Stand

—Whitewright, Texas—

When Davy Crockett traveled south from the Red River border of Texas to everlasting fame and death at the Alamo, he wanted to travel light. That's why he traded guns with Andy Thomas.

And that's how Davy's 14 pound five-foot muzzle loader happens to belong to J. P. Darwin, 61, a rural mail carrier.

It could be. For carved in the stock with exquisite care is a long star, Crockett's own handiwork.

When the Tennessee woodsman decided to come to Texas and join her fight for independence from Mexico, he carved the Texas symbol on his rifle and had the star inlaid with silver.

The silver has long since disappeared, but the star stands out bold on the old wood stock.

For years, Darwin kept the rifle out of sight in a closet. But since Davy Crockett has become a national idol, he's had to fetch it to a handier place for the kids to come and gaze at it in awe.

The horizon was never brighter!

THE FUTURE is the province of young people—a shining place where their greatest joys and victories are waiting to be experienced and accomplished.

This month especially you'll notice a certain eagerness around you—in the young men and women graduating from high schools and colleges all over the country. Even without their caps and gowns you can tell who they are, for their eyes reflect a bright horizon.

So what gift could be more appropriate for a young person looking into the future than an investment in the future—a U. S. Savings Bond?

Bonds pay good interest—3% compounded semiannually when held to maturity. And they teach a valuable lesson about the benefits of a wise investment.

Furthermore, with their interest-earning period now extended to a full 19 years and 8 months, Bonds can return $1.80 for each $1.00 originally invested. That means a Bond that was purchased for $37.50 can eventually be worth $67.34.

So give your favorite graduate a start towards a more secure future. Go to your bank today and invest in a United States Savings Bond in his or her name.

Want your interest paid as current income? Invest in 3% Series H

United States Government Series H Bonds are new current income Bonds in denominations of $500 to $10,000. Redeemable at par after 6 months and on one month's written notice. Mature in 9 years, 8 months and pay an average of 3% per annum if held to maturity. Interest paid semiannually by Treasury check. Series H may be purchased through any bank. Annual limit: $20,000.

U. S. Population Nears 165 Million

—Washington—
This country's population reached 165 million Friday morning.

The census clock, a large board with a map of the United States and a clock hand indicating total population, ticks off a net increase of one person each 12 seconds.

The bureau said early last month that its reports indicated the nation's population stood at 164,595,000 on April 1. That was an increase of 2,833,000, or 1.8 per cent over the preceding 12 months.

The population reached the 160 million mark midway through August 1953. The last formal census, in April, 1950, put the population at 151,132,000, including members of the Armed Forces.

If you had the money which would you choose?

What's your fondest dream? A deep-sea fishing trip? A vacation in Europe or a new car? Sending your children to college? Or buying a beautiful new home?

If you open a savings account in an insured Savings and Loan Association—and add to it regularly—your dream, whatever it may be, will someday come true!

There are good reasons for this preference—three good reasons, in fact:

1. You get excellent returns. That's because the Associations invest most of their funds in sound, steady-paying home mortgages.
2. Your money is as safe as safe can be. It's protected by good management and substantial reserves. And it's insured up to $10,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation—an agency of the U. S. Government.
3. You're dealing with responsible people of your own home town. Friendly people. People who really know—and care about you and your community.

And here's another point: When you're thinking of buying a home, remember that, insured Savings and Loan Associations are the nation's largest single source of home mortgage loans. They make liberal loans. They see to it that you get the money quickly—and at moderate rates.

Why not drop in soon at your nearest insured Savings and Loan Association. You'll be glad you did!

Ground Meat Becomes Special Treat

If a loaf or patty is your usual way of serving ground meat, here's an idea to put to immediate use. Shape the meat around wooden skewers to resemble drumsticks and, after baking, add decorative paper frills.

The drumsticks are seasoned in the Swedish manner with nutmeg and paprika. To follow the Swedish theme, round out the menu with tange beer, whole boiled potatoes, buttered beets and a relish tray of oil pickle strips and black olives.

Ground Meat Drumsticks
1½ pounds ground veal
½ pound ground fresh pork
1½ teaspoons salt

½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons water
1 cup dry bread crumbs (about)

Combine veal, pork, salt, pepper, paprika and nutmeg. Mix lightly. Divide mixture into 8 portions and form into the shape of chicken drumsticks. Insert a wooden skewer into the narrow end of each. Combine beaten egg and water. Dip drumsticks in egg mixture, then in bread crumbs. Place on a cookie sheet and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, 30 minutes. Makes 8 servings.

There's a 'Gang' In White House

—Washington—
It takes eight operating engineers, six carpenters, five electricians and 11 gardeners to keep the White House going.

The engineers and the electricians have an around-the-clock job tending to the elaborate lighting and air conditioning system which runs 24 hours a day these hot and humid days.

When the White House was rebuilt between 1948 and 1952, a sizable electric control room was built far beneath the surface of the earth and protected by heavy, reinforced concrete walls.

If power facilities all over the city were knocked out, the White House could put independent emergency generating equipment into action.

This time of year when it is fairly rainy, the gardeners have a busy time keeping the 18 acres of lawn around the White House well trimmed. The frequent showers and warm sun produce a luxuriant growth in a hurry.

In a matter of weeks when hotter, drier weather sets in, the same gardeners will be busy hauling hoses and sprinklers to combat drought and the now plentiful grass beneath some of the spreading trees will begin to thin out regardless of the tender care.

Mrs. Juanita Resley, mother of the two girls, said they intend to spend the summer visiting historical sights in the Washington area. She said it was the first time they had been east of the Mississippi River.

Tally keepers at the monument said the 28-millionth visitor crossed the threshold on June 14, 1954.

