That Tax

PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH

Efforts are being made to bring the classified income tax to a vote in the State House of Representatives.

This tax has been estimated to bring in $411,000,000 over a two-year period, and the largest single item in it is $194,800,000 from wages and salaries, one percent on all of your pay over $1,000.

Other rates varying from two to six percent would be imposed on professional and unearned incomes.

In approaching this tax, the heaviest ever attempted in the history of the Commonwealth, all political considerations should be laid aside.

The questions to be decided are how much revenue is absolutely necessary to run state government and what is the fairest and best tax plan to raise the money.

On the first question, there is little sign of any budget cutting. Governor Leader's original $1,800,000,000 budget is virtually untouched by the House appropriations committee.

On the second question, the proposed wage and income tax has stirred increasing opposition despite every effort to sell it.

***

Basically it is a wage tax, sugared with a deduction and some higher rates on other kinds of income.

It will roll in $8,000,000 a month in withholdings, chiefly from the pay envelopes of the workers of Pennsylvania.

If it is enacted, the court will decide whether the deduction is constitutional, and if the decision conforms with a long line of precious rulings, the frosting will come off the cake.

It will be reduced then to a flat wage tax, the old snaggle-toothed variety that has been feasting on the take-home pay of workers in a number of Pennsylvania communities—including Pittsburgh.

Why should the state or local communities, either, enter the income tax field at all when the Federal government by virtue of national emergencies has virtually used that avenue to the point of diminishing returns?

***

Actually very few states have been turning to the income tax in recent years.

They have been going to sales or other forms of taxes where the citizen has some opportunity to control the amount of the tax and at least "feel" his pay a little before it is snatched away.

The invasion of the pay envelope with all kinds of deductions has become a serious thing.

The dignity of labor is in the pay that goes home to feed and clothe the family, to pay for education and recreation and to allow mother to operate the home budget.

For homes have budgets, too, something which statesmen should never forget even in the highest offices.

***

And so we sound the warning now, just as we sounded it on a Republican governor and many other officials of both parties.

Keep the fingers away from that pay envelope.

Cut the state budget on the same pattern that the Federal budget has been cut.

And then work out a new tax program that does not have a thinly-disguised wage tax sitting in the middle of it.

For the people of Pennsylvania do not want a wage tax. There can be no doubt of that—and there should be no doubt even in the mind of Governor Leader—for five times the people have rejected a state graduated income tax at the polls. Each of those five votes was on a proposal to change the state constitution to permit an income tax.

***

There are some other things wrong about that classified tax program, too.

For instance, the curious notion that a man who operates a business or receives interest or dividends or realizes a profit from a long-term sale has more ability to pay than a man who makes a wage or a salary.

The averages may work out that way, but a vast number of individual cases do not.

In fact some of the most pitiful cases to be found are retired folks trying to eke out existences on income from their life savings. To them this tax at four and five percent would be cruel.

It would appear that a fresh start on the entire state budget and tax problem is in order.

Steel Industry Faces Biggest Order Jam

—New York—

The magazine Iron Age said Wednesday that steel producers are up against one of the biggest order logjams in their history.

According to the publication, the 12-hour strike, short as it was, set deliveries back a week to ten days on some products.

Iron Age noted that mills are still struggling to get back to the pre-walkout production level, and said that it is questionable whether this will be achieved in the next several weeks.

In explanation, the publication reported that steel producers are confronted with a maintenance problem compounded by effects of the shutdown; a reduction in available supply of hot iron due to the strike and blast furnaces down for repairs; and the usual hot weather and vacation problems which normally slow production during the summer.

Meantime, said Iron Age, there is no prospect of a letdown in consumer demand, with automotive companies pushing production to the hilt and expecting prompt deliveries in the face of short inventories.

According to the publication, the scrap market is running wild, with prices this week soaring as much as five dollars a ton in some consuming areas.

Coal Making Comeback In Battle With Gas and Oil

Coal is making a comeback in the battle with oil and gas as fuel for generating electricity.

This welcome news to the depressed coal regions of Pennsylvania and West Virginia is revealed in a report of the Federal Power Commission covering the year ending May 31, 1955.

This report shows the use of coal for generating electricity increased 8.8 per cent in the 12-month period. The use of gas for this purpose increased seven per cent in the same period.

But the use of oil dropped 6.4 per cent in the 12 months for electric generating purposes.

That the trend is accelerating seems to be shown by the figures for May alone. The consumption of coal for electric generation in May 1955, was up 24 per cent over May of 1954, and was up 6.3 per cent over April 1955.

But for oil, while consumption in May 1955, was up 15.4 per cent over May 1954, it was down 6.4

for the year and down 14 per cent from April 1955.

