Flash Floods Surprise Several Communities Across Greene County

By BOB EICHENLAUB
And ROBIN ROBERTS

WAYNESBURG—Pre-dawn flash floods described by older residents as "the worst we've ever seen" swept through creek valleys of western and southern Greene County Monday, inundating houses and cars and causing damage expected to reach many thousands of dollars.

So far as is known, no one was injured, although there were several narrow escapes. Hardest hit communities were Deep Valley, Brave, Aleppo, Ryerson Station, New Freeport, Bristoria and Crabapple, as well as Cameron, W. Va.

The storm, which started at approximately 1 a.m., was accompanied by high winds and severe electrical disturbances. The worst flooding took place between 4 a.m. and 5 a.m. as streams, already running full, pushed as much as 10 feet above their banks to surge across highways and into homes and outbuildings.

Roads in many sections of western Greene County were closed by the high waters and trees which had either been blown over or struck by lightning. Workers from the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation were kept busy throughout the day clearing roads of trees and setting up roadblocks to stop motorists from driving into flooded sections of highway.

Greene County Maintenance Manager Loren Dukate, who was surveying damage in the Aleppo area early Monday afternoon, said that as much as 75 percent of the county's PennDOT work force had been moved into the area most severely hit by the storm to aid with clean-up operations.

At one spot, Dukate said, a 36-inch metal storm drain was washed out from under a road, leaving just a blacktop surface to form a bridge over which unsuspecting motorists were still driving. In other places, large slabs of blacktop were literally washed from the roads and left lying in the yards of houses.

Several people had stories of narrow escapes.

"A noise woke me up and I found our bed turned sideways," Mrs. Pam Daniels said. "There was water up to the bedsprings and the children (Jennifer, 2½, and Jason, six weeks) were floating on their mattresses. They were still asleep. We got out just in time."

Her husband, William Daniels, and a neighbor, Junior Bryner, saw that a nearby mobile home occupied by Ella Bissett had been knocked from its foundation by her car as it was pushed into the surging waters. After they rescued the 70-year-old woman from the home, it and the car were swept into the opening of a small bridge under Route 30001.

At Aleppo, 84-year-old Orlen McCullough and his wife Verna, 81, got out of their home minutes before it was swept from its foundation and jammed against a maple tree along the banks of the South Fork of Wheeling Creek.

Their son-in-law, Dillie Smalley, said he and his wife Eileen have been staying with the elderly couple because Mrs. McCullough just recently had a pacemaker implanted to correct a heart condition.

"We woke up and found water up to the steps of the house and still coming up. We got Dad and Mom out and into the car and drove up to a high place where we waited until dawn and could get hold of someone to call the Richhill Fire Department of an ambulance to take them to Moundsville."

When they went back to the house, they found it had been pushed 12 feet off its foundation and had water up to the second floor level.

"I turned off the electricity when we left the house, and when I got back I saw the clock read 3:50 a.m.," Smalley said.

A few miles downstream, the home of Ron and Daunce Lohr, located just off Route 21 from the village of Ryerson, was nearly swept from its foundation.

Lohr said he noticed something was wrong when he got up shortly before 5 a.m. to get ready to go to Waynesburg, where he operates Ron's Locker Room.

"I went to the window and looked out and the front porch was being washed away," he said. He roused his wife and their three children — Leigh Ann, 12; Shawn, 9, and Michelle, 4 — and fled up a nearby hillside to an old chicken coop, where they stayed for the rest of the night.

He said he tried to get help at one point but could not get to Ryerson because of the high flood waters. They then remained in the chicken coop until firemen arrived at the scene.

Two walls of the foundation of their home were washed out, but firemen were providing cribbing later in the day to prevent it from falling in. The Lohr's two vehicles were completely inundated by flood waters, as were two vehicles at the neighboring home of Arnold Wilson.

In the same valley, the home of Don Yoders sustained heavy water damage, most of it confined to the basement area.

Water marks on the walls in the basement of the house reached nearly five feet. Heavy appliances — a washer, freezer and dryer — had been strewn around the basement.

One member of the household, Gary (Tink) Wilson, said he and Yoder and another person were attempting to hold down a garage-type double door in the basement when water burst through and pushed them into the back yard. "We damned near drowned," he said later Monday morning.

A late model Chevrolet Vega belonging to Richard Smith was swept from the rear of the house and came to rest along the creek bank approximately 250 yards downstream. The nearby home of Carl Courtwright was isolated when a large bridge across the stream was swept away.

At Bristoria, Charles (Bud) Behm lost two barns in the flood, with one of them being washed 1,000 feet downstream.

Brave was completely isolated for many hours, as water from Dunkard Creek surged into the community to inundate homes and other buildings. Brave firemen reported there was four feet of water in the fire hall there.

Among the victims at Brave were Grace Rush and her son Ed, who live in adjoining farmhouses on the former Simpson farm. Both lost everything. People wishing to assist them are asked to call Ann Barnhart at 627-8431.

There were numerous reports of cars being swept away or completely covered with water, with one man, Gene Scott of Aleppo, losing two trucks and a car.

Rev. Douglas Witt said there was 24 inches of water in the Aleppo Brethren Church and its fellowship building, and the fellowship building of the Centennial Church of God at Aleppo was also inundated.

Ryerson Station State Park, while cut off by the high water, suffered no damage, with Superintendent Ronald Duke stating that the park dam was functioning properly. "It's doing the job it was designed to do," he said.

A mobile home and car (right) owned by Ella Bissett of Deep Valley were washed downstream. Below, Ten Mile Creek swelled from its banks in the community of Rogersville.

Commissioners Move On Property Deed Transfers

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Commissioners, at their regular meeting Friday, moved to prevent property deed transfers that are contrary to the county's land development ordinance.

The County Planning Commission reported that a random check of deeds recorded in the courthouse during the past two months revealed 27 property splits were recorded without the approval of the commission.

In an effort to prevent further illegal property transfers, the commissioners suggested the planning commission work closely with the register and recorder's office.

The commissioners hope the register and recorder can make available to property owners a copy of the requirements which would have to be approved by the planning commission before a deed is recorded.

In line with the updated edition of the proposed land development ordinance, it was announced that a public hearing on the plan will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, September 24, in the county courthouse.

A representative of the Honeywell Corp. approached the commissioners with a service agreement for the new county jail. The agreement would cost $7,000 the first year and $12,000 annually thereafter.

The lower cost in the first year was attributed to the fact that new equipment would carry a one-year warranty that would pay for necessary replacement parts. After the first year, parts would have to be paid for by the county.

The agreement would cover preventative maintenance, parts replacements and 24-hour emergency service.

Although the commissioners tabled the offer, it was apparent in later conversation that the service contract would probably be rejected. "If we need $12,000 worth of work in one year, we might as well hire a local person and let the money remain in Greene County than Minneapolis or somewhere else,"

Joseph Pawlosky, chairman, said. Strangely, after the Honeywell representative offered the service package, the county inspector at the jail, Attilio Rota complained to the commissioners that the jail's air conditioner has been broken down for over a week and he could not get Honeywell to come fix it.

Rota suggested the installation of a light at the jail entrance off Route 21 because many people would miss the entrance road.

The commissioners discussed the possibility of erecting the light, brick entrance piers and a mail box at the entrance but took no formal action.

A bill from Bailey Insurance for an additional premium of $310 to cover the county's radio tower and shelter on Higgin's Hill was tabled for further information. The tower, erected over two years ago, has never been included in the county's insurance package.

The commissioners renewed a lease with the Intermediate Unit for a $2,400 annual rental for a basement room in the county office building.

Problem With Acid Rain Affects Coal-Producing Areas

A great deal has been written and said about "acid rain" recently. Greene Counties should have a special interest in this issue because coal is one of the fuels that has been targeted in regulatory efforts.

Two power plants west of us in Ohio have already been required to limit their outputs of certain emissions.

The problem is that the nature of acid rain is unclear. No one can say precisely what causes it or what effects it has on the environment. Rain and snow are normally slightly acidic because of the reaction of evaporated water and carbon dioxide in the air. But the acidity being measured in rainfall over the Northeastern United States is higher than what should come from natural causes.

An article appearing in the Monday, June 30, edition of the Wall Street Journal deals with the problem in detail.

According to the Electrical Power Research Institute, this additional acidity is usually derived from sulfuric and nitric acids. The exact composition, however, depends on several meteorological and environmental factors. These two acids occur in the air as a result of reactions involving sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides, and water and these gases normally are associated with the combustion of fossil fuels. This is the reason for the action against coal and oil-fired power plants.

But it's not all that simple to correct. Acids are also produced by wood and refuse burning, automobiles, decaying plant material, ore smelting, dust and debris in the air, sea spray and volcanic eruptions. No one has even guessed what effect volcanic activity of Mount St. Helen's may have on rain acidity.

