Garbage Contract To Be Awarded September 3

Waynesburg Borough Council will award the contract for collection and disposal of refuse at the next meeting Tuesday, September 3. The contract will be for a five-year period.

Bids were opened at Tuesday night's meeting from two contractors.

They were from Walter A. Bruce of Waynesburg, who has operated a refuse collection company in the borough for 30 years, and the National Sanitation Company, owned by Jack Williams of Waynesburg, R. D. 2, whose company presently collects refuse from 12 communities.

Bruce's bids were, $2 per household for a weekly collection during the months of October through April; $3 per household for twice a week service during the months of May through September; and $2.40 per month for collection once a week October through April and twice a week from May through September.

The bid calls for a payment of $100 per month to the borough for the privilege of operating a landfill dump.

Bruce's company will charge 35c per passenger automobile trip; 50c per pickup or panel truck; $2 per "U" plate vehicles; and $3 for all "V" plate and larger vehicles.

Bids by Williams' company were $2.15 per month or $5.75 per quarter for refuse collection once a week during the months of October through April and twice a week during the months of May through September.

The National Sanitation Company will pay the borough $25 per month for the privilege of operating the landfill dump on borough land.

It will charge 50c per passenger car trip; $1 for pickup truck or panel truck load; 50c per "U" plate vehicle trip; and $2 per "V" plate or larger vehicle load.

The new program, which is expected to be in operation by October 1, will eliminate the present open dump which has been condemned by the Pennsylvania Health Department for a number of years.

Greene County Commissioners have applied to the Pennsylvania Department of Commerce to organize a five-man Redevelopment Authority.

The authority would have the power to acquire, sell and lease property, to borrow money or to set up a bond issue for redevelopment purposes.

The authority would cooperate with local governments and act as an agent for state and federal governments in the area of redevelopment. It may also apply for federal aid.

Blighted areas, of which there are many in Greene County, would be recommended to the authority for study and redevelopment.

The authority would be established under the Urban Redevelopment Law of May 24, 1945.

The commissioners were requested by Waynesburg Borough to set up such an authority. The Waynesburg Planning Commission had recommended it as a means of aiding in the improvement of certain areas in the borough, namely Red Bird Hollow.

Sub-standard areas are harmful to the economic and social life of the entire community.

Carmichaels 10th Coal Show Plans Progress

Final plans for the Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show at Carmichaels, September 3 through 7, will be discussed at the King Coal Association meeting Thursday night at eight o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce room.

The parade will be held Saturday, September 7, at two o'clock.

The bands and marching units will form on the Nemaquin road, as last year, and fall in line of march from there. The floats and other units will assemble at the Sky View Drive-in on Route 88.

Mrs. Patrick Donovan, chairman of the Coal Queen committee, announced there are 17 contestants. Mrs. Walter Atalski is co-chairman of the committee. Other members are Mrs. Allan Baily, Mrs. Edwin Flowers, Mrs. Carl Blaker and Mrs. Frank Porter.

Mrs. Donovan will take the contestants to a matinee at the Nat King Cole Revue at the Civic Arena next Wednesday. The party will also have dinner after the show.

The candidates will also be guests of the Carmichaels-Cumberland Township Women's Civic Club at a tea on Thursday, September 5, in the First Presbyterian Church.

Parade day Saturday, September 7, the Queen Committee will host the girls at a luncheon in the Hartley Inn.

Ellis Burnette is parade chairman, and James Yeash is in charge of the advance ticket sale for the carnival.

A partial listing of exhibits for the coal show includes a jet display from the Greater Pittsburgh Airport; model replicas of steam power engines and steam boilers by U. P. (Slim) Rembold and Don H. McKee; Tri-State Bumper in Fredericktown; Social Security; U. S. Army; ceramics by Mrs. Margaret Davis; and Corl Auto Supply.

Wrestling matches and a large auction will be held on Friday night, September 6.

Harold Wood Winner Of Gallatin Contest

Harold B. Wood of Waynesburg, R. D. 5, was the winner of Gallatin National Bank's "money jar" guessing contest at the bank's booth at the Greene County Fair. Mr. Wood's guess of $89.37 equaled the exact amount of money in the jar, made up of coins of 1, 5, 10, 25, and 50 cent denominations.

Second and third closest guesses were $89.35 and $89.40, each missing by just 3 cents. It is interesting to note that, of more than 7,000 guesses, 88 were between $89.00 and $89.99.

Our Foreign Aid Fuss and Fury

U. S. Representative Otto Passman has said he knows of no program more complex and confusing than our foreign aid program.

Representative Passman, Chairman of the Foreign Operations Subcommittee on Appropriations, made the statement while rendering an official report on available foreign aid funds. He estimated that as of June 30, more than seven billion dollars was on hand in the form of unexpended, but obligated foreign aid funds.