The reason seems to be that in the East Coast-New England area the coal industry has made realistic price concessions to prevent further conversions of utility plants from coal to oil consumption, and perhaps to win back to coal some that are able to use either fuel.

In 1953, the regional average price for coal to utilities in New England was $9.81 a ton. It has been cut an average of 35 cents a ton.

The campaign of the coal industry against imports of residual fuel oil may have borne fruit too. The coal industry has pounded on the idea that residual fuel oil is being "dumped" at an uneconomic price on the East Coast to capture the industrial and utility market, but that once that market is captured and coal ruined, there will be no barrier to increases in oil prices.

President Orders Dixon-Yates Deal 'Terminated'

—Washington—

The Dixon-Yates contract was virtually a dead letter Tuesday. But triumphant foes in Congress indicated they planned to keep the issue alive—into the 1956 presidential campaign, if possible.

President Eisenhower ordered the contract cancelled Monday after Mayor Frank Tobey of Memphis, convinced him in a conference that the city intends to build its own power plant.

Coming out of that meeting, Attorney General Brownell announced the government "will immediately take steps to terminate" the private power contract.

But Senator Kefauver, Democrat of Tennessee, who heads an antitrust subcommittee which has been investigating negotiations which led to the contract, announced the cancellation "will have no effect on our hearings."

Plans for furthering a free public library for Greene County were made Tuesday at a meeting of the executive committee of which Fred T. Gillogly, assistant county superintendent of schools, is president. All sections of the county will benefit through the use of a bookmobile.

Financial support is being sought from the Greene County Commissioners and the State. The State, under a matching fund program, makes available each year a maximum of $4,000 to public libraries financed by county funds. It also assists in starting the library by supplying 2,000 books.

The free library project has already been endorsed by some 30 service, fraternal, civic and church groups.

Two Girls Die In Car Crash

Eighteen-year-old Gale Wise of Shamrock, died in her father's arms Monday night, minutes after she was injured in a crash at Kuhntown.

Police said Miss Wise was riding in an automobile driven by Cecil Tennant, 17 years, of Pentress, W. Va., when the car crashed into a tree on a curve of the Brave and Kuhntown road.

The other passenger, Marlene Yeager, 17 years, of Shamrock, died in Greene County Memorial Hospital a few hours after the accident. Tennant, suffering shock, is reported in good condition.

Tennant, operator of a motion picture projector at Blacksville, W. Va., drive-in, was driving the girls home from the show and had crossed the Kuhntown bridge when he lost control. He was found wandering about near the car muttering:

"Watch out. We're not going to make the curve."

Miss Wise suffered a skull fracture and other injuries. Her father, Milton Wise, was called to the scene shortly after the accident occurred.

Miss Wise is survived by her parents, three sisters, Rosemary, Esther Jean and Mrs. Carol Leah King, and two brothers, Raymond and Charles.

Tennant recently graduated from Clay-Battelle High School where Miss Yeager was a student.

Train Wreck Without a RR

Waynesburg hasn't had passenger railroad service since 1929, but it had all the excitement of an old-fashioned train wreck Tuesday when a motorized Monongahela Railroad hand car and an automobile collided on the entrance crossing of the Michael Berkowitz Shirt Factory.

Hazel Morris of Waynesburg, driver of the auto, and Mrs. Thelma Kiger of Waynesburg, and Emily Smithley of Mather, passengers, and Ned Missini, 30, his brother, Tony, 28, both of Clarksville, and Rafael Gomez, 50, of Carmichaels, workers on the hand car, all received severe but not serious injuries.

The Pioneer History of Greene County, Penna.

By L. K. EVANS

Second line, station two, Samuel White; station seven, William Hartley.

Third line, station one, John Lutes; station six, Jacobs Lutes; station 10, Thomas Courtwright; station 16, John Gray; station 22, William Parkinson.

Fourth line, station two, Reazen Wright; station seven, James Burns; station 12, David Gray, Esq.

Fifth line, station three, Robert Cather; station nine, James Ross.

Two persons have been appointed to superintend each station, who will find their names and the stations for which they are respectively appointed, set together in the table below.

The pilots are requested to be at their respective stations before or at sunrise on the 20th inst. and at the signal to march, to take a direct course toward the inner close or center. That their attention may not be drawn from the course, no other duty is required of them, but to keep in the line, neither advancing in front, nor falling in the rear of the line of men on the right and left. Much will depend on the pilots coming in correctly.

Each captain is to procure ten men, and as much more as he can, one of which must have a horn, and skill to blow it.

