Blackburn College Honors Dr. Hudson For 50 Years Work

Blackburn College in Carlinville, Ill., has paid tribute to Dr. William Mestrezat Hudson on the 50th anniversary of his association with the institution.

Dr. Hudson, a native of Greene County, graduated from Waynesburg College in 1892, and later from Princeton University. He served as president of Waynesburg College from 1908 to 1911.

On September 4, 1912, Dr. Hudson became president of Blackburn College, which then had 40 or 50 students, and a handful of faculty.

The appreciation stated: "Dr. Hudson did not lack the required courage. He set to work at once and with a will. How he found time to accomplish all he did is something of a mystery."

He taught Bible, philosophy and sociology.

Before his first year was over he had installed the work program for which Blackburn is noted. Attracted by this program and its economic and other advantages, the student body began to increase. The college had acquired new vitality.

Within a few years effects of this new vitality became evident in a building program. Blackburn received attention from national magazines, notably The Saturday Evening Post.

By the end of World War II, when Dr. Hudson retired, Blackburn had been transformed from a feeble institution on the verge of extinction to a flourishing college of more than 300 students.

"Dr. Hudson, now 90 years old, lively and healthy, continues to serve as a member of the board of trustees. He had refused to be president emeritus. As Emerson observed, an institution is but the lengthened shadow of a man. Blackburn is not Dr. Hudson's shadow, exactly, but is his monument."

Herald Tribune In Paris 75 Years

The European edition of the New York Herald Tribune this week celebrates its 75th birthday as Paris' third oldest newspaper.

French officials are joining in honors to the English-language newspaper published there, to be feted as the oldest American newspaper outside the continental United States.

Publisher John Hay Whitney, editor-in-chief and publisher of the parent New York Herald Tribune and president and publisher of the European Edition, was given a silver medal Wednesday by the Mayor of Paris.

James Gordon Bennett, son of the man who founded the New York Herald in 1825, first put the Paris edition out on newsstands on October 4, 1887.

The European edition of the Herald Tribune managed to keep publishing during the First World War, but was forced to suspend for four years during the Second World War. It was the last newspaper in Paris to close.

The newspaper's first editions reported Buffalo Bill's appearances in London and told of a new opera being written by Giuseppe Verdi.

1,156 Free X-Rays Given in County

Greene County Tuberculosis and Health Society announced this week that during the three days the mobile X-ray unit was in Greene County, a total of 1,156 free chest x-rays were taken.

This service is made possible through the sale of Christmas Seals. Seals have been mailed to county residents and it is hoped that the response will be quick and generous.

The society will bring the x-ray unit back to the county in the spring and it is urged that residents who have not taken advantage of this free service do so at that time, due to the apparent increase in respiratory ailments. Buy and use Christmas Seals.

The new First Baptist Church, built on the same site, at High and West streets, which the church has used since 1842, will be dedicated Sunday morning, December 9, at 10:30 o'clock.

Rev. Benjamin P. Browne, president of the American Baptist Convention and president of Northern Baptist Theological Seminary in Chicago, will be the main speaker. Rev. Wilbur Bloom, executive secretary of the Delaware and Pennsylvania Baptist Convention, Valley Forge, will also speak.

Rev. Henry A. Young is pastor of the church. The Chancel Choir will sing. That evening at 7:30, Rev. John A. Mueller, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Washington and president of the Pennsylvania Baptist Convention, will speak.

Waynesburg College Lamp-lighters, directed by James Randolph, will sing. There will be four days of dedicatory services.

On Monday evening, December 10, residents of the community are invited to visit the new church building.

District Attorney Glenn R. Toothman will speak. The Men's Chorus of District One, Eastern Zone, Greene County Sunday School Association, will sing. Mrs. Ben Parker is director.

Churches of the Tenmile Association will hold a service on Tuesday, December 11, at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Raymond Heist of Uniontown, area missionary for the Tenmile and Monongahela Associations, will be the speaker.

Family Night will be observed Wednesday, December 12, at a dinner at 6:30.

The major part of the cost of construction came from a bequest of $290,000 in the will of Mrs. Bessina Hughes Hoge, widow of Lemoine Hoge of Waynesburg, who left the bulk of her estate inherited from her daughter, Mrs. Holland Reavis, as a memorial to her mother, Margaret Rinehart Hughes.

The old brick church was razed in the summer of 1961, and the corner stone of the new Indiana lime stone building laid October 30, 1961.

