Commissioners Approve Pay Hikes

Members of Greene County election boards will get a $5 pay increase for the November election, but four elected county officials — the sheriff, coroner and two jury commissioners — apparently will have to wait until they are re-elected before their salaries can be improved.

The county commissioners, at their meeting Tuesday, approved the pay hike for the 255 persons who staff the county's 51 voting precincts during the semi-annual elections after it had been determined they could do so and still remain within the maximum provided by law.

Under the new schedule, the judge of election in a precinct where 150 or less votes are cast will receive $50 for the day's work, while the other four board members — majority inspector, minority inspector, clerk and constable — will each get $45.

In a precinct where the number of votes cast ranges from 151 to 500 the judge of election will receive $55 and the other members $50. In the few precincts where between 501 and 1,000 votes are cast, the judge will get $60 and other board members $55.

There will be no change in the $3.50 which the judge of election and minority inspector receive for transporting returns from the polling place to Waynesburg after the vote count has been completed, since this is the maximum permitted by law.

Nor will there be any change in the 10 cents per mile which is paid to the person who drives the returns to Waynesburg, since this amount is also specified in the election code. County Solicitor A. J. Marion ruled that the 17 cents per mile stipulated in the county code cannot be applied to election board members since the election code is specific on what they are to receive.

In another matter, Marion ruled that regardless of the passage last year of Act 82, Sheriff Remo Bertugli, Coroner Frank Behm and Jury Commissioners Bernice Kuharcik and Margaret Perrin are still bound by the provision of the State Constitution which states that no elected official can receive an increase in salary in the middle of a term of office.

Act 82 not only raised the salaries of county officials, but also stipulated that in future the county commissioners, and not the State Legislature, will establish the compensation of elected county officials.

At the present time, the sheriff receives $12,500 a year, as compared with the $15,500 which the commissioners and other "row officers" have been getting since they took office in January after being elected last November. Act 82 also boosted the salary of the coroner from $4,500 to $6,500 and those of the jury commissioners from $1,600 to $2,500. But they, like the sheriff, were elected in 1977, before Act 82 became law, and cannot receive its benefits until 1982 following the 1981 election in which their offices will be filled.

Act 82 also provides that all county salaries in future are to be set by the county commissioners rather than by the legislature, and gives them the power to act in any year except one in which they are to be elected.

Marion pointed out that any future pay hike must be on a percentage basis and must apply equally to all elected county officials. The raise can be approved only at a public meeting held at a central location in the county between the hours of 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. For these reasons, Marion said, the commissioners cannot at this time "give" the four officials the raises contained in Act 82.

Marion said that these future raises will also apply to complete terms and cannot be changed during a term of office, so that, without some legislative action, the salaries of the sheriff, coroner and jury commissioners will continue to lag two years behind those of other officials.

In other action at their meeting, the commissioners and County Treasurer Joseph Souders, as the county salary board, set a salary of $640 per month for Donna S. Huffman of Waynesburg R.D.1. who was recently employed by Souders as first deputy in his office, where she replaced Sarah Watson. The salary is the same as Mrs. Watson received.

Notice was received from the Jefferson-Morgan School District that it will be closing four elementary schools — Lippincott, Mather, Dry Tavern and Pitt Gas — this year, and that the buildings will no longer be available for use as voting places during elections. Other locations will be sought in each of the precincts.

Allen Hughes, director of the Department of Parks and Recreation, presented the commissioners with a revised safety program for employees in his department, but the commissioners took no action on approving it because of a question over whether steel-toe safety shoes should be required or merely recommended.

An Afternoon In The Park

Ahhhhhhh, spring! It's that time of year — we stop to chat with people we haven't seen since fall, our pace seems slower, the world brighter. Professor James Randolph, standing, and Robert Cahn, Dean of Student Life at Waynesburg College, pause briefly after work to relax, converse and enjoy the serenity of the campus grounds.

Fishing Pond Planned For Pumpkin Run Park

The Greene County Chapter of the Izaak Walton League is spearheading the construction of a fishing pond for children in Pumpkin Run County Park at Rices Landing.

"The chapter has been looking for a project to do, and we think this one will provide something for boys and girls and at the same time will help the county in development of the park," Harry L. Enstrom, chapter secretary, said. "We anticipate that other groups may want to join with us in building it."

Bids for the facility are being solicited and will be opened at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 21, during an Izaak Walton League meeting to be held in the 4-H building at the Greene County fairgrounds. Plans are to have the pond completed by late spring or early summer.

Allen Hughes, director of the Greene County Department of Parks and Recreation, said the pond will be located along Pumpkin Run near the parking area which adjoins the old lockup, located just inside the park entrance.

"The area is relatively wet and can't be used for anything else," he said. "Putting the pond there will serve to dry out the area and won't interfere with any other park facility."

Karl Niederwerfer, Soil Conservation Service technician assigned to Greene County, drew up plans for the pond. It will be about 90 by 40 feet and will be encircled by an earthen fishing path. The inlet pipe will draw water from the creek, and the overflow pipe will channel the water back into the creek. The pond will be no more than six feet deep at its deepest point.

Enstrom said Gary Deiger, state waterways patrolman for Greene County, is working with the League to assist with stocking the pond after it has been built.

Council Accepts Bid For Razing Building

Bids were opened at the meeting of Carmichaels Borough Council Monday night for demolition of the borough municipal building which burned April 1978.

The contract was awarded to Jammers F. Kidwell, general contractor from Fairchance on his bid of $4,997. Barardinelli Excavation of Scenery Hill entered a bid of $9,840.

The building is to be demolished, the foundation leveled, filled in and all debris hauled away. The vote to award the contract was 4-1 with David Klimek voting no.

The building has been a source of much contention in the borough since the fire with many seeking to have it restored and council contending the costs to remodel or rebuild were prohibitive. The building was erected in the late 1880's as a borough school and closed when the borough and township merged into one school district. The property was used by the borough as a municipal building beginning in 1956. Extensive remodeling of the structure was almost completed before the fire caused extensive damage.

Mayor Paul Connor made one more plea Monday night to have the first floor of the building restored, but there was no response from council. The council recreation committee is to begin immediately on a proposal for use of the site.