On the morning of the 20th each captain is requested to rally his men on his station at sun rise, and extend them equal distant from each other, from his post 100 perches on a direct line toward the next station. Of the two captains at any one station, he who is first named, or lowest in number, in the table below will extend his men on the right of his post, the other, on the left; and wait the signal to march—the grand signal station is the first on line first at Gillogly's. All signals of the horn, will pass from right to left; none from left to right. Each horseman will be careful to answer no sound that comes from his left; and strictly attentive to answer all signals coming from his right. All signals will be given by a long, well filled note of the horn. It is requested that no horn be blown, but in answer to the signals given at the signal station.

At sun rise the signal will be given by the horn at Gillogly's, when every horn on the left will pass the signal to the left as quick as possible. This is the file off signal, to hasten the close of the line. In thirty minutes after this signal the preparatory signal will pass to the left as before and in thirty minutes thereafter the signal of march will be given, at which the men will move slowly on toward the center. The signal will be repeated every 15 minutes during the march, still passing to the left. At the fourth signal given, after the march commences, the whole line will halt 15 minutes to correct any disorder that may have occurred. The whole line will move on at the first signal after halt. The signals will be given in the same manner, every 15 minutes and the halt repeated at the fourth signal after marching, throughout the day, till the lines arrive at the limits marked round the inner close; where all halt as they arrive, and wait further directions from the officers on horseback and the captains. All game taken at this hunt is to be considered as the common property of the whole engaged in the hunt; and shall be divided into as many equal shares as there are stations around the whole outlines, and these shares shall again be distributed by the captains as they and their men or a majority of them shall determine. Game therefore taken on the march shall be brought in to the center by such person or persons, as the captain, nearest it when taken, shall appoint.

Captains who do not know the places of their posts or do not otherwise obtain a guide, will meet at the following places where persons will be placed during Monday afternoon to guide them.

Captains of the first line from numbers one to seven inclusive, at William Beach's on Wheeling state road. From numbers eight to 11, at David Sellers; from 12 to 16, at Joseph Ankrom's.

Second line, from one to four, at Widow Young's; from five to nine, at James Morford's, Virginia state road on the head of Dunkard Creek.

Third line, from one to four, at John Utt's, head of Fish Creek; from five to nine, at Joseph Cooper's, Dunkard Fork of Wheeling; from 10 to 14, at Thomas Courtwright's, Dunkard Fork; from 15 to 16, at Ryerson's Station.

Fourth line, from one to five, at Stephen Durbin's Mill; from five to nine, at Samuel Teagarden's on Wheeling state road at Hunter's Fork of Wheeling; from 10 to 15, at Sergeant's Mill.

Fifth line, from one to six, at Robert Cather's, two miles east of Sergeant's Mill; from seven to 10, at Gideon Master's, on head of Bushy Fork of Ten Mile Creek; from 11 to 13, at Gillogly's.

Persons are requested to attend the hunt from the neighboring counties and Virginia. Persons not named on the table below as captains, bringing ten men or more with them will be politely received, and stations given them. The number arranged in the table, leaves ten rods from man to man. The number doubled will create no inconvenience, but greatly assist in securing the game. Success depends on the strict observance of all the regulations above stated. Danger is to be apprehended only from disorderly persons using fire arms. The captains will therefore require of each man who enlists under them to be observant of the rules of the hunt, and strictly, never to discharge his piece but directly in front of the line, or upwards. A breach of the rule ought to subject the man guilty of it to be deprived of his gun; and it is hoped the captains will act accordingly. As there will be a scarcity of pikes, spears and like instruments as many as can, are requested to bring such. Dogs are forbidden to be brought. No horn is to be blown on the morning of the 20th; lest the sound frightens the wolves beyond the limits of the hunt, during the night. They are said to be much alarmed at the sound of a horn.

Horsemen on line First—Thomas Layton, Hugh Barclay, James Hughes.

Second line—Mark Gordon, Thomas Burson, John Shriver.

Third line—Jonathan Parkinson, Samuel Howard, Lot Lanz, Joseph Morris.

Fourth line—Joshua Dickerson, Adam Hays, C. C. Smith.

Fifth line—William Cather, Stockdale, Francis Braddock.

They will ride along the rear of the line and give notice to captains whether their men are advancing too slow or too fast; and whether inclining too much to the right or left. William S. Harvey, commands the signal point.—J. W. H.

Lycoming County City Once Center Of Black Marble Industry in State

—Harrisburg—
Henry W. Shoemaker, Pennsylvania Folklore Society President, told the tale of the heyday of the black marble industry at Bonnington, Lycoming County.

"This industry flourished until the advent of central heating replaced the fireplace and decreased the former great demand for marble fireplace mantels," Shoemaker said.

"Covered wagons filled to the bows with black marble, slabs, friezes, pilasters, blocks, door steps, and hitching posts, going from Bonnington Hall, north, south, east and west, satisfying a hobby for shining black marble fire places, as far west as Chillischothe, as far north at Starenton, as far east as New Brunswick, as far south as Stanton.

