'Wain' In Rainsburg Forecast For Monday

Loquacious Cassius Clay of Nashville, Tenn., No. 1 heavy-weight contender, has taken on the bet for Waynesburg's Rain Day, Monday, July 24.

He was joined Tuesday by Eleanor Shano and Paul Shannon of WTAE, Channel Four. Miss Shano, professional weather forecaster, has lost to Weather Seer John L. Daily, twice, and Shannon once when the Three Stooges won the straw hat bet.

Cassius, in his usual style had this to say:
"Mr. Daily and all his crew shout that a drizzle or a drop will do
But I predict when July 29 comes 'round

That not even a drop of dew comes down.
Way back there in Waynesburg town."

Al Abrams, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette sports editor, inveigled Clay into betting that it will not rain in Waynesburg on July 29. Abrams, himself a sacker several years ago, wants to see another one.

Records first kept in the Rogers' drug store by Albert and William Allison, pharmacists, and carried on by the late Byron Daily, show that it has rained here 75 times in the past 85 years.

Squire Daily inherited the record from his father.

The tradition began when a farmer, his name is not recorded, stated he had noticed that it always rained in Waynesburg on July 29. It was noted in the prescription records and is still carried in the books in the Healdie drug store.

Just why it rains on July 29 no one knows.

The tradition was highly publicized around the world by service men during World War II. Judging by the sudden showers in the past few days the tradition will hold true to form.

Scott, Clark Clash On Law

WASHINGTON—Senators Joseph S. Clark, Democrat-Pennsylvania, and Hugh Scott, Republican-Pennsylvania, who favor federal aid to help unemployment areas, were at odds Tuesday over the benefits to Pennsylvania of the area redevelopment act.

"If ever a program was written for Pennsylvania, it is this one," Clark said in a statement designed to answer claims that the state is being shortchanged under the act.

Scott said in a letter to constituents, Pennsylvania has not gotten its fair share of aid. He said he voted earlier this year to extend the program because despite its faults it "is all we have to help distressed areas."

Scott's amendment to eliminate 229 counties—21 per cent of the total—from the program was defeated in the Senate.

The amendment, he said, would have made more money available to distressed areas in Pennsylvania and eliminated counties where underemployment, rather than substantial, is a problem. None of those counties is in Pennsylvania.

Clark said Pennsylvania has had more projects and more jobs created under the act than any other state.

President's Award For Local Program

Washington - Greene County Tourist Promotion Agency was notified Friday that the National Association of Travel Organizations, Inc., received President Kennedy's "E" Award for its program to increase United States dollar earnings at a ceremony held July 9, in Atlantic City, N. J., the U. S. Department of Commerce announced.

The Washington - Greene County Tourist - Promotion Agency is one of only three Pennsylvania Tourist Promotion Agencies participating in this international program and the U. S. Travel Service, a division of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Saga Of Homer Jackson's Trip To Florida And Deep South

By JIM DENT

Greene County is known for its unusual attributes and its outstanding people.

It has the world's largest coal mine; it grows more and finer wool than any other county in the State.

These people, and these industries peculiar to no other county in the Commonwealth, are the reasons why Glenn R. Toothman, Jr., now our District Attorney, some ten years ago gave the county the slogan, "The Keystone of the Keystone State."

Homer Jackson, now Major Domo at the Fort Jackson Hotel Barber Shop, due to his humble start in life, is an outstanding example of Greene County supremacy.

Homer, while shining shoes at the local tortorial emporium (no charge, gentlemen), has been penalized more times than any professional football team in the country, for having his "backfield in motion."

Homer never had the opportunity to become an "educated damfool." As a young lad he had to quit grade school and fend for himself. In those days a family couldn't go around the corner from The Republican office and draw more money from the Commonwealth for doing nothing than one could earn, even if one were an artisan.

Attorney Robinson F. Downey had his law offices next to The Republican office, now the site of The Daily Insurance Company.

He and his wife Jenny, who lived in "Ivyhurst," their then palatial residence, were socially ambitious, and spent considerable time in the nation's capital, making acquaintance with political celebrities of the moment.

Homer was fortunate—he became "apprenticed" to the Downeys, and, with his ever-gentle manner, his million-dollar smile, and his innate honesty—he became the right-hand "man" at Ivyhurst.

The Downeys had a surrey propelled by a horse named "Bunny." "Bunny" was at one time a milk-wagon horse and, according to Homer, took some prodding to keep him from stopping at every house.

Homer, with "Bunny" drawing the surrey, probably drove more celebrities through the high roads of Waynesburg and vicinity, than have visited Waynesburg in the ensuing 35 years.

HOMER JACKSON

"Bunny" strained at the hames for William Jennings Bryan, the "free silver" advocate and perennial candidate for President of the United States; ex-President William Howard Taft; United States Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa; Tallulah Bankhead, who was to become one of the world's greatest actresses—an endless coterie of high-society, sat behind Homer, with his becoming livery, in "The Surrey with the Fringe on Top."

(As a parenthetical thought the "high roads" surrounding Waynesburg have not been improved to any appreciable extent since "Bunny" strained at the hames some decades ago.) 'Twas an everlasting and soul-satisfying education for Homer—and even today, let it be said to his credit—he's still absorbing education.

The writer was born in the South, and Homer, ever seeking enlightenment, was a frequent visitor to this office, where we discussed racial problems, both in the North and in the South.

