Men's New Dormitory To Be Built by College

'Sir Winston' Made Honorary U. S. Citizen

WASHINGTON — Britain's towering titan, Sir Winston Churchill, received honorary United States citizenship — a tribute unique in American history.

President Kennedy proclaimed the dauntless wartime prime minister a citizen of this country and the champion of freedom in its most perilous hour.

Mr. Churchill accepted with "solemn and heartfelt thanks" what he correctly called this honor without parallel.

Mr. Churchill is 88 now, so he could not be here for the ceremony held in the White House rose garden. But he did look on at home by live television broadcast across the Atlantic to London from a satellite in orbit.

His son, Randolph, was on hand to read his letter of thanks and appreciation for the latest in a multitude of honors.

Mr. Churchill had a glowing outlook on the future of his country and the Anglo-American relationship.

"In this century of storm and tragedy," he said, "I contemplate with high satisfaction the constant factor of the interwoven and upward progress of our peoples. Our comradeship and our brotherhood in war were unexampled. We stood together and because of that fact the free world now stands."

Then with an obvious fling at those who think his country may be sinking into a secondary role on the world stage, Churchill said:

"I reject the view that Britain and the commonwealth should now be relegated to a tame and minor role in the world. Our past is the key to our future. . . . Let no man underrate our energies, our potentialities and our abiding power for good."

The Chief Executive spoke, signed the citizenship proclamation, read it aloud and handed it to Randolph Churchill.

In naming him an honorary citizen," Mr. Kennedy said of Mr. Churchill, "I only propose a formal recognition of the place he has long since won in the history of freedom and in the affections of my, and now his, fellow countrymen."

Ailment Stumps Maryland MDs

SNOW HILL, Md. — Doctors battling a mysterious virus-like disease which has struck about 1,500 Eastern Shore residents here this winter said Saturday they still don't know exactly what they are up against.

Dr. Everett Sutter of Salisbury, Md., who has treated about 800 victims has come down with symptoms of the ailment himself.

Three doctors have been brought into Worcester County where the disease seems to be centered. People, who have come down with it, complain of dizziness, headaches, high fever and stomach trouble.

Its victims have been listless and often unable to work for up to two months.

The Maryland State Health Department and the United States Public Health Service have taken samples of blood from victims in trying to diagnose the ailment but so far have had little success.

Spanish Moss Useful Despite Misnomer

NAPLES, Fla. — Spanish moss, seen on cypress trees, is not Spanish, not a parasite, and not moss. It is an air plant that gets its sustenance largely from the air.

It is used for furniture padding, air-conditioning filters, and as a mixture with waste for packing journal boxes of railroad cars.

Construction of a new dormitory for men will begin shortly, Charles B. Stoy, vice president for finance and business affairs, of Waynesburg College, has announced.

"Attorneys are now processing the contracts," Mr. Stoy said, "but a gentleman's agreement has already been reached with Crump, Inc., and American Bridge Company, a subsidiary of U. S. Steel, and the actual construction will begin within a few weeks."

"The $200,000 multi-colored dormitory which is to occupy the triangular plot of ground east of the tennis courts and south of the cemetery will feature a striking innovation in building design."

"Designed by Harding Thayer, Inc., the new one story building will be the third dormitory in the country built in this manner."

The design, similar to that employed in Pittsburgh's Gateway Center buildings, consists of panels of four by nine sheets of steel separated by two and a half inches of insulation.

A rose beige porcelain-like material baked on the exterior surface will be complemented by red brick masonry. A virtually indestructible plastic surface will be baked on the inner walls in hues of blue, yellow, green, and tan. The two panels and insulation together provide the acoustical and thermal retaining properties of a 12-inch cement block wall.

The $200,000 cost of the dormitory which includes built-in and movable furniture for 60 students, accommodations for their residence counselor, plus a recreation lounge is still cheaper than a comparable sized brick building.

This cost is approximately $1,000 cheaper per student for the new dormitory in comparison with Denny Hall, which cost approximately $4,000 per student.

Although the price of the steel panels is comparable to that of brick, the cost is reduced due to the fact that only two men are required to carry and bolt down the panels. This is in comparison to the large number of masons and laborers needed for a brick construction.

Mr. Stoy said the construction will be completed in five months. August 15, is the date set to move in furniture. Students will be able to move in on September first.

The room fee for the new dormitory will be comparable to that of Denny and Thayer Halls.

Coal Freight Cut Possible

WASHINGTON — Four major railroads operating in the Pittsburgh area are now free to put into effect a cut in freight rates on coal from West Virginia and Pennsylvania to the East Coast.

Saturday was the final day on which protests to the reduced tariffs could have been filed. The Interstate Commerce reports no protests were filed.

The application was filed by the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, and Pittsburgh & Shawmut Railroads. The reduction is about $150 a ton. The applications indicated the railroads propose to ship the coal in fast, specially designed trains, with quick turn around between the mines and the eastern seaboard cities. The new service is designed to make coal more nearly competitive with imported residual fuel oil.

