Postal 'Zip-Code' Starts July 1, Speeds Delivery

The five-digit postal "zip-code" to speed mail delivery goes into effect Monday, July first. The new code is also presumed to reduce likelihood of loss of mail.

Residents are urged by the postal authorities to remember their code number and to use it on all correspondence. The number should follow the name of the city and state.

Address on mail must often be read eight or 10 times by postal employees before it reaches its destination and each handling slows it down.

The "zip-code" is designed so that a postal employee needs only to glance at the numbers in order to speed mail on its way. It is hoped that the code may in most cases cut 24 hours off the time between when mail is deposited and the time of delivery.

"Zip-code" numbers for Greene County are:

Aleppo, 15310; Bobtown, 15315; Brave, 15316; Carmichaels, 15320; Clarksville, 15322; Crucible, 15325; Davistown, 15326; Dilliner, 15327; Dunkard, 15328; Garards Fort, 15334; Garrison, 15335; Graysville, 15337; Greensboro, 15338; Jefferson, 15344; Mather, 15346; Mt. Morris, 15349; Nema-colin, 15351; New Freeport, 15352; Nineveh, 15353; Pine Bank, 15354; Poland Mines, 15355; Rices Landing, 15357; Rogersville, 15359; Spraggs, 15362; Sycamore, 15364; Waynesburg, 15370; Wind Ridge, 15380.

Memorial Hospital In Annual Session; Trustees Named

At the annual meeting of Greene County Memorial Hospital Corporation Friday afternoon, Fred T. Gillogly, who was appointed to the board of trustees several months ago to fill a vacancy, was elected to a five-year term.

Also elected for five years were William E. Meighen of Waynesburg, R. D. 2, and Rayfield Honsaker of Carmichaels. They succeeded Russell McKee and Harry Rothenberg, both of Waynesburg, whose terms have expired.

Maurice Pincus of Waynesburg, was named to serve two years remaining of the term of Kenneth Headlee of Waynesburg, who recently resigned.

At a board meeting held Friday evening Miss Catherine Sayers of Waynesburg, was elected vice chairman, and Karl M. Baily of Carmichaels, was named treasurer.

Eugene Strosser, administrator, and James Brown, assistant, gave reports.

Mr. Strosser announced the new nursing wing will be ready for use on July 7. This 28-bed wing is exclusively for county patients now in Curry Memorial Home. They will be moved there in order to allow the Curry Home remodeling plan to begin.

Both men stated the biggest financial drain on the hospital continues to be the cost of caring for charity patients. During the past year, they said, this cost exceeded by $21,676 the total amount returned to the hospital in the form of assistance from the state and county.

The Greene County Tuberculosis and Health Society made a gift of an inhalator therapy machine to the hospital. This piece of major equipment is for use in respiratory cases.

Her father served three years with the Union Army and was imprisoned at Richmond, Va., for three months.

Equality

Its True Meaning For All

Our Declaration of Independence begins with memorable words: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights . . ."

Every one of us have heard these words, and most of us know them by heart. But do we really understand what is meant by that splendid phrase, "All men are created equal"?

To say that "all men are created equal" is not the same as saying "all men are born equal." It certainly is not the same as saying "all men ought to be equal in everything they have and in everything they do." None of these variations could be called a self-evident truth. We know that men are not born equal, and we know that men are not equal naturally in what they have and do; they can be made to appear so only by the use of force. What then is the true meaning of "created equal"?

"Created equal" refers to the rights of the individual, to the dignity of every human being as a person. To say that men are created equal is to say they are forever equal before the bar of justice, the law of man and the law of God. Each is a human being; each is a person. Each can justly claim the right to his own life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness.

There is a great difference between the theory that every man begins life with certain inalienable rights, and the theory that man should be made equal and kept equal in everything he does with his life. Equality in rights guarantee freedom; but equality in status and achievement can be brought about only by tyranny. The only people truly equal in the sense of being made and kept equal are slaves! Their status is permanent. They cannot rise above it or fall below it. They begin where they end, in bondage to the will of others, with no property and no rights. They are certainly equal. But they are not free.

It is vitally important that we understand the kind of twisted thinking which tries to persuade us that the Declaration of Independence really meant "slave" equality. This line of thought also urges that we ought to be working toward that goal with all the "social vision" we can muster and all the restrictive laws we can pass.

Very few people actually want to be equal in every way to everyone else, doing just as they do, living just as they live, with no personal choice or variation at all. But this is a goal which too many of our modern soothsayers are telling us we ought to want. Somehow it is supposed to be our duty to bring everybody else up to our standard. If we do not, we are told we are selfish and do not believe in human equality.

We won all that we have here in America through honest endeavor. Our duty is to see that every one of our citizens has the same chance we had. Beyond that, we owe nothing.

Man is entitled to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. He is not automatically entitled to a large income. He must earn that for himself. To take another's earnings by force is unjust and punishable. The fact that the thief might plead that he only (Please turn to Page Four)

U. S. Would Risk Its All for Allies, Kennedy Pledges

President Kennedy in Frankfurt, Germany on Tuesday called for renewed effort to expand and preserve the Atlantic Alliance and pledged the risk of American cities to nuclear holocaust in defense of Europe.

It was a day of high personal triumph for the American President as nearly a million Germans turned out to see him in his flight to Frankfurt from a military base at Hanau.

On Wednesday, Mr. Kennedy spent seven hours in West Berlin. He visited the Brandenburg Gate, entrance to East Berlin, and then went to "Check Point Charlie", in the American sector.

Going to Berlin, the President drove over 110 miles of Soviet occupied territory.

Mr. Kennedy will spend the next three days in County Wexford, Ireland, where his grandfather lived in the town of Ross before coming to America. He will be greeted by relatives limited to third cousins. Otherwise, Mr. Kennedy might shake hands with relatives for a week, before going to England to confer with British Prime Minister Harold MacMillan.

Resident Sums Up Our World Today

The following comment on our present day living was dictated by Mrs. Nora Summersgill High, well known Waynesburg resident, on June 15, to her daughter, Edna High Crittenden. Mrs. High who is 91 years and eight months, is seriously ill in her home.