Having lived the better part of my life in the Deep South, and having lived in the North for some time, there seems to the writer to be this difference: in the North the Negro, as well as any man of color is looked upon and considered as a race of people, with no gradation or recognition between the worthy and the unworthy; while in the Deep South the Negro is an individual, and so rated. If he were one trying to make something of himself he was aided in every way possible and was respected; he became an adopted "member of the family."

All these things Homer and the writer discussed, some of which were taken by him "with a grain of salt," particularly the right to vote.

Homer's daughter, Jeanne, who, with her husband, Lieutenant-Colonel Albert J. Parker, lives in Tallahassee, Florida, invited him, last spring, to Tallahassee, all expenses paid, for commencement exercises at the Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University, an all-Negro institution with 5,000 students. His son-in-law is connected with the university as an instructor.

After returning from the Deep South, Homer wrote down his impressions, both of the North and the South. This is what he penned:

"To my friends of Waynesburg and vicinity (and I know I have scores of them, because I have not forgotten their expressions of sorrow and their friendship at the death of my wife in 1958), "So much for the hospitality of the North.

"So let me give you a sketch of my trip to the Deep South to visit my daughter, Jeanne, and her husband, Lieutenant-Colonel Parker.

"I took my first plane ride, after much misgiving, but found out there was nothing to it.

"I arrived at my daughter's home in Tallahassee, Florida, and she and her husband and their wonderful friends extended to me that Southern hospitality I had heard so much about.

"At the commencement I saw 250 colored students graduated in one class.

"Among the many wonderful people I met was Dr. George W. Gore, Jr., president of the University. His charming wife is a very good friend of my daughter's, and Mrs. Gore went out of her way to make every minute of my stay a pleasure.

"My daughter and the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas A. Graham, Third U. S. Army corps, who were guests in the home of my daughter for Commencement, and myself, were invited to sit in President Gore's private box to watch the exercises.

"The speakers included the mayor of Tallahassee, the Governor of Florida, and Attorney-General Edward Brooke of Massachusetts. He referred to the graduation as the end of formal

Utility Firm Employs Win Safety Awards

Fifty-one employees of Manufacturers Light and Heat Company's production and transmission Division 5 received individual safety awards at a ceremony Friday in Waynesburg.

Division 5 employees work out of six major locations—Washington, Cross Creek, Waynesburg and Graysville in Pennsylvania, and Majorsville and Peters Run in West Virginia. The ceremony at Waynesburg was held for employees who work out of Waynesburg and Graysville.

A. R. Kelliher, Manufacturers safety director, presented each man a matching pen and pencil set engraved with his name. He was acting on behalf of G. E. Wilson, vice president of production and transmission, who was unable to attend.

Division Superintendent R. S. Bauman was presented the American Gas Association Safety Merit Award certificate.

"You have compiled an almost unbeatable safety record in the past seven years," Kelliher told the men. "But for one lost-time accident in April, 1960, this division would have accumulated over three million consecutive injury-free man hours."

The present safety award covers the period from April 14, 1960, through May 13, 1963. From March 1953 to November 1958, two million consecutive man hours were accumulated.

Vance Weimer is foreman of the Waynesburg center and Ralph Day of the Graysville center.

$45 Million Given To State Welfare

Nearly 45 million dollars was donated by Pennsylvanians to help support private health and welfare services in 1963.

Benjamin M. Quigg Jr., president of the Pennsylvania United Fund, said this 1962 total was more than a million dollars over the amount raised through community funds and chests in 1961.

Mr. Quigg said donations by individuals and business firms in the state had increased almost 75 per cent in 10 years.

A record 525 million dollars was raised by United Funds throughout the nation, he said.

The Pennsylvania House of Representatives late Monday passed a bill which will mean $166,000 more subsidies to Greene County School Districts.

House Bill No. 1309, calls for a minimum starting salary for teachers of $4,200, a $600 per year increase over the present minimum salary. The bill also raises the minimum salary to $4,500 next year and provides a $300 per year raise each year until the teacher reaches the state maximum salary. The latter would be a $100 per year increase.

The Basic Instruction, subsidy brings to Greene County schools each year a total of $1,376,000. This $166,073 is in addition to this amount.

These monies will go toward teacher's salaries, classroom improvements, visual aids and other aids to education in all nine school districts.

Under the new bill and the proposed amendments, the Greene County schools affected by this measure, and the increase in subsidies for each district, are as follows:

Carmichaels Area, $33,101; Central Greene, $48,470; West Greene, $30,635; Dunkard Township, $11,047; Greensboro Borough, $2,408; Monongahela Township, $9,710; Greene Township, no addition subsidy; Jefferson Union, $17,373; and Morgan Township, $13,329.

Other bills approved in House committees would:

Provide the state make up for taxes lost on land taken over for dams, reservoirs or state parks in the future.

Continue for two more years the $30 million minimum as the share of local governments from state gasoline tax receipts.

Permit the state to buy hospital insurance to pay for medical assistance to the indigent.

Give a convicted person credit for the time spent in jail prior to sentencing.

Provide a supplemental $50 monthly pension to former state employes on retirement for 10 or more years prior to last June 1 and $25 to those on retirement for five to 10 years as of that date.

Named 40 et 8 District Head

Clarence Taylor, of Waynesburg R. D. 1, was elected grand cheminot of the Southwest District, 40 and 8, during the Legion convention held in Pittsburgh, last week.

