County Applies For Life Support

By BOB EICHENLAUB
Greene News Editor
WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners agreed Tuesday to apply on behalf of the county Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Council for more than $14,000 in life support equipment for various ambulance services in the county.

Joni Jai Clutter, county EMS director, said the equipment will be purchased through the state Highway Safety program, which will provide 50 percent of its cost. The ambulance companies will provide the matching funds.

The application will include $6,782 in basic life support equipment to be distributed among a number of companies, $300 in intermediate life support equipment for the Jefferson ambulance, and $6,900 in advanced life support equipment for the Nemaacolin and Clarksville ambulance services.

In addition, Clutter said, an application will be made for a grant of $10,000 toward the purchase of an ambulance by the Southeastern Greene Health Center in Greensboro. She said that Keith Drew, director of the center, is seeking other funding sources to supplement the grant, because the vehicle will cost an estimated $29,000.

The commissioners received a petition signed by a number of Richhill Township residents seeking action on replacement of the Barney's Run covered bridge west of Wind Ridge, which was destroyed in a flood in 1978.

The petition asks the Greene County court to appoint a board of review to inquire into the cost and design of a bridge to replace the span. It will be turned over to the court.

At the same time, the commissioners noted that replacement of the bridge was given top priority on the list of proposed bridge projects which the county included in its list of projects for funding under the new PennDOT highway aid program. They also pointed out that the county has already pledged an annual allocation of county Liquid Fuels funds starting in 1981 until enough money has been accumulated to take care of the project.

Ron Barshick, director of the Washington-Greene Mental Health and Mental Retardation agency, met with the commissioners to receive approval of contracts to be executed with agencies which provide mental health services in the two counties. He said there will be no change in Greene County providers for the coming year.

Many of the services are funded 100 percent with federal and state funds. In some cases, there is a 10 percent local share, with Washington County providing eight percent and Greene County two percent.

The commissioners considered a request by the Pennsylvania Fish Commission to have its new field radio communications system tied into the county's police emergency radio system. The hook-up would be used only in the event of an emergency, such as a drowning. The commissioners indicated the request would be passed along to the committee which oversees operation of the system.

The commissioners reported that county fiscal operations for this year are pretty much on schedule. Expenditures during the first six months of the years totaled $3,091,000, which is within one-half of one percent of budget projections. A change order was executed with the Frich Construction Co., Belle Vernon, calling for a county contribution of $500 to cover work which must be done to eliminate a surface water problem which is delaying construction of taxiways to the 10 new T-hangers at the county airport. It was reported that work on the long-delayed project was resumed Monday.

Small streams such as this one, normally little more than a trickle of water, were swollen by Monday's heavy rains and helped contribute to some serious flooding problems in Greene County late Monday night and early Tuesday.

Jacktown Fair To Open 115th Straight Year

WIND RIDGE — The Jacktown Fair will open its gates for the 115th year Tuesday, July 29. The 115 consecutive openings of the free fair is believed to be the most of any fair in the United States.

The fair is sponsored by the Richhill Agricultural Society, whose chairman is former area resident Harry Gardner Jr., of McMurry.

The first fair was held in 1866, only 35 years after the village of Jacktown (now known as Wind Ridge) was settled in what was known then as Elk Ridge, an old Indian trail that led to the Ohio River.

A parade through the town and selection of Miss Jack-town Fair, a band concert, and appearances by guests dignitaries will highlight activities Tuesday evening. Hannah Amusements, which will furnish rides and will be in charge of the midway, will have the midway open Tuesday.

A pony pulling contest will feature Wednesday's activities at 8:30 p.m. and Thursday evening is fun night.

Doc Williams, who has appeared at the fair many times over the years, will present his show at 8:30 p.m. Friday and a fiddlers' contest will follow at 10 p.m.

Saturday, at 1:30 p.m., there will be a tractor pulling contest and that night at 8:30 p.m. the horse pulling contest will be held.

The dairy cattle judging will begin Wednesday at 10 a.m.; the beef cattle judging at 9:30 a.m. Thursday and the sheep judging at 1:30 p.m. Thursday afternoon, the same time as the swine judging.

FFA and 4-H members' dairy cattle will be judged Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. and beef cattle the following day at the same time and sheep at 1:30 p.m. Thursday. The 4-H and vocational sheep fitting and showmanship will be held at 9 a.m. Friday and the swine judging at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Young Ladies Lead Class will be held Thursday at 6:30 p.m. for girls under 19 years of age.

Rain Day Insurance: Sun, and Bill, Burns

WAYNESBURG — The Special Events Committee of the Borough of Waynesburg got just about what it paid for when it put up one dollar Saturday to buy $10 million worth of Rain Day insurance.

The policy was "purchased" from the Square

Deal Insurance Co. through the Baily Insurance Agency to protect the borough against untoward happenings on Tuesday, July 29.

It protects the committee against the theft or mysterious disappearance of either the sun or rain clouds, the borough's cloud seeding airplane or the secret sprinkler system on the court house roof.

It also covers nuclear fission (not applicable if the wind is blowing from Three Mile Island), radiation burns due to sun spots or solar eclipses, and cases of sunburn, sunstrokes, chapped lips, dehydration, sun poisoning, sun blisters and chiggers. It excludes any artificially generated sunburns (such as from a sunlamp), windburns, cigarette burns, Bill Burns, nude sunbathers and marathon runners.

Additionally, it insures Rain Prophet John L. Daily from any loss he might have (to a limit of $25) in the event that he loses his rain day bet with Bill and Patti Burns and has to buy them a hat.

It's the fine print, though, that makes the policy such a bargain. It stipulates that the company will pay off only if claims are made in writing no later than 10 minutes before the covered catastrophe occurs.

The policy does not guarantee that it will rain on July 29. But the committee isn't worrying about it. With a record of precipitation on Rain Day for 91 of the last 104 years, members feel the odds are so much in their favor that insurance of that type is not necessary.

Rain Day 1980 Queen Chosen

WAYNESBURG — Gianna Mucci of Perryopolis was crowned Miss Rain Day 1980 to climax a pageant held Sunday evening at Waynesburg Central High School.

The four runners-up, as they placed, were Maria Babilya of Brownsville, Jonna Shultz of Waynesburg, Robin Smith of Waynesburg and Terri White of Uniontown.

The new Miss Rain Day was crowned by Georganne O'Brochta Kormendi, who won the title in 1971. John Barna, president of the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce, presented U.S. Savings Bonds to the queen and runners-up and to winners in other categories, as well as other awards.

The 20 contestants were judged in three categories, talent, appearance in an evening gown, and modeling of sportswear.

Miss Mucci, who presented a jazz dance, placed first in evening gown competition to win an additional $50 bond with the $150 bond she received as queen. Miss Babilya received a $100 bond as first runner-up, and the other three runners-up received $50 bonds.

Terri White, who presented an acrobatic dance, received a $50 dance for having the most outstanding talent, while Miss Shultz received the $50 bond for sportswear modeling.

The five runners-up in the talent competition who were not finalists also received $50 bonds each. They were Diane DeForty of Brownsville, acrobatic dancer; Kimberly Huffman of Waynesburg, tap dancer; Tammy Machesky of Waynesburg, tap dancer; Valerie Boone of Uniontown, acrobatic dancer, and Lisa Elek of Carmichaels, acrobatic dancer.

The three judges, all from Pittsburgh, were Mrs. Ruth Black, representing the Bradford School; Judi Welsh, dance instructor at Point Park College, and Patricia Palermo, a faculty member at the Ellis Girls' School.

Rebecca Wilson of Waynesburg directed the pageant, which was attended by nearly 500 people. Assisting her were Frank Gressly, Tom Glasser, Louyse Cooley, Bill Morris and Bill Iams.

Storms Sweep Area With Rain

By ROBIN ROBERTS
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — A series of electrical storms which swept through Greene County Monday dumped nearly six inches of rain on some areas of the county, caused flooding and power outages and at least one fire.

The National Weather Service measuring station at the Waynesburg Sewerage Disposal Plant recorded 2.62 inches of rain fall in the Waynesburg area between 7 a.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday, however, a similar rain measuring device at the Carmichaels plant recorded 5.8 inches of rain during the same period.

Roads throughout the county were closed much of the night and early morning because of heavy flooding and trees which had either been struck by lightning or blown over by storm winds which accompanied the storms.

A Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) spokesman said early Tuesday that most of the trouble areas had been cleared up. He said streams throughout the county started swelling out of their banks at about 10 p.m. Monday and did not recede until about 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Over 20 PennDOT employees worked throughout the night setting up barricades, cutting trees, cleaning washed out areas and unclogging drainage pipes.

In the Braden Plan at Clarksville, lightning struck a chimney at the home of Richard Dolon, causing extensive damage to the chimney and the roof of the home. Bricks from the chimney fell into the family's swimming pool causing damage. The incident occurred at about 5 p.m. Monday and electrical service was not restored to the area until Tuesday morning.

According to Howard Swam of the West Penn Power Co., at one point during the series of storms some 2,200 customers in the Jefferson Division were without power and at 7 a.m. Tuesday an estimated 1,300 customers were still blacked out.

"It was an incredible night, and most of the damage was caused by lightning strikes. At least 20 transformers were blown and I can't tell you how many fuses were knocked out," he said.

One of the major trouble spots was the Clarksville-Mather area, where a 25,000 volt line fell into the distribution system. It happened during the first storm at about 4:30 p.m. Monday and service was not restored to the 250 customers effected until 11:17 a.m. Tuesday.

"That afternoon storm was the first blow, but we were badly hit again at 4:30 and at 9:15 we really got clobbered."

Swam said all sections of the county were involved. It was not confined to the Jefferson Division, as 10 of the 12 West Penn Divisions reported similar problems.

By noon Tuesday, Swam said, all of the big trouble spots were cleaned up, although a number of individuals were still without service.

Art Contest Is Arranged

WAYNESBURG — A Rain Day art contest for children, sponsored by the Bowlby Public Library, will be held Saturday, July 26, from noon to 5 p.m.

Children in kindergarten through sixth grade may participate. The library will provide all art supplies. On Sunday the art work will be displayed in store windows.

Just Call Him Coach... Finally

GRAYSVILLE — After spending as many years as he did trying to get a head coaching job here in Western Pennsylvania, Earl Finney wasn't about to waste any time.

Less than an hour after being officially confirmed as head football coach at West Greene High School, the 45-year-old Finney rolled up his sleeves and got down to business.

Finney met immediately with the Pioneer Boosters Club to map plans for the coming season.

Time was running out on West Greene with pre-season football camps scheduled to open in Pennsylvania on Monday, Aug. 11. Most school districts conduct summer conditioning programs where the coaches get a good look at the prospects for the coming season.

Finney was hired Tuesday night by the West Greene School Board, succeeding Mike Lambiotti who was hired more than a month ago but who later rejected the job. Lambiotti was to succeed Bill Devore who had coached the Pioneers for two seasons until he was dismissed at the end of the 1979 football season.

The route Finney followed to his first head coaching job in Pennsylvania has been a curious one that stretched from Washington to Alaska to Nebraska and now to Rogersville.

Finney coached the now defunct semi-pro Washington Generals for six seasons before enrolling at California State College where he finished the education that he had begun 20 years earlier at Long Beach (Calif.) City College. After earning his degree at CSC in 1974, Finney, then 39, was unable to find a teaching and coaching position in the district.

As a matter of fact, the only place he could find work was in Alaska where he coached both basketball and wrestling, winning league titles in both sports at Skagway High School, including seven state junior high wrestling champions including son Ken at 95 pounds.

The following year he coached football and wrestling at North Pole High School in Fairbanks, Alaska, where the football team went 2-3-1 and the wrestling team went 6-10 with two regional champs and four state qualifiers.

However, his family — wife Lois and three children — did not particularly like the winters in Alaska and the Finney migration back to Washington got as far as Nebraska where he again secured a football coaching and teaching position at Fort Calhoun. He was head football coach, head track coach and assistant basketball coach for one season.

County Fair Preparations

WAYNESBURG — Preparations have begun for the annual Greene County Fair which will be held at the county fairgrounds Aug. 4 through 9.

Mrs. Helen C. Dinsmore, general superintendent of the home and garden show, has announced that many revisions and additions have been made to make that department more complete than in former years. State regulations make more premiums available, bringing a standard three paid placings to each class.

Mrs. Dinsmore also stressed that competition is open to anyone who wishes to exhibit. Exhibits must be delivered to the home and garden building at the fairgrounds no later than 7 p.m., Monday, Aug. 4, and must be removed Saturday, Aug. 9, between 5 and 7 p.m. No exceptions can be made.

Extensive Damage In 2-Car Crash

Damage was extensive but there were no injuries in a two-car collision on Route 19, a mile and half south of Waynesburg at 8:10 p.m. Tuesday.

Police said Charles J. Eisinger, 51 of Waynesburg, R.D.3 pulled into the path of a car driven by Susan E. Haas, 22, of Waynesburg.

County Airport Hangup Nearly Resolved

By BOB EICHENLAUB
Greene News Editor

WAYNESBURG — A problem which has delayed use of the 10 new T-hangars at the Greene County Airport for six months was apparently resolved following Friday's meeting of the county commissioners.

The commissioners also endorsed use of federal funds by PennDOT for a road improvement project in the Waynesburg area, approved a revised list of projects to be submitted to PennDOT for the new 12-year highway improvement program, and submitted data to the U.S. Census Bureau to refute some of the preliminary totals included in the recently-released census report for the county.

George K. Stennett, county director of development; representatives of the Michael Baker engineering firm, and contractor George J. Fritch met with the commissioners to discuss the ground water problem which has delayed construction of the taxiway leading to the 10 new T-hangars which were completed at the airport last year.

Fritch, who has an $88,000 contract to construct the taxiway, said he was in a position to complete the job last fall but was delayed because the hangars had not been completed. When they were, it was too late in the season to do blacktop work and the groundwater condition developed this spring which would require additional cost to correct.

The engineer estimated it would cost $5,000 to bring in stone and roll it in for a base. Stennett said that the Bureau of Aviation, which is funding 95 percent of the project with federal and state funds, had no additional money available, and the commissioners said they felt the cost should not be borne by the county. They pointed out that the county has already lost about $4,000 in hangar rentals because of the delay.

Following the meeting, a source of local stone was found which will reduce the additional cost to an estimated $1,000, which will be shared by the contractor and the county. Stennett said work will be resumed next week so that the hangars should be available for use within a month.

The commissioners adopted a resolution endorsing Pennsylvania Department of Highways plans to rehabilitate 1.3 miles of Routes 30017 and 30104 from the Crawford Bridge on South Porter Street, Waynesburg, through Morningside to the intersection at McDonald's Restaurant in Morrisville. The road is heavily used as an alternate route between Waynesburg and the Waynesburg Shopping Plaza.

The $560,000 improvement project will be funded as an Urban System Project, which calls for 75 percent federal funding and 25 percent state funding.

County planner Valerie Cole presented a revised list of projects the county will recommend to PennDOT for the new 12-year highway improvement program under the various federal aid programs available to the state.

The Route 21 Waynesburg by-pass, widening of Route 19-21 through Morrisville, elimination of the railroad grade crossing on South Morgan Street in Waynesburg, installation of a traffic signal at the new Greene Plaza shopping center east of Waynesburg, and rehabilitation of the bridge and railroad underpass at Morrisville are major projects submitted.

It also includes repairs to eight county bridges, three state bridges and one Cumberland Township bridge, and elimination of three slides on a Dunkard Township road near Bald Hill.

Mrs. Cole also presented the commissioners with data which conflicts with the preliminary census report on vacant houses in Waynesburg and Borough and on the number of persons living in group quarters in Waynesburg.

The census listed 27 vacant housing units in Carmichaels, but information from the water authority there shows there are just 16 vacant units. The number of vacant units in Waynesburg was listed at 107, but records of the water authority there show just 84 vacancies.

A discrepancy was also noted in that the census listed 486 persons as living in group quarters in Waynesburg, while Waynesburg College records placed the number at 571.

"We feel that some of the population totals listed in the preliminary census report are also inaccurate, but have no real way of challenging them," Mrs. Cole said. "Where we can produce evidence to challenge the findings we should do so, since an accurate census is very important because it is used as the basis for revenue sharing and other federal allocations."

A letter outlining Mrs. Cole's findings will be sent to Judy Loughman, manager of the district census office in Donora, with a request that the census totals be reviewed.

Supervisors Target Of Suit

WAYNESBURG — The Morgan Township board of supervisors and their solicitor are being sued for alleged failure to live up to an agreement executed in 1974 for salvaging of marketable coal from the township-owned "gob pile" in Mather.