The building which is of contemporary design is attached to the stone building constructed a number of years ago to be used by the Sunday School.

The sanctuary and Margaret Hughes Chapel to the right, will seat 300 persons.

Choir stalls flank the pulpit and lectern with the communion table in the center of the chancel.

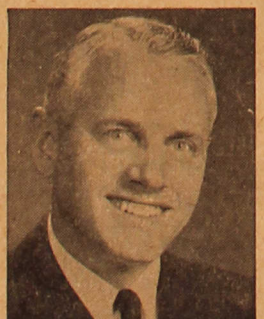

Behind the table and elevated above the chancel is the baptistry, so arranged that candidates enter and leave and will not be seen by the congregation until they have reached the baptistry proper.

Above and to the rear of the sanctuary is a large, enclosed room, where mothers with small children may attend services without fear of disturbing the congregation.

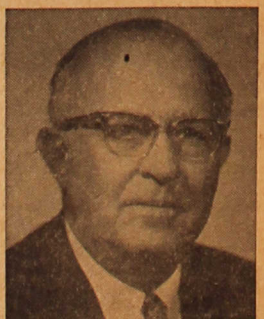

The minister's study, secretary's office and choir rooms are on the sanctuary level.

A large fellowship hall and kitchen are on the ground floor.

One Hundred Billion Congress

Big Government Costs

Just how Big is big government? So big it's frightening. So big it owes 1.2 trillion dollars—or approximately $6,642 for every man, woman, and child in the United States. So big it employs 12,006,484 people, or one out of every six people employed. This means that more people were employed by the governments of our country than were employed in 1960 by the entire wholesale and retail trade segment of the economy, which employed about 11.6 million at the time. For fiscal 1961, wages and salaries of the federal government alone cost taxpayers more than $21 billion, one-fourth of the total federal budget.

Social welfare expenditures, as estimated for fiscal 1963, will total approximately $37 billion. Excluding military appropriations, welfare expenditures will amount to approximately 38 percent of the nondefense sector of the budget.

The aggregate cost for storage and handling of surplus commodities for the ten-month period ending April 30, 1962, amounted to $33 million. The cost of transportation was $85 million. Spending by the government includes some $96 billion in foreign aid since World War II—resulting in a flow of gold from the United States, abetting a serious gold shortage. Our gold reserves total $16.5 billion. Foreign claims total $20.4 billion, excluding foreign claims by international institutions, of $5.4 billion. Since the government must maintain $11.7 billion in gold to back the U. S. dollar, our potential shortage stands at $15.6 billion.

In 1960 the government owned over one-third of the total land coverage. As of June 30, 1961, the United States Government owned 224,270 vehicles, exclusive of troop-training or tactical vehicles operated by the military. Government vehicles traveled well over two billion miles.

There are presently 52 independent regulatory agencies which have quasi-legislative, quasi-judicial and quasi-executive powers. These agencies employ 463,219 people, or nearly one out of every five government employees. They account for over 14 percent of the total budget expenditures for fiscal 1962, and one-third of the nondefense budget. These agencies include the Atomic Energy Commission, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Tennessee Valley Authority, Selective Service System, Interstate Commerce Commission and 47 other agencies by which your actions are regulated.

On the day Congress adjourned Representative Clarence Cannon, Democrat, of Missouri and Chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, castigated the members of Congress for their financial irresponsibility.

"Gentlemen, when you go home you can attract special attention by saying, 'I have just come from a $100-billion Congress.' You are the first man ever to come back to (Continued on Page Four)

Peoples Gas Offers Scholarship to Boys In High School

Peoples Natural Gas Company has announced it will again award an $8,000 scholarship to a western Pennsylvania high school senior man.

"The scholarship covers full, four-year tuition in either chemical or mechanical engineering at Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago," Manager T. Laub said. "The selected student will be employed by the company during the three summers prior to his graduation," he added.

To qualify for scholarship consideration, a senior must be in the upper 15 per cent of his class and meet entrance requirements of Illinois Institute.

The recipient will be selected on the basis of his high school record, interviews with Peoples Gas representative and his performance on college entrance examination board tests.

Seniors may obtain application forms from their high school principals, guidance counselors or any Peoples Gas office.

Applications must be submitted to: Employee Relations Department, Peoples Natural Gas Co., Two Gateway Center, Pittsburgh.