The resignation of Dorothy Helmick as a member of council was read at the meeting and accepted. She cited several reasons for her resignation, including council putting off work to be done for months and months. She is the third council member to resign in as many months.

Mather Dump Cite Closed; DER Reimburses Township

MATHER — The rat-infested Mather dump has officially been closed and the Department of Environmental Resources has reimbursed Morgan Township the $1,700 cost involved in destroying the rats.

John Fruehstorfer, regional vector control consultant for DER, handed the check to the board of supervisors Wednesday morning and praised the efforts of ten municipalities in creating a regional, solid waste authority.

Mather residents forced action several months ago when they loudly protested an invasion of rats from the landfill. The supervisors called on DER to help them and consequently obtained a grant to poison the rats.

DER demanded the closing of the landfill and township employees covered the dump located at the base of a huge slag pile.

Morgan Township is part of the recently created Northeastern Greene County Solid Waste Authority which plans a transfer station near Mather.

The authority plans to have all participating municipalities haul refuse to the transfer station where it will be compacted and hauled to another dump site, probably in Fayette County.

Participating in the authority are Waynesburg, Rices Landing, Clarksville, Jefferson and Carmichaels boroughs and the townships of Franklin, Morgan, Cumberland and Washington.

T&B Disposal, which collects refuse in Mather, is now taking trash to the J&J Landfill in Fayette County. No further dumping will be allowed at the former Mather landfill.

The supervisors said only two live rats were discovered during the covering operations. Selway Exterminating of Washington had the contract for baiting the rat population.

Greene County Magistrates Say Procedure Followed

By ROBERT EICHENLAUB
Greene County News Editor
Two of Greene County's district magistrates — John Watson and Ruth Hughes — said Wednesday that the procedure they have been following in the preparation of private criminal complaints is that which was approved in February, 1979, by both the Greene County Court and the district attorney.

Under the system which was established at that time, the magistrates said, they were to do no more than fill in the names of the private prosecutor, the name of the defendant, and the alleged charge on a simple form.

This form was then to be clipped to a blank criminal complaint and the private prosecutor instructed to take both the form and the blank criminal complaint to the district attorney (then W. Bertram Waychoff) for his consideration and approval.

"This was the court approved procedure, and it is the one we have been following," the magistrates said. "But a court order handed down last Friday and the newspaper article written about it left the inference we were not properly doing our jobs, and this is just not so."

The two magistrates also noted that Waychoff, in 1978, had formally appointed County Detective Daniel L. Murphy to act as his authorized agent for the approval or disapproval of criminal complaints by private prosecution, and that it was a routine matter for him to do so.

County Census Effort Continues

If you failed to fill in the census form delivered to your home the last Friday in March, take heart! Your government has not abandoned you.

It still is interested in just who was in your house on April 1 and is providing the opportunity for all who failed, for whatever reason, to return their forms to still take part in the census.

Census District Manager Judy Loughman has reported that good progress is being made in Greene County in the follow-up phase of the 1980 census of population and housing.

Census takers are following up on missing census questionnaires by visiting households for which no census forms have been received, as well as telephoning those households from which questionnaires were returned but inadequately filled out.

White Collar Crime Future Law Extension

By ROBERT EICHENLAUB
Greene County News Editor

A professor of law at Duquesne University said Thursday that one of the biggest challenges facing the legal profession in the years immediately ahead will be the extension of federal law enforcement into the field of white collar crime.

Samuel Reich, who is also a former prosecutor and currently active as a criminal defense attorney, said that no community will be too small to feel its impact, as individuals, primarily businessmen, are targeted for investigation.

"Federal law enforcement is of a generally high quality and the public benefits from it, but the basic problem is that such investigations are often target-oriented with investigators having pre-judged the target," Reich said in an address delivered in the Greene County courtroom as part of the May 1 observance of Law Day U.S.A.

"Anyone who is targeted can be subjected to an investigation covering the entire range of human life even if they have been guilty of no crime, and our challenge will be to be ready to provide the legal advice they will need as they face what could be years of investigation."

Reich said that businessmen will be the primary targets of what he described as a nationwide activity to combat white collar crime, with the job of the legal profession being to see that innocent people do not become victims along with those who should be prosecuted. "We will serve our clients and our profession best by serving the presumption of innocence," he said.

Judge Glenn Toothman presided over the program, which was held by the Greene County Bar Association.

Other speakers were Judge George Zimmerman, a Waynesburg native who is a circuit court judge in New Mexico; William Nalitz, president of the county bar association, and John Hardisty, chairman of the Law Day committee.

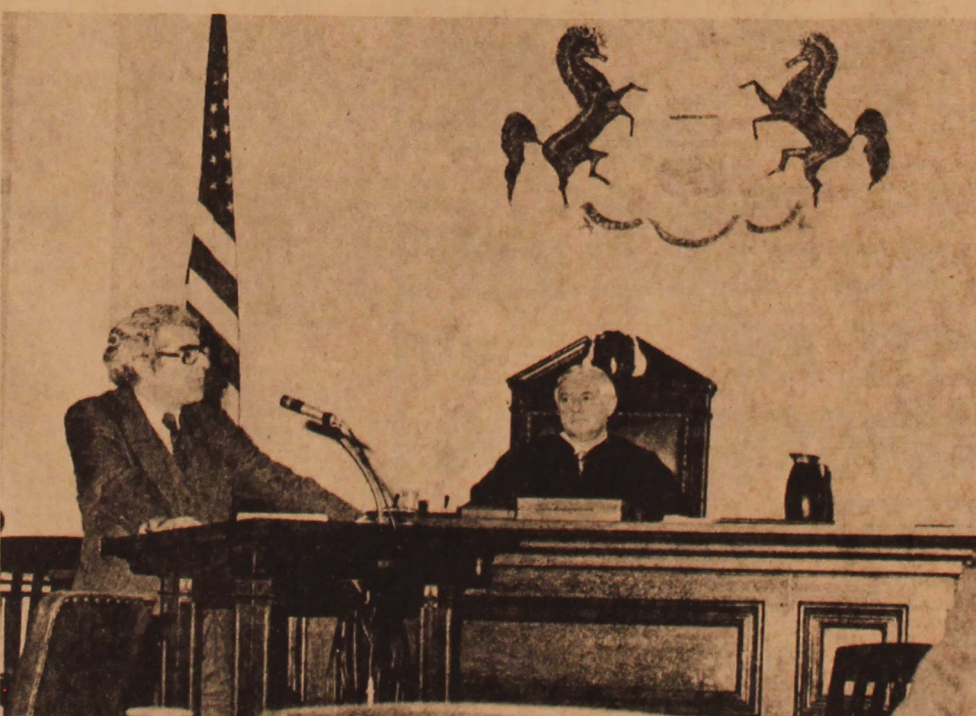

They spoke principally on the role which law has played in creating our society and of the need to inform the public of the role it plays in their lives.

