Leader Offer Tax Deal; Appears Before Senate

Harrisburg—Governor George M. Leader, for the first time, has offered two compromises to the classified income tax program which Senate Republicans have threatened to kill.

It was reported Tuesday by the Senate Finance Committee, and given first reading by the GOP-dominated Senate which is set to bury the measure Thursday.

In a surprise appearance before the Senate, Governor Leader said that he is willing to compromise:

The proposed one per cent levy on wages and salaries.

The proposed two per cent levy on farmers and self-employed.

The governor did not specify the extent of compromise or reduction on which he will agree. He did not, in fact, mention "reductions." What he said was that if the tax schedule can be reduced at any point, "I would urge that the benefits go to earned income—to the wage earners, farmers and self-employed."

They are the two largest revenue producing classifications hit by the governor's tax program in its present form.

The one per cent group includes wages and salaries. The two per cent group includes farmers, doctors, lawyers and small business people.

Chesney Wood To Be Chief Assistant To Highway Head

C. CHESNEY WOOD

County Commissioner C. Chesney Wood has been appointed principal assistant superintendent of the Greene County Division, Pennsylvania Department of Highways, Secretary of Highways Joseph Lawler announced Friday.

Mr. Wood began his work Monday and will continue on a part time basis until his term as county commissioner expires the first of the year.

The position of principal assistant already exists in almost all other counties in the state. Mr. Wood's appointment will relieve Superintendent John Lapping of most of the paper work connected with his position and will give him an opportunity to spend much more time in the field supervising work.

Mr. Wood is a graduate of Waynesburg College and holds an engineering degree.

He is Greene County's first aviator, having served in World War I. He has been elected to the Board of Commissioners twice, resigning in 1943 to re-enter active duty in the Air Corps.

Mr. Wood was responsible for construction of the Greene County Airport with WPA labor and he also managed it for eight years.

Turnpike Link Plans Pushed

Representatives from Beaver, Mercer, Allegheny, Washington and Greene Counties conferred last week in Washington on progress toward efforts to have the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission choose the Beaver Valley route to connect the pike to the proposed link in West Virginia.

It was suggested that efforts be made to interest the Wheeling, W. Va., area in the advantages of the route that would pass through Greene and Washington Counties, west of Pittsburgh, and north to Erie.

L. D. McMichael, staff representative of the Greater Pittsburgh Airport Area Development Association, proposed that the federal defense department be informed of the advantages of the Beaver Valley route and be asked for its support.

The location of the West Virginia turnpike will greatly influence the selection of the connecting link in Pennsylvania, and it was suggested that every effort be made to have the two state commissions meet together.

Judge John Inghram Hook of the Greene County Court, talked on the special problems of the southwest counties and their relation to the turnpike in West Virginia.

I. E. Sahli, president of the Western Pennsylvania Regional Planning Association, reported on activities to the north with emphasis on the projection of the New York connection across Pennsylvania to Ohio. He also dwelt on the importance of interchanges.

Others who spoke were Assemblyman Stephen McCann of Greene County; Washington County Commissioners Francis E. Pettit and John Mazza; A. T. Bray of Beaver County Planning Association; Gordon Ward of Sharon of Mercer County Turnpike Association, and George T. Wiley, president of the George Washington Hotel.

James S. Lyon, chairman of Washington Chamber of Commerce highway committee, presided.

Rev. Father J. S. Garahan Passes Away Wednesday

Jackson Gas Plant Badly Damaged By Fire Sunday

The gas compressor station at Delphene, Jackson Township, owned by the Jackson Oil and Gas Corporation of New York, was badly damaged by fire from a "flash explosion," about noon Sunday.

Waynesburg Fire Company answered the alarm which was 20 miles away, but the corrugated iron building collapsed just as they arrived.

Riley Morris, who operates the station, left the station a few minutes before the explosion occurred. He believes the explosion occurred at a gas breather on one of the compressors. Mr. Morris checked water going through the cooling system and then went to his home about a hundred yards away. He immediately turned off an outside valve to stop the flow of gas, but left water running through the two compressors to avoid as much damage as possible.

H. E. Milliken of Waynesburg, manages the station for the Jackson Corporation. He stated the extent of the damage could not be estimated until the compressor which is a Cooper-Bessmer direct drive, can be checked. They were 85 and 80 horse-power. There was also other machinery and air tanks in the building. Firemen kept several barrels of oil from exploding.

Gas is piped from the area and compressed into a four-inch line to Peoples Gas Station at Brave. Between 300,000 and 400,000 cubic feet of gas is sent daily to the Brave station.

Mr. Milliken had built the station in 1927, and sold it several years ago to the Jackson Corporation. Mr. Morris has operated it 24 years.

The building was 24 by 30 feet. The pumping house, which was destroyed by fire a few years ago, and was rebuilt of concrete block, was not damaged.

Talbott Quits Air Post, GOP Praises Act

Air Force Secretary Talbott's resignation was praised Tuesday by Republicans who saw it as depriving Democrats of a 1956 political issue.

His resignation will take effect August 13. No successor was named.

In his letter to President Eisenhower, the air secretary—under fire because of private business dealings—declared he had never done anything improper but that he wanted to spare the Chief Executive any embarrassment.