The action was filed in Greene County Court Friday against supervisors Edward Burnfield, Isaac Gayman and Floyd Hull and the township solicitor, James Hook of Waynesburg. Plaintiffs are Michael Nassae of Charleroi and Anthony Malarbi and Patsy Scicchitano, both of Bentleyville.

According to the complaint, the supervisors in August, 1974, approved granting of a lease to the plaintiffs under which they would be given the right to remove sledge material and recoverable coal from the old refuse dump of the Mather Collieries, with the township to receive a royalty of 25 cents for each ton of material removed.

The lease was executed on Sept. 16, 1974, and in August, 1975, the plaintiffs entered into a contract with William Stefan, in independent coal operator, to begin the salvaging operation. Under the contract,

Annual Book Sale Planned

WAYNESBURG — The Friends of the Bowlby Public Library will hold their annual book sale Friday, July 25, and Saturday, July 26. The sale will be held in front of the Opera House on East High Street in Waynesburg.

Books of varied topics will be sold. Hardback books will sell for 25 cents and paperback and magazines will be sold for 10 cents.

Proceeds will be used by the Friends of the Library for library staff salaries in order to have Sunday hours during the winter months. Shelving and other library furnishings have also been purchased with proceeds from these book sales.

the plaintiffs were to receive $4 for each ton of material Stefan recovered.

The complaint states that when Stefan went to the gob pile to begin work, he was denied access, with the supervisors subsequently informing the plaintiffs that the township lease with them was invalid because the township had not gone through public bidding before awarding it.

The complaint also states that Hook caused the signatures of the three supervisors to be placed on the lease agreement and had it notarized with the knowledge that the supervisors had not actually signed the agreement.

The plaintiffs contend that the gob pile contained approximately 100,000 tons of recoverable materials, so that their profit would have been $375,000. They have filed an assumpsit action to recover that amount from the supervisors.

In addition, they have filed a trespass action which seeks to recover "in excess of $10,000" from each of the three supervisors and the solicitor.

Carmichaels Board Awards Contracts

By THELMA CALLAGHAN
Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — Carmichaels Area School Board met Thursday night and awarded several contracts, approved a sabbatical leave, established a policy on filling vacancies and agreed to sponsor an all-sports banquet beginning next year.

Bids were opened for the Nemaquin School boiler and the contract was awarded to Westburne Supply Co. of Pittsburgh for $16,000 and the installation contract went to Jay-Square Mechanical Co. of West Newton for $12,000.

The board accepted the bids of $6,473 for 100 elementary student desks and chairs from American Seating, plastic supplies for $3,565 from Delires Plastics, general shop supplies $7,800 from Broadhead Garrett, music instruments bid of $2,655 from O. B. Frawley, audio-visual equipment $1,595 from National Educators' Supply.

The board approved a request from Marguerite Gdovka, home economics instructor, for a sabbatical leave for the 1980-81 term for health reasons. Pamela Schifko was employed as a full-time substitute to fill the home economics vacancy.

A motion to fill the elementary music instructor position was defeated by a vote of 6-1.

The board, by its vote, made policy that applicants for all positions must be listed in the pre-meeting packet. Currently, the recommendation list is presented to the board at its regular meeting by the administrator with the board having no prior knowledge of available applicants.

The board approved a pre-school student entering the Western Pennsylvania School for the Deaf as a weekday resident. The state will provide the cost of his education, but the school district will pay travel expenses.

Terry Ganocy was employed as school board recording secretary at $50 a meeting.

School secretary Joan Baker submitted her resignation effective July 18 and it was accepted by the board. The district is now accepting applications for a full-time school secretary and a part-time bookkeeping assistant.

The board gave the business manager permission to negotiate for the transportation of non-public school students and gifted students. Any student planning to attend a non-public school this fall must attend the Carmichaels business office by Aug. 10.

The salary for head maintenance man J. Edwin Deems was set at $13,109. The district personnel salary schedule was presented and accepted by the board as required by law.

The board went on record to sponsor an all-sports banquet, beginning next year. Community clubs will be invited to participate and present their various awards at that time. The school board activities committee will coordinate the event.

A request was received to institute an after school intermural basketball program. The program was approved.

The district has been commended for its strides in placement of students in special education classes for exceptional children.

Instrumental Music Clinic Offered

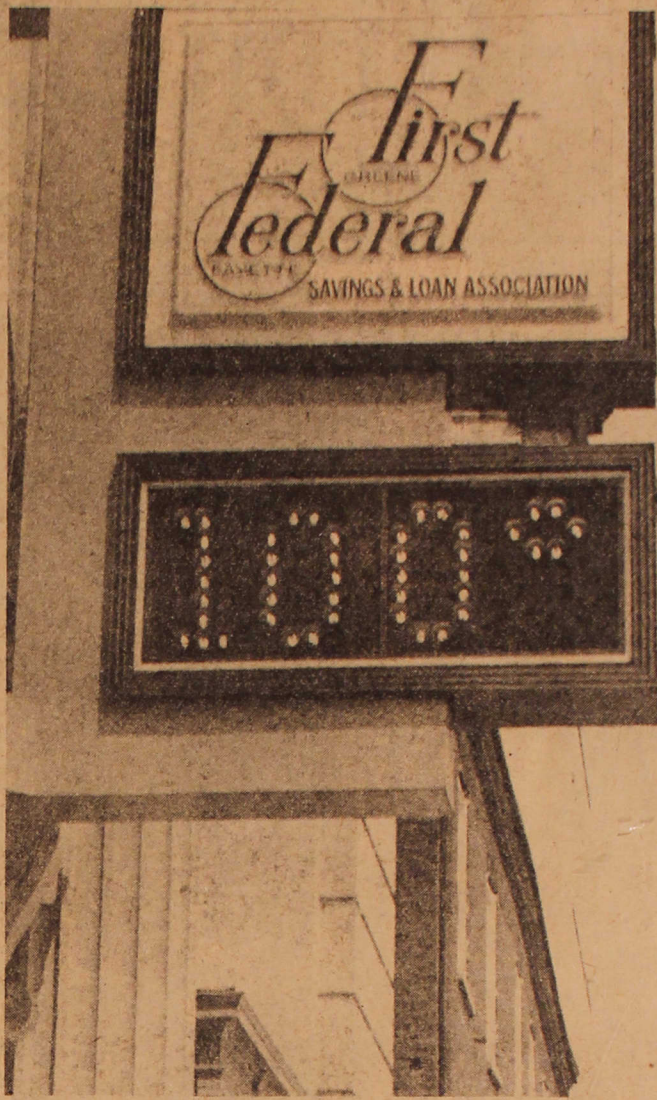

CARMICHAELS — An instrumental music clinic for students in Greene County will be held Tuesday, July 29, as part of the visit to the county on July 27-29 of the American Wind Symphony Orchestra.

An invitation has been extended to all junior and senior high school band instrumentalists. All other instrumentalists are also invited to take part.

The workshop will be held at 2 p.m. at the Greene Academy building at Carmichaels and will last for 90 minutes. The 45 members of the Wind Symphony and their director, Robert Boudreau, will conduct the clinic, which will include private instruction, chamber music and a concluding performance by both the students and the orchestra members.

There is no charge, and the event is also open to the public. The Greene County Council on the Arts, which is sponsoring the orchestra's visit to the county, asks that interested students register in advance by calling 966-7466, 966-2731 or 499-5360.

Hits Triple Digits

This thermometer at the First Federal building at Waynesburg drew a lot of attention Wednesday as it reached triple digits for the first time since it was installed, recording as high as 102 degrees at one point. And even though the "official" reading at the Waynesburg sewage treatment plant fell short of it at a high of 95 degrees, that was still the highest temperature recorded at the plant since July 4, 1966, when the mercury reached 98 degrees.

County Youth Services Suffers Big Funds Cut

Greene County Children and Youth Services will have its allocation of state funds cut by approximately $72,000 during the 1980-81 fiscal year, but Rupert Eder, director of the county agency, feels the loss can be absorbed without any increase in county funding or cutback in personnel.

"We were notified in advance that the Department of Welfare would have less money available for the counties, and we have already taken steps to reduce our costs," Eder said Thursday.

Secretary of Welfare Helen B. O'Bannon has announced that state allocations for the fiscal year will be about 35 percent below projected county costs for children and youth services, which include such programs as foster care, counseling, juvenile detention and other children and youth services. In Greene County, it will mean a cutback from $210,000 to $138,000.