He pointed out that if Congress were to refuse to appropriate another dollar for foreign aid, the program could go on because every legal foreign aid commitment has been assigned funds.

Many Americans feel that foreign aid is helpful, but there is a need to explore some aspects of the program which seem questionable: its cost; the "pyramiding" of available funds; its sometimes illusory terminology, and the often curious application of foreign aid dollars.

Congressman Passman commented on the second of these aspects in rendering his report. He said that between 1960 and 1963, available foreign aid funds rose from 8.1 billion dollars to 11.1 billion dollars, while actual expenditures decreased between 1960 and 1962.

As a result, unexpected foreign aid dollars rose from 4.8 billions in 1960 to almost seven billions in 1962. Then he posed the following question:

"Is it really the desire of Congress to permit the Agency for International Development to continue pyramiding funds and programs years in advance of actual expenditures? This practice accounts for the annual increase in unexpected funds. 'Certainly the actual annual expenditures do not justify this practice.'"

Fletcher Back From Workhouse To County Jail

James Morris Fletcher, 45, of Bobtown, was back in the Greene County Jail Thursday after being released from the Allegheny County Workhouse where he had been serving a sentence for burglary.

Greene County officials picked him up after he was released on parole from Fayette County, where he had been sentenced last month for being implicated in a tavern burglary at Coolspring.

In Greene County, Fletcher still faces two burglary charges which police say he committed last year.

He also faces extradition to North Carolina, where he is wanted as a fugitive from justice for escaping from a prison road gang in 1943.

The Greene County Court with Judge Samuel J. Feigus of Fayette County, specially presiding — recently turned down Fletcher's petition for a stay of extradition, but Fletcher has appealed the ruling to the State Supreme Court.

Warren E. Galloway, 49, of Waynesburg, R. D. 1, plead guilty to charges of burglary and larceny Monday before Judge J. I. Hook.

Galloway was one of five charged with theft of more than $3,000 from the W. L. Stewart Motor Company, Watson's Used Car Lot, and Waynesburg Roller Rink, all in Waynesburg; American Legion post at Jefferson; and the Golden Oaks Park service station near Rogersville.

Galloway was the fourth arrested on the charges, to plead guilty. The fifth, Thomas McDonald, 23, of Waynesburg, has not entered a plea.

Galloway's brother, Francis, 39, of Waynesburg, R. D. 1, Harry Durbin, 22, of Waynesburg, and Naomi Tucker Fields, 35, of Waynesburg, R. D. 1, previously plead guilty and are serving sentences.

Warren Galloway was sentenced to serve two to six years in Western Penitentiary, to pay court costs, and restore property stolen or the value thereof.

Frederick E. Wilson, 18, of Waynesburg, R. D. 3, was given

This might cause many persons to wonder if foreign aid spending can be cut. Proponents of the program indicate that it should not be curtailed. They say that a sizeable portion of foreign aid represents long-term plans already under way. Should foreign aid spending be cut, they argue, the long-range plans might also be curtailed. They point out that such an act would be like throwing money down the drain.

Another important facet of foreign aid to be considered is its terminology. The day-to-day reports on foreign aid spending are confusing. For instance, we hear more about the military and economic appropriation because it is this portion that has the most direct effect on nations which receive aid.

The appropriation for military and economic aid for last year was 3.9 billion dollars. Hearing this figure so often, one might think that 3.9 billion dollars was the full amount of foreign aid for fiscal 1963.

In reality, the foreign assistance appropriation last year was 8.3 billion dollars. One Congressional committee explains the figure in this manner: nearly four billion dollars for military and economic assistance; two billion dollars each for the Export-Import Bank and International Monetary Fund, and an additional amount for the Peace Corps and other agencies.

To be weighed in any consideration of foreign aid is the application of its dollars. Aid to Haiti was cut off because Francois Duvalier, the Haitian leader, was classified realistically as a dictator. This is a sane approach because the United States is opposed to dictatorships.

But our policy seems schizophrenic when we realize that while refusing to give aid to Duvalier, we are sending millions of dollars to Sukarno. (Turn to Page Four)

West Penn's New Mitchell Station Now In Operation

A large additional supply of electricity was made available to the customers of West Penn Power Company on Tuesday, when the new giant generating unit at the Mitchell Power Station, near Monongahela, began to produce electricity.

S. L. Drumm, president of West Penn, threw the switch in the control room that placed the 270,000-kilowatt unit in operation. It will be operated at somewhat below its full generating capability for a short time, then close down for necessary adjustments before it begins full-time commercial generation.

The largest single generating unit in any West Penn station, the $39 million addition to Mitchell station also has the highest power generating capability of the Allegheny Power System, of which West Penn is part.

This generator will use bituminous coal exclusively as fuel and, when operating at full capacity, will consume approximately 2,500 tons of coal a day. The completion of this unit again reiterates West Penn's confidence in coal as the lowest cost source of energy for producing electricity in Western Pennsylvania.