Self-Reliance Is Fountainhead of Self-Respecting Americans

How much Federal aid did the Pilgrims receive? That is the question asked in a pro-American advertisement offered by a Cleveland, Ohio, firm. Here is the answer given by the business concern:

"They were in a depressed area. No one guaranteed them high prices for anything. Their only roads and schools were built by themselves.

"All they had was character. All they did was work. All they wanted was self-respect.

"The sum of these traits became our original America.

"But what's going to be the sum of the traits you see today—the traits of character, or rather lack of it, that demand more money for less work; put security above self-respect; pamper self-pitying criminals instead of punishing them; give away resources we desperately need to protect ourselves; listen to weaklings that want government to take care of them when they should take care of themselves.

"Long years of early American self-respect and honest work built America, but the traits you see today can destroy it in half the time."

Constructive thinkers and workers built America, and only constructive thinkers and workers can preserve America. For Americans strong of mind and body there is no adequate substitute for self-reliance.

The Pilgrims who set out to conquer the wilderness of the New World firmly believed that if they were free and strong they could build a better life and set a pattern of government over which they would be master. Nowadays it is obvious that government is becoming our master.

Up until the year 1930, Jefferson's anti-Federalist philosophy of the role our Federal Government should play was predominant in America. Then, in the early 30s, America suffered what has come to be called in history "the great depression." We began to accept the philosophy that we could no longer rely on our own inguity and resourcefulness as children of God; instead we began to rely on the paternalism of government. In the intervening years we have gradually lapsed into a welfare state.

As a result: Annual Federal aid to states, localities and individuals (amounting to less than 150 million dollars in 1930) has soared to more than nine billion dollars—more than the total budget of the Federal Government in any one year prior to World War II; government-owned electric utilities currently account for 25 per cent of the electric power generated in this country as compared to only 5 per cent in 1920; one in every six employed Americans is now on a government payroll; housing, transportation, agriculture and many other industries are heavily subsidized by government.

An authoritative study by the Tax Foundation lists ten emerging local problems which Federal and state governments are being urged to add to the burdens they now carry. The areas are: Higher education; growth problems of cities and suburbs; older citizens; civil rights; mental health; juvenile delinquency; revision of state constitutions; safety in industrial use of atomic energy; water use and conservation, and migratory workers.

These problems, we admit, are real. They must be met. But, have our states and cities, counties and boroughs, and private agencies grown so feeble that they cannot sustain their own people? Must they send their money to Washington and let Washington send only half of it back, with nursemaids to tell our state and local governments what they can and cannot do with it?

Our Federal government has no income of its own. Whatever money is given away or spent is first taken from taxpayers. If the citizen would realize the importance of these facts, he would be more apt to guard the purse-strings of America as he does his own.

Optimists Sponsor Easter Egg Hunt

Waynesburg Optimist Club is again sponsoring an Easter egg hunt for children in the immediate vicinity.

The egg hunt will be conducted from Fountain Park west and also in Sunset Park at the rear of the First Baptist Church.

Children between six and 12 years of age will go to the Commons, and older children will go to Sunset Park.

An added attraction this year will feature an Easter bunny helper who will help the younger children find the hidden eggs and help them to carry them to their baskets.

Prizes will be awarded.

The hunt will be adult supervised and traffic along the street will be patrolled by members of the Civil Defense organization.

Due to the growth of the annual egg hunt, local residents have been asked to donate eggs. Those wishing to do so should contact William Bracey at McKees Appliance Store; George Berryhill, at his service station in East Waynesburg, or Edward Albert, at Albert's Restaurant.

Vandals Damage Gettysburg Park

GETTYSBURG, Pa. — National Park Rangers are investigating a series of recent acts of vandalism, the latest being the toppling of a nine-foot bronze statue of Major General Gouverneur Kemble Warren, a Union Army hero.

Park Superintendent Kittridge A. Wing said the 70-year-old statue apparently was pulled from its base by a long rope attached to a car. He said the object weighed several thousand pounds and could not have been moved by human strength alone. There was no estimate of the damage. The statue's sword was bent and the head was gouged as the monument pitched forward. Gen. Warren was chief engineer of the Union Army of the Potomac.

Heads Allegheny Alumni Chapter

John P. Strange of Murrsville, has been elected president of the Allegheny County Chapter of the Waynesburg College Alumni Association. Mr. Strange is Associate Director of Product Engineering in the Research and Engineering Division of Mine Safety Appliance Company. As president of the Allegheny County alumni chapter, he succeeds Alvin Wood of Pittsburgh.

Other new officers are Richard Strosnider, vice president; June Brown MacDonald, secretary; and Edward Walker, treasurer. Retiring officers are Vince Johnson, vice president; Ann Moyer, secretary; and John P. Strange, treasurer.

County Given State Grant For Juvenile Work

Greene County is one of 12 to receive a grant in the state-local program to prevent juvenile delinquency, as announced Saturday by Secretary of Public Welfare Arlin M. Adams.

Greene County's share is $1,158.

The money is given to counties and local governments to establish or expand programs for youth, including probation, police service and crime prevention work with juvenile gangs.

