A Friend At Headquarters

the common good of all. And Order is a happy word. It represents millions of responsible people enjoying that common good. Respect for Law and the desire for Order must be gained in childhood. Having a "friend at headquarters" helps. But the heart of the matter is our early discovery of God. His love for us . . . His expectations of us . . . the hopes and promises that give life its highest meaning. Headquarters for moral and spiritual growth is the Church, with its program of religious education. There can be found our most enriching friendships.

Law and Order. Lately we've been making those words sound grim. Because we've all been painfully aware of moral deterioration in our society. Actually Law is a friendly word. It connotes a sense of community in which each is willing to adapt his behavior to

They are Marcia Biddle, president; Jim Hopton, vice president; Priscilla McCaw, second vice president; Viola Donovan, secretary and Ira Brown, treasurer. Judge Glenn Toothman is honorary vice president and Alvin Laidley is president emeritus.

The academy received a $200 contribution from the First National Bank of Carmichaels toward the recent purchase of 60 additional chairs and $50 from the Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce toward the cost of materials for the parking lot.

Hopton reported the Academy is co-sponsoring the summer reading and crafts program along with the Flenken Memorial Library and the Carmichaels Area Women's Civic Club.

The reading club will meet in the library from June 23 to

Century-Old County Jail Will Close This Summer

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

After 100 years of faithful service, the Greene County Jail will be retired from active service this summer and it couldn't come at a better time.

The current jail has become pretty much a sieve because of rusting metal and rotting lumber.

Countless prisoners have scratched their names in the dark cells during the past century. Dozens have chopped, sawed and clawed their way out of the old, red brick structure which is connected to the courthouse.

The jail is thought to have been erected in 1880, thirty years after the courthouse was erected on East High Street.

Although it has been "home" for murderers, wayward husbands, town drunks and everyone in between, the three-story structure has been cited and condemned by the state for almost 30 years. The State Bureau of Corrections has constantly cited the facility for having no exercise yard and no emergency exits.

Lack of an emergency exit was no problem for several prisoners over the past few years. They made their own.

Probably the most celebrated escape occurred sometime between 4 and 6 a.m. on July 17, 1965, when seven prisoners fled. The escapees included a murder suspect and one man charged only with driving without a license.

The most notable among the escapees was James Morris Fletcher, of Bobtown, who served eight years of a life term for murder but later was found innocent in a re-trial. He was being held on larceny charges with the escape occurred.

Fletcher was to remain a fugitive for almost a year before a bullet from a Maywood, Calif., police officer's .357 Magnum stopped the escapee who was running from a shooting incident. Fletcher was to make another escape attempt but this time he was stopped by Mrs. Betty Shultz, the wife of the sheriff, before he got to the front door.

Ironically, the escape attempt came the day after he pleaded guilty to prison breach in the first case.

Fletcher tossed his coat over the head of Deputy George Marley and started down the stairs to the first floor. Mrs. Shultz heard the commotion and met Fletcher with a rifle. She made him spread-eagle on the floor until help arrived. Fletcher told the court he was just going downstairs to complain to the sheriff about mistreatment.

Now living in South Carolina after years in jails, Fletcher's legal battles in state courts would fill a large filing cabinet in the new jail.

Five of the escapees were captured within hours of their flight. One was found hiding under the sink at his wife's home in Greensboro. Two others, including the man without a driver's license, were found in a barn near Gordon Hill.

The seventh escapee was 17-year-old Kenneth Gephart, of Carmichaels, who had been charged in the rifle-slaying of his stepfather two months earlier. Gephart managed to elude the dragnet for four months until he was captured in a small town near Columbus, Ohio.

Police theorized someone smuggled hacksaw blades to one of the prisoners. After sawing two bars from the window, the prisoners tied blankets together and dropped 14 feet to a small ledge from where they jumped to the street behind the jail.

Escapes occur at every jail, but the ones at the Greene County Jail usually made headlines.

The local jail was certainly no match for Terry Lee Anderson who came to town with a carnival in July 1978. The 25-year-old native of Bay City, Mich., had already escaped jails in Albuquerque, N.M., and Galveston, Texas, and was attempting to get lost with a traveling band of carnival workers.

He was picked up by local officials on a fugitive warrant but didn't stay long after making a hole in the roof. He was later captured in Michigan where he is serving a 30-year sentence.

Three weeks after Anderson escaped, two local men tunneled through the floor and made good their escape. However, they ran straight to the home of one of them where the police picked them up later that night.