Judge Zimmerman, who is in Greene County to visit his mother, Margaret Zimmerman of Waynesburg, spoke of the differences between the legal systems of Pennsylvania and New Mexico within the continuity of the law.

Nalitz pointed out that the United States is a nation operating with the framework of a legal system, and cited the case of Iran as an example of a nation where a revolution has suspended function of the rule of law with resultant turmoil and lawlessness.

"For another country to violate the most basic tenet of international law is abhorrent to us because we honor the rule of law, and it is to our credit that we have not retaliated in kind," he said.

Hardisty reviewed the goals of the observance of Law Day, one of which is to make citizens more aware of the role of the law in their lives. "With rare exceptions, the documents that have provided the freedoms we all enjoy have been forged by lawyers," he said. Our task is to dispel the misunderstanding of the law and lawyers which prevents people from taking advantage of the protection it can provide. In concluding remarks, Judge Toothman stressed the importance of the far-sightedness in the enactment of laws, with too many of them being passed for short-sighted reasons. "The ultimate test is how the legal system works in the lives of each one of our citizens," he said. "Only as law serves well the individual and society in general will it be respected."

DeWeese, Stark Marry

In a candlelight ceremony at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, April 26, 1980, in the First Presbyterian Church of Waynesburg, Debra DeWeese became the bride of John Kunkel Stark.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Victor DeWeese of 320 Sherman Avenue, Waynesburg. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Stark Jr. of 4 Bartram Road, Lookout Mountain, Tennessee.

The Bishop sleeves were appliqued with lace and fastened at the wrists with bridal buttons and loops.

The slightly flared skirt was worn slipper length in front. The back of the skirt was softly gathered at the waist, and flowed to a graceful train of chapel length. The entire hemline of the gown and train were bordered in a double row of Venice lace in scalloped design.

To complement her gown, she wore a Juliet cap of matching Venice lace, with a fingertip veil of illusion bordered in the same lace as on the bottom of the gown. She carried long-stem white and pink roses with stephanotis and baby's breath.

Matron of honor was Kassie Newton of San Francisco. Bridesmaids were Sally Kohlbrand of Houston, Anna Stephens of Atlanta, Mary Duwe of Minneapolis and

When the couple left for a wedding trip to Bermuda, the new Mrs. Stark had changed into a navy and white costume suit. They will reside in Houston.

When Souls Communicate

When souls communicate — it's like prayer. There may never be a word spoken . . . just a sigh, a wish, a hope, a longing. A child trying to express some simple feeling to its Mother. Mother trying to express her devotion to her child.

All prayer is founded on the idea that God loves us and cares about the things that affect us. Jesus taught us to pray "Our Father . . ." He wanted men to see God's love on the parental level.

When you feel the need to pray, reach out with your heart to God. You may not be able to find words. Yet He hears. He understands those deep feelings we find hard to express.

In church our efforts to communicate with Him are strengthened by the fact that many others are praying with us. They need Him just as much as we do. And we need their longings, their hopes and wishes and feelings to help us express our own. Join us in prayer at your local church or synagogue.

Alumni Association Announces Plans For Annual Alumni Day

As part of this year's graduation festivities, the Waynesburg College Alumni Association will hold its annual Alumni Day on May 17. The Alumni Association will honor this year's graduating seniors and members of the Association.

"Purpose of Alumni Day is to honor the graduating seniors and to officially accept them into the Alumni Association at Waynesburg College," said Harry Anderson, '39, coordinator of alumni affairs at the college.

Seniors will be welcomed into the Association at the annual banquet meeting in Benedum Hall, where students will be guests of the alumni. Traditionally, the oldest alumnus present will make the motion to accept the senior class and the next oldest will second the motion. David Dell, president of the student senate, will accept the Association's offer of membership on behalf of the class.

"The meaningfulness of the alumni banquet grows over the years. The alumni get the opportunity to meet former classmates, friends and get the chance to revisit classrooms," said Dr. Victor Carlson, '40, alumni and planned gifts director. He continued, "The program gives continuity to the life of the college and its graduates."

Although different than the Association's first meeting, in 1871, when the program consisted of essay reading, orations, poetry reading and musical selections, this Alumni Day promises a full schedule. The program will include reunions of classes that graduated in years ending in '5' and '0', headed by the Golden Anniversary Class of 1930.

Saturday's activities include a meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors, fourth annual alumni awards luncheon, reunion tours, a reception and the alumni banquet. The alumni banquet will be highlighted by a reunion and performance of the Lamplighters, the college's choral group, directed by James Randolph, '56. During award ceremonies at the banquet, the Distinguished Alumnus Award will be presented, as well as the President's Service Award. Individuals of graduated classes will be recognized.

Sunday's activities will include graduation exercises. Baccalaureate service will be held at 11 a.m., a luncheon will be held at noon, and the 129th commencement exercises will be held at 2:30 p.m. Baccalaureate and commencement will be held on the college campus.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting the Alumni and Development Office at the college.

Pesticides Must Be Used At Correct Time, Dosage

We are coming into the season of the year when pesticides for weed, insect and disease control are being used. These materials are beneficial only if they are used properly. There are some basic rules to follow in using these materials safely.

Use pesticides only when necessary. Be sure you know what weed, insect or disease you want to control and use the proper material. Use the pesticide at label dosages only. Timing of the application is vital not only to prevent residue problems, but in getting the desired control results.

Spray only during calm periods of the day so you can control drift. If you are using an insecticide around the barn, be sure to cover livestock feed and water.