"Dealt in on an almost cash basis, the turnover was quick, the volume of business expanding with every quarter. The most prosperous outcome of Marcus Huling's explorations of the valley of Mosquito Creek in Lycoming County.

"Who were these Bonningtons who exploited this mine of black gold? They were respectable English quakers, master marble cutters at Upper Purluck at Dorset in Old England. They heard of vast marble deposits in the West Branch Valley, and had come from their modest operations at Glen Hope on the Delaware, to the vast up river region. They were directed first, to the marble mountain at Richie, above Lock Haven in Clinton County, but they felt they could not start a cult for handsome fireplaces with red, green, and white flowered marble, must have an almost solid color, to start a widely popular taste.

"Then an old gold-miner on the Coudersport Pike told them of the vast layers of black marble with delicate white flowering down the river in Mosquito Valley. There they went, and found their heart's desire in marbles. This beautiful black material took a high rich polish, showing delicate silvery flowers, and would create a style and hobby almost equal to the best Vermont white marble or even Carrara.

"Business grew, the country was developing rapidly, fine homes were going up and every room required warmth, and in an artistic chimney piece. The old mansions vied with one another in the numbers of fancy carving of the black marble fireplaces. Closer to the source of supply, mansions were going up along the Susquehanna in Clinton and Lycoming Counties, ornamented with mantel pieces of classic design, occasionally a coat of arms was carved on a block set in the gable.

"The star of the Bonningtons was in the ascendancy, and a fine group of children and grandchildren made the social life at the great stone mansion on the hill. "It was not until the fourth generation had grown that the great house sank under its own weight in eclipse. The style in fireplaces and front steps had changed from marble to brick and granite, and the appearance of the furnace had put the fireplace into a secondary position."

Oceanographers
Map Study of Fish Resources

—Ottawa—
Studies of ocean resources are to be undertaken under two programs of worldwide research adopted by the International Commission for Northwest Atlantic Fisheries, which met here in June.

From the facts and figures collected, the commission will compute the amount of food which might eventually be made available to meet the needs of the expanding population of the world and the methods by which it might be harvested.

The two research programs will deal with oceanography, which has a bearing on all forms of life, and aquatic resources, which will be a survey of aquatic sources of food.

The oceanographic program is divided into two sections: an island observatories' project and "Operation Deep Current," to be carried out from vessels of all nations of the world which have oceanographic ships.

The high light will be the International Geophysical Year, 1957-58, planned in Rome last year by the International Scientific Union.

Thirty new island stations, in addition to those already operating, will be set up in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans to measure seasonal changes in sea level, while Operation Deep Current will gather data on the movement of waters at depth.

'Operation Alert' Set
For Repeat in 1956

The government has announced plans for an "Operation Alert" in 1956 coupled with military maneuvers.