Voters Over 65 Big Potential Bloc

WASHINGTON —People over 65 make up about 15 per cent of the United States voting-age population.

Thus, the Population Reference Bureau points out, they form a larger potential voting unit than either the "farm bloc," with 8 per cent of the population over 21, or the "Negro vote," with 9 per cent.

Just Thinking!

By JIM DENT

Sort'a feel sorry and sympathy for that guy in Pittsburgh

— who strove so many years to develop cancer

— through smoking Chesterfields

— and when "mission accomplished" got nothing—but cancer.

 My history of smoking started in the "Corn Silk" era.

 Became quite proficient in "Rolling the Silk"

Only trouble was swiping the "papers"

My Dad suspected me, so, one Sunday morning tossed me his package of "Bull Durham" and cigarette papers.

with the request: "Roll me a cigarette, son"

I deftly rolled him a "coffin nail"—too deftly.

 I was taken to the back porch and razor-stropped!

 Eventually graduated from dried "corn silk" to Sweet Caporals, Fatimas, etc.

 Then, in 1920 "Camels" offered $250,000 if a cancer developed due to smoking their product.

 Smoked them for 20 years hoping to collect that money.

 Gave up in disgust, and started smoking Chesterfields.

 Smoked them until my doctor ordered secession of all "coffin nail" indulgence.

 In the past three years everything has happened to me

Except Cancer!

 P. S.—I still sneak a puff now and again of "Oasis" filter tipped and menthol (Made by Chesterfield (manufacturers.)

 The guy in Pittsburgh accomplished his mission.

 I'm still striving!

New Freeport House Destroyed By Child's Fire

The seven-room frame dwelling at New Freeport, occupied by Mrs. Joan Sappington, and her two sons, Ricky and Gregg, aged four and three, was destroyed by fire Friday afternoon.

The house was owned by David Duke of New Freeport.

An adjoining frame house, owned by Glenn Stockdale of Waynesburg, was also damaged beyond repair.

The fire was apparently started by the three-year old in an unused bedroom where the pair were playing.

The mother was in the kitchen when the older boy ran to her saying his brother was burning papers.

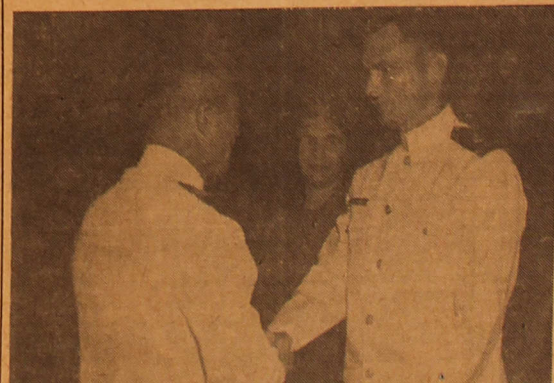

She ran with the children to the home of a neighbor, Mrs. Doyle Gregg and then went back into the house in an effort to get clothing and other belongings.

Flames, which scorched her hair and burned her face slightly, forced her back out of the house.

Everything was lost. Estimated loss of both houses was $8,500.

New Freeport Fire Company was hampered by motor trouble of their truck. Waynesburg and Hundred, W. Va., firemen answered the call, but the blaze was beyond control.

Commissioned at Navy Pre-Flight School

Navy Ensign Thomas P. Greenlee, son of Dr. and Mrs. Daniel P. Greenlee of Fifth and Bonar avenue, receives his commission as an ensign in the Naval Reserve from Captain J. H. Caldwell, commanding officer of the Naval School of Pre-Flight at Pensacola, Florida. The ceremony was held October 28 upon his graduation.

Flight students enter basic training after graduation from pre-flight school. The high point of the first phase of the 18-month program is the solo flight in a single-engine trainer aircraft.

During the training, students learn to fly propeller-driven and jet-propelled aircraft in acrobatic maneuvers and combat tactics. Each student earns an all-weather flight rating.

Attending the ceremony was his mother.

A graduate of Pennsylvania State University at University Park, Ensign Greenlee entered Navy in July 1962.