One prisoner was apparently taking notes because he was among the three who escaped through the floor last month. Two of them were caught the next day in Indiana and the third remains at large.

There was only one escape during the tenure of Sheriff Emil Fox. It was his cousin.

He didn't actually escape from the jail. He waited until a deputy drove him to Clarksville and then took the sheriff's car.

The escapee had been lodged in the jail at the request of military authorities because he was absent without leave. While he was AWOL, the man had purchased a new car from the sheriff's relatives but used a bad check for the purchase. He wrecked the car a few days later.

Sheriff Fox allowed a deputy to drive the prisoner to Clarksville for a discussion with the other driver involved in the mishap. The deputy waited in the car. After several minutes, he decided to check on the prisoner. Just as he entered the door, the prisoner bolted from his hiding place and drove off with the car.

He abandoned the vehicle two miles away and hitched a ride to Morgantown, W. Va., where he was captured later that night. When asked why he didn't drive to Morgantown, he replied, "I didn't want to make the sheriff angry."

Security will be much tighter in the new $1.7 million jail facility but you can bet the excuses and complaints will remain the same. Escapee methods will have to be refined because prisoners will no longer have the century-old structure to attack.

According to Sheriff Remo Bertugli, who has been a part of the local lock-up for the past 16 years as a sheriff and deputy, prisoners never got fancy, they just starting chopping, clawing and sawing.

With a 100-year-old building, it hasn't been a fair fight.

Open House Scheduled For New Elementary School

A visitation day for persons to tour the new $4.2 million central elementary school in the Jefferson-Morgan School District will be held from 8:30 a.m. until 8:30 p.m. Thursday, June 26.

The school will open its doors for the district's approximately 750 elementary students when school begins for the 1980-81 year.

Although furniture for the various classrooms will not be installed for the visitation day, district officials are anxious for people to see the facility. An official dedication will be held later in the year.

Ground for the project was broken in August 1978. The new school, located on a 13-acre site adjacent to the district's junior-senior high school at Jefferson, will enable the district to close all its current elementary buildings.

With the exception of the art and science rooms and designated "wet areas" in each classroom, the building is completely carpeted. The "wet areas" are for boots, raincoats and umbrellas and also contain a sink.

In addition to the art and science rooms, the building has 24 regular classrooms, a music room with two private practice rooms, two special education rooms, three kindergarten rooms and a gymnasium with a regulation size basketball court.

It also contains a large library with seven small group remedial instruction rooms, cafeteria and kitchen, health suite and office suite.

Rated capacity of the building is 783 students.

Another feature of the building is a tri-boiler capable of being fueled with natural gas, oil or coal. A sewage treatment plant constructed as part of the project will serve both the new building and the junior-senior high school.

Wins Scholarship

Jeffrey Jones, Waynesburg Central High School senior and son of Mrs. Marilyn Jones of Waynesburg, accepts the Martha Maxon Memorial Scholarship Award from Carole Brookover as Principal Ted Carlson looks on. The award is presented annually to the senior who has best demonstrated competence and facility in English. Jones won the award for his composition on this year's theme, "The Ingredients of an Outstanding Teacher." Jones, who is a member of the high school band and assistant scoutmaster of Troop 187, plans to attend LaFayette College this fall, where he will be a pre-medical student.

Extradition Waived

Two of the three men who escaped from the Greene County jail Sunday, May 25, will be returned to the county today after waiving extradition in Indiana, where they were captured on the day after the breakout.

District Attorney Charles Morris said the return of Michael S. Eddy, 24, of 329 East Franklin Street, Waynesburg, will set the stage for trial on Monday, June 9, of the case in which he and Jeffrey Mark Nolan, 19, Pittsburgh, are charged with criminal homicide and robbery.

The other man to be returned, Samuel E. Litten, 29, Waynesburg R.D. 5, faces two charges of burglary.

The third escapee, William E. Wine, 20, who is charged with being involved in an auto theft ring, is still at large.

The three men escaped through the wooden floor of the jail May 25. Eddy and Litten were captured the next day in Seymour, Ind. following the robbery of a service station. Wine was thought to be with them in a car which had been stolen at Blacksburg, W. Va., but has so far escaped apprehension.

Math Anxieties Explored

Mathphobia, the problem of math anxiety, will be the focus for a two-day mathematics conference at Waynesburg College June 17 and 18.