Mrs. O'Bannon said counties are being notified at this time so they can plan accordingly. Durying 1979-80, child welfare programs throughout the state incurred a deficit of more than $26 million, due in part to under funding in prior years.

"The costs of children and youth services have been escalating rapidly," she said. "This year we have no choice but to live within the budget as approved by the General Assembly, and avoid a situation in which the state permits counties to spend money that is not available."

Eder pointed out that the county's budget is set up on a calendar year basis rather than on a fiscal year basis, so that the cutback will affect the final six months of the current county budget allocations to his program.

He said the agency plans to meet the challenge of reduced funding primarily by cutting down on the number of institutional placements from the county.

"We are trying to upgrade our foster home program so that children can be kept in the community rather than being placed in institutions, where the cost of caring for them is much higher," he said. In addition, he will be conferring with John Graham, director of the county probation department, in an effort to avoid institutionalization of delinquent youngsters wherever possible.

He also said that the number of children currently in foster home placements is down to about 47 as compared with 88 a year ago, with emphasis being placed on reuniting them with their natural parents as soon as possible while continuing staff supervision of the youngsters.

The biggest problem, he said, will come with normal cost escalations due to inflation.

TV Workshop For Youths

WAYNESBURG — Instead of sitting in front of the TV, area youths will have an opportunity to design and produce their own television productions.

A video workshop, sponsored by Operation Outreach, affiliated with Bowlby Public Library, will be held the first three weeks in August on Mondays and Fridays from 10 a.m. until noon. The program is open to youths in grades seven through 12. Registration will be held Tuesday, July 29, at the Operation Outreach office, 54 Church Street, Waynesburg.

Depending upon the success of this project, a public viewing of the videotapes may be scheduled.

Reduced-rate advance tickets are available from members of the Chamber of Commerce or at the Chamber office, and will be available through Monday.

Circus Performance Monday

WAYNESBURG — A circus which features the largest elephant on tour and the "world's tallest clown" will be in Waynesburg next week.

The visit of the Great American Circus on Monday is being sponsored by the Greater Waynesburg Chamber of Commerce as part of the observance of Rain Day. The 2,000-seat big top will be set up at the Greene County Fairgrounds for performances at 5:30 and 8 p.m. The midway will open one hour before show time.

The circus' elephant herd is led by "Myrtle," who is not only the largest elephant on tour but is also more than 70 years old. One of the stars of the retinue of clowns is Buck Nolan, who at seven feet, two inches is taller than basketball superstar Wilt Chamberlain.

Besides animals and clowns, the cast consists of acrobats and aerialists, pretty girls, musicians and many others.

Senior Citizens Golf Tournament Upcoming

WAYNESBURG — Greene County senior citizens are being invited to take part in a golf tournament to be held Wednesday, Aug. 6, at Linden Hall, near Perryopolis, by the Southwestern Pennsylvania Area on Agency Advisory and Nutrition Councils.

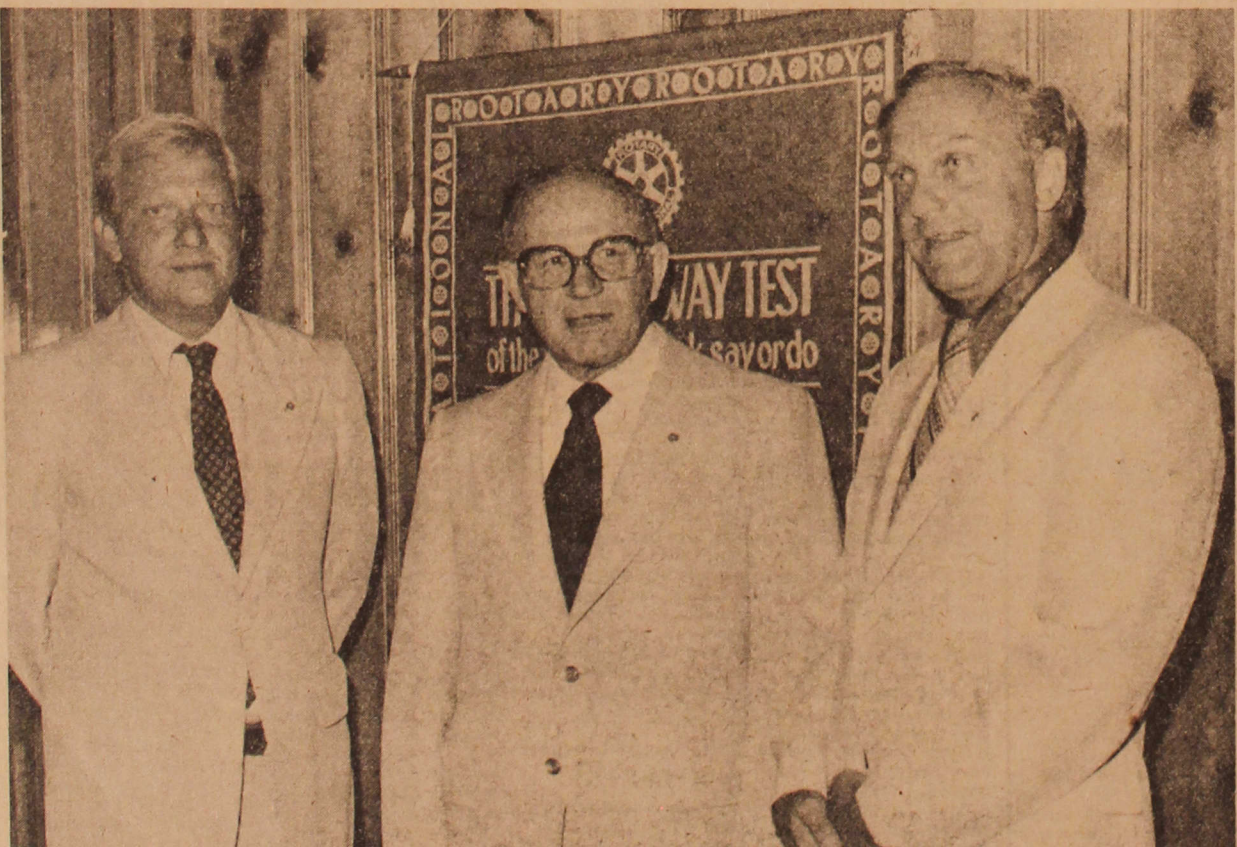

Top finalists will be invited to participate in the third annual "Over 60" golf tournament at the Hershey Country Club, Hershey.

Men and women will compete in the local tournament in four age groups: 60 through 64, 65 through 70, 71 through 74 and 75 and over. The cost to participate will be a $4 greens fee and $12 to rent a cart.

Activities will also be available at the course for those not participating in the tournament, including swimming, fishing, shuffleboard, tennis and tours of the Linden Hall mansion.

Those wishing to register for the tournament can do so at their local golf course or by calling the Greene County office of the Southwestern Pennsylvania Area Agency on Aging in Waynesburg 852-1510. They can also call toll-free 800-342-8980, extension 424.

Rotary District Governor Visits

Robert Woodard, center, Rotary District 733 Governor, made a special guest visit to a meeting of the Waynesburg Rotary Club held Monday night at St. Ann's Church. Shown at Wood's left is Richard Cowan, president of the Waynesburg Rotary Club; and at the right is Dave Cumberland, district governor representative from the club. Rotary District 733 covers Greene, Washington, Fayette and Westmoreland Counties.

Negotiation Process Working

By BOB EICHENLAUB
Greene News Editor
WAYNESBURG — An experiment in head-to-head contract negotiations between teachers and the school board, without the benefit of any professional assistance, appears to have a good chance of paying off in the Central Greene School District.

"I'm very optimistic. We've been making good progress and I think we have a very good chance of reaching a complete settlement before school opens," Board President Furman Wade said Monday.

Central Greene is the only district in Greene County involved in negotiations with teachers this year. Negotiations with non-professional employees are underway in three districts — Central Greene, Southeastern Greene and West Greene — and the outlook at this point is apparently good only in the West Greene District.

Prior to the beginning of negotiations in January, the Central Greene School Board suggested to the district Education Association that they attempt to work out a contract without the services of a PSEA representative on the teachers' side or a professional negotiator, solicitor or administrative staff on the board's side. The teachers agreed, with the understanding that professionals would be brought in if a stalemate was reached.

To date, Wade said, that hasn't happened.

"We've been meeting regularly, sometimes as often as twice a week, and at every one but one at least five board members have been present and the teachers have had their five people on hand."