LESSON OF THE

... as the man is, so is his strength. Judges 8:21

Tonight, the snow will be falling in America. It may come with a rush of wild winds that have whistled down from the North to rip at the trees on the timberline. And tonight, some of these trees will fall, wrenched out by the roots to crash upon the hills. . . . Yet the pines will be standing in the morning. In our own town, snow may blanket roof-tops and streets, and load the boughs of our trees with tons of soft whiteness. Some of the trees will break and buckle under the load. . . . Yet the pines will be standing in the morning. They can bear up under a heavy load or the whip of the storm. Why? Because they are pliant and give under stress. And because they do, their boughs are as white banners of triumph in the morning. Our religion can help us write this lesson into our own lives. It can teach us that misfortune—no matter how severe—or disaster—no matter how heavy—can be weathered and beaten,—if we keep our faith. For with faith comes the courage that enables us to give, and yet not break, under the weight of misfortune. Through our church, we know that life's storms will pass . . . Through our church, we too shall know the triumph of the morning.

REPORT TO OUR REPUBLIC

The Republican Report

U. S. SENATOR EVERETT MCKINLEY DIRKSEN
OF ILLINOIS
Minority Leader for the SECOND SESSION, 87th CONGRESS
DOCUMENT NO. 161

Every measure was taken to protect the public interest. The international problems created were taken into account and the President's authority in the field of foreign relations was of course recognized. The Federal Communications Commission was required to insure that small business would be given an opportunity to share in procurement and to grant such authorizations as necessary to serve the public interest, convenience, and necessity for the construction and operation of legislation would not create a private monopoly controlled by the communications common carriers—it would not carve out a general exception to the antitrust laws, for the bill required the corporation's activities to be consistent with our antitrust laws.

What it did was to permit presently competing entities to participate in the ownership of the corporation because it was not feasible to have multiple satellite systems in which each carrier would establish its own system. Moreover, the public was provided the opportunity to participate in ownership.

Important was the fact that the type of system to be established would be determined largely by agreement reached by our Government with other governments as to the frequencies in which such a system would operate and the technical standards which would define the operation. An administrative radio conference is scheduled to meet in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1963 to negotiate allocation of frequencies of communications satellite systems. As a practical matter, all actions of the corporation would have to conform with any international agreements reached and with the national policy objectives of the bill.

It was in the face of all this that a small group of liberal Democrats charged that this bill was a "giveaway" program in favor of private monopoly upon national resources. It was claimed that by vesting legal rights in a private corporate entity, we would inform the world that we were guided by the profit motive. Eventually the liberal filibusters forced the Senate to vote cloture on debate—one responsible newspaper reported that the Senate had been forced to adopt a "gag rule" for the first time in 35 years of unlimited debate.

The vote on final passage showed that there was no public support for the viewpoint of the liberal filibusters. The vote was 66 in favor and 11 against.

Space

In addition to passing the so-called Telstar bill by overwhelming vote, the Congress supported expansion of the U. S. space program, more than doubling the funds voted in the first session of this Congress, mainly along the lines requested by the President. These funds will be used for a space-radiation effects laboratory; for a two-man lunar excursion vehicle by means of which it is hoped to place men on the moon; for scientific satellites and for other vehicles for various space probes.

The Government's Goddard Space Flight Center at Greenbelt, Md., reported July 31 that the United States now has 41 satellites in orbit around the earth and sun. The U. S. satellite longest in orbit is Explorer I, launched February 1, 1958. One of the more glamorous satellites still in space is Echo I, a 100-foot aluminum-plastic balloon, the only satellite now in orbit visible to the naked eye if one is watching at the proper time.

All of the planning and the scientific work involved in launching every one of these space bodies on a sequential basis was done during the Eisenhower administration. Only three new space efforts, or programs, have been begun under the Kennedy administration—one for the advance Saturn, one for industrial application, and a third for advanced manned space flight.

Civil Rights

The administration has sent no request for a broad civil rights program to the Congress at any time. This is extraordinary because during the 1960 presidential campaign a pledge was made that a major civil rights bill "would be amongst the first orders of business" when the Congress convened in January 1961.

Congress is still waiting. But that is not all. The overwhelming Democrat majority defeated in this session two Republican civil rights proposals, one, to prevent Federal funds being used in impacted areas for schools practicing segregation and, two, barring use of Federal funds for hospitals which are segregated. Republicans supported both these proposals by wide margins.

Filibustering accompanied attempts to eliminate literacy tests as a requirement for voting. In this connection the first session of the 87th Congress began with a filibuster on an amendment to the cloture rule, a filibuster that was postponed because the President's Cabinet could not be confirmed if it continued, and the first session also ended with another fight on the same matter.