Fruit growers and home owners should be cautious of the material they use around tree bloom. Materials toxic to honey bees should be avoided during this time.

A pesticide use record and inventory should be maintained. Farmers particularly should keep a record including such things as what was applied, at what rate, date applied, and even weather conditions including wind velocity and temperature. This is helpful in avoiding problems with neighbors, remembering how a particular field was treated and in figuring out problems where a failure occurs.

Be sure you follow safety precautions listed on the label. Avoid inhaling pesticides. Never smoke or eat while you are involved in a spraying operation. If a spilling accident occurs, wash thoroughly with soap and water. Always keep the original label from the pesticide container intact so that if poisoning symptoms develop, this label can be taken to a physician. A poison control center is located at Children's Hospital, 125 DeSoto Street, Pittsburgh; phone 681-6669 for help with problem cases.

Once a spray job is finished, wash thoroughly and wash spray clothing after each day's spraying.

Pesticides should be stored in the original container in a locked store room or cabinet marked "Pesticides—Keep Out." Never give small amounts of spray material in unmarked containers to friends.

Never reuse an empty pesticide container. Follow label instructions as to disposal of containers.

Always read the label on the container completely before using the material.

SWINE ALERT

Swine producers in Pennsylvania have worked hard for several years to keep a disease called pseudorabies out of the state. Despite this effort, which included cancelling the breeding swine show at the Keystone Exposition for a year, 12 farms in the southeastern part of the state are now under quarantine for the disease.

Prior to any further discussion it should be pointed out that this disease cannot be contracted by humans and is not related to rabies. There is no danger to people consuming pork or working with hogs.

Swine producers can protect their herds basically in three ways:

- Buy only breeding animals that have been tested and found negative for the disease.
- Isolate newly purchased animals for 30 days and retest. If they are negative again, they may be mixed with the herd.
- Control access to your breeding herd. Provide disinfect foot gear for visitors to use; or have disinfectant available for them to use on their own boots, particularly around a farrowing house.

The disease is most severe on pigs less than three weeks old. Symptoms at this age may simply be a high death rate. Clinical signs include high temperature (105 or higher), dullness, loss of appetite, weakness, incoordination and convulsions. Pigs infected before birth may die within two days after birth occasionally after violent shaking and trembling.

Percent mortality decreases as pigs get older. Fever is the predominant symptom followed by loss of appetite, listlessness, labored breathing, trembling and eventually marked incoordination. Some of these symptoms can be associated with other ailments. Check with your veterinarian for proper diagnosis.

College Chemistry Day Attracts 200 Students

Nearly 200 students from 12 area high schools from Greene, Fayette and Washington Counties took part in Waynesburg College's annual chemistry visitation program this year.

The program, now in its 11th year, is hosted by the Waynesburg College student affiliate of the American Chemical Society and the college's department of chemistry and physics.

A large portion of the program was devoted to discussing traditional and non-traditional careers in the field of chemistry. The students toured the college's scientific laboratories, and saw experiments in chemistry and physics performed by Waynesburg faculty and students. The mathematics department demonstrated the capabilities of the college's computer laboratory as part of the visitation program.

Dr. Robert B. LaCount, chairman of the chemistry and physics department at the college said, "We look forward to giving the high school students a realistic view of a college chemistry program. The visitation may help the student decide whether chemistry is the right field for them."

Dr. LaCount noted that the program is designed to give students a better idea of what kinds of coursework they can expect in a typical college program.

He said, "We feel this is a worthwhile program in that the students can visit the labs and participate in in-depth discussion on careers in chemistry."

"The program wouldn't have been possible without the help of the college students. We've heard nothing but good comments," Dr. LaCount said.

Several major scientific equipment companies and textbook companies presented the displays on campus. Company representatives talked with the students and high school instructors about the newest laboratory equipment and textbooks.

MEETING SET

Proper use of plant materials around a home can have a significant effect on the comfort of the family living there and the pride they have in their home. Landscaping can be fun because, once basic principles are understood, a family can add a great deal of their own personality to the plan.

A meeting will be held Wednesday, May 14, at 1:30 p.m. at Don Cowell's new home on the right of Route 19 about a mile south of Waynesburg to discuss these basic principles. Bob Nuss, extension specialist from Penn State, will be here to provide the expertise. Bob has extensive knowledge of landscape design and plant materials. We'll spend an hour or so at Cowell's on new landscaping and then go a little further down Route 19 to the Wermingers where Cowell will discuss revitalizing an existing landscape.

College Uniforms Stolen Again

The uniform thieves at Waynesburg College have been busy again. Earlier this year, all of the college's away basketball uniforms disappeared. Thursday it was twenty baseball uniforms.

The uniforms, which were stored in the cage area in the basement of the gymnasium were apparently stolen sometime between 3 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Twenty shirts and twenty pair of pants were taken from the gym. The uniforms are valued at approximately $60 each.

The basketball uniforms were returned and college officials are hopeful the thieves will also return the baseball uniforms.

County Red Cross Asks Increased Financial Aid

The Greene County Chapter of the American Red Cross elected directors and officers and received 1979 reports at its annual meeting Monday at Waynesburg.

Mildred Wilson and Dr. Bruce Shipe were elected to the board of directors to serve through 1981; Jean Miller, Norman Waldman and John Orndoff through 1982, and Paul Clutter, Steve White, Rita Smith, Ryan Hartley, Denise Koppelman and Mary Collins through 1983.

Mary Collins of Waynesburg, who began her volunteer service with the Red Cross as a nurse 50 years ago, was re-elected chairman for the ensuing year. Other officers elected were Paul Clutter, vice president; Joni Jai Clutter, secretary, and Louise Cooley, treasurer. All reside in Waynesburg.

David R. Coulter reported that the 1980 fund drive, conducted as a mail campaign, has produced $2,793 to date, which, even with an allocation of $4,000 from the new Greene County United Way program, still leaves the chapter far short of meeting its goal of $17,757.

"We are receiving less money and expenses are up. Financially we are not in the best of shape, and it's getting worse," he said.

Various reports on services provided by the chapter during the past year were given.

A total of 94 water safety classes were held during the year at various levels of skills, with 753 swimmers receiving certificates. In addition, 42 persons were certified in six lifesaving classes.