To further complicate the issue, the National Coal Association says it is difficult to find a direct link between increased coal burning and higher rainfall acidity. Greater use of low sulfur coal, combined with scrubbers in power plants, have helped to limit the amount of sulfur being released into the atmosphere to levels near those of the late 40s. Sulfur dioxide emissions in Europe have increased 35 percent since 1965.

Despite this increase, Sweden, downwind of most major European power plants, has had a fairly level trend in rainfall acidity. The Electrical Producers Research Institute reports the sulfur dioxide emissions over the Adirondacks may vary only 10 percent during a given period while rainfall acidity may vary by a factor of 10 from one rainfall to the next.

Higher rainfall acidity is being found in unexpected areas where there are no power plants. Three of these areas are the lower Mississippi Valley, where the prevailing winds come from the Gulf of Mexico, Colorado, where the winds come over unobstructed plains, and even the Island of Samoa.

The effect on the environment is unclear as well. Fish have disappeared from some lakes receiving acid rain and thrived in others receiving a similar rainfall.

It seems there are no clear cut issues any more. Almost everyone wants to keep the environment from becoming more polluted. But to force the expenditure of billions of dollars to control acid rain and then find we've had no effect on it also seems a dangerous course.

Sewer Authority To File Liens

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Following a long and sometimes heated discussion, the Franklin Township Sewer Authority Tuesday night directed its solicitor to file property liens next month against residents who have failed to pay front footage assessments.

Most of the disagreement centered around owners of property which will remain undeveloped in the foreseeable future because of it being in the flood plain, having a gas line right-of-way or a coal right-of-way.

Eventually the board voted to place the agreement between the board and the property owner on record in the prothonotary's office. In this way, future owners or present owners of such land will be aware they must pay the assessment if and when the land is improved.

Liens will be filed, as required by state law, against property owners who have not paid the assessment by September 10. This date was chosen because liens must be filed within six months after the new sewage plant became operable on March 10.

To date, 20 property owners have not paid their assessment and have not connected to the sewer. About 25 have paid their assessment but because of wet weather have not connected to the sewer. All of these property owners own homes adjacent to an existing sewer line.

There are over 200 properties in the sewer district on which no assessments have been paid but could be developed in the future without major problems. The board voted to place liens against these property owners.

The board pointed out this would not place a financial burden on the property owners, it only serves notice that should sewers be installed at some future date, the owners would have to then pay the assessment and back interest.

Board members voting to file the liens were Mark Morris, Charles Carpenter and Robert Teagarden. Member Tom Albert abstained from voting and Harold Ray Stroosnider was absent.

In cases where a home owner simply refuses to hook into the system, the board will contract the work and then bill the home owner, who will have six months to pay before a mechanic's lien is filed against his property.

Richard Kamerer, plant engineer, informed the board that the new plant processed over 600,000 gallons of water on Monday during the heavy rainfall in the area. Normally, the plant processes about 125,000 gallons per day.

The extra water was first blamed on lack of water-tight manholes in the Blairtown section which was under water Monday. However, Kamerer said the plant processed over 500,000 gallons on another rainy day when the manholes were not covered by flood waters.

George Scott, authority manager, informed the board he would be sealing many manholes next month and some of the extra water would be kept out of the system. Small vent holes in many manhole covers will also be plugged by Scott next month, he said.

In other action, the board passed a resolution proposing future tap fees be increased from $500 to $750. The resolution will be sent to the Franklin Township Supervisors who must then approve the increase and author the necessary ordinance. The township will probably set the same rates in the other two sewer districts in Franklin.

The next meeting of the authority will be held at 7:30 p.m. September 2, in the township municipal building.

Matriculation Convocation For Waynesburg Students

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College officially begins its 132nd academic year on Saturday, August 23, with a special Matriculation Convocation for new students at the First Presbyterian Church. The convocation, at 2:30 p.m., is part of a three-day new student orientation program.

Classes begin Tuesday, August 26. Students interested in attending classes this fall still may register for the fall term. Individuals who have not attended classes at the college previously must apply for admission as new students.

Students who have not registered are urged to contact the registrar's office if they are returning students, or the admissions office if they have not yet made application. Financial aid may be available to students who qualify.

At the Matriculation Convocation, students attending Waynesburg College for the first time receive certificates marking their enrollment at the college. The brief ceremony, patterned after commencement exercises, is open to the community, as well as parents and friends of the students.

The first matriculation certificates at Waynesburg College were distributed five years ago, although the tradition of awarding certificates to incoming students is a longstanding one at many college and universities.

New student orientation, developed by the Student Life Office, helps students adjust to college life. The program, organized by Patricia Byers, associate dean of student life, runs from Saturday morning through Monday night.

Activities on the schedule for orientation include the convocation, checking into the residence halls, placement testing in English and mathematics, meetings with faculty, and individual academic advising. There also will be campus tours, meetings, a buffet dinner, and an all-campus picnic on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Byers said a number of upperclass students and resident advisers will help students become oriented to the campus and the residence halls.

Appaloosa Club Will Auction Stallion Service

The Corner Pocket Appaloosa Club, headquartered at Waynesburg, will offer horse owners of the tri-state area a chance to bid on a service to some of the area's top stallions.

The auction will be held in conjunction with the club's horse show at the Greene County fairgrounds at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 23.

"We have 20 services to sell," Weeter said. "They will probably go for about half the studs fees because it's a new thing. We have Appaloosa, Thoroughbred, Morgan and Quarter horse stallions from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio."

Taxpayers Group To Protest Change

GREENSBORO — Concerned Taxpayers for Quality Education in the Southeastern Greene School District made plans Monday to attend a meeting of the Greene County commissioners to protest the change in assessment ratio which will go into effect in 1981.

Meeting at the Monon Center with president Jim Minor presiding, members made plans to attend the county commissioners' meeting Friday, Sept. 5, to seek information on what the change will mean. Those who attended a protest meeting held at Greensboro in July are asked to attend. Minor indicated that petitions protesting the ratio change will be submitted to the commissioners.

The plans were made in light of a letter from the board of commissioners in which the taxpayers' group was advised that even though July 31 was the final date for appeals from the ratio change, that "you and anyone else who may have questions concerning the assessment ratio change are invited to appear before the board of county commissioners on any regular meeting date and pose your questions."

The ratio change, which will go into effect next year, will increase from 20 percent to 30 percent the ratio between the assessed value and the market value of all taxable real estate in the county.

Waynesburg College Begins Its 132nd Year Next Week

WAYNESBURG — Classes begin Tuesday, Aug. 26, for the fall semester at Waynesburg College, and applications and class registrations are open for the coming semester.

The college will officially begin its 132nd year next week with the traditional Matriculation Convocation for new students. The convocation, scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 23, is part of a three-day, new student orientation program.

According to Ronald Shunk, director of admissions and financial aid at the college, applications for admission are still available.

"At this time of year, there are always some students who have changed their college plans," Shunk noted. "Particularly, there may be local students who had not made plans to attend college this fall."

Another group of students who register near the end of the summer are people who plan to attend on a part-time basis. Shunk noted that many students, including older people, enroll for one or two courses, either in the regular day program or the evening school.

He added that financial aid opportunities still may be available, depending on the individual circumstance.

"We are recommending that students undecided about attending a college call or visit the admissions office," he said.

During the new student orientation program, students meet with faculty in their academic department, and take placement tests in English and mathematics.

Classes begin at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, with late registration being accepted until September 2.

Floods Cause Estimated $2 Million Damage

By ROBIN ROBERTS
Staff Writer

BRAVE — Wayne Long, Deputy Director of the Greene County Emergency Management Agency (formerly Civil Defense), Tuesday estimated damages from Monday's flash flooding in the county at upward of $2 million.

Long, according to county commissioner Dr. Richard Cowan, said that after a survey of the Brave area, one of the hardest hit areas of the county, he had determined 16 houses, five mobile homes, two businesses (Stiles' General Store and the post office) and the Wayne Township Volunteer Fire Hall had sustained "significant flood damage."

Throughout the day hundreds of workers labored under threatening skies as the cleanup from Monday's storm began.

Areas of the county which were hardest hit by the flash floods include Aleppo, Brave, Bristoria, Crabapple, Deep Valley, New Freeport, and Ryerson Station.

Areas of West Virginia were also hit hard by the storm. The lawns of many houses in most of the communities were covered Tuesday with ruined carpets and furniture which were soaked during Monday's storms.

Additional thunderstorms hit most areas of the county early Tuesday, but no new flooding was reported.

The village of Brave, which was nearly inaccessible Monday, proved to be probably the most affected area of the county, as Long indicated in his preliminary survey of the area.

