No Tax Hike In New Budget

There won't be any tax increase for taxpayers in the Southeastern Greene School District this year.

At a special board meeting Tuesday night, the board adopted the 1980-81 budget of $2,446,950, leaving the district's real estate tax at 79 mills.

Expenditures for plant operation and maintenance and in the capital outlay category, where $200,000 for building citation work was included in the 1979-80 budget, were trimmed. Pupil transportation was increased by $20,000 in anticipation of a rise in busing costs and Intermediate Unit 1 transportation costs.

Other taxes remaining the same are: the five dollar per capita, one percent earned income, one percent real estate transfer and the ten dollar occupational privilege tax.

A contract for janitorial supplies was awarded to Art Snyder Supply Co. of Uniontown which had submitted a bid of $11,856. Bids for industrial arts supplies were tabled for further review.

The board will hold an informal work session July 1 to discuss architectural options for the three elementary schools and coaching positions.

Engineers Estimate Sewage Service Costs

MT. MORRIS — Preliminary estimates of what it will cost to provide sewage service to Mt. Morris and surrounding portions of Perry Township have been made by L. Robert Kimball and Associates, an Ebsenburg engineering firm which is currently making a feasibility study for the Mt. Morris Water and Sewage Authority.

Information gathered to date was outlined last week at the first of four public meetings which the authority will hold while the study is being made. Additional meetings are scheduled for Aug. 9, Sept. 16 and Oct. 21.

The study, to date, has pinpointed the major problem areas in terms of raw sewage flowing into drainage ditches, and has defined the area to be served as comprising 117 acres with an estimated population of 700 people.

It also outlines the various alternatives available for the collection and treatment of sewage and estimated that it would cost $1.4 million (1980 dollars) to construct a system which would include collector lines, four lift stations and a package treatment plant.

The local share of this estimated cost would be $325,000, which would be financed through a bond issue. Annual operating cost of the system would be $42,000.

The engineers estimate it would require a monthly user charge of $23 to repay the bonds and operate the system.

The feasibility study will cost the authority $29,500. A grant of $19,500 has already been obtained from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for preparation of the study, and an additional $2,625 in grant monies is being sought.

The timetable calls for the feasibility study to be submitted to the EPA after the final public meeting on Oct.

21. A Step II grant would then be applied for to obtain 75 percent of the estimated $120,000 it will cost to pay for system design and land acquisition, with the expectation that it could be obtained by June 1981.

The engineers feel the authority could obtain a 75 percent construction grant by October 1982, so that the system could be completed by December 1983.

It was brought out at the meeting that there are presently no public sewerage facilities in Perry Township, with on-lot systems being used by most residents. It was also brought out that there are many areas where raw sewage is flowing into drainage ditches, creating a nuisance and a health problem. The community has been under citation for a number of years because of lack of treatment facilities.

Wind Ridge Plans Old-Fashioned 4th

An old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration will be held at Wind Ridge on Friday, July 4 — courtesy of Little League baseball mothers and a lot of other organizations and people.

It will feature booths, food, games and contests and a dance, as well as other activities still being planned, and will be held on the Jacktown Fairgrounds, starting at 10 a.m.

The idea for the day began when lifelong residents of the area began to talk us about how things used to be, picnics, little gatherings on holidays, and the fact that we no longer have them," Rosalie Hamilton, one of the organizers, said. "So Little League mothers have been busy on the phone getting this together for everyone. It's not just a community event; everyone is invited."

Events will include a horse-shoe tournament, games for children, and horse and pony rides. At 1 p.m. Jacktown "men" will challenge Kuntown "men" to a softball game. Those wishing to play can sign up that day.

A square dance will be held at 6 p.m. with music by Fred Hewitt of Graysville with Ed Caldwell as caller.

Organizations which have gotten into the swing of the idea include the Fairview Methodist Church, which will have a bake sale and flea market; the Ross Hill Garden Club, with a food stand; West Greene Band Mothers, with hot dogs and a striking machine; Aleppo Grange with funnel cakes, and the Cornerstone Genealogical Society, which will have a stand to assist people in tracing their family trees, and others.

Individuals from throughout the area will also take part in a flea market, arts and craft items will be displayed. Many other items will also be available to buy.

There will be no admission to the grounds, but everyone wishing to set up for sales will be charged $1 and must furnish their own tables.

Carmichaels Pool Opens

The county swimming pool at Carmichaels is scheduled to open for the season at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Allen Hughes, director of the Greene County Department of Parks and Recreation, said that sufficient progress has been made in solving several problems to permit the opening, although it will have to be closed for several days at some future time when a new sewer line is installed.

Hughes said the plumbing problem which prevented the scheduled opening on Memorial Day has been taken care of.

Local Man Hears Coal And Energy Speech At Capital

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Austin J. Murphy and Tony Hartlage of the Greene County Coal Owners Association were among the participants at a recent meeting of the National Energy Resources Organization in Washington, D.C.

Featured speaker at the luncheon, held in the Rayburn House Office Building, was Congressman James Wright, majority leader of the House of Representatives.

The National Energy Resources Organization is made up of representatives of government and private industry who are concerned with and involved in all phases of energy development.

Addressing his remarks to the recent House-Senate Conference Report to create the country's first synthetic fuels program, Wright stated, "The biggest thing we have going for us is that black diamond under earth-coal. The United States has about a third of the world's coal supplies. We can be the Middle East of the world in coal."

Wright also stated, "I think that with the passage of the Energy Security Corporation Bill for synthetic fuels and other incentives, along with the passage of the Energy

Following the majority leader's comments, Rep. Murphy said, "The action being taken by Congress this week to create a massive synthetic fuels program, primarily the conversion of coal to both liquids and gasses, marks the real beginning of our nation's energy independence. I compliment our guest speaker today, my colleague Congressman Wright, who although a Texan, has understood the need to bring coal to the forefront of our national energy program.

After 4 Years, Mother Finds Son; Father Is Arrested For Kidnapping

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

AUSTIN, Texas — A former Greene County couple and their eight-year-old adopted son have become involved in a legal battle which could draw national attention in the months to come.