The first two Mitchell generating units, with a total capability of 180,000 kilowatts, were completed in 1948 and 1949 in time to meet post-World War II industrial growth, and continued expansion of commercial and home use of electric service.

W. Floyd Drummond, Mitchell station superintendent, said that dedicatory ceremonies and public and employe open houses will be held in early October, after crews have completed final details involved in the project's construction.

The Bertucci Construction Company of Perryopolis, R. D. 2, on Monday received the contract for Section 5 of Interstate Route 70, North-South Highway, at a bid of $2,116,799.25 for building 2.22. This is the first part of the North-South Highway to be built in Greene County.

They are expected to move machinery to the job by October 9. The company would like to begin soon due to approaching winter, but a certain amount of paper work is yet to be completed.

There are three other sections of the interstate route which are expected to be in the bidding stage or possibly under construction by the end of the year.

Section Five starts just south of the Lippencott Road near Ruff Creek and goes to a point just north of Route 188, two and one-half miles east of Waynesburg.

It does not include interchanges at Ruff Creek or Waynesburg. The interchange at Ruff Creek is a part of Section Five while the Waynesburg exit is on Section Six.

The highway, to be designated as Pennsylvania Route 1030 for construction purposes, will follow the standard interstate highway construction design of two concrete lanes totaling 24 feet in width on each side of a 60-foot earth medial strip.

Construction of two bridges is included in the project. One of the bridges will provide an overpass of Township Road 575; the other will serve a similar crossing of Legislative Route 30072.

Each will have four spans and a two-lane roadway.

Interstate route 70 extends from Erie south to the West Virginia line through Meadville, Zelenople, Pittsburgh, Washington and Waynesburg.

A 14-mile section south from Route 21 to the West Virginia line is in the engineering stage.

Bids will be asked for Sections Four and Six soon.

Section Four is approximately three miles from Ruff Creek north to the Washington County line. It includes the Ruff Creek interchange.

Section Six includes the Waynesburg interchange and is a mile and a fourth from Route 188 south.

Dr. Rosemary Park, President of Barnard College, Talks Informally with a Young Collegian

Women, Salad, and College

BY MARY KELLY

Special Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

REPRODUCED BY SPECIAL PERMISSION

NEW YORK—"The best thing that ever happened to women's education in the United States is probably Cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova."

The words were tossed out lightly. The speaker, a dainty 5' 1" woman, presented an immediate contrast to the athletic Soviet spacewoman to whom she paid such significant tribute. In fact, Miss Rosemary Park, president of Barnard College, has been told more than once that she looks like "somebody's little girl." Humor flickers over her face of youthful charm when she tells this. But when it comes to discussing the theme of the American woman in depth, there is no doubt about her seriousness.

"We remember the effect Sputnik had upon education in this country," she said. "This time we may be roused to realizing that we have a vast reserve of brainpower here that we have not chosen to use. It has been only the woman of great drive and aggressiveness who has been able to break through. But an event of this kind may show us up to ourselves."

As head of 75-year-old Barnard, undergraduate college at Columbia University, she sees untouched opportunities not only for the 1,500 young women now enrolled, but for thousands of alumnae who have gone on into marriage or other careers. The educated woman, she has said, can make more telling use of her talents and training than she has done thus far in an effort to elevate taste generally.

Accent Asked on the Aesthetic

At a diploma ceremony held recently, she asked graduates to further develop the aesthetic and to build a "new style of life." "You might compare it to saladmaking," she said, as we chatted in her comfortable office one quiet morning. Outside, the foliage was full, but inside the corridors and rooms were all but empty. The students had gone home—or to some summer pursuit.

Now at the close of her first year as Barnard's president, it seemed a fitting time for relaxed and reflective thinking. "Today we see a widespread interest in good cooking. I've seen this develop in my lifetime. I remember the inevitable salad of bygone days—the piece of lettuce with a tomato plopped on top of it, then a hasty sprinkling of salad oil from a bottle."

"But women have become much more sophisticated. Salads are much more creative and more interesting, based partly on what has been learned from the continental chefs. There are tremendous varieties of salads, involving fresh combinations and the use of 'leftovers'."

"I wish we could see a similar development in cultural standards. The interest in good music and good pictures ought not to be confined to a small clique. It is not enough to feel there is a leadership potential—the movement has to be in solution."

Community Housekeeping, Too

Maintaining a better home involves a search for better fabrics and the best possible environment, Miss Park says. Perhaps the alumna, 10 years out of college, has forgotten how much knowledge, skill, and freedom are actually hers.

"Women who have been to college have had some exposure to history and art. It is our responsibility to see that an educated approach to living doesn't die out in a mass society."

The trained thinker can find plenty of challenge today in the art of community housekeeping, too, according to Miss Park. In her travels around the world, she continued, she found littered streets in Europe, Asian and American capitals. "Cigarette discards and bits of plastic paper point to the industrial civilization of today and, at the same time, show that we condone dirt and neglect."