Residents of the area told Tuesday how nearly all roads into the village of 350 were flooded, blocking access to the town. "About the only vehicle to get in for most of the day was the state police helicopter," said Charles Riggs, who manages the Accurate Forging Co. forging plant which sits along Dunkard Creek.

Riggs said his plant sustained only minor flooding problems, but the parking lot at the plant was completely under water.

While the forging plant experienced very little difficulty with the high waters, the village itself was inundated.

A woman worker at the Wayne Township Volunteer Fire Hall said it was the worst flooding in the area, "probably ever." Water marks in the fire hall, some 150 yards from Dunkard Creek, measured 53 inches from the floor.

A mobile home located between Brave and Pine Bank, near the village of Shamrock, was nearly destroyed when a 12,000-gallon swimming pool from a neighbor's backyard was washed from its moorings and drifted into the mobile home, owned by Minnie Minafee. Mrs. Minafee was not reported injured in the accident, but nearly all of her belongings, including a number of antique clocks, were destroyed by the flood waters.

Mrs. Harold Stiles, owner of the general store in Brave said Tuesday that at least 15 inches of water flooded the store and adjoining home, ruining carpets and soaking furniture.

Mrs. Stiles, still mopping out the store, told how one of her sons had narrowly escaped from the basement of the building when flood waters crashed through basement windows, flooding the basement. "He had just gone into the basement and water was coming in, he wanted to know if he should open the windows when suddenly they burst and all of that water came pouring in. He just made it out of the basement as it filled up," she said.

The Brave Post Office, adjacent to the George Evans home, was soaked by the early morning floods, as was the Evans home.

Commissioner Cowan said Tuesday afternoon that the county has contacted Governor Richard Thornburgh concerning the possibility of using Act 323 for areas of the county struck by Monday's storm.

Long said it could take up to 10 days to determine the extent of damage in the county. He said EMA must compile a list of structures which were destroyed or damaged by Monday's storms, the value of the structures and the percentage of insurance on the buildings.

Long said that the chiefs at various fire departments in the county will compile individual lists of the damages and then submit their lists to him. He credited firemen for the outstanding jobs they did Monday and will have to do in the future. "I would like to compliment firemen from the communities on the job they've done," Long said.

Red Cross representatives will be in the fire hall at Brave beginning at 10 a.m. Wednesday to take applications for aid in getting furniture and food.

All victims may register at the Brave location, regardless of where they may live. The field office is being located at Brave because it was apparently the hardest hit area, Red Cross officials said.

The Red Cross will issue food orders which may be used in a store of the victim's choice. The amount of aid for a week's supply of food will be determined by the size of the family, according to Ellen Owens, executive director of the Greene County office of the Red Cross.

Four families were supplied with food Tuesday following a tour of the flooded areas. Clothing is being distributed through the Busy Bee outlet in Waynesburg, but victims must have an authorization from the Red Cross.

Those needing bedding and furniture will be determined and then their needs will be advertised for public donations.

Red Cross officials will be available in their office during the day by calling 627-3834.

Five Townships Lack Programs, No Flood Insurance Is Available

By Bob Eichenlaub
Greene County Editor

A survey conducted Tuesday indicates that only a very small percentage of the damage caused by flooding in southern and western Greene County Monday is covered by insurance.

Automobiles and trucks which were caught in the high waters are covered if owners have comprehensive insurance on their vehicles, but houses and their contents are covered only if the owner had purchased flood insurance. And it is available in only about half of the townships in which the flood impact was greatest.

Tony Mottle of the Pennsylvania Department of Community Affairs explained that the National Flood Insurance Program was set up several years ago to enable municipalities to take the steps necessary to qualify their residents for federally subsidized flood insurance. To do so, the municipalities were required to adopt a resolution and ordinances designed to control future construction in sections of the township or borough identified as being flood-prone. Buildings already sitting in flood plains were not affected by the regulations, but their owners could then buy insurance.

Mottle said the necessary steps have been taken by councils in all boroughs in the county and in 15 of the 20 townships — Aleppo, Center, Cumberland, Franklin, Gilmore, Gray, Greene, Jefferson, Monongahela, Morgan, Morris, Perry, Richhill, Washington and Whiteley.

Five townships — Dunkard, Freeport, Jackson, Springhill and Wayne — have not adopted the program and their residents cannot buy flood insurance, which also includes insurance against mudslides and landslides. Of these five townships, all but Dunkard sustained property damage in Monday's flood.

A Waynesburg insurance agency said that the federal flood insurance can be purchased through any agency provided the municipality is eligible. The annual cost is 25 cents per $100 worth of coverage on a house and 35 cents per $100 on contents. The cost for commercial buildings is 40 cents per $100 on buildings and 75 cents per $100 on contents.

There is a $200 deductible feature on both the building and contents, and a $25 annual premium requirement. The $25 minimum premium, for example, would purchase $10,000 worth of insurance on a house.

A check of local insurance companies indicates that while some people have purchased the federally subsidized coverage, most have not, even in those municipalities where they are eligible to do so.

They explained that the initiative lies with the property owner, since he must go to an insurance agent and arrange to purchase the protection.

Reporter Says More Than Water 'Covered' County

By ROBIN ROBERTS
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Whether it's one home or a hundred homes, one life or a hundred lives, it still amounts to a disaster, at least for the persons involved in any event, such as Monday's floods in Greene County.

And, regardless of the nature of the incident, it's the job of journalists to get quickly to the scene, gather the facts accurately and disseminate them.

In such incidents as Monday's flash floods, it often calls for the use of the entire staff to paint a comprehensive picture of what has actually occurred. It requires special vehicles to get members of the staff to the scene, long hours of non-stop photography, and in this case, sloshing through flood waters and mud, to interview victims to compile the facts.

Then, after the facts are gathered and the photographs taken, the staff members must return to the office where the real work starts: coordinating the facts into one story; determining if there are interesting "sidebars" to the story; developing the film and printing pictures, and then discussing which of the pictures are to appear in the following day's publication.

The job of a reporter is far from the glamorous picture which can be painted on "Lou Grant."

Let's follow the activities of the Observer-Reporter's Greene County staff during their coverage Monday of the flooding in that county.

The day started early for photographer-reporter Stan Diamond. He woke early and, realizing it had rained hard for much of the night, started what was going to prove to be a 15 1/2-hour day.

He first traveled to the Sycamore area, traditionally a flood section of the county, where he found the early morning flood waters encroaching upon Route 18. The same was true in areas of West Waynesburg, but at this point, nothing unusual was found. But Diamond, a veteran of 14 years as a newspaper photographer, said "You could tell things were going to get worse." But he didn't realize then how much worse.

After taking a few shots in the immediate Waynesburg area, Diamond returned home for "his morning coffee." He never finished that cup.

Calls from the western section of the county had started coming into the office, and Greene County editor Bob Eichenlaub, who was still officially on vacation, called Diamond to tell him of severe flooding in the western and southern areas of the county.

Diamond immediately departed for the Rogersville area, where Greene County's main east-west artery, Route 21, was blocked by about five feet of water, halting his progress to points even further west.

Meanwhile, Eichenlaub and another staff member, Jim Moore, were starting their attack on the story which was developing.

Moore, a Waynesburg native, took an office camera and headed south on Route 218 toward the Spraggs and Brave areas of Wayne Township. But, like Diamond, Moore quickly found the state highway closed by a large mud slide. He, too, had no access to heavily flooded areas.

Eichenlaub, still working from his home, then contacted a fourth staff member, Robin Roberts, who owns a four-wheel drive vehicle.

Eichenlaub joined Roberts at the Observer-Reporter's office in Waynesburg and the two headed west. Reaching Rogersville, they found a roadblock established by PennDOT, warning motorists they could not travel any further west on Route 21 than an area known as Golden Oaks Park, just about a mile west of Rogersville.

The two then met Diamond near the flooded intersection of Routes 21 and 18 and the three formulated a "battle plan."

Diamond, it was decided, would return to the office and attempt to make arrangements to charter an airplane to take aerial photographs, the other two would attempt to reach the flooded areas by various "ridge roads," avoiding low-lying flooded areas.

With the help of Greene County office manager Bill Meighen they attempted to locate a charter plane at the Greene County Airport, but none was available. A call to Ben Hutchinson, head of the Observer-Reporter's photography department in the home office in Washington, produced a charter plane from Rostraver Township Airport within 10 minutes, and 30 minutes later Diamond and his camera were airborne and traveling west.

The weather had deteriorated to the point that the pilot could fly no farther west than Golden Oaks, the same point where Diamond first was stopped.

At the same time, Eichenlaub and Roberts were traveling a ridge which would eventually lead them to the village of Graysville.

Eventually the two dropped back onto the blacktop of Route 21 just east of the village of Rutan, and their first stop was at Ryerson State Park, where they held a brief interview with park superintendent Ron Duke.

