Halleck of Indiana, New York Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, and others.

Mr. Hahn is now the city attorney for Washington, where he lives with his family and also engaged in the private practice of law. Mr. Hahn's wife, Shirley, will accompany him to this conference.

Colonists Followed British Lead for Independence

American colonists were simply taking a page out of English history when they declared their independence on July 4, 1776.

Many of the ideas contained in the Declaration of Independence had been used by the English to justify their own revolution of 1688.

"The Glorious Revolution," as the English called it, sent James II fleeing to France and brought to the throne William and Mary. It also resulted in a bill of rights that reads suspiciously like the forerunner of the American Declaration.

The "self-evident truths" and "unalienable rights" noted in the Declaration, for example, recall the "true, ancient, and indubitable rights" of the English document. Both complained about taxes, although for different reasons, and condemned the maintenance of a standing army.

While the Americans studied history books, however, the British ignored the lesson—with the result that another glorious revolution rocked Great Britain and a new nation was born.

Disability Deadline

If you became totally disabled before 1961 and have not yet filed your claim for disability benefits with the social security office, you must do so before June 30, 1962. Workers who have been disabled for many years may lose their benefit rights by not filing on time. Act now! Contact the Washington, Pennsylvania, Social Security Office before June 30.

Pennsylvania school children will continue to hear a daily reading from the Bible until the U. S. Supreme Court rules on a case challenging the practice, Attorney General David Stahl said Tuesday.

Monday's court decision barring a daily prayer in classrooms "will have no effect in Pennsylvania" until there is a decision in the Bible-reading case, Stahl said. Monday's decision was handed down in a case originating in New York.

The Pennsylvania School Code requires the reading each day of 10 verses from the Old Testament. A parent in Abington township contested the law in 1958, and it was declared unconstitutional by a Federal court in Philadelphia.

Mr. Stahl appealed the ruling to the Supreme Court on behalf of the Abington Township (Montgomery County) School Board and Dr. Charles H. Boehm, State superintendent of Public Instruction.

"The public schools in the Commonwealth will continue to follow the law until there is an adverse decision in the pending Pennsylvania case," Mr. Stahl said.

He added, "It may be of some significance that the Supreme Court did not choose to dispose of our Bible-reading case in its other court orders issued Monday."

The Monday high court ruling barred use of a 22-word "nondenominational" prayer in New York public schools, calling it "wholly inconsistent" with Constitutional provisions for church-state separation.

In Harrisburg, Deputy Attorney General John D. Killian, 3d, said the Commonwealth might not know until October whether it will be allowed a full hearing on its Bible-reading case appeal.

The prayer decision, he said, "undoubtedly is significant since it deals with one facet of the broad problem of separation of church and state."

Like Mr. Stahl, however, Mr. Killian said no changes are contemplated in the Bible-reading until the case is decided.

'We Hold These Truths . . .'

Let our object be our county, our whole country and nothing but our country. And, by the blessing of God, may that country itself become a vast and splendid monument, not of oppression and terror, but of wisdom, of peace, and of liberty, upon which the world may gaze with admiration forever — Daniel Webster.

Three Ex-Presidents Head Rayburn Drive

WASHINGTON—The three living former U. S. Presidents will serve as honorary chairmen of a 20 million dollar political science education program dedicated to the late Speaker Sam Rayburn.

F. T. C. Asks $75,000 In Discount Suit

WASHINGTON—The Department of Justice has filed a $75,000 civil penalty suit for the Federal Trade Commission against the Hearst Corp. The F. T. C. charges 15 violations of a 1960 F. T. C. order requiring the publisher to stop discriminating among its customers in paying promotional allowances.

The complaint states that Hearst failed to offer allowances on equal terms to all competing distributors.

Farm Measure Compromise Is Given to House

WASHINGTON—The shape of an abject compromise—an extension of present emergency wheat and feed grain programs — has emerged as dust settled after the stunning defeat of the Administration's farm bill.

Representative Harold D. Cooley, Democrat, of North Carolina, introduced the new measure after holding a glum post mortem on the death of the farm bill with Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman and Democratic members of his House Agriculture Committee.