At the other extreme the American woman is under influences such as Madison Avenue to keep up a facade, she said. Sometimes there are no serious home problems, and there is a tendency to solve them with speed and convenience when they do occur.

"But the educated woman can be a leaven in society, if she cares enough. She can show that she is concerned about the quality of our living today. And she doesn't have to be prissy about this."

'Everybody Listens, Even the Students'

Miss Park, who prefers not to be called Doctor, hardly looked like a pedagogic crusader as she spoke. Under the soft fall of wavy hair, her features have a light charm as she speaks of important things. Apparently this naturalness has endeared her to students.

"When she speaks, everybody listens," one student was heard to say, adding cheerfully, "even the students!" "She is sympathetic to what is important to students," said another Barnard girl. "It's very easy to take our problems right to her."

"She is warm and friendly," said still another. "We admire her, too, because she has a fantastic background and is so highly respected by other educators."

Girls today are not very different from what they were a generation ago, says Miss Park. "At least they haven't changed the model," she observed. "I think they are more serious about the big issues than they were 20 years ago. They are beginning to realize that they must master their relationship to the community as a whole. If there is one thing they are all concerned about it is racial equality. On that they have settled their minds."

"But in some of the other large areas related to living they are not as radical as I think we have to be to adjust to the world. They are not asking enough questions at a time when—shall we say—we are about to colonize the planets! We are adding a dimension and they do not seem to be fully aware of this."

Education Liked Her, Too

Few things, beyond the immediate job, interest her more than does the development of art. In her various travels to other countries, almost her first question on landing is: "Where is it?"—meaning the art gallery or museum.

She was born in Andover, Massachusetts. There was a time in her school days when she thought she'd like to be a pianist. Teaching was not something that she set out to do, but at an early age she began preparing for it with sustained effort. True, there were educators in the family. Her father, the late Dr. J. Edgar Park, was president of Wheaton College. Today her brother, Dr. William E. Park, is president of Simmons College, Boston.

"I felt no strong urge toward one profession. I think I might have made a good lawyer or enjoyed newspaper work. But the opportunity came to teach a foreign language at Wheaton College. I found I liked teaching immensely."

If she liked education as a field, the record certainly shows that education liked her.

Graduated cum laude from Radcliffe College, getting her doctorate magna cum laude from the University of Cologne, then studying on an exchange fellowship at the University of Bonn, Miss Park embarked on a career of varied experience that brought many honors. The list of honorary degrees and awards she has won is long. Before coming to Barnard, where she succeeded Mrs. Rustin McIntosh as president, she was president of Connecticut College.

Challenges in New York Valued

At Barnard, which is New York City's first college for women, she said she values particularly the experience of working in a woman's college in a big city where typically modern problems impinge.

Advantages of a college education in New York City, it has been pointed out, include opportunities for observation and research at the United Nations, the stock exchanges, in the theater world, museums, at art exhibitions, television studios, and other centers of culture. Field work in the social sciences and contacts with students from other universities and colleges are encouraged. Barnard is sometimes described as one of the "women's Ivy League" colleges.

About 18 percent of this year's students were married during undergraduate years.

"I'm not sure of the significance of these early marriages," Miss Park says. "I think the number of them has begun to decline somewhat. There is reason to think that girls should learn to live alone at first. This urge for more mature living can come by way of marriage, too, but the rate of growth for each individual is different."

Ambiguity Seen in Mores

While the college girl's morals are sometimes under criticism today, Miss Park says that this is partly because the mores regulating sex are not as clearly defined as in former years.

"Officially we say one thing. In society the practices are different, and this results in some ambiguity for the students," according to Miss Park. She says that young women today have good common sense and that more specific information from psychologists and other consultants could be of real assistance to them.

In her inauguration speech this spring, Miss Park noted that the natural scientist is the "high priest" of our civilization today. This involves danger in what it may do to liberal-arts education, she feels.

"There are various kinds of truth," she said later in discussing her views. "The scientist has one kind of truth, but this does not exhaust all kinds of truth that exist. There is the kind of truth which people create for themselves." In this lies the interpretation of history, ethics, and religion, she added; the creation of something the student did not know previously. Sometimes it is the nonconformist kind of truth.

Speaking of the assumption that what the scientific investigator discovers is the only valid truth, she declared in her inaugural address, "I believe that the whole history of the liberal arts, as arts, the practice of which makes men free, is derived from a different assumption."

"I am conscious of the grandeur of the liberal tradition to which the college is pledged and of Barnard's particular responsibility within its sheltering university, to represent a symbiosis of both approaches to truth—the one which assumes the rationality of the world and discovers answers to its questions framed on this assumption, and the other which is free to question even this principle of rationality, because it teaches that disciplined men have the power within them to create a new world in imagination and in hope."

