

Romantic Boone-Stover Elopement Recalled By State Folklore President

Life Of Early Tri-State Hero Recalled

—Harrisburg—
Henry W. Shoemaker, Chief Pennsylvania Folklorist, told the romantic tale of the elopement of Martha Boone and Jacob Stover in Berks County in 1715.

The story of this elopement, which united a daughter of the aristocratic Boone family and a Pennsylvania German farm boy, was first published in the Reading Times in 1916, in connection with the Pilgrimage of the Berks County Historical Society to the Boone family homestead near Reading. The story was related at that time by Jacob Boone who died a short time later in his 90th year.

The romantic tale centers about a tiny log house with an incredibly small "stirrup window" in the attic. The house was still standing at the time of the pilgrimage in 1916, but collapsed in a wind-storm late that year.

"Daniel Boone as a boy lived on a farm on the outskirts of Reading, Pennsylvania, and was said to have come from aristocratic English stock," Shoemaker said. "Others claim he was of Swedish descent and name a number of Boones or Boons as being faithful worshippers at Gloria Dei, the Swedish Colonial Church within the city limits of Philadelphia.

"Regardless of their origin," Shoemaker continued, "the Boone family considered themselves a step above the Pennsylvania German settlers. It was said with emphasis that no Boone could marry a lowly Pennsylvania German.

"Yet even in those days 240 years ago, youths had a way of ignoring the traditions of their elders. Next to the Boone homestead was the farm of the Pennsylvania German Stover family.

"It was inevitable that young Jacob Stover working in his father's hayfield should see the attractive 14-year-old Martha Boone at her task around the Boone home.

"According to old Jacob Boone the couple exchanged glances, smiled, talked and fell in love. The couple managed to meet a number of times and jealous neighbor boys soon carried word to the proud Boones that Martha was 'dating' that German Jacob Stover boy.

"The Boones were quick to tell Martha that she was to have nothing more to do with that Stover boy and punished her when she persisted in meeting him whenever she could. When the punishment failed to cool her ardor, Martha was confined in the attic room of the old log house which had only the tiny stirrup window to admit light and air.

"But the Boones failed to reckon with the determination of the young couple and the obstacles to their meeting only served to increase their love. Martha would station herself at the little window and wave to Jacob as he worked in the nearby field.

"One night the Boone family, without Martha, departed to attend a Quarterly Meeting and the young couple was able to converse. Jacob approached the Boone house, tied up the watchdogs, placed a one-shaft ladder at the window and helped his fiancée to squeeze through the narrow window.

"Then they hurried across the nearby hill to the Schuylkill River where Jacob's canoe was beached. They quickly launched the canoe and set out for Philadelphia, arriving there the next morning.

"In Philadelphia they went to the Christ Episcopal Church where the records show they were married on November 15, 1715. After the ceremony the bride and groom took a room in the Indian Queen Hotel. They lost no time in sending word to their anxious parents to tell them where they were and that they were married.

"They were sure they would receive a favorable reply from the Stover family but they feared the vengeance of the Boones. However, they soon received a letter from the Boones stating that any girl who could climb through the tiny stirrup window was entitled to choose her own husband and sending them the blessing of the Boone family.

"Despite this unexpected word, the couple stopped first at the Stover home upon their return to Berks County. Then accompanied by Jacob's father and his four brothers, all armed with rifles, the party went across the field to the Boone house.

"To their surprise all received a friendly welcome from the Boones who gave their blessing to the Boone-Stover union."

Canadian's Oil Claims Challenged

—Titusville, Pa.—
An oil historian has challenged a revived claim that Canada was the site of North America's first successful oil well.

Dr. Paul E. Giddens, president of Hamline University, St. Paul, Minn., and former curator of Drake Well Memorial Park here, issued the statement in reply to the latest claim by Canadian Oil Companies, Limited.

The Canadian claim is that James Miller Williams in 1857 brought in the first successful oil well on the continent in Western Ontario.

In his statement, released by Thomas J. Garin, present curator of the Drake Museum here, Dr. Giddens said neither the Drake well nor the Williams well actually was the first oil well.

He said there were wells around Marietta, Ohio, that produced oil in 1814.

Dr. Giddens said the claim for the Drake well is that the oil business started with the completion of the well, August 27, 1859, by Edwin L. Drake.

"There were wells that produced oil around Marietta in 1814, in Kentucky in 1829, and at Tarentum, Pa., as early as 1846, long before either the Williams or Drake wells," Giddens said.