"County and local officials are using these subsidies to help deal with the critical problem of delinquency. We in the Department of Public Welfare are happy to be working in partnership with them to influence and redirect juvenile offenders," Secretary Adams said.

There are 82 such programs planned for 1963, involving grants of $638, 556; 36 applications for $286, 058 for municipal police services; 44 for $252,546 for county probation services and two for $99,952 for juvenile crime prevention programs in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Commissioners Adopt Proposed 1963 Budget

Char-Mar Farm Of 3,000 Acres Sold To J. W. Dawkins

The 3,300-acre Char-Mar Farm in Richhill Township has been sold by the owner, Charles M. Swart of Wheeling, W. Va., to John Dawkins of near Lewisburg, W. Va. The deal was a quarter of a million dollar transaction.

Mr. Swart, an executive in the Block Brothers Tobacco Company in Wheeling, was born on one of the 43 farms which comprise the tract. He purchased his first farm in 1935, the D. E. Ruth acreage which adjoined the homestead of his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Swart. The farm was named for Mr. Swart's son, Charles, and daughter, Martha.

The land is rectangular shaped more than five miles long and three miles wide. It is almost all in Richhill Township with a small corner extending into Washington County.

Except for about 600 acres of meadow land, the remainder is included in a recommended improved pasture program. Farming practices developed by Pennsylvania State University and other governmental agencies have been strictly followed.

The farm has a herd of 600 purebred Hereford beef cattle and in the 1930s, Mr. Swart owned 10 per cent of all registered Herefords in the state.

Twenty men are employed. There are five tractors, two hay balers, a bulldozer and a number of trucks. In 1961, 45,000 bales of hay were cut.

On the farm are 11 houses and 24 barns. There are also a number of small buildings. An average of $5,000 worth of fertilizers is used each year.

Numerous good farm herds were begun in western Greene County through Mr. Swart's introduction of fine cattle.

At the time the farm was also stocked with 2,000 purebred Merino sheep.

He will convert Char-Mar Farm to steer production and will sell the Hereford herd at auction.

Mr. Swart's son Charles, is now a vice president in Block Brothers Tobacco Company, and his daughter Martha is married to Gregg Warren, also an official in the company.

Mr. Dawkins, the former owner of livestock barns in Marietta, Ohio, purchased the Lone Star Farm in Whiteley Township in 1952. It was the John Lantz farm. Later he sold it to Mr. and Mrs. Dan McCoy. Mrs. McCoy is Republican County Chairwoman and is a candidate in the coming primary for county treasurer.

Tests Pushed To Cut Fallout Peril To Food

UNIVERSITY PARK—A Pennsylvania State University research team is working on a technique to reduce the amount of deadly strontium 90 from nuclear fallout.

One way to reduce strontium in various foods, the team believes, is to develop hybrids or varieties that don't accumulate as much of the radioactive material in their cells from fallout contaminated soil.

Their study is being continued for the third year under a new $31,944 grant from the Atomic Energy Commission.

Strontium 90, a nuclear fission product, is believed to enter human bones through milk from cows that have eaten corn-ensilage and forages containing the radio-active element.

The Penn State researchers already have developed corn hybrids that accumulate less strontium from the soil than other corns. Cows fed on such corn would produce milk with less strontium in it.

Dr. Walter I. Thomas, associate professor of agronomy, heads the project. Working with him are Dr. George W. Gorsline, assistant professor of agronomy, and Dr. Dale E. Baker, assistant professor of soil technology.

Greene County Commissioners on Tuesday adopted the 1963 budget which had been open for inspection since March 20.

The tax levy on real estate is 11 mills, the same which was in effect in 1962. The assessed value of property is 25 percent of the land market value.

Estimated receipts for the year are $792,898. The amount of $625,030 will come from real estate taxes.

Estimated expenditures are $1,206,410 of which $270,000 will be applied to the proposed Curry Memorial Home building project. An allotment of $63,000 for the construction of a nursing wing at Greene County Memorial Hospital for elderly indigents, will be taken from a cash balance of $420,664 on hand at the beginning of this year. Most of this cash balance came from a $325,000 capital improvement fund set up by the commissioners from the sale of the Children's Home property.

Following is a list of the estimated expenditures:

General government, administration, $250,069; general government, judicial, $112,432; corrections, $113,850; miscellaneous services, $153,654.

Debt service, $5,000; adult welfare, $106,405; Curry Home building project $270,000; child welfare, $80,800; family welfare, $26,200; health and hospitals, $88,000.

Prices Lower At Annual Breeders' Sale

Greene County Purebred Breeders' Association held their eighth annual sale Saturday at the fairground.

Prices were somewhat lower than those prevalent in the east. The 64 animals sold for $16,625, for an average of $260 per head.

Thirty-two bulls brought $10,730, for an average of $335 each while 32 heifers sold for $5,895, for an average of $184. Association officials said they were particularly disappointed in the bull sale.

Last year, when the best prices in many years were recorded, bulls averaged $424 and females $240.

A show preceded the sale. Truman Lawrence of Lewisburg, W. Va., was judge.