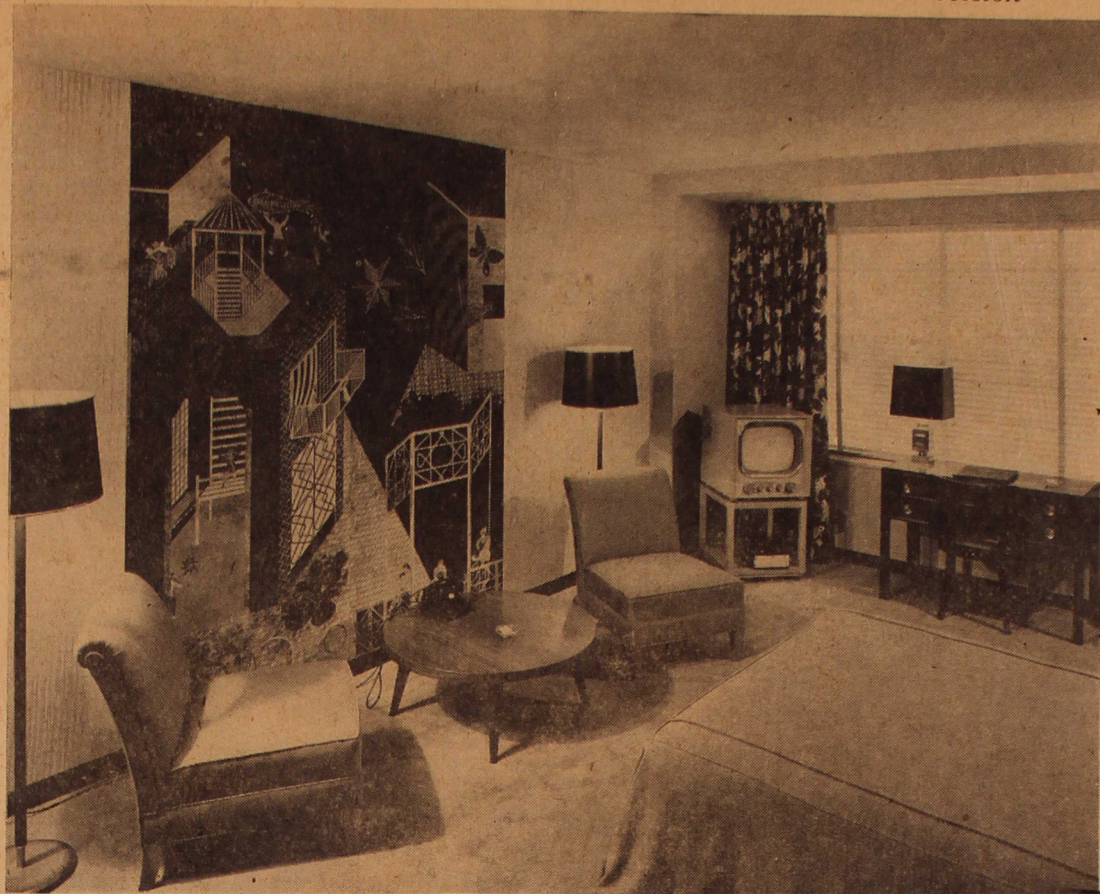

The announcement also disclosed tentative planning for establishment of safe, permanently staffed "relocation centers" for use by federal agencies in an H-bomb assault.

Key government units operated from makeshift emergency quarters outside Washington in last month's test on how to run a government in case of such attack.

Mobilization Director Arthur S. Flemming, in a report issued by the White House, disclosed further that a "high-level task force" is studying whether "any other course of action" than martial law is possible in such an emergency.

President Eisenhower invoked mock martial law June 17 when 15,000 government workers fled Washington in the three-day test of operations under an assumed raid on more than 50 vital target cities.

—Washington—
House Democrats have their plan for broadening Social Security benefits well on the road, confident it will attract many Republican votes.

House leaders plan quick floor action on the politically appealing bill to help older women and disabled workers. It may be called up Monday under procedures barring amendments.

However prospects for Senate action at this session were considered slight.

The House Ways and Means Committee Tuesday approved, 21-3, the bill which provides for a one per centage point Social Security tax hike next January 1, to pay for the new benefits expected eventually to cost $1,700,000,000 a year.

The benefit provisions also would take effect on New Year's Day.

One senior committee Democrat predicted the bill would win House approval "without the slightest doubt." A committee Republican conceded:

"It's a darn hard thing to vote against."

The proposal, backed by Democratic chiefs, would allow Social Security benefits for some 800,000 more women by lowering from 65 to 62 their eligibility age.

About 300,000 disabled workers could start getting payments under another provision lowering their eligibility age from 65 to 60.

Some 200,000 professional workers—including lawyers and dentists, but not doctors—would be brought under the Social Security system for the first time.

To pay for the new benefits, the Social Security tax would be boosted from 2 to 2 1/2 per cent on both workers and employers for an overall increase from 4 to 5 per cent.

So far the Eisenhower administration hasn't taken a direct stand on the bill. But it has said Social Security changes should be thoroughly studied before being written into law.

Some GOP House strategists, who lost a move for open hearings on the bill, were counting on the Senate to delay the Democratic-sponsored plan. They noted Chairman Byrd, Democrat of Virginia, of the Senate Finance Committee has said he favors extended hearings.

Troops Reaching Japan Awed
By Mass Airlift

—Ashiya Air Base, Japan—
More than one-third of America's first regiment of paratroopers ever to fly the Pacific en masse were in Japan Monday awed and enthusiastic about history's longest troop lift.

By early morning 15 giant C-124 Globemasters had brought some 1,350 men of the 508th Airborne Regiment here from the United States. Twenty-eight more of the massive transports, spaced across the Pacific all the way back to Fort Campbell, Kentucky, were en route with 2,650 others.

Everything was reported going smoothly, except along the 9,000-mile route shortened or lengthened the two-hour intervals at which the planes left Kentucky.

The Bering Strait was named for Vitus Bering, a Dane in the Russian Navy.

New Survivorship Provisions

A generally overlooked feature of the 1954 amendments to the Federal Social Security Act is one which provides survivorship protection to the families of many persons who died during the 1940s, according to Ivar E. Strand, Acting Manager of the Washington district office of the Social Security Administration.

Because of the length of employment requirements, many men who died after June 30, 1940, and before September 1, 1950, did not leave social security rights for their families, although they had worked for a time under the program. Under the 1954 changes in the act, this protection would now be provided if the deceased worker had been employed for at least a year and a half under social security.