Joseph Calovic, formerly of Clarksville, but known as Joseph Chalovich when he lived there, was arrested in Austin, Texas, last week in an ironic twist of fate.

For the past several years, Calovic has worked as an assistant to the development director at the Texas Law Center. His boss and fellow workers know him as a peaceful, church-going man who often brought his eight-year-old son to work.

His former wife says he is a kidnapper who changed his name, got a different social security number and tried to hide from the law.

No one was aware that Calovic was wanted in Pennsylvania for kidnapping his son Chris from the home of his estranged wife, Barbara Hull Calovic, formerly of Mather. Mrs. Calovic had been given custody of the child, then four years old, by a Pennsylvania judge following a divorce hearing.

The custody battle took nine months.

Calovic had asked his former wife for permission to visit the boy for a few moments. When Mrs. Calovic went to the kitchen, Calovic allegedly grabbed the boy and fled from their home in Allegheny County.

Four years have elapsed — years during which Mrs. Calovic has hired lawyers and visited police stations in an effort to find her son. Warrants were issued for the arrest of her ex-husband. Private detectives could not find him.

"She was constantly coming in to see us," recalled Lt. Floyd Neveling of the Allegheny County police. "We tried like heck to find him, because we empathized with her."

The boy's mother charged Calovic with kidnapping the child "with intent to inflict bodily harm and terrorize." He also was charged with removing a child against a court order, which is a misdemeanor.

Police followed more than a dozen leads that led to Vincennes, Ind., Rome and Syracuse, N.Y., and Greene and Jefferson Counties in Pennsylvania.

Then, this past week, police in Austin were conducting a stakeout in an unrelated investigation near Calovic's mobile home. Police took down the license numbers of passing cars and ran the names of the owners through the National Criminal Information Center.

The computer found the kidnapping warrant and Calovic was arrested.

Police said they found a small amount of marijuana in the mobile home but said it belonged to a troubled teen-ager who was living with Calovic.

Calovic, 33, was released from jail after Pennsylvania authorities declined to ask that he be extradited.

Chris, a third-grade student, was placed in a foster home until the Texas courts rule on the matter.

The child's mother was notified Thursday morning and she immediately flew to Texas with her Pittsburgh attorney. It was a tearful reunion between the mother and the son she had not seen for over four years.

Because she did not want to uproot the boy and cause further troubles for him, Mrs. Calovic agreed informally to allow her son to remain in Texas with the understanding he could visit her during Christmas and Easter and also for a period during the summers.

"If my ex-husband will sign the formal papers today (Monday) that will be the end of it," Mrs. Calovic told the Observer-Reporter Sunday night. "If he does not sign the agreement, we will go back to court on Thursday."

Chris, who is still too young to understand the economics of the situation, suggested he spend every other week with each parent. "He just doesn't understand the costs involved in such a plan," Mrs. Calovic said.

Mrs. Calovic, who works as a baker for a chain store and also at home, preferred not to reveal her current address because of what she terms continued harassment from some sources.

She just hopes the whole situation can be solved Monday for the benefit of her son.

Chris Chalovich is pictured just before he was taken from his mother's home over four years ago. He was found living in Texas with his father last week.

Preparations Made For Jacktown Fair

WIND RIDGE — The 115th edition of the Jacktown Fair will be held Tuesday, July 29 through Saturday, August 2, according to Mike Gardner, president of the Fair Association.

The annual Miss Jacktown Fair contest will take place the week preceding the fair.

Ron Jesso, chairman of the traditional opening parade, has predicted over 100 units will be taking part in the parade which opens the festivities on Tuesday, July 29.

"This year the fairgrounds are in tip-top shape," Gardner says. "We have completed a new roof over the sheep barn and made many other improvements." Gardner gave much of the credit to William M. Hughes, superintendent of grounds.

According to Raymond McCracken, vice president of the association, many people plan their vacations around the fair and use the week as a way to renew friendships dating back to the turn of the century. "It's a real family get-together," he said.

New Legislation Allows 17-Year Olds To Give

Because of legislation enacted recently in Harrisburg, 17-year-olds will now be able to donate blood to the Red Cross without parental consent.

The new law lowers from 18 to 17 the age at which youths become eligible to donate blood in any non-compensatory and voluntary program without presenting a signed consent form.

Mary Collins, president of the Greene County Chapter of the American Red Cross, said the change should be very beneficial in terms of donor recruitment for the periodic visits of the bloodmobile to the county.

"We rely heavily upon youth," she said, "not only to replace many of our regular donors who are nearing age 65 and will therefore no longer be eligible to give, but also to meet the growing demand for specialized blood products. A growth in the number of donors is needed if the Red Cross is to maintain adequate and dependable blood supply to meet patient need."

The Greene County chapter participates in the program of the Red Cross Regional Blood Bank at Johnstown, which reaches into Western Pennsylvania and parts of Maryland, Ohio and West Virginia, and Sharon L. Skolnik, director of donor resources for the Johnstown Region, pointed out that many of the 33 participating chapters have intensified their efforts at high school recruitment.

"We're hoping that state-level approval of voluntary donations by 17-year-olds will reassure many of the high schools who have been hesitant about participating in blood services," she said.

Although the new legislation will enable 17-year-olds to become donors without parental consent, Mrs. Skolnik emphasized that the decision to require parental consent forms will still be left to the discretion of the schools.

In August, four Rotary youth exchange students will be leaving Waynesburg — two to their old homes and two to new ones.

Raul Santiago of the Philippines and Antonio "Tony" Thome of Brazil will be leaving for their respective countries while two Waynesburg Central High School graduates, Susie Gardner and Anne Cassidy, will leave for a year overseas.

The four students are part of the Youth Exchange Program sponsored by the Waynesburg Rotary Club.

Miss Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner of Waynesburg, will live in the town of Rydalmere near Sidney, Australia, and expects to attend high school there. Miss Cassidy will live with the Samuelson family in Lysekil, Sweden. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cassidy of Waynesburg.

Raul arrived in Waynesburg last August and has lived with three separate families during the year, the Archie Traders and Francis Rafails of Waynesburg and the Tom Brookover family of Mt. Morris.