The grand champion bull was consigned by Van Dale Farms, Bradford, and was sold for $425 to Glenn A. Arnold, of Waynesburg. The reserve champion bull, consigned by Brookshore Hereford Farms, Saltburg, R. D. 2, was bid in at $450 by John A. Hunt, of Avella.

The top prices for bulls, however, were not recorded by either the grand champion or reserve champion animal, as two pulled bulls brought $500 each.

One was consigned by the Heathcliff Corp., Rogersville, and the other by Edward D. Kucuk, of Apollo. They were sold to William F. Huffman, of Scenery Hill, and H. E. Davis, of Harlan Station.

Brookshore Farms had the grand champion female. The heifer was bid in at $435 by William D. Renner, of Mt. Morris Star Route, for a 4-H project.

The reserve champion female was consigned by the Heathcliff Corp. Auctioneer A. W. Hamilton, of Lewisburg, W. Va., dropped the gavel on it at $465, the top price bid for a heifer. It went to Dr. Frank Perrone, of Greensburg.

Getting a Dome The Hard Way

OKLAHOMA CITY — Governor Henry Bellmon and other Oklahoma officials studied an idea that could result in a long talked about dome.

Under the plan, Oklahoma's exhibit building for the New York World's Fair would be dome shaped. Later it could be dismantled, returned and placed atop the Capitol.

Nothing Sings Like Joy

How quickly one responds to the happy laughter of a child, a man whistling at his work, a mother singing to her baby, a bird filling the air with song! Joy cannot be confined.

Where true joy is, there is no looking back over the past with remorse and regret; there is no fear of what lies ahead. Joy is an expression of gratitude for good things already received and the expectation of good things to come. Joy always gives a lift to the task at hand.

What is true joy, and where does it come from? It is not a tenuous thing, something that is ours to hold for a few moments, a few years, and then to let slip from our grasp, leaving loneliness and emptiness. Real joy is ours always. No earthly sorrow, no disappointment, failure, loss, or fear can take away one iota of real joy.

The prophet Jeremiah gives this reassuring message from God (Jer. 31:13): "I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow." We are not to be permitted to lose our joy. Even sorrow and mourning cannot stifle it. The test of true joy lies in one's ability to maintain it under all circumstances and conditions.

When Paul and Silas were in prison, they sang hymns of praise to God in the dark hour of midnight. As a result, all the bands of the prisoners were loosed.

Shortly before his betrayal and crucifixion, Christ Jesus comforted his disciples by reminding them of the Father's love. He also said that he had told them these things so that his joy might remain in them and their joy might be full (see John 15:11).

Jesus was able to face the bitterest experience of his career, the greatest test ever demanded of anyone, and speak of the fullness of joy. Other men of Bible times were sure of lasting joy, even in extreme situations, for they understood that true joy has an inexhaustible spiritual source which is always available to man.

Joy, as understood in Christian Science, is a spiritual quality — a quality of God — and belongs to man forever because, as the Bible tells us, man is God's image and likeness. Man cannot be separated from God; therefore he can never be cut off from joy.

What is it, then, that sometimes hides joy from our view and makes life seem so dreary, empty, and lonely? It is our acceptance of the false notion that existence is mortal and material; that our joy is dependent only on this material evidence of life. But we do not have to accept such a limited view for ourselves or for others. Jesus promised that his coming would bring more abundant life to mankind.

The Master's healing works were the expression of true joy, joy which understands God to be eternal Life, the only Life, and which recognizes man as the son of God, heir to eternal Life and to all joy, beauty, goodness, and wholeness that Life includes.

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes (p. 301): "This is the doctrine of Christian Science; that divine Love cannot be deprived of its manifestation, or object; that joy cannot be turned into sorrow, for sorrow is not the master of joy; that good can never produce evil; that matter can never produce mind nor life result in death. The perfect man — governed by God, his perfect Principle — is sinless and eternal."

Joy that glows in our hearts, shines in our faces, and radiates in our lives must bless others. Like a sweet melody, joy sings its way into the thought burdened with sorrow and with fear and leaves behind the immortal strain of God-given harmony and peace. Truly, nothing sings like joy! — The Christian Science Monitor

Young Lafayette Was America's First Foreign-Exchange Student?

Two of the earliest Americans to become foster parents of a "foreign exchange student" were easily the most distinguished — President of the United States and Mrs. George Washington.

The student, a refugee from the terror of revolution in France, was George Washington Lafayette, only son of the marquis who was the French hero of the American Revolution.

In 1795, when young George Lafayette arrived, the political situation was the reverse of 1781 when his father had helped to win the victory at Yorktown. Now, barely 14 years later, the young United States had a treaty of trade and friendship with the British and was hard put to avoid war with the French! Lafayette far from being the adored hero, was a declared enemy of France and languished in an Austrian prison.

On the night of Sept. 7, 1795, Washington, in his second term as President, was preparing to leave Philadelphia, the capital, when two letters reached him.

The first which had been written months earlier, was from a separate Madame Adrienne Lafayette.

"Monsieur, I send you my son," she wrote. "I put this dear child under the protection of the United States."