Such a one-year extension of present programs was just what Republican farm leader Representative Charles E. Hoeven of Iowa, tried to substitute for the administration bill on the House floor last week. His amendment failed, but the later move to kill the bill carried 215 to 205.

The emergency one-year wheat and feed grain voluntary control programs will expire this year unless new legislation is passed and the law would revert to the 1958 act of Republican Secretary Ezra Taft Benson, which provided price supports on any amount of grain produced.

Republicans termed it a monstrosity that would mean "regimentation or ruin" for farmers. Despite a lengthy list of sweetening amendments accepted by the leadership, 48 Democrats joined the Republicans to pigeonhole the bill.

Boy With Saved Arm Promoted

JayCees Given Awards, Thompson Is Honored

Fletcher Acquitted Of Tanner Murder In Second Trial

A jury of six men and six women, after deliberating about two and a half hours on Tuesday, acquitted James Morris Fletcher, 44 years, of the shotgun slaying of Gerald Tanner on June 12, 1954.

Eight years ago another jury had convicted Fletcher and decreed a life term. He obtained a new trial through a prison-instituted appeal that one member of the jury was a relative of one of the investigating policemen.

The state charged Fletcher ambushed and killed Gerald Tanner, as the climax to rivalry over affections of a 20-year-old waitress working in the Fletcher dairy bar at Bobtown.

Fletcher wept with bowed head as the verdict was read. He had denied shooting Tanner from the stand and his alibi was supported by several witnesses.

Later Fletcher met his wife, Bernice, who testified in his behalf, and their two teen-age daughters, in his cell.

Sheriff Mark Shultz held Fletcher on a detainer from North Carolina on a minor burglary charge filed in 1944.

Attorneys said the case raised an interesting question as to whether Fletcher is entitled to compensation from the state for his eight years spent in Western Penitentiary, Pittsburgh. His family has been receiving public assistance funds.

Alert Sounded for Illegal Fireworks

HARRISBURG—The Pennsylvania Association for the Blind is requesting all parents and law enforcement officers to be on the alert for illegal traffic in fireworks. Fireworks can injure or cause a severe visual handicap. Laxity on the part of officials and parents can result in a lifetime of tragedy for victims of accidents from these supposedly harmless "toys."

The association last year alerted citizens to a "cherry bomb" resembling chewing gum, which injured several children. This year, a new item, "flying disc," a small metal pinwheel which is labeled "light fuse, stand clear" was recently confiscated in Pittsburgh. Officials considered this disc to be very dangerous.

The illegal traffic of fireworks into Pennsylvania presents the greatest problem and is difficult to control. Therefore the association is appealing to every citizen to cooperate in the prevention of unnecessary blindness or visual impairment caused by fireworks.

Remember — individuals who purchase and merchants who sell fireworks are in violation of the Penal Code and subject to prosecution. Profit plus pleasure derived from fireworks can equal tragedy. Have a safe Fourth of July by obeying the law.

Water Show Feature At Democrat Picnic

Jack Nylan and John Hughes, co-chairman of the Young Democrat picnic to be held at the Riverside Boatel, Jacobs Ferry Road, Carmichaels, on Sunday July 8, have announced that plans are progressing.

Confirmations have been received from the main speaker, Robert H. "Pop" Jones, personal secretary to Governor Lawrence, that he will be present; also from Congressman Thomas E. Morgan, State Senator William J. Lane, and House Majority Leader Stephen McCann of their intentions to be present.

The highlight of the day's activities will be a two hour water show, being furnished by the Faust Marine Ski Group of Pittsburgh. The water show is scheduled to begin at two o'clock.

Advance ticket sales indicate a large turnout for this all-day Democrat picnic rally.

Waynesburg Junior Chamber of Commerce gave its first community development leadership award to Attorney W. Robert Thompson of Waynesburg, at the banquet Tuesday night in Rohanna's Restaurant.

Mr. Thompson was selected for his work in the formation and development of the Greene County Planning Commission and the Greene County Industrial Development Corporation. He served two and a half years as chairman of the Planning Commission and chairman of the Development Corporation from 1960 to 1961.