Why did he choose to come to America? "I was looking for greener pastures," he said with a smile, "I was also curious about it."

"Except for your winter it has been a good year," he said. The coldest it gets in the Philippines is 40 degrees and there are only two seasons, dry and rainy.

Raul grew up in the city of Malaybalay, population 65,000. His father is a lawyer. Raul is the oldest of five children and the only boy. While at Waynesburg Central High school he was active in many clubs, played guitar in the stage band and was manager for the basketball team.

Already a high school graduate, Raul would be a junior in college in the Philippines and he found the schoolwork here too easy for him. He joked that sometimes he wore sunglasses to class so he could catch a few minutes of sleep. Raul hopes to study marketing and accounting when he returns home.

Tony came to Waynesburg in March from Rio de Janeiro and has been living with the Michael Mulholland family in Waynesburg. Although he was going to spend a year in the "states," he was recently granted a scholarship and will return to Brazil for college and study architecture. When he first arrived, Tony knew no English but has since mastered it.

Tony also comes from a family of seven; he has a younger brother and three older sisters. His sisters all came to the United States on an exchange program.

"All three enjoyed it really here," he said of his decision to come. "I think my little brother is coming next."

Tony's father works on a dairy and coffee farm. The first time Tony tried American coffee was on the plane bringing him here and he found he did not like it. Brazilian coffee, he explained, is much different and stronger.

Like Raul, his biggest surprise was the winter. He left Brazil in 95 degree weather and found snow when he arrived.

Both boys say they will miss the United States. Raul said he felt there was more variety to American lifestyles and there is a wider range of experiences one can have. He noted he'd gained some weight from "the good all-American junk food."

Tony, who has become a baseball fan in the few months he's been here, said he too will miss the way of life in the "states. I never saw baseball and now I know it," he said.

Before the two leave for their homes they will be part of a month's tour of the United States with other Rotary exchange students from the northeast.

KEEPING FOODS SAFE

Is it OK to take the meat for dinner out of the freezer in the morning and leave it on the kitchen counter all day? If you have ever asked yourself this question, it is a good idea to look at the facts about food safety and how you can prevent illness from "food poisoning."

Foods can cause illness when they contain a disease-producing agent, such as a bacteria or toxin-forming mold. The warm months of the year are especially dangerous in terms of food contaminated illnesses.

Illness does not always occur from contaminated food. However, if a susceptible person — such as an infant, elderly person, someone incapacitated by another illness, or sometimes even someone who seems healthy — eats enough food which contains disease-producing agents illness can occur. This is why someone at a picnic may become ill while others are not effected.

Bacterial contamination of foods can be kept down either by cooking or refrigeration. Both of these processes retard the growth of disease-producing bacteria.

To grow and reproduce, bacteria need three things: moisture, warmth and a source of food. If any of these are missing, bacteria will not grow. Most bacteria are not killed by refrigeration, but refrigeration does stop them from multiplying. It also retards the ability of bacteria to produce a toxin or poison.

On the other hand, cooking foods at high temperatures not only retards bacterial growth but also kills bacteria. A good rule of thumb is to "keep cold food cold and hot foods hot."

The kinds of foods that require refrigeration are perishable food products, including those that consist in whole or in part of milk or milk products, eggs, meat, poultry, fish and shellfish.

Your responsibility for this begins at the time of purchase.

Make the supermarket the last stop if you are doing other shopping, and take the foods home immediately. Put refrigerated and frozen foods in your shopping basket last and put foods into the refrigerator as soon as you get home.

Never leave leftovers on the table after a meal, but store them in the refrigerator immediately. Always plan ahead so that you will have time to defrost foods in the refrigerator. Don't take frozen foods from the freezer and leave them to thaw at room temperature for long hours.

Youths Part Of Program

UNIVERSITY PARK — Students from four Greene County high schools were among the 750 outstanding youths to visit the University Park campus of Penn State University this month as part of the scholars program.

The program was initiated in 1975 to recognize and encourage excellent academic scholarship and provides an opportunity for top students to meet with Penn State faculty members and students.

The students were nominated for the program by their high school principals as the top academic students in the junior class of their respective schools.

Taking part from Greene County were Sherri Jordan of Dilliner R.D.1, a student at Mapletown High School; Kimberly A. Sanner of Waynesburg R.D.1, a student at Jefferson-Morgan; Dennis K. Hooker of Cameron, W.Va. R.D.3, a student at West Greene and Adam R. Henderson of Waynesburg R.D.1, a student at Waynesburg Central.

Viencek Receives Top Archaeological Award

Thomas Viencek of Rices Landing received the prestigious Archeology Award of The Society for Pennsylvania Archaeology. The presentation was made during the annual state meeting and banquet hosted this year by the Westmoreland Archaeological Society, Chapter 23, at the Sheraton Inn, Greensburg.

The Archeology Award is given to members of the society who are able to devote only spare time to their archaeological interests. It is given for some significant contribution, or contributions, over an appreciable period of time, toward the unselfish furtherance of archaeology.

The number of years that an individual has been nominated, the number of separate nominations, and the significance of the reasons are con-

THOMAS VIENCEK considered in making the award. Viencek, who teaches archaeology, ecology and science at the Youth Development Center School near Waynesburg, has had an interest in archaeology and other assorted Indian artifacts at Brownsville's landmark, The Old Fort.

His interest developed during his years in scouting and continued at California State College where his studies included anthropology and archaeology. He received his B.S. and Master of Education degrees from California State College.

One of the founders of the Mon-Yough Archaeology Society, he served as its president for several years. For the past three years, he has been president of the Paul R. Stewart, Chapter 19, Archaeological Society at Waynesburg.

Past recipients of the Archeology Award from Chapter 19 include Paul R. Stewart, past president of Waynesburg College, and James Randolph, a professor at Waynesburg College.

Adopt Carmichaels' Budget

The 1980-81 school budget was adopted by the Carmichaels Area School Board Thursday night. The board also heard a report on professional staff transfers, elevated eight teachers to professional status, hired several employees and accepted two resignations.