At Ryerson they went to the Ron Lohr home. Lohr, a long-time acquaintance of Roberts, had experienced a narrow call. He and his family had evacuated their home during the early morning hours when the foundation was washed from beneath it. They had spent the night in a chicken coop, their house was on the verge of toppling into its basement and they had lost both vehicles. Roberts and Eichenlaub had to interview the understandably shaken Lohr and a neighbor, Arnold Wilson, who had lost two vehicles, too.

All along the route the two photographed scenes which would give a graphic portrayal of what had actually occurred, interviewing people who had just hours before suffered losses of property.

At one stop, the two made a call to their office requesting that additional pages be acquired for the Greene County newspaper so that the story could be given the proper "play."

"It's not a lot of fun talking to a person who has just watched his house destroyed by a flood," Roberts commented to Eichenlaub during their travels.

Five hours after leaving the office, the two returned with rolls and rolls of film and 60 pages of notes and references.

While the pictures were being processed, Eichenlaub and Roberts, along with Moore, who had filed an earlier story for the afternoon edition of the newspaper, pieced together their notes and pulled them into the story which appeared in Tuesday's edition of the Observer-Reporter.

The result of this day's labor, which included hundreds of miles of travel and at least 35 hours of labor, was a 26-inch story and eight photographs depicting what had occurred during early morning hours Monday.

Faces From The Past—Do Your Recognize Them?

Flood Raises Specter Of Insurance Decisions

It has been three years since the National Flood Insurance program was making news in Greene County.

At that time, the state Department of Community Affairs was urging townships and boroughs to comply with federal requirements which would provide their residents residing in flood-prone areas with the opportunity to purchase protection against flooding and mudslides.

To become eligible, a municipality had to agree to adopt building ordinances which set up standards for structures to be erected in areas designated as being subject to flooding. They had to require permits to build in such locations.

In return, property owners with homes or business places already located on flood plains became eligible to buy federally-subsidized flood insurance. The rate was, and is, reasonable. For $25 a year, for example, a home owner can buy $10,000 worth of protection.

The program made news back in 1977 primarily because groups of people in some of the townships in which it was proposed got up in arms about government dictation. They didn't want anyone telling them what they had to do when they wanted to build something.

When this happened, the boards of supervisors backed down and the program was not adopted. Unfortunately, four of the five townships where this happened were among those hardest hit in this week's major flooding in Greene County.

It's undoubtedly true that many property owners who were eligible to purchase the protection did not do so, and as a result they face major losses.

But township officials who did not at least afford their people an opportunity to protect their property will have a lot of soul searching to do.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Ever since St. Helen volcano broke loose in Washington last May, Greene County's weather has been disrupted as few can remember during the summer months. Torrential rains, each seemingly worse than the one before it, delayed planting of the corn crop and has ruined thousands of tons of hay which could not be harvested.

Worthy Rich Scott of West High Street, Waynesburg, former auto dealer in Carmichaels, was host to his sons and daughter during the July 4th weekend. They included his daughter Janet, wife of John Lively of Pittsburgh and their children and grandchildren and Mr. and Mrs. Blair Scott of Buffalo, N.Y. and their family. It was the first gathering of the immediate Scott and Blair descendants in recent years. Their maternal ancestor was Helen Blair Scott of Waynesburg whose father, the late Dr. Thomas Blair was the town's first eye specialist. Both Mr. and Mrs. Worthy Scott are graduates of Waynesburg College and among its most active alumni for many years.

Mrs. Helen Hoge Nornickle, a native of Waynesburg and an elementary school teacher here prior to her marriage to the late Walter Chamberlain, of New Hampshire, attended the wedding this week of her cousin, Mrs. Precilla B. McCaw to Dr. Roy Jack of Carmichaels.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Kircher, of Phoenixville, visited her aunt Mrs. Helen Dittman, of Woodland Avenue, Waynesburg. Mrs. Kirchner is a daughter of the late N. Lee and Louise D. Frank.

Among the many former Waynesburg residents who were joyfully surprised by the network television coverage of Waynesburg's Rain Day this year were Ross and Sara Minor of New Orleans. They have been residing there since returning to the United States from Panama where Mr. Minor was employed on the canal for years. Health permitting, they will be in Waynesburg the weekend of September 6 for the reunion of World War I veterans of Company K. Mr. Minor served with the company throughout its campaign in France.

Mrs. A.J. Maier, of Bethesda, Md., spent a few days last week visiting her mother, Mrs. Gladys Silveus of East High Street, Waynesburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Calvert and daughters Shannon and Erin, of Laurel, Md., spent a few days visiting in the Waynesburg area. Mr. Calvert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Haven Calveret and his wife is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Edwards of Waynesburg R.D. 3. Mr. Calvert is a biology teacher at Eastern Junior High in Silver Springs, Md. and Mrs. Calvert is a registered nurse.

Tony Mancuso, a retired trucking contractor and auto dealer, is a surgical patient in Washington Hospital.

This week's flood which swept through western and southwestern townships from Richhill to Dunkard was the worst flood in the county since the 1936 St. Patrick's Day flood which climaxed the county's longest "old time winter."

M.K. Talpas, registrar at Waynesburg College for almost 40 years, was honored recently by other administrative officials and faculty members at a surprise luncheon this week in anticipation of his retirement this fall. He has held the position longer than any other person in the history of the college and has been cited many times for his expertise attained during the years he has worked with students and other faculty members during his long tenure. He has made no announcement concerning his retirement plans.

Greene County has become a routine "hunting ground" for Pittsburgh-based television helicopters because of the recent fast-breaking news stories including the recent flood, Rain Day, the Moundsville Prison escape and other stories.

Park Authority Seeks Grant

CARMICHAELS — The Cumberland Township Park and Recreation Authority met Wednesday night and announced application has been made for a federal grant of $100,000 for the Wana B. Park.

The funds to be allocated in 1980-81 would be on a dollar-for-dollar matching basis with funds from local sources.

The authority expressed its appreciation to the general public for its support for the fund-raising dance held May 3, which had a profit of $603.

Plans are being made for a dance to be held in the fall. Further details will be announced.

Bicycle Stolen

State police are investigating the theft of a 10-speed, 26 inch bicycle from the front porch of the Martha Reddings home a half-mile north of Jefferson along TR760.

The theft occurred between 8 p.m. Wednesday and 10:30 a.m. Thursday.

Twenty-seven years ago, a group of civic-minded residents met at Carmichaels to dream up a valid method of publicizing their town.

The result was the first annual Greene County Coal Festival, which has grown steadily in stature and has now achieved statewide recognition as the Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show.

No doubt a large part of its success lies in the fact that the event pays tribute to a major industry which is vital importance not only to Greene County, where a significant part of it is centered, but to the nation as a whole.

It seems appropriate that the observance has grown each year, symbolically keeping pace with the resurgence of an industry which had virtually been counted out when Carmichaels staged the first Coal Festival back in 1954.

Since then the demand for new sources of power has grown to the point where the future of coal is exceedingly bright. Plans for the opening of new mines in Greene County promises that the county will share in the boom for many years to come.

In what has come to be a tradition, the 1978 Coal Show will open this weekend with the state mine rescue contest on Saturday and the Coal Queen Pageant on Sunday. It will close Saturday, Aug. 30, with a parade which gets larger and larger every year. A lot of entertainment and educational events are provided in the week between these events.

Planning for the Coal Show is a year-around process at Carmichaels. It requires the dedication and effort of a lot of people. The payoff comes with the thousands of people who visit the town at the end of each summer.

The Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show has become one of the highlights of the year in Greene County. There is every reason to believe it will remain so for many years to come.

Gradually they started acquiring their own homes or moved to farms of their own. Through intermarriages of their sons and daughters with the old established land-owners of the county they became an integral part of the county.

Now the names of the many ethnic origins which are giving Greene County a stimulating alteration in its sociological image are to be found on the tags of more and more prize winning 4-H baby beef and fat lamb stalls at the county fair as they have been found in the lineups of various high school varsity sports teams during the past three or four decades.

For the most part the addition of the descendants of the first coal miners who came across the Atlantic Ocean a half century ago to help mine the coal which has been the county's heritage has been a stimulating factor in Greene County's rapid agricultural progress.

Resourceful as all coal miners must be to pace themselves to the modern equipment for mining coal they do the same in their farming efforts.

It is a trait which is being passed along to their children and grandchildren. It is now being found more and more every year at the 4-H club livestock sales that have become a highlight of recent county fairs as they continue to win their share of the blue ribbons symbolic of first place.

And, also, as they continue to reap the even more valuable rewards of the objectives of the 4-H standing for Health, Heart, Hands and Head.

Duquesne Light Teams Take Top Honors In Contest

CARMICHAELS — Two teams from Duquesne Light Co. at Greensboro placed first and second in the Regional Mine Rescue Contest held Saturday at Carmichaels.