In accepting the award Mr. Thompson paid tribute to those who worked with him in both groups and the many persons who gave support to the two programs.

Mr. Thompson said: "It is not for me this honor is intended, but for all those who made possible the things we have accomplished."

Roy E. Furman of Waynesburg, a member of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, presented a check for $1,000 to the JayCees for placing second in the 1961 state Chamber of Commerce community development contest.

Matching awards of $1,000 each were presented by Morgan Henderson, on behalf of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Greene County; by Harry Mertz, on behalf of the First National Bank and Trust Company of Waynesburg, and by William E. Layton, on behalf of the West Penn Power Company.

Loren Matthias, president of the JayCees, accepted the awards and stated the money will be used to develop the recreation park near the central swimming pool, across from the Greene County Fairground, east of Waynesburg.

Mr. Furman was chairman for the 1961 community development contest sponsored by the State Chamber of Commerce. He explained the method used in selecting winners, and praised the local organization for finishing second in its population class for two successive years. Greensburg was the only other community in the state to win a second year straight.

Alaskan Gold Hunt Turns Offshore; No Stampede Yet

ANCHORAGE — Applications were submitted in early 1962 for mineral prospecting rights to more than 32,000 acres of tidal land off Nome, Alaska. It could be the start of a new gold rush.

Shell Oil Company started the ball rolling with applications for permits to prospect on 5,120 acres of submerged land near Nome, the far northern city that is synonymous with gold to many people.

There is no sign at present that there will be a stampede like the one touched off in September, 1898, with discovery of gold at Anvil Creek. But Shell's application, filed in February, was followed by eight others by mid-March.

Some of the eight are Alaskans and some are Washington State residents. Shell and the eight others asked for rights to prospect on 32,318 acres.

Mining regulations adopted by the State of Alaska in August, 1961, make provision for off shore mineral prospecting permits and for offshore mining leases.

The permits, when issued, allow the prospector two years in which to determine whether there are sufficient quantities of gold present to warrant mining it.

During the two years, the holder of the permit has exclusive rights to prospect in his area, and at the end of the period, a preference right to convert the prospecting permit into a mining lease.

The Alaskan Government has pointed out that this assures the prospector of "post-strike" rights. This is regarded as a great advance on the position in most of the other 49 states where a prospector has no rights over land which he is exploring until an actual discovery has been made.

In the two years following discovery of gold at Anvil Creek in 1898, some 18,000 persons flocked into the tent town and surrounding tundra to dig into the yellow-dusted sand, and into the beach-land beyond.

So thick and overlapping were mining claims that one historian wrote: "The landscape from sea to skyline was staked."

It became known as the greatest "poor man's diggings" in the world, because only simple tools such as a spade, pail, and "rocker" were needed to work Nome's golden sands.

What type of equipment and method of sampling Shell will use for the underwater probe off Nome has not been revealed. But mining engineers here have said there must obviously be a departure from traditional methods.

An underwater prospecting permit was also granted this year to John Williams, of Williams Hydraulics, Inc., Oakland, California, to explore possibilities some 1,400 miles from Nome.

Mr. Williams, an engineer, has invented a hydraulically operated, clam-type, deepwater dredge for getting at potentially gold-bearing muck and sand.

He has rights to 5,120 acres for prospecting and dredging at the bottom of Stephens Passage, south of Grand Island. The area covers eight square miles of land submerged from 520 to 810 feet.

Ancient Rites Held for Warrior

TULSA, OKLA.—A Creek Indian who became an oil millionaire was eulogized recently in ancient rites befitting a warrior of the tribe.

Both modern and ancient funeral services for Thomas Gilcrease, 72, were held on the grounds of the museum he founded and loved.

Gilcrease was one-eighth Creek. After turning his 160-acre Indian allotment into an oil fortune, he opened the Gilcrease Museum on his estate in the wooded Isage Hills northwest of Tulsa. In 1958, he turned the museum over to the city.

A close friend, Wolf Robe Hunt, presided over the Indian rites. Hunt, in full ceremonial dress, was joined by five other men and a woman.