Mr. Eisenhower replied that "under the circumstances," his decision to leave was "the right one" but praised the secretary's services to the government.

French Approve Big Military Budget

Paris—France's National Assembly approved a military budget of 945 1/2 billion francs ($2,731,429,970) Saturday. This is an increase of about 30 billion francs ($85,714,200) over last year, despite the end of the Indochina fighting.

Father James S. Garahan, 55 years, pastor of St. Ann's Catholic Church, died Wednesday morning, August 3, 1955, at 9:45 o'clock, in Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, where he had been a patient a month. He had undergone a major operation last December, but after a vacation in Florida, was able to come back to the parish.

Father Garahan was a son of James S. and Bridget Garahan, and was born in Pittsburgh, in 1900. He attended St. Candice High School and Duquesne University.

During World War I, he served in the Army Air Force and upon returning graduated from Duquesne University. Later he graduated from St. Bonaventure's Seminary at Olean, N. Y.

After ordination as a secular priest he was assigned to the staff of St. Paul's Cathedral in Pittsburgh, where he served 19 years. His official title in the cathedral was Master of Ceremonies, and he also preached much of the time.

Father Garahan was chaplain of the Variety Club in Pittsburgh and numbered many famous theatrical people as his friends. He was active in American Legion work in Pittsburgh, and also managed Camp Boyle, a summer camp for cathedral boys.

Father Garahan came to St. Ann's June 27, 1946, and during his pastorate a liturgical altar was placed in the church replacing the missionary type altar. Major improvements were also made on the exterior of the church and the interior of the rectory.

He was greatly interested in athletics having played baseball at Duquesne and also on the Pittsburgh Collegians. It was through his influence that Frank Gustine became basketball coach at Waynesburg College.

He was also interested in civic affairs and when one of the factories in Morrisville, he secured the Keystone Products Company to come here to make paper boxes.

In June 1952, Father Garahan celebrated his silver jubilee of ordination as a priest.

Father Garahan possessed a genial disposition and was beloved by Protestants and Catholics alike.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Alice Burkley, Miss Mary E. Garahan, and one brother, Bernard J. Garahan, all of Pittsburgh.

The body will lie in state in St. Paul's rectory, Pittsburgh, until 3 o'clock Friday when it will be translated to St. Ann's Church.

The divine office will be performed Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock, and pontifical requiem mass will be sung at 11 o'clock by Bishop John F. Deardon of the Pittsburgh Diocese. Interment in the family plot in Calvary Cemetery, Pittsburgh.

The Republican is indebted to Glenn Headlee, of Headlee and Spragg Drug Store, for the following roster and minutes of the "Central Grant and Wilson Club," organized August 1, 1872. Unfortunately, right in the middle of the minute book, some pages have been cut out and the next entry states: "Sugar for Home, May 12—13 lbs." Nothing political nor enlightening about that.

In the minutes of the organizing meeting, W. G. W. Day, from whom the late I. H. Knox purchased The Republican, waxed eloquent in speaking of the orators of that day, such as "He (J. B. Donley) seemed inspired with the subject before him and the house was made to ring with applause. The meeting then adjourned, with cheers for Grant and Wilson."

The Pioneer History of Greene County, Penna.

By L. K. EVANS

"Garard's Fort" is located on Big Whiteley Creek. The Corby massacre is a part of the pioneer history of many families in Greene County.

"Fort George," sometimes called Enoch's Fort, was built at a strategic point, the junction of North and South Ten Mile Creeks, long since named Clarksville.

"Ryerson Station." The exact site of the fort near Ryerson Station is a matter of dispute; but the massacre of a part of the Davis family, whose posterity are still living—(some of them in Waynesburg)—occurred on the Lazear farm, still in possession of the Lazear family. The oldest memorial of those stirring days is the block-house, now modernized and occupied, that was built by General Ryerson and later owned by Francis Drake, now by a Mr. Baldwin.

"Crow's Fort." Crow's Fort was built near the junction of North and South Wheeling Creeks, and about five miles below Ryerson Station on land yet in possession of the Crows who were related to the Lazear family. The murder by an Indian and a supposed white man of two Crow sisters, who were going up Wheeling Creek to visit their relatives, the Lazears, near Ryerson Station Fort, was a brutal one never to be forgotten in the history of Indian atrocities.

"Sellers Fort." Three miles west of Fort Jackson on the Middlebourne road and on the Buchanan-Walton farm there is an old gravestone standing which is said to mark the grave of a Mrs. Sellers and a girl who was with her picking grapes when they were murdered by the Indians. The exact site of the Sellers Fort, or fortified cabin is not known—but evidence of its existence near the scene of this massacre is more than tradition, we suspect.

"Enoch's Fort." Near the village of Graysville, on the old State road to Wheeling, was a military station—a fortified cabin. This Enoch's fort is now owned by Oscar Orndoff.

"Hopewell Fort." At Hill's schoolhouse, west of Waynesburg, the Middlebourne road follows Ten Mile Creek, while the old Wheeling State road turns to the north until it climbs the ridge and following the ridge westward to Enoch's Fort. It seems that Hopewell Fort was a fortified cabin, south of the present Hopewell Church. Original owner, John Church; present owner, Elijah Morris.