First place winner was Duquesne Light No. 2 team, Robert Lawrence, captain. Second place went to the Duquesne Light No. 1 team, Joseph Spiker, captain.

The third place winner was the No. 1 team from the U.S. Steel Cumberland Mine, Harry Bowen III, captain, and fourth place went to the Nemacolin Mine, William Staun, captain.

The Southwestern Pennsylvania Safety Association sponsored the regional contest. The winners will participate in the State King Coal Mine Rescue Contest Saturday, Aug. 24, at the Carmichaels Area High School stadium.

The chairman for the regional contest was Albert J. Monkewicz and the director was John E. Chambers

A county fair, such as the recent Greene County Fair at Waynesburg, with its noisy carnival midway, the surging crowds contemplating which riding device to enjoy, or which food concession has the best aroma of fried hamburgers, has little resemblance to a course in American history.

But an important part of local history can be found at the Greene County Fair—in the name tags of youthful owners attached to the stalls of livestock in the 4-H divisions of baby beef cattle and fat ram sheep.

Caution: household hints may be hazardous to your house.

When you read household hints, there are always a few things left out. Like what happens if you actually follow their instructions.

For instance: "If a door squeaks, try a shot of kitchen pan spray, right in the hinges." If you try that, you need another household hint to follow it up: How to Get Grease Out of the Carpet and Off the Wallpaper.

I found a list of these hints recently, and noted with some interest that the follow-up problems were not taken care of. I thought I would just point out a few of them.

Here is a good one: "If the youngsters get half the dirt on the soap and the other half on the towel when they wash their hands, keep a small-size bottle of liquid dishwashing detergent in the bathroom for them. If they use too much, dilute it with water."

Well, we all know they will use too much. What they will really do is squirt it at each other, not wash their hands with it. And your next step will be to find out how to get the detergent out of the bathroom carpet. Or it will be to find out how to set a broken leg, after you have skidded across the room.

Or, try this one: "To remove felt-tip pen marks from vinyl upholstery, try treating the spot with rubbing alcohol or a salt-free fat such as canned shortening." Once you have plastered the chair with lard, the next person who sits in that chair will of course discover that you may have scrubbed off the ink, but have missed some of the lard. Then you will have to go and look up the method for removing lard from a wool suit, or whatever.

A common method of removing ink from a carpet is to scrub it with milk. I tried this once, and it took me longer to get the milk out than the ink. And once a friend came to visit and borrowed a ballpoint pen from me. The pen promptly leaked blue ink all over her white slacks. Not to worry, I told her. I had read that hair spray would take it out. It did, but she wasn't crazy about the

Couple File Damage Suit

WAYNESBURG — A Franklin Township couple has filed a complaint in trespass in Greene County Court seeking in excess of $10,000 from a Pittsburgh contractor for alleged damage to their property.

Early Arrival Worries Parents

JEFFERSON — Several persons whose homes are located in an area off Route 221 west of Jefferson questioned the proposed school bus schedule for the coming year during a meeting Monday night of the Jefferson-Morgan School Board.

Bus schedules for this year were revised somewhat from previous years since the district for the first time will occupy its new $4.2 million consolidated elementary school constructed on property adjoining the junior-senior high school at Jefferson.

In four areas of the district, elementary students will board buses as early as 7:10 a.m. arriving at the school between 30 and 45 minutes prior to the start of school.

This was the major concern voiced by the group at Monday night's meeting. Spokesman for the group, Kenneth Dufalla, told the board he felt students arriving that early before the start of classes were at a disadvantage with other students because their alertness has peaked prior to their entering the classroom. Forrest Cottle, district business manager who makes up the bus schedules, explained it would take an additional three buses to make a double run into their particular area but that all schedules would be reviewed for possible revision after the first three days of school.

Dufalla, a teacher in the Trinity School District, said he could understand the board's problems in providing a cost efficient and equitable transportation schedule but stressed that fact that small children should not be arriving in school that early before the start of classes.

Cottle said the one solution would be to reverse the bus run, but that would only cause the same problem on the other end with a different group of parents.

Other members of the group felt their children would have to get up too early and would not have time for a proper breakfast before boarding the bus.

Dufalla said he would check with Cottle after the first week of school to see if the bus run could be revised.

In other action the board agreed to hold a special meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, Aug. 25 to open bids for a heating system in the old Central Elementary School at Jefferson which has been closed but will be retained by the district for various uses including storage.

The board also voted to auction various school furnishings from the four elementary schools which have been closed and are either too old or cannot be adapted to the new building.

Substitute teacher salaries were increased from $33.33 to $40 per day in the district. The board approved the increase on the recommendation of the administration.

Football ticket prices will again be 75 cents if students purchase the tickets at school prior to the game and $2 for both students and adults at the gate.

Kenneth Macek, district superintendent, reported that repairs to a chimney at the junior-senior high school as well as several corner cracks in the building cause by nearby strip mine blasting are continuing. The chimney repairs will be completed before the start of school. He also reported bids for new doors on the junior-senior high school should be let by November with their installation to take place during the Christmas break.

Vo-Tech Directors, Teachers Agree On Three-Year Contract

After a little less than five months of negotiations using no professional negotiators, solicitors or administrators, the Joint Operating Committee of the Greene County Vocational-Technical School and its teacher organization signed a new three year contract during a meeting of the committee Thursday night.

The new contract with the teachers calls for a $1,400 salary increase in each of the three years of the contract. Added benefits are catastrophic insurance, improved dental plan which includes family coverage and increase tuition aid for additional credits.

Both members of the committee and Robert Washabaugh, teacher representative, had high praise for the conduct of each side during the negotiations which began in late March of this year.

In other business the committee approved salary increases for the administration, office workers, the chief school administrator, licensed practical nursing staff, and maintenance staff.

Four percent increases were granted to Norman Waldman, school director, bringing his salary to $29,950, and Francis Greely, school coordinator, raising his salary to $22,600.

Johnson was treated at Greene County Memorial Hospital for a hand injury and released. DeBolt was still being treated late Thursday night. It was reported he received a broken leg and multiple lacerations.

Salary for the chief school administrator, a position rotated among the superintendents of the five school districts participating in the school, was increased from $1,926 to $2,400.

Other salaries approved for the 1980-81 school year were William Swan, maintenance supervisor, $11,093, and eight percent increase; Jean Ingram, bookkeeper, $9,240, and Marilyn Whiting, director's secretary, $7,955, both 12 percent increases.

Eight percent increased were approved for Winifred Rigen, attendance clerk, $7,050; Eva Kennedy, matron, $7,385; Sara Jacobs, LPN coordinator, $15,773; Joan Clites, LPN instructor, $12,861; Marcella Watson, LPN instructor, $13,346; and Sandra Gross, LPN secretary, to $3,25 per hour.

Bids were opened for the heating and air conditioning maintenance contract at the school. The four bids received were turned over to the school's solicitor for review and recommendation.

Ordinance Objections Dominate Sewer Meeting

CARMICHAELS — Objections to a proposed Carmichaels Borough ordinance and approval of a holding tank for a new housing development were two actions taken by the Carmichaels-Cumberland Joint Sewer Authority at its meeting Tuesday night.

An ordinance scheduled for adoption by Carmichaels Borough Aug. 18 was summarized for authority information by the solicitor James Hook and superintendent Edgar Harris.

The ordinance would govern excavation and backfilling of borough streets and alleys, with permits and fees to be levied on a pre-determined schedule, or a blanket bond to cover costs.

Harris said he understands the fees and inspectors costs might be increased before the ordinance is adopted. He said that estimating five street crossings a year in the borough by the sewer authority would make an additional cost to the sewer authority $7,800 a year or an increase of 60 cents each year to each user.

Harris also said that the major portion of the old sewer lines in the borough increasing the possibility of more work in the borough than other areas.

He contended it was a distinct possibility the sewer rates in the borough would have to be increased to cover the additional costs. It was also noted users in Cumberland Township could not be expected to pay for extra work costs in the borough.

Sewer authority will have representatives at the borough council meeting Aug. 18 to voice objections specifically to the high deposits to be required for compliance with the ordinance.

A developer of 75 new housing units to be located off the Ceylon Road had asked the authority to approve the construction of a holding tank for that development so that construction can proceed. When the moratorium imposed by the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) against new connections into the system is lifted the temporary system would be replaced with permanent connection into the sewer system.

The moratorium was imposed when the amount of storm and runoff water entering the sewer system exceeded limits imposed by DER. The authority has been endeavoring to eliminate the sources of illegal storm waters through new construction of lines, removal of all roof and runoff drains, and rehabilitation of old lines.

The sewer authority gave its approval for the holding tank subject to complete approval by DER.

A public hearing was incorporated into the meeting for mid-point evaluation of the sewer rehabilitation project as required by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which partially funded the project.