After a few parting words to the spirit and religious song, Hunt played a flute then prepared sacred cornmeal to feed the spirit's flight. Pollen was added to make the cornmeal more potent. Hunt then symbolically fired an arrow into the setting sun, ceremonially delivering the dead from life.

Declaration of Independence Traveled for Thirteen Years

By JULIA SPIEGELMAN
In the Christian Science Monitor

—WASHINGTON—

When John Hancock signed his name to the Declaration of Independence, whoever thought that one day it would temporarily lie beside the English Magna Carta in an American stronghold containing the largest accumulation of old bullion in the world? Between that first Independence Day and today the Declaration of Independence has had its outings and excursions.

On a portable table he made himself, Thomas Jefferson completed the final draft in the lodgings he rented from a bricklayer named Graf. The document was engrossed by Timothy Matlock, a skilled penman, onto the sheet of parchment now displayed in the National Archives Exhibition Hall. The Declaration of Independence was adopted on July Fourth.

Two days later John Dunlap, printer and newspaper editor, published it in his Pennsylvania Evening Post so that the world could read it even before copies were sent to each of the 13 independent states. Copies were dispatched to the countries of Europe as a statement of the position of the American people.

The original copy, the Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteen United States of America, became the responsibility of Charles Thomson, secretary to the Continental Congress. For 13 years wherever he traveled it traveled with him.

In the fall of 1788, at the time when the Constitution of the United States was adopted, Congress and its documents were guests of the Mayor and Corporation of New York in their City Hall. Naturally the Declaration was there, too. Because the new government planned to meet in the same building in the spring the city fathers hired Pierre L'Enfant, a French engineer, to convert the City Hall into something appropriate.

Meanwhile Congress used rooms in Frances' Tavern where General Washington had said good-by to his officers. By the following summer the parchment record, about 24 inches wide and 30 inches long, was again in City Hall and soon in the official custody of Jefferson, then Secretary of State. But since he couldn't return from France for another seven or eight months, Roger Alden was entrusted with it. Alden had been Deputy Secretary of Congress until a short while before that.

For almost a century and a half the Declaration remained with the Secretary of State, and wherever his headquarters were, there was its home quarters. In December 1790, it returned to Philadelphia which Congress had voted should serve as the nation's temporary capital for 10 years. Except for a short emergency the quarters of the State Department could be found successively on Market street, at the corner of Arch and Sixth streets, in North Alley, and at Fifth and Chestnut streets.

In the spring of 1800 a packet sloop carried the papers of the Secretary of State to the "City of Washington," unloading its cargo at Lear's Wharf near the original Treasury Building, south of the present one, was the only building adequate for official business, the papers found refuge there.

A few months later they were on a moving van again, destined for one of the "Seven Buildings" at 19th street and Pennsylvania avenue, and nine months after that, for the War Office, a large brick building on 17th street.

A rude upset suddenly sent it into hiding. With fighting English soldiers on their way to Washington in the summer of 1814 haphazard plans for evacuation were formulated. As attack appeared imminent three State Department clerks—Stephen Pleasonton, Josiah King, and John Graham—stuffed coarse linen sacks with irreplaceable records and carted them to an unused grist mill right across the Potomac in Virginia, close by a cannon factory.

The proximity to the factory made the trio feel that the mill wasn't safe enough. Borrowing wagons from local farmers, Pleasonton piled his sacks into them and traveled further, for thirty-five miles, to Leesburg, where he stored them in a vacant house. The same night the sky over Washington glowed with crimson flames.

When a few weeks passed and the English fleet disappeared, the Declaration of Independence returned to Washington, first to a temporary home on G street near 18th street NW, then back to the War Office. Not for more than 50 years to come would the basic charter of the United States and the Secretary of State have a permanent residence they could call their own.

The State Department moved early in 1820 to the site of the present Treasury Building, remaining there until after the Civil War. In the meantime the Declaration made a public appearance. For 35 years, from 1841 to 1876, it was exhibited in the Patent Office, and briefly at the Centennial Celebration in Philadelphia.

Afterward, grown dim and musty, the priceless parchment was displayed only on special occasions, and finally concealed in a steel case as a precaution against the treacherous effects of light and air. It had finally found permanent quarters with the Secretary of State in the State, War and Navy Building.