The second letter was from George Lafayette himself. The teen-age lad and his tutor had arrived in Boston and were eager to place themselves under Washington's care.

Washington was deeply moved. The son of Lafayette would be welcome in his home under any circumstances, and he knew that Martha (then at Mount Vernon) would share his feeling.

But Washington's personal feelings always had to defer to the national interest. If the President of the United States took into his family the son of a prominent "enemy of France," how would the already hostile French Government react? Would it indulge in political reprisals against Lafayette's family and friends? (He could not know that Mme. Lafayette and her two daughters were at that moment out of France en route to Austria.) And what of the thousands of French emigres in the larger American cities? Would they use the presidential welcome of Lafayette's son to make American neutrality even more difficult to maintain?

The matter needed more thought than Washington could give at that moment, for early in the next morning he had to leave Philadelphia to be away for five or six weeks.

Still, young Lafayette must have an immediate answer.

Within the hour, Washington was writing to his friend, Massachusetts Senator George Cabot in Boston, asking that he temporarily sponsor the young Frenchman. Would Cabot carefully explain the political necessity to postpone his public welcome, but assure young Lafayette (and Washington underlined the words) that "I will be his friend . . . standing in the place of a father, protector, and supporter." Meanwhile, Washington suggested that George might be enrolled as a student in Harvard, "the expense of which, and also every other means for his support, I will pay."

Though nearly sixteen, young George was not prepared to enter college. For three years he had lived in hiding or tried in vain to escape to America. His heart was not in study; he could think of nothing but his family's release from prison, for by this time his mother and sisters had voluntarily joined his father in the dungeon of Olmutz in Austria. Instead of entering Harvard,

THE Flowers OF Easter

They are the lilies: white, clean, and above all else — simple. . . . Yet why the lily?

There is the orchid — a speckled, brilliant wonder; or the hyacinth, whose fragrance carries the promise of spring earth and warm rains. The daffodil, or the magnolia, filled with the sweetness of Southern nights.

Why the lily — most simple of our flowers? Perhaps it is because over nineteen hundred years ago there lived this teacher who — after a simple life in a tiny land — was crucified, pronounced dead, and buried. Yet shortly after death He achieved life again, an eternal life that brings meaning to the Easter miracle.

I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. St. John 11:25

To this man, all living things were proof of the living God. Yet He passed up great wonders one day to point to the simplest flower growing in wild splendor in the rocky pastures of Palestine.

Said Jesus Christ, in words of simplicity and majesty:

Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I tell thee that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of those. . .

In your church next Sunday will be the lilies of Easter — a simple, yet beautiful flower, commemorating a simple, yet matchless, life.

MIAMI — Spanish signs are commonplace in Miami stores because thousands of Cuban refugees have flocked into town since Fidel Castro took power.

Now, the county government is installing traffic signs in Spanish because "it's something that is needed" since many of Miami's 155,000 refugees own cars.

Landscaping With Annuals

In this landscape, almost entirely of annuals, spider plant and nicotiana give height, petunias are massed in the middle ground, creeping zinnias, small marigolds form the borders.

When your home is new and your pocketbook is nearly empty, annuals are the plants to use in your landscaping. For, while they're not permanent, they are cheaply and easily grown from seeds and will serve the purpose of other plants for several years.

You'll need annuals in several heights and of both compact and open forms in order to do a good landscaping job. Some of the tall growers that you might consider are ornamental sunflowers which come in the 7 foot high Chrysanthemum-flowered strain, the 5 to 6-foot Red blend, or the 4 to 5 foot Sun Gold with double golden-yellow flowers.

Cosmos with feathery leaves and flowers of pink, rose or white or tall growing zinnias also will give height to at least 4 feet.

Medium height annuals that are useful in landscaping include dwarf dahlias and four o'clocks, both of which look like little shrubs and grow about 3 feet high.

Single plants of Celosia, Pampas Plume grow to 3 feet in height and as much in width and, with their brilliant bronze, copper, gold, or scarlet flowers, make quite a color splash. So do single plants of large-flowered zinnias and marigolds.

To form a hedge, use cleome (spider plant) if you want one 3 to 4 feet high; four o'clocks or firebush for a 3 foot height. Balsams also make good hedges, but grow only to 2 feet high.

Nicotiana often is used in landscaping with annuals when an open form of plant is desired. You may call this plant "flowering tobacco." It grows 2 1/2 feet high.

Below the 2 foot height are such annuals as pompon zinnias and calendulas, also tall blue ageratum, any of which will help a landscape to look bright and gay.

Masses of color are easy to obtain from marigolds like Spry, Butterball or Harmony, annual phlox, petunias in myriad colors, zinnia Persian Carpet or Old Mexico or a pink like dianthus Bravo.

In places where a color mass should extend like a carpet, there are still lower-growing annuals, under six inches in height, which may be used. These include creeping zinnias, Twinkles phlox, portulaca, a sweet william named Wee Willie, blue lobelias, alyssum in white, pink or purple and the Petite marigolds.

Young Pianist With Symphony

The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of William Steinberg, introduces to area audiences April 13 and 14, one of the most sensational young instrumentalists to come along since Van Cliburn bowled over the Russians five years ago. He is Lorin Hollander, an eighteen year old pianist, who already has been touted as the most exciting young talent America has produced in recent years. Hollander will play Tchaikowsky.

A red-haired, All-American boy-type, Lorin Hollander is a native of the New York area and comes from a musical family. His father was the assistant concertmaster with the N. B. C. Symphony under the late Arturo Toscanini. At home, Hollander is a ham radio operator, an avid reader, and a collector of assorted animal pets.

Hollander first came to the attention of the Pittsburgh Orchestra two years ago when he appeared as the soloist with the orchestra in Boston. The reaction to his piano playing was electric and Steinberg, immediately following the engagement, insisted that Lorin be introduced to Pittsburgh area audiences as soon as it was possible.

In recent years, Hollander has been seen by television audiences on the Bell Telephone Hour and also on the Perry Como show. He is now one of the hottest concert properties currently touring the country and almost without exception, the nation's music critics are pulling out little-used adjectives to describe his pianistic ability.

'Bucky' Murdock Honored At Dinner Sponsored By Waynesburg Lettermen

Athletic Director At College Resigns

PETER MAZZAFERRO

Peter Mazzaferro, athletic director and football and basketball coach at Waynesburg College for the past four years, has submitted his resignation to Paul R. Stewart.

Coach Mazzaferro had two winning seasons in football during his tenure at Waynesburg, and was voted the tri-state small college "Coach-of-the-year" in 1961 by the Curbstone Coaches.

Douglas Gold Writes Of Teaching Indians

A book describing his life as a teacher on an Indian reservation has been written by Douglas Gold, a graduate of Waynesburg College in 1914.

Mr. Gold spent nearly twenty years (1914-1934) teaching Black-foot Indians in Montana, and compiled voluminous notes and records of those years.

Some of the articles and stories have appeared in magazines, but most of the material in his book, "A Schoolmaster with the Black-foot Indians," is published for the first time.

Raymond (Bucky) Murdock, who has twice earned a spot in the Sports Hall of Fame at Waynesburg College, and who has resigned after 16 years as wrestling coach of the Yellow Jackets, was honored at a testimonial dinner Saturday night in Benedum Hall.

The dinner was sponsored by the Lettermen's Club.

His 16 years of loyal and devoted service to Waynesburg College have netted the Yellow Jacket wrestlers a record of 121 wins, 21 losses, and two ties for a phenomenal percentage mark of .852.

Murdock earned a reputation as one of the nation's finest grappling coaches as his Orange and Black teams finished in the top ten four times ('48, '50, '51, '52) in the N. C. A. A. Tournament.

Waynesburg became one of the nation's mat powers under Murdock with undefeated clubs in 1948 (10-0-0), 1950 (9-0-0), 1951 (9-0-0), 1952 (7-0-0), 1955 (8-0-1), and 1957 (8-0-0).

Individual championships won by the Yellow Jacket wrestlers during Bucky's regime include three titles at the N.C.A.A. and 22 at the Cleveland 4-I. Waynesburg ranks 18th in individual N.C.A.A. crowns.

Dr. Paul R. Stewart, president of the college, pointed out that Murdock's careful attention to details and fundamentals had brought many of the records which gained Waynesburg national recognition in wrestling.

Hubert Jack, former wrestling coach at Lock Haven Teachers College, was the main speaker. He traced Murdock's enviable career as a wrestler, and stated:

"I have known Bucky Murdock for almost 20 years as a wrestler and a coach. He was a fine wrestler and has an outstanding record as a coach. I have competed with most of the top coaches in the country in dual meets and tournaments and I consider Bucky one of the very best. He did wonders with his material; they were always in condition and they knew wrestling. Bucky was always a gentleman and many of his fine qualities rubbed off on his boys."

John R. Conklin of Waynesburg, wrestling enthusiast and college trustee, who served as advisory coach when Bucky was in service, was presented at the dinner. Mr. Conklin suffered a fractured hip several years ago, and has been confined to his home most of the time since the accident.

Mr. Murdock expressed his appreciation of the honor given him and declared:

"I want everyone to know that I feel each and everyone of you and all those who have supported wrestling so well down through the years have a right to a generous share in any praise which comes my way for the success of the teams I have coached."

He emphasized how much the support of the fans means to a team, whether it's winning or losing, that it is an incentive which is a major factor in any team's success.

Mr. Murdock introduced his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Murdock of Waynesburg, and stated they had encouraged him and had been an inspiration in his career.

Among the star wrestlers attending the dinner were George Lewis of Farrell, and Tony Gizoni of Washington, who teaches in St. Clair Shore, near Detroit. Both were national champions coached by Murdock. Also present were former 4-I champions, Ralph Fuller, Tom Lewis, John Barish, Paul Abraham, Chuck Williams Joe Ayersman, Mike Pantely and Bob Eckley.

Eckley, who is still in college, presented Murdock with large photographs of Lewis and Gizoni, and also a plaque listing all Murdock's champions with a message "to their coach."

OFF AND RUNNING by John I. Day The Watchful Eye

It will be business as usual at the offices of the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau on January 15, but racing management in all parts of the country might well be breathing a collective sigh of relief over 17 candles on a cake marked "Happy Birthday TRPB." It was 17 years ago on January 15 that the Board of Directors of Thoroughbred Racing Associations announced the inauguration of a national investigation agency for the sport. Spencer J. Drayton, erstwhile advertising executive and former agent and administrative assistant to FBI Director, J. Edgar Hoover, was named to organize and head the organization which came to be known popularly (to all but cheaters) as the TRPB. The TRPB promptly plugged a few loopholes — the lip-tattoo identification system eliminated "ringers" and a fingerprint program insured against undesirables participating in racing — but, Drayton said, "Ours was primarily a preventative rather than a clean-up job. Wherever a turnover of over two and a half billion dollars is involved, there is a tempting target for the wrong element. Our job is to keep that element out of racing and to expose the occasional cheater within the sport." The effectiveness of Drayton's organization is demonstrated 35,000,000 strong at the turnstiles each year.

Seven Wrestlers Win Letters From College

U. S. to Draft 1,350 Doctors

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department announced Monday 1,350 doctors will be drafted this summer for the armed services.

"This call is necessitated by the fact that insufficient numbers of 1962 medical school graduates volunteered for active duty immediately following internship," the Pentagon said.

The Defense Department asked selective service to draft 800 doctors for the Army, 300 for the Air Force and 250 for the Navy. They will go on duty in July and August.

The last draft of doctors was in the winter of 1961-62 when 850 were inducted in connection with the Berlin crisis.

Beth-Center trounced Waynesburg, 7-1, on Beth-Center's field.

Jackson started for Waynesburg and Lanny McCann came on in relief in the fourth inning. The fire baller promptly set down the first three men to face him. Waynesburg's only score came in the first inning when Stephenson was hit by a pitched ball. Husk walked and Stephenson moved to second. An error and fielder's choice brought him in.

Redstone took Mapletown 4-3 at Mapletown.

Stanton pitched for the Maples and Russian and Vlosich for Redstone.

The Maples fought all the way, but never came closer than one run difference.

Young Lafayette Was America's First Foreign-Exchange Student?

young Lafayette and his tutor journeyed to the home of French friends in New York City.

Deeply concerned lest the young man feel any "slight or neglect," Washington wrote to Alexander Hamilton, also in New York, Hamilton, who had fought beside Lafayette in the American Revolution, took young George under his wing until at last, in April 1796, the Washingtons could welcome him into their family circle in Philadelphia.

The great man himself was glad to find his French namesake a sensible and modest youth, though deeply worried about his family. Hiding his own anxiety, Washington cheered and encouraged the boy, and wrote another of his many letters in Lafayette's behalf. This time it was a personal appeal to the Emperor of Austria, asking that Lafayette be allowed to come to America.

From his father, who had spent eleven happy days there in 1784, the boy had heard about the gracious white-pillared home on its hill above the Potomac. Here he saw Washington at his happiest and most relaxed, as the country squire and scientific farmer. Washington, pleased by young George's interest in the land and enthusiasm for riding, sometimes took him about the farms. But more often George studied with his tutor.

Nelly, with her lively friends and her harpsichord music, helped to dispel his homesickness. Her younger brother, George Washington Curtis, also came home from Princeton for a visit. The family took George to the Fourth of July celebration in Alexandria, and to see "The Federal City" (Washington, D. C.), then under construction.

Later young Lafayette saw the nation pay homage to Washington in a great celebration of his birthday and on his retirement from the presidency in March, 1797. Washington's return to Virginia that April became a series of triumphal processions, the last of which escorted him to the very door of Mount Vernon.

Though "Farmer Washington" and his family had hardly a room to sit in without "the music of hammers and the odor . . . of paint," they received a steady stream of visitors. Most welcome was John Marshall who stayed overnight in June, en route to France on a special diplomatic mission. Young Lafayette was delighted to learn that Marshall carried more letters again urging his father's release.

Finally, in October, 1797, came the wonderful news for which they had waited so long. Lafayette was free!

George was beside himself with joy and impatient to be off to rejoin his family. Sharing his joy, Washington accompanied him as far as the Federal City, gave him $300 for travel expenses, and sent a warm letter to his father.

"The conduct of your son has been well worthy (of) such parents. . . ." Washington wrote. "He has won the affection and confidence of all. . . ." He commended the tutor highly also.

More than once young George wrote affectionate thanks to his famous foster parents. In their tender care, he said, he had been as happy as he could possibly be in any family other than his own.

Evidence that he enjoyed his stay in America was his return in 1824 for his father's triumphal tour of sixteen months. Though Washington was no longer living, a trio of Washington's nephews received the Lafayettes at Mount Vernon.

What did the exchange student learn? In the young United States especially personified in Washington, the President and the master of Mount Vernon, Lafayette had observed responsible democracy in action. (Though his military and political advancement was frustrated by Napoleon, he worked for the return of constitutional monarchy to France and his sons later served as senators in a more representative government.)

Equitable Gas Seeks Rate Cut

PITTSBURGH — A major Western Pennsylvania natural gas company said Friday it has filed a $76,000 annual rate reduction with the Public Utility Commission.

Equitable Gas Company said the action would cut rates for 240,000 customers in the counties of Allegheny, Armstrong, Greene, Washington and Westmoreland.

The reduction, which would take effect April 15, was brought about by a slight cut in rates by one of Equitable's major suppliers, Tennessee Gas Transmission Company.

General Norstad To Crown Apple Blossom Queen

General Lauris Norstad, retired Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, one of the country's leading military figures in World War II and the years following, will be in Winchester, Va., Thursday, May 2, to crown Miss Brooke Randolph Farland as Queen Shenandoah XXXVI. The coronation ceremony for Miss Farland, 20-year-old daughter of the United States Ambassador to Panama, Joseph S. Farland, will take place at the Handley Bowl at three o'clock, officially opening the 36th Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival.

Born the son of a Norwegian Lutheran minister in Minneapolis, Lauris Norstad was reared in Red Wing, Minn. He graduated from West Point in 1930, with a Bachelor of Science degree and a commission as second lieutenant in the Cavalry. Almost immediately, though, he decided to take air training and in September entered Primary Flying School at March Field, Cal. He graduated from Advanced Flying School and transferred to the then Air Corps in June 1931.

In 1942, Norstad was assigned duty in the Europe-Africa area and handled the air planning for the Allies' invasion of North Africa. He went ashore with the U. S. assault forces. His action under shellfire at the first base secured by the Allies in Algeria won him the Silver Star for gallantry. He was then a lieutenant colonel.

Promotions came rapidly for Norstad and his rapid rise continued after the war. When he was only 45 years old, mid-summer of 1952, he became a full general. He was then the youngest man in the United States Armed Forces to wear the four stars.

In 1956, President Eisenhower chose General Norstad to be Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in Western Europe, and the General thus became the first airman to head the 15 nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization. His three predecessors in that capacity were all Army generals.

Among chronic diseases, rheumatism cripples most and kills least.

There is new hope for those with rheumatic and arthritic conditions.

Promise of help for rheumatoid arthritis and kindred disorders includes such old and conservative measures as rest, physical therapy, aspirin, heat and splinting to prevent deformity.

Except as a last resort when other measures fail, the new so-called wonder drugs such as cortisone are not used in cases of arthritis.

Rheumatologists claim that as many as 15 per cent of all persons with rheumatoid arthritis, including the most severe cases, can recover almost completely with proper care.

In extreme cases, patients are given chrysotherapy with gold compound injections which contribute to improvement in rheumatoid arthritis but not to other types of rheumatic disease.

The new treatments call for close supervision by physicians, properly regulated rest and exercise, and judicious splinting.

Also there are self-help devices, home physical therapy, and continued optimistic encouragement from doctors and others.

Rheumatism affecting 10,000,000 persons in this country, is the most common cause of chronic illness, second only to nervous and mental diseases as a cause of disability.

More than 200,000 arthritics are completely disabled and more than half of these are under 45 years of age.

Rehabilitation of the seriously crippled arthritic is receiving increased attention.

DO YOU KNOW?

An endemic disease is one with a low incidence constantly present in a given community, while an epidemic disease is one with a high morbidity, but seen only occasionally in a community.

The Hospital of St. Bartholomew, Rochester, founded in 1078, shortly after the Battle of Hastings, is England's oldest hospital and has functioned continuously since its founding.

Roman Wells Still In Use In Desert Areas

AMMAN, Jordan — When in Jordan you do as the Romans did — at least if you want water.

In a modern tribute to Roman engineering, a California-born construction engineer, Oliver H. Folsom, 53, is rehabilitating Roman wells, cisterns and canals in a U. S. - backed program to bring water to this barren land.

"There is virtually nothing that we could have taught the Romans about the utilization of water supplies," Folsom said. "The policy we are following is one of seeking out and using old Roman waterworks because almost invariably their system was the best way to develop the water and their basic engineering concepts are the equal of anything we have to offer today."

The "we" referred to is the Jordan Central Water authority, a government department designed to find and exploit Jordan's scanty water resources.

Although technically a member of the U. S. foreign air service, Folsom has been assigned to the Jordanian government to head the department and is, in effect, one of the most important ministers in the Jordanian government.

Folsom arrived in Jordan in September, 1960, for a two-year period. In a tribute to his work, Jordanian Prime Minister Wasfi Tel appealed to him to remain "in office" another two years. Folsom agreed.

Beginning his hunt for water in late 1960, and using $350,000 of funds earned through sale of U. S. wheat to Jordan, Folsom has uncovered and restored 50 ancient Roman water systems, mostly in the barren sectors of Jordan.

"In our hunt," said Folsom, "we seek the smallest sign of grass or anything green in the desert. Even a single tuft of bush means that, somewhere near, there is water."

"Almost invariably when we dig down — sometimes several feet — we find Roman remains. Sometimes they have been so wrecked by the passage of years that we cannot use them and we have to build all over again. But, wherever possible, we merely repair and strengthen, and then move on to seek other supplies."