EDITOR'S NOTE: The only excuse we can give for printing the foregoing is that we graduated from Barnard College some forty years ago, when Virginia Crocherson Gildersleeve was the dean.

Dear Me Suds! The Family Vote?

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Republican housewives beware:

That cheerful next-door neighbor offering to help with the laundry may have more than soapsuds on her mind. She may be a Democrat intent on capturing your family's vote.

At least that's what will happen if Democratic women precinct workers follow the detailed instructions handed out at the party's recent state convention.

Women delegates listened intently at seminars aimed at teaching them how to turn a neighborly gesture into a vote for President Kennedy in 1964. Everybody was given a manual called the Democratic Precinct Handbook.

"Friendship is the strongest asset a precinct worker can develop," the booklet says.

Your Health
Pennsylvania Medical Society

The examination of a boy who wants to be an athlete puts the examining physician in a difficult position.

Being turned down from something he wants to do, something that will build his morale and ego, can cause psychological trauma to a boy.

Often there is much pressure exerted by interested parties in an endeavor to have some particular athletic aspirant given a clear bill of health by the examining physician.

But physicians have standards when qualifying or disqualifying anybody for anything, and are not to be coerced into confirming that a boy is qualified to be an athlete when he is not, even though he may have skills much needed by an athletic department.

Problems confront the physician in examining prospective athletes.

There are three major areas where disqualifying defects are often detected.

The metabolic diseases are a factor, especially diabetes.

Diabetes, as such, is not always considered a disqualifying disease if the diabetic is adequately controlled either with or without insulin.

But often there are insulin reactions associated with increased exercise.

Kidney disease is a serious matter, and while the result of tests may not be alarming during examination, the added stress of athletic competition can put a heavy load on the kidney function, with dire results.

There are problems of the cardiovascular-respiratory system, which frequently include heart and blood pressure abnormalities.

A youth needs to be in good health when competing in sports especially the contact ones such as football, basketball, wrestling and hockey.

Settle Senecas, Lawmaker Urges

WASHINGTON—The head of a House subcommittee on Indian affairs says he will seek to bar the Kinzua Dam project from opening until displaced Seneca Indians receive suitable accommodations.

The massive reservoir in Warren County, Pennsylvania, is a bulwark in the flood control network for Pittsburgh and other Western Pennsylvania communities. It is scheduled for completion in 1965.

Representative James A. Haley said he will introduce a House resolution to assure that the Senecas are given adequate homes.

Mr. Haley, a Florida Democrat, is chairman of the Interior subcommittee on Indian affairs.

He said that unless some speedy agreement is reached on constructing new roads and other facilities for the Senecas he will take steps to hold up opening of the flood control project.

An estimated 4,200 Senecas will lose 10,000 acres of ground at the site of the Kinzua Dam.

Mr. Haley has been critical of heel dragging in settling Seneca claims for their property in view of the fact that the dam is slated to open in less than two years.

Fill'er Up, Please Just 18,000 Gallons!

NEW YORK — Today's long-range jets consume 18,000 gallons each eight-hour day, according to Oil Facts, published by the American Petroleum Institute.

A typical jet flying from New York to Miami, a 145-minute trip, will burn about 5,000 gallons of fuel. A like quantity of gasoline would last an average passenger car about seven years.

Even this quantity of fuel is small compared with the 14,000 gallons of fuel which the proposed supersonic transports are expected to gulp each hour.

OUR FOREIGN AID FUSS

In April, Sukarno was elected chief-of-state for life by the People's Consultative Congress which he appointed. This is contrary to the Indonesian Constitution which requires the election of a president every five years.

There are other examples of moral misapplication of U. S. aid dollars. Ghana, a restless new African nation which leans toward Russia, receives U. S. aid while it echoes Moscow's charges that the United States is "imperialistic."

Poland is solidly in the communist camp, but receives much U. S. aid in the hope that its freedom-loving people will throw off communist rule. In the latter part of May, the Western bloc accused Poland of not fulfilling its responsibilities as a member of the International Control Commission which is supposed to maintain peace in Laos.

The West accused Poland of blocking efforts to place an I. C. C. team in areas controlled by the communists in Laos. Poland replied that the United States, not Poland, was the cause of increased tension in that country. Poland has taken many other actions contrary to the promotion of human freedoms. It may be a long time before the Poles throw off communism.

The relation of aid to Brazil is a study in frustration. Recently, the United States loaned Brazil 400 million dollars. Soon afterward, the Brazilians announced a five-year trade agreement with the Soviet Union. Representative William C. Cramer charged that the loan was made "to beef up Brazil's ability to trade with Russia... at the expense of the American taxpayer."

The lawmaker also pointed out a shocking aspect of the trade agreement. He quoted a news dispatch which said the agreement was spelled out in terms of American dollars.