After World War I, Gaillard Hunt, in charge of the Library and Archives, suggested to Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, that the Library of Congress building was much to be preferred as a repository for the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution than the State and War Building, if for no other reason than safety.

When the Secretary recommended the change to President Harding the President was so certain that such a move would also "satisfy the laudable wish of patriotic Americans to have an opportunity to see the original fundamental documents upon which rest their independence and their government," that he ordered the transfer on September 29, 1921. Within 24 hours the Librarian of Congress, Herbert Putnam, went to the State offices and took them away. Until a fitting shrine could be built he stored them in a heavy steel safe.

On February 28, 1924, the precious monuments went on permanent view in a bronze and marble shrine designed by Francis H. Bacon, and built at a cost of $12,000. It protected them from the detrimental effects of light, air, and touch. Not one word was spoken at the ceremony for the unveiling of the shrine on the second floor of the Library of Congress, President Coolidge, the Secretary of State, and members of Congress attended. At the end they simply sang two stanzas of "America." In his annual report to Congress Dr. Putnam wrote, "The impression upon the audience proved the emotional potency of documents animate with a great tradition."

After the New York World's Fair closed in 1940 the Magna Carta shown in the British Pavilion ironically found a haven from war beside our Declaration of Independence. Long before Pearl Harbor, plans had been completed for protecting the rare collections of the Library.

Less than three weeks after the attack, the five leaves of the Constitution, the Declaration, and the Magna Carta were deposited in a bronze container, hermetically sealed and made watertight, and transported under escort of a chief officer of the Library and Secret Service men to the bullion depository in Fort Knox, Ky.

When the war took a turn for the better, and the danger of air attack upon Washington faded, the documents were brought out. Until the war ended military personnel served as honor guards beside the shrine during visiting hours at the Library. Regular Library guards relieved them after the doors were locked.

The Declaration of Independence is now in the National Archives readily visible to all viewers.

'Summit' Meeting At North Pole

FAIRBANKS, Alaska—Soviets and Americans had a brief meeting at the summit this month—right at the top of the world—and parted the best of friends.

A score or more Soviet natural scientists on an arctic ice island were paid an unscheduled visit May 6, by two United States airmen making a supply flight to this country's Arlis II ice island research station.

Arlis II is about 800 miles northwest of Barrow, Alaska, in the Arctic Ocean. The Soviet-manned island, known as North Pole II, is some 600 miles from Barrow in a direct line between the two.

Max Brewer, director of the Arctic Research Laboratory, told here Thursday of the landing by pilot Bob Fischer and co-pilot Frank Quates, who fly for the laboratory.

Mr. Brewer said the fliers decided to land at the Soviet station when they spotted it for the first time through a break in the fog. The language barrier was a problem, but Mr. Fischer's sign language bridged the gap. The two spent about 15 minutes there.

About four hours later a Soviet plane flew over Arlis II six times. Mr. Brewer said, lowered its wheels as if about to land, then flew off after those aboard waved greetings to the Americans.

Both the U. S. S. R. and the United States have been carrying on arctic research for a number of years at island stations near the North Pole.

'YANKEE DOODLE'

The British sang "Yankee Doodle" to poke fun at American colonists. But the Americans adopted the song and made it popular throughout the colonies—and played it as the British left after the surrender at Yorktown.

Two Books

Old Mother Goose
When she wanted to wander,
Would ride through the air
On her very fine gander . . .

Long ago, perplexed parents gave up trying to make "gander" and wander" rhyme. They found that it made no difference to children anyway. Mother Goose was, and is, a children's classic—their ticket to fairyland.

But children also appreciate—and deserve—entrance into another interesting, important world. That is the world of Bibleland—peopled with men and women whose lives and sayings have come down through the ages to us. At home and in Sunday School, children welcome these stories. In them, a child's first faith is

Come, ye children,
hearken unto me:
I will teach you
the love of God.
Ps. 34-11

formed, and the first dim religious questions and longings find answer.

The Prodigal Son and Little Boy Blue; the story of David and the story of the Crooked Man—be sure your child hears them all. From Mother Goose, he will learn the delight that he may enjoy throughout his life from the printed page. From the pages of the Bible, he will sense the love and protection that is his throughout his life when he learns to cherish and worship God.