"Heaton's Fort." "A scar in the ground," long visible on the farm of the late Hugh Montgomery on Ruffs Creek, marks the location of Colonel John Heaton's Fort.

"Kline's Fort." On Muddy Creek seven miles east of Fort Jackson, on the farm of the late Louie Long Keenan's heirs, one-fourth of a mile west of Muddy Creek Church, on the top of a high hill was the "scar of the fort." The house of Jacob Kline was further along and the first court of Greene County was held in it, January 1797.

"Felix Hughes' Fort." This fort was located on the Biddle farm one mile east of Carmichaels. This seemed like the nucleus of a village, for it numbered seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven fortified cabins.

"Armstrong Fort." So named from its original owners, and like all forts and fortified cabins a spring of never-failing water decided the location. The cabin had but two rooms built on a slightly rising knoll. The first preaching services were held here conducted by Rev. John McMillan, Presbyterian minister, which led later to the organization of the Glades Church whose organization was preceded by Goshen Baptist Church at Garard's Fort.

"Crawford's Fort." (Colonel William Crawford), two and one-fourth miles east of Carmichaels. Several families lived there. The fort was built over a springhouse.

"Jenkin's Fort." This fort was built two miles south of Carmichaels, and one mile southeast of Bally's schoolhouse, on the old Whitehill farm, later Mary Hamilton farm. The fort was built on the knoll with a spring at the base. Indian chiefs Logan and Snake were at this fort the evening of the Spicer massacre. The next day they committed outrages at Colonel John Crawford's Fort.

"Seltzer's Fort." This was in Dunkard Township, Mapel's Mill—Bob Mapel farm, called "Bobtown," situated on the south side of Dunkard Creek and two miles east of Taylortown. Exact location unknown.

"Swan-Vannmeter Fort." This fort was located one and one-half miles south of Rices Landing on the farm long known as the Jackson Young place. Swan and Vannmeter cleared the ground. There is an Indian graveyard there—another in Jackson Township with no evidence of a fort or fortified cabin nearby. Old settlers could trace the Indian trail from the ridge above Garard's Fort to this point fifteen miles west in Jackson Township and also on the war-path to Wheeling, West Virginia, forty miles distant, but still following this watershed.

"Block-House Fort." This stream near Ash Tree postoffice, east of New Freeport and north of Jollytown near the Fordyce farms, tradition says, received its name from a block-house near the mouth of this little stream, tributary to Dunkard Creek. About seven miles below the mouth of Block House Run was a fort located on Mason and Dixon's famous line.

"Fort Baldwin." The village of Blacksville is on the "line." The "scar in the ground" is a grim reminder of the perils that beset our pioneer ancestors. Also, tradition locates a fortified cabin on the east bank of Ten Mile Creek, near the Children's Home, and several others that were fortified during Dunmore's War which began in 1774.

Early Greene County

There is little evidence that what is now Greene County was ever occupied by the Indians save as a hunting ground, or as a passage way from their Eastern to their Western retreats. True, there are here and there small burial grounds and occasional hieroglyphics and other relics, but there is little trace of village or permanent encampment anywhere within her borders.

Yet, back in the mysterious cycles of the past, beyond the age of tradition and legend, Greene County had an existence of which her various tumuli and their mouldering skeletons of giant men, constitute a silent history.

In the beginning of the occupation of America by rival European nations all the territory west of the Allegheny mountains, including Greene County, became a matter of dispute. The English colonies claimed it by reason of charters granted by successive sovereigns in the years 1594 and 1681. The French, however, having planted colonies, one at the mouth of the Mississippi and one at Quebec, early began the occupation of the great valleys of the Mississippi and Ohio. Controlling the region of the great lakes, they readily obtained ingress to the valley of the Allegheny, down which they precipitated an army of 1,000 men in April 1754, and took actual possession of the site of Pittsburgh, upon which they proceeded to construct Fort Duquesne. The land we live on was then practically a French possession, till the 25th of November 1758, when Colonel George Washington, with a detachment of an English army, succeeded in dislodging the invaders from Fort Duquesne, and as the sequel proved, expelling the French forever from the confluence of the Allegheny and Monongahela and establishing the English perpetuity in possession of the Great West.

For a time, about the year 1766, the Indians denied that this territory, in common with all adjoining, was included in any treaties stipulated and executed by them; and with such obstinacy and pertinacity did they protest against the settlement of any of these by the whites, that the Governors of both the Provinces of Pennsylvania and Virginia deemed it advisable to issue an edict compelling actual settlers to abandon their cabins, and setting the ban of prohibition against further occupation till the question of boundary should be determined.

Again the proprietary right to the land we inhabit became a matter of grave dispute between the Provinces of Pennsylvania and Virginia. This was perhaps the most serious complication in which the county has ever been involved. The controversy began to be agitated about the year 1752. Virginia claimed under the charter of James the First in 1584, and Pennsylvania under that of James the Second in 1681. The conflict assumed at times very aggravating and threatening aspects, as both claimed and attempted to exercise jurisdiction at the same time, and they were frequently on the verge of evoking military aid, the consequences of which might have led to National disaster. Happily, in the interest of civic liberty and free government, the establishment of Mason and Dixon's line in 1784, reconciled this unfortunate dispute forever.