The comment:
"On June 30, 1892, seventy-one years ago, I was graduated from Waynesburg College.

"At that time we had an old professor who was always talking about the split atom and what a wonderful world we would have in which to live when scientists would be able to split the atom.

'Let Freedom Ring' Urges Gov. Scranton

Scranton Favors Relief-Work Bill, Job Retraining

HARRISBURG—Both Governor Scranton and Public Welfare Secretary Arlin M. Adams favor a work-relief bill "in principle," which passed the House last week and is pending in the Senate.

It requires able-bodied men and women on relief to work out all or part of their grants on public tax-supported projects.

It was sponsored by Representative Karl H. Purnell, Mifflinburg Republican.

"I am in favor of the purposes which the bill seeks to accomplish," Mr. Scranton said.

Secretary Adams commented: "No able-bodied person able to work should be on the relief rolls without having an opportunity to retrain for whatever jobs are available.

"If no such retraining is immediately available, the unemployed on public assistance should be assigned to public works projects as a means of retaining the work habit and their self respect.

"I fully endorse the principles contained in the Purnell bill."

The measure provides for appointment of an administrator in Harrisburg whose job it would be to promote public work relief projects out through the State and see that relievers are assigned.

The Department of Public Welfare explained that if an able-bodied reliever was assigned to a public project and refused to work, his relief check could be cut off.

Opponents of the Purnell bill contend that its administration and enforcement would be difficult and that it would cost more than the value of the work done for relief grants.

Work relief is not new in Pennsylvania. Such a program has been in effect for 24 years with spotty results.

Latest figures show that in this period, 4495 projects have been started and that relief clients have worked for $33,899,799 of the money paid them.

Under the 24-year-old State program, people on relief could be assigned to either private or public work—but the Federal law now prohibits assignment to private jobs.

He has served as pastor of churches at Rising Sun, Ind.; Luray, Ind.; Yarmouth, Maine, and Jackman, Maine. Rev. McCormick has been active in youth work in the Indiana district.

Mrs. McCormick is a native of Augusta, Maine, and is an experienced children's worker. They have two children, Sharolyn, a junior in high school, and Stanford, a student in the seventh grade.

U. S., Pa. Flags Exempt in Tax

HARRISBURG—The flags of the United States and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania are specifically exempt from the state's five per cent sales tax.

The state sales tax bureau said today the exclusion is covered by section 203-X of the 1963 sales tax act.

The bureau's statement was made to clarify confusion that apparently exists among some merchants.

Governor William W. Scranton, in a memorandum to all Pennsylvania mayors, has requested cooperation in promoting the Fourth of July "Let Freedom Ring" bell-ringing celebration.

The Governor this week sent each mayor a copy of his proclamation of "Let Freedom Ring" Day, issued in accordance with a resolution by the State Senate.

The resolution stipulated that the Governor enlist the aid of local officials and civic organizations in surveying every city, borough, town and hamlet in the Commonwealth to discover all available bells, and arranging to have them ring at two o'clock Eastern Daylight Time, July 4, in cooperation with the nationwide project.

At the appointed hour, radio and television stations will carry the "Freedom Bell Ringing" from Independence Hall, Philadelphia, followed by a reading of the Declaration of Independence.

The plan, originated by writers Eric Hatch and Eric Sloane, New Englanders, with a life-long interest in the American heritage who wanted to renew the custom of bell-ringing on July 4, is designed to revive a practice which prevailed on the first Independence Day and was popular in the early years of our nation's history.

E. Bryan Jacobs of Waynesburg, exalted ruler of Lodge 757, B. P. O. Elks has appealed to all citizens of Greene County to display the flag and to join in the nationwide celebration with simultaneous ringing of bells and other appropriate expressions of approval and gratitude for the courageous action of Our Fathers at Independence Hall, July 4, 1776.

All were reelected but Mr. Atalski, who was named to a newly-created third vice presidency.

pray...

Simple words punctuate the greatness of America.

"All men are created equal."
 "... of the people, by the people, for the people ..."
 "God, who gave us life, gave us Liberty."
 "We have nothing to fear—but fear itself."
 "Let us pray..."

In the simple words of prayer, in the respected ritual of worship, in the wise counsel of the man who leads each congregation there is some private, personal meaning for each person who listens.

On these words you can build your Faith—a Faith that can be as deep and strong and satisfying as you will work to make it.

Faith can offer new strength to everyone—especially to you alone.

Homes Abound with Potential Poisons, A. M. A. Official Warns

Children, supposedly "safe at home," are poisoning themselves at the rate of nearly 1,500 a day.

"When you consider that more than a quarter million home-used products on the market contain toxins, it is not difficult to understand why more than 500 children die each year from self-administered poisons," said F. J. L. Blasingame, M. D., executive vice-president of the American Medical Association.

Children are naturally curious, especially the very young ones. They are prone to stick into their mouths anything they can get in their hands. It doesn't even have to taste good or look pretty.

Most accidental poisonings occur in children under five. Two-year-olds are the most prone, with one-year-olds close behind. At this stage in life their curiosity is at its height and their sense of fear not yet developed, Dr. Blasingame explained.

Medicine, especially aspirin, heads the list of items children seem to like to sample, accounting for nearly half of all accidental poisonings. In fact, too much of virtually any medicine can produce serious consequences.

Among the supposed non-edibles that frequently find their way into children's stomachs are cleaning and polishing agents, detergents, shoe polish, cosmetics, waxes, insecticides, paint, turpentine, chalk, bleaches, plant foods, plaster, perfume and decorations.

A primary cause of such accidents, says Dr. Blasingame, is storing poisonous substances in food containers or soft drink bottles. A toddler just naturally assumes that a soft drink bottle contains a treat. He'll drink whatever he finds in it.

"The facts are clear," he warned. "Between 65 and 70 per cent of all poisonings take place because an item was accessible to a child."