He explained that the job has involved many, many hours because a completely new contract is being drawn up, not merely a revision of the existing contract. Board members Joanne Brookover and Robert Stephenson are heading the school board team, while Keith Anderson is chairman of the teachers' negotiating team.

"So far as I know, this is the first time in Pennsylvania that this has been tried. We felt that the board and teachers are the people directly affected and we wanted to try to work face-to-face. I would really like to see it come off because I feel it would be a feather on the district's cap in showing others that we can get together without professional help."

Negotiations with non-professional employees aren't doing as well, and the employees are currently working without a contract since the last one expired on June 30. The employees have agreed to work without a contract and to give one week's notice if a strike is to be called.

Solicitor Richard Krill, who is negotiating for the district, said the services of a state mediator were requested when negotiations recently broke down. The first session with the mediator was to be held Monday night.

The situation in the Southeastern Greene District is even more critical. Non-professionals there are also working without a contract and with no retroactivity agreement and negotiations are at an impasse despite the fact that two state mediators have been involved.

"It's a very tough situation, and I don't know what will happen," board negotiator John Stets said Monday.

Dr. Robert Perry, Superintendent of the West Greene School District, said Monday that a tentative agreement has been reached with that district's non-professionals. The agreement was reached last week during a meeting with negotiating teams from the board and the Pennsylvania School Service Personnel Association (PSSPA), which organized in the district earlier this year.

The new three-year agreement will be presented members of the union at a meeting next Monday for ratification. If approved by union members, the contract will be presented to the school board for its approval at a meeting to be held Wednesday, July 30.

World's Largest Umbrella

The World's Largest Umbrella has again been raised on the flag pole in front of Greene County Courthouse in Waynesburg in preparation for July 29th Rain Day activities. A Miss Rain Day pageant will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the Waynesburg Central High School auditorium to select Miss Rain Day, who will reign over activities which will begin next weekend and continue through Rain Day on July 29th, when, if tradition holds true, it will rain. The large umbrella, made from a parachute dyed bright yellow, is 24 feet in diameter, has a 75 foot circumference and weighs 75 pounds. Members of the Special Events Commission planning Rain Day activities from the left are: Nelson Fox, Bernie Stitckick, Beatrice Hook, Lois Moore, Pam Abbe and John Owen, chairman.

Volunteer Firemen Rescue Victim

CARMICHAELS — Members of the Carmichaels-Cumberland Township Volunteer Fire Co. spent nearly three hours Monday rescuing a woman who had apparently suffered heat prostration while picking berries on the Dr. Elmer Marx farm between Garards Fort and Celon.

Firemen received the call at about 11:25 a.m. and upon reaching the scene could not get to the woman, later identified as Lucy Morris of Enwood Avenue, Carmichaels. A spokesman for the fire company said the rescuers could not get four-wheel drive vehicles into the scene and could not walk into the area because of thick brush. "We can't figure out how she got in there, because our people had such a hard time of it," the fire company spokesman said Monday afternoon.

The Lifelight helicopter was contacted to attempt a landing near the disabled woman, but reportedly could not get to the scene. A state police helicopter from Ligonier was finally contacted and reached the scene, but could not find a place to land. The copter landed briefly at the Carmichaels Area High School athletic field to pick up a fireman to supply directions, but upon reaching the scene could not land because of the heavy undergrowth.

Following a rain storm which struck the area early Monday afternoon firemen finally reached the woman and were forced to carry her between one and one and one-half miles to a waiting ambulance.

She was transported to Greene County Memorial Hospital where she received emergency treatment and was later released.

Some Firewood Cutting Rules

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following article was prepared for publication in the Observer-Reporter by Bill Wentzel, Service Forester for Greene County.

Firewood, firewood, everyone is talking about firewood! With the rising cost of energy, many people are turning to wood to heat their homes. Firewood is advertised for sale in the paper, on the radio and along the roads. To give you an idea of the increased interest, firewood sales have increased 13 fold on our state forests within the last five years.

Now, this can be a good or a bad thing for the woodlands of our country. In most cases, properly cutting firewood from the woodlands will do them a great deal of good — it will help make them more productive, more valuable in the future.

However, as a forester, I am concerned that in our zeal to grab as much firewood as possible, the woodlands may suffer. Too much, or irresponsible cutting of firewood can be harmful. The mistakes we make now may take nature 50 to 100 years to correct. So, I believe everyone going into the woods to cut firewood has a responsibility to do it properly.

The following are not hard and fast rules, but will give you some general guidelines on how to improve your woodland while cutting firewood.

➤ Cut trees which are dead, diseased, or crooked throughout the stand of timber. Discriminate against less desirable species such as elm, beech, red maple, poorly formed cherry, ironwood, and gum. Cull trees (hollow or rotten) and wolf trees (wide-spreading and branch) are also good candidates for firewood.

➤ Most of us have a natural tendency to want to do firewood cutting only along roads and fields where access is the easiest. Effective woodland management is accomplished by spreading the cutting over the entire acreage.

Art Activity Schedules

WAYNESBURG — The schedule for arts and crafts activities at the Central Playground in Waynesburg for the week of July 21 has been announced by the playground staff.

Monday evening, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., the "Galloping Gourmet" will be making a fruit salad. Wednesday, and participants are asked to note the time change, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Pete Rameas from the Waynesburg Youth Development Center and a number of his students will present a puppet show, "The Three Little Pigs."

Friday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, the group will be doing soap carvings. Those planning on doing the carvings are asked to bring a bar of soap.

GOP Candidate For Attorney General, Roy Zimmerman, Visits Waynesburg

WAYNESBURG — Roy Zimmerman has a reputation as a tough prosecutor who feels that the state attorney general's office should have both criminal and civil jurisdiction with the authority to review proposed regulations written by state bureaucrats.

He also feels the State Legislature has been highly irresponsible in failing to define the duties of the state's chief law enforcement officer, who will be elected for the first time this year.

"In the past, the attorney general has been appointed by the governor and as such was beholden to him. What we need now is a job description which will give the person who holds the office the power to prosecute and use the tools available — court-approved wiretapping, electronic surveillance, witness immunity and investigatory grand juries. I would hope the Legislature will take care of it when they return from their summer recess so the people of Pennsylvania will know what they are voting for in November."

Zimmerman, 45, who served as Dauphin County district attorney from 1965 until he resigned in January of this year to seek the Republican nomination for attorney general, was in Waynesburg Tuesday to meet with local Republican leaders and expound his message. He is the first candidate to visit the county since the spring primary.

"This is an important race. The people have to realize they will be electing their chief law enforcement officer for the first time," he said.

He made it clear he is a tough law and order candidate.

He feels capital punishment can be an effective deterrent to crime, but only if it is used, and "favors the death penalty in appropriate cases of welfare, premeditated first degree murder under the state current death penalty legislation."

He is against gun control "because criminals don't turn

Speed Trap Appeal Lost

The first appeal of a traffic arrest resulting from Waynesburg Borough's new speed trap apparatus was heard before a magistrate Tuesday and the motorist lost his case.

Russell Kuntz Jr., of 154 South Richhill Street, was charged with traveling 46 miles per hour in a 35 mile per hour zone on East Greene Street on July 6. He questioned why police arrested him and not the driver along side him in the other lane of traffic.

Patrolman Dave Clark, who was operating the Excessive Speed Preventor (ESP), explained to Magistrate John Watson and the motorist, that the ESP timed the first car to hit the sensor strip. He said the first sensor became inactive until the car's wheel went over the second sensor strip. Clark said he did not notice another car alongside Kuntz' car although Kuntz testified there was. Kuntz said his wife could verify the fact but she was working.

Magistrate Watson ruled that without supporting testimony about another car he must find in favor of the police.

Watson also informed James Rogers, borough police chief, that perhaps a demonstration of the ESP should be given to local magistrates for a better understanding of the new machine.

College Offers GED Tests

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College will administer the General Educational Development (GED) test Saturday, July 26.

The testing will begin promptly at 8 a.m.

All persons desiring to take the GED tests will complete the General Education Development application form at the college testing center on the testing day.

Anyone having questions concerning the test should call the college at 627-8191.

Waynesburg's Rain Day

A Bit Of Folklore

By JOHN L. O'HARA
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — With Memorial Day and the Fourth of July now past history, the rest of the nation's populace will have to wait until Labor Day for the next holiday.

But not so for residents of Waynesburg.