The chapter also conducted 65 first aid and CPR classes, with 753 persons being certified through them.

A total of 36 student nurses, 20 registered nurses and one licensed practical nurse worked in various chapter projects, including service during visits to the county by the Red Cross bloodmobile.

Miss Collins reported that the bloodmobile has produced a total of 797 units of blood to date during the 1979-80 fiscal year, with two visits remaining in which to meet the annual quota of 1,298 units. The visits will be at Greene County Memorial Hospital on May 23 and at Carmichaels on June 6.

The chapter also assisted the victims of nine residential fires during the year and, from April of last year to this month, has provided services to 135 servicemen, veterans and their families.

"We think your chapter is providing a valuable service and has earned the support of your community," said John Rostovsky, Red Cross divisional representative from Pittsburgh. He also spoke briefly on the responsibility of board members as the governing agency of the chapter.

Elementary Registration

The Jefferson-Morgan Elementary School will hold registration next week for all children who will enter kindergarten this fall, as well as for all other children who will be entering the elementary program for the first time this fall.

The registration will be held in the office of the district's new elementary school from 8 a.m. to 12 noon Wednesday, May 14; from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday, May 15, and from 8 a.m. to 12 noon Friday, May 16.

To enter kindergarten for the 1980-81 school year, a child must have been born before Feb. 1, 1976. Children who attended kindergarten in the Jefferson-Morgan District this year do not need to register for the first grade. But all children who have not previously attended Jefferson-Morgan elementary schools but who plan to do so this fall must register.

Mrs. Howard, the school nurse, and Mrs. Nurminen, teacher of the visually handicapped, will be checking sight; Mrs. Perkins, speech clinician, will be checking speech, and Mr. Barger, hearing clinician, will be checking hearing.

Faces From The Past-Do You Recognize Them?

A moment in time—the time of Waynesburg College generally and in particular during the latter part of the presidency of the late Paul R. Stewart whose role of leadership was unintentionally reflected in this photograph as he led members of the 1951 football team, coached by Jack Wiley, across the campus into Hanna Hall. The picture was found in one of a group left over by an unmethodical photographer. The team had a 6-3 record including victories over much larger schools. Those identified include Joe Laird, a right of Dr. Stewart, who was an all-state end; George Lewis, behind Laird, who became a national wrestling champion, and also Bud Hughes, an all-state tackle who at the time was a graduate assistant and Steve Yourchick, who went on to coach at Jefferson-Morgan High School.

Counties Should Control Pay For Election Boards

It's difficult to imagine that anyone would be satisfied with a job that pays an average of less than $3.40 an hour and compensates for car use at the rate of 10 cents a mile.

It's not surprising, therefore, that the Greene County commissioners received complaints from people who man election boards in the county's 51 voting precincts.

In the recent primary, they went to work before the polls opened at 7 a.m. and only a few of them worked less than 17 hours, with most boards taking until after midnight to complete their vote counts.

That's a long day in a highly-responsible job. In return, they got between $40 and $55, depending on their job and the number of votes cast in the precinct.

Each election board is made up of a judge of election, two inspectors of election, a clerk and a constable, making a total of 255 people involved in the process of conducting the semi-annual elections in Greene County. The commissioners have already had trouble in keeping all of the positions filled, and were apparently facing additional problems unless they could make the job more attractive.

The difficulty is that the amount which can be paid is governed by state legislation. The last time there was an increase was in 1977, after the state legislature had increased the rates which counties could pay. Just this week the county commissioners found they could increase the pay by $5 for the day's work, but they cannot legally increase car use compensation.

Mileage paid to those who drive returns from the polling places to the courthouse at Waynesburg after the vote count has been completed—sometimes as late as 4 o'clock in the morning—has remained at 10 cents a mile for many years. And yet the legislature recently increased the maximum which can be paid to other county employees to 17 cents.

The Greene County commissioners have indicated they will make an effort to see what can be done to improve the situation, but as long as the state legislature retains control it's bound to be difficult.

The point to be made is that there is no reason for the legislature to have such control, especially since the wages and mileage are paid by the county, not the state.

It would seem that the setting of fair compensation for election board members is a matter which should be decided by boards of commissioners in the individual counties.

Heart Association Names Ealy Chairman

James Ealy, Waynesburg Borough Manager, has been named chairman of the 1980 American Heart Association campaign in Greene County by the Southwestern Pennsylvania Chapter. Ealy will direct all facets of the heart campaign within the county.

More than half of the estimated 460 deaths that will occur in Greene County this year will be due to heart disease or stroke, according to Dr. Cataldo F. Corrado, president of the Southwestern Pennsylvania Heart Association.

Nearly one million American deaths are caused by heart disease and stroke every year. One of every five, or 200,000 deaths, occurs before the victim reaches retirement age.

Ealy has asked for volunteers to help in the fund raising effort. "The Heart Association needs volunteers during the campaign to help fight America's Number One Killer," he said.

"The contributions collected by volunteers support research, professional and public education, and community service programs." Volunteers will distribute Heart Association information and collect contributions. They will also show how a dollar to the Heart Association is spent.

To help in the fight against early death or disability from heart disease and stroke, call Ealy at 627-8111.

Adam Henderson Selected For Scholars' Program At PSU

Fact and Folklore
 John O'Hara

Through the courtesy of Henry Dembo, native and former resident of Waynesburg, this column has been the recipient of a beautiful tribute to another former Waynesburger—the late Cecil "Sleepy" Tennant—who spent his early life in this community but went on to success and esteem from the Martin Marietta Corporation of Baltimore and from Essex Junior Community College in suburban Baltimore.

His nickname of "Sleepy" which he took with him from Greene County to Baltimore was a misnomer in a way, because it reflected his pleasant, amiable disposition rather than a shy dolishness which enabled him to win respect and affection from educators, corporate executives and a long, long list of students and graduates of Essex College.

Although he was born in 1913 at West Milford, West Virginia, his parents moved to Waynesburg just a few years after his birth.

It was while living here and growing up during the bleak days of the 1920 depression that he learned the lessons of adversity and sharing—not merely what little there was available in those years with others but also sharing his concern for the welfare and the development of others.