30 Million Move Yearly in U. S.

Moving from one house into another is now a part of the American way of life in which nearly one-fifth of the national population packs up annually and changes its shelter.

The trend of nearly 30,000,000 Americans moving into new quarters in a single year is largely the result of the migration of populations out of the cities into the suburbs, the United States Bureau of Census reported.

That trend was noted for the year ending April 1954, when the transient movement reached a new high peak of acceleration. Since then, the transfer of homes from one family to another has continued unabated as new houses and modern equipment lure the home buyer into making a down payment.

The demands of intown families to move out into the suburbs have played a big role in the prevailing home building boom. They have also maintained the values of older houses which are being remodeled and converted into comparatively new homes at lower-than-new-house prices.

"Mobility of people and of capital funds," the Census Bureau declared, "have given the American economy much of its dynamic quality. The two are intimately interrelated as far as their economic and social impact are concerned, contributing greatly to the flexibility and drive which are distinguishing characteristics of the American way of life."

United States Surprise to Red Farmers But, 'Have the Same Things in Russia'

—Eagle Grove, Iowa—

The twelve Russian farm bosses visiting the United States, find our country is a vast land of constant surprises, where attending church is "just like going to the opera," where they can sleep in air conditioned comfort, write with ball point pens, have steak and orange juice three times a day, and where farmers have movie cameras and ride around in automobiles.

During a typically capitalistic week end in Jefferson, Iowa, they attended church services, lunched at the country club, played a bit of golf, had dinner with a banker and spent the evening pricing television sets and power lawn mowers.

What impressed them most was a visit to the First Presbyterian Church. Overheard in an exchange of impressions, one said:

"Why, it was very beautiful, just like going to the opera. A lot of young men and women came in and sang pretty songs. It was easier to understand than an opera, because when the people stopped singing a man came out to tell the story. He was unlike any clergyman we had ever heard of. He wore a plain suit, just like a business-man."

One member of the delegation who had refused to go to church asked his colleague:

"What kind of a church was it? Orthodox, the way we have them in Russia?"

The church going one replied: "Oh, yes, it's a Russian Orthodox church only here, they call it Presbyterian."

During this past heat wave, which reached 105 degrees at times, the Russians remained cool. Their 40-seat special bus is crisply air-conditioned, and wherever they go they have air-conditioned rooms reserved for them.

A small diplomatic drama developed in Iowa Falls, Iowa, where Vladimir Matskevich, leader of the delegation, and some of his men, were scheduled to stay overnight with typical farm families. Matskevich, insisted, however, on returning to Ames, Iowa, where he and his following occupy the air-conditioned wing of the hotel.

With well-concealed amazement, the Russians have noted that almost every farmer has one or more autos. They gasped in disbelief when 16-year-old Bob Augsburg of Jefferson, explained that he had a 1954 car for his own use, and gaped at farmer Elmer Carlson in his convertible.

So far, the Russians have not admitted seeing any major development in the U. S. that does not also, according to them, exist in Russia. Although they're loading up on ball point pens, nylon stockings and dacron shirts, their comment always is: "We have the same things in the Soviet Union."

This remark has become al-

New Reserve Unit Activated

Formal activation of the new Artillery Service Unit of the 312th Field Artillery Battalion, Waynesburg's new reserve unit, took place Tuesday night in the quarters in the basement of the First National Bank building.

Colonel Charles I. Faddis, veteran of both World Wars, and also a former congressman, spoke on the vital importance of a strong active reserve.

"This is a nation worth preserving," Colonel Faddis said. "Whatever it takes to preserve it, that is what we must do. By serving in the Army Reserve you are fulfilling one of the primary duties of a good citizen, that of bearing arms to defend your country."

Captain Ewing B. Pollock of Waynesburg, was in charge of the program. He is commanding officer of the 312th Field Artillery Battalion, which is based at Washington, and of which the service battalion is a part.

Captain Pollock explained that the 312th Battalion will aim to supply artillery support for the 314th Infantry Regiment. Both units are part of the 79th Division.

First Lieutenant John F. Holleran of Waynesburg, commanding officer of the service battery, explained that the mission of his unit will be to furnish and deliver ammunition, supplies and other materials to the entire 312th Battalion.

Major Jack A. Vaira of Washington, senior unit advisor, spoke briefly and read a congratulatory letter from the Commanding General of the Third Army. Another guest was Captain Charles R. Clark of Washington, Operations and Training Officer of the 312th.

Others in the cadre of the service battery in addition to Lieutenant Holleran, are Lieutenant Clyde W. Roberts, Jr.; Sergeant First Class Richard C. Van Druff; Sergeant First Class John C. Sowden; Sergeant Bobby R. Du-laney; Sergeant Alvin E. Headley; Sergeant Oral R. Merritt; Corporal Richard E. Cole; Corporal Junior Jenkins; Corporal Lamar W. Shumaker; Corporal William G. Urban; Private Joseph L. Headlee; Private George H. Rhodes, and Private Ewing S. Suplee.