Citizen and authority members participation in the hearing as required by HUD was conducted by Marion Gaydos Chambers, private grants consultant. She asked for input on construction to date to ascertain if it had served the purpose for which the federal funds were granted.

Along the same lines, Bruce Chambers, consulting engineer for the authority, gave a complete report on the dye testing project which had been funded by the grant.

A comprehensive house by house dye testing program was conducted for the sewer areas of Carmichaels and Cumberland Township from March to June of this year.

The study indicated inflow/infiltration water is entering the sewer through illegal connections allowing direct inflow of storm waters and several sources of infiltration, which includes leaks into manholes, sump pumps connected with French drains, sewers serving mobile home parks, old existing sewers throughout the service area and other undetected sources.

Dye testing revealed 148 violations with 33 downspouts, 100 stairwell drains, and 15 driveway drains connected to the sewer. It was noted the major portion of the violations at homes and buildings have been corrected, and Harris said he believes progress is being made in the storm water problem areas, but that the problems have not been eliminated.

Chambers recommended continued aggressive action against illegal roof and runoff drains: annual inspection of manholes during rainy periods with records kept; and repairs made during the dry seasons.

The authority gave Harris permission to begin work immediately on the defective manholes using authority employees as time permits.

Mrs. Chambers closed the public hearing and announced other hearings will be held at the conclusion of the project, and all discussion from Tuesday night's meeting will be incorporated into the project files.

Extensive discussion was then held on flooding problems on Route 88 south, where a creek cannot handle excess rain water. Attempts to arrive at a solution with PennDOT have not been successful and the authority decided to seek Cumberland Township Supervisors help in dredging the stream with sewer authority financial aid and manpower. One area, which causes part of the flooding, is the culvert under Route 88. However, Route 88 is a PennDOT maintained highway and the state can only clean out the culvert pipe.

Anderson Claims Need For State Cancer Plan

WAYNESBURG — Harry S. Anderson of Waynesburg, chairman of American Cancer Society's Pennsylvania Division executive committee, has stressed the urgency of passage of House Bill 230, the Pennsylvania Cancer Plan.

"With one out of four people each year being diagnosed with cancer and 24,000 people in our state alone dying of the disease annually, we must implement a plan this year to help reduce the incidence of this disease," said Anderson.

This is the third year senators will be considering a state cancer plan. The other two years the bill was defeated in committee.

The Cancer Plan, HB 230, calls for the development of a cancer registry and numerous other cancer control programs, such as early detection screenings, education, and patient service programs.

The Cancer Plan, introduced this year by Rep. Ken Cole (D-Adams County) passed the House in February with an amendment to fund the plan by providing a one cent additional cigarette tax which would generate approximately $10 to $13 million.

However, once in the senate health and welfare committee, House Bill 230 underwent another change when Sen. Louis Coppersmith (D-Cambria) proposed to replace the one cent tax with a $40,000 general fund appropriation to supplement the first-year operation of the plan. This amendment met the committee's approval and now awaits the review of the Senate appropriations committee before going to the floor of the full senate for vote.

"We feel that it is time for Pennsylvania to join other states like Connecticut, New Jersey, Texas, and Florida who have cancer registry," commented Anderson.

By making cancer a reportable disease and uniformly recording cancers across the state, epidemiological studies of incidence patterns and other factors such as geographic location, family history, and environment may be studied to determine their effect on cancer occurrence.

Anderson said that the cancer registry is the focal point of all the other programs outlined in House Bill 230. "Once we have the registry, we can gear our educational programs and screening projects to those areas of the state which may have a high incidence of a particular cancer," Anderson said.

The cancer plan is expected to be voted on once senators return from summer recess Sept. 15.

Dr. Bartos Joins Staff At Memorial Hospital

WAYNESBURG — Dr. Sylvia Ann Bartos has recently become a member of the medical pediatrics, has offices in the professional building at 190 Bonar Avenue with Dr. Mona Mishra.

Dr. Bartos passed her American Board of Pediatrics in 1970. She is married to Dr. Craig Mulvihill, a Pittsburgh dentist.

The local physician's addition to the medical staff at the hospital is part of the hospital's continuing effort to recruit specialists to the area who can provide additional care to county residents.

In the past year, the local medical institution has added specialists, besides Dr. Bartos, in anesthesiology, gastroenterology, internal medicine, pediatrics, psychiatry, urology and neurology. The hospital hopes to recruit additional specialists in ear, nose, and throat, and possibly, orthopedics within the next year.

The Portler family of Clarksville was more than happy about a huge water tank deposited in their front yard.

At Last They'll Taste Cool Water

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

CLARKSVILLE — A 10,000 gallon water tank left outside the kitchen door would probably upset most folks but not the Joseph Portler family in Morgan Township.

To them it is a blessing and "hopefully" a victory over state bureaucracy and a strip mine operator. It means the possible ending to a three year wait for an adequate water supply in their home.

Their story will hardly make a ripple on the shore of the Susquehanna River in Harrisburg but actually the tank is the culmination of a precedent-setting legal action in Pennsylvania.

Even more important to Joe Portler, it means he will no longer have to carry plastic water jugs in his car. . . jugs that he filled wherever he could so he could bring them home for the family to bathe, to cook, to flush the toilet and even brush their teeth.

For three years, this family felt they were in the Mojave

Desert. Water was a special thing — not something most of us take for granted.

Back in March, 1977, they had a high producing well and then came the coal stripping operations behind their home. Within six months the well was dry.

The only thing flowing was reams of official papers from state agencies, lawyers and "talk only" politicians. The papers continued to pile up on their kitchen table but the well remained dry.

About the only good thing that happened during this period was House Bill 499 which was signed into law. The bill regulates surface mining and protects homeowners from certain actions by the strippers.

The bill also provides that if the stripper refuses or is unable to restore a water supply to a homeowner, the Department of Environmental Resources will.

After months of fighting over the phone and in person with state officials the Portlers got their day in court.

In August, 1978, the DER and Nardie Coal Company, which has since gone out of business, signed an agreement in Commonwealth Court whereby the coal firm would provide a temporary water supply and arrange for a permanent supply by November.

The mining company carried water jugs to the home for 10 months and then one day a spokesman called and said there would be no more water delivered.

The Portlers went to Harrisburg and laid their case before the assistant attorney general for DER and before the state director of Surface Mine Reclamation.

It wasn't until July, 1979, that DER gave up and offered the Portlers a deal. They promised to install a 10,000 gallon water tank and the needed pumps and pipe. Months later DER advertised for the work and received one bid for $31,896. However, the lone bidder was not able to post the necessary bond required by the state agency and the bid was rejected.

On the second bid, Greene Mechanical Corp. of Carmichaels was awarded the contract for $38,800 and work was started.

At one point, the coal stripper offered to pay $25,000 to have a two-inch water line extended for 2,000 feet to the Portler home. However, Southwestern Pennsylvania Water Authority felt a six-inch line was necessary and the cost would be $75,000 to extend the line 6,000 feet.

Because of their three-year fight, the Portlers have been in demand for speaking engagements before other troubled taxpayers. They have been invited to address 30 residents at Mt. Pleasant who recently lost their water supply because of stripping operations.

In the mean time, they have a two-year period in which they will monitor their new water system. Hopefully, the stripping operations which continue on three sides of their home, will not completely ruin the supply.

What good is a 10,000 gallon tank if there is no water to fill the tank?

Company K Plans Annual Reunion

Administrators And Teachers Are Optimistic About Contract.

WAYNESBURG — Chances appear good that a new teachers' contract will be successfully negotiated in the Central Greene School District before the opening of school next week.

In response to a question asked at a meeting of the Central Greene School Board Tuesday, Superintendent Ronald Ferrari and Keith Anderson, president of the Central Greene Education Association, issued a joint statement in which they said that "both parties are optimistic that a settlement can be reached before Monday (Aug. 25)."

They said that another meeting with State Mediator William Hershberger has been scheduled for Thursday evening, and Anderson said that a meeting of the CGEA will be held Friday to inform teachers of what happens at that negotiating session. An in-service day for teachers is scheduled for Monday and classes are slated to begin Tuesday, Aug. 26.

Most of the meeting was concerned with personnel matters in preparation for the beginning of school, but the longest discussions centered on two issues, one involving bus drivers and the other a request that a student from Whiteley Township be permitted to attend the East Franklin School because his parents work in Waynesburg and they can drive him to his grandmothers' house at Waynesburg where he can stay both before and after going to his first grade classes.

A group of parents from Wayne Township appeared to object to continued employment of Sam Fox as a bus driver because of what they termed unsafe driving practices. The board subsequently approved a bus drivers list which excluded both Fox and another driver, Raymond Kappes. Solicitor Richard Krill said both drivers would have the right to request a formal hearing if they desired to do so.