In those depression years of the mid-1930's Cecil's love of sports led him and a few friends into promoting basketball tournaments and sandlot baseball games to keep body and soul together.

It was an experience which a decade later would enable him to serve a pre-war enlistment in the U.S. Army between 1935-40. It was followed by a 30 year career with the Martin Marietta Corporation at Baltimore which developed the original space shot liftoff towers.

He served in various capacities there, including supervision of guards in highly sensitive security departments.

He also became a sports columnist for the Eastern Maryland Beacon in Baltimore. Because of his excellent rapport with students and their problems he was named coordinator of student activities at Essex Junior College. It was there he started his long friendship and association with Dr. Andy MacDonald, college president.

He had been assistant baseball coach prior to being Dr. MacDonald's first choice as coordinator because as Dr.

MacDonald said, "the position had to be filled by someone who would have to know how to deal with people, understand the use of athletic facilities, to write well and know security."

In the 14 years that followed, Tennant and Dr. MacDonald worked in close harmony, during which the baseball team won state and regional junior college tournaments and finished fifth in the national tourney.

After Tennant's death last March 20 (1979), Dr. MacDonald commented, "Cecil's value was his deep concern for others. He would always wonder what would happen to each of the kids he knew. He would say, 'I wonder what kind of a father Jim is going to make, and so on.'"

"I know personally he financed many kids' education, not just money for snacks or books but the whole package." Continuing, Dr. MacDonald said, "Once he had a black youth on the baseball team named Joe Murdock who he took all the way to Cornell University for an interview at his own expense and which ultimately led to an Ivy League scholarship and finally the student's present insurance agency in Baltimore. But there are many others of his taking youngsters to theaters for the inspiration of seeing how the other half of the world lives."

Tennant himself had known the adversities of life during the depression years he lived in Waynesburg and has been forever grateful for the help and encouragement he received from old Waynesburg friends, particularly his sports coaches and others such as Tom Boyd, the former football star and wrestler at Waynesburg College.

with Louis's mother, Mrs. Beth H. Scott, who lives in the former Edward Scott property on South Morris Street, opposite the former Hoskinson homestead which is now a parking lot for Mid Penn Telephone Co. The Bonnells, incidentally, were among the American generation lucky enough to have been in their twenties during the 1920's. Flappers! Knickers! Galoshes (unfastened, of course) 'n all that kind of stuff.

Clair Bee, who went on to become the world's most winning college basketball coach after he was graduated in 1925 (in three years) from Waynesburg College, will go back to his hometown of Grafton, W. Va., June 7, to speak at the commencement ceremonies at Grafton High School auditorium, which is named in his honor. He spent his entire college coaching career at Long Island University in New York, but still regards his "home school" as Waynesburg College, where he was acting registrar while completing the four year course for a degree in three years.

Albert Temple, chief of police in Waynesburg township for several years and later a deputy sheriff, has resigned both positions to become an employee at the Greene County Memorial Hospital, where he will resume his duties in security areas.

A closer insight into the history of the Brave pump station of the Peoples Gas Co., has been furnished by Roy Clovis of Waynesburg, who was born and reared in Wayne Township and drilled several good gas wells in that area and form which the gas was transported through the station. He says the station was built in 1906 and that as a young man, before becoming a producer, he helped install new boilers in the pump station in 1918. He had a very close personal relationship with Charles Gibson, the president of the gas company for many years, and Mr. Clovis sold the gas he produced from wells on the former "Memphis" Kent and the Felix Bell and other Wayne Township farms in the early 1920's. Mr. Clovis said the village of Brave preceded the pump station and more or less came into existence when the first oil and gas drilling was started in that area. Also that the pump station at Hastings, W. Va., built by the Hope Gas Co., a sister firm of Peoples, was a slightly larger station than the one at Brave.

Funeral services were held March 30 for Mrs. Esther Pribel Cummings, 64, at Stone Harbor, N. J., and who was the wife of a former Waynesburg resident, George Cummings, a son of Mrs. Bertha Zahniser Cummings of West Greene Street, Waynesburg and the late LeRoy Cummings. A native of Chicago, the deceased and her husband visited Mr. Cummings's mother frequently during the past several years, during which time the deceased became acquainted with many Waynesburg friends of the Cummings family. Her death occurred shortly before they planned to move to Naples, Florida, where Mr. Cummings is now residing. In addition to her husband, Mrs. Cummings is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Mary Kate Meyer of Swarthmore, Pa., and a son, Bruce, of Rockville, Maryland.

Mrs. Agnes S. Egnos, a switchboard operator and information clerk at the Greene County Memorial Hospital for the past 18 years, was honored by hospital officials and fellow employees at a retirement party last week. A former resident of Mather, she now lives in Jefferson and is active in senior citizens' events in the Mather and Jefferson areas.

Waynesburg Central High School pupils enrolled in various arts and crafts classes won high praise for their accomplishments at an open house at the high school building last Tuesday night. Wood and metal products, along with apparel and decorative products were included in the numerous displays and demonstrations.

Joe Verasco, one of the few surviving players on the former Sacksville Stogies baseball team which represented Waynesburg in the sandlot circles of western Pennsylvania in the early 1920's, is a patient at the Greene County Memorial Hospital. He also played on the last baseball teams at Waynesburg College before the sport was dropped for several years. For a long time he lived in Clarksburg, W. Va., and later in Florida. He now resides at the home of his sister, Mrs. Charles Coles, in Mather. He and one of his boyhood fans, Harry Cage of Waynesburg, had a chance meeting at the hospital this week. Verasco was one of the heaviest hitters in the district.

Aside from James Call of North Richhill Street, "Slim" Gardner of Waynesburg who died earlier this month, is thought to be the last surviving employee of the former Harvey Call Grocery Store, which was the largest of its kind in Greene County. He is still remembered for his friendliness and constant good humor.

To Attend Pitt
 Timothy T. Wilson, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Wilson, of 141 North East Street, Waynesburg, has been accepted to the University of Pittsburgh School of Dental Medicine beginning with the fall term in September.

He is a 1977 graduate of Waynesburg Central High School and is now a junior at Waynesburg College.