Renovation and Repairs on Capitol Hill To Cost Pennsylvania $34,000,000

Harrisburg—The post-war cost of expansion, renovating and repairs on Capitol Hill will total more than $35,000,000 when the ambitious program is completed.

The cost is reasonable by present day standards but seems high when compared with the original cost of the main Capitol building. No present day contractor would attempt to build a duplicate of the main Capitol building for its original cost in 1906 of $10,000,000.

State government has grown since 1906 with increased duties incurred by a larger population and a more complicated way of life. The main Capitol building long ago ceased to serve as the home for all State departments, bureaus, boards, etc.

The State offices outgrew the main Capitol building and eventually were scattered throughout the Harrisburg area. Many of them are located in leased buildings.

As an employment cushion for the post war period, State planners decided on a Capitol Hill building program. To adequately accommodate and centralize the many State offices the State eventually will spend more than $31,000,000 for land and construction on Capitol Hill.

More than $3,000,000 additional has been spent on the first modernization of the main Capitol building since it was constructed in 1906. And upon completion of a $350,000 contract to air condition the main Capitol the first large scale modernization program in 50 years will be concluded.

The modernization funds were spent on repairs to Capitol dome, installation of a new water system, separation of storm and sanitary sewers, renovation of the heating, plumbing and ventilating systems, and rehabilitation of the electrical system.

To expand on Capitol Hill is expensive. Cost of land located in the heart of Harrisburg's commercial and apartment residence district was and is expensive. The land buying program is not yet completed. A House Bill implementing Governor George M. Leader's budget request for $1,090,000 was recently introduced. This sum is in addition to $3,000,000 originally appropriated.

The ratio between land cost and construction is that for every $7 for construction $1 must be spent for land.

Planned for Capitol Hill are four buildings and an underground garage.

Two buildings will be completed by 1956. The Commonwealth Office Building will cost $3,000,000 when completed and the Labor and Industry building will cost $10,000,000 when completed.

A contemplated archives building will cost $3,000,000; a Bureau of Motor Vehicles building is expected to cost $6,000,000, and an underground garage complete with a patio or plaza roof to be located at the present site of temporary buildings to the rear of the main Capitol building will cost $3,000,000.

Secretary of Property and Supplies William D. Thomas is directly responsible for the modernization and land acquisition program, and also is the State's agent and supervisor for building construction.

"Capitol Hill won't resemble the architecture of ancient Rome or Greece but will be a combination of turn-of-the-century traditional, as witness the main Capitol, and modern day functionalism as will be found in the Commonwealth office building.

"The program when completed will centralize the activities of the State government on 25-acres of Capitol Hill and eliminate the necessity of renting scattered office space," commented Secretary Thomas.

State to Widen Nemacolin Road

Widening of the Nemacolin road, Route 30064, from 16 to 20 feet, will begin within a few days, Greene County Division, Department of Highways has announced.

Work will begin at Luxner's garage at the intersection of Route 88, and continue to the top of Nemacolin hill, a distance of about three miles. A new concrete bridge will be built over Glades Run and the highway will have blocktop surface.

North of Waynesburg on Route 19, crews are patching concrete. Beyond Mt. Morris, where Route 19 enters West Virginia, about 500 feet of new concrete highway will be laid to meet the reconstruction work on the road being done by that state.

New blocktop surfaces have been laid on Route 30011 between Deer Lick and West Union, and on Route 616 from Green Hills Farm to the top of the Murdock hill on the Garards Fort road.

Fifty-Year History of Greene County Sports

By GEORGE N. THOMAS

HORSE RACING

One of the most vivid impressions left upon visitors to Greene County in the first half century was the opportunity to witness horse racing at the Jacktown Fair in Wind Ridge.

It was neither the quantity nor the quality of the racing, although there was plenty of it and generally it was good, but rather they remembered the manner in which the horses ran.

For, as a matter of fact, the spectators watched as the horses shot away at the start of the race, went into the sweeping turn toward the back stretch, then—nothing!

That is, nothing for a few seconds. The horses simply disappeared and spectators making initial visits to Jacktown shook their heads and blinked their eyes.

"Can this be?" they asked themselves and those around them.

Then, just before they questioned their sanity, the horses reappeared heading around the far turn and into the home stretch.

For inquisitors there always was someone around who'd explain that because of hilly terrain in the Wind Ridge district, they had to build their racetrack around the knob of a hill, and they never bothered grading it.

"So what if you can't see them in the backstretch?" asked old-time Jacktowners, "there'll be plenty of time to worry about the finish when they come around the bend!"

In spite of the peculiarity of the track, Jacktown drew the district's best thoroughbreds and great throngs to watch them run.

Of course, they didn't have the capacity of the Fair Grounds in Waynesburg which, in 1922, attracted 18,000 to watch harness racing at the Waynesburg Fair.

Names of horses often appearing in the winners' columns in that period were Benora, Tolley, Sam Forman, Harvest Moon, Direct Forbes, Patty, Harvest Barbara, Bud Hanna and Jolly Bird.

And the county's name was spoken throughout the East with the success of Jockey Johnny Pevic, an 18-year-old lad from Carmichaels.

He learned to ride as a lad and went off to Havana, Cuba, where he displayed great promise. His contract was purchased for $5,000.