Representative Bruce Alger said that the government should begin considering the taxpayers when it recommends a foreign aid budget. He said:

"The hard-pressed taxpayers want the battle of the budget to be won. They expect a victory in fiscal responsibility, and need the security of sound currency and a government oriented around freedom and capitalism...."

"The American citizen is tired of shipping food and supplies to other nations who transship them to enemies who are busy killing Americans. Our taxpayers are tired of the farce of aiding socialists and communists in the name of Christian charity, and saddling the debt on our children of the future.

"If treason is defined as giving aid and comfort to the enemy, how can we give aid to communists and socialists? Are they enemies or not?"

Representative Alger charged that U. S. foreign aid has:

- Subsidized the enslavement of foreign citizens while being given in the interest of progress and freedom.
- Robbed countries of initiative, inventiveness and self-respect.
- Caused a serious outflow of U. S. gold, thus undermining the strength of the U. S. dollar.
- Been given to dictators who misuse the money, re-label foreign aid goods, and build bank deposits in Switzerland.

In the face of such criticism, Chester Bowles, proponent of foreign aid, claimed that there have been no territorial gains by the communists in Europe in the 15 years since the Marshall plan got under way. He said that American aid had accomplished what it had set out to do, and that today we are dealing with prosperous, independent European allies.

In the following statement, he emphasizes the cause of the sound and the fury which accompanies discussions about foreign aid: "The record shows that foreign aid, when handled wisely, can succeed in doing what it sets out to do."

The point is that foreign aid has often been handled unwisely.

Here are a few examples:

- Ten million dollars for a palace in Liberia, a country with more than its share of human misery.

- Ten and one-half million dollars for textile mills in Sudan and Ethiopia, while U. S. textile mills are suffering.

- Three hundred and forty-three thousand dollars for educational television in Nigeria, though there are only two TV stations and very few TV sets in the country.

- Thirty-four million 700,000 dollars for a highway in Cambodia. Planning was so poor that the original 15 million dollar appropriation fell far short of costs.

- Two hundred and twenty-seven thousand dollars for generators which were sent to Laos. Actual cost was 44 thousand dollars. The difference disappeared through fraudulent invoicing.

Such examples illustrate why foreign aid is criticized. American aid has become so big that it is unmanageable and wasteful.

To the critic of foreign aid, this waste is highly irritating as the United States finds itself less able to free itself of an astronomical national debt.

It must be remembered that the astounding level of government spending, spurred on by such programs as foreign aid, has endangered national prestige, the U. S. dollar, and the economic well-being of each and every American taxpayer.

WE SHARE THE BLAME

"We should now be aware that we are threatened by total State Socialism, an ancient tyranny under a modern disguise. If we are to survive as a nation of free men, we must oppose socialism with all our vigor whenever it appears."

Those words were spoken recently by Retired Admiral Ben Moreel in Washington.

"I'm fed up to here with pseudo-statesmen whose wishbones are where their backbones ought to be, who are past masters of surrender, compromise, appeasement and accommodation, who believe friends can be bought like sacks of potatoes, who fawn upon, cajole and pamper our enemies and the so-called 'unaligned' nations while they kick our time-tested friends in the teeth, who would depend upon United Nations mercenaries for the security of these United States.... and who believe that the next time Khrushchev will surely honor his commitment...."

"I'm fed up to here with the wiser-than-thou, self-anointed oracles who insist that... free Americans must not criticize programs or diplomats, who, over the past 30 years, have racked up an almost unbroken string of losses to Communism throughout the world... with those who insist that we must subsidize with massive foreign aid arrogant socialist and communist governments, though while doing so, we help dictators enslave their peoples.

"I'm fed up to here with Robin Hood government that promises to rob the rich to pay the poor and, when there are not enough rich left to pay the bills, robs the rich and poor alike to pay Robin Hood; with candidates who run on a platform of 'I can get more from government for you,' without mention of what the government must take from you...."

"I'm fed up to here with businessmen who are so busy making and selling widgets at a steadily decreasing profit, that they have no time or energy left to fight for the system that made their business possible;... or who 'play ball' with the political apparatus when there is a potential 'payoff' in government largess.

"I'm fed up to here with farmers who boast of their rugged individualism but demand guaranteed incomes...; with doctors who oppose socialized medicine but 'plug' for subsidized medical education...; with educators who profess a belief in personal responsibility as a builder of character but insist that government aid to education is essential to national survival.

"...all of us must share the blame for our present predicament."

LOSS AND NO TAXES

The United States Government owns and operates hundreds of industrial enterprises—the exact number of which is difficult to determine.

Every government-operated business or industry actively competes against personal enterprise, the basis upon which our economic system has prospered. When needs exist for the goods or services, it is the normal function of private business to provide those goods and services at a price affording the concern a profit.

In times of national emergency—and particularly in times of war—the government creates business-type projects which, by their nature and magnitude, are not operated to make a profit.