The board adopted the $2,908,078 budget by a 6-2 vote with Henry Bacan and Edward Tekavec opposing. Real estate taxes were raised from 89 to 95 mills. The following taxes remain the same: per capita, $15; real estate transfer, one-half of one percent; earned income tax, one-half of one percent; occupational privilege tax, $10. Bacan and Tekavec voted against the above taxes.

Elementary principal Jim Zalar reported on professional staff assignments for 1980-81. Board director Henry Bacan challenged the changes and asked for educational reasons.

Zalar said the transfers in the elementary system are made on the basis of his administrative evaluation with approval of the administrator. He said he attempts to mold a cohesive staff at each of the three elementary schools.

He and superintendent Dr. Dolores Zoldos noted that the changes were made in strict adherence to the professional contract. The changes were: Mr. Mrazek from Crucible to Central, grade three; Mrs. Ricco from Nemaocolin to Central, grade six; Mrs. Cree from Nemaocolin to Crucible, grade one; Mrs. Rankin from Central to Crucible, grade three; Mrs. Katusa from Crucible to Nemaocolin, grade one; Miss Assad from Central to Nemaocolin, grade six. Junior-senior high school principal Stan Ferek also presented his professional staff assignments for the new year.

The following teachers have completed two years satisfactory service and the board approved their elevation to professional employee status; Emelia Bertugli, JoAnn Converse, Patricia Gibson, Chris Hamilton, Karen Harr, John Menhart, Anna Jean Sopko, Rose Marie Zavatchan.

Robyn Cole was offered the position of assistant football coach to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Jim Hines. The motion passed but was protested by board members Bacan and Tekavec who stated it was in contradiction to board policy that the head coach make a written recommendation. Solicitor James Hook will research the policy before giving an opinion.

The board offered the position of head maintenance custodian to J. Edwin Deems. Four part-time summer maintenance assistants were hired and will be utilized as needed by business manager Louis Pascuzzo. Rose Montgomery was offered the position as part-time bookkeeping assistant.

The resignation of music instructor Frederick Yacono was accepted and the job will be advertised. The board recording secretary Terry Ganocy submitted his resignation and it was accepted with reluctance. The position is open for applicants.

Bids were opened and the food carrier contract was awarded to Charles Ross, the milk contract to United Dairy and school supplies to Kurtz Brothers.

THINK!

...OF YOUR SAVINGS ACCOUNT AS AN INVESTMENT.

Over the past decade, savings accounts actually outperformed the Dow Jones averages of the 30 industrials, 20 transportation stocks and 18 public utilities.

Too many people overlook the fact that their savings account is, indeed, a sound investment.

If you were to trace and compare the return on the average stock or mutual fund over the past ten years with a savings account, you'd discover the savings account outperformed them both!

If you'd "invested" your money in a savings account with us, you'd have escaped the emotional ups and downs that go hand-in-glove with the highs and lows of the market. And—you would have had the security of knowing your money was giving you a high return in absolute safety, because a U.S. Government Agency insures your account with us up to $100,000.

Always remember that any sound investment portfolio should have a good sized savings account as its foundation. We're specialists in saving, so come in and talk with us this week.

Boost For Greene County

Senate passage of a national energy bill which allocates $20 billion to the development of a synthetic fuel development program is sure to provide another boost to the coal-rich future of Greene County.

In part, the bill provides for the creation of a U.S. Synthetic Fuel Corp. to provide financial assistance for the commercial production of petroleum substitutes from coal, shale and other materials.

A Greene County group, in fact, is already among those seeking funding under such a program. The proposal was submitted to the Department of Energy in April by the Greene County Coal Owners Association (GCOA) and the Advanced Energy Systems Division of Westinghouse Electric Corp.

It proposes the utilization of some 100,000 acres of Waynesburg and Sewickley vein coal owned by GCOA members in western Greene County for a synfuel plant which would produce more than 50,000 barrels of fuel oil and gasoline per day.

In competition with other other groups from throughout the nation, the Greene County backers are seeking DOE funding for a study of the feasibility of the project. The study, which would cost an estimated $3.5 million, would evaluate the technical, economic, environmental and social aspects of the proposal.

Tony Hartlage, GCOA president, and Congressman Austin J. Murphy feel the proposal has a good chance of being funded. But even if it isn't, passage of the national energy bill with its emphasis on the utilization of fuels other than oil is sure to give additional impetus to the coal industry in the years ahead.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Mrs. Lucinda (Toddy) Greenlee of Seventh Street, Bonar Addition, has returned home from Germany, where she visited her son, Major Joseph Greenlee, an Army career officer, and his family. Major Greenlee has been on overseas assignment there for the past few years. Mrs. Greenlee, who graduated from Waynesburg High School in 1935, timed her return to attend the 45th reunion of her graduating class.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rice and son Richard of Columbus, Ohio, former Waynesburg residents, have been visiting friends and relatives in Waynesburg for the past several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Judd of Rochester, N.Y., formerly of Birmingham, Mich., were recent guests at the home of Miss Catherine Sayers of College Street. Mr. Judd is a retired salesman for a steel mill at Birmingham, where they resided until after his retirement when they returned to Rochester. Mrs. Judd and Miss Sayers were classmates at Waynesburg High School in the class of 1922.

Joseph Dinardo, widely-known TV meteorologist at Pittsburgh, and his wife were among persons attending the funeral of Wette Mancuso of Waynesburg Monday. Mr. Mancuso, was an uncle of Mr. Dinardo, who for many years spent his summer vacation with Mr. Mancuso and his brothers, Tony, Sidney and James, all of Waynesburg.

Miss Beth Stafford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Stafford of Greenbriar Drive in suburban Pittsburgh, is vacationing with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stafford and Mrs. Mary C. Eagon, all of Waynesburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Chess, former Waynesburg residents who have made their home in the Arcadia section of Los Angeles for several years, are visiting his mother, Mrs. Ferne Huffman of Bonar Ave. and other relatives in Greene County for several days.

Waynesburg's newest lunch room, the Lettuce Patch, has been opened in the Hillcrest Mall on East High Street by John Owen. Also, Greene County's first Long John Silver restaurant will soon open in Morrisville on the lot owned by Howard and Rita Widdup, where a used car lot was located for several years.