Waynesburg's own exclusive holiday — the one known around the world as Rain Day — is coming up again on Tuesday, July 29 is the one day of the year for rain in Waynesburg, in any amount. From a drizzle or a drop to a full-blown deluge — anything is welcome, as long as it falls within the corporate limits of the town.

According to the town's most cherished legends, it is a date on which rain always falls, a day when a scattered sprinkle will be as welcome as a triple A-rated gully buster would be on the Sahara.

It's a bit of folklore handed down through several generations of older Waynesburg families that started back in the 1800s when a farm dweller, who kept his own weather statistics before radio or television had been dreamed possible, made a chance remark to a couple of then-youthful drugstore clerks that he never had any trouble remembering his birthday. It was, he told them, always on his birthday when it seemed to rain in Waynesburg. The farmer kept his own day-to-day weather

Villanova College and Dickinson Law School and was elected district attorney in Harrisburg for the first time in 1964. In his last two elections he had the support of both political parties.

His major political argument centers around his experience as a prosecutor, which he feels gives him a distinct advantage over the Democratic candidate, "Michael O'Pake is a state senator who has never tried a case, has never practiced law. His entire career has been in the State Legislature," he said.

"The first holder of this newly elective office will set precedent, priority, tone, tempo and hopefully, new and higher standards of justice for Pennsylvania. I feel experience in criminal prosecution to be vital to the first person who holds the position."

records and noted it "always seems to rain on my birthday," which was July 29.

Little did the farmer ever think that generations later, because he happened to make the remark in a store where two brothers, the late Albert and William Allison worked, the news "it has rained again in Waynesburg on July 29" would be relayed around the world by television and radio announcers. Or, 104 years later, it would be printed as little boxed feature stories in papers of many different languages around the globe.

Many of the world's leading athletes, movie stars and other public figures have had their names linked to the unique weather legend.

The two Allison brothers continued the farmer's count on Rain Day, writing their notations on the margins of store journals and shelves for prescription cases for many years.

For a long time the legend was known only to the immediate community but started becoming famous when a new store owner, the late Byron Daily, started telling of unusual rainy sequences. A Unique Fun Holiday

For Waynesburg, it's that time of year again. If precipitation falls next Tuesday — and it would be difficult to find anyone in the Greene County community who doubts that it will — it would mark the 92nd time in 105 years that it has done so on July 29.

Rain Day is unique. And because it is, it has attracted national and even international attention for many years. There is no other place where a holiday is spoiled if the sun shines.

As has been customary for a number of years, a lot of special events are scheduled to celebrate the occasion. The selection last Sunday of Gianna Mucci of Perryopolis as Miss Rain Day was the first of them.

An added attraction this year will be the scheduled three-day residency in Greene County of the famed American Wind Symphony orchestra from Pittsburgh under sponsorship of the new Greene County Council on the Arts.

The 45-piece orchestra will play for the 11 a.m. worship service at the First Presbyterian Church of Waynesburg, and plans are being made to have chartered buses available to take Waynesburg residents to Rices Landing Sunday evening, where the orchestra will present its principal concert from its barge, which will be docked at the old Monongahela River lock wall.

Twenty-five members of the orchestra will then return to Waynesburg Tuesday evening for a Rain Day concert on the steps of Miller Hall, the main building on the college campus.

Rain Prophet John L. Daily, a retired attorney and justice of the peace, will also be continuing the custom of wagering a hat that it will rain on July 29. Adding to his collection this year will be the Pittsburgh father and daughter television team of Bill and Patti Burns.

The unknown farmer who began the whole thing many years ago by remarking to a Waynesburg drug store clerk that it always seemed to rain on Waynesburg on July 29 would undoubtedly be surprised at what he started.

It's nonsense, but it always comes as a welcome bit of fun midway through a long, hot summer.

Fact and Folklore
John O'Hara

With Memorial Day and the Fourth of July now past history, the rest of the nation's populace will have to wait until Labor Day for the next holiday.

But not so for residents of Waynesburg.

Waynesburg's own and exclusive holiday—the one known around the world as Rain Day—is coming up again on Tuesday, July 29 is the one day of the year for rain in Waynesburg, and in any amount. From a drizzle or a drop to a full blown deluge—either is welcome, as long as it falls within the corporate limits of the town.

According to the town's most cherished legends, it is a date on which rain has reputedly fallen, a day when a scattered spangle will be as welcome as a triple A-rated gully buster would be on the Sahara.

It's a bit of folklore handed down through several generations of older Waynesburg families that started back in the 1800's when a farm dweller, who kept his own weather statistics before radio or television had been dreamed possible, made a chance remark to a couple of then-youthful drugstore clerks that he never had any trouble remembering his birthday. It was, he told them, always on his birthday when it seemed to rain in Waynesburg. The farmer kept his own day to day weather records and noted it "always seems to rain on my birthday" which was July 29.

Little did the farmer ever think that generations later, because he happened to make the remark in a store where two brothers, the late Albert and William Allison worked, the news "it has rained again in Waynesburg on July 29" would be relayed around the world by television and radio announcers. Or, 104 years later, it would be printed as little boxed feature stories in papers of many different languages around the globe. Also, many of the world's leading athletes, movie stars and other public figures have had their names linked to the unique weather legend.

The two Allison brothers continued the farmer's count on Rain Day, writing their notations on the margins of store journals and shelves for prescription cases for many years.

For a long time the legend was known only to the immediate community but started becoming famous when a new store owner, the late Byron Daily, started telling drug salesmen of the unusual rainy sequence. Daily went a step further by betting them a new hat the tradition would be fulfilled. After his death, his son Atty. John Daily, and also a local member of the minor judiciary of Greene County, encouraged by local newspapermen, started betting hats with out-of-town sports writers, the first of whom was the late Al Abrams of Pittsburgh, founder of the Pittsburgh Dapper Dan Club.

Other celebrities included the late heavyweight champ Jack Dempsey, golfer Arnold Palmer, and Del Miller, noted harness racing driver.

The story of Waynesburg's Rain Day has been spread around the world since the very early 1930's without a bit of cost to anyone or any fund raising for inviting the participants in the annual wagers by not requesting a personal appearance with the assurance that no persons are using their names or positions for personal gain. It is, in short, folklore at its best, a tradition in which the entire community is involved simply by joining in the annual 24-hour vigil for the first sprinkle of precipitation that will keep the legend going another year.

Among its many touches making it unique from other events that have grown in scope is the enthusiasm of those projecting its fame year after year in ever wider and wider circles.

Faces From The Past—Do Your Recognize Them?

An officer and three non-coms from Co. K, 110th Pennsylvania Infantry, the Greene County recruited Pennsylvania National Guard unit which served in France during World War I as part of the 18 Division, are pictured in this photograph taken during the summer of 1917 while the unit was quartered at the Waynesburg armory before leaving for training at Camp Hancock, Ga. for overseas duty. In the group, from left, are 1st Lt. David Garrison; Sgt. John Paden, who was killed in action; Sgt. Alan Hill and Cpl. Walter Glennen, all now deceased. The picture, taken with an old-time Brownie box camera, is the property of Cpl. Glennen's nephew, who now lives in Omaha, Neb.

Appeal Made For Foster Homes

WAYNESBURG—Children and Youth Services of Greene County has issued an appeal for people who are willing to open their homes to foster children.

"We have a particular need for homes in which we can place children on an emergency and short-term basis," Mrs. Wilma R. Johnson, foster home supervisor for the county agency said.

"We like to keep families together whenever possible, and have a shortage of homes which can accept two or three children at a time," she said, adding that by law there can be no more than six children in a home at any one time, including natural children.

"If a couple has three children of their own, they can legally accept three foster children," she explained.

Currently, Children and Youth Services has just 47 youngsters in foster care, which is the lowest total in many years. Last year at this time they had 87 in care.

Both Mrs. Johnson and

Rupert Eder, director of the agency, said that the major reason is the emphasis which is being placed on reuniting children with their natural parents as soon as possible, and with increased efforts toward adoption when a break with the natural family becomes complete.

The agency cares for dependent and neglected children ranging in age from infancy to 18, with most of them falling in the eight-through-13 age bracket. Rather surprisingly, the majority of adoptions during the past year were in the 10-through-13 level.

Another consideration in seeking more foster homes is to keep children out of institutions. "With a suitable foster home, it is often possible to keep a child in the community and that is important," Mrs. Johnson said.

Boys and girls most frequently come under the care of Children and Youth Services through a court order. "They are the victims of neglect, deprivation, poverty, unhappiness and occasionally physical abuse," she said. "They are in need of the same things as every child needs—love, care and understanding."

