Jury Recurns 'Not Guilty' Verdict In Nolan Trial

Staff Writer

Jeffrey Mark Nolan, 19, of Wayneswho passed up a chance to plead guilty to involuntary manslaughter and serve two years in jail and instead stood trial on second degree murder and robbery charges - was found not guilty in Greene County Court Friday.

The jury, comprised of eight women and four men, deliberated for about five hours before returning the verdict.

The verdict surprised many court observers and police officials. When the verdict was read by jury foreman John Hoge, Judge Glenn Toothman mentioned the court viewed the case in a different light.

The defendants family was late in returning to the courthouse to hear the the verdict by Sara Rush, the murder victim's sister, who had maintained a vigil in the courtroom during most of the deliberation.

Francis Rush, the victim's brother, had also attended every session of the trial since it began Monday. He was not present Friday but, before he left, he had said Nolan would never be con-

Defense Attorney John Stets said after the verdict he was confident Nolan would not be convicted of second or third degree murder but was not sure of voluntary or involuntary manslaughter.

Stets felt the reputation and past criminal history of Michael Eddy was the main reason the jury refused to believe Nolan had a part in the robbery

The case went to the jury at about 11:20 a.m. after the judge instructed the jury for about an hour.

Toothman told the jurors they could find Nolan innocent or find him guilty of second-degree or third-degree murder, voluntary manslaughter or involuntary manslaughter in addition to the charge of robbery.

Jurors were told if they found Nolan guilty of second-degree murder they had no need to find on the robbery charge because it would merge with the homicide charges.

In his 35-minute closing argument, the defense attorney stressed the fact there was no physcial evidence against his Stets continually attacked the character of Eddy, a co-defendant who pleaded guilty to third-degree murder earlier this week. Stets pointed out that Eddy has a criminal record dating back to 1974 and is a "professional" robber.

'It's unlikely Nolan would rob a store without a weapon. He looked two witnesses in the eyes. He discussed no details of a possible robbery with Eddy," Stets told the jury.

Stets also reminded jurors that for four months Eddy was telling cell mates, the sheriff and his deputies and attorneys that Nolan was innocentand had nothing to do with the incident

Commissioners Hopeful After By-Pass Meeting

During the past four years or so, the Greene County commissioners have met on a number of occasions with top state officials to campaign for construction of the Route 21 by-pass around Waynesburg — considered by virtually everybody to be the county's most urgently needed road improvement

Last week they made their first formal presentation to the Thornburgh administration, and County Commissioner Richard Cowan feels that prospects for action are brighter than they ever

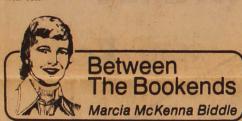

The meeting was held with Frank Brooks Robinson, executive director of the governor's Committee on Economic Development. Cowan describes it as a group which meets twice a month with the governor and cabinet members to focus on things the state can do to assist areas where development is occurring.

The commissioners again pointed to the many studies which project major coal development for the county; the need for an improved east-west highway system to facilitate this development. and the possibility of obtaining federal funds which are available to energy-impacted areas. In doing so they had the backing of two regional industrial promotion groups, Penn Southwest and the Southwestern Pennsylvania Economic Development District.

At the conclusion of the session, Robinson said that Greene County would be placed on his agency's priority list and would receive every possible free

Greene County officials are keeping a close watch on de-velopments in connection with the proposed SRCII plant which is to be built in West Virginia, just south of the county line, to convert coal into synthetic fuels.

Their primary interest, of course, is the impact which construction of the gigantic plant will have on the county in terms of jobs, highway use. housing, schools and public facilities.

Using the solvent refined coal process (SRC) for converting coal into liquid and gaseus fuels, the plant would be the first to use commercialsize equipment in the country. It is to be funded by the U.S. Energy Department, Gulf Oil Corp. and the governments of Germany and Japan.

It is to be built on a 2,400acre site near the community of Fort Martin in Monongalia County, W.Va., just south of Greene County. It will be built day and is designed as a "demonstration" plant to de-termine the feasibility of a Construction is scheduled to begin next spring and to be completed by mid-1984. Ac-cording to a socioeconomic impact analysis which has already been completed, employment during the construc-tion stage would reach 1,401 in 1981, 3,638 in 1982, and peak at quired would include pipefit-ters, ironworkers, boilermakers, insulators, carpenters, electricians, con crete finishers, painters and millwrights.

According to the soci oeconomic study, some 83 per-cent of the people employed during the construction stage could be expected to locate in Monongalia County, W.Va., in the Morgantown area. It anticcould be expected to locate in Greene County, with the principal housing demand being for mobile homes and apart-

The study also indicates that county schools could ab-sorb the new people without any real difficulty, both dur-ing the construction and demonstration period.

If the SRC process is found to be workable, the plant would be enlarged after two years into a fully commercial operation which would use 100,000 tons of coal a day.