To illustrate, Mr. Strand cited the example of a former steel mill worker who died in January 1949. At the time of his death, he needed 24 quarters of coverage, or the equivalent of six years of work under social security, to be insured for social security payments. Since his only work under social security had been the four years of employment at the steel mill, benefit payments could not be made to his widow when she became 65 in 1951. Now, however, payments can be made to her as she files her application.

Widows who are age 65, children under 18 and their mothers, or age 65 parents who were dependent on a deceased worker should inquire at the Social Security Administration, if a husband, father, son or daughter died during the 1940s but had not worked under social security long enough for payments to be made at the time of death.

Congress has been asked to provide $2,600,000 to improve the Washington National Airport. Officials figure it will be handling 10,000 passengers a day in 1956.

Foreign Aid Cut Rapped

—Washington—
Three Senate Republicans have criticized a 628-million-dollar cut by the House in President Eisenhower's foreign aid program and urged at least partial restoration by the Senate.

The Senate GOP Policy Committee arranged to discuss the $2,638,741,750 money bill behind closed doors Wednesday amid indications it would informally suggest an increase.

Senator H. Alexander Smith, Republican of New Jersey, said the House action "is almost a vote of lack of confidence in President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles just as they are setting out for one of the most important diplomatic conferences in ten years"—the summit talks at Geneva.

Senator Dirksen, Republican of Illinois, said "the House nicked the bill too much" and said he would seek some restoration by the Senate Appropriations Committee, on which he serves.

Senator Butler, Republican of Maryland, blamed the "Democratic leadership" in the House for having "seriously impaired the President's position at the Geneva conference by recklessly reducing the foreign aid program." He added he hopes "this previous error can be corrected."

Style influences from around the world are the new fashions shown at the summer furniture markets.

Shown above is the simplicity of Danish styling. This grouping is one of the most versatile collections of living, dining and bedroom furniture.

Not only are these units interchangeable from room to room, but within a room, and with each other. They bring an unusual and pleasant architectural aspect to our homes. For this custom look, base pieces are individual units, separate from cabinets and drawer chests, creating a free scaling variation about the room. The base units may also be used as benches or coffee tables. Note the extra storage space in the three drawers of the base units.

The wood is walnut, finished to have a hand-rubbed sheen, which allows the full beauty of the wood to show through—an increasing trend in new furniture styles.

Sliding drawers in the chests are reversible—one side is a walnut finish, and the other side is a dramatic black panelite.

New fashion touches are the louvred drawer fronts on case pieces, and the tamboured cabinet for either Television or Hi-Fi.

THE Frightened Man...

Sixty stories is a long way up, and—a long way down!

Our friend there won't even come close to the guard rail. Look at him hug that wall! Even as his reason tells him that he's perfectly safe, a nameless fear inside him easily overpowers his reason. "Don't get close!" it whispers. "Don't dare get close."

Our friend is ashamed of himself when he shouldn't be. Hundreds of thousands of otherwise brave men carry an inborn fear of high places that never can be cured.

Yet other fears are acquired or learned—not inborn—and their shadows never leave many

For God hath not given us the spirit of fears; but of power and of love and of a sound mind. II Tim. 1:7.

men. Some, for example, fear success. Others fear failure. Others cannot name their fears, even as quick tempers, nervousness, and unhappiness proclaim them.

These people need light—a spiritual light, and it is not surprising that the word "light" appears so often in the Scriptures and in sermons. For only light can banish the shadows of fear; the "kindly light" of your church that beckons each Sunday. Here is found the one perfect antidote. Here, in church, the teachings, love and fellowship of God, unshackles us of our unreasonable fears; and lead us, unafraid, in the Light of Faith . . .

Fifty-Year History of Greene County Sports

By GEORGE N. THOMAS

HUNTING

As early as 1912, soon after the Pennsylvania Game Commission was organized, it expressed interest in acquiring game lands and preserves in Greene County. In the late 1930s it had enough funds to begin buying the lands for the preservation of game.

By the half century, the state controlled two state game lands and several cooperative farm-game projects in the county.

On some reserves, hunters are not allowed in with either gun or dog. On other portions, hunters may shoot during hunting seasons.

Hunters freely concede that the millennium will not have been reached until officers enforce the closed-season laws.

In previous years, fox hounds were allowed to run loose, but late in the 1950s the state became more strict. Coon dogs, rabbit dogs and bird dogs were forced into closed seasons all summer.

And some sportsmen profess that if the game officials would stop the younger boys who prowled unceasingly around the county in summer killing birds and small game, there would be a great deal more game during the restricted season.

One of the most controversial subjects among hunters is that of foxes.

Red foxes disappeared almost completely in the mid-1940s but some were caught later.

