Col. Feldman Speaker On Memorial Day

Dr. Dusenberry On National Group Of Agriculture

Dr. William Dusenberry, Professor of History and Chairman of the Social Science Department of Waynesburg College, has been re-elected to serve for another year on the Membership Committee of the Agricultural History Society of the United States. The area assigned to Dr. Dusenberry includes Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The Agricultural History Society was founded in 1919, to stimulate interest in, promote the study of, and facilitate research and publication in the history of agriculture. It is incorporated as a nonprofit organization and practically all of its income, which is from membership and subscription fees, is devoted to the publication of its quarterly journal, "Agricultural History". "Agricultural History" has been published since 1927. It is the principal medium for the publication of research on agricultural change in all counties. Historical articles on institutions, organizations, and sciences, which have been factors in agricultural development, are included in the journal.

The Edwards Memorial Awards are offered each year: one for the best article published in "Agricultural History" by a mature scholar, and the other for an article submitted by a student. The Society also offers, in cooperation with the University of Illinois Press, an annual award for the best book-length manuscript in the field of agricultural history. The award is publication by the University of Illinois Press under a standard royalty contract. Dr. Dusenberry was the winner of this award for 1962. His book entitled "The Mexican Mesta: Administration of Ranching in Colonial Mexico", will appear next month.

Membership in the Agricultural History Society is open to anyone interested in agricultural history. Its founders and early members represented many disciplines and currently not only historians, but farmers, economists, geographers, scientists, archivists, and sociologists are among the members.

As We Honor Our Soldier Dead

There is no "Unknown Soldier." Our "Pledge of Allegiance" shows that God knows who he is because it ends: "one nation under God indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Who cares whether his "dog tag" showed his name was Jackson, Murphy, Goldstein or Swoboda! What does it matter whether he was Protestant, Catholic or Jew? Whether his color was black or white?

He fought American; he died American. He was American! He should make you prouder that you are American.

But what of his brothers—by the millions—living in America . . . of every blood, of every color, of every creed?

Are they different because they're alive—is the only true democracy in uniformed death!

Let's put an end to the foul prejudice fanned by our enemies . . . by our obvious and declared enemy of freemen—the Communist totalitarianism . . . and our more insidious and more dangerous one, the unAmerican American!

When you find anyone—yourself—thinking, speaking, acting, with racial or religious prejudice—stop it!

If Jackson, Murphy, Goldstein or Swoboda is good enough to die for us, he's good enough to live with us . . . as an equal . . . as a good American.

This, and this only is the way a Good American can honorably Honor Our Soldier Dead!

Democracy Club Proposed For Cubans

WASHINGTON — A Wisconsin Republican proposed that a school for Cuban refugees be created to train them to form a Democratic government in exile. The government-in-exile could take over as a provisional régime in Cuba when Premier Fidel Castro is ousted, Representative Henry C. Schadeberg said. He said it would serve until a free election was held.

Republicans Push Program For New Wheat Bill

WASHINGTON — Republicans will spearhead a drive, in Congress for a new wheat program to replace the Kennedy plan batted down by the nation's wheat farmers this week.

And despite Administration differences, the G. O. P. has a good chance of success — especially if a deal can be lined up with cotton state Democrats.

Such a deal would mark resurgence of the Republican-Dixiecrat coalition which once ruled Congress, but which has been defeated in recent tests of strength with the President.

Legislators from cotton states badly want a cotton bill, although they do not agree on details. If they can get together with each other, and with farm state Republicans, solid voting blocs would result both in House and Senate for cotton-wheat legislation.

Some Democrats already are lining up with the G. O. P. in favor of a more moderate wheat approach than the tight controls backed by the Kennedy Administration but vetoed by the farmers.

Senator Clinton Anderson, New Mexico Democrat, who was secretary of agriculture under President Truman, is one. He called for a new program to eliminate acreage controls, provide modest price supports and "give the farmers a great deal more freedom of action."

The American Farm Bureau Federation, which is credited with a major role in defeat of the Kennedy wheat plan, has its own bill. This would set supports somewhat lower (at about $1.35) and place heavy emphasis on a soil bank to retire unneeded wheat-producing land.

Most Republicans think the White House will wind up sup-

Dr. Bennett M. Rich, professor of political science at Rutgers College, New Jersey, has been elected president of Waynesburg College, and will assume that office on July first, Joseph W. Ray, Jr., president of the college trustees has announced.

Dr. Rich will succeed Dr. Paul R. Stewart, who has served as president for 42 years, and who will retire from that position on June 30. Dr. Stewart will become chancellor of the college.

Mr. Ray stated that the trustees were pleased with the selection of Dr. Rich and are unanimous in their opinion that he will provide the kind of academic leadership so essential in private liberal arts institutions in our time.

Concerning the selection of the new president, Dr. Stewart said, "I believe that the trustees have made a wise choice in Dr. Bennett Rich. I know I am voicing the opinion of the alumni and professors who knew him that he is one of the most scholarly and learned persons in the alumni body. I remember Bennett Rich as one of the most effective debaters on our championships teams of the late 20s. My prayers and support will be with Dr. Rich."

Dr. Rich became a professor at Rutgers in 1946. He was named first director of the Rutgers Bureau of Government Research at the time of the Bureau's founding in 1950, and served in that capacity for 10 years.

When he left the Bureau in June, 1960, to return to fulltime teaching in the Department of Political Science, Dr. Rich was cited by university president, Mason W. Gross, for having made "an enormous accomplishment" in shaping and developing the program of the Bureau of Government Research into "an instrument of ever-increasing value to every level of government in the State of New Jersey."

A native of Rices Landing, where he was born June 8, 1909, Dr. Rich attended Cumberland Township High School at Carmichaels. He received an A.B. degree from Waynesburg College in 1930, and earned his Master of Arts degree in 1932, and his doctorate in 1941, from the University of Michigan. During 1940-41, he was a University of Michigan-Brookings Fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, D. C.

He was an instructor in political science at the University of Pennsylvania during 1941 and 1942, and went into the Army in 1942. He was separated from service four years later, as a lieutenant colonel in the office of the Provost Marshal General.

Returning to civilian life, Dr.

Solemn 'Taps' Composed by General After Civil War Battle of Malvern

Memorial Day ceremonies all across the nation will close on a common theme — the mournful strains of a bugle blowing "Taps."

This lovely hymn, which is played at each day's ending in military camps and over the graves of dead soldiers, was composed during the Civil War by a cocky young general in the Union Army named Daniel Butterfield. Butterfield, born in Utica, N. Y., in 1831, is characterized by Civil War historian Bruce Catton as a man who had "an unsuspected streak of poetry under his breezy bluster."

When the war began, Butterfield quit his profitable transportation and express business and joined the New York State militia as a colonel. He soon was promoted to the rank of general in charge of a brigade in General George McClelland's Army of the Potomac.

In the early days of our military history, during and after the Revolution, the regulation calls to troops — such as "reveille," "assembly" and "mess call" — were sounded by drums. The term "taps," for the call which meant "lights out," derived its name from the slowly cadenced "tap-tap-tap" drum beat that once was in use.

By Civil War time, however bugle calls had replaced the drums, and General Butterfield exhibited an early interest in bugle music. He noted, for instance that when bivouacking in the open, the bugle calls of other brigades would sometimes be mistaken by his own men as a call to them.

So he invented a little call of his own, which his bugler played before each regulation call, so that his brigade would know it was the Butterfield bugler and not some other.

He was also dissatisfied with the regulation tune for "taps." One evening, early in July, 1862, a few days after the battle of Malvern Hill—one of the earliest and bloodiest Civil War battles—he called the brigade bugler into his tent.

He told the bugler, who must have been somewhat startled at

Plastic Mulcher Promising Labor-Saver

"On viewing transplanter-mulcher, vegetable growers look forward to having their own machines," says K. Q. Stephenson. "Nothing we have done recently has attracted as much attention," E. L. Bergman, adds. The former is an agricultural engineer and the latter a horticulturist at The Pennsylvania State University Agricultural Experiment Station. The assembly, shown above, consists of a conventional transplanter drawn by a tractor and followed by machine, devised by Stephenson and D. H. Bucher, which lays plastic mulch on both sides of the rows and seals the sheets between plants. The mulch prevents weeds from growing in the rows and allows rainfall to enter the soil between them.

Carmichaels Grange Has Area Winners

Carmichaels Grange 1389 was one of several granges in Greene County participating in the National Grange sewing contest this year and three of the entrants were winners.

Miss Ruth E. Kerr won the Class A division which calls for a cotton dress to be made by someone over 18 for self or someone in the same age category; Miss Joyce E. Hoge, of Waynesburg, the winner of Class C, which is for someone over 18 to make a dress for someone under 18.

A contest was held in each subordinate grange prior to May 18, when a county contest was held in East Franklin Grange Hall for the winners of the individual granges.

Two of the contestants from the Carmichaels Grange were also winners at the county level. Both Miss Ruth Kerr and Mrs. Hoge were winners. County winners will send their

Social Security Money Travels

WASHINGTON — That $124 Social Security check each month may not keep a man in many groceries in the United States, but it can put him pretty high on the hog in Italy.

In the United States the per capita income is around $2900 a year. But in Italy, the average man gets along on about $775 a year.

So an income of $1488 a year from U. S. Social Security can enable a retired Italian to live pretty well — better than he could in the U. S.

There are 300,648 such Social Security recipients in Italy collecting checks totalling more than two million dollars a month.

Either they're Americans who retired to Italy, or they are widows or children of Italians who worked in the U. S., or they are Italians who worked in the U. S. and went home to retire.

They are among 126,916 people living abroad who are collecting $8,200,000 a month in Social Security benefits because they, their husbands or fathers, paid into the system.

Payments are made all over the world, except to Iron Curtain countries, where the Social Security Administration says it can't send checks because it can't be sure the recipient will ever get them.

But Iron Curtain countries do not yet include Cuba. As of De-

Turn Garden into Night-Time Fairyland

Time was when a floodlighted garden was found only on a tremendous estate with a crew of gardeners to run the show. Now, with the growth in the number of home owners, with the growth of picture windows, and an interest in gardening, after dark illumination has become an every night reality in modest gardens.

For not only can garden lighting be installed simply these days without a major landscaping upheaval, it also can be done without a major upheaval in the budget. There are numerous portable lighting fixtures available that can be pushed into the soil and connected to a portable outlet device. And so "portable," that some patio designs can go into the family room or den during the winter months.

Simple and beautiful effects can be achieved by the lighting of a well-shaped tree, or a piece of garden statuary, or a flower bed. Place the light at an angle off to one side, or place two lights coming from different angles, converging on the subject. The result is another whole personality for your lawn or garden, when normally it is engulfed in black "nothingness."

Not only does outside wiring give you another "room" to read, relax, and entertain in after dark, but you also have handy electricity for cooking hamburgers, brewing coffee, mowing the lawn, listening to your favorite program, as well as Christmas lighting.

Your guests, too, are not only treated to hidden beauty, they also are free from the hazards of unfamiliar paths and steps that can trip them up after dark.

On the safety score, remember to experiment with placing fixtures only in a dry garden, for dew or any other moisture must be guarded against in handling electrical equipment. Install the equipment first, then connect electricity.

Weatherproof cords and moisture-proof connections are a "must" for temporary and permanent installations alike. The fixtures themselves can be everything from commercially made "tilly pads" and telescoping lights that poke into the ground, to homemade devices that are as simple as an old watering can with a hole cut in one side, and another drilled in the bottom of the cord. They look natural by day, yet become a lamp at night!

WE'VE ADDED 126 TRILLION

Even in today's fantastic world of figures, you'll have to agree that a trillion is a lot of anything. One trillion is a thousand billion. It looks like this: 1,000,000,000,000.

Today, proven reserves of natural gas in the United States are measured in trillions. They have increased to 273 trillion—a record high. In 1946, the proven reserves were 147 trillion. That means 126 trillion cubic feet in new gas reserves have been added.

Every year, more gas is found in the United States than is used. Natural gas is being discovered in new areas and at new depths. And many parts of the United States and North America have not been explored for gas.

These huge proven reserves—which have been growing larger every year—are your assurance that you will have the comfort, convenience and economy of gas for your homes, schools and industry, for many generations to come.

The Flag

Here's to the Red of it—there's not a thread of it, no, not a shred of it from foot to head, but heroes have bled for it, faced steel and lead for it, precious blood shed for it, bathing it Red.

Here's to the White of it—thrilled by the sight of it; who knows the right of it; but feels the might of it through day and night? Womanhood's care for it made manhood dare for it; purity's prayer for it keeps it so White.

Here's to the Blue of it—beautiful view of it, heavenly hue of it, star-spangled and true. States stand supreme for it, diadems gleam for it, liberty's beam for it brightens the Blue.—JOHN J. DALY

Policeman, Banker, Santa Claus

Our national debt has become a national disgrace. The national debt is more than $300 billion and is rising steadily. The national obligation is more than $1.25 trillion. Proposals are now before the Congress which would raise the national debt by nearly $12 billion within a year. Disregarding the cries of those who believe in financial responsibility, the government spenders and welfare state planners are calling for increased deficits which feed the dangerous forces of inflation.

This nation has spent itself into a precarious situation. Only an immediate return to fiscal sanity and financial responsibility can salvage the nation from economic and financial ruin.

A U. S. Senator said: "We have been the policeman, the banker, and the Santa Claus of the free world for more than 15 years. Recent figures showed U. S. foreign aid has totaled more than $100 billion. . . . Meanwhile we are faced with a menacing deficit in the balance of international payments between the United States and nations we have assisted. It has run as high as $4 billion a year. This situation, in combination with domestic deficits which threaten or cause inflation, has resulted in a drain on our gold supply. We have lost 30 per cent of our gold in relatively few years. I emphasize: we have lost 30 per cent of our gold reserves. We are already laboring under a terrible tax burden. It is confiscatory in some areas. Deficits are continuing; and the debt is at a peak never reached even in four years of global war."

This Senator is vitally concerned over the state of our nation's finances. Millions of other people are also disturbed about our debt, our inflation, and our wanton government spending.

A prominent North Carolina business executive recently said, "My father once advised me: Son, if you spend more than you earn you will always be in trouble; but if you always manage to spend less than you earn you will have no financial troubles."

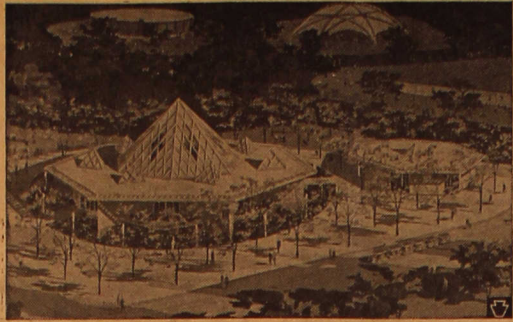

Principles of thrift and fiscal responsibility which apply to individuals can also be applied to cities, states, corporations, or even to nations, despite contrary claims by the planners. Whenever spending outruns income for a long period of time there must come a day of reckoning. When any nation becomes financially insolvent it is a national tragedy, and all the people of the nation suffer. The economy is ruined. The business life of the nation is disrupted. Its currency becomes worthless.

In other words, the United States, like any other debtor, must either pay its debts or be declared financially irresponsible and bankrupt. Our freedom depends on financial solvency.

Another lawmaker, not generally considered among the non-spenders, said in a speech the day after the national debt reached $300 billion:

"That is about $1,600 for every man, woman and child in the country. . . . A per capita debt of $1,600 for every man, woman and child in the country is a serious danger

First Religious Exhibit For World's Fair

The Christian Science Pavilion will be completed on October 14th this year, according to Hobson F. Miller, Chairman of the Committee for that denomination's activities at the New York World's Fair.

It will be the first of any exhibit to be completed at the Fair and was the first religious denomination to sign for a pavilion.

The 3,800 square-foot building was designed by Edward Durell Stone in the form of a seven pointed star, topped by a glass sky dome 35 feet high and will be located in the International Area.

Use will be made of translucent glass to avoid direct sunlight, diffusing daylight throughout the interior. At night, the diamond shaped sky dome will throw a shaft of light into the sky in an even glow.

The Building is designed as a quiet restful spot on the Fair grounds. It will be set in a pool of water 100 feet in diameter. The pool will contain fourteen fountains uniquely illuminated at night from above.

Adjacent to the large exhibit pavilion will be a 1,500 square-foot building which will house a reading room and offices.

signal, and we had better take heed of it, because, as I have said so many times, the greatest defense weapon we have is our domestic economy, and in my judgment it is not in good condition."

The $300 billion is only a relatively small part of the total for which our federal government is committed. Senator Harry Byrd, in reporting to the Senate, placed the figure at a staggering $1.25 trillion. This included $300 billion public debt, other programs and plans to which the government is committed, promises to pay under insurance plans and other contingencies, and moral commitments such as unfunded accrued liabilities of federal trust funds.

Even if one finds it hard to believe that the federal government could have a debt so astounding, it must be remembered that there are other types of debt hanging over the people of this nation. To the federal treasury debt a $300 billion must be added $75 billion in debts of state and local governments, $307 billion in private debt, and $380 billion in corporate debt.

These figures add up to the fact that our United States is in trouble which will be very difficult to resolve.

What do the planners in Washington offer? They propose continuation of our spending programs, expansion of welfare statism which is responsible for much of our difficulty, and other policies which can only plunge us deeper into debt.

Some observers say our huge defense budget has been primarily responsible for our financial dilemma. It is true that our security needs have caused heavy expenditures, but the New Jersey Taxpayers Association sheds light on defense spending since 1955: "Budget expenditures for civil benefits and services have moved upward faster (67 per cent) than those for defense (30 per cent), reflecting expanding service and benefit programs."

It seems that present political philosophy holds that it is okay to cut spending in other states, but that none of the pork barrel legislation must be cut here at home. With debts in excess of a trillion dollars staring us in the face, we cannot afford pork barrel legislation or waste of tax money in any form.

The idea recently advanced by the administration for a tax cut to speed up the economy is good. The plan advanced to hold internal federal spending at present levels is to be commended if the government will carry it out. But we cannot enjoy the luxury of a tax cut and our present level of spending without increasing our debt.

We need to do these things, but in a different order. The first order of business must be to cut government expenditures. A study of our maze of bureaus and administrations will show many ways in which tax money could be saved. Government could get out of business in fields which can be served by private enterprise.

The second major objective must be to reduce the national debt. It must be brought down to a manageable level. After expenditures have been cut, and after the reduction of the national debt is under way, then we can afford a tax cut. We need the tax cut, but we simply cannot afford it while our finances are in such a precarious position.

As things stand now, we will bequeath the burden of a debt of staggering proportions to future generations. In the days to come, this debt must either be paid or repudiated. It would be an immoral act to repudiate it and to bring down on the nation the ruin which such an act would cause. It is equally immoral to expect unborn generations to pay our debts.

We must accept our financial responsibilities. It does not matter if there are days of austerity and hardship involved. Most Americans have the integrity and the courage to face their responsibilities and discharge their financial obligations as men worthy of our great heritage.

Martin Dies' New Book

In his autobiography, Martin Dies' Story, the former chairman of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities (Dies Committee), recounts seven years of battling the communist conspiracy under trying and frustrating conditions.

This illuminating, 283-page hard-cover book begins with a warning by the former lawmaker that much of what he learned of external and internal dangers to the United States is still not known. And there lies the author's purpose. As he puts it, ". . . the time has come when the story I know so well needs to be told."

Mr. Dies recalls the "colossal blunder" of the United States in recognizing Soviet Russia as a nation in 1933, Soviet Russia's subsequent violation of the recognition agreement, and her systematic annihilation of foes since then. He puts the number of victims at no less than 60 million within the last 45 years.

In writing about the communist conspiracy, Mr. Dies considers the advance it made during the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt. FDR's relations with the Dies committee receive much of the author's attention. "When the Dies Committee began operations (exposing communism rather than fascism as proposed by the administration), the majority of the administration, following the President's lead, were frankly, openly and actively hostile." Mr. Dies quotes Benjamin Gitlow, a founder of the American Communist Party, and author of, The Whole of Their Lives:

"The New Deal crowd were like innocent babes, who had a distorted and altogether wrong conception of Communists and Communist politics. The pro-Soviet New Deal crowd, from President Roosevelt down to the little bureaucrats . . . accepted the Communists as honest idealists who were concerned primarily with the interests of the common people."

Mr. Dies also charges that vital communist records in possession of the government were destroyed "after it was learned that the Dies Committee was determined to conduct a full scale investigation of Communism."

Other intriguing subject in Martin Dies' Story includes the failure of the Attorney General's office to deal with numerous cases involving subversive affiliation of federal employees; the pardon of communist Earl Browder who had been convicted of falsifying his passport; and Gen. Walter G. Krivitsky, a Soviet official under Stalin, who was found "a suicide" just before he was to bring shocking evidence of the communist conspiracy before the Dies Committee.

Well documented, the Martin Dies' Story includes an index of subjects, a 50-page appendix, and numerous exhibits. Price $5.00. Order from 620 Eleventh Street, N. W., Washington, 1, D. C.

And at the same address for only $2.00, order "The Fringe On Top."

This is an expose of our own United States Senator Clark, with his ramifications with "Americans for Democratic Action," whose membership he has bitterly denied.

being summoned before the general, what he had in mind. He whistled his version of the "new taps" and had the bugler try it out, then and there.

It was apparently a fairly long session, with the general whistling variations and fiddling around with the little melody, and the bugler trying out the different versions. At last General Butterfield was satisfied and the brigade bugler wrote down the notes on the back of an envelope, to be used thereafter.

Other buglers in the Army of the Potomac were enchanted by the Butterfield "taps" and picked it up. Soon, it was in general use in the eastern theater of the war, and later was taken out west to the soldiers of Generals Grant and Sherman. By the end of the Civil War, it was being heard throughout the Union Army.

Composer Butterfield went on to play a distinguished part in the war. He served as chief of staff to both Hooker at Chancellorsville and Meade at Gettysburg. He became a division commander in the West and took part in Sherman's famous "March to the Sea."

He left the Army in 1870 and returned to business. He died at the age of 69 in 1901 and is buried in an elaborate marble tomb in the cemetery at the United States Military Academy at West Point, where his haunting composition is played every day.

MEMORY LANE

Memorial Day

Remember when only veterans wearing blue or gray uniforms marched down Main Street? Later, as their ranks thinned, younger men in trim khaki joined them. Today the brave lads of Civil War days are missing. Nevertheless, we can never forget them, nor their sons and grandsons who, when needed, answered their country's call. Remember?

Our aid and friendly counsel are available at all times. A phone call will bring you the help you need.

Your Health

Pennsylvania Medical Society

A patient's headache is a common disorder that can be frustrating to the physician.

Because a headache is a symptom and not a disease, the physician must diligently search to find the cause.

He makes a physical examination, and asks many questions.

He seeks information regarding the character, time and manner of onset, duration, and frequency of the headache attacks.

Also, he wants to know what triggers, aggravates, or relieves the headache.

There may be associated symptoms having to do with the eye, ears, nose, or larynx, the central nervous system or the gastrointestinal tract.

Has there been evidence of fever infection, high blood pressure, or indication of cancer?

Possibly there has been an injury or exposure to some poisonous substance.

The physician needs to know about his patient's personal history, background, weaknesses, habits, attitudes and general circumstances.

A concern to the physician diagnosing the cause of a headache is the history of drug taking.

What has the patient taken in the form of drugs, how much, how long, in what manner, and with what results?

Treatment of a headache of organic cause is directed toward the basic disorder.

With no organic cause apparent, certain medications can relieve, while the cause remains a problem to be solved.

DO YOU KNOW?

Of every six persons who get cancer today, two will be saved and a third might have been saved if proper treatment had been received in time.

U. S. Facing Shortage Of Clean Water

WASHINGTON — Congress was told Friday that the nation faces an approaching water pollution crisis that could affect the health and well being of every man, woman and child in the country.

"It will be a crisis brought about not through any actual shortage of water itself, but through a shortage of clean water," said Assistant Secretary of Health James M. Quigley.

Quigley testified before a House government operations subcommittee in place of Secretary of Health Anthony J. Celebrezze, who was called to a cabinet meeting.

Chairman Robert E. Jones, Democrat, Alabama, said the subcommittee would conduct several weeks of hearings that would be called "the most desperate single resource problem facing the nation."

Jones said the constantly increasing population and urbanizing of the nation could make the water pollution problem overwhelming if a comprehensive plan is not developed to meet it.

Quigley outlined a four-point program of federal grants for sewage treatment plants, research and development of better treatment methods, enforcement of anti-pollution laws and comprehensive planning and studies of pollution problems.

"Things are going to get worse before they get better," Quigley said.

'Old Red Pine' Felled at Age 363

CRIVITZ, Wis. — "Old Red Pine," designated by the American Forestry Association as the largest Norway pine tree in the world, has been cut down.

The 10-story-high tree was toppled recently after the association said it was dying.

The 363-year-old tree, 8-feet 10-inches in circumference, had survived lightning, rifle fire and the Peshtigo fire which ravaged six northeastern Wisconsin counties in 1871.

It is expected to yield 1760 board feet of lumber.

Man First Flew 180 Years Ago

NEW YORK — Man's first flight took place 180 years ago when Francois Pilatre de Rozier and the Marquis d'Arlandes made a balloon voyage off the rooftops of Paris on Nov. 21, 1783.

The two were aloft for two hours and 10 minutes, traveled six miles and attained an altitude of more than 3,000 feet.

Cool Weather Lovers

Larkspurs are one of the annuals that grow best when the weather is cool, even cold. That's the reason their seeds should be sown just as early in the spring as it's possible to do so. It even may be better to sow on soil that hasn't been prepared than to wait for weather which permits tilling.

Certainly larkspurs are among the most beautiful of annual flowers. Their long spikes of bloom in deep or sky blue, pink, red, salmon or white give a lift to the late spring or early summer garden. They are exceptionally good cut flowers and, even when there isn't a bud in sight, the dark green, finely cut foliage is a pretty sight.

Fruitmen Test Tree Shaker

GAINESVILLE, Fla.—There's nothing new about shaking a tree to remove fruit, but scientists have added a new touch—a giant specially-built machine to do the shaking.

The Florida Agricultural Experiment station is making tests in cooperation with the citrus industry to determine if this method is feasible.

The frequency of shaking the tree, the stroke used, the amount of shaking time and the angle of attachment of the shaker to the limb are all being studied.

Moe Scary to Direct Athletics At Waynesburg College, Also Coach

Michael (Moe) Scary is returning to Waynesburg College, Scary, line coach of the University of Cincinnati Bearcats for the past seven years, has been named athletic director, football coach, and basketball coach of the Yellow Jackets.

"I am thrilled to come back to Waynesburg," the former Orange and Black star said. "It is a challenge and an opportunity for me. I am looking forward to serving the school and the community."

Scary will be no stranger to Yellow Jacket sports fans. He played football and basketball for three years (39-40 to 41-42) under the legendary Frank N. Wolf.

Wolf was closing his grid career at that time. Waynesburg was 6-2-1 in 1939, 4-3-1 in 1940, and 4-4-1 in 1941 as Wolf finished his grid coaching with the Yellow Jackets.

Baseball—from a won-lost standpoint—was similar to football during those three years. Wolf's 1939-40 team was 15-6, 1940-41 was 11-10, and 1941-42 was 10-10.

Scary went into the service mid-way through the 1941-42 cage campaign. Moe played center and line-backer in the grid sport and was a guard in the cage game.

Waynesburg will be Scary's sixth coaching stop. He did his first coaching at Western Reserve handling basketball (1946-50) and football (1948-49) at the Cleveland school. He was basketball coach from 1950-52 at Santa Clara College, Calif., and football coach in 1953 at Loris College, Dubuque, Iowa. Scary was line coach from 1954-55 at Washington State University. Moe played pro football with the Cleveland Rams (1944-45) and with the Cleveland Browns (1946-47). Scary was captain of the Rams in 1945 and was defensive line coach for the College All-Stars in 1960.

Scary graduated from Duquesne High School in 1938 and received his B. S. degree from Western Reserve in 1947. He served in the U. S. Army (infantry) from 1942-44.

He is married to the former Elizabeth Sears of Moundsville, W. Va., and they are the parents of eight children. They have five sons and three daughters.

Mellon Gives Ski Resort to State As Public Park

Laurel Mountain Slopes, one of Pennsylvania's outstanding skiing facilities, has been turned over to the State by the Mellon family for a token rental of $1 a year.

The ski area is located approximately 12 miles east of Ligonier, on Route 30 in Westmoreland County.

Although neither the State nor Richard King Mellon and his sister, Mrs. Alan M. Scaife, owners of the Laurel Mountain Slopes Company, announced a figure, it is believed the value of the land, equipment and buildings is in excess of $1,250,000.

Governor William W. Scranton said the slopes will be operated by the Commonwealth under a long-term lease agreement with the company.

The announcement did not disclose the amount of land figuring in the transaction but is believed to be between 500 and 750 acres. The ultimate total of acreage will depend upon the amount needed by the State for future development of the area for skiing.

Governor Scranton commended General Mellon and Mrs. Scaife for "their unusual display of civic responsibility in entering into this agreement."

The slopes attract skiers from a 200-mile radius. Skiers from as widely-scattered points as Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Toledo and Cincinnati visit the slopes.

There are 16 slopes and trails, the longest being 4,400 feet.

Rural Housing Loans Available

Families living in small rural communities and in rural areas, even though not engaged in farming may be eligible for the housing loans by the Farmers Home Administration, according to Robert J. McNeely, the agency's county supervisor for Washington, Greene, and Fayette counties. Mr. McNeely said owners of non-farm tracts in rural areas and in small rural communities of not more than 2,500, as well as farmers, may be eligible for this type of credit.

This program is an important tool in promoting the development of rural areas. Rural housing loans will not only help families obtain better homes, but will put more carpenters, plumbers, and electricians to work, and will increase the sales in lumber yards and building supply firms.

Housing loans are made for the construction, repair, and remodeling of dwellings and essential farm buildings and to provide water for farmstead and household use. In addition to major construction, funds are available to modernize homes—add bathrooms, central heating, modern kitchens, and other home improvements, as well as to enlarge and remodel farm service buildings and put in related facilities, such as paved feed lots, yard fences, and driveways.

The interest rate is four percent per year on the unpaid balance of the loan. Loans may be scheduled for repayment over periods up to 33 years. The proposed housing must be adequate to meet the family's needs, yet modest in size and design.

To be eligible an applicant must own a farm or a housing site in a rural area; be without decent, safe and sanitary housing; be unable to obtain the needed credit from other sources, and be without sufficient resources to provide the necessary housing on his own account. He must also have or be able to obtain sufficient income to meet payments on existing debts, take care of his other expenses, and make the payments on the proposed loan.

The local county or area committee of the Farmers Home Administration determines the eligibility of applicants.

Farmers, who need to enlarge or develop their farming operations in order to obtain enough income to pay for housing loans, may obtain farm enlargement and development loans and farm management help from the Farmers Home Administration.

Rural families, who need emergency housing repairs and do not have the ability to repay a loan, may be able to obtain small grants for such purposes as repairing a roof, screening windows, and providing a sanitary supply of water.

All loans are secured to the extent necessary to protect the government's interest. Small improvement loans made in amounts of less than $1,500 with repayments scheduled over periods up to 10 years may be secured by a promissory note. Other loans are secured by mortgages.

Further information on rural housing loans may be obtained at the county office of the Farmers Home Administration located at 67 West Cherry Avenue, Washington, Penna.

Plymouth Acts To Keep Papers Of Francis Drake

LONDON—The Plymouth City Council is trying to prevent an historical document concerning Sir Francis Drake from going to the United States.

"The Plymouth City Council has lodged an objection to the issue of an export license," said a spokesman for Sotherby's Auction House. "This could prevent the document going to America."

H. P. Krause of New Rochelle, N. Y., bought the Drake documents for 3,600 pounds, $10,080, at Sotherby's this week. Krause, regarded as one of the world's most important book dealers, outbid the city of Plymouth.

The document is a well preserved letters patent from Queen Elizabeth I to Drake commissioning him to make the voyage in 1587 during which he raided Cadiz and sank and burned 33 Spanish ships.

Plymouth's protest will go to a national committee. If the committee decides the document is of national interest to Britain, it can give the Plymouth City Council three months to match the American's bid and buy the document.

A spokesman said Plymouth officials were optimistic that the money could be raised—or appropriated.

"Of course," the spokesman added, "the committee will have to decide in our favor."

Youthful Farmers

NEW YORK — Contrary to popular impression, farming is not becoming an old man's business, according to the Institute of Life Insurance. Analyzing Federal Reserve studies, the institute found younger people are moving into farming in about the same proportion as other businesses.

OFF AND RUNNING by John I. Day Equine "Couch" Cases

If horses could talk, there would be a much closer relation between past performance and racing consistency. Horses too have phobias, "Monday morning blues" and other mental quirks which in many cases account for apparent form reversals. The late, great Calumet Farm trainer, Ben Jones, once had a filly who was "off her feed", fretting in her stall, and not running to expectation. Jones pondered, determined she was lonesome and had a window cut in her stall so that she could see her neighbor. She calmed down and proved a winner. At Sunland Park last winter, a horse named Deep Velvet suddenly popped down with a 7-length victory. It developed that his trainer had figured out that Deep Velvet had been "listening instead of running" so he plugged his ears with cotton and applied ear nets, which are used as a protection against flies. The good race mare Geechee Lou, a terror in the starting gate, reacted well to strong, if unprintable, language by the assistant starter, but usually had to be blindfolded before she'd enter the starting stall. One might think that a horse retired from racing to the pampered life of a stallion would be happy, but at Ed Benedict's Tilly Foster Farm in New York, Sid's Gambol fretted and lost weight until given a goat companion and a mirror on the wall of his stall.