The government could, and should, cease operating its businesses, sell the plants to private, tax-paying concerns, and use the money received to reduce the national debt of more than 300 billion dollars.

It has been variously estimated that the sale of government businesses and properties could, within a few years, reduce the national debt by a third to a half.

Enjoy The Lazy Summer Days

Easy-does-it meals... outdoors... hit the spot during the summer. Make the most of your patio, terrace, or backyard... and grill... for those wonderful lazy, hazy days go by so quickly.

Delight all with a tempting barbecued flank-steak basted as it cooks with a zesty canned condensed tomato soup-sauce. The soup is enhanced with green pepper, onion, garlic and other seasonings. You can prepare it early in the day so its all ready to be toted out to the grill at the appointed hour.

A perfect addition is corn on the cob... grill cooked, too. Simply wrap it in foil and roast over the coals for 15 to 20 minutes, turning several times. Crisp crunchy relishes and fresh peach shortcake complete the menu.

Zesty Barbecue Sauce

- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1 medium clove garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- 1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed tomato soup
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Dash "Tabasco" sauce

In saucepan, cook green pepper, onion, and garlic in oil until vegetables are tender. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer about 10 minutes, stirring now and then. Makes 2 cups sauce.

Flank Steak (Outdoors): Prepare sauce. Score a 1 1/2 to 2-pound flank steak. Place steak on grill about 4 inches above glowing coals. Cook about 6 minutes on each side or until desired doneness, brushing with sauce often. Heat remaining sauce and serve with meat. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Kilmer Tree Due To Fall

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — The stately white oak that inspired Joyce Kilmer to write the poem "Trees" will soon be cut down.

Efforts of tree surgeons, Rutgers University officials, and sentimentalists have failed to preserve the gnarled oak, which stands enclosed by a small white fence on the Rutgers campus.

A committee headed by Professor Richard West of Rutgers' forestry department has been named to chop down the oak and dispose of it in a way that befits its fame and beauty.

The tree, believed to be nearly 300 years old, has a branch spread of 114 feet and near-perfect symmetry.

Souvenirs may be made from the wood. "We thought about making special gavels with the poem inscribed on them—these would only be for presentation to visiting dignitaries," Professor West said.

Other ideas are to make desk sets and plaques, inscribed with the 12-line poem.

Second generation trees germinated from acorns this year and are about 15 inches high. When the young trees are old enough to be transplanted, a few will be taken to Washington and planted on the Capitol grounds and in parks throughout Washington. Permission to plant seedlings from the famed oak was granted in December, 1961, by the national capital parks and Capitol architect.

As a boy in New Brunswick, N. J., and as a student at Rutgers in 1905-06, Kilmer, legend has it, used to sit under the huge tree.

Kilmer was killed in World War I.

The poem, first published in 1913 in a poetry magazine: I think that I shall never see

A poem lovely as a tree;
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

Wind Chimes

Tinkling pleasantly in a light breeze, these durable bamboo chimes will add interest to your patio, lawn or garden. They hang on 16-in. lengths of lightweight brass or copper chain. Drill holes through the crossarm for chain to fit snugly. Cut chimes so joints come about 1 in. from one end. Drill the joint cores centrally to take the chain. End links are bent to hold chimes after chain is slipped through. Fit crossarm with hanger chain having ring at center to keep it horizontal. Chimes are of varying lengths and diameters to vary pitch.

Closet Tot-Rod

A child's closet becomes his or her own much more when fitted with a tot rod. This is hung from the existing rod and provides a place that a youngster can reach to put clothes away neatly. The one shown can be raised as the child grows. Two 30-in. lengths of chain are attached to a rod. Eyebolts, pried open so the chain can be slipped on, go through holes drilled through the rods near their ends. S-hooks on the loose ends of the chains are hooked into links of the chain at any point for desired height.

Old Texas Had Own Gravy Train

AUSTIN, Tex.—The high cost of lawmaking apparently is a perennial gripe with Texans. Texas Parade magazine blew the dust off minutes of the 25th Legislature, which met in 1897, and found this comment:

"I voted against the appropriation of $35,000 to pay the per diem of the called session of the 25th Legislature," Representative W. A. Skillern of Nacogdoches county said, "for the reason that I believe we have already unnecessarily squandered too much of the people's money. But I have been appealed to by the Democrats who have wasted their substance in riotous living and are now short of means to pay their board bill.

"I therefore will vote for House Bill 3 . . . to accommodate my friends."

Local Airman In National Matches

CAMP PERRY, Ohio — Airman First Class James M. Waychoff of Waynesburg, is one of the top marksmen now representing the United States Air Force in the National Rifle and Pistol Matches being held here this month.

Airman Waychoff is firing in competition with 2,500 of the nation's outstanding shooters gathered here for the month-long "world series" of marksmanship.