Greene
Letterbox

To The Editor:

A lot has been discussed lately about the Bowly Library and its value to the community, plus the plans to expand by way of a new library building on the Bowly property.

I noticed in the paper that Waynesburg Borough Council met on June 9 and approved writing a letter to HUD explaining the library's intent to build as a community improvement project. It's fine that council is supporting this for Greene County residents. We need our library.

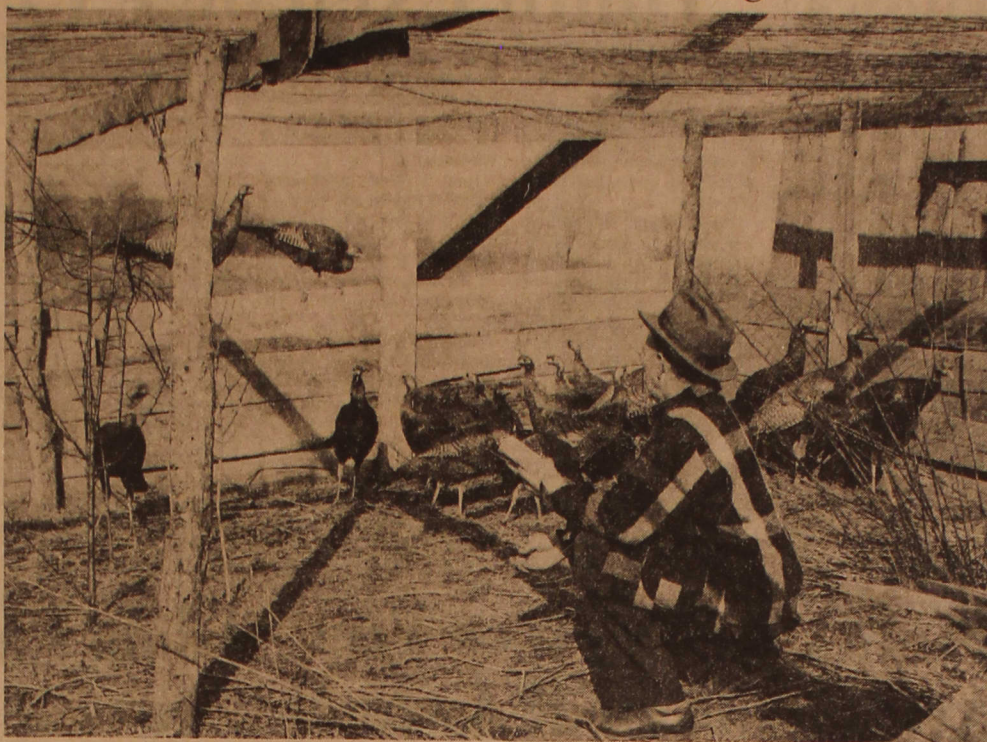

However, I do question that one council member did vote against this project and I do question the possible ethics or conflict of interest hinted at by her no vote. Mrs. Krill voted against writing to HUD and I noted that her husband, attorney Richard Krill, was very vocal at the borough zoning board meeting June 2 in opposing the plan to expand county library services, and also indicated that his law partner, Robert McCall, opposed the plan. At the council meeting on June 9, Mrs. Krill's was the only dissenting vote.

It is worrisome that relatives who serve to represent taxpayers may be so influenced by family members that they may possibly vote from the influence of relatives involved in other issues, and not vote objectively when they should. I certainly want the taxpayers to know that the negative vote of Mrs. Krill did not voice my opinion.

I hope the relationship factor of Mrs. Krill was not the basis of her negativism, but I do raise the point that it may be more than simply a coincidence of issues, and the timing between the two meetings.

Faces From The Past—Do Your Recognize Them?

And then there were few....But now there are many wild birds in Greene County since the State Game Commission first started to stock them in the county. That started in the late 1940's when they pen raised birds quickly became the victims of predators when released from holding pens such as the one shown above at the Waynesburg Sportsmen's Club along old Route 21. Instead of growing them to maturity in holding pens they were released as soon as they could fly and have managed to increase and survive. The man in the foreground is the late Bill Taylor, former professional baseball player and one of the most knowledgeable outdoorsmen of his era.

Supervisors Hear Of DER
Plans To Halt Construction

The Franklin Township Supervisors were told Monday that a new housing complex under construction will be shut down by the Department of Environmental Resources in the near future for lack of sewage capacity at the Waynesburg Borough treatment plant.

Searights Construction Co. has been constructing access roads to the site just off North Porter Street near the borough boundary line, for the past several months.

The supervisors have been asked to look into the possibility of having a gate valve placed between the borough sewer line and the recently constructed Franklin Township Sewer Authority line. With this completed, the amount of sewage generated by the new housing complex could be diverted into the new line for treatment at the Franklin Township plant along Route 188.

Don Forman, the township's code enforcement officer, said the DER will be sending a letter to Waynesburg Borough in the near future, advising the borough of the DER decision to halt the Mountainview Garden project.

Borough officials had been informed several months ago that further connections to the borough sewer line was prohibited because the treatment plant was over capacity.

Borough officials disputed the data collected by DER and are now in the process of obtaining data from other sources.

In other action, the supervisors were told by their solicitor, John Hook, that a decision from the state attorney general is needed before action on a parking problem along Route 21 can be resolved.

State police have requested the supervisors to post no parking signs along Route 21 across from the airport to prevent trucks from parking and blocking the view of motorists.

Hook questions if the township has authority in the matter because the area on which the trucks are parking may be a declaration lane which would probably be the responsibility of the state.

Hook also informed the supervisors that the closing on the property for a new municipal building would be held later this month. The Department of Community Affairs must first approve the purchase.

Drunk Arrests On Increase

WAYNESBURG — Perhaps it's the sign of the times. More drunks are landing in jail these days.

A check of the Greene County Jail docket Monday revealed that over the past two months nearly 70 percent of those jailed were charged with drinking related incidents.

During the past 60 days there were 13 persons brought in for public drunkenness and 10 for driving while intoxicated. Three others were arrested for disorderly conduct. Of the 35 persons placed in jail during this period, 26 were considered drunk.