Under The Dome
 Bob Eichenlaub

According to Centre County Treasurer Paul Dubbs, the most powerful lobby in the state capital at Harrisburg is not the PSEA, as teachers claim. Nor is it the Rifle Association, truckers, local government, or any other group which comes readily to mind.

In his opinion, the honor goes, paws down, to dogs.

"The tens of thousands of Pennsylvania dogs have no organization, pay no dues, hire no lobbyists. They can't even talk or write letters to the editor or to their representatives. But their influence is more potent than that of any other group in the state."

Dubbs might have his tongue somewhat in his cheek, but if so just barely. He feels it must take some influence, after all, to account for the fact that the cost of dog licenses have not advanced one cent for 59 years. The only change in the price came a few years ago when the State Legislature increased by 10 cents (to 20 cents) the amount which the legislature allowed county treasurers for issuing the licenses.

The amount the Department of Agriculture gets for running the state's dog license business is exactly the same it was when the licensing law was passed in 1921 — and everyone knows you can't buy a car today for what it cost to purchase a Model T Ford.

For the $1 it gets for male dogs and spayed females, and the $2 it receives for unaltered females, the state provides each county treasurer with tags and certificates issued specifically for that county. They are numbered. The certificates come in long forms with perforations between each one. Each certificate is in five copies, each of different color and all numbered. The one the customer gets is in the form of an envelope to hold the tag. The certificates are an expensive printing job.

Licenses must be accounted for by county treasurers, down to the penny, on a month-by-month basis.

Greene County Treasurer Joseph Souder agrees with Dubbs' analysis of the situation, but he feels changes are on the way. Not only is the Department of Agriculture in a bind for money to operate the program and provide sufficient dog law enforcement, but his office cannot meet the cost of handling the licenses for the 20 cents the county receives for doing the job.

It will be interesting to see if he is correct, or if the "dog lobby" will be able to again bark the legislature into a corner and continue its enviable record of being the only group which has successfully beaten inflation.

Monthly reports are sent to Harrisburg where a staff of clerks checks them. Then the state sends auditors around to see that the treasurers are doing their job properly.

After all these expenses have been paid, whatever is left out of the $1 or $2 license fees goes to enforce the dog laws, which makes it obvious why enforcement doesn't amount to much.

In Dubbs' opinion, the dog license laws in Pennsylvania are completely out of kilter. He can't understand, for example, why it costs $2.20 to license an unspayed female when a male dog, "with reproductive facilities intact," gets one for a dollar less. He feels the fee should be differentiated between unproductive dogs and productive dogs, regardless of sex.

Why have there been no changes in 59 years, with legislators regarding periodic pressure for increases in the same light as an invitation to sin publicly? Here's Dubbs answer:

"Because, you see, dogs are very special 'people' to their owners. Anything which remotely threatens a dog automatically is a threat to its owner. And since many dog owners are voters and since most voters are dog owners, the connection is clear. Raise the cost of dog licenses and you lost the vote of dog owners."

Greene County Treasurer Joseph Souder agrees with Dubbs' analysis of the situation, but he feels changes are on the way. Not only is the Department of Agriculture in a bind for money to operate the program and provide sufficient dog law enforcement, but his office cannot meet the cost of handling the licenses for the 20 cents the county receives for doing the job.

It will be interesting to see if he is correct, or if the "dog lobby" will be able to again bark the legislature into a corner and continue its enviable record of being the only group which has successfully beaten inflation.

Nemacolin: It's Like Coming Home

By BYRON SMIALEK
Sports Editor

BEALSVILLE—To Mark Puskarich, Nemacolin Country Club is almost like home. He literally grew up here, carrying clubs beginning as a 12-year-old and learning all he could, as fast as he could, about the game of golf.

He learned the lessons well, graduating from caddy champion to No. 1 on the Bentworth High School team to small college All-America at California State and runner-up in the 1975 NATA national tournament.

He tried the Florida mini-tour in the winter of 1976 and cashed in a few checks, but not enough, however, to sustain his golfing addiction. He then came home and worked at his trade—booming wood shots and deft irons and a sometimes deadly putter—as golf professional at Greene County Country Club.

Last season, with a wife and child to support, Puskarich left golf and worked in the asphalt paving business. He played golf about 10 times.

But this year it's different. The 28-year-old Puskarich is back where he started. This time as assistant pro instead of club carrier.

"I never wanted to leave golf,"

Puskarich said Friday afternoon, "but with a new family (which has already been expanded with the addition of a son, now five months old) I had to get a better job. I needed the money."

"But I knew that one day I'd get another job in golf. I'm just glad the opportunity came here."

Puskarich was hired April 18 as assistant to veteran head pro Mike Pavella, now in the last year of a distinguished career at Nemacolin. No strings were attached to Puskarich's job.

"Whatever it took for me to get back into golf, I was willing to do," he said. "I would have taken the job of caddy-master, but the golf committee (headed by Dr. Sandy Krongold) was looking for an assistant pro to come in and possibly take over when Mike retires next year."

"Nothing's been promised to me, but if they like the way I work and teach, I'll have a definite edge when Mike retires, probably next March."

Pavella, who lives in Meadow Lands, Pa., began his own career as a golf professional at Greene County Country Club, followed by a 10-year tour of duty at Washington Country Club. The 64-year-old Pavella has been the Nemacolin pro for the past 24 years.

"Mike is just the greatest guy to work for," enthused the new Nemacolin assistant.

The Nemacolin membership, in the neighborhood of 200 active golfers plus a large group of women golfers, will now have a choice of teachers. Pavella, the old master; Puskarich, the power hitter. "The weather just hasn't cooperated with us so far this spring," Puskarich said. "Mike's only given three lessons and I've only given one. But I've been playing with the members, giving them tips as we go around. So far, it's been a lot of fun for the members and myself."

One of the club's old hands, starter John Saniga, who in more than 50 years has seen the club grow from a nine-hole course ("actually, back then there were only six holes you could play") into one of the more attractive, difficult and refined 18-hole layouts in Western Pennsylvania, recalled Puskarich in his days as a caddy.

"He was just a little thing, no bigger than a minute. But, he could hit a golf ball. He's really a nice young man. I'm glad he's back," Saniga said.

Nemacolin officially opens Sunday with a mixed event (two Jacks and a Jill), followed by a dinner/dance.