The second session bogged down at the very beginning over the literacy test issue. Various attempts by the majority and minority leaders to obtain a cloture rule were unsuccessful, one of the votes being 43 for and 53 against, and another, a week later, 42 to 52. Finally, by a vote of 49 to 34 the Senate agreed to drop the literacy test issue and proceed to other business.

Here again was shown the schizophrenic nature of the Democratic Party of today, its two wings battling each other into legislative impotency.

Poll Tax

The one gain in the civil rights field came on a Senate vote of 77 to 16 to eliminate the poll tax as a requirement for voting. As the constitutional amendment, which must be ratified, was passed, it provided that the right of citizens "to vote in any primary or other election for President or Vice President, or for Senator or Representative in Congress, shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State by reason for failure to pay any poll tax or other tax." The House passed this only under suspension of the rule.

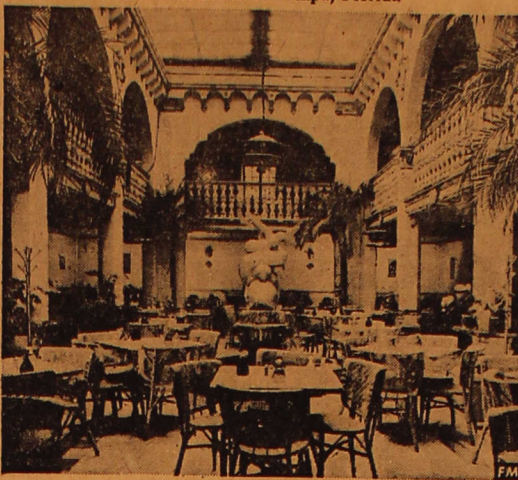

This is a sorry civil rights record legislatively, and an even sorer one overall.

International Affairs—Cuba

Despite the fact that American "prestige" abroad was made an issue by the Democrats in 1960, I am proud of the fact that the Republicans resisted any impulse to retaliate during and immediately after the disaster

Famous American Taverns

The Columbia in Tampa, Florida

The House of the 20-Page Menu

About the time, during the Spanish-American war, when Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was munching Cuban sandwiches in Tampa, Florida, a Cuban named Casimiro Hernandez founded a great tavern tradition after deserting a Spanish warship into which he had been impressed. He swam to shore and started a little restaurant in Havana. Soon he had accumulated enough savings to come to the land of his choosing, America. Almost immediately he opened a little bar in Ybor City, Tampa. That was the beginning of the Columbia, the largest and probably most colorful Spanish restaurant in America. Serving upward of one and a half million meals a year in nine dining rooms with so wide a choice of food as to require 20 pages of menu, the Columbia is the most non-conformist restaurant in Florida. That is plainly indicated by the guiding principle of the present proprietor, Casimiro Hernandez, Jr.:

"When a man finishes eating with me, I want him to say, 'By heaven, I'm full. I've had plenty.'"

Another indication of non-conformism is the fact that Casimiro still serves a daily luncheon at ninety-five cents. As every other restaurateur knows, this can only be done at a loss, for the luncheon may include a bowl of Spanish bean soup, and a splendid Spanish beef stew of tenderloin tips and vegetable complements. Perhaps the meal will wind up with ice cream made of coconut milk, a specialty of the house.

But, whatever the debit on this loss leader, the Hernandez family makes up for it on the immense popularity of other specialties of the house. One of these is the classic arroz con pollo Valenciano, or chicken with saffron rice. Another is the widely assorted sea-food dish, paella Valenciana. Beer and ale go so naturally with these dishes that the Columbia has built a reputation for its service of malt beverages with good food.

Featuring the rambling charm of the Columbia is its luxuriant patio, and the numerous pictorial tributes to Don Quixote. La Fonta, which was the first dining room of the nine, contains 375 hand-painted tiles depicting the adventures of Cervantes' knight-errant. Many celebrities have enjoyed the Columbia's hospitality. Among them have been Adlai Stevenson, Arturo Toscanini, Primo Carnera and Margaret Truman—not to mention an army of gourmets.

of the landing on the Bay of Pigs in Cuba, April 17, 1961. Discussion came later in a cooler atmosphere.

After that landing failure, no effective positive action was taken with respect to Cuba, and the Cuban situation rapidly deteriorated. The Russians and Red Chinese began a buildup both of weapons systems and of their technicians. Accelerated in the late summer of 1962, it assumed alarming and dangerous proportions. This buildup was exposed by Republican Senators.