Mr. Taylor is the first resident of Greene County or Voiture 1020 to be named to such a post within the organization. The Southwest District includes 11 voitures from seven counties.

He has been active in the American Legion, having served a term as commander of James Farrell Post 330, American Legion, and presently acting commander of the same post.

Mr. Taylor is a past chef de gare in the 40 and 8 organization and served a term as deputy district commander representing Washington and Greene Counties. He is also a past sous grand cheminot.

Mr. Taylor joined James Farrell Post in 1950 and two years later became a member of the 40 and 8, Voiture 1020.

Others attending the convention in Pittsburgh and riding in the large boxcar in the parade were Pete Taylor, Glen Brewer, Adam Shriver, Austin Dille, Earl Shirk, Wesley Henderson, Lon McClelland, Thomas Barnes, Dors Patterson and the Legion commander, Ralph Goodwin.

Taylor is employed by the Equitable Gas Company.

Summer School Registration

Registration figures for the second term of summer school at Waynesburg College show a total of 244 students, according to Donald E. Shamble, Director of Summer School.

The current term runs from July 15 through August 16.

Company K, 65th Anniversary of Battle of Malate

The Republican has received a copy of the "Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry 1898-1899," campaign in the Philippine Islands, prepared by the late Colonel Alexander T. Hawkins, from the official records of the regiment, Dan Dooly, recorder.

The volume printed by the Henry Printing Company of Greensburg, (good friends of ours) contains many interesting pictures and maps of the Philippine Campaign.

Next Wednesday, July 31, is the 65th anniversary of the first firing on United States troops—the battle of Malate.

served in the Philippines. Colonel Thomas Crago of Waynesburg, their captain, was in command.

George L. Gordon of Waynesburg, was first lieutenant. Clarence Rehn was second lieutenant.

Company K men who served in World War II, were James Bigger first lieutenant, quartermaster Corps in France.

Albert Y. Crose, color sergeant, 110th Infantry, served throughout the war with the regiment in France.

Victor H. Holmes, major in the 117th Infantry, 30th Division.

Saved By Steel

Sturdy steel median guard rail saved this heavy trailer truck from crashing across the busy Pennsylvania Turnpike and avoided a possible head-on collision. This granddaddy of all turnpikes is now in the midst of a program to install median steel guard rail down its entire 470-mile length. Current timetable calls for completion of Pennsylvania Turnpike's guard rail construction on almost half of its length before the snow flies. Partly because of devices like median dividers, travel on superhighways is three times safer than on ordinary highways, according to National Safety Council.

Big Things Come In Small Packages

Families building or remodeling homes this year will be particularly interested in the small sized electric water heater which delivers hot water with astonishing speed. This little "marvel"—the 40-gallon quick recovery electric water heater — can produce several times more hot water than the average family needs each day.

Because the quick recovery electric water heater heats water so fast, hot water is always on hand at the turn of a faucet. And there's no need to attend an electric water heater — no running up and down stairs to turn it on or off. The automatic quick recovery electric water heater takes care of all the details — dependably. You always have the right amount of hot water at the right temperature.

Hot water on tap all the time means better health for the family. For comfortable shaving, cleansing of dishes and clothes, the cry is always for hot water. For warm baths that are soothing to muscles and nerves, for healthful shampoos, baby's daily bath, beauty treatments, nothing can beat the 40-gallon quick recovery electric water heater for a constant, ready supply of hot water.

Being able to install the quick recovery electric water heater anywhere in the house saves you money. By placing it near the most-used faucets, shorter pipe runs are possible, helping to keep operating costs low.

Like any other electric water heater, the operation of the 40-gallon quick recovery heater is completely automatic. There is no smoke, soot, flame, or dirt. There are no smelly fumes. It's safe, clean, and quiet. And because no flue is required, it can be installed anywhere in the house — kitchen, laundry, recreation room, even in a closet — wherever water and electrical connections can be made available.

So, why bother with the drudgery and dirt of old-fashioned ways of heating water? The 40-gallon quick recovery electric water heater is your best buy.

URBAN RENEWAL

A great population expansion is being experienced in metropolitan areas in the United States. Due to higher birth rates and shifts from rural to urban areas, these population centers are confronted with the same growth problems—traffic congestion, water pollution, slums, and increased school enrollment. Sooner or later, these cities will be deciding what they will do about metropolitan aging and growth.

Our federal government is now very much involved in the finance and control of urban renewal programs in hundreds of cities from coast to coast. By June of 1961, it had committed itself to more than 1,100 individual projects. In most cases there is local opposition based on the belief that the citizens can do a job better than the federal government.

What is involved in the massive urban renewal program our federal government has undertaken?

The steps taken in federal urban renewal programs usually follow this pattern:

Soon after a local government decides to accept federal help, a local agency is formed with the power to negotiate with federal agencies. Planners are available to draw up the plans. The federal government will put up 75% or 66% of the money for the project, depending on the size of the city and whether the city does its own planning. Then homes in the project area must be vacated and business establishments closed down or moved to other areas. The power of eminent domain is invoked when necessary to accomplish the task.

Once the area is cleared, the local government takes bids and sells the land to a "re-developer." In effect, he becomes the new property owner of the project area. The loss on this transaction—the difference between what the cleared land brings when resold, and the cost of acquisition, demolition, preparation for re-use, plus all project overhead—is made up by the taxpayer.