Mrs. Johnson sees the program as consisting of a three-way responsibility involving the agency, the natural parents and the foster parents, with the ultimate goal being to improve conditions in the natural home to the point where a family can be reunited and given a new start.

Foster parents are paid $5 per day for the care of a child, plus receiving a clothing allowance. All medical and dental bills and other health expenses are paid by the agency.

"If anyone wants to make money out of accepting foster children they should forget it," Mrs. Johnson said. "The Individuals who own coal in Greene County have always been given a tax break in terms of the assessed valuation assigned to that coal.

There are some 500 of them and they own a total of about 9,000 acres of Sewickley (Mapletown) coal and 6,500 acres of Pittsburgh coal. This year, while coal owned by corporations was assessed uniformly at $103 per acre, the privately-owned coal was assessed at $8 per acre for Sewickley coal and $20 for Pittsburgh coal.

The reasoning behind the differential was that companies generally own blocks of coal and are in a position to mine it. Individuals, on the other hand, cannot mine the coal they own and its only value lies in the price they can get when they sell it to a coal producer.

But the county has always recognized that the practice was open to challenge since the assessment law states that all property owners must receive equal treatment when it comes to the value placed on their property. The system worked only as long as the coal companies did not complain.

That challenge has now been made. It came about because the county was forced into a legal position where it had to change the method of assessing coal. Rather than assigning one value to all coal, it must now differentiate between various seams to take into account the variations between seam thickness and the quality of the coal.

As a result, in 1981 Pittsburgh coal will be assessed at $166.50 per acre and Sewickley coal at $102.50 per acre.

The coal companies, however, agreed to the new system only if the same values were assigned to that owned by individuals. The alternative was a lawsuit which the county felt it had no help of winning.

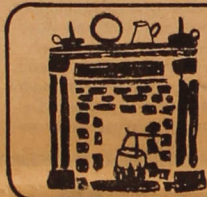

For individuals, who received notice of the change last week, the increases are bound to be oppressive, raising the question if they can afford to continue ownership of their coal. One such property owner who called the assessment office after receiving his notice complained that the large boost places him in a position where he will be forced to sell his coal at any price he can get for it.

The situation is unfair in another way, again as a result of the assessment law.

Those who are subject to the property tax are people who own coal which has been "severed" from the surface, usually through the coal having been reserved by the seller when a farm was sold. That severance divides the surface and mineral ownership and makes the coal subject to taxation.

But there are a lot of other people in the county who own coal which is not subject to being taxed. That is because they also own the property under which it is located, and the assessment law stipulates that unsevered coal is not taxable.

It is highly probable that quite a few appeals will be taken by individual coal owners, particularly those with substantial holdings. And if that happens it will be interesting to see what the final outcome will be.

This is the time of year that the family doing gardening and home canning and freezing needs more hours in the day. However, there is the satisfaction of knowing all this work will help cut your food bill next fall and winter. And what can equal the taste of freshly picked garden produce?

One of the vegetables we have enjoyed this year is the new variety of sugar snap peas. I learned early in my marriage about sugar peas from my Pennsylvania German mother-in-law, but they had to be picked at the exact stage of maturity or the pods were tough. This new variety is tender and sweet and doesn't need to be watched as closely as the regular sour pea.

The vines grow tall — we had trouble the first year we planted them because they grew over six feet tall and overgrew our poles. The snap peas are best when the pods are 2½ to 3 inches long and plump with mature peas. The pod walls become sweeter as the peas develop, but they should be picked before the pods become netted.

Raw snap peas are delicious added to many dishes. You can add them to salads, soups and sandwiches; use them as dippers for cocktail dips, or fill the crisp pods as you would celery sticks. They require very little cooking (two minutes is enough). For the best flavor they should be added to stews, soups and sauces just before serving.

After picking, the peas should be kept unwashed in plastic bags in the refrigerator until ready to use. They will keep this way for at least 10 days. After that time, they will begin to lose their crunchiness, easy stringability and snapability.

Snap peas are suited for freezing, but not for canning. I am trying a recipe for crocked snap peas that can be kept in the refrigerator for two to three months. I plan to use them as an accompaniment to sandwiches or with cocktail dips. I suggest you think about this vegetable in next year's garden if you haven't tried them.

HOLD THE SUGAR
If you plan to can fruits this year, try doing it without sugar. Concern about overweight and tooth decay has many consumers looking for ways to cut down on sugar and using a juice pack or water pack in canning fruits can help. Fruits canned without sugar will not have as firm a texture or as bright a color as fruits canned in sugar syrup, but you can get a highly satisfactory product.

Regardless of which liquid you use, it is important that your fruit be properly processed using a boiling water canner for the appropriate time for the specific fruit. All fruit must be processed. Open kettle canning is not recommended. Refer to modern canning instructions for timing.

My children were watching the big "mother-daughter beauty contest" on TV the other night. I have rarely seen them laugh so hard.

"Is that a comedy show?" I asked. I was not watching, it being a policy of mine not to watch beauty contests. Well, my reactions would be something like Richard Nixon's feelings on watching the Republican convention.

"No," said my children, "we were just trying to picture you entering that contest with one of us."

"I fail to see the humor in that," I said. "We could get up there and prance around, too."

"Not like that," they giggled. "Those mothers in the contest are up there twirling and spinning like Ginger Rogers."

"Oh," I said. "Twirling, are they? Well, I could practice twirling around the house here. Anybody can do that."

The children laughed harder. "Look out!" they cried. "Move the furniture out of the way! Hide the cat, put up the good china. If you're going to try twirling, nothing is safe!"

"Very funny," I said in my schoolteacher voice. "While I admit that I am not known for my graceful steps, I have not seen any of you starring on the stage, either."

"Oh, look," the children cried, "now they're in the bathing suit segment."

"Not that, too," I shuddered. I glanced at the TV. "Obviously those are the daughters. Where are the mothers?"

"No, those are the mothers," the children said. "The daughters are taller."

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Everybody at your house ready for Rain Day? It would have been nice if some of the rain Waynesburg got Monday and Tuesday could have been saved for Tuesday, July 29—Rain Day.

The official "suckers" for Waynesburg's Rain Day prophet, Atty. John Daily, are the father-daughter T.V. broadcasting team of Bill and Patti Burns. The Pittsburgh news announcers will try to induce the gods of rain to "get lost" when July 29 rolls around.

Mrs. Robert Inghram, formerly of Waynesburg but now a long time resident of Las Vegas, has returned to her home there after visiting her father, Gail, retired telephone lineman in Waynesburg. She and her husband have lived in Las Vegas for many years.

Riley White of U.S. Route 19 south in Whiteley Township who is owner of the J.T. Inghram Shoe Store of Waynesburg, is serving as starting judge at the harness race meeting at the Clearfield County Fair in Clearfield, Pa. this week. The race program there will feature the Pennsylvania Sires Stake and Quaker State harness stakes during the four-day program. Mr. White is president of the Greene County Fair Association.

Speaking of fairs, the Jack-town Fair at Wind Ridge will be next week from July 29-August 2.

Fred Thomas, a former Waynesburger who has been living in Seattle for several years, is visiting friends and relatives in Waynesburg.

Greene Countian had another "dose" of tropical or semi-tropical weather Monday evening when one of the heaviest wind storms of the season swept through town and left many calling cards on the way out.

Mr. and Mrs. William Garrison of East High Street, have sold their property there and will reside on West Franklin Street, near the Baptist Church and West Street intersections.

John Bradley of Ruff Creek in Washington Township, is a patient in Greene County Memorial Hospital.

Rain Day
Run Course

WAYNESBURG — The Second Annual Rain Day Run, over a course 7.4 miles long, will be held Tuesday, July 29, Rain Day, in Waynesburg.

The race will start and finish in front of the Greene County Courthouse on Main Street.

There will be six age divisions in the race; 13 years old and under; 14 to 19; 20 to 29; 30 to 39; 40 to 49; and 50 years of age and over.