The expansion would provide 5,000 jobs at the peak of construction. Operation of the plant would provide from 500 to 600 jobs, and about 500 more spinoff jobs would be created in various service industries.

The plant undoubtedly would have a major impact on the entire area, particularly if it is expanded into a fullycommercial operation, both in terms of the job it would provide and on the pressure it would exert for increased coal production

Greene County Will Be Placed On State's Priority Project List

County Commissioners Richard Cowan and L. R. Santore made the announcement at their meeting Friday reporting on a meeting which was held Thursday in Pittsburgh and concerned construction of the Route 21 bypass around Wayneburg, in particular, and the overall economic development of Greene County in general.

"It was a very useful meeting and I am more optimistic about the state's committment to our future than I have ever been," Cowan said.

The meeting was set up by Jay Aldrich, executive director of Penns Southwest, an agency dedicated to the industrial and economic development of southwestern Pennsylvania.

Attending the meeting — in addition to the commissioners and Aldrich — were Frank Brooks Robinson, executive director of the governor's Committee on Economic Development: George K. Stennett. Greene County director of development: Lou Vidic, executive direc-tor of the Southwstern Pennsylvania Economic Development District, and Art Davis, manager of the Pennsylvania Land Policy Project, which is currently preparing a study of coal development centered primarily on Greene County. County Commissioners Joseph

Pawlosky is on vacation and could not

Thrust of the meeting was the growth which Greene County can expect when plans are carried out within the next two decades to develop the county's vast coal reserves. It centered primarily on transportation and water problems, the commissioners said.

"Greene County just can't take care of these problems by itself. We need the state to battle with and for us." Cowan Santore said proposed development of the SRCII coal liquification plant by Gulf Oil in West Virginia, just south of the county line, was also discussed in terms of how its construction would

The commissioners explained that the governor's committee is a cabinet level group which meets semi-monthly to focus on things the state can do to encourage economic development in key areas of Pennsylvania. They said that Robinson agreed that Greene County is such an area, and that construction of an east-west highway, including the by-pass, would be vital to meeting the transportation needs of the county in the overall context of the county's develop-result of our meeting, will be more acutely aware of our problems and potential, and will be looking for ways to help us," Cowan said.

In action at their meeting, the commissioners agreed to pay the $2,900 allocated in the 1980 county budget to the Greene County Council on the Arts to match a state grant which it received. Of the total, $2,500 will be paid from federal revenue sharing funds. They also agreed to support an application by West Greene Health Services for the assignment of a physician to the agency through the National Health Services Corps of the U. S. Public Health Service.

In response to a letter from James A. Minor, president of Concerned Tax-payers of Southeastern Greene County. the commissioners said that plans are already being made to expand the rural transportation program operated by the Community Action Corp. into the south-eastern section of the county.

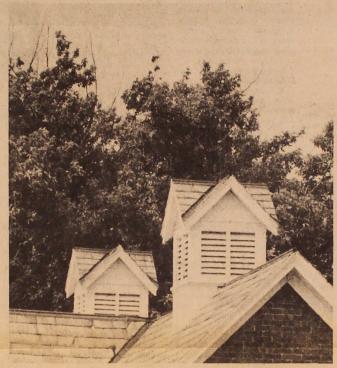

Commissioner Santore, who serves on the CAC transportation committee, explained that application has been made for federal funding to expand the pre-sent pilot program, which is operating primarily in western Greene County and has already been planned to include Bobtown, Dilliner, Greensboro and other communities in the southeastern sec-

We realize that the concentration of population in that area makes the expansion feasible, and anticipate that funding will be available to begin the service after July 1." he said.

Some people, especially those in love, just naturally walk around with their heads in the clouds. But how often do most of us go through a day with our eyes cast down, failing to see what's overhead? Much of the unique architecture in Waynesburg is eye level with the statue of General Greene on the Greene County Courthouse cupola, but all of us can appreciate the spirals, towers, domes and other intricate roofing features if we just look up. ## What should I do if my lights go out?

First, check to see whether your neighbors have lights. If the lights are out only in your home, perhaps a defective lamp socket, extension cord, or too many appliances on one circuit caused a fuse to blow or circuit

However, if the lights are out in your neighborhood, chances are a vehicle hit one of our poles or a storm has caused a power outage.

What do I do if it is a power outage?

Call the West Penn Power office serving your location and re-

Then, turn off largeelectric-use items, except the refrigerator and food freezer. That way, everything won't come on at once when the power is restored and possibly blow fuses or trip circuit breakers. Don't open the freezer either. Foods will usually stay frozen for 24 to 72 hours if the door isn't opened.

And during a prolonged power outage, dial your battery-powered radio to the local station for announcements from West Penn Power.

What else should I

Although power outages generally are infrequent, they do happen. So prior planning on your part will help.

You should always keep a flashlight and fresh batteries handy as well as some candles and matches.

It's also a good idea to have a supply of drinking/cooking water, especially if your water system depends on a cistern or well.