Most landowners understand eminent domain, but the current planners certainly are not invoking true eminent domain. A respected lawyer's manual, the Blackstone Institute, Volume XI (1917 edition) says:

"Eminent domain is the power inherent in a sovereign state, to take or to authorize the taking of any property within its jurisdiction for the public use . . . The power to take and wipe out of existence the homes and shops and farms of any of the people when the necessity arises is essential to the successful performance or cost of the functions of government . . . but it is a power so fraught with possibilities of abuse and injustice that the people of this country have been unwilling that the legislature should exercise it without restriction. . . ."

"It is well settled that property cannot be taken by eminent domain except for public use. . . . It may be laid down as a fundamental rule that it is not one of the proper functions of constitutional government to directly assist private enterprise. . . ."

Citizens of a west coast metropolis, with a strong desire to protect their private property, convinced their city council that a proposed urban renewal program was not in the city's best interest. They published a pamphlet entitled, "Want To Save Your Home?" It said:

"Many officials and civic leaders realize the serious mistake they made years ago when they helped speculators set up the so-called urban renewal program.

"They were sold on the idea that urban renewal meant slum clearance and the rebuilding and revitalizing of blighted areas. Too late, our honest civic leaders discovered that the plans of the speculators had nothing to do with slums. Instead they found that they were helping big syndicates to secure valuable building sites.

"Little did either the leaders or the taxpayers realize that the deceptive term slum clearance would be expanded to a city-wide plan—instead of being operative only in selected areas. Or that vacant lots and well-built new homes could be included, if continued private ownership of these would interfere with The Plan.

"Your property is directly subject to urban renewal now. Your home, even if brand-new and conforming completely to code, can be taken over. . . ."

"Even if you are booby-trapped into fighting a long drawn-out battle through the courts, you will get nowhere. They still have the right to set the 'fair market price.'"

"Don't be fooled by the alternate term 'rehabilitation.' Retroactive building codes have been set up which make practically every existing structure sub-standard. Even though your property conforms with every building requirement which was in effect when it was built, code provisions added since then can make it substandard and illegal. This is in effect an ex-post facto law, the passage of which in expressly forbidden in our Constitution. (Article 1, Sec. 9) In other words, the Code penalizes you for not conforming to a regulation which was not in existence when the 'act' was committed.

"Many owners have tried to conform to the law by tearing down, remodeling, or building new, only to learn after their costly and heartbreaking efforts, their property was still to be taken from them by the re-development agency for resale to another private owner. Desperate owners, unable to afford to bring their property up to code, have usually sold on a builder's subordination contract—many of which are now under investigation. . . ."

"Make no mistake about it—whether the 'land grab program' is called urban renewal, redevelopment, or rehabilitation—the end result is that you are forced out of your home. The old, the sick and the poor are affected most. Owners do not get replacement values in similar areas. Tenants are forced to relocate. . . ."

"Phoenix, Arizona, and several major cities have voted out the retroactive housing code. Six states have declared urban renewal laws to be unconstitutional. . . ."

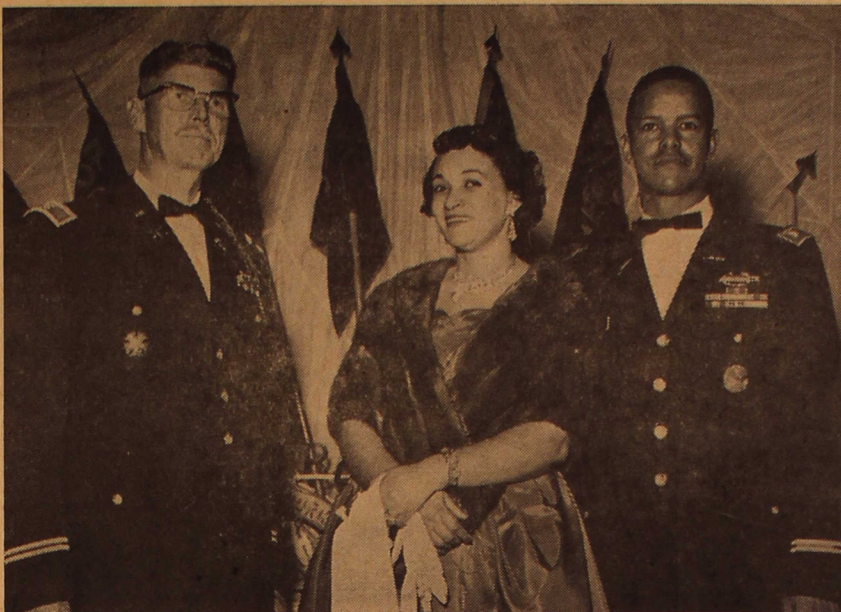

Increasingly, individuals and local governments are discovering ways to meet urban renewal problems.

The local renewal project, financed entirely by local government and private capital, is organized differently than the federal project. It first assembles a small group of local principals, each of whom has an essential contribution to make to the project, including representatives of various businesses necessary to complete the project—architects, builders and real estate men. Each examines the feasibility of tentative sites from his particular point of view, and in terms of coordination with the others involved. After each is satisfied about his role the others will play, they make firm commitments to the project. When sufficient commitments are made to insure the success of the project, efforts are made to initiate it.

When the city of Indianapolis built the Riley Center, its eight locally financed urban renewal project, it followed such a procedure. The Indianapolis program was made possible when the city asked the state for special legislation to permit the Redevelopment Commission of Indianapolis, composed of five non-paid civic and business leaders, to borrow money to finance the clearance of slums and the preparation of land for redevelopment.