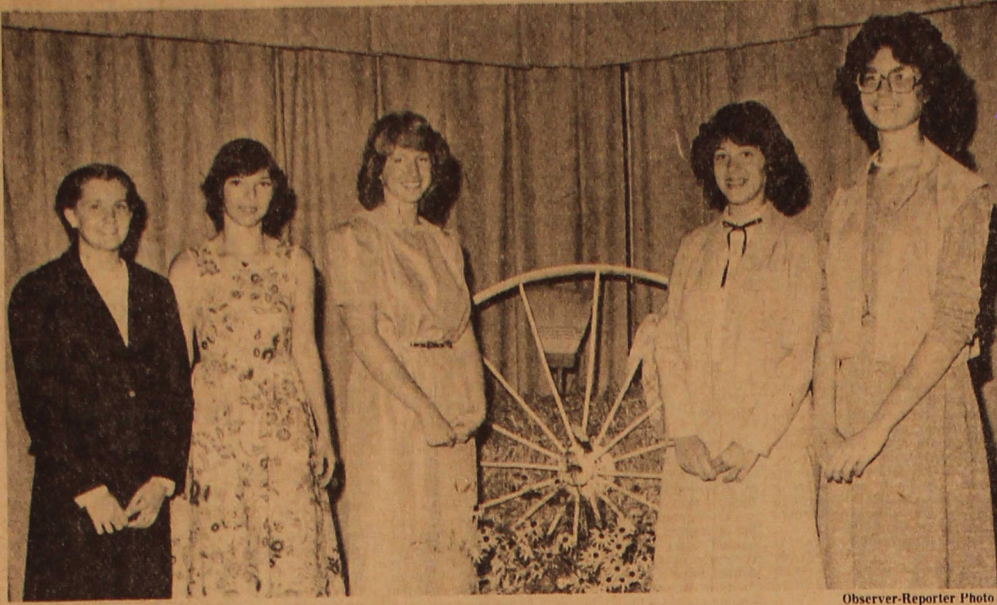

Winners in each division will receive awards and the overall winner will also receive an award, and the person with the slowest time. Each participant will also receive a T shirt. There will be stations along the race course with refreshments available for the runners.

The race will begin at 6 p.m. and the entry fee is $5 per person. The race is sponsored by the Greene County Department of Parks and Recreation, where entry forms are available.

Book Sale

WAYNESBURG — The Friends of the Bowly Public Library will hold its annual book sale Friday and Saturday, July 25 and 26, in front of the Opera House on West High Street.

Books on varied topics will be sold for prices ranging from 25 cents for hardbacks to 10 cents for paperbacks and magazines.

Senior fashion revue winners Suzette Hoy, Traey Cobert, June Morgan, Kim Kerr and Vicki LaCount model their ensembles.

County 4-H Members In Region Fashion Revue

WAYNESBURG — Five Greene County 4-H sewing club members will take part in the Southwest Region 4-H Fashion Revue at the New Kensington campus of Pennsylvania State University on Thursday, July 24.

They earned the right to do so by winning blue ribbons in the annual Greene County Fashion Revue held Thursday at the First Baptist Church of Waynesburg. County representatives, who took blue ribbons in the senior dress revue, will be Suzette Hoy, June Morgan and Vicki LaCount of the East Franklin Sew 'n Sew Club; Traey Cobert of the Jefferson 4-H Club, and Kim Kerr of the Carmichaels Needles and Pins 4-H Club.

Jean M. Elicker, county extension home economist, said the regional fashion review will begin at 9 a.m. Thursday, with the county girls competing against those selected from other counties in the Southwest Region.

The five top regional winners will be awarded gold ribbons, and each contestant will receive a certificate of participation and medal of honor.

The five gold ribbon winners in the regional revue will compete with top winners from each of the other eight regions for state honors, with the state winner being selected in early September during State 4-H Achievement Days at Pennsylvania State University. The state winner will receive an expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress at Chicago Nov. 30 through Dec. 4.

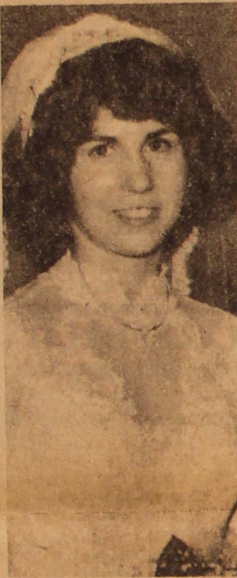

In addition to the senior fashion review, there was a junior dress revue held Thursday for younger girls.

Blue ribbon winners in the junior event were Becky Titus, Sioux McCann and Lula Phillips of the Carmichaels club, Sharon McDougal of the Spraggs club, and Lorna Varner and Amy Osso of the East Franklin club.

Mrs. Elicker said that all girls who were in the senior and junior fashion revue started their costumes at the beginning of the 4-H club year. The program is designed to give them experience in design and sewing, to develop grace and poise, to practice habits of good grooming, to gain skill in decision making, and to give them a chance to help plan the county dress revue.

Miss Smillie Marries Barbetta

Auctions, Bids & Garage Sale

JEFFERSON — In June it was an auction, July sealed bids, and in August it will be a garage sale. The methods being used by the Jefferson-Morgan School Board to rid the district of unwanted elementary buildings and old furniture are many and varied, but at least one more method will be needed.
At its meeting Monday night, the board sold its Pitt Gas Elementary Building to Thomas C. and Beverly M. Howard of Fredericktown R.D. on their high bid of $21,777.70, while rejecting the high bid of $43,000 from J.R. and John W. Pochron of Dry Tavern for the Dry Tavern Elementary Building.
The only other bids received were from the Charles Balazick Co., Clarksville R.D. 1, of $18,000 for the Pitt Gas School and $42,500 for the Dry Tavern building.
The district has been trying to sell several of its elementary buildings which will not be needed when its new $4.2 million central elementary school is opened for the coming school year. In June, a public auction was held with the board accepting a high bid of $49,500 for its Lippencott Elementary School by the Faith Baptist Church.
At the June auction a similar $43,000 bid entered by Pochron for the Dry Tavern School was rejected as well as an $18,000 bid from Howard for the Pitt Gas building.
Monday night, in rejecting the Pochron bid, the board passed a motion to have the building and grounds committee re-evaluate the Dry Tavern property.
The garage sale method will be used to sell old furnishings from the elementary buildings which the district cannot use.
One of the elementary buildings the district plans to retain — the Central School at Jefferson where the district's athletic field is located — touched off considerable discussion when the administration asked for permission to hire an engineer and advertise for bids to change the heating system in the building. Although the building will not be used for classes, it will be used for wrestling practice and also for football dressing rooms and storage.

The building is currently being heated by coal and the administration wants the system changed to steam heat provided by a gas fired boiler so it is not necessary to have a custodian taking care of the furnace.
Permission was granted through a motion and the engineering firm of Foreman, Bashford and Wallace of Mars hired, but not before several board members expressed their displeasure with what they felt was too quick a decision on plans for the building.
No decision was made on a motion to hire an assistant to the high school principal when the vote tied at 4-4 and was not re-voted.
Anna E. Trynock of Brownsville was hired as a fulltime substitute with her salary set at $9,935. She was hired as a reading specialist to fill a sabbatical vacancy.
Title I staff members hired pending approval of the Title I program for the coming year were Janice Cardarelli Connors, full time, and Antoinette Hoak, Michelle Chesney, Leona Melega and Shirley Parker, all part-time.
The board approved the Release Time Bible program to be held for elementary students in the district for the coming school year.
William Virgin, superintendent of maintenance, was granted a $1,000 salary increase bringing his salary to $16,500 annually.
Old chalkboards from the Central, Chartiers and Mathers Elementary Schools will be sold to the Blackboard Resurfacing Company at 15 cents per square foot.

Any tips for holding down electric bills while away on vacation?

Yes. Here are several energy-saving steps to take before leaving on vacation:

- Turn off your electric water heater and air conditioner.
- Set refrigerator and/or food freezer switch to power-saver position.
- Turn refrigerator control to warmer setting. (If going on an extended vacation, empty refrigerator, unplug it, and leave door open.)
- Adjust time clocks so lights are on only when needed.
- Unplug television sets (some "instant-on" ones use electricity even when not "on").

How much will these steps lower my bill?

Also, lights controlled by automatic timers will use electricity. And you may return with extra loads of clothes to launder which could offset much of the electricity you save while away.

Anything else I should do before going away?

Make sure you turn off electric appliances except, of course, your freezer and refrigerator (unless you've removed the contents)

And remember to make certain freezer and refrigerator doors are securely closed.

Our booklet, "100 ways to help control your electric bill," contains more energy-saving tips. For a free copy, contact the West Penn Power office serving your location. Or write West Penn Power, c/o The Electric Consumer's Corner, Cabin Hill, Greensburg, PA 15601.