Before you blame the younger folks, the ages for those arrested ranged from an 18-year-old student to a 73-year-old man found walking along the interstate. Women were also among those brought to the jail.

Although most of the drunks were unemployed, police also brought in a deckhand, a housewife, a farm hand and even a pizza-spinner.

Waynesburg residents need only view the downtown area on a Monday morning to realize the drinking problem. Beer cans and empty bottles litter most of the two-block area surrounding the courthouse. Some drivers have found their tires cut because of the empty bottles left in the gutters and on the curbs from where they roll into the street.

Most of the drunks eventually pay $126 for fine and costs and some are sentenced to 13 days in jail. Greene County Judge Glenn Toothman recently sentenced a man to join Alcoholics Anonymous and volunteer several hours of work to a local farm for alcoholics.

James Rogers, Waynesburg Borough police chief, said Monday there has been no organized crackdown but patrolmen no longer take the drunk home and let things slide. "The old winos have just about disappeared from the street," Rogers said. "We don't often find a middle-aged person drunk on street anymore either. Then of course we have more police officers than we used to have. Taking them home did no good, now we take them to jail."

Elevators Topic Of Discussion

WAYNESBURG — The possibility of installing an elevator in the new County Office Building and of replacing the manually-operated elevator in the old County Office Building was discussed Tuesday by the Greene County commissioners.

The matter was brought up by Commissioner L. R. Santore, who said he feels the county should finish the third floor of the new County Office Building to make it available for use. At the time the building was remodeled for use by the county several years ago, the third floor — a large, clear-span room — was left unfinished because the county had no immediate use for it.

"There are many ways the space could be used, and I think we should find out what it would take to complete the job," he said.

All three commissioners agreed that installation of an elevator would be necessary if the third floor was opened. An elevator shaft and pit were provided when the building was remodeled, so all that remains to be done is to install the cage and equipment.

At the same time, the commissioners agreed they would like to provide a modern, self-operated elevator in the old County Office Building, where a manual elevator installed when the building was erected some 80 years ago is still in use.

The commissioners indicated that estimates will be obtained on what it would cost to install both elevators, looking to the possibility that money for the work could be included in the 1981 county budget. An estimate will also be obtained on what it would cost to complete the third floor of the new building.

Bids will be opened by the commissioners on July 11 for installation of three-phase electrical service for the old County Office Building, where the present service has proven to be inadequate, especially during the summer months when air conditioners are in use.

Dog Attack
Lawsuit Filed

The father of a child who was attacked by a dog while visiting his grandfather in Greene County has filed suit against the owner of the dog seeking damages "in excess of $10,000."

The trespass action was filed in Greene County Court Wednesday by William Burris of Warren, Ohio, on behalf of his minor son, Dwight Burris. Thomas Spitznogle of Sprags R.D. 1 is named as defendant.

According to the complaint, the incident happened April 9, 1978, at the home of the boy's maternal grandfather, Okie Kiger, who is a neighbor of Spitznogle. It states that the dog, a German Shepherd/St. Bernard, came onto the Kiger property and made an unprovoked attack on the boy, who was playing outside the house.

It further says that the boy was bitten about the face, neck and arm; has been permanently scarred, and is still subject to nightmares and "an unnatural fear of animals."

Under The Dome

Rep. William DeWeese of Waynesburg may not be very popular with many of his fellow legislators for his repeated efforts to eliminate the practice of "ghost voting" in the House of Representatives, but we suspect that most people would hope that he keeps pushing.

The practice of absentee voting is forbidden by House rules, and yet it goes on all the time and is largely ignored. Members routinely flick the electronic voting switches of their absent colleagues.

Since members of both parties offend in this way, it is not surprising that the House leadership is united in opposing the reform, and that a motion by DeWeese to force action on a resolution designed to halt the practice went down to defeat last week.

Majority Leader Matthew Ryan, a Delaware County Republican, labeled the motion by the Greene County Democrat a "PR gimmick." Minority Leader K. Leroy Irvis, an Allegheny County Democrat, said he agreed with DeWeese in theory, but felt the matter should be submitted to the House Rules Committee for its consideration. Since that committee is chaired by Ryan, its chances of receiving favorable action are nil.

DeWeese is gaining, however.

When he introduced a similar resolution in May of last year, he was the only sponsor and got just 65 favorable votes. This time around, he had 36 co-sponsors, most of them younger members of the house, and picked up six additional votes as the motion lost by a 111-71 vote.

Only one Washington County legislator voted with DeWeese. Republican Roger Raymond Fischer supported the proposal, but Democrats David Sweet, A. J. DeMedio and Victor Lescovitz all voted against it.

Ghost voting is wrong and DeWeese is correct in arguing there should be a voice roll call at the beginning of each session to determine who is present. The voting switches of those who are absent should not be activated, and the House should record they are not present.

Fact and Folklore
John O'Hara

The expression "alley cat," once used as frequently as a term of derision or disgrace as "goof ball" or "dunce" is today, is now seldom ever heard.

It came from the fact that the alleys which ran parallel to the streets of small towns and cities were often used by petty offenders or the lower strata of inhabitants of small towns and large cities who, for one reason or another, preferred to use them instead of regular streets.

Waynesburg, which was originally laid out in the late 1700's, had its full share of alleys and most of them are still in use today. But as time goes on, fewer and fewer people live in the alleys where the buildings built originally as small dwellings have now been torn down or are used mostly as garages or storage buildings.

For the most part Waynesburg streets were named in honor of patriots, such as George Washington, Nathaniel Greene, for whom the county was named; General Mad Anthony Wayne, for whom the town was named; Abraham Lincoln, Benjamin Franklin, Morris, the first secretary of the treasury, etc. Other streets were named for their location, such as East and West Streets because of their location at the east and west original border lines; High (Main) Street because of its being the highest located street in the business section and Bonar Avenue in East End for the man who was one of the original settlers there.

But the alleys got no such praiseful description when they were laid out. The early city fathers came down off their thrones long enough to designate them with more mundane designations closer to everyday living, according to an early day map, about the turn of the century, published by J.G. Ritchie.