Too often we have been led to believe that action by the federal government is the answer to local problems. When individuals and local governments are given a chance, they can still do a better and more economical job.

Educational Grant for State

WASHINGTON — The Welfare Department has announced approval of a $174,500 grant to the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction to find new educational uses for television, motion pictures and other instructional devices.

Senator Joseph S. Clark, Democrat, Pennsylvania, said it is the largest research grant ever awarded to a state educational agency for investigation in program teaching.

The research will be conducted at West Chester (Pa.) State College. About 100 other schools throughout the state are expected to participate, Clark added.

The two-year project, to be coordinated by Dr. Milton Woodlen, is scheduled to begin this month.

Soviet Has Many C. D. Shelters

WASHINGTON—The Defense Intelligence Agency has confirmed studies by Rand Corporation that reports Russians have an extensive civil defense shelter program and are extending it.

Defense Intelligence estimates that U. S. S. R. has fallout shelter space for 25 per cent of the population in its biggest cities and probably more in rural areas. But it says that shelter ventilation is poor and food stocks low.

The United States has marked shelter spaces for 50 million, and hopes to obtain space for 104 million more with money from this Congress. The U. S. has food supplies for 50 million persons.

About this time, unfortunately, the fire of genius was just what the examiners were demanding proof of, before they would grant a patent. Inventors, who labored long and hard over their creations, but were unable to show that spark of "divine madness," were turned away, while less-than-brilliant, who might have stumbled onto an idea or a device by accident, were rewarded. In 1952, Congress decided there weren't enough geniuses to go around and changed the patent laws.

The requirement, however, proved no obstacle to Mark Twain, who received three patents. In 1873, he was awarded one for "Mark Twain's Self-Pasting Scrapbook," a book of blank pages coated with gum or veneer. He sold 25,000 copies during the first royalty period, leading one writer to comment that this "was well enough for a book that did not contain a single word that critics could praise or condemn."

First Patent Granted July 1790, To Make Potash

Necessity may be the mother of invention, but its Big Daddy is the patent.

July 31, is the anniversary of the day when the first patent was issued in the United States. That was in 1790 — little more than a year after the new government began operating. It was only a process for "making pot and pearl ashes," otherwise known as potash, but so important was the event that President Washington himself signed the patent awarded to Samuel Hopkins, of Vermont. Endorsing the document was the then Secretary of State Jefferson, no mean gadgeteer himself, whose inventions include the swivel chair and the dumb-waiter.

Why all the fuss about the patent? Statesmen before and after Washington have praised it as a spur to invention and hence, technological advance. And some observers have credited it with the Western world's high standard of living.

A patent is simply a limited monopoly which secures to an inventor the fruits of his labor. For 17 years he has the exclusive right to make, sell, or use his invention. Of course, it may be a profitless 17 years . . . If some part of his invention has been patented by an earlier inventor who refuses to let him use it. But at the end of that period, the invention becomes accessible to the public at large and scientific knowledge is increased.

Women began making their contributions to scientific knowledge as early as 1809, when Mary Kies was granted a patent for a method of weaving straw with silk or thread.

A few thousand patents later, a former Congressman from Illinois named Abraham Lincoln received one for "A Device for Buoying Vessels over Shoals." The device must have been a success, because Lincoln later declared appreciatively, "The Patent System added the fuel of interest to the fire of genius."

Summer Coolers

Happy surprise! Both the frosty summer drinks and the cool fruited salad are penny-wise and calorie-wise besides being deliciously cooling. What makes them that way? A no-calorie sweetener which flatters the other flavors, and is a boon to weight-watching. Current market prices make this the economy sweetener as well. All of which means that it's possible to luxuriate in wonderful eating and feel smugly virtuous at the same time. Here's how it's done:

Fruit Medley Salad: Sprinkle 1 envelope (1 tablespoon) unflavored gelatin over 1/2 cup water in saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin is dissolved. Remove from heat. Add 3/4 cup water, 1/2 cup unsweetened orange juice, 1 1/2 teaspoons liquid Sweet'N0 and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Chill until thickened, but not set. Stir in 2 cups cut fresh fruit (oranges, strawberries, bananas, grapes, pears, peaches or melon balls). Turn into 3-cup mold or individual molds. Chill until firm. Makes six 1/2-cup servings.

Lemon-Lime Sparkle: Freeze 1 pint bottle (2 cups) sugar-free lemon-lime carbonated beverage in ice cube tray. Combine 1 quart cold water, 1 pint chilled sugar free lemon-lime carbonated beverage, 1 tablespoon liquid Sweet'N0 and 1 package lemon-lime flavored beverage powder. Serve with frozen carbonated beverage ice cubes.

Note: Other flavors of beverage powder may be substituted.

Illiteracy Declines

WASHINGTON—The estimated illiteracy rate in the United States in 1960 was only 2.4 percent, in contrast to 11.3 in 1900, according to the United States Census Bureau. Illiteracy means inability to read and write in English or in any other language.

State Plowing Contest August 15

The Pennsylvania State Plowing Contest on August 15, will be the second of two sod busting events that day on the Joseph Hooker farm, Bernville, R. D. 2, Charles W. Passmore, Lancaster general chairman, has announced.

First on the day's schedule will be the Berks County meet, last of a dozen county preliminaries. Berks plowmen will compete at 9 a. m. They will finish in time for the state finals to get under way at 12 noon. Each meet will have both contour and land contests.