One year, Roy and Bill Taylor trapped more than 400 grey and red foxes in Greene County's hills and valleys.

Old Bill said that if Waynesburg would turn out its lights all together for three straight nights, he could catch a fox on the courthouse yard.

In 1949 a grey fox was seen playing with a dog on Bridge street in Waynesburg.

Some pessimists claim there is no game at all in the county.

But good hunters will tell you there's little use hunting rabbits, for instance, without good rabbit dogs.

Besides a good dog, it takes considerable initiative, and, above all, patience.

Whether it's true or not, there has been a feeling among the state's 900,000 hunters that small game has a sixth sense which broadcasts the dates of hunting season.

They say that because the few days during the hunting season opens, hunters' eyes gleam with prospects as the fields seem to sprout with game.

But lo, comes the open season, and the animals are not parading any longer.

The animals don't even mind retreating to the oddest places in the county.

One year, after the season closed, Game Warden George Hay and his deputies trapped 200 cold rabbits within the county seat's city limits and hauled them back to the county.

But while the game protection groups strive to preserve the animals, man has been steadily improving guns and gunners.

Since 1918, improvements in guns has been fantastic.

The smokeless powder replacing the old black powder, for instance.

And today's nimrods can forget to clean their guns and still find them easy to use much later. The mercuric acid in the old primers is gone—thank Goodness, hunters say.

And better sights, such as the telescopic ones, make the animals on the cross-hairs shudder—and the hunter's shoulder makes him shudder, too.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission has the tremendous responsibility of planning, developing, and guiding a sound wildlife conservation program.

The sportsmen pay the bill through their hunters' license fees and cooperate in many ways to help protect and increase wildlife locally.

Pennsylvania has many natural resources. It is especially outstanding because of its wildlife which is a priceless heritage. It's a heritage that cannot be measured or valued in dollars and cents.

Hunters, for the most part, take pride in this abundance of nature's children, but to keep them plentiful for everybody to enjoy now and preserve some for the future, is a real complex problem.

But organizations such as the County Sportsmen and Conservation League and the Commonwealth have every faith in the state's hunters who take this conservation pledge:

"I give my pledge as an American to save and faithfully to defend from waste the natural resources of my country—its soil and minerals. Its forests, waters and wildlife."

That's the American way.

Stan Musial Advises Small Fry Players To Forget About Hitting Home Runs

—St. Louis—

Hey kids—Stan Musial says—stop trying to hit those home runs.

That's right, one of the game's all-time great sluggers thinks too many youngsters in Little League, Babe Ruth Leagues, Pony Leagues and other junior baseball programs are hurting themselves and their teams by all that heavy swinging.

The Cardinal first baseman, who is a top authority because he is dynamite both at hitting long drives and dinky singles, says, "Every youngster should learn first of all, just to meet the ball."

"That's the big thing," he said. "Always try to get at least a piece of the ball."

"I know when you are a kid there is a temptation to make out like you are another Babe Ruth and hit one out of the park. Instead you just fan up a big wind and leave a fellow on base who might have scored the winning run if you just reached out easy-like and banded a single."

Stan the Man, who is roaring out of one of his own rare batting slumps, said the kid baseball movements now going strong all over America are "going to put a lot of us major leaguers out of jobs one of these days."

"All of those junior baseball leagues are a tremendous thing for the game," he said. "More kids are talking baseball than ever before. And they are learning the game under proper supervision. It stands to reason that when they grow up, we're going to see the greatest crop of young ball players in the history of the game."

The Duke of Donora, Pa., recalled his own sandlot days in that industrial town and declared he would be a better player today if he could have played in a Little League.

"I was playing ball back as far as I can remember," he said. "But it was just pick-up stuff on the streets and in empty lots. I didn't really get any instruction until I went into American Legion ball. Then I really started to learn."

Manly Stanley pointed out the value of kid baseball in another respect—"It keeps kids off the street and out of mischief."

"When they are thinking in terms of clean, healthy sport they are not likely to be getting into those juvenile jams we all read about," he said.

Musial's own son, Dickie, named after the famed White Sox pitcher Dickie Kerr, is a 13-year-old kid star in St. Louis and is a switch-hitter. He has a kind of combination stance like Musial's crouch and Red Schoendienst's straighter position.

But Musial himself is opposed to that switch-hitting business.

"Don't fool around with switching from right to left," was his final word of advice.

"Stick to what is natural for you. There aren't many switch-hitters around in baseball today. If it was a good thing a lot more players would be doing it. Batting left was natural for me so I did it. But certainly wouldn't have changed if I had been a natural right-hander."

Olympics Prepare For 100,000

—Melbourne, Australia—

Booking officials for the 1956 Olympic Games expect more than one and a half million fans to click the turnstiles during the 16-day program late next year.