The Bears claimed first-place finishes in six of the 18 events and scored 113 points.

The meet was held under miserable conditions, with a cold rain and gusting winds ruling out any chance that meet records would be set.

Each team qualified 12 boys, as the top six finishers in each event became eligible for the district competition next Wednesday afternoon at Neshannock High School. That meet will be at 3 p.m.

Fourth-place finisher Brentwood had a double winner in Scott Radevic, who captured the top spot in the discus and javelin throws, and also won the 800-meter run. Brentwood scored 59 points to edge fifth-place Charleroi, which rolled up 48 points.

Chartiers-Houston and Waynesburg were the only other teams from the two counties to finish in the top 10. The Bucs qualified three individuals and its 400-meter and 1600-meter relay teams in scoring 40 points, to finish seventh, while Raiders qualified seven contestants and its 400-meter relay team in accumulating 30 points to finish in the eighth spot.

W.L. Stewart of Waynesburg points to an open hole that once contained a leaded, stained glass window. Crystal glass doors were taken from the book case in an early Wednesday morning robbery.

Stained Glass Panels Stolen From House

Stained glass valued at $5,000 was stolen from a two-story brick home in Morrisville sometime early Wednesday morning.

The home, built in 1930, is owned by W.L. Stewart of 235 Bridge Street and is known locally as the J.B. Flowers house. It is located next door to Stewart's new car sales.

Apparently the work of professionals, eight leaded stained-glass panels and two leaded crystal panels in the doors of book cases were hauled from the scene. Entry was gained by cutting a screen door at the rear of the home along Route 21.

Stewart said his insurance would not cover the stolen glass.

The home has been vacant for about two years and Stewart was ready to rent the home because the insurance company did not like the idea of the place being empty. He has had the home on the market for several months. One stained glass panel was left behind although the moldings had been removed. Moldings around the stolen panels were expertly removed and there were no bent nails, indicating the professionalism involved.

An employee of the garage discovered the theft when he came to work shortly before 8 a.m. Wednesday.

State police are investigating the incident.

Jackets Pick Wrestling Coach

By ROBIN ROBERTS
Sports Writer

WAYNESBURG — Dr. Sam Church, who has served as wrestling coach at Fairmont (W.Va.) State College for the past eight seasons, was named to the top position at Waynesburg College.

The surprise announcement was made Friday during a hurriedly called press conference in the office of athletic director Hayden Buckley.

A Waynesburg native, Church led Fairmont to a perfect 12-0 record during the 1979-80 season and compiled an impressive 74-23-2 at the West Virginia school. He fills a vacancy created by the resignation of Richard Pollock.

During the 1978-79 and 1979-80 seasons Fairmont finished sixth in the nation in the NATA tournament. Also, this last season Church had three All-Americans at Fairmont, including runner-up Phil Gifford, a former Jefferson-Morgan High School wrestler.

Church said Friday that his decision to take the Waynesburg position was made partially because the wrestling program at Fairmont is currently "up in the air."

Church served as an assistant at Waynesburg under former coach Clayton Ketterling from 1968 through 1971. He went to Fairmont as an assistant in 1971 and became head coach the following season.

Church, who graduated from Waynesburg High School and earned his master's and doctorate degrees at West Virginia University, where he also wrestled, will continue as a professor of psychology at Fairmont.

Church feels he's taking over a program which was left in very good shape by Pollock, who has accepted a position with a YMCA.

"I felt last year that Waynesburg was just one or two wrestlers from being very competitive. They stayed with us until late in the match. These kids at Waynesburg are fighters, they are a competitive bunch which likes to fight and they're all back this year," the new coach said.

He said he will pick up immediately

ly on recruiting which has been carried out by Pollock so far. "We're recruiting now. Dick has been recruiting and I respect his opinion on most of these kids. Although I won't limit myself to Western Pennsylvania, I feel there is a lot of good talent right here in the WPIAL."

Church also hopes to enter Waynesburg in a number of tournaments during the course of the year. "I want to get into more tournament activity, to emphasize national goals. I feel that tournaments, good, competitive tournaments, are a way of doing that. It doesn't help to be undefeated, but not to be tested." He already has his eyes on a quad-rangular meet in Cleveland which in the past has boasted such name schools and Michigan and Alabama.

Both Buckley and Church emphasized the fact that the school is now in the process of searching for an associate coach (not an assistant) to work with Church. "He will be an associate coach and will have great deal to do with the program," Church said.

County Commended For Low Welfare Fraud Rate

State Auditor General Al Benedict has commended the Greene County Board of Assistance "for reducing its fraud rate and improving its overall welfare record."

The commendation came in connection with release of an audit report which shows, he said, that "an already low welfare fraud rate has been further improved."

Greene County's 1.5 percent suspected fraud rate at the time of the prior state audit in April 1976 fell to 1.2 percent at the time of the most recent audit in August 1979. Benedict said suspected fraud overpayments totaled $279.

Deputy Auditor General John Kerr said the suspected fraud overpayments of $279 and nonfraud overpayments of $238 were referred to the Bureau of Claim Settlement in the Department of Public Welfare for restitution or other corrective action. Kerr serves as Benedict's welfare fraud coordinator.

Reduction of the one excessive grant resulted in monthly savings of $48. Nonmonetary errors were found in 15.2 percent of the public assistance cases audited and consisted of missing or incomplete case forms.

Overall, Benedict said, errors were found in 17.2 percent of the public assistance cases reviewed and 15.8 percent of the medical assistance cases reviewed. The combined error rate was 17 percent.

All errors in the medical assistance program were non-monetary errors. Among the errors were one case of unreported income or other resources, one case of an overdue eligibility redetermination, and one case of a medical assistance card used by an ineligible recipient.

At the time the audit was made in 1979, the Greene County Board of Assistance was responsible for 1,257 public assistance cases whose monthly grants totaled $267,928. In addition, the county office was also responsible for a medically needy caseload of 253.

Of the 42 public assistance cases in which errors were cited, 37 were described as technical mistakes involving missing or incomplete forms. Of the remaining five cases, three were determined to be cases of suspected fraud, with the $279 overpayments involved appearing to result from "willful withholding of information on the part of the recipients."