Two other events have been added to the day's program, a tractor safety demonstration at 10 a. m. and 4-H and FFA tractor driving contests at 1 p. m. R. E. Patterson, Penn State University safety specialist, will conduct the morning demonstration, using remote control to send a tractor over a roped-off course simulating rough terrain.

Russell E. Runk, Sinking Springs, in charge of the Youth tractor driving, said all contestants will get $10 each and that trophies will go to the winners in each competition.

Passmore said the new state champions in contour and level land plowing will get trophies donated by the Pennsylvania Retail Farm and Industrial Equipment Association and the Farm Equipment Manufacturers Association of Pennsylvania.

Patterson will be chairman of judges for the state level land contest, and Henry Warner, Chambersburg, for the contour event. Plowmen competing for state honors, and all those in preliminary county matches, will be judged on uniformity and neatness of furrow, clean land ends, finished dead furrow, and general conformity to rules.

NEW YORK—Hotel telephone operators would rather have women than men leave wake-up calls. Women require fewer rings to awaken them.

Boating Tips...

Docking a boat is easier than parking a car because you can make the forces of nature help you, say Mercury outboard experts. Try to approach against the force applying most pressure on your boat, be it wind or current. If this force flows parallel to the dock, come in against it, bow angled toward the dock slightly. Shift to reverse to stop and secure the bow line. Your stern will swing toward the dock, and you can tie up aft. With an off-the-dock wind, approach head on, stopping a few feet from the dock. Secure the bow line, then power the stern into place. When the wind's astern, come close and parallel to the dock, then drift into place. If you must approach with the wind, drive parallel to the dock and secure the stern line first. The wind will push your bow into place.

A. A. U. Race Champion Walk Saturday Will Herald Waynesburg's Rain Day

National Group Acts to Preserve Giant Redwoods

The National Geographic Society has joined a major effort to preserve California's magnificent coast redwoods from their greatest enemy: man.

Many of the redwoods have withstood the ravages of time, fire, and flood since the time of Christ Jesus. Irresponsible logging now threatens the tallest trees on earth.

Dr. Melville Bell Grosvenor, president of the society, has announced a grant of $64,000 to the National Park Service for a year-long ecological survey of the coast-redwood region, leading to a broad program of conservation.

The research will concentrate on the Bull Creek groves, some 200 miles northwest of San Francisco, and the Del Norte groves near the Oregon border. Chester C. Brown of the Park Service will conduct the program in cooperation with California authorities.

Coast redwoods, graceful trees whose cinnamon-red boles and feathery-green foliage stretch 300 feet into the sky, rank among California's noblest natural wonders.

Since the early 1930s, individuals and the State of California have given millions of dollars to buy groves of the trees for preservation. The loftiest of the cathedral like forests rise from river flats, and face danger from above.

Because of overcutting of timber on the surrounding slopes, not enough plant cover remains in place to prevent landslides and to keep once-placid streams from growing into torrents.

In the winter of 1955-56, 50 acres of redwood flats were washed away. The flash floods toppled 300 towering trees, many of which were growing 2,000 years ago. Another 200 redwoods were undercut so badly that they crashed down later or had to be cut.

Extensive protective work has to be carried out by state agencies, but the washouts taught that changes anywhere in watersheds endanger the stability of forested flats. The Redwood League warns that "aggressive treatment" is needed both to heal existing watershed damage and to check further deterioration.

Numerous clubs are springing up throughout the country which are devoted to the advancement of this sport, many of which are located in the Pittsburgh area.

Waynesburg will become the race walking capital of the United States Saturday, when the second annual National Champion A. A. U. race walk is staged here under auspices of Waynesburg Junior Chamber of Commerce to inaugurate the Waynesburg Rain Day observance, on Monday, July 29.

The race this year will be a dual event, for both senior and junior walkers and will be extended to 30 kilometers. Last year's junior national championship was a 20-kilometer event.

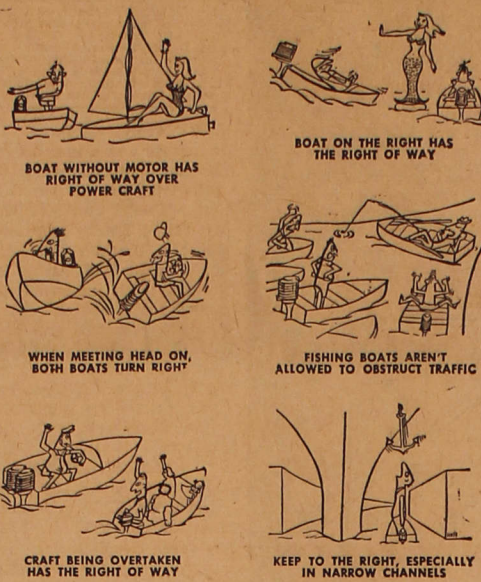

John Harwick, local race walker who won last year, will compete in the senior division. In a recent 30-kilometer walk at Detroit, he finished sixth in a field which included some of the nation's top walkers.

Entries have already been received from such widely-separated areas as New York City, New Jersey and Detroit.

The race again will be over Route 18 from Waynesburg paralleling the old Waynesburg and Washington narrow gauge railroad via Sycamore, Swartz, Deer Lick, West Union, and this year on to Dunn Station.

As a sport, race walking is efforts and is now gaining momentum in every part of the nation after having lagged for some years prior to and just after World War II.