With a busy team of workmen now adding a 40,000-seat stand to the Melbourne Cricket Ground, total accommodations for all Olympic sites runs to more than 200,000. However, organizers have staggered events, anticipating daily crowds up to about 100,000.

The Cricket Ground alone could accommodate more than 100,000 a day during the Olympiad. The reconstruction work lifts its capacity from 85,000 to 120,000, but officials say special seating during the Olympics will reduce this.

Early estimates allowed for 104,000 to witness the big ceremonies and finals in comfort. But, encouraged by the rush when booking opened May 16, officials say they will reconsider seating plans. Chief Executive Officer William Bridgford believes that 110,000 capacity would be a practicable figure.

American tourists inspecting the Cricket Ground this year said it is bigger than the Memorial Coliseum at Los Angeles, which was the locale for the 1932 games.

Tightest seating accommodation will be at the modernistic swimming pool—part of redesigned Olympic Park. Here 5,500 spectators will fill the indoor stadium.

Bookings for swimming final events and finals are already closed in Australia, but a few overseas visitors may still gain tickets.

At the soccer stadium, set in the center of the athletic training tracks, terraced vantage points allow for a 33,000 crowd, while a stand will accommodate 2,600 more. Similar accommodation for 23,000 is available at the hockey and cycling track arena.

A total of 8,000 fight fans will fit into the new boxing stadium, steadily rising from the ashes of the old one which was destroyed by fire last January.

Each proposal shall be accompanied by a certified check or Bid Bond made payable to the Treasurer of Greene County, Pennsylvania, in the amount of not less than five per cent (5%) of the amount of the proposal. Said deposit to be returned in the event of failure of the successful bidder to enter into the contract within ten (10) days after the award, or to give satisfactory surety as required therein.

No bid may be withdrawn after the scheduled time for the receipt of bids for a period of ten (10) days.

The Board of Commissioners reserves the right to reject any or all bids, or to accept any bid which, in its opinion, best serves its interest.

Funeral mass for Arch Ward, Chicago Tribune sports editor who died Saturday, was said Tuesday by his long time friend, Bishop Bernard J. Sheil of the Chicago Roman Catholic Archdiocese.

Ward, nationally known for originating the All-Star baseball and football games, died of a heart attack at the age of 58. The rites were held in Chicago a few hours before the All-Star baseball game in Milwaukee, which he had planned to cover for the 22nd time.

Starting time of the All-Star game was delayed one-half hour to allow baseball figures attending Ward's funeral, time to reach Milwaukee.

During 25 years as sports editor of the Tribune, Ward became known as one of the country's outstanding sports writers and promoters. He created the All-Star football game in 1934, pitting the champion professional team against the top college stars of the previous season.

Ward also started the annual Tournament of Champions, bringing together the Golden Gloves boxing champions of the West, Middle West, and South.

Ward was sports editor of the Dubuque, (Iowa), Telegraph Herald in 1919, athletic publicity director at the University of Notre Dame in 1920-21, and sports editor of the Rockford, (Illinois), Star from 1921 to 1925.

Surviving are his widow, Helen, and a son, Thomas, who is a public relations man for U. S. Steel Corporation, and two grandchildren. A daughter, Ruth Helen, died in 1940, at the age of 17.

Olympic Athletes To Pay $8 Daily

—Melbourne, Australia—

International athletes who will live in the specially-constructed Olympic Village seven miles from the main stadium will pay nearly $8.00 a day.

This compares with $6.00 daily charged at Helsinki's Olympic Village in 1952. Olympic officials explain the higher charges in Melbourne are due to rising prices and heavier transport and labor costs.

They said the flat rate for athletes and officials will cover board, three meals daily, domestic service, blankets, linen and transportation to and from competition and training places.

It does not include laundry, dry-cleaning or clothing repairs.

The Olympic Village will carry a staff from 1,500 to 1,800 people during the games. They will be domestics, waiters, cooks, gardeners, engineers, carpenters, electricians, patrolmen and guards, switchboard operators, guides, interpreters and drivers.

Each proposal shall be accompanied by a certified check or Bid Bond made payable to the Treasurer of Greene County, Pennsylvania, in the amount of not less than five per cent (5%) of the amount of the proposal. Said deposit to be returned in the event of failure of the successful bidder to enter into the contract within ten (10) days after the award, or to give satisfactory surety as required therein.

No bid may be withdrawn after the scheduled time for the receipt of bids for a period of ten (10) days.

The Board of Commissioners reserves the right to reject any or all bids, or to accept any bid which, in its opinion, best serves its interest.

By order of the Board of County Commissioners of Greene County, Pennsylvania:
