Fighting Tenth In 56th Meet On Saturday

—Greensburg, Pa.—

The 56th annual reunion of the veterans of the "Fighting Tenth" Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, which fought in the Philippine Islands in 1898 and 1899, will be held at Mountain View Hotel along Route 30, about three miles from Greensburg, Saturday.

Company I of Greensburg, will serve as reunion host with Judge Richard D. Laird of Greensburg, serving in the capacity of president.

Tabled at last year's meeting at Washington, and due to be considered by the veterans will be a motion to hold the reunions after 1956—which is to be held at Waynesburg with Company K as host—in Pittsburgh as a central location.

For years the regiment has held its reunions each year at the home town of one of the eight companies—Company D, Connelville; Company E, Mount Pleasant; Company A, Monongahela; Company B, New Brighton; Company C, Uniontown; Company H, Washington; Company I, Greensburg, and Company K, Waynesburg.

At last year's business session, on motion of Daniel A. Dooley of Ligonier, it was decided to revise the name of the organization to "Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry Association, Last Man Club."

Candidate for County Auditor Withdraws

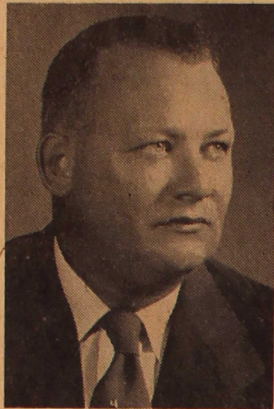

Mrs. Mary E. Ganier of Waynesburg, a Republican candidate for County Auditor in the November election, has withdrawn her name from the ballot, since she and her husband, Rinehart Ganier, are moving this month to Clearwater, Florida.

Mr. Ganier has resigned as state health inspector, effective August 20.

The other Republican candidate is John G. Baily of Carmichaels, who is finishing his second term as County Commissioner. Democrat candidates are Levi A. Fuller of Waynesburg, and Mrs. Grace B. Guesman of Rices Landing.

California Girl Named Coal Queen

Miss Nancy Davis, 16-year-old ash blond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Davis, Thursday night was chosen Queen of the second annual Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Festival to be held at Carmichaels, September 7 through 10.

She was chosen from 11 candidates from the tri-state district. The queen and her attendants were chosen for beauty, poise and charm. Each one did a novelty act.

Her attendants are Miss Rose Mary Vanata, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vanata of Dilliner; Miss Joanna McCurdy, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCurdy of Waynesburg; Miss Pam McClellan, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. McClellan of Clarksville.

Judges were L. C. Gray, Washington County coroner; John Hanna of Masontown, Fayette County, and A. L. Marks and F. E. Hunter, both of Indianopolis, Indiana.

William Richards, a 1941 graduate of Cumberland Township High School, now serving as an announcer for a Charleroi radio station, was master of ceremonies.

The welcoming remarks were given by Dr. Robert Gray, Nemacolin physician, who is an official on the Coal Festival committee.

Mrs. J. Howard Baily of Carmichaels entertained at an afternoon rehearsal party for the 11 district high school girls competing for the title of Coal Queen of the Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Festival.

The girls honored were Margaret Spock, All Saints; Pam McClellan, Jefferson-Morgan; Eileen Golbsky, Bethlehem Joint; Rose Mary Vanata, Mapletown; Priscilla Yaros, Cumberland; Lillian Evans, Mt. Morris; Toni Moscovits, Redstone; Joanna McCurdy, Waynesburg; Laura Liberatore, Centerville; Carol Freeman, German Township, and Nancy Davis, California.

Music for dancing and entertainment was provided by the Joe Baffle Trio of Charleroi.

Cumpston Refused Commutation Of Sentence

U. S. District Judge Rabe F. Marsh a few days ago refused commutation of the year and a day sentence given William A. Cumpston, former postmaster of Waynesburg, for falsifying records to cover up a shortage of $4,310 in postal funds.

Judge Marsh refused the plea after Assistant U. S. Attorney D. Malcolm Anderson said that Cumpston, while he finally pleaded guilty to the charge of making a false entry, at first tried to blame three subordinates, Anderson argued.

"The community has accepted the sentence as fair and might misunderstand a commutation with resulting damage to the people's faith in justice."

Senator Edward Martin's 'Folly' Now Vital State Highway Link

A highway plan dubbed "Martin's Folly" after it was conceived more than ten years ago, now promises to become one of Western Pennsylvania's more important express thoroughfares.

Senator Martin not too long ago was the target of some lusty verbal brickbats from certain quarters about the highway approved during his term as governor.

Some politicians had a lot of fun with the idea of the highway to link Martin's home town in Washington, Pa., with the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

Today, with some impressive links constructed and others being planned, traffic-clogged Monongahela River towns are spreading the word that "Martin's Folly" is definitely a misnomer.

A great many persons in Allegheny, Washington, Fayette and Westmoreland Counties now say that Martin's judgment has been more than vindicated.

Big tractor-trailer rigs will some day move along a four-lane expressway from Washington, Pa., to the New Stanton Turnpike interchange because of this far-sighted plan.

The heavy flow of traffic that moves into Washington along U. S. Route 40 from Wheeling, W. Va., and over in Ohio, now clogs present inadequate two-lane highways as it crawls toward the turnpike.

Clarence Sisk, office engineer for the State Highway Department at Uniontown, said the new highway will lighten the heavy truck traffic on Route 31 and cut down the all too frequent fatal accidents caused by runaway rigs on West Newton's steep hill.

He estimated that about 40 per cent of the 40-mile highway is now complete.

A section of the expressway between Bentleyville and Allen's Crossroads, just short of Route 51, is now open and in use.

The link with Route 51 is expected to be finished within six weeks. Work on the Route 51 overpass has now progressed sufficiently to end a 90-day detour through Smithton.

One of two river crossings is in the already open section. The Speers-Belle Vernon high-level bridge replaces a 60-year span over the Monongahela River.

Now in the planning stage under the direction of District Engineer Norbert G. Bell, is a bridge to carry the expressway over the Youghiogheny River near Smithton.

Bell, under whose direction the whole project is moving along, has survey crews busy on the Washington-Bentleyville section.

Also in the planning stage is the section from Route 51 to New Stanton.

Sisk said current plans call for 12 interchanges, including the two ends of the new highway.

Completion of the entire expressway is a matter dependent upon legislative appropriations.

Father Garahan Services Held Saturday

A tribute to the "unusual bonds of love and affection" he had made with those with whom his duties had brought him into contact in Pittsburgh and in Waynesburg, was paid to Father James S. Garahan here Saturday by Bishop John F. Dearden of Pittsburgh, who sung pontifical mass for Father Garahan Saturday.

Bishop Dearden said that Father Garahan had "endeared himself to unnumbered hundreds by his acts of kindness and understanding as he expressed to them the true meaning of his priestly office."

Deficit Tops Four Billion

—Washington—

The Government ran almost $4,200,000,000 into the red in the year ending June 30. This was a deficit more than a billion dollars bigger than in the year before but 300 million smaller than expected.

The Treasury and the Budget Bureau reported that "greater prosperity reflected in rising income tax payments, sent federal revenues about $1,300,000,000 higher than President Eisenhower's January forecast.

This heightened hopes for a sharp reduction—or even possible elimination—of the estimated $2,400,000,000 deficit for fiscal 1956, which began July 1.

Work Progresses On New Robena Shaft

Crawford; James Inghram; J. W. Ray; A. H. Sayers, and Challen W. Waychoff. Mr. Waychoff is the only one of the eight still living.

Rices Landing Would Bypass 2 of 3 Viaducts

The Pennsylvania Utilities commission will meet in the Greene County Court House to consider the elimination of two of the three dangerous underpasses in Rices Landing Borough.

The borough proposes to build a new highway to bypass the two viaducts and this plan has been approved by the Monongahela Railroad and the Pennsylvania Department of Highways.

PUC approval must be obtained, however, before it can be put into effect, since the borough, in November 1954, petitioned the PUC for relief from the long-standing situation. The railroad had not agreed to any plan at the time the petition was filed with the PUC.

The three underpasses provide access under the railroad line to the borough business section. They are set at sharp angles at the foot of steep hills.

The proposed new road would eliminate the two southernmost viaducts—the one on the road from Rices Landing to Crucible, and the one at the foot of the hill on Carmichaels street. Construction of the road would involve building one grade crossing.

The third viaduct, which all parties agree cannot be eliminated, would be widened to make it safer for the traveling public.

Immediate action is necessary, the borough contends, because the United States Steel Corporation proposes to construct a large coal processing plant within the limits of the borough, which will greatly increase the amount of traffic through the viaducts.

All three of the underpasses were constructed in 1913, when the borough points out, vehicles were horse drawn.

In answering the borough's complaint to the PUC, the Monongahela Railway denied many of the allegations, but did state it was "willing to cooperate with the PUC and the borough in an effort to reach a solution which would be adequate, beneficial and economical to all interested parties."

The 90th annual Jacktown Fair at Wind Ridge, oldest fair in the nation to exhibit continuously, opened to a capacity crowd Wednesday afternoon.

The finest of livestock and farm produce and needlework is on exhibit.

The Border Legion Rodeo with more than 50 cowboys, cowgirls and clowns, as well as dozens of horses, steers and burros gave the crowd many thrills. The rodeo will perform Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings.

Livestock judging will begin Thursday at 9 o'clock with Harley Swart, Greene County vocational agriculture teacher and dairyman judging general livestock, and John Long, Washington County dairyman, grading horse and dairy entries.

A new barn was built during the year and the old one remodeled to better exhibit livestock.

The popular horse pulling contests will be held on Friday and Saturday. The contests will be held at 12:30 Friday and Saturday at 11 o'clock.

Featured entertainers Saturday are:

Danny Daniels, comedian and juggler formerly with Guy Lombardo's orchestra.

Harris and Miller, bicyclist acrobats.

Larry Kettlebake and Company, magicians.

The Kramers, hand to hand balancing.

Sandra, 13-year-old ventriloquist.

As usual the fair is also an "old home week" with many former natives coming long distances to greet old friends and also many who attend for the first time to fulfill the old saying, "You'll never die happy 'til you go to the Jacktown Fair."

Even war curbs on gasoline and tires didn't stop the fair. Situated on one of the highest hills in Greene County the view for miles around attracts many persons.

Of course, some of the picturesque attractions are gone, such as traders' alley whose sharp horse owners bargained with gypsies and traders who came in for the fair.

But it's still a Greene County tradition and all roads lead to Wind Ridge this week.

Bendix Autographs Greenbacks in Texas

—Bryan, Texas—

The Bryan Eagle reports actor William Bendix must have an awesome opinion of Texas. Here for a radio show, he was asked by a number of people for his autograph. But nobody had any paper. Brazos Varisco, a local business man, solved the problem by pulling out a roll of bills. Bendix signed each one and handed them out.

The Pioneer History of Greene County, Penna.

By L. K. EVANS

By this conflict of authority the early settlers experienced much annoyance and inconvenience and loss. Most of them believed that they were within the bounds of Virginia and executed their warrants at her Land Office. On the faith of this assumption, some of them brought their slave herds to the new Eldorado. In fact, almost all had a decided preference for the Old Dominion actuated by the consideration, no doubt, that they could obtain land of her at about one-fourteenth of the price at which Pennsylvania sold her lands. Virginia fostered her interest with exceeding care. She exercised all the functions of government, both civil and military. Rev. John Corbly, John Minor and Henry Vanmeter were commissioned Justices of the Peace, and John Minor, William Crawford, Charles Swan and others held military appointments, and were authorized to construct forts, maintain scouts, and call out the militia whenever the emergency required it, by Virginia.

According to the old Virginia maps, Greene County was first embraced in Spottsylvania County, then in Orange, then in Augusta, then in the district of West Augusta, and finally in Monongalia, with the Court House on the Eberhart Bierer farm near New Geneva. But as the legitimate offspring of the glorious old Keystone she has descended from Chester, through Cumberland, Bedford, Westmoreland and Washington to her present identity.

Just when and by whom the first settlement in what is now Greene County, was made, is not certainly known. But there is reason to believe that Dr. Thomas Eckerlin and his two brothers were the first, and that it was as early as the year 1751, antedating any settlement in either of the adjoining counties. There is no historic truth better attested, than that these men migrated from Lancaster County, and sojourned at the mouth of Dunkard Creek to which they gave the name of their denominational religious belief. The Journal of George Crogan, dated "Logstown, May 26, 1751," records that "a Dunkard came to Logstown and requested liberty of the Six Nations Chiefs to make a settlement on the river Yokogany," and a foot note by the compiler informs us that "the Dunkard was one of the Eckerlin brothers formerly of Lancaster County." Before any other white settlers came to this region, these nomads of the forest had abandoned their quarters on Dunkard Creek for new ones on Cheat River where two of them became the victims of savage ferocity, and which no doubt was the first Christian blood shed by the Indians in all the valley of the Monongahela.

Who came next and when and whence is simply a matter of conjecture. The friends of Conrad Sycks and Augustine Dillinger claim that their appearance near the mouth of Dunkard could not have been much later than 1760. George Morris made an improvement near Garard's Fort in 1763. My friend, L. L. Minor, Esq., claims that his father, Judge John Minor and a companion by name of Jeremiah Glasgow, explored the region of Big Whiteley Creek about the year 1766, and that they were antedated by no others. It is a well authenticated fact that John Swan and Felix Hughes penetrated the Muddy Creek country in 1767, and that within the three following years, Henry Vanmeter, William Crawford, William Teagarden and others settled on Muddy Creek; William Minor, Zachariah Capen, Justis Garard, George Morris, the Whites, Rev. John Corbly and others on Big Whiteley; Leonard Garrison, Enoch Enix, the Selsers, the Bozarth's, Brice Worley and others on Dunkard; David Teagarden, Thomas Slater, Samuel Jackson and others on Ten Mile; and Jacob Crow on Wheeling Creek. And thus the stream of immigration set in, and thenceforward so steady and rapid was the flow, that by the year 1776, more families had settled among these hills than I would be justifiable in attempting to name.

The hardships, privations and dangers which beset these pioneers cannot be well conceived at this age of ease, of luxury and security. The great-grandfathers of the fastidious kid glove gentry of today, wore coonskin caps and linsey hunting shirts and subsisted on hog and hominy a hundred years ago. And the great-grandmothers of the parlor ladies of this generation who are too delicate for the sun to shine upon, wore linsey frocks and check aprons to meeting one hundred years ago, and dwelt in unchinked cabins, without floors and with clapboard doors; and as the records of deeds at the county seat will attest, two-thirds of them could not write their own names. Besides the products of the soil, the dairy and the fruits of the gun, they had little else to subsist upon. Of the luxuries of table and toilet, they enjoyed none—of the essentials, a scant supply. Salt, flour, the industrial utensils, ammunition, calico and muslin, and the hundred other essentials too numerous to mention, had to be transported on pack horses from Winchester and Hagerstown, over hundreds of miles of rudest, rugged mountain paths. To exchange for these they had nothing but peltry that would justify transportation. To solve this vexatious problem, our forefathers early conceived the idea of converting their grain which would not pay carriage, into whiskey which would. A beast that was able to bear but four bushels of rye, could transport the product of twenty-four bushels when turned into alcohol. Thus, to surmount the difficulties of transportation and meet the necessities of their condition, whiskey became the first great staple commodity of the country, and for the same reason still continues to hold its demoralizing sway as an article of commerce. Had we but a system of railroads to facilitate trade, our surplus grain would speedily find other markets, and the distillation of ardent spirits would inevitably cease from our valleys—a consummation most devoutly to be desired.

The early settlers were, for the most part, of Scotch, Irish and German extraction, and were hardy, courageous and determined adventurers—the requisite material to cope with obstacles of either forest or savage obtrusion. And to such an extent did they suffer from depredations of hostile Indians that our territory was regarded as the slaughter pen of the border. Through nearly her entire extent from west to east along the Dunkard Valley did the Warrior Branch of the great Catawba war path hold its way; and woe betide the luckless woodsman who intruded his cabin near the oft frequented thoroughfare. So also the valley of the Ten Mile was a favorite and short-line route of communication between the valleys of the Ohio and Monongahela; and hence this region was traversed by the red man on all occasions of intercourse between those rivers, whether of a friendly or hostile intent; and the nameless horrors of fire and rapine—of torture and death which they perpetrated upon the inhabitants, form a chapter of incidents too elaborate to narrate, and too shocking to contemplate.

Prior to the year 1774, the Indians were disposed to peace, and though at various intervals, three noted Indians, Captain Peter, Bald Eagle and Jacob, were foully assassinated along our boundary line by super-savage whites, they forebore retaliation, and sought redress through the more civilized forms of law.

But in the spring of 1774, when Craesop and Greathouse committed their unprovoked outrages at Yellow and Captina Creeks, and murdered in cold blood all the friends of Logan—the Mingo chief and white man's friend, then it was that forbearance ceased to be a virtue, and the incensed chieftain instituted his crusade of retaliation, and caused nearly every streamlet within the bounds of Greene County to run crimson with innocent blood. Himself and eight companions, like angels of death made a descent upon the peaceable inhabitants and committed indiscriminate slaughter, and spread terror and gloom in every household. They came least expected, like a thunderbolt from cloudless sky, and surprising their victims by their sudden appearance, spread death and destruction with the utmost impunity. Chief among the horrors of this incursion was the massacre of William Spicer and his family at the head of Deep Run.

As this was the first murderous crusade made into this settlement, it may be well to inquire how it was received and what was done in the premises. The country was very sparsely settled, and the means of communication extremely limited. As the alarm was spread from cabin to cabin and from settlement to settlement families were conveyed to Garard's Fort and preparation made for vigorous defense. Yet notwithstanding this, order sprang out of confusion, and by sunrise next morning one party was organized under Colonel William Crawford to go forth and bury the dead, and another of forty men under Captain Francis McClure and Lieutenant Samuel Kincaid, were speeding up Ten Mile to punish and expel the invaders. This terrible visitation proved such a warning to the inhabitants as necessitated the construction of additional resorts for safety and defense. Fort Jackson was built near Waynesburg, Swan and Vanmeter's fort near Carmichaels, and Ryerson's Fort on Wheeling Creek.

Master of Ceremonies at Free Fair

For every well ordered production there should be a master of ceremonies so that the show will run like clock-work. Billy Webb is just the artist for this important job. In addition to coordinating the show and presenting the acts, he does a very fine act himself featuring unique impersonations. Personable, young, handsome Billy Webb will appear with the "Kaleidoscope of Stars," grandstand show featured at the annual Greens County Free Fair at Waynesburg, on August 17, 18, 19, and 20.

How Leader Income Tax Met Its Doom In Senate

There is no substitute for experience. That pretty well sums up the series of events which led to the defeat in the Senate of Governor Leader's classified income tax bill.

The proposed $411,000,000 wage and income levy together with some $115,000,000 on new taxes on businesses and inheritances were recommended by the governor as a means of solving the state's serious financial needs for schools, hospitals and welfare institutions. In addition to past commitments, it would have supported the governor's own plans for increased service at the mental hospitals and a more active effort to attract new industry to Pennsylvania.

The governor, once sold on this plan, supported it with tremendous energy and persistence. In the drafting of the plan, however, it is known that some of the most experienced Democratic legislative advisers, were skeptical of its chances of success. The hard fact was that the Democratic Party did not control both houses of the Legislature. They had the lower House by 112 to 98, not a big working margin. They were in the minority in the Senate, 24 to 26. It was the opinion of some of these legislative leaders that the tax bill could be pushed through the House, but that, with all its controversial aspects, it could not pass the Senate.

However, the governor's closest advisers, some of them newly transplanted from the halls of Ivy, decided it was the thing to do and so did the governor. They overrode the objections of old-timers, sounded the charge and the battle was on. It did not take long to find out that it was no sham battle. For the reaction to the state income tax from the first was a furious resistance from over-burdened taxpayers in all walks of life. It came from Democrats and Republicans. It was concentrated in districts already carrying local flat taxes on gross income, and it seethed in the farm belt where the farmers were bitter over the proposed two per cent levy on their net profits and against the higher levies on other forms of income. In Pittsburgh, Dr. William D. McClelland, who had carried 21 counties against Leader at the primary, denounced the tax and stated that he had received Leader's promise that there would be no statewide wage or income tax recommended.

This was met by administration statements that the promise applied only to a flat income or wage tax. However, since a part of the governor's program was a one per cent tax on all salaries and wages over $1,000, with deductions by employers, the difference as explained by the governor was regarded by many prospective taxpayers as more apparent than real.

So the issue drifted into a long series of debates in the Democratic House caucus. It looked for a time like the bill might not pass the House. Prothonotary David B. Roberts of Allegheny County, Dr. McClelland's supporter, worked tooth and nail against it. He has no use for anything that looks like a wage tax. But the power of the organization, plus the strength of state heads of organized labor, gradually broke down the resistance of reluctant House Democrats.

State Second In Egg Output

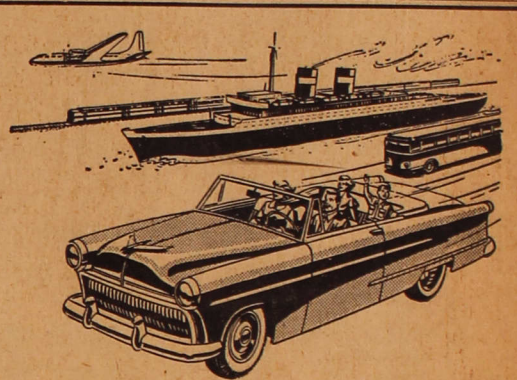

Harrisburg
The State Agriculture Department said this week Pennsylvania retained its second place standing among the states for the total number of new chickens raised this year despite a 13 per cent drop from 1954. A Federal-state survey showed Pennsylvania farmers raised a 1955 chicken crop of 32,317,000, second only to Iowa's 36,917,000. The drop indicates low prices for eggs and chickens the past two years may have prompted some farmers to discontinue their flocks, the department said. The survey also pointed out that chicken and egg production this fall and winter are in line for reduction and will bring a "better balanced" economy to the industry. A 13 per cent drop in Pennsylvania compares with the national decline of 15 per cent, the department noted.

White House Closing Forced

—Washington—

So many tourists have tramped through the White House since it was rebuilt three years ago that the executive mansion must now be closed for repairs.

Nearly three million Americans have viewed the historic White House public rooms, sometimes at the rate of 10,000 a day in the two hour morning interval in which the White House is open to the public.

The White House said that this tremendous traffic has nearly worn out some of the new hardwood floors and has wreaked havoc with the wall decorations and paint.

In order to repair this wear and tear, the White House will be closed to the public for about six weeks from August 15 through September 30.

White House aides said that the tourist traffic has been so heavy that the millions of feet have actually worn depressions in the hardwood floors in the Blue, Red and Green Rooms.

Fifty-Year History of Greene County Sports

By GEORGE N. THOMAS

HORSE RACING

If Greene County horse racing enthusiasts were asked in 1927 to choose their "horse of the year," they undoubtedly would have picked Bud Hanna.

Bud Hanna, owned by Ray J. Dred of Pittsburgh, ran with poise and confidence in the trotting events and sent thousands who attended the Carmichaels Fair that year home talking about him.

Just a few days after setting a record in the 2:14 pace, Bud Hanna continued to show top speed.

Owner Dred chose young Ray Drew, son of Judge Drew, to drive his favorite horse.

The horse Walter M. just two years previously had paced a time of 2:10.

In the very first heat, Hanna stepped off the distance in 2:09 1/2 and then ran the second heat in even faster time, 2:09 flat.

Just when people had settled down and expected no faster horses to come along for awhile, the 76th annual Carmichaels Fair opened and more records fell.

It was 1928 and Ruth T., driven by Rider Whitehead, lowered the pacing mark of her stablemate, Jack Ashley, which he had set a day before at 2:12, by pacing the first heat of the 2:14 event in 2:10 1/2, winning the race easily.

And the trotting record was lowered to 2:11 by Axworth Patch, of the Sipe Brothers stable, in the 2:18 trot, but the horse did not win the race.

Bud Hanna's excellent mark of 2:09 1/2 in the 2:15 pace stood until 1930 when, at the Waynesburg Fair, the horse Napoleon the Great, owned by Dr. George Seitz of Swissvale, paced the second heat in only 2:08 1/2 as a breathless crowd watched in awe.

Also at the fair, the trotting record of the track was shattered in the 2:15 trot when Elizabeth M., a chestnut mare owned by J. D. Morris of Canfield, Ohio, covered the mile in the second heat in 2:10 flat.

Elizabeth M. chipped a half second off the speed mark set years earlier by San Andree, driven at the time by Ned McCarr.

From time to time horsemen had attempted to make July 4 an annual racing event at the Fairgrounds in Waynesburg.

Some years such as the one in 1931, many bands participated and large crowds came to watch the American Legion sponsored day.

There was pony racing with this notation: "race won by Pet, with Raymond Shriver up; Cinderella, Charles Reed up, second; and Silver, Joe Varner up, third."

And they staged a "Greene County Derby" which was won by Gloaming Bell, Rockwell up, followed by Sonny Ewart on Patty, and Snodgrass riding Linderwood.