"If we're going to live in modern homes with modern conveniences and modern medicines, we have to develop some up-to-date standards that will make home safe for our children."

Among suggestions for lessening the poisoning hazards in the home, Dr. Blasingame suggested:

- Keep potential poisons out of reach and tightly sealed.
 - Never transfer toxic materials into household utensils.
 - Don't leave your child alone in a room in which you're working with poisons.
 - Give medicines only in a lighted room.
- If your child might have taken a poisonous substance, call your doctor for instructions at once. Don't wait to see what happens.

Special Subcommittee Reports on Cuba And Subversion in South America

Speech by HONORABLE JAMES F. BATTIN OF MONTANA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Monday, May 20, 1963

MR. BATTIN: Mr. Speaker, the following report speaks for itself.

The committee is composed of the following: Representative James F. Battin, Montana, chairman; Representative William C. Cramer, Florida, vice chairman; Representative E. Ross Adair, Indiana; Representative John M. Ashbrook, Ohio; Representative Edward J. Derwinski, Illinois; Representative Samuel L. Devine, Ohio; Representative Durward G. Hall, Missouri; Representative Clark MacGregor, Minnesota; Representative Garner E. Shriver, Kansas; and William B. Prendergast, Ph. D., research.

Today is the 61st anniversary of Cuban independence. The recently issued interim report of the Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on the Armed Services dealing with the Cuban military buildup throws light on hitherto obscure aspects of the Cuban situation during the summer and fall of 1962. Consequently, this unanimous report of a subcommittee composed of four Democrats and three Republicans is an important first step toward better understanding of the background of American policy during that crucial period. Its appraisal of past errors and present dangers sounds an emphatic warning to those responsible for formulating policy toward Cuba.

IMPORTANT FINDINGS OF THE REPORT

In reviewing past policy, the subcommittee found that a "credible" job was done in collecting information about the military buildup in Cuba by what it calls the "intelligence community," but that "several substantial errors were made in the evaluation of information." Among such errors were the following:

- The number of Soviet troops in Cuba was substantially underestimated. * * *
- Indications that strategic missiles were being installed were not given proper weight. * * *
- There also appeared to be a tendency * * * to discredit and downgrade refugee and exile reports.
- The analysts were strongly influenced by their philosophical judgment that it would be contrary to Soviet policy to introduce strategic missiles into Cuba.

DISTURBING WARNINGS

The subcommittee has unanimously reported "great concern" and "grave apprehension" about reports that "strategic missiles and bombers were not removed from Cuba but are concealed in caves and otherwise." It noted that the evidence Government spokesmen rely on when they give categorical assurances that all such weapons have been removed from Cuba is the same kind of evidence which led these same spokesmen to assert prior to last October 14 that no "offensive weapons" had been brought into Cuba. In the words of the subcommittee, it is largely "the negative evidence that there is no affirmative proof to the contrary."

On the matter of the Soviet presence in Cuba, the subcommittee reported a lack of confidence within the intelligence community in their own estimates of foreign troops in Cuba. It flatly declared, "No one—outside of Soviet and Cuban official circles—knows how many Russian troops are there now." It found that the amount of Russian military equipment known to be in Cuba suggests that the current official estimate of 17,500 is too low.

One of the most disturbing statements made by the subcommittee is the assertion that "the intelligence community does not believe it yet has sufficient concrete evidence to estimate any reduction in overall Soviet military capability on the island."

Perhaps the most valuable part of the subcommittee's report is the enumeration of 11 considerations that lead it to conclude that Cuba now represents a grave threat to our national security. This is a needed antidote to the plethora of statements from official and unofficial spokesmen of the administration designed to minimize, and divert attention from, the seriousness of the Cuban problem.

We hope that these words of the subcommittee's report — again the unanimous judgment of its members — will be heard throughout the land: The matter of basic and fundamental importance . . . and the source of the real threat, is that international communism now has a firm foothold in this hemisphere and that, if we permit it to do so, it is here to stay.

By [a] process of erosion our neighbors to the south may fall nation by nation until the entire hemisphere is lost and the Communist goal of isolating the United States has been attained.

SOME IMPLICATIONS OF THE REPORT

The report has three important implications which seem to us inescapable. The first is that administration spokesmen have been guilty of misinforming the public about Cuba. In bringing this fact to light, the subcommittee has rendered a valuable service in unmanaging the news.

The second implication is that a change in the intelligence process is required. A system under which they fail to jibe with a preconceived theory of how the Soviet Union is going to behave under which the limitations of aerial photography seem not to be recognized, and under which the customary military practice in evaluating intelligence is reversed imposes a dangerous myopia on intelligence agencies.

The third implication of the report is that a change of policy toward Cuba is urgently needed. Putting ourselves on the back for the "victory" of last October, putting a stop to Cuban exile raids, issuing optimistic statements about the cost of the Soviet operation in Cuba, and hopefully waiting for Castro's downfall are not enough.

THE PUBLIC MISINFORMATION PROGRAM

In the appendix to this report are listed a few instances of misinformation from responsible administration spokesmen on the subject of Cuba. There, in parallel columns, will be found statements of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee side by side with conflicting pronouncements of administration officials.

We are content simply to present the facts in this matter without speculating about the administration's motives in these instances. But we do feel most strongly that misinforming the public about the nature and the gravity of the danger in Cuba is a practice that strikes at the very vitals of our system of Government. For the American form of government is one which offers to the people the tremendous responsibility of determining the course and direction of public policy, and this is a responsibility which can be exercised only if complete and accurate information is made available to the public.

The subcommittee reports that intelligence analysts had reached the conclusion in late September 1962 "that there was a suspect medium-range ballistic missile site in Pinar del Rio Province." Yet administration spokesmen insisted repeatedly in late September and throughout the first 20 days of October that there was no evidence of offensive weapons in Cuba.

wanted to reach economic equality with his victim would hardly be a satisfactory defense in a court of law.

The choice of an equality of justice, instead of an equality of wealth, is one every free society must make if it is to remain free. This is far from a matter concerning the right alone. Every man develops his own best talents in the most enjoyable way he may choose—if he has the will and ambition to do so.

You have heard it said fortunes and personal wealth in America is past. This is not true; great individual success is still possible. It is not as easily attainable, because individual rights have been hemmed in by policies enforced in the Federal Government.

Each individual wants to excel. So long as he does not use force against his neighbor and so long as he competes with integrity, his ambition will benefit himself and others. It was not by enforced equality that we became the strongest nation in the world. This nation excels because rights and justice are recognized.

By the laws of nature and God each one of us was created not only equal in dignity and rights, but unequal in personality and character, special abilities and ambition. These inequalities make us the kind of men and women we are. Both equality as human beings and our inequality and individuality as separate persons are most precious. We should guard them with our lives, and scorn any man who may try to tell us they are not worth saving.

And our greatest problem we have to face today is the possibility of losing our individuality and our equality before men and God, through interference of what seeks to become a totalitarian government.

AN AMERICAN SPEAKS

(Editor's Note: The following are excerpts from an essay written by Vincent Zavatt, 85, of Lawrence, New York, who emigrated from Southern Italy and became a naturalized American in 1898. The essay is a plea to naturalized and native-born Americans to recognize the merit of America, and the betrayals inherent in socialism and communism.)

We naturalized Americans must be alert and active. We must help keep America free of socialism. We must realize that a strong, dedicated, rugged individualism has been the key to America's greatness from the beginning.

The individual can rise, by his own efforts, to positions of power and respect. Six American presidents were born in log cabins under circumstances of extreme poverty and hardship. Six more were sons of farmers, and in their youth, labored before sun-up and beyond sun-down. Never in all history has there been such a succession of men rising from humble origin to responsible power. These are blessings also conferred on naturalized citizens, none of which they would have known in their homeland. These blessings ought to be kept free of those who lean toward socialism, the step-brother of communism. We must become self-supporting citizens who will make the American system of free enterprise operate in the most efficient manner for our own welfare and for the welfare of others.

We naturalized citizens in America must strive to be worthy of all the benefits conferred upon us and be faithful to the oath of allegiance we gave—to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

In the Preamble to the Constitution, the limited role of federal government and the assumption that God is the source of man's rights are clearly stated. America's Founding Fathers were people who were seeking escape from an oppressive Europe. It is ironic that today some of our leaders are asking that we give up the independence which our forefathers fought to establish, and that we become subjects in a system that would be far worse than that which our ancestors rebelled against. They would force us into a world government, one that would abolish our own constitution and our form of government. Perhaps they do not realize that this has been part of the communist plan for years, and this would be the most oppressive tyranny the world has ever known. Can we afford to sit meekly by and let those with an insatiable greed for power continue to gnaw away at our freedom?

Our America became great under a personal enterprise system. History has proved that suppressed nations do not prosper. When the state controls the people, and stifles ambition to work and produce, neither the individual nor the nation can prosper.

These are thoughts that must be heeded in order to put the American citizen on the alert. Remember: The price of liberty is eternal vigilance.

America has a great heritage, and certainly the greatest part of it is freedom. When our forefathers fought to bring forth a new nation upon the earth, "Freedom" was their cry. After they won freedom, they wrote the Bill of Rights to help insure it. They founded a government to be ruled by the citizens through a constitutional government with checks and balances.

Today, as citizens of America, we must stop communism from establishing dictatorships over all the world, and rebuild our own republic in America while there is time. For if America ceases to be free, what hope for freedom can remain for the rest of the world?

Fifty years ago communism was viewed as the dreamy ideal of impractical idealists who made experiments in communal living which almost invariably broke up in quarrels and disillusionment. But today communism is controlling the vast Eurasian land mass, from the Baltic to the Pacific, and power is uneasily shared by two centers, Moscow and Peking.

We must turn back from philosophies alien to the spirit of our Founding Fathers. We must guard against the tendency toward apathy and materialism lest by doing nothing, we undo all that our forefathers built. —LIFE LINE, Washington 1, D. C.

HISTORICAL FACTS

Philadelphia was an imaginative city in the 1700s. To its natives the city meant such things as Ben Franklin's Pennsylvania Gazette, a water well for every home convenience, and "very few beggars or old maids."

There were warehouses, and malt, brew and bake houses. There was even a noble "Towne House." And Franklin's Gazette, which seemed to be forever needling the populace about civic improvements, was agitating as ever and had already seen to it that there were better streets and police and fire protection.

"Rude and riotous amusements" were very much frowned upon, which was why many Philadelphians were surprised when the city fathers allowed a "theatrical performance" in 1749.

It was only fitting that enlightened Philadelphia, which had been founded as a protest against religious intolerance and persecutions in Europe, should be the spawning ground for a "Liberty Bell." The 50th Anniversary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania was drawing near, and as such a "Liberty Bell" would look handsome installed in the State House which was being planned.

In 1751, the bell was ordered from Thomas Lister of Whitechapel, London. In August 1752, the bell arrived amid much fanfare. Inscribed on the bell were the words from Leviticus 25:10:

"Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

But Philadelphians would hear the bell only once. On its very first test for tone, the bell cracked.

The bell was recast by Pass and Stow, Philadelphia Founders, who added 1 1/2 ounces of American copper to each pound of the original metal in order to avoid brittleness and cracking.

The new bell was hung in the yard of the State House. It cracked soon after it was installed.

Pass and Stow were dumbfounded, but took the job of recasting the bell a second time.

The Liberty Bell was taken back to the State House, and placed on top of the brick tower on June 7, 1753. There it remained to ring its message that the Declaration of Independence had been signed.

The tower was the home of the bell for one more year. Then on September 18, 1777, British forces were approaching Philadelphia. The bell was removed from the tower to keep it from falling into the hands of the British. Taken to Allentown, Pennsylvania, it was hidden under the floor of Zion Reformed Church until June 27, 1778.

The bell pealed until July, 1835. Then, the bell's fate struck again. It cracked while tolling the death of Chief Justice John Marshall.

It is now on exhibition in its old tower. The original cost was 60 pounds, 14 shillings and five pence, or by today's conversion rate, slightly more than $168.00

Pollock Family From Alaska Visit Relatives Here

Mr. and Mrs. Don Pollock and their six children of Palmer, Alaska, are visiting their parents, Mrs. Mabel C. Pollock of North Richhill street, and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Jacobs, Waynesburg, R. D. 1. The Pollocks moved to Alaska in 1958. Before that time Mr. Pollock had operated a 325-acre farm on Loves Hill, Route 21, which had belonged to his late father, Don C. Pollock. He mainly raised livestock.

In Alaska, the Pollocks reside five miles from the small town of Palmer, and they are about a third of a mile from their closest neighbor.

Four of their children were born in Greene County, and the other two in the 49th state. The family will start home on July 23. Mr. Pollock works for an agricultural firm.

Prices are sky high in Alaska. Gasoline is about 40 cents per gallon and other prices are higher. Bread is 50 cents per loaf, eggs one dollar per dozen unless shipped in and then they are about 75 cents. A 50-pound bag of flour is seven dollars and the milk is 45 cents per quart. The price of a good milk cow runs six to seven hundred dollars. Consequently, families raise as much produce as they can, Mr. Pollock stated.

Alaska has only about 1,200 miles of roads which are ice and snow covered in the winter. High-bed automobiles and trucks must be used in order not to ruin them by hitting holes in roads.

100-Year Life Soon, A. M. A. Group Report Indicates

CHICAGO — The time is not far off when Americans can confidently expect to live to be 100 years old—if they don't misspend their youth.

The American Medical Association's committee on aging said recently medicine alone can not assure a long life.

Dr. Edward Bortz said, "We are going to have to overhaul some of our supposedly sophisticated views of modern living."

That more people don't reach the century mark, Dr. Bortz's report said, "seems to stem from the fact they are not willing to follow a regimen of proper diet, exercise, rest and recreation, coupled with the exclusion of stimulants, depressants and other excesses."

Dr. Bortz, 67, a past president of the A. M. A. and the American Geriatrics Society, frowned on such modern practices as forcing grandparents to live away from their offspring and pensioning healthy workers at age 65.

"Man's essential function is to work. When stripped of this he sometimes molds," Dr. Bortz said.

Much progress has been made. Today's children probably can expect to live to 80 or 90, at least 10 years longer than their parents, he said.

But the added years won't mean anything unless useful employment is available to those who desire it, Dr. Bortz said.

Proper diet, exercises and an active mind are essential to proper aging he said.

Congressional Record

This is what McGeorge Bundy, Special Assistant to the President for National Security, told the Nation on October 14, 1962 by television: "I know there is no present evidence, and I think there is no present likelihood that the Cubans and the Cuban Government and the Soviet Government would in combination attempt to install a major offensive capability."

It is ironic that, several hours before Mr. Bundy spoke, photographs of medium-range missile sites had been taken in the San Cristobal area. Mr. Bundy could not have known for sure what these photographs were to reveal. But, for at least 3 weeks before October 14, there was evidence of the presence of strategic missiles in Cuba—evidence which identified their location and which directed the flight of October 14 to the very area which yielded the photographic proof.

Further, 5 days before Mr. Bundy's television appearance, our intelligence had positively established by photographic evidence the presence in Cuba of an offensive capability in the form of the Soviet bomber, the IL-28. This fact was made known to the Nation by Secretary McNamara in his teletype of February 6, 1963.

Another example of the peddling of misinformation by a responsible administration spokesman is the assertion of Secretary McNamara on February 6 that he had "no evidence that Cuba is being used as a base for subversion directed against other Latin American countries."

As though in direct reply to the Secretary, the Preparedness Subcommittee declares, "the evidence is overwhelming that Castro is supporting, spurring, aiding and abetting Communist revolutionary and subversive movements throughout the Western Hemisphere."

One more example out of many will suffice. In an article in the Washington World of October 19, 1962, George W. Ball, Under Secretary of State, wrote:

"About 4,500 Soviet military specialists have arrived in Cuba, including construction men and technicians."

On October 29, 1962, the Department of Defense published a brochure entitled "Cuba" in which the number of Soviet personnel on the island was estimated as 5,000. However, the Preparedness Subcommittee reports that the intelligence community on October 22 "estimated the Soviet personnel in Cuba to be 8,000 to 10,000."

One who works his way through the tangle of official administration pronouncements from last August to the present time on the numbers and the character of Soviet personnel in Cuba will be surprised to learn from the Preparedness Subcommittee that "no one—outside of Soviet and Cuban official circles—knows how many Russian troops are there now."

For the administration almost always spoke as though it knew, although its figures changed inexplicably from time to time. It has frequently sniped at estimates offered by others on the ground that they could not possibly be as well informed as the administration's intelligence agencies.

It is hard to escape the conclusion that there has been deception of the public in official and quasi-official pronouncements dealing with the type and numbers of Soviet personnel in Cuba. In order to deceive, it is not necessary to tell a falsehood. When an "estimate from our intelligence sources" is presented to the public without explaining that the intelligence community itself has little confidence in the estimate, this is deception. When Soviet personnel are called technicians as they arrive in Cuba but are called troops as they leave, this is deception. When the reports of Cuban exiles are shrugged off with a blanket dismissal of exile sources as unreliable, this is deception.

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS

The report of the Preparedness Subcommittee raises several questions which it does not answer. It attributes to "the intelligence community" responsibility for the shocking inadequacies in the evaluation of information about the Soviet military buildup in Cuba. The question who in the intelligence community was responsible remains unanswered.

Apparently it was not John McCone, Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, for the record shows that on August 10, 1962, Mr. McCone reported his belief that the Soviet Union was "preparing to place offensive missiles in Cuba."

Despite the views of the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, the Preparedness Subcommittee declares, "The intelligence people apparently invariably adopted the most optimistic estimate possible with respect to the information available." This method of interpretation, the subcommittee continues, "is in sharp contrast to the customary military practice of emphasizing the worst situation which might be established by the accumulation of evidence."

It is hard to understand why intelligence specialists would reverse their customary rules of interpretation in evaluating information about the Soviet buildup in Cuba. It is our understanding that the intelligence agencies reach conclusions about the location and strength of North Vietnamese forces in southeast Asia on the basis of the kind of evidence that was available long before October 14, 1962, about the presence of Soviet troops and missiles in Cuba.

Who was responsible for applying to information about Cuba rules of interpretation far stricter than those normally applied by intelligence agencies? Who were the Kremlinologists who concluded that the Soviet Union would never controlled "the timing of the facts?"

We cannot adopt the attitude of some spokesmen in the Senate toward the dangerous errors in the intelligence process when he says "We must allow a margin for error." Given the gravity of the peril that faced this Nation last October and the danger that confronts it today, "Oh, well, mistakes will happen."

Nor do we think it fair to attribute in a vague way to the whole "intelligence community" responsibility for these mistakes. We have too much confidence in the great body of specialists who make up the intelligence community to be blind to the guilt of the peculiar blindness described in the report of the Preparedness Subcommittee.

In order to maintain public confidence in the intelligence agencies, to do justice to those who were not involved in the blunders of last fall, and to avoid recurrence of these errors, a more specific statement of where responsibility lies for these mistakes should be given by the Preparedness Subcommittee.

Yet another unanswered question is what degree of credibility should responsible officials have given to the human source reports that Soviet troops and missiles were in Cuba, which were received well before the administration believed that the Preparedness Subcommittee can indicate whether the sources of these reports were reliable without running the risks of identifying the sources.

Finally, a clearer explanation of the process of calculating the number of Soviet personnel in Cuba is needed. The current intelligence estimate is that 22,000 were there as of last October. Eight to nine thousand are said to have been withdrawn, with the result that 17,500 remain. The Preparedness Subcommittee comments that "technical reasons" account for what would seem to be an error in subtraction. We are baffled by this peculiar arithmetic.

APPENDIX (Inconsistencies between findings of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee and administration statements)

THE ADMINISTRATION

1. "I have no evidence that Cuba is being used as a base for subversion directed against other Latin American countries. It is a matter that is of constant interest to us and one we are monitoring continuously."

(Department of Defense, Special Cuba Briefing by Hon. Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of Defense, February 6, 1963, p. 47.)

2. "I know there is no present evidence and I think there is no present likelihood that the Cubans and the Cuban Government and the Soviet Government would in combination attempt to install a major offensive capability. So far, everything that has been delivered in Cuba falls within the categories of aid which the Soviet Union has provided, for example, to neutral states like Egypt, or Indonesia."

(Issues and Answers: ABC, McGeorge Bundy, Special Assistant to the President for National Security, interviewed by Edward P. Morgan, and John Scalf, Oct. 14, 1962.)

3. "There are today no offensive weapons systems in Cuba."

(Department of Defense, Special Cuba Briefing by Hon. Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of Defense, February 6, 1963, p. 45.)

4. "We have no evidence of troops... we do not have information that troops have come to Cuba..."

(President Kennedy at press conference, Aug. 29, 1962.)

5. Question: "Mr. Secretary... in view of the fact we didn't know when and how the offensive missiles got into Cuba, no photographs, we were surprised, how do we know that only 42 came in and that 42 went out?"

Secretary McNamara: "As you know, we covered the entire island of Cuba with fine-resolution photography, analyzed every foot of it several times, located 42 missiles, and their associated equipment, balanced the missiles against the type of equipment, accounted for all the equipment and all the missiles leaving Cuba..."

(Department of Defense, Special Cuba Briefing by Hon. Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of Defense, Feb. 6, 1963, p. 46.)

6. "Some 4,500 Soviet personnel are located throughout the island in major industrial and military installations."

(Cuba: Questions and Answers, Oct. 29, 1962, p. 11, Department of Defense pamphlet.)

THE SENATE PREPAREDNESS SUBCOMMITTEE

1. "The evidence is overwhelming that Castro is supporting, spurring, aiding, and abetting Communist revolutionary and subversive movements throughout the Western Hemisphere and that such activities present a grave and ominous threat to the peace and security of the Americas."

(Interim report, p. 4)

2. "...in September some reports of missiles being introduced into Cuba were suggestive enough of strategic or offensive weapons to arouse the suspicions of intelligence analysts. This resulted in the conclusion—apparently reached near the end of September 1962—that there was a suspect medium-range ballistic missile (MRBM) site in Pinar del Rio Province. As a result, photographic coverage of the suspect area was proposed and on October 14, a Strategic Air Command U-2 reconnaissance aircraft overflew the area and emerged with hard photographic evidence of the San Cristobal medium-range ballistic missile complex."

(Interim report, p. 7.)

3. "Strategic weapons may or may not be now in Cuba. We can reach no conclusion on this because of the lack of conclusive evidence."

(Interim report, p. 4.)

"The intelligence community, although aware of these reports, have been unable to confirm them and adhere to the position that all strategic weapons are withdrawn."

"It is fair to say, however, that this is a matter of great concern to the intelligence community. Based on a skepticism, if nothing else, there is grave apprehension on this score. It is agreed that ironclad assurance of the complete absence of Soviet strategic missiles in Cuba can come only as a result of thorough, penetrating onsite inspection by reliable observers. The current intelligence estimate that they are not present is based largely on the negative evidence that there is no affirmative proof to the contrary. This, of course, was precisely the status of the matter prior to last October 14."

"There is no doubt that there are literally thousands of caves and caverns in Cuba and that it is feasible to use many of these for the storage and concealment of strategic missiles and other offensive weapons. It is also true that military activities have been observed in connection with these caves. Our intelligence people are of the opinion that some of the caves are in fact utilized for the storage of military items and equipment other than strategic missiles, such as ammunition, explosives, etc."

(Interim report, p. 15.)

4. (Speaking of "the July-August period" 1962) "Human source reports also alleged that the nature and character of the arriving Soviet personnel had changed significantly. It was reported that some of the arriving personnel during this period were primarily young, trim, physically fit, suntanned and disciplined, and that they formed in ranks of fours on the docks and moved out in truck convoys. Refugee, exile, and other human source reports suggested that, in contrast to the earlier arrivals, the new arrivals were Soviet combat troops. However, the intelligence community adhered to the view that they were military instructors, advisers, and trainers, plus a number of civilian technicians and advisers associated with improving the Cuban economy."

(Interim report, p. 6.)

5. "Photographic reconnaissance was unable to detect precisely how many ballistic missiles were introduced into Cuba. Prior to the Soviet announcement that 42 missiles would be withdrawn, our photographs had revealed a lesser number. It could not be established, therefore, how many ballistic missiles were, in fact, introduced into Cuba."

(Interim report, p. 7.)

6. "...on October 22, 1962, the date that the President addressed the Nation, the intelligence community estimated the Soviet personnel in Cuba to be 8,000 to 10,000."

(Interim report, p. 8.)

TAXES AND INFLATION

The family which had a gross income of $3,000 in 1939 would need $7,500 today to have the same purchasing power.

Along these same lines a man would have to earn $390,741 today to have the same purchasing power he had when making $100,000 a year in 1939.

The National Industrial Conference Board of New York said Federal income taxes, social security and inflation have made the difference.

Big Race to Feature Meadows Opening; Arden Downs Stakes at Harness Track

Western Pennsylvania's first pari-mutuel race track, The Meadows, near Washington on Route 19, will open its initial harness race meeting next Friday night with a $15,000 stakes race featuring the opening night's program.

The big race which will usher legalized betting into the area is the Arden Downs Stakes, a pace for three-year-old colts which will mark the comeback of Hanover Majestic to the races.

As a two-year-old last season, Majestic rolled up seven victories and two seconds in nine races. However, the colt underwent surgery on a knee last fall and has been idle since then.

Hanover Majestic was shipped to The Meadows last Wednesday and has been working out there since. It is owned by Stanley Daner, the nationally-known driver who has been one of the sports biggest winners at Roosevelt and Yonkers Raceway.

The meeting will run through August 24, Monday through Saturday. Post time is 8:20.

The Meadows is a five-eighths mile oval and is the nation's first synthetic, all-weather racing strip. It was built by the Washington Trotting Association at a cost of five million dollars. The track is located on a 320-acre farm in North Strabane Township.

There are stables for 700 horses, dormitory and dining facilities for 200 horsemen, a clubhouse, and grandstand, private roads and paved parking areas and a private bridge spanning Route 19 to ease egress for patrons going to Pittsburgh.

Cold Winter, Say Squirrels

LANCASTER.—Local lore predicts an "old-fashioned winter" on the basis of what it describes as the "best and most reliable sign"—the way squirrels have been carrying their tails.

The superstition is that if a squirrel's tail floats out rearward, it means an easy winter; if it stands straight up and down, it means an average season; if the tail is carried far over the back pointing in the direction the squirrel is traveling, it means an "old-fashioned," or bitter winter.

In the olden days when squirrel's tails were noted to be almost touching their heads, house-holders were advised to lay in a barrel of flour, a 100-pound bag of sugar and a gallon jug of molasses, to heap the woodshed with dry wood and to buy a new set or two of extra-heavy "long ones."

OFF AND RUNNING by John I. Day Neither Wind, Nor Rain . . .

Ordinarily both the sport of horse racing and its fans are impervious to the weather. With the lengthened season in recent years, a few racing days have been cancelled due to heavy snow or frozen running surface. For the most part, however, the Post Office Department's slogan, "Neither wind, nor rain, etc.," applies both to racing fans and the contestants. So it was that in spite of hurricane warnings on the Coast, racing was in progress at Rockingham Park on the afternoon of September 21, 1938. During

Eskimos Facing Fallout Danger Thru Harbor Blast

WASHINGTON—Eskimos now are in danger of a double or triple dose of radioactive fallout.

This is not yet sufficient to cause much concern to the rest of the world, but for the polar regions with their nomadic inhabitants the case is quite different. It is all brought to a head by an atomic energy proposal, Project Ploughshare, to create an artificial harbor on the northwest coast of Alaska by means of a terrific nuclear blast.

The job will require, it is estimated, the equivalent of five large atomic bombs. It might well mark a major step forward in the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

But before deciding on the project the commission is giving due consideration to the plight of the Eskimos. Even now the Arctic people are getting a lot more fallout in the air they breathe than are folks in middle latitudes, due to the fact that this tends to concentrate toward the poles.

The situation is greatly aggravated, however, by the fact that the people are chiefly hunters and meat eaters and, it has been found, the flesh of the animals they eat is highly radioactive. This applies, quite notably for Alaskan Eskimos, to the caribou.

These animals graze on lichens—plants which have no roots and consequently get all their substance from the atmosphere. Along Alaska's Arctic coast, it has been found, these already are highly radioactive and pass on their radioactivity to the animals that feed upon them.

Several anthropological groups already have protested against Project Ploughshare. The Atomic Energy Commission is holding up progress on the harbor until it can ascertain the probable effects on Alaska's Eskimo population.

Equally affected, of course, would be the white population, but that far north this is negligible.

Your Health Pennsylvania Medical Society

A tragic accident frequently shows up a show off.

The dare-devil automobile or motorboat driver, and people doing fancy tricks in water skiing or skin diving frequently are injured.

Many of the 6,500 persons drowned in this country annually have lost their lives because of carelessness, foolishness or exhibitionism.

Some swim out too far, get exhausted, and do not make it back to safety.

Others dive in unfamiliar water and strike a submerged log, or hit the bottom in shallow water.

It may seem like jolly fun to rock a boat, or change seats in a canoe.

In such practices, someone who can't swim well may get thrown into the water, get panicked, and drown.

A large proportion of accidents can be attributed to failure to observe the basic rules of safety.

The swimmer who swims alone who dives in unknown water, who attempts long swims unaccompanied by a boat, or who does underwater swimming with or without scuba equipment alone and in strange water, is flirting with danger.

Everyone should learn to swim at least well enough to keep afloat while fully clothed.

A surprising number of persons cannot swim at all.

Assisting another who is in trouble in the water can be a difficult and hazardous undertaking.

The best way of assisting is to throw a rope or something buoyant, or reach with a pole, paddle or branch of a tree.

Often it is necessary for someone to enter the water to assist.

The victim should be approached from the rear, as a drowning person frantically grabs his would-be rescuer and they may both go down.

Pope Lugged Tourist's Bags

VATICAN CITY—Friends of Pope Paul VI have a story they like to tell to show he is an unpretentious man.

It was in the days which, as Archbishop Giovanni Battista Montini, he was Vatican pro-secretary of state. One day crossing St. Peter's Square he was stopped by a woman tourist who mistook him for a plain priest.

"Please, Reverend," she implored, "could you give me a hand with these bags?"

He smiled, picked up the two heavy suitcases and strode most of the way across the huge square with them before Secretariat of State aides recognized him and hurried to take charge of the woman's suitcases.

Late Frosts Leave Mark on Forests

Killing frosts during May have left their mark on Pennsylvania forests. A preliminary survey of forest conditions made by field officers of the Pennsylvania Game Commission indicates heavy damage to many trees important as producers of food for wildlife.

In northwestern Pennsylvania, Division Supervisor L. E. Sheaffer reported this year's nut crop from oaks and beech is apparently lost but wild cherry, crabapple and dogwood fruits appear to have survived the freeze. North-central Division Supervisor LeRoy Gleason said that all oak, beech, ash and grapes appear to have been lost. In northeastern Pennsylvania, Supervisor Roy Trexler reported heavy damage to fruits and nuts in valley bottoms but apple and choke cherry apparently survived the low temperatures.

In southwestern counties, Supervisor G. L. Norris said initial field observations indicate that about 30 percent of the mast crop was lost, especially heavy damage to white oak. All walnut, hickory, white oak and grape production was lost in southeastern counties, according to Supervisor William A. Hodge. Southeastern counties suffered less extensive damage according to Supervisor T. A. Reynolds. The heavy frost in this area hit mainly on mountain tops and a good fruit crop is anticipated in valley bottoms, except for heavy damage to walnut and grape.

"Most of the students, who sat under the tutelage of that old professor have long since passed to the higher realms. But a few of us have been privileged to live to the day of the split atom."

"Imagine then my horror, when the first I heard of the split atom was in the form of an atomic bomb, a weapon of death and destruction. And instead of a happier world, we are still living in a world of turmoil and taxes. Instead of a world of happiness, we are taxed in every way to explore outer space and try to reach the moon."

"We should have used the split atom for making people to live happier lives and free from tax, before exploring outer space."

"Then, and not until then, can we hope to find the Utopia and the way of life that the old professor talked about in the days of long ago."

Star Spangled Bill Advances

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—The Illinois House Friday passed a bill permitting school teachers to lead their pupils in daily recitation of four lines of the national anthem.

One of the lines reads "and this be our motto: 'In God Is Our Trust'."

Representative George Brydia, (R) Phophetstown, who offered the bill after the U. S. Supreme Court banned state-prescribed prayers in schools, told the House:

"I defy the Supreme Court to say we can't teach this prayer in our schools."

Rep. Robert Mann, (D) Chicago, opposed the bill on the grounds it would "put religion in our schools."

MacArthur Gets Corregidor Rock

NEW YORK—General of the Army Douglas MacArthur Monday received a 30-pound piece of the Island of Corregidor—last bastion of the Philippines' defenses at the beginning of World War II, from which MacArthur directed the heroic defense of Bataan.

The chunk of reddish granite was given to General MacArthur in his Waldorf Towers suite by Rufino G. Hechanova, Philippine secretary of commerce and industry.

The rock came from the mouth of the Malinta Tunnel, a focal point of resistance by Filipino and American forces in 1942 before its capture by the Japanese.

New College Named For Eisenhower

CLINTON, N. Y.—The Presbyterian Synod of New York State has approved a proposal to establish a liberal arts college named after former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

A synod spokesman said Friday that $1.2 million, including $1-million from an anonymous woman donor, had been pledged for development of the college. The school will be at Seneca Falls on the shore of Lake Cayuga, one of the state's Finger Lakes. A citizen's committee at Seneca Falls had proposed the college.

General Eisenhower acknowledged plans for naming the college for him in a statement issued through the committee. He described the proposal as a "significant development."

The school will be non-secular, coeducational and the enrollment is expected to be about 1,200 pupils, a committee spokesman said. The spokesman said Eisenhower College is expected to open in September, 1965.

Burglar proof

Uncle Sam (who knows which side his bread is buttered on) has taken some pretty thorough steps to guarantee the safety of your U.S. Savings Bonds.

For example, suppose you have a Bond stolen before you have a chance to put it in the bank or some other safe place. You haven't a worry. It's registered in your name and you're not out a cent.

The government gives you another Bond—no charge. Even if you've forgotten the serial number and the date and place you bought it (though having this information speeds up the process).

This theft protection is just one more of the many reasons why your fellow Americans have over $46 billion invested in Savings Bonds—a powerful answer to the people who threaten to bury us economically.

So buy Savings Bonds. And see if you don't feel pretty good about it.

Quick facts about U.S. Savings Bonds

- You get $4 for every $3 at maturity
- You can get your money any time
- You can buy Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan.

THE CANNER WHO FEELS, CORES, CUTS, COOKS FRUITS AND VEGETABLES IS LIKE A CHEF'S STAFF FOR THE HOUSEWIFE... SHE NEEDS ONLY ADD HER OWN CREATIVE TOUCH TO SERVE A GOURMET DISH!

WE LIVE EASIER BECAUSE OF CANS...

COSMETICS ARE READY FOR USE, FOR HOME OR PURSE, IN METAL CANS.

MEDICINES, PILLS, THROAT SPRAYS MAY NOW BE CARRIED IN OUR POCKETS BECAUSE OF METAL CONTAINERS.