Thereupon the Republican leadership call for a Cuban resolution similar to the effective Formosa and Middle East Resolutions. The leaders cited the Monroe Doctrine and subsequent treaties in a press conference.

An hour and a half later, after their declaration, the President requested the power to call up 150,000 Ready Reserves for 1 year, in the light of this buildup and of another prospective Berlin crisis. Congress of course acceded to the President's request. It also, as the result of the Republican instigation, approved by a vote of 86 to 1, a Cuban resolution empowering the President to take such action as was necessary to prevent the establishment of a foreign offensive military base just off our coast. The only contrary vote was registered by a Republican who did not feel the following resolution was strong enough:

Concurrent Resolution

Whereas President James Monroe, announcing the Monroe Doctrine in 1823, declared to the Congress that we should consider any attempt on the part of European powers "to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety."

Whereas in the Rio Treaty of 1947 the parties agreed that "an armed attack by any state against an American state shall be considered as an attack against all the American states, and, consequently, each one of the said contracting parties undertakes to assist in meeting the attack in the exercise of the inherent right of individual or collective self-defense recognized by article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations."

Whereas the Foreign Ministers of the Organization of American States at Punta del Este in January 1962 unanimously declared: "The present Government of Cuba has identified itself with the principles of Marxist-Leninist ideology, has established a political, economic, and social system based on that doctrine, and accepts military assistance from extracontinental Communist powers, including even the threat of military intervention in America on the part of Soviet Union";

Whereas since 1958 the international Communist movement has increasingly extended into Cuba its political, economic, and military sphere of influence: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that the President of the United States is supported in his determination and possesses all necessary authority—

(a) to prevent by whatever means may be necessary, including the use of arms, the Castro regime from exporting its aggressive purposes to any part of this hemisphere by force or the threat of force;

(b) to prevent in Cuba the creation or use of an externally supported offensive military base capable of endangering the United States Naval Base at Guantanamo, free passage to the Panama Canal, United States missile and space preparations or the security of this Nation and its citizens; and

(c) to work with other free citizens of this hemisphere and with freedom-loving Cuban refugees to support the legitimate aspirations of the people of Cuba for a return to self-determination. Continued Next Week

could be the reason your car will start quicker
this winter

To start quicker in freezing weather, the gasoline in your car needs the volatile, high energy supplied by butanes. That's why Texas Eastern's Little Big Inch pipeline system may be important to you this winter.

Our Little Big Inch pipeline has been and is now delivering increasing quantities of butanes to refineries in the Midwest. Beginning next month, the Little Big Inch—through a 500-mile expansion of its system—will make butane deliveries to refineries in the Philadelphia area.

As pipeliners of energy, Texas Eastern continues to expand its natural gas and petroleum products systems to serve new areas of the Midwest and East. Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation, Houston, Texas.

is stored

Between 1000 and 5000 feet below the surface in much of this area are thick layers of porous sandstone rock. Eons ago the tiny pores in this rock were packed with natural gas—placed there in the mysterious ways of nature.

Then man found this valuable gas could be released by drilling wells. After all the gas was withdrawn, the wells were abandoned.

Then somebody had an idea. Why not pump natural gas back into this porous rock for storage purposes? Storing large volumes of gas had been a virtual impossibility. Constructing transmission lines to take care of the great frigid-weather demand was not economically feasible.

It was a great idea, but it took some doing. Thousands of old wells had to be located and reconditioned; compressor stations built; miles of lines laid; thousands of valves and other equipment installed. Many years and millions of dollars were necessary to complete the job.

It took some doing—but it was done. As a result, this area now has the largest underground storage capacity in the world. Every summer, vast amounts of natural gas—brought here by long-distance transmission lines—are pumped down into that rock. When cold weather comes, the gas is gradually withdrawn and piped into homes and industries.

Your gas company can supply all the gas that is needed for all your uses—regardless of the demand. On extremely cold days, for example, about 50 percent of your winter comfort gas comes from underground storage.

Underground storage also makes it possible for your gas company to purchase gas from the transmission companies in the same amounts every day of the year. Because of these guaranteed year-round purchases, the cost of the gas is less.

The savings made possible by underground storage are passed on to you—one of the reasons gas rates in this area are among the lowest in the nation.