Many alleys were named for favorite fruits of the mapmaker or for their importance in the diet of earlier residents. Cherry Alley is the one running east and west between High and Greene Streets; Strawberry is its counterpart on the first half block north of High Street. South Alley is the second east-west alley south of High Street because the original borough line ends there. Walnut Alley runs between Lincoln and Elm Streets and Locust Alley between Elm and First Street.

First Street, however, is not the most southerly street in Waynesburg, being one-half block north of Water Street, which extends from a point south of First Street along Ten Mile Creek east to its intersection with Morgan Street at the Smith Creek Bridge which, incidentally, spans Ten Mile Creek with the highway formerly known "Smith Creek Road" (now PA 218) that starts there on its way to Blacksville at the Mason-Dixon line in Wayne Township.

Whether or not the person or persons who named the north and south alleys in Waynesburg was a toper (alcoholic) or just enjoyed some of the stronger beverages or more tasty fruits is uncertain.

But on the west end of town starting with Spring Alley between Richhill and West Streets they are: Blackberry Alley between Richhill and Morris Streets; Fruit Alley between Morris and Washington Streets; Cider between Washington and Morgan Streets and Whiskey Alley between Morgan and Cumberland Streets.

The most easterly alley in the original borough is Findley Alley between Cumberland and East Streets.

The North Side, starting upward from Wayne Street which was also the north end of the parks (Commons) had no street names aside from College Street beside the college campus. The five cross streets were all called avenues but the alleys between them were merely given numerical sequence designations from first to fifth, and none of the small houses which lined most of the alleys south of High Street are left today.

Alleys then, as now, served a beneficial function in the community. Their image now, however, is much improved. Once they were an almost exclusive masculine domain. Women hesitated to travel those which were lined with livery stables because of the constant odor of manure or the spontaneous outbursts of profanity of hostlers towards the animals or one another.

During the winter months they became seas of mud when thawing weather broke the long spells of zero weather. In the summer they were dusty and the odors stronger.

They were handy shortcuts, especially for boys going home from grade school eager to rush over the Duvall's Hill in search of nuts "brought down" by the first frost of autumn. Most of the memories of them are pleasant ones even though they were gained at the risk of becoming known as an "alley cat" by those who never dared to take that risk in the days of long, long ago.

And thanks, Mr. Ritchie, for helping to preserve those memories before they were wiped out by the roars of the jet age.

Home Burglarized

State troopers from the Waynesburg station are investigating a burglary which occurred sometime between June 13 and 20 at the summer home of a Canonsburg woman in Morris Township, about one and one-half miles south of the village of Ninevah.

Police say the burglars used a piece of board to break a kitchen window out of a house owned by Rose M. Arceri along Route 30070. The house was entered through the window, but nothing was reported stolen.

Doc Marx: Vet On The Run

QUESTION: Who drives more than 100,000 miles per year, is considered indispensable by many tri-state area horse owners, survives on about four hours of sleep a day, and still makes house calls?

ANSWER: Dr. Elmer Marx of Waynesburg.

When Dr. Marx started his veterinary practice in Greene County 25 years ago, he imagined the his future would hold time to read and keep up with developments in his field, go to church and enjoy family life.

Things haven't quite worked out that way — the pace is a little more hectic. Marx works seven days a week and has to steal time to spend with his wife Brenda and their seven children.

A typical day begins at 5 a.m. when Marx gets behind the wheel of his small diesel car. "I get 50 miles to the gallon now, but I use a lot of tingle ointment (a mild pain killer for his arthritic leg)," he says.

Usually he can be found within a 100-mile radius of Waynesburg, but for special cases he has been flown to other states to treat horses.

Marx finds a nightly four hours of sleep, plus occasional 15-minute naps at the side of the road, sufficient to keep him on his rounds of seeing animals that cannot be brought to his clinic south of Waynesburg.

"God and time are my best medicines," he claims. He may be called to remedy the unexpected, such as a horse severely cut by barbed wire, or to carry out the routine, like tube worming horses in the spring.

To kill the variety of worms that horses often get, a tube has to be put down the horse's throat to its stomach and medicine is injected. Since the horse's objections to the procedure are likely to be physical and rather strenuous, a veterinarian has to be careful.

Surprisingly, Marx' worst injury came from a very small calf, one of four animals the doctor was attempting to treat in their pen. The calf ran into his leg, dislocating the knee. The arthritis which developed makes Marx limp, especially after he has been riding in the car for an hour or so.

Strange animals have been known to make their way into the doctor's practice. Once two small deer required antibiotic shots. A pet lion which was daily growing wilder had to have its claws trimmed. Marx managed to sedate the beast long enough to perform the job, but not long enough to keep the lion from roaring in his face.

Over the years, some rather odd home remedies have proved effective. Common meat tenderizer is often prescribed for cuts to keep down infection and promote healing. Disposable diapers make a good bandage for a sore leg while air is pumped into a sore muscle.

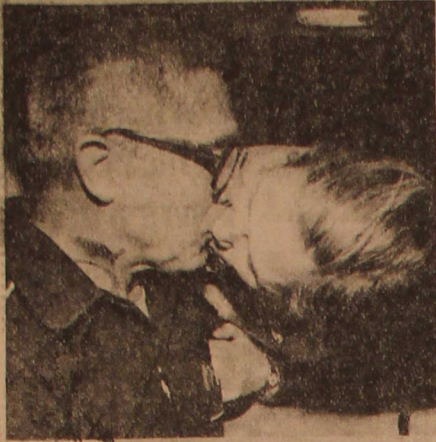

Brenda Marx organizes her husband's road schedule, and he tries to be back at the house by the time his office hours start at 6 p.m. There is no official end to his office hours, and often the driveway is crowded with cars until midnight.

It is at this time that Marx treats the smaller members of the animal kingdom—the cats, the dogs, the other pets that will never be expected to put in a good day's work or bring home a blue ribbon, but who are just as important to their owners as a thoroughbred horse or a prize sow.

One night a woman brought in her ailing 14-year-old poodle. It was decided the dog had to be put to sleep, and the woman turned away and shielded the dog's eyes so it couldn't see the needle which would kill it.