Two books: One good. One the greatest. Children should have them both.

Cooking on Patio Makes Outdoor Parties More Fun

"Roughing it" is fine for backwoods picnics or camping trips, but everyday living on the patio at home calls for relaxation as well as carefully-prepared and well-balanced meals.

That's why families who enjoy outdoor living at home are bringing more and more electric housewares onto the patio. Parties on the patio—even everyday meals—are more fun when the cooking is easy.

Electric broilers and rotisseries, for instance, cook meat perfectly with a minimum of watching, and the good results are consistent. Electric casseroles, skillets, saucepans, and Dutch ovens are good outdoor party accessories because they cook one-dish meals, soups, vegetables, or hot desserts at controlled temperatures, then keep them warm until serving time. The hostess doesn't have to trot from kitchen to party scene, carrying hot dishes that may be cold by the time guests are ready to eat.

An automatic electric coffee-maker is another ideal appliance for outdoor dining enjoyment. It always makes coffee the way you want it, and keeps the coffee at drinking temperature indefinitely. An electric tea kettle provides for the tea drinkers who want plenty of tea served hot.

For extra guest convenience, electric coffee brewers are available that will serve up to 40 or 50 cups.

Refreshing drinks can be made on the spot if an electric blender and ice crusher are included among the other housewares plugged in on the patio.

A must for good dining outdoors is an electric hot tray and food warmer to heat rolls and keep other foods warm without further cooking. The hostess can relax until guests are ready to eat, and second helpings will be as hot and tasty as firsts.

You'll want to light up your patio, too, so you can enjoy dining after the sun goes down. Outdoor-type lanterns over the table, floodlights on the house or in the trees, standing lamps, and a variety of garden lights to illuminate flower beds and borders combine to light the outdoor dining "room" and create a vista of light, color, and shadows in the background.

Enjoy this new kind of dining under the stars... a new kind of night life for the whole family!

Your Health

Pennsylvania Medical Society

Everyone voted it a most successful picnic.

Two days later there were some misgivings.

Most of the picnickers noticed small red eruptions about their legs.

They also became aware of an itching that increased as more eruptions appeared.

The cause of this trouble was the common chigger or harvest mite.

Of microscopic size, the chigger inhabits open fields, underbrush, berry patches and the leaves of small trees.

It attaches itself to the skin surface of humans and can even penetrate through clothing of ordinary thickness.

While chigger bites are usually below the knees, they can occur higher and often do if one happens to sit or stretch out on the ground where chiggers abound.

The chigger attacks and torments humans during the hot months.

The bite produces a vivid wheal on the skin, and intense itching.

There are repellents that can be applied to the body to minimize the likelihood of being bitten by chiggers.

People are pestered by a variety of parasites.

Scabies is an infestation often called The Itch, the head louse infects the scalp, and pediculosis pubis is spoken of as crabs.

Then there are the common fleas, ticks and bedbugs.

Mosquitoes, gnats and flies produce irritating bites and can transmit certain diseases to men.

Oldest Tree Still Bears Fruit

JERSEYVILLE, Ill.—The oldest fruit tree in Jersey county, a 132-year-old pear tree, is bearing fruit again this year.

The famous tree was brought here in 1830 from New Jersey by Dr. Ralph Van Pelt.

The tree has attracted wide attention. Several years ago the Department of Agriculture and several state departments of agriculture cut scions from it for propagation.

CALIFORNIA NO. 1

California (Pa.) State College led the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics in fielding the past baseball season with an average of .962.

They're Off Again at Waterford Park

A full field of starters are sent on their way at Waterford Park in perfect alignment by Starter Dea Woods over the beautiful turf course maintained by track superintendent Howard Conner. Scenes like this will be reenacted daily at West Virginia's only one-mile race course during the summer meeting which opens on July 2 for 55 days, through Labor Day, September 3. Post time for the entire meeting is set at 4:15 p. m., and at 2:00 p. m. on Saturdays, except for Independdence Day and Labor Day when there will be a twin bill. The morning card starts at 10:30 and the afternoon is set for a 2:30 post time.