With regard to the request for the first grade student to attend East Franklin, the board rejected it on the grounds that it would violate attendance areas established for 1980-81 and would set a precedence which would open the door for similar requests. The vote to deny the request was 5-2, with one of the members who voted not stating that he felt the board should attempt to assist parents with such problems where satisfactory arrangements could be made.

It was announced that hot lunches will be made available to students at the East Ward building for the first time this year, and that as a result a closed lunch period would be placed in effect.

Parents who wish to do so will be allowed to pick up their youngsters and take them home for lunch, but the students will not be permitted to walk home because there will be no school guards at crossings at the noon hour.

Under Act 80, the board approved 12:30 dismissals on six dates during the school year for the holding of in-service programs for teachers. They will fall on Sept. 24, Oct. 28, Jan. 29, Feb. 25, March 31 and May 21.

In action involving personnel, the board accepted the resignations of Richard Bernhart, a teacher at the Miller Middle School, and Susan Gove (Chappel), an elementary teacher.

Curtis John Griffin, a Lock Haven State College graduate and wrestling coach, was employed as an elementary physical education teacher and was also named assistant varsity wrestling coach.

Mrs. Susan Fritz, a teacher at the middle school and Mrs. Lynne Goroncy, a high school mathematics teacher, were granted maternity leaves and Therese B. Albert, a high school English teacher, was granted a sabbatical leave for the first semester.

Mrs. M. Karen Lees was named as a permanent substitute for Mrs. Albert; Mary Zollars was hired as a half-time Title I reading teacher at the Whiteley School; Deborah

S. Tutich was named as a substitute for Mrs. Fritz; Jackie Lynn Burns was employed as a middle school art instructor; Carolyn Jane McGrath was named as a permanent substitute in physical education at the high school; Lisa Friedman Schwarz was named a part-time art instructor at the middle school and East Franklin School; Gloria Bishop was named as a permanent substitute at the East Franklin School; Marleen Salisbury was appointed as a permanent substitute in mathematics at the high school, and Carolyn McGrath was named girls varsity basketball and volleyball coach.

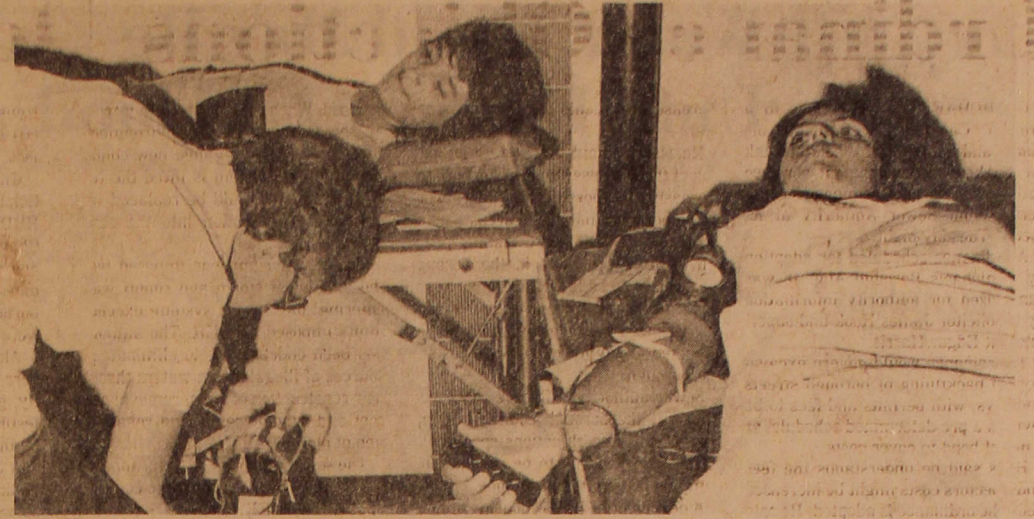

The board also: Approved wage increases of 50 cents an hour for five bookkeepers and secretaries in the central administrative office and an increase of 45 cents an hour for the clerk to the food services director.

VAppointed substitute teacher callers and part time employees for the year.

VApproved a new program for evaluating teachers as prepared by Dr. Ferrari.

VAwarded the contract for supplying milk to United Dairy and for baked goods to Stroehmann Brothers Co.

VEmployed Dr. David J. Szarell as the school dentist on his low bid of $15 per hour and employed Dr. James Brooks and Dr. Joseph Stewart as school physicians.

Simple Blood Sharing Process Can Sometimes Save Lives

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is another of a series of articles about services provided by Greene County Memorial Hospital. They are being written by Marcia J. McEwen.

WAYNESBURG—Most people know that blood circulates within people. Nearly as important, though, is the fact that blood must be shared among people.

If everyone could keep his usual six quarts of blood all the time, this second type of circulation would not be necessary. But frequently some blood is lost because of accident, disease, surgery or illness.

There is therefore a continual need for donors to replace blood. During the past year, in fact, 150 transfusions were administered at Greene County Memorial Hospital.

It is a relatively simple process to give blood, and the entire procedure requires less than 10 minutes for the actual donation. The donor normally gives less than a pint, and this pint is replaced very quickly.

As a matter of fact, the body replaces the liquid part of the blood within a few hours. Cells are replaced within 10 days to two weeks. Because of this, a person can give every eight weeks, or up to five times a year.

Anyone between the ages 17 and 65 can give blood, provided he or she is in good health and weighs more than 110 pounds. Every year millions of people benefit from voluntarily shared blood.

Greene County participates in this life-saving program through the American Red Cross, whose Greene County chapter initiated the blood program in 1962. Regional headquarters are located at Johnstown.

The Red Cross became involved with blood transfusion service through a pilot program in 1937 when the Augusta, Ga., chapter recruited individuals as blood donors for the area hospital.

During World War II, the Red Cross established blood centers to collect and prepare plasma to treat the wounded. Through this organization more than 13 million units of blood were collected during the war.

The first Red Cross blood center opened in 1948 at Rochester, N.Y., with approval of both governmental agencies and private associations. Since the Rochester opening, more than 79 million units of blood have been shared by volunteer donors through Red Cross regional blood programs.

Some five million units are collected annually from these donations to benefit patients in more than 4,000 hospitals and clinics in the United States, including Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Red Cross blood is never sold. Hospitals reimburse the organization for part of the cost of collecting and processing the blood. There is no charge for the blood itself. This amount of money, with the hospital's service charge, appears on the patient's bill.

These blood processing costs, however, are covered by most major medical insurance. Some of the collecting-processing costs are borne by Red Cross chapters through fund campaigns and United Way.

All patients in need can receive blood. The community blood program, however, is possible only as long as healthy volunteers are willing to give. The American Red Cross blood merely assists the community in providing and maintaining an adequate, safe supply of blood.

People themselves generally respond through their sense of community responsibility and belief that blood is a public resource available to all. Any Greene County resident in need of blood can be assured of receiving it not only at Greene County Memorial Hospital but also at other hospitals through a reciprocal agreement. The blood program thus is a source of security for the entire community.

Often a single blood donation can help more than one person. Blood is separated into parts called components. Technologists divide blood into red cells and plasma. Red cells are most frequently used in transfusions. Plasma and its several components, which can be stored in a frozen state, are all used for patients who have various bleeding problems.

The Greene County Chapter of the American Red Cross has set up nine bloodmobile visits between Aug. 22, 1980 and June 22, 1981. The visit for Aug. 22 will be held from 12:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the Waynesburg Moose Lodge.

Reflections On 3,500-Mile Baseball Odessey

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Don't tell Virginia Wilcox, of 346 East High Street, that Billy Martin is a bad guy. She was in a Cleveland bar with him earlier this month and he was "Mr. Nice Guy."

Before you start thinking Virginia Wilcox is a baseball groupie or hangs out in bars, let's set the record straight. She and her granddaughter Kerry and 22 other baseball buffs just completed a unique, whirlwind tour of 10 major league ballparks.

The brainchild of Charles Laterza, 26, treasurer of the Clyde, Ohio, board of education, the trip included games in 10 ballparks, a trip to the Baseball Hall of Fame, the Babe Ruth Shrine, and landmarks in several cities, including the Statue of Liberty in New York City.

Laterza is the fellow who gained fame a few years ago when he originated the Woody Hayes toilet paper that sold so well in Ohio.

Laterza spent $150 for an advertisement in the Sporting News, the national baseball weekly. The wire services picked up the story and fans from all over the United States and Canada responded, including Mrs. Wilcox who read the story in the Observer-Reporter.

She easily persuaded her 12-year-old granddaughter Kerry Niggemyer, of Toledo, to make the trip which cost $849 per person. The baseball started in Detroit and then moved on to Cleveland, New York City, Boston, Cooperstown, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and then ended in Chicago.