Texas Eastern helps put in the "curl-ability"

TEXAS EASTERN SERVES THE COMPANIES THAT SERVE YOU

Gas-fired annealing furnaces put the "curl-ability" into collapsible metal tubes made by A. H. Wirz, Inc., for scores of manufacturers of nationally distributed products. Gas is supplied this century-old Chester, Pennsylvania, firm by Philadelphia Electric Company, a customer of Texas Eastern.

Texas Eastern transports natural gas via pipeline from the Southwest to serve many Eastern industries as an ideal "tempering" fuel. For example, did you ever wonder what put the "curl-ability" in your toothpaste or shaving tube? When first extruded from aluminum blanks, these tubes are stiff. After being passed through a four-stage, continuous annealing furnace they are soft and pliable. Gas is used in this annealing process because the required critical temperatures can be accurately controlled. In addition, gas is economical. Texas Eastern makes natural gas abundantly available to homes and industries in Midwestern, Appalachian and Eastern Seaboard areas.

Young Pianist With Symphony

GRANT JOHANNESSEN

Grant Johannessen, the celebrated young American pianist who captivated Pittsburgh audiences in recent recital performances, makes his first appearance with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra this Friday and Sunday at Syria Mosque.

With William Steinberg conducting, he will play Bela Bartok's Piano Concerto No. 3, a work that gives full rein to Johannessen's dazzling technique and musicianly interpretation.

In addition to the concerto, Steinberg will conduct the orchestra in two favorite symphonies, Beethoven's Fourth and the Haydn London Symphony, No. 104.

Johannessen was born in Salt Lake City of Norwegian parents, and received his first musical instruction there. He made his New York debut in 1944, and his career since then has been an exciting series of triumphant recital and orchestral appearances on three continents.

He won first prize in the International Piano Competition in Belgium in 1949, and consequently, performed widely in Europe that year. In 1952, he thrilled audiences of South America and recorded five concertos with the Netherlands Philharmonic in Holland. Tours of North America have brought this phenomenal young artist to most of the major cities of the United States and Canada, and he is the only pianist of his generation to be heard regularly on the Telephone Hour.

Being of Norwegian descent, he comes by his love for skiing quite naturally but, as he says, "A career at the piano rules out the more exciting possibilities of Slalom and Christie."

The series, filmed in all types of schools, from old one-room buildings to ultra-modern educational plants, is narrated by Raymond Massey, with the musical score by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

According to Chris Witting, president of WBC, the purpose of this series... "to bring home vividly and simply the meaning, objectives and potential of the White House Conference at the local level, in terms of local conditions, problems and needs."

The last program of the series, on Sunday, December 4, at 11:30 a. m., will discuss "How Can We Keep Good Teachers—And Get Them? How Can We Obtain a Continuing Public Interest in Education?" Scenes from Taylor Alderdee High School and Pennsylvania College for Women will be shown on this program.

After "The Big 'R'" series has been shown on KDKA-TV, the films will be available for showing to schools, PTA's and other educational groups.

Big Jump In Union Members

—Washington— The Labor Department has reported that labor unions gained a million members in the 1952-55 period but barely kept up with growth in the nation's work force.

A new survey by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics placed the total membership of American labor unions at about 18 million, including one million members in Canada.

The report said union membership rose spectacularly in the 1935-45 decade from 3 1/2 to 8 1/2 million in the 1935-40 period and from 8 1/2 to 14 1/2 million in 1940-45.

Since then the rate of union organization has kept fairly steady at a ratio of about one out of three non-farm workers.

About one out of four of the estimated 70 million in the total labor force, which includes farmers, self-employed, unemployed, members of the armed forces and employers, is a union member.

Brunette to Blonde in Three Easy Steps!

Now any homeowner, like the one shown in the photo above, can change an old dark wood surface to a popular blonde or light wood finish without scuffing or removing the old finish. A new wood finish especially designed for the older painted or stained furniture gives you a stained effect that is tough and chip-proof without spending time or patience stripping away the old surface, sanding and restaining.

dry brush as shown in the inset. Finally, an application of a clear finish results in a final product like the end table at the left, which was previously the same color as the chair.

This means that the old table handed down from Aunt Sue or the fine old chair in the attic, garage, or basement can take its place with newer home furnishings. With a minimum of effort and three simple, foolproof steps, anyone can make the transformation from old-fashioned to modern.

O'Brien's Lite Chrome is available in four colors: Satinwood, Silver Birch, White Elm and Honey Maple.