Waterford Park Ready to Open 55-Day Meeting

Never before in the history of Waterford Park has there been such an impressive roster of horsemen ready to race their thoroughbreds during the summer meeting as there is this year.

With the opening only five days away, Monday, July 2, Racing Secretary and Resident Manager Harry R. Bell reports that every available stall has been allotted and all indications point to one of the greatest racing seasons ever experienced at West Virginia's only one-mile race course.

Not only is the list of owners and trainers an impressive one, the thoroughbred colony itself is of the highest caliber ever gathered at this Northern Panhandle track. Horses that have campaigned in every sector of the country are included in the list.

Each day finds a steady stream of vans pouring with their precious cargoes from New England, Omaha, St. Louis, New York State, Maryland, Detroit, Ohio, Kentucky and as far west as Arizona.

It is estimated that by the time the first bugle blows at 4:15 Monday afternoon, there will be at least 1,000 horses on the grounds, the greatest number ever to assemble here for a summer meeting.

The 48-hour closing rule will go into effect starting Friday, June 29, when entries will be made for opening day, Monday, July 2. On Saturday entries will be taken for Tuesday's card, etc.

This method of taking entries has been a boon to everyone connected with the sport wherever it has been put into effect. Horsemen benefit by giving them the opportunity to enter their horses and prepare them for their respective races in plenty of time. Newspapers find it far better because of the ample time allowed to set them and make ready for their various issues without the usual last minute rush caused in the past by the 24-hour closing rule.

Ronald Fisher, custodian of the jock's room here and at Wheeling Downs, reports that some of the nation's best riders will be seen in action at Waterford Park during the ensuing meeting, in fact three of the boys who have checked in with him are well up in the national standings so far this year.

Post time is set at 4:15 on weekdays and 2:00 p. m. on Saturdays except for Independence Day and Labor Day when a twin bill will be presented with the first program starting at 10:30 a. m.

JOHNSON COULD HIT, TOO
 WASHINGTON—Walter Johnson, known for his great pitching with the old Washington Senators, compiled a .433 batting average in 36 games during the 1925 season.

Nimrods Urged to Use Common Sense In Preventing Chuck Hunting Accidents

Game and predator hunting continues as part of the American tradition. Hunters who enjoy pitting their wits and shooting skill against the speed and cunning of wild creatures engaged in their sport year-around in Pennsylvania. In the "off season" they hunt crows, woodchucks (ground-hogs) or foxes.

Woodchuck hunting is very popular in the Commonwealth and it provides much sport for the rifle shooter. Added benefits are the meat of this strictly vegetarian animal and the relief to farmers who do not welcome "chuck" damage to crops nor the holes they dig in fields. Hunting accidents do occur, although most could be prevented. During the last four years the average has been 3 persons killed and 21 injured by firearms while hunting chucks. The causes of the mishaps and ways to overcome them are known. But, as with other safety campaigns, the problem is people. An educated glance at what occurs shows:

As a rule, the modern-day woodchuck hunter in Pennsylvania shoots a high-powered rifle equipped with telescope. He seeks long range shots as tests of his marksmanship. If the gunner is overly anxious to shoot, doesn't make sure of his target, or visibility is poor, the bare head of a human or his dark cap appearing above the grass or weeds, may be mistaken for a chuck. When an error of this kind is committed it often is serious.

Olympic Tryouts Given to New York

WALNUT, Calif.—The Track and Field Committee of the United States Olympic Organization voted unanimously Saturday to award the 1964 Olympic track and field trials to New York City and the World Fair.

The New York Fair had offered the committee $350,000 for the trials.

The committee reaffirmed action taken last year that a team of six or more men in each event will be selected at the official trials. These men will be brought as part of the Olympic squad to an assembly point in California prior to departure for Tokyo.

George Eastment of Manhattan, a member of the committee, said training would start in California about September 1, 1964. The squad will be cut to three men in each event about September 12 or 13.

The New York trials probably will be in late June. The trials will be staged at Downing Stadium on Randall Island, which has a seating capacity of 22,000.