Postal Pay Raise Ready for Ike

—Washington—
Postal workers were finally assured of a pay raise averaging eight per cent.

A House vote of 407-1 accepted a compromise the Senate had adopted last Wednesday 78-0. Shortly after the final House vote, the Senate by voice vote accepted two minor House amendments and the bill was on its way to President Eisenhower.

Administration leaders gave assurance that Eisenhower would sign this bill.

Dr. Biddle Writes Of Society Reunion

Following is a letter received from Dr. R. L. Biddle of Candler, Florida, which was sent to his class mates at Waynesburg College: Dear Class Mates: I guess there will be the usual society reunion June 11. Just had a letter from my brother, Dr. J. T. Biddle of Washington, Pa., class of '93, in which he bemoaned the fact that he would not be able to attend the reunion as has been our custom for years. No one enjoyed these annual get-togethers of Philos and Unions more than we. While each of us were strong Unions, we each selected a Philo for life companion. So of course, we thought the Philos were all right then and still think so.

It is regretful that so few remain of the faithfuls who were in the societies in the gay nineties. If Dr. La Clair of Uniontown, and T. J. Hoge of Pittsburgh can be present, they are among the most active Unions living that I know of, the "octogenarian class." I have wondered if there are any Unions 89 years of age (which I will be, next November 4). I am still active. I came to Candler, Florida, the winter of '53-'54, to supply a little Presbyterian Church and to taper off an active ministry of 60 years. (Licensed in '92, ordained in '94).

Fifty-Year History of Greene County Sports

By GEORGE N. THOMAS

HUNTING

Toward the end of the 19th century, rat hunters were quite popular almost everywhere and Greene Countyans participated not only for the fun and the skill required to shoot the rodents, but also as their contribution to health conditions.

One of the most widely-observed hunts took place in 1897 when 24 Khedive sportsmen, divided into two teams, declared they would clean out as many such animals as they could in the area from Greensboro to Jefferson, Rice's Landing to Garards Fort and from Carmichaels to Ruffs Creek.

They hunted on foot, by carriage and on horseback, upsetting straw stacks, tearing down corn and fodder shocks, digging foundations from under barns and tearing up stable floors.

High and low they sought and the rats were doomed when they crossed the sunbeams of such men as J. C. Areford, Robert Rich, Bob Ewart, A. J. Stephens, Bert Gwynn, Anson Whiteman and Charles Cree.

As they killed the rodents, the huntsmen saved only the tails, which were to be counted when time of the contest elapsed.

The prize for the winning huntsmen was an oyster supper served at Captain Christopher's house by the losers, and accounts say they consumed three gallons of oysters and 20 pounds of crackers.

A hunt of perhaps much less appetite-losing quality also was prominent of the era. That was fox hunting.

In February 1898, for instance, George Ferrell, who lived in Waynesburg and was a great lover of this kind of sport, called the community's hunters together and announced he would set loose a fox.

Not only did a majority of them turn out, but quite a crowd gathered to witness the chase and a score or more of hounds were in line on the North Side.

After a few moments the hounds were released, but something apparently went wrong either with their senses or their nerves, for they took the exact opposite direction and shot down Washington street into town toward the butcher shops.

The crowd was disappointed until a pair of hounds belonging to Billy Porter got down to business and the chase.

Occasionally, when it called for it, the community's hunters turned from seeking animal game to tracking down, or attempting to do so, of live game.

A neighborhood farmer nearly was cleaned out when thieves stole all his chickens one night. They left only the rooster.

The next night, while he and his neighbors scoured the countryside for clues to the mystery, the thieves returned and stole the rooster.

Another time, just about the turn of the century, the sheriff called out the best huntsmen and quickly deputized them.

They were to find a jailbird who had saved his way through the bars of a county jail window.

The convict might have gotten away, too, had his cell mate, who tried to crawl through, too, but was a little too robust, called out to the jailers and announced the escape.

During the era of Presidents William McKinley and Teddy Roosevelt, the Pittsburgh Hunt Club found in Greene County what they called "the ideal wilds" for hunting.

They would come to the vicinity of Carmichaels for a week at a time, bringing with them imported English foxhounds and well-trained jumping horses.

Neighbors, who went hunting in whatever attire they wore at the time, gossiped about that the city-slickers "wore proper hunting clothing, too."

As many as 100 made the trip for fox and drag hunting, and they'd race across the countryside in great delight while, The Republican newspaper reported, "only two farmers objected."

Extremely cold winters killed more quail than hunters shot.

When ice and snow covered the ground and the seeds there under quail starved to death and hunters moaned.

But weather was not the only enemy of hunters. Some farmers despised them, too.

Ford Frick Praises LL Polio Games

—New York— Ford Frick, commissioner of baseball, praised Little League baseball Sunday for its planned contribution of funds for the National Polio Foundation on June 14.

"Speaking for all of organized baseball, I extend my congratulations to the Little Leagues of America for this outstanding contribution to the fight against polio," Frick said.

"These young men, playing baseball that others may some day be able to walk, and yes, even to play baseball, too, make all of us in this game so very proud. This effort is certainly a shining light in the history of the game."

More than 500,000 youngsters in 4,000 leagues will participate in nationwide Little League Polio Day. Collections will be taken from spectators and the money will be turned over to the National Foundation.

Here's Why Jack Won Admiration

He was the school's best baseball pitcher, winning three and losing none. But the warmth that flowed toward him wasn't the usual town pride in a good athlete.

Jack has an artificial right leg. Despite it, he pitched a four-hitter and two three-hitters with a team that won only two other games out of 12.

He also plays tennis, bowls, and roller skates. Eighteen years old last month, Jack's right leg was amputated when he was nine months old because it lacked bones.