The conference is being supported in part through a grant from the Henry C. Frick Educational Commission of Pittsburgh. Faculty members in the Mathematics Department at the college designed the two-day program. Reservations for the conference are still being accepted through the math department.

According to Rosalie Jackson, an assistant professor of mathematics at Waynesburg College, the conference may help elementary and secondary school teachers in Washington, Greene, Fayette and Allegheny counties, and northern West Virginia. Also, students and adults who have difficulty dealing with numbers might benefit from the sessions. The conference will carry one in-service credit for teachers.

The conference will be conducted primarily by "Overcoming Math Anxiety," a nationally known consulting group. Sheila Tobias, author of "Overcoming Math Anxiety," Susan Auslander, mathematician, and counselor Bonnie Donady, form that group.

Tobias, a one-time math avoider herself, says in her book, "whatever you call it—math anxiety, math avoidance, fear of figuring—the defeat, even terror, that many millions of us feel when faced with a math problem, adds up to a national crisis."

Tobias, former associate provost at Wesleyan University and frequent speaker and writer on math anxiety, noted that once math anxiety is understood, doing math is not far behind.

Mrs. Jackson said, "The primary objective of the workshop is to assist both educators and students in overcoming the problem of 'math anxiety.'" She pointed out that educators at a recent national conference on mathematics suggested that the nation's elementary teachers must overcome their fear of figures in order to prevent afflicting youngsters.

The conference will include workshops in areas of "Math Anxiety Reduction," "Spatial Relations," "Values Clarification," "Sex-related Differences and Biases," and "Reading and Math Anxiety."

The tentative schedule also includes question-and-answer sessions, video tapes and films. Many of the workshops and other activities will be repeated on the second day to allow the participants to attend a greater number of activities.

Registration forms are available through elementary and high school principals, guidance counselors or the college. More information on the conference can be obtained by contacting Mrs. Jackson in the college's math department.

Waynesburg's Owens Scholarship Alternate

Presenting the Truman Scholarship certificate to Linda Owens are college president Joseph F. Marsh, far right, G. Wayne Smith, left, vice president for academic affairs, and Dr. R. Michael Smith, associate professor of economics and the Waynesburg representative for the Truman Scholarship program.

A Waynesburg College student from Dunbar has been selected as the alternate winner of the prestigious Harry S. Truman Scholarship given annually to one student from each state.

Linda Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Owens, was chosen in recognition of her academic performance and commitment to government service. Miss Owens would receive the Truman Scholarship, which carries a $5,000 annual award for up to four years, if the winner is unable to begin his her studies this fall.

Miss Owens is the first Waynesburg College student named as an alternate winner in the four years that the Truman Scholarship has been awarded. Several other students have been named as state nominees in past years.

Dr. R. Michael Smith, an associate professor of political science at Waynesburg, is the Waynesburg representative for the Truman Scholarship program. He noted that Linda Owens has gone farther in the selection process than any previous Waynesburg nominee.

He said, "I feel her selection reflects on our academic programs, particularly political science and public service administration."

Miss Owens, who is majoring in public service administration and political science, credits her classes as an important factor in her selection.

"A lot of the things that the scholarship interviewers talked about had been covered in my public service administration classes," she noted. "The interviewers were impressed that Waynesburg College offers a course at the undergraduate level in grantmanship."

"Without the courses, I don't think that I would have done as well in the interview," she added.

At the interview, she was judged on communication skills, self-confidence, sensitivity to others, demonstrated interest in government service, and a wide variety of other characteristics. She also submitted an essay dealing with a public policy issue.

Bill, Patty Burns Accept Rain Bet

Pittsburgh's father-daughter TV news casting team of Bill and Patty Burns will venture into the weather forecasting field this summer for the first time in their dual careers on television.

They have accepted the standing wager of Waynesburg Rain Day Prophet John Daily that it will rain in Waynesburg on July 29 this year, as it has done for 91 out of the past 104 years.

Waynesburg's Rain Day tradition dates back to a day when an unknown farmer casually remarked to two drug store clerks of the odd sequence of rains on that particular date. Last year there were several rainshowers in Waynesburg on Rain Day.

The count has been kept alive for over 100 years, first by the two clerks, the late William and Albert Allison; later by Daily's father, the late Byron B. Daily, when he became owner of the drug store and now by his son, John, a retired attorney.

The tradition is now known around the world and has attracted attention from celebrities such as Bob Hope, Bing Crosby and others of the entertainment world and athletes such as the late Jack Dempsey and world heavyweight champion, Mohammed Ali.