In Windsor, Canada, he rode 13 winners in seven days. Johnny rode in most of the nation's big tracks and had many fine days.

Jacktown and Waynesburg certainly did not monopolize the county racing business.

In early 1920, Carmichaels had one of the oldest continuous fairs in the country and the community's officials possessed tremendous prestige.

In 1924, for instance, harness racing, both trotting and pacing, at the fair was unusually spirited.

It all began when Fanny Price broke the track record in the free-for-all at 2:12 in circling the track twice.

Then, the thrill of the week came on Thursday when Bolt Reynolds of Waynesburg, who confessed he was "more than 80" and believed to be the oldest active driver in the United States, piloted his Bernor to victory in the 2:22 trot.

Not only was the crowd cheering for the octogenarian driver to win, but also for his horse which he had bought at public auction three years before for the ridiculous sum of $7.50.

Bolt began using the horse for plowing, but realizing its speed, turned it into a trotter.

He sent his former plow horse under the wire a winner in the fourth and fifth heats after three other horses had taken firsts.

The overflow crowd in the grandstand jumped and yelled as the aged reinsman became the unanimous favorite after the fourth and tying heat.

As he brought his entry down the stretch in a driving finish in the fifth heat, he received one of the greatest ovations ever accorded a driver in Greene County's rolling hills.

When Bernor became too old to race, Ralph Summersgill drove the animal on an R. F. D. mail route for years.

In horsedom, it was a beautiful success story.

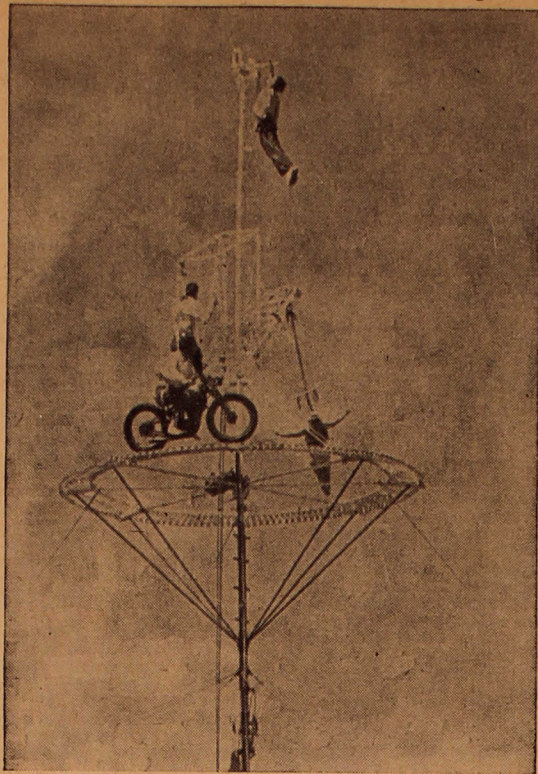

But not all fairs and racing programs were as exciting and fruitful. Occasionally, rain would ruin not one day of racing, but sometimes all three days' program and as many as 80 horses would have trained in vain.

Still, Carmichaels had a good track, and when everything went right, one could look for a record.

Bud Hanna, owned by Ray J. Dred of Pittsburgh, broke the track record for the 2:14 pace by pacing the mile in 2:12 1/2. That was 1927.

The former record had lasted 20 years, and was held by Ethel Alken which ran it in 2:12 1/2 back

Aerial Act Featured at Greene County Fair

Greene County Free Fair, Waynesburg, proudly presents the world famous Albanis, aerial sensation, appearing August 17, 18, 19 and 20, with the "Kaleidoscope of Stars." These skillful, daring aerial artists present a terrific thrill routine atop a most unusual rigging 75 feet in the air, using a revolving and tilting ladder equipped with trapezes, they frolic on horizontal bars, do headstands and twirl dizzily through space while hanging by their hands, their feet and even their teeth, and then cavort madly on the dangerous sway pole. In the smash finale, a motorcycle ridden at insane speed around its sky-high track, is suddenly thrown into a high loop-ing somersault by a lightning quick, beautifully executed counter-balancing maneuver by the trapezists. Joe Albanis was a pilot in World War I. The thrill of flying and watching an aerial act in a circus back in the early thirties created his intense desire to be an aerial performer. He met his present partner, who was working in a bareback riding act, and together they framed one of the most outstanding acts in the world today. The Albanis have performed before the crowned heads of Europe and toured with the famed Mills Olympia Circus in London, England. Don't fail to see the world famous Albanis troupe appearing at the Greene County Fair, August 17, 18, 19, 20.

Horseshoe Meet August 17-19

The Greensboro Lions Club will hold its annual horseshoe pitching contest Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 17 to 19, at the Ganoxy service station near Mapletown.

Plans for the contest were made at a meeting of the club last Thursday, which was attended by 26 members.

Competition will be held each of the three evenings, starting at 6 p. m. Cash awards will go to the singles and doubles champions.

On the committee in charge of arrangements for the contest are Sylvester Ganocy, Roy Yanish and Joseph Watson.

In 1907 when driven by Tob Gibbons.

But that was an unusual horse, too. After finishing eighth in the first heat, it bounced back to win the next two and set the speed mark.