Later in the day, Snodgrass rode George Zimmerman's Expression to win the 3/4-mile dash.

Snodgrass was a Martin's Ferry, Ohio, boy who later joined the circus as the "cannon-ball man," who was shot out of a cannon.

Much of racing in the county was on its last pins in the early and mid 1930s, but the Mt. Morris Firemen tried their best to revive it.

Their cards drew about 2,000 persons most of whom came not only to see racing, but side events comparable to fairs.

At least there were many winning riders: Audley J. Stephenson, Guy Armstrong, David Parker, Grant Armstrong, J. L. Armstrong, Willis Headlee, Frederick Cowell, James Headlee, Willie F. Wilson, Charles Hamilton, J. G. Everly, Roy Everly and Hayes Fox.

Trixie, a horse owned by Ora Donley, was winning many races then and drew most attention.

During the depression years, racing continued in the area but not to the extent nor fervor of earlier years.

Occasionally, an old speed mark would topple. That was the case in 1938 at Jacktown Fair. Hy Everding, a bay gelding trotter, driven by Harry Serene.

The son of Acme, Hy Everding thrilled 6,000 spectators by coming from last to first in the every-heat-race plan and clicking off the mile in 2:08.

Trotting and pacing races began their decline in this era and public demands turned to the running horses.

How to Spend That Pay Raise

If you are one of millions of Americans who have had a pay raise recently, or are expecting one in the near future, the U. S. Treasury has a good suggestion: "Put the raise in Savings Bonds." The idea is being displayed here by four public-minded employees of the Savings Bonds Division in the Nation's Capital. They paraded the big poster along Pennsylvania Avenue recently when the President signed the bill to give Government employees a salary boost. However, they think the suggestion is good for everyone—union members, office workers, school teachers, doctor, lawyer, or Indian chief. The publicity-minded young ladies are, left to right: Carole Fimbres, a native of Albuquerque, New Mexico; Lib Koethe, Columbia, South Carolina; Elizabeth Crowell, Washington, D. C.; and Shirley Hamilton, Barnum, West Virginia.

1,250,000 Fish At Long Island

—New York— Salt water fishing is one of the leading sports on Long Island.

More than 1,250,000 persons are expected to drop a line from a pier, rowboat, charter or open party boat surrounding the Island this year. Reasonable cost, the number and variety of fish, the accessibility and the fact that a license is not needed for salt water fishing are some of the reasons.

Long Island fishing is as good as there is anywhere. For the length of its season, from April to December, inclusive, and for its accessibility, it is unequalled.

College Grid Games For TV Announced

The regional card: September 24—Pittsburgh at Syracuse; October 8—Villanova at Boston College; October 22—Princeton at Cornell; November 5—Notre Dame at Penn; November 12—Navy at Columbia.

These regional telecasts are restricted to Regions one and two of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

It was Mrs. Jones' careful marksmanship that helped the Brave team eke out a 1992 to 1990 victory over the Morgantown squad. The Dunkard Valley Riflemen have now gained six straight wins in league competition. Scores:

State May Lose Two in Congress

Pennsylvania's influence on the national political scene and in Congress will take a dive after 1960, according to unofficial estimates being made in Washington.

Based on 1960 population estimates by the U. S. Census Bureau and projections by Congressional Quarterly—Congressional Research Service—Pennsylvania will lose two seats in the House of Representatives after 1960.

Because Congress in 1911 set the number of seats in the House at 435, these seats must be reapportioned according to population following every census.

Although its population is expected to jump 846,000 from 1950 to 1960, Pennsylvania will still be the only state to lose more than one seat in the House after the 1960 census.

Pennsylvania currently has 30 House members and two senators—or a total of 32 electoral votes. If Congressional Quarterly's predictions are realized, the state will have 28 House members, two senators, and only 30 electoral votes after the 1960 census.

By 1940 the state's representation had fallen to 33 seats, and following the 1950 census, the State Legislature had to reapportion congressional districts on the basis of 30 seats.

The expected loss of two seats has definite political implications. Whichever political party controls the State Legislature when redistricting is voted can virtually control which congressmen will lose their seats in the 1962 election.