Boating Tips...

Knowing the rules of the road is vital for safe and competent small boat handling. Since they are based on common sense, these rules are easy to learn and remember. Mercury boating authorities say the following are among the most important: keep to the right in narrow channels and when meeting another craft head on. And "commit" yourself early by turning off a collision course when there is still considerable distance between your boat and an oncoming one. Give way to any boat approaching in your danger zone—your right-hand side from dead ahead to slightly more than a right angle. Sailboats have right away over powerboats. Craft being overtaken and boats leaving docks also have the right of way. Observing these rules will enable you to meet any water-borne traffic situation with confidence.

Your Health

Pennsylvania Medical Society

The number of employed women in this country practically doubled between 1940 and 1960.

With 23,059,000 women employed, the proportion of women in the civilian working population has grown from one fourth to one third in the past twenty years.

The largest gain in employment of women since 1940 has been in clerical and kindred occupations.

There are 7,005,000 women in these occupations, or about 30 percent of female workers.

One out of every ten employed women is a secretary, stenographer or typist.

Over 3,000,000 women are employed in service occupations, including waitresses, cooks, beauticians, and practical nurses.

Private household work is a less popular occupation.

Women employed in private households in 1960 totalled 1,665,000, a reduction since 1940 of more than 300,000.

Within the past ten years

there has been a reported increase of 66 per cent in the production of publicly employed mothers with children of school age.

Practically half of the mothers of all children age 6 to 17 are employed, and 22 per cent of mothers of pre-school-age children.

Some authorities connect the growing number of working wives with the rising divorce rate.

Others blame parents for the antisocial action of some of today's teen-agers, pointing to lack of discipline and inadequate supervision when both parents are working eight hours a day.

DO YOU KNOW?

Women have better hearing than men, except at age fifty-one to sixty-five, when women have poorer hearing than men.

Peace for 150 Years

Ghent, Belgium, — Celebrations are planned in this medieval city next year to mark the 150th anniversary of the Treaty of Ghent. The Dec. 24, 1814 treaty ended hostilities between the United States and Britain and established the principle of the Freedom of the seas.

Some Can Love The Dandelion; Has Many Uses

WASHINGTON — Gardeners curse dandelions as pernicious pests, but gourmets, small children, and silkworms love them. The ubiquitous herb is, in fact remarkably useful.

In the spring, dandelion greens make a tasty salad when used with dressing. The greens also are widely used as potherbs, the National Geographic Society says. Epicures advise cutting the leaves while young, since they grow bitter with age.

The venturesome fry dandelion blossoms and say they taste like fried mushrooms. Others swear by a dandelion as a spring tonic. The dried roots are sold as the drug Taraxacum.

Roasted and ground, dandelion roots can be brewed into a palatable, but bitter, coffee. The inhabitants of the Mediterranean island of Minorca once survived a famine by eating dandelion roots.

Dandelion greens are fed to silkworms when mulberry leaves their usual diet are scarce.

Wine pressed from the golden yellow flowers is a staple of Americana, conjuring up memories of starched spinsters and shaded parlors. In Ray Bradbury's nostalgic novel, "Dandelion Wine," bottles of the golden liquid are described as "summer caught and stoppered."

The milky latex of the perennial Russian dandelion is a commercial source of rubber in the Soviet Union. The United States experimented with dandelion rubber during the Second World War.

The dandelion has sprouted a number of other strange beliefs. When dandelions don't open on Maryland mornings, it will rain. When the down flies off the stalk of windless days, it will be dry. Dandelions gathered on St. John's (Midsummer) Eve in Silesia ward off witches.

The dandelion derives its popular name from a corruption of the French dent-de-lion (lion's tooth), because of the leaves' toothlike lobes. The plant is known by many other names, ranging from the terse epithets of gardeners to blowball, cankerwort, doon-head-clock, fortuneteller, horse gawon, yellow gowan, and Irish daisy.

The hardy dandelion has adapted itself to many climates in North America, Europe, central Asia, and arctic regions. It reached America from Europe soon after the first colonists arrived. The plant sailed over, perhaps, in the earthen ballast then carried by many ships.

Grass growers agree.

MIAMI, Fla. — A street-corner newsboy had just been delivered two large bundles of papers. It was a windy afternoon and he was struggling to hold down the papers when a motorist honked and asked for a paper. The newsboy thought a moment, pulled off his shoes, put one on each bundle and ran in stocking feet to his customer.

Greene Leads In Bounties for Foxes

Bounty payments of foxes and great horned owls cost Pennsylvania hunters $93,895 during the last fiscal year which ended June 30.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission reported today that bounties of four dollars each were paid on 7,881 gray foxes and 14,089 red foxes. Bounty payments of five dollars each were also made on 1,203 great horned owls. The totals were down slightly over the previous fiscal year when 8,951 gray foxes, 18,406 red foxes and 1,406 great horned owls were probed through the Commission's bounty office at a total payment of $116,458. No bounty payments were made from the opening of the small game season through December during each of the past two fiscal years.

Greene County trappers or hunters took 401 gray fox bounties last year to lead the state. The greatest number of red fox claims (647) came from Crawford County while Bradford and Crawford Counties each had 57 great horned owl claims, tops in the state.

Aging Lumberjack Finally Slackens Pace at 70 Years

OLYMPIA, Wash. — A 70-year-old lumberjack, Swantee Kyllonen, who has been topping trees since the days of the highline and the donkey engine, says he isn't ready to quit yet.