They had a lot of heart when they raced in Carmichaels.

Athletic Club Plans Advance

Wettie Mancuso of Waynesburg, was named president of the club which is being organized to boost athletics in Waynesburg High School. The first meeting of former athletes and other interested persons was held several weeks ago.

Other officers are Ray McClure, vice president; Charles Greenlee, secretary-treasurer, and Harry T. McHenry, chairman of the board of directors. The other seven directors are William Higgins, Charles Patterson, Albert Howard, Charles Miller, Charles Reed, Al Caldwell and Mel Hart.

Named to the by-laws committee were Morgan Henderson and Kenneth Milliken.

The next board meeting will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday, August 17, at the Elks Lodge. The group hopes to get the organization in "high gear" before the approaching football season which starts early in September.

Sportsmen Oppose Open Doe Season

Greene County Sportsmen and Conservation League at a special meeting Sunday in Carmichaels, passed a resolution opposing the recent action of the Pennsylvania Game Commission in opening Greene County, as well as others in the state, to a two-day doe season this fall.

John Masuga, president, stated that the organization in June had also passed a resolution against an open doe season, but that the Game Commission gave it no consideration, and now 1,500 doe licenses will be available for county hunters.

The league also opposed killing turkeys and quail in the small game season, since there are so few in the county.

Nine sportsmen's clubs were represented.

The annual picnic will be held Sunday, September 4, at Muddock's Grove on the Garards Fort road.

Summer Tan to Rest

—New York— Summer Tan, Mrs. John W. Galbreath's colt who has been out of action with ankle trouble since finishing third in the Kentucky Derby May 7, has been withdrawn from racing for the rest of the year.

ARCARO AT BEST Eddie Arcaro, at 40, is having one of his best years as a jockey. He led all riders at the recent Aqueduct meet with 25 victories.

WORLD SERIES VETS Joe DiMaggio and Babe Ruth are the only players who have been in 10 World Series. DiMaggio leads in most games played with 51.

Pennsylvania Deer Hound Now Extinct Due to Legislature Ban on Dog Running

Henry W. Shoemaker, Pennsylvania Folklore Chief, told the story of the Pennsylvania deer hound, a unique breed of Pennsylvania dog, believed to be extinct since former Governor Patton signed the anti-dog running bill at the close of the 1893 legislative session.

"This writer was told of two small packs kept in existence by old time sportsmen on both sides of Tuscarora Mountain, one in Perry, one in Juniata County," Shoemaker said.

"John Fried, who resided in a hidden glen, close to Sherman's Creek, was the propagator of the breed in Perry County. Jacob Stein, who lived in a small village between the foot of mighty Tuscarora Mountain and Port Royal, was the Juniata County fancier."

"Old John was found in his yard with three of the survivors walking at his heels, big husky dogs, dark eyed, and coated like light silver roan thoroughbred colts.

"Eyes ever searching for something, like searchlights in restless hands, their shoulders and hind legs were magnificently developed from a long race of lengthy runs over rough mountain terrain, covering many miles after fleeing deer. The color to be exact, was grey roan, with dark shadings almost like imperceptible dappling. The wolf ears were close cropped, and thick round tails were full length like tiger's tails. The ears were amputated so that a man with a gun encountering one of these wily creatures in the woods would not mistake it for a wolf and shoot it down, and the strange appearance kept wolves at full length's distance.

"I am keeping a few of these dogs just for old times sake, I can't bear to let them die out, under my eyes, they were too good to lose altogether," old John told me.

"They are the originators of the one man dog idea. They keep their master's for life, unless they changed hands as wee puppies. They would never take up with a new owner, he would get to feel so cheap, at their neglect, he'd shoot them, hence these dogs were kept in the same families, generation after generation. I let a pup or two survive every other year or so, just to keep the breed in the flesh so they'll not completely die out. On winter's nights I sit before my open fireplace in the butcher house, my dogs at my feet, and I tell them of deer chases 50 and 60 years ago, back to the time when I was a mere boy and the dogs were the great, great, great, great grandsires of my listeners. Sometimes their manes stand up stiff, their eyes flash, their teeth grind, I know they understand every word I say."

"At Jacob Stein's residence, we were met by his young granddaughter, Hermanita, of high school age. Carrying a galvanized iron bucket, she was joined by six or seven of the sturdy dogs coming out from several directions, restless-eyed, cropped, pale roan shades, with long, tiger tails. They patiently waited until she poured the mixture into a trough at the empty pig pen.

"We couldn't afford to keep these critters if we hadn't got them onto a virtually vegetation and bread diet," the tall girl said, cheerfully.

"We keep them for granddad's pleasure, as they recall the happiest days of his life when he hunted deer with dogs two or three days a week from September first to Christmas every year until the anti-dog law went on."

"That was long before my time but we like to have him happy and contented with his pets. Always on Christmas Eve, he tried to bring in the biggest buck for the Christmas Day family dinner and judging by the horns he saved, he must have brought in some 'whoppers'."

"We were looking about for old Mr. Stein himself, but soon saw him coming out of the woods with his shot gun. The massive dogs did not notice him and he made no move to notice them, but they seemed to be in a perfect accord of respect and adoration. It was a case of love without any form of language."