Men and women throughout the world and hundreds from federal, state and local law enforcement agencies and sports organizations are participating.

The airman is a missile guidance mechanic permanently assigned to Patrick Air Force Base. He is a son of Attorney and Mrs. W. Bertram Waychoff of Huffman street, Waynesburg.

The airman attended West Virginia University.

The Cubs threatened in the first when Diamond issued three bases on balls, but Joe Celesky, the Cats' catcher, prevented scoring by quick work. The Cubs also threatened in the third.

But in the fourth the Cubs sent 10 batters to the plate, who managed five runs.

In the sixth Diamond blasted a home run to give Rices Landing their only score. The Cubs also scored another run.

Following the game, John Hoy, tournament director, presented the championship trophy to Joe Michniak, Greensboro manager.

The Moose Sportsman trophy was given to Bill Barnes, Rices Landing coach. This award is presented each year to the team which exhibits best ideals of the Little League.

The Outstanding One Game Performance Trophy was presented to Joe Michniak, Greensboro's catcher, for his brilliant play in the opening game of the tourney against Waynesburg Legion. He came up with two home runs and a single.

Meadows' Track Rated Fastest

The Meadows, near Washington, official governing body of mile track in harness racing.

The belief of many sportsmen was confirmed last week when the United States Trotting Association official governing body of the sport, issued the first speed rating for the new track.

The ratings are based on a thorough survey in comparison with other tracks throughout the nation.

The Meadows is rated at 2:03.25 for the mile distance, one-fifth of a second faster than the mark for the state's other new track, Liberty Bell. And also that much faster than Scioto Downs, Columbus, Ohio.

Twin-Bill Feature Of Labor Day Card At Waterford

General Manager Harry R. Bell has announced that Waterford Park will feature a twin-bill on Labor Day, September 2, for a total of 14 races. The split program starts at 10:30 a. m. with five races, followed by a short recess for luncheon, then the afternoon card will go with nine races, winding up about 5:20 p. m. for the day.

Racing Secretary F. G. "Pug" Wilson has a stellar card lined up for the twin-bill, highlighted by the Labor Day Handicap, a mile and one sixteenth affair, for three-year-olds and upward, vying for a purse of $2,000.

Some of the better thoroughbreds at the track as well as several from nearby racing centers are expected to enter for the handicap. These include such allowance and handicap stars as King's Ghost, Like Rocksville, Scott City Girl, Royal Saya, Time Off, Cosmic Sucre, Big Diver and others.

Co-features for the day are the C. I. O. Purse, an allowance affair for three-year-olds and upward, and the A. F. L. Purse, also under allowance conditions for older horses.

Box and reserved seats are good for the entire day's card and a special breakfast and luncheon will be served in the Imperial Room of the Club House as well as the Grandstand Cafeteria.

Another spectacular day is scheduled for Friday, August 23 when the management at Waterford Park stages an Appreciation Day celebration. A beautiful new Cadillac Coupe DeVille will be given away free and the Grandstand gates thrown open to the public with free admissions.

Post times for the remainder of the current meeting, except Labor Day, remain at 3:45 p. m. on week days and 2:00 p. m. on Saturdays.

Mark Booth of Waynesburg, teacher and head football coach at Jefferson-Morgan High School, has resigned to accept a position in Georgia Military Academy, Atlanta. He will teach social studies and coach football, wrestling and tennis.

Georgia Military Academy is a private school with an enrollment of 1,200 boys, about 700 of whom are of high school age.

Mr. Booth will report in Atlanta on August 26. His family, who reside on West Greene street, will remain here for the present.

Mr. Booth, whose career includes both high school and college coaching experience, is rated one of the most capable coaches in the WPAL. Prior to going to Jefferson-Morgan, he was line coach at Waynesburg High School.

Mark Booth graduated in 1936 from Waynesburg College where he starred in football and other sports. After he received his degree he joined the Yellow Jacket staff as assistant football and track coach and served as head football coach for a short period before joining the Navy in 1942.

Mr. Booth was an officer aboard a mine sweeper in the Pacific and worked for one year as a training officer for the Veterans' Administration after the war. He then went to Charleroi High school as line coach under James (Rab) Currie, a Waynesburg teammate.

When the Korean War broke out, Booth reentered active service as an executive officer and navigator aboard a destroyer and as assistant operations officer on the aircraft carrier USS Intrepid.

Booth returned to Charleroi as line coach and wrestling mentor in 1952 and in 1956 went to Wiloughby, Ohio, High School, where he was on the coaching staff and taught problems of democracy and business law.

He returned to Waynesburg in 1958 to teach English and aid head coach Mike Baker in football.

He has retained his status in the Navy and is currently a commander in the Naval Reserve. He spent this summer on active duty at Norfolk, Va., where he was in charge of the office for the Fifth Naval District.

He and his wife, the former Mary Marchio of Waynesburg, have two daughters.