St. Croix Named By Columbus

Of the territories now under the United States flag, St. Croix in the Virgin Islands is the first to have been found by Columbus. When he made his discovery on Nov. 14, 1493, the island was inhabited by Carib Indians and their Arawak slaves, whose carvings and pots are still to be seen in the St. Croix Museum. The "Admiral of the Ocean Sea" named the island Santa Cruz. After a skirmish between the Spaniards and Caribs at Salt River, where the Spaniards anchored their fleet in search of fresh water, Columbus sailed away from Santa Cruz, never to return. When the French expelled the Spanish in the 17th century they called the island St. Croix and they sold it, in 1651, to the Knights of Malta. The name has stuck ever since.

Bell Farm Noted By 'Poultryman' In Recent Issue

In the September issue of "The Poultryman," a column written by Eben Wood refers to the late Harold K. Bell of near Jefferson, and his son, Ralph Bell, who visited Mr. Wood at Eastham, Mass., this past summer.

The Bells are well known raisers of fine poultry. The column stated:

I slept an hour late this morning and when I looked out there was an auto standing on the lawn with no front number plate. There was no one in sight so I went out to see who it might be that was an earlier riser than I had been.

As I started out I saw a man down by the lake watching the gulls and terns that are always with us, as most folks do the first time they come here.

When he heard the screen door slam he turned and came to meet me, saying as he came, "You never saw me before but I am still growing chickens from the stock my dad bought from you years ago."

Then he said, "I'm Ralph Bell." When he told me his name, I said, "You are from western Pennsylvania."

Then memories came tumbling out of the past. Again I was at Cleveland at the greatest World's Poultry Congress ever held, back in 1939. Climbing a broad flight of stairs down in the underground where a lot of the exhibits were, I noticed a man on my left who was keeping step with me as I climbed and who kept looking at me. As we reached the top he asked, "Aren't you Eben Wood?"

I admitted it, and he said, "Gosh! you aren't as darned homely as your picture."

That man was the dad of this fellow who was now calling on me to bring back old times. The curtain dropped over the past and we talked of things as they are today.

He told me that much as he preferred working with the Hamps, he was being forced by the economic squeeze to swing more and more to Leghorns because they did have a slight margin in costs and the large fowl no longer sold for enough to make much of a dent in his pullet cost.

We agreed that it was not so much higher feed prices or slightly lower egg prices that had ruined the old, easy days for us, as it was the serious drop in the selling price of our fowl when we disposed of them after a year of laying. In those days a fowl sold after her laying year for enough to replace her with a new pullet. Today what little you can get for such a good fowl gives little help in the cost for her replacement.

Light Your Home for the Holiday Season

Whether you live in an apartment or in your own home, there are many ways to brighten up at Christmas — create a holiday mood and add a "light" touch to the decorations.

The decorated doorway is the keynote of holiday hospitality. It can be done easily and economically with either home-made materials, or inexpensive store-bought decorations. Here are some suggested ways for decorating your doorway:

Put a framework of greens around the four edges of the door. Nestle a string of Christmas lights throughout the greens. Construct a centerpiece of bells and spray. Spotlight the centerpiece from the edge of the porch.

A hallway door to an apartment can be decorated easily. Outline it in lights and artificial greens. A large cardboard bell, a big bow, and a ready-made spray of plastic bells comprise a centerpiece. Tiny, spherical 4 1/2 watt bulbs are used to light the plastic bells.

A "stained glass" window effect can be achieved with the use of colored silk, lighted from indoors. Frame the doorway with holiday greens, add a symbol of the Season overhead, and use small lights to highlight them. Frame the doorway with an abundance of greens. As a centerpiece, hang a home-made stuffed boot overflowing with gift-wrapped boxes. Floodlight from trees or the lawn. Plan to use cheerful decorations for Christmas. You can provide a bright, eye-catching display for little work and small expense.

Bald Eagles in U. S. Fewer Than 5,000; Gun Birds' Big Foe

Last year's estimate that fewer than 5000 bald eagles survive in the United States outside of Alaska has been confirmed by the second nationwide survey conducted by the National Audubon Society.

The society's research director, Alexander Sprunt IV, said a total of 3807 wintering eagles were counted last January with the assistance of field personnel of federal and state wildlife agencies. This compared to 3642 observed in January, 1961.

The larger number reflects improved techniques of censusing and not an actual increase in eagles, Sprunt said.

Nesting studies continued to show an alarming failure of bald eagle reproduction, the Audubon biologist revealed.