But he admits he is trying to slow down a little.

Perched on a springboard 70 feet in the air, Kyllonen chops the tops off of trees, shunning the climbing spurs and belt and saw used by the more cautious youngsters of a later generation.

Kyllonen says he is the only person left in the country who knows how to use the steel-tipped springboards which are inserted into notches cut into the sides of the trees.

Claiming to be semi-retired, he still performs at logging shows as often as every other month. Each summer he demonstrates his skill at a big show in Arcata, Calif., and at an international logging show in Hayward, Wis.

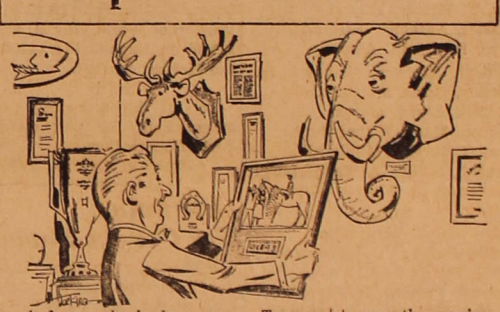

Kyllonen says he no longer works more than 70 feet above the ground, not because he can't go higher, but because it throws too much of a scare into the spectators.

As for himself, Kyllonen admits he isn't as good as he was 10 years ago, but he says he isn't going to quit until he starts feeling shaky up there.

Born on a homestead in Puget Sound logging country north of Seattle, Kyllonen learned to cut the tops off trees in 1914, at about the time that loggers started using safety ropes.

Expensive Souvenirs

A few weeks back, a news item out of Louisville, Kentucky, expressed the puzzlement of Churchill Downs management over the fact that the purchasers of 274 tickets on the Kentucky Derby winner, Chateaugay, had gone home leaving $4,398 unclaimed. One might say "That ain't hay!" but it is only "peanuts" compared to the carelessness of racing fans in New York. During 296 days of racing in the Empire State in 1962, a total of $225,255.30 in winning tickets were left uncashed. Trotting horse fans are a little less blasé about their winnings. During 721 nights of harness racing, only $207,407.15 went without claimants. This phenomenon cannot be blamed on atom bomb testing or the indiscriminate use of pesticides.

To a not-too-greatly varying amount, the "outs" or uncashed winnings tickets, have, since the advent of pari-mutuel betting, offered racing an annual mystery which stumps even the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau. It may be that some uncashed tickets are framed and hung in dens as souvenirs; others may have been tucked away for safe keeping and inadvertently sent with the suit to the cleaners. But, perhaps, among racing's ever growing audience, there are some newcomers who do not realize that a "show" or "place" ticket is cashable when the horse wins or that a "combination" ticket has value even if the horse runs third. The unclaimed money is not completely "lost"; it goes to the State after a reasonable period.

Saga of Homer

education and the beginning of a new life. He told his audience of his success in winning election in Massachusetts. 'I was a Republican in a Democratic State; a Protestant in a Catholic State; and a Negro of a race which has less than 2% of the population.'

'Later I attended a luncheon given by the president's wife in their beautiful home, and was given God-speed on my return home.'

'I traveled a thousand miles the short time I was away, and was in four different states.'

It took Homer Jackson over three score years to make his wonderful friends in the North, but on his trip to the Deep South he was gone but a week.

The first Negro to give his life for his country was Crispus Attucks, on Monday, March 5, 1779, in the "Boston Massacre." Crispus Attucks, who made history was the first man to fall, mortally wounded, that day.

Homer, as he should be, is proud of his family's war record. His great-grandfather, John Workman, fought in the War Between the States; his father, Louis Edward Jackson, was a first class sergeant in the Spanish American War, Homer is a veteran of World War I, and went overseas. His son, Barney is a veteran of World War II, and his grandson, Eugene, is a veteran of the Korean conflict.

So, all the foregoing can be summed up by one quotation from Robert Burns:

"A man's a man for a' that."

In Our Time

NEVER-ENDING SEARCH!
 EVERY YEAR, UNITED STATES OILMEN DRILL NEARLY 200 MILLION FEET IN THE SEARCH FOR OIL AND GAS. THIS IS EQUIVALENT TO BORING ALL THE WAY THROUGH THE EARTH MORE THAN FOUR AND A HALF TIMES!

MORE THAN HALF A MILLION U.S. DRILLING VENTURES IN THE PAST 100 YEARS WERE "DRY HOLES." ONLY 3 OUT OF 100 OIL AND GAS WELLS DRILLED IN NEW FIELDS ARE COMMERCIAL SUCCESSFUL.

DESPITE SUCH ODDS, OILMEN CONTINUE THEIR NEVER-ENDING SEARCH FOR NEW RESERVES, BETTER DRILLING AND PRODUCTION TECHNIQUES, AND RECOVERY METHODS THAT WILL PRODUCE THE MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF OIL AND GAS FOR THE NATION'S EVER-GROWING ENERGY NEEDS.

Bit by bit... every litter bit hurts

DON'T BE A LITTERBUG! If litter bugs you—as it does most people, don't you be the guilty one. Stash that trash in the litter basket at the beach. And you're not being square, you're being smart to carry a litterbag in your car. Because tossing litter away is like tossing money away. You could be fined for breaking the laws against littering. So always stick your litter in the basket—then you won't get stuck with a fine. And you will help KEEP AMERICA BEAUTIFUL!