FAMOUS AMERICAN TAVERNS

The Sheridan Inn in Sheridan, Wyoming

Ripley Called it the "House of 69 Gables"

The Indian battles were over, the Custer Massacre was something that belonged to the irreparable past, the Big Horn country was opening up to settlers and the railroad reached Sheridan, Wyoming, in 1892. But perhaps the most momentous civilizing event in one of the most colorful of America's western frontier towns was the opening of the Sheridan Inn on July 1, 1893.

Many changes have come to the Far West and to the city of Sheridan since Col. William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody first led the grand march in the dining room of the hotel, but the Sheridan Inn is still much the same as when Buffalo Bill's hotel company was running it. At the time of its opening it was considered the finest hostelry between Chicago and San Francisco. Many people believe it remains so today.

The 60-room inn was the first building of any size and importance in the ranching and coal-mining center growing up along the old Bozeman Trail. Its bathhouse was the first in town. Sheridan's first barber shop, scene of much ceremonious trimming of the famed Cody locks and goatee, occupies its original corner in the inn. And the visitor can still quaff a beer at the Buffalo Bill Bar, an oak and mahogany masterpiece built in England and freighted overland to Sheridan.

The exterior is equally notable, for the second and third floor bedrooms all have dormer windows. In Ripley's "Believe It or Not," it is called the "House of 69 Gables."

The corridors of the Sheridan Inn once echoed to the booming laughter of "Teddy" Roosevelt, while at other times President Taft and President Coolidge warmed themselves before the cobblestone fireplaces. From the inn's broad veranda, "Buffalo Bill" Cody reviewed acts bidding for places in his great "Wild West" show, which is the likely meaning of the picture above.

Today's visitors entering the beamed lobby probably will be greeted by lovely white-haired Miss Kate Arnold, who has been housekeeper of the inn and part of its unique personality for 60 of its 67 years. Miss Arnold remembers all the famous guests who have stopped there, but best of all she remembers Buffalo Bill.

"He could be a perfect gentleman even while doing an Indian war dance with a feather duster stuck in his coat collar," she recalls.

children of Renovo, spent a few days with Mrs. Bell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hoy. They were called here by the death of the former's mother, Mrs. Judson Bell of Waynesburg.

Federal Judge Hits 'Profit Motive' Canon Change

CHICAGO—Retired federal judge Robert N. Wilkin spoke out against the proposed amendment to Canon 35 in the June issue of the American Bar Association Journal. The revision would permit a judge to decide whether photographic, broadcasting and television equipment should be admitted to a courtroom.

Wilkin, former district judge in the northern district of Ohio, said that no judge has the power "to abrogate a person's inherent right of privacy."

He added that no judge should be "subjected to the pressures" that the revision, currently under consideration by the American Bar Association, would bring.

He continued, "To be accused in public opinion is to be partially condemned." "If after trial a 'not liable' or 'not-guilty' verdict is published it cannot remove entirely the bluing from the pool of public opinion."

"It is perfectly apparent that such agencies are prompted by commercial considerations and the desire to expand their business," Wilkin wrote. "The courtroom should not be used for the operation of business enterprises. The profit motive is extraneous and antagonistic to the ideal of justice."

PARIS—The battle-proud French Foreign Legion is moving out—with kepi headgear set squarely and rifles ready—to scattered posts ranging from French Guiana to the Indian Ocean Island of Madagascar.

After Algerian independence, the legion will leave its historic home at Sidi Bel Abbes.

A government spokesman said legion headquarters will be moved from Sidi Bel Abbes to a camp in Southern France, near Marseille.

There the First Infantry Regiment, in the best legion tradition, will accept—with few questions asked—recruits from all corners of the world. They will train on Corsica's beaches and mountains and keep alive the legion's fighting tradition under the French Tricolor from the Crimean to Dien Bien Phu.

WATCH YOUR STEP!

That step off the curb is a crucial step. Death could be waiting in the street. Last year, 112 pedestrians were killed when they tried to cross the street in the middle of the block. Hundreds more were injured, bruised or crippled.

Watch your step! Cross only at intersections or pedestrian crosswalks . . . and look both ways before you take that crucial step—the one off the curb.