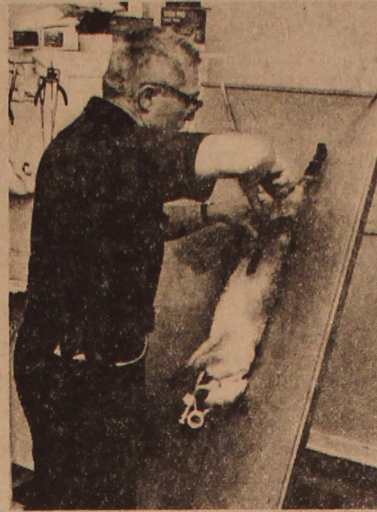

She cried as the dog went to sleep, and a tear slid from the corner of the doctor's eye.

"Sometimes you feel so helpless," he said as he slumped into a chair, coffee cup in hand. "Sometimes even God and time don't make it."

Worm-killing medicine is administered through a tube in the horse's nose. A twitch is applied to keep the animal still. It works—sometimes.

A fawn receives a shot to help it combat a cold. It was being bottle fed after being taken from the woods because its mother was believed to have abandoned it.

Marx takes the time to teach his clients how to check things for themselves. Below, he shows Ginny Faris how to check her horse's hips for soundness. The horse had a tangle with some barbed wire and badly cut its hind leg, but fortunately the tendon was not severed.

Ruth Fox had to face an ordeal when she brought her sick dog to the office late one night. The pet had to be put to sleep (left). Below, Mrs. Fox prepares to take her dog home.

Honor Ambulance Unit

U. S. Steel's Cumberland Coal Operations ambulance unit has been awarded a "Certificate of Excellence" under Pennsylvania's Voluntary Ambulance Service Certification (VASC) program.

Charles Detwiler, an emergency health representative from the state Department of Health, presented the award recently to Vince McGarvey, emergency medical services coordinator at the Cumberland Mine, located in Kirby.

The VASC program is a state-sponsored activity under which ambulances are inspected on a voluntary basis to determine if they meet rigorous state standards. To be VASC certified, an ambulance must meet five criteria:

- Have at least one fully-trained emergency medical technician on every call to attend the medical needs of patients.
- Confirm to rigid size and shape specifications as defined by the federal government.
- Contain equipment which meets the minimum requirements as defined by the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons.

Have two-way communications between the ambulance and local hospitals.

Have the capability to provide light rescue services, as well as an agreement with a fire department for assistance in providing heavy rescue services.

Since Pennsylvania does not currently have laws licensing ambulance services, the VASC program was created to recognize those ambulance services which meet the high standards required to provide high quality emergency medical care.

No Plans For Retirement

At 76 years of age, the Rev. Joseph Sabo of Clarksville is Greene County's oldest active minister, but he has no plans for retirement.

"As long as I can keep talking and as long as there are people who do not know Christ as their Saviour I can't give up," he said.

While he has done a lot of preaching from the pulpit since he entered the ministry in 1932, he has done a lot more work through personal ministry to the coal miners with whom he worked for more than 41 years prior to his retirement from the Chartiers mine on Dec. 31, 1967.

He was born Dec. 24, 1903 at Shirooaks, Pa., a son of the late Joseph and Mary Sabo. A revival held at the old Pitt Gas School near Clarksville in February 1930 resulted in his acceptance of Christ and the start of his ministry to fellow miners. He became pastor of the Pitt Gas Missionary

Church in 1932 and remained there for 18 years, until becoming pastor of the Clarksville Missionary Church, where he will soon celebrate 30 years of service.

He regularly preaches two sermons on Sunday and teaches Bible study on Wednesday. He also is a regular minister at Greene County Memorial Hospital, continuing a practice of making hospital visits which began in 1932 before the present building was completed.

In addition, he makes 20 to 30 house calls a month, frequently accompanied by his wife, the former Julia Smoggie of Clarksville, whom he married July 3, 1927.

His son, Joseph Sabo Jr. is a teacher at Altoona High School and pastor of a church at Hollidaysburg. Their daughter, Mrs. Norma Patrick, who is quite active in her father's church, is a teacher in the Trinity School District in Washington County.

At one point the Rev. Sabo was invited to pastor in another state but refused. He felt he was needed where he could minister to his fellow miners, and he intends to keep on doing it "as long as God wills."

Save-A-Life Swim In July

Hundreds of Greene County swimmers will participate in the 1980 Save-A-Life Swim for Cancer sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

First prize for the most money collected will be a ten-speed bike. Vickie Gashie, Greene County 1981 Nurse of Hope, will be swimming at the Mon Vue pool, Greensboro.

Applications and information will be available at participating pools, at the Greene County Cancer unit office at Waynesburg, and at the County Department of Parks and Recreation office at Waynesburg.

The Electric Consumer's Corner

What are the new EnergyGuide labels all about?

They enable you to determine, before buying an appliance, which model will cost you less to operate.

A bright yellow-and-black label on each appliance shows its estimated yearly energy cost (or energy-efficiency rating). The label also lists the energy costs for the most efficient and least efficient models produced.

That allows you to tell at a glance how the appliance compares with the least and most efficient ones.

And because the energy cost is based on a national average rate, there's a table of operating costs for the appliance at various utility rates. (The average cost of electricity for West Penn Power residential customers at the present time is about 4c per kilowatt-hour.)

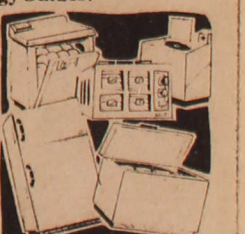

Will the more efficient model cost me more to buy?

Usually, it will. But because of its lower energy cost, the more efficient model could prove more economical than a less expensive one in the long run.

Remember, the energy savings will go on for the life of the appliance — 10 or more years for most major appliances.

Can you tell me which appliances carry EnergyGuides?

Yes. The Federal Trade Commission requires energy labels on all refrigerators, freezers, dishwashers, clothes washers, water heaters, room air conditioners, and furnaces produced after May 19, 1980.

Other major appliances are exempt because there's only a minor difference in energy use from model to model.