"Yes, I don't believe there are more than three or four packs of the old deer dogs left in Pennsylvania," he told us, "and they will never be used again, as the deer imported by late Dr. Kalbfus, to replace the exterminated natives, will not run well ahead of hounds, run in short circles like a grey fox which is poor sport compared to the English or red fox. I like to keep quite a few of the old hounds, just to picture the great times we had. Those crisp, clear mornings in late September were the best, the deer were fresh and made better runs than when they had been hunted for several months."

"Deer hunting with good dogs was real sport, what they do today is merely slaughter, just a man with a gun out to kill, the deer aren't such sporting specimens as the old, original stock."

U. S. to Launch Satellite To Encircle Earth in 1958

President Eisenhower stated Friday the United States plans to launch history's first man-made earth-circling satellites by the end of 1958.

Still not perfected, the satellites are envisaged by government scientists as small globes, about the size of basketballs. They would be launched by rockets and circle the earth once every 90 minutes at a speed of 18,000 miles per hour and a height of 200 or 300 miles. They are expected to remain aloft for days and perhaps weeks, then spiral back down and disintegrate as they hit heavier atmosphere.

In announcing that President Eisenhower has approved the satellite project, Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty emphasized that it is for "entirely scientific purposes."

Scientists of all nations, including Russia, he said, will be able to observe the space objects and will receive all the scientific facts developed from the program.
 Some members of Congress immediately objected to cutting Russia in on grounds it might provide the Soviets with valuable information for the race to develop intercontinental guided missiles.

Some applauded the project. Others called it fantastic and said it challenges the imagination.
 The immediate purpose of the whirling spheres, 19 1/2 inches in diameter, weighing 110 pounds, and emblazoned by the sun's light, will be to fathom the mysteries of cosmic and ultra-violet rays and other extraterrestrial secrets.

Quick benefits would come in knowledge of what causes radio static, better methods of predicting the weather and similar mundane matters—always underscored by the knowledge that earth men are nearing the inter-planetary age.

Sponsors of the project are the National Science Foundation and the National Academy of Sciences.
 The satellite program is planned as part of this country's participation in the International Geophysical Year from July 1957, to December 1958. Some 40 other nations, Russia among them, also will take part then in world-wide studies of the earth sciences.

EXCERPTS FROM MINUTES
 Town Hall, Waynesburg, Pa., August 1, 1872

In response to a call, a large assemblage of the citizens of Waynesburg met in the Town Hall for the purpose of organizing a Grant and Wilson Campaign Club. Hon. J. C. Flenniken called the meeting to order by nominating that venerable and patriotic gentleman, L. L. Minor, Esq., chairman for the evening. In response to the nomination there was a general outburst of applause. Mr. John Hager conducted the gentleman to the stage and, on taking the chair, Mr. Minor addressed the meeting in a brief and well-timed speech, which was received with immense enthusiasm. Mr. Flenniken, after a few appropriate remarks, nominated Mr. Josiah Workman, a colored citizen, as vice president. Messrs. Robert A. Sayers and Joshua C. Phillips were also nominated and elected as vice presidents of the meeting, and Messrs. W. G. W. Day and L. R. Smith as secretaries.

On motion a committee was appointed for the purpose of selecting a permanent chairman and subordinate officers and the committee necessary to a complete organization of the Central Grant and Wilson Club of Waynesburg. While the committee was transacting this business, in response to repeated calls, Col. John Buchanan made his appearance on the stage, and was received

Second A-Sub Launched As Work on Third Starts

—Groton, Conn.—
 The United States put its second atom-powered submarine afloat last week, started building a third and promised the rapid production of "many" more.

The 3,000-ton Seawolf was sent down the ways to join, some months hence when her atomic power plant is installed and all the other intricate gear in place, the famous Nautilus.

Mrs. Sterling Cole, wife of the New York House member and ranking Republican of the Atomic Energy Committee of Congress, christened the Seawolf—but failed to crack the traditional bottle of champagne on the ship's prow.

The bottle broke, but only after hitting a metal part of the launching gear.
 Superstitious sailors would have shuddered at this hobble—if the Navy hadn't wisely made ready a second bottle, carried on the deck and cracked ceremoniously before the Seawolf hit the waves. Failure to christen a ship with champagne is almost akin to an ill-omened launching of a ship on Friday.

In an address, Navy Secretary Charles Thomas summed up the swift progress the Navy and industry is making in producing a fleet of nuclear-powered undersea fighters.

He noted the Nautilus has been operating for six months and her "performance exceeded our expectations." He listed the Seawolf, then officially announced the laying of the keel for the third boat.

"This means that this fiscal year the Navy will have eight nuclear powered submarines in being or under construction and in rapid succession thereafter, many others," he said.

U. S. Releases More Vaccine

—Washington—
 The Government has released about 1,100,000 more cubic centimeters, or shots, of Salk polio vaccine.

The new batch was in process of manufacture when the Government adopted new standards and testing requirements for the vaccine, the announcement said. It met the new requirements and has been cleared, it added.

The Government now has released about 5,068,000 cubic centimeters of vaccine since the revised testing procedures were adopted May 26. A cubic centimeter makes one shot.