Of six known active nests watched by the New Jersey Audubon Society in 1962, only one was successful, producing a single eaglet. Of 31 active nests in Maine, only eight produced a single young bird each.

In the Chesapeake Bay region Ornithologist Jackson Abbott reported that of 32 active nests followed through the season, 30 were abandoned, four because of infertile eggs, and the remaining two nests produced a total of only two eaglets.

Reproduction also was poor in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, but better in Florida where 93 of 163 nesting pairs of eagles reared 125 young birds, a near-normal success rate of 57 per cent.

Wintering bald eagles concentrate chiefly in four regions. States leading the 1962 winter tally were Florida with 529; Illinois, 476; South Dakota, 273, and Missouri, 246.

A study of eagle mortality shows the gun is the bird's worst enemy after it leaves the nest. Of 118 bald eagles found dead, 91 had been shot—this despite a 1940 law which makes shooting bald eagles a federal offense.

Congress this year amended the law to include the golden eagle, for which bald eagles have been frequently mistaken by careless gunners.

Coin Shortage Steps Up Work

DENVER — Stepped up operations were ordered Friday at the U. S. mint because of reported pre-Christmas coin shortages in many sections of the nation.

Mrs. Miller said the Denver mint turns out more than 70 per cent of the nation's coins, the rest being produced at the Philadelphia mint.

Honest Thumb To Test Fruit

WASHINGTON — A mechanical thumb to test the firmness of ripe fruit has been developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The thumb is so gentle that it leaves only a slight indentation on the fruit and is expected to be more objective than humans since it is not influenced by appearance. It is being tested for several types of fruits and vegetables.

Keystone electric generating station to be built near Elderton on the eastern edge of Armstrong County, will include two 800,000-kilowatt generating units. Site preparation for the station, which will cost $175,000,000, should start early in 1963. The plant will be built and owned by General Public Utilities Corporation (including Pennsylvania Electric Company), Pennsylvania Power & Light Company, and Philadelphia Electric Company. Extra high voltage transmission lines will carry its output eastward. The plant will use over 160,000,000 tons of coal over its life—and as much as 4,700,000 tons annually. The bulk of this coal will come from an area within 15 miles of the plant, much of it by conveyor belt directly from mine mouths.

'Old Ironsides' 150 Years of Age Headed for Million Dollar Overhauling

BOSTON—The United States Navy commissioned her the U. S. S. Constitution, but she's been "Old Ironsides" to friend and foe alike for 150 years. And now, a million-dollar overhauling is under way to keep her spars and sails floating proudly in Boston Harbor.

Two railroad flatcars are rolling across the continent carrying eight titanic timbers, about 250 years in growing. The trees were thrusting green spires skyward in a forest near Molalla, Ore., long before Joshua Humphreys launched the Constitution in Boston in 1797.

"Old Ironsides" is the oldest warship still in commission afloat. She flies the two-starred flag of the First Naval District's Commandant, who is presently Rear Admiral Joseph Wellings.

Only Lord Nelson's flagship Victory is older, but she is far from in commission, declining in an earth-bound bed at Portsmouth, England. The timbers en route are Douglas fir, 100 feet long and 18 inches square. When fabricated they will produce a 93-foot foremast and an 86-foot mizzen, with diameters in the vicinity of three feet. The present mainmast does not require replacement.

Much more than the new spars is needed by Constitution. Through parsimony or heedlessness in Washington in recent years she has been neglected.

Now intensive repairs and replacements are necessary to restore the stoutness which won her nom de guerre.

A tar seeing a British cannon ball bounce off her oaken planking exclaimed: "Her sides must be made of iron." Hence: Old Ironsides.

Modern nuclear warships can of course circle the globe many times without refueling, but fuel never was a problem for Old Ironsides. Her power plant was the wind and a $19-a-month sail-maker.

Robert E. Lind, chairman of the Greene County committee for U. S. Savings Bonds, is calling on county citizens for added support of the U. S. Savings Bonds Program in light of unsettled world conditions. He reports an appeal from Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon which stresses the "vital importance of keeping our country strong" and states that "the help and participation of every citizen is a necessary part of such national strength."

Secretary Dillon's appeal noted that Savings Bonds contribute greatly to the economic strength on which our defense efforts depend, and called the act of buying a Savings Bond "a splendid expression of faith in our American system so that we may strengthen it for future generations."