Engineers Need Civilian Employes

Due to an extremely heavy military and civil construction work load, the Pittsburgh District, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, is in immediate need of qualified civilian employes to assist in processing this work. The greatest need is for qualified engineers. The "Army Engineers" are seeking civil, structural, electrical, mechanical and general engineers, also engineering aids, draftsmen and construction inspectors. Salaries for these positions range from $4,345.00 to $6,390.00 per year, depending on qualifications for engineers, and from $3,670.00 to $4,970.00 per year for engineering aids, draftsmen and inspectors.

There are also openings for attorneys, salary $3,670.00 to $5,440.00 per annum and a real estate appraiser, at a salary of $5,440.00 to $6,390.00 per year, depending on the applicant's experience and qualifications.

Employment with the corps of engineers affords qualified civilian employes an opportunity to acquire valuable experience gained in the construction of varied military and civil works construction.

Colonel H. E. Sprague, district engineer, stated that he had need for approximately 43 engineers, two engineering aids, five draftsmen, 10 inspectors, three attorneys and one real estate appraiser.

Senator Martin Warns Against Great Oil Imports

Shipping schedules of importing oil companies in the remaining months of 1955 will "make or break" the program to limit imports by voluntary action of the companies involved, Senator Edward Martin of Pennsylvania, said Wednesday. He is one of the 27 senators who last week advised the Office of Defense Mobilization that they are concerned with the amounts of crude oil and products that come into this country from foreign fields during the first half of 1955.

Senator Martin said that imports for the first six months were "obviously too high" but that "some signs of corrective action" have been evident in the past several weeks. Continuing, he explained:

"The bill extending the Trade Agreements Act, which includes the stipulation that vital domestic industries will be protected from excessive imports, became law on June 20. In the four weeks immediately following, imports of crude and products showed a decrease of 1.9 per cent under the same period of the previous year. Foreign residual oil, which has created so much unemployment in the coal communities of Pennsylvania, was down 11.2 per cent—a healthy indication.

"Unfortunately, however, the trend has not remained consistent. For the week ending July 29, total receipts for crude and products were up 37 per cent over the corresponding period of 1954, with residual oil showing a gain of 16.8 per cent.

"While a certain flexibility in the import schedules is to be expected, the substantial increase in the last week for which we have a report is not at all an encouraging sign. Residual oil imports were up by more than 25 per cent the first half of 1955. To get the year's total down to where it is in conformity with the limits recommended by the Office of Defense Mobilization and accepted by Congress and the White House will require extremely heavy reductions through the remaining months."

Senator Martin has issued regular statements on the import issue since the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is a member, agreed to put the voluntary import program on trial. He said that "vigilant attention" will continue to be given to the matter during the Congressional adjournment.

Senators Warn Against Great Oil Imports

Perhaps one way to increase church attendance is to tear up the streets around the church, says the Rev. Oscar B. Anderson of Worcester's Belmont Street Baptist Church.

Railway underpass construction began under his church, causing the street to be closed and dug up, making the area a dusty mess and parking miserable, he says. But attendance went up—ten to 15 per cent in church, church school and mid-week service.

Indian Site Bares Ages-Old Culture

An archaeologist has established the existence of an Indian culture 2,700 years ago that included artistic decorations and elementary sciences.

Dr. James A. Ford of the American Museum of Natural History spent several months excavating the site at Poverty Point, Louisiana.

There are several large mounds at the site, two constructed in the shape of birds, that have lasted through the centuries. Dr. Ford believes the culture stemmed from Asia, via the Bering Straits, rather than from South America.

Street 'Mess' Aids Church

Perhaps one way to increase church attendance is to tear up the streets around the church, says the Rev. Oscar B. Anderson of Worcester's Belmont Street Baptist Church.

Railway underpass construction began under his church, causing the street to be closed and dug up, making the area a dusty mess and parking miserable, he says. But attendance went up—ten to 15 per cent in church, church school and mid-week service.

Indian Site Bares Ages-Old Culture

An archaeologist has established the existence of an Indian culture 2,700 years ago that included artistic decorations and elementary sciences.

Dr. James A. Ford of the American Museum of Natural History spent several months excavating the site at Poverty Point, Louisiana.

There are several large mounds at the site, two constructed in the shape of birds, that have lasted through the centuries. Dr. Ford believes the culture stemmed from Asia, via the Bering Straits, rather than from South America.

Kenneth said he lunged to get the gun, as it was falling into the creek, and it accidentally discharged. He had the wound treated and left for his base.