The trip, believed to be the first of its kind, covered 3,500 miles and included three, all-night bus trips. The 24-member tour group also stayed in first class hotels, had 21 meals and a limitless supply of beer.

Although one of the group was a bartender by trade, Kerry was commandeered as the bus bartender and they kept her busy during the trip.

Mrs. Wilcox, the sister of former Waynesburg College wrestling coach Bucky Murdoch, felt the high-point of the trip was a visit to the New York Yankee dressing room.

"All those sparkling white uniforms and equipment placed so neatly was breathtaking," Mrs. Wilcox said. "One player — I think it was Louis Tiant — even had a fancy spittoon at his locker."

Many of the passengers thought they were picking up a hitchhiker on a freeway in Connecticut but actually it was 71-year-old Floyd Filson, a retired engineer from Westport, Conn. who had made special arrangements to join the tour along the road.

Randall Palmer, 55, a steelworker from Gary, Ind., and the only black on the bus, considered the trip a huge success. "Look, I've been in a lot of places, and I've met a lot of people. This is the best bunch I've ever been with. Baseball fans, they're the most beautiful people in the world," he said.

David Spillane, 55, a manufacturer's representative from Bryn Mawr and Mrs.

Wilcox' bridge partner during the trip, said of the tour, "It was more than a baseball trip. It was a peoples' trip — real, genuine people with a common interest."

The trip was not without some problems. Brad Betker, 23, a sports writer from Carbondale, Ill., lived on Maalox and crackers during most of the trip.

His ulcer starting acting up on the second day and he spent many hours on the back seat of the bus and even missed a few games, but he stayed with the tour.

Only one fan became lost. Marie Bennet, of Bicporia, Ill. got lost in Pittsburgh, but not for long.

Mrs. Wilcox was a designated hitter for her granddaughter at a Cleveland hotel. It was the only rainout during the tour and several of the fans were in the hotel lobby watching for players.

It was soon learned that Billy Martin was having a drink in the hotel bar but the youngsters could not get inside to ask for an autograph. Mrs. Wilcox said she walked into the bar and lightly placed on her hand on Martin's back.

"I didn't know if he would turn around and slug me or not," she said. No worry, Martin was very pleasant and signed his autograph to Kerry.

The fans on the tour came from Ohio, New York, Arizona, New Jersey, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and even Ontario, Canada. They included a lawyer, a sports writer, retirees, and blue-collar workers.

Mrs. Wilcox had no particular favorite stadium.

"They all had something special — from the homey atmosphere of Fenway Park in Boston to the pretty grass at Tiger Stadium in Detroit," she said. Mrs. Wilcox was especially fascinated by the cleanliness of the stadiums.

Although an even bigger trip is being planned for next year, Mrs. Wilcox doesn't believe she will go again. "I've done that once. Now it's on to something else," she said. A veteran traveler, Mrs. Wilcox toured the British Isles last summer.

Pole Damaged

State police said charges of driving under the influence of alcohol will be filed at a later date against Wayne C. Basinger, 25, of Waynesburg R.D.3 after an electrical pole along PA 218 was damaged Monday night.

Police said Basinger was traveling south on the road when he lost control of his pickup truck and struck the pole. Police said 30 feet of board fence belonging to Glise Mariner of Waynesburg R.D.3 was ripped out.

Jefferson-Morgan Announces Starting Times For Classes

With the first day of classes for the 1980-81 school year to be held Tuesday, Aug. 26, officials of the Jefferson-Morgan School District have announced starting times for secondary and elementary classes in the district.

Secondary school will start at 8 a.m. and end at 2:46 p.m. Elementary school will begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 3:35 p.m.

Elementary classes will be held for the first time this school year in the district's new $4.2 million central elementary building constructed on a site adjoining the junior-senior high school at Jefferson.

School officials said that because of the change in starting times, the bus schedules have been revised to meet the needs and times for buses to make the necessary pick-ups and departures.

Bus schedules have been posted in various locations throughout the district, including the Jefferson and Mather

Post Offices, J. & R. Corner Store at Mather, Rices Landing and Clarksville Post Offices, Rices Landing bank, Dry Tavern auto bank, Davis Giant Market, Clarksville Meat and Grocery, Reese's Sunoco at Clarksville, Joe's Grocery at Chartiers, and the 77 Market across from Greene County Memorial Park.

District officials ask students and parents to check the schedules for their particular areas.

The outlying areas such as Homeville, Castile Run, Sharpnack's Hollow, and the Lippencott area will be very similar to last year's bus pick-up times for both the elementary and secondary students because of the distance runs.

Other bus runs for Mather, Clarksville, Rices Landing, and Dry Tavern will be divided into separate runs for secondary and elementary students where it is possible in order to meet the school starting times without starting pick-ups prior to 7 a.m., school officials said.

Kindergarten students attending the morning sessions will be taken to school on the regular morning transportation and return home after 11:10 a.m. by a scheduled bus. Kindergarten students attending the afternoon session will be taken to school by a scheduled bus and return home on the regular afternoon transportation.

The first bus pick-up for the afternoon kindergarten session will be at noon for all three buses with bus number 202 driven by Jean Belford starting at the YDC area, Route 188, Y-Coff Trailer Court, Homeville Road, Love's Hill, Route 21, Scotts Run Road, Khedive, Jefferson-Khedive Road, Pokeberry Ridge to the elementary school.

Bus number 230 driven by Gae Tretinik will start at noon from Castile Run, Grimes Run, Poverty Run, Lippencott area, Gordon's Loop, Funk's Road, Brown's Run, Stoney Point, Kurtz Trailer Court to the elementary school.

Bus number 229 driven by Bill Crawford will start at noon from south Clarksville, Pitt Gas, Clarksville, GI Town, Brader, Burson, Chartiers Bottom, Chartiers Hill to the elementary school. Officials said parents can gauge pick-up times in their area along the bus run from the noon starting time and place.

School officials said any adjustments or changes in the bus schedule, if necessary, will be made during the first two or three days of school with proper notification made to the parties involved.

Students are also being asked not to drive cars to school for the first three days of school in order that maximum bus loads can be established.

Officials said that if students who normally drive to school intend to ride a bus in bad weather or under other conditions, they must establish their presence on that bus during the first three days of school in order to be able to ride the bus anytime during the school year.

Kindergarten and elementary students who live on the south side of Jefferson, Pine Street towards Haver's Hill and Washington Street, will be picked-up by bus number 228 driven by Betty Santucci. Students living on Greene Street or between Washington Streets and Pine Streets in Jefferson should board the bus on either one of those streets or at the intersection of Pine Street and Greene Street. This particular bus run is listed on the posted bus schedules as run number two for bus number 228.

All elementary students walking from the Jefferson area are asked to use the sidewalk on the right side of the road leading into the elementary building.

Golf Prize Is A 1980 Auto

WAYNESBURG — The Walter Hagen Golf Tournament being sponsored by the Greene County Unit of the American Cancer Society will offer a 1980 Dodge Ram Charger to any golfer who gets a double eagle on the 15th hole at Rohanna's Golf Course.

The new car is being offered by Facemire Motors of Waynesburg. The firm is also sponsoring a four-man, handicap team in Saturday's tournament.

Golfers are reminded that tee-off will be a shotgun start at 10:30 a.m. and registration will be held between 9 and 10 a.m. There are still openings in the handicap and scratch divisions.

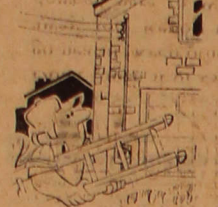

Information and entry blanks are available at all county golf courses.

Are overhead electric lines hazardous?

State agencies have issued a warning to victims of Monday's flash flood to be especially careful of their water supply and garden produce which may have been affected by the high water.

The Department of Environmental Resources (DER) warned that owners of private water supplies should make sure their wells or springs are safe before using them.

Michael Omatic, director of the Fayette-Greene DER office, said he toured several flooded areas Tuesday, including the Brave Water Authority facilities which he declared safe. "Although both deep wells owned by the authority were covered by flood waters, the system was not contaminated," Omatic said.

However, he warned that homeowners with a private water supply should make sure the source is cleaned and disinfected if they have any doubt about safe water.

Omatic also warned that even if wells escaped the flood waters, high water in the general area could cause problems. "If you notice a change in the taste, color or odor of your water there is a possibility contamination exists," Omatic said.

Residents should call either the county DER office at 627-8624 or the Fayette County office at 439-7430 for information on how to clean and disinfect wells or springs.

Local agriculture officials said if flood waters covered a garden, some produce will be unsafe to eat. The safety of unharvested fruits and vegetables will depend on several factors, they said.

In general, fruits and vegetables which were immature at the time of flooding should be safe to eat by the time they are ready for harvest. However, for additional safety officials suggest disinfecting produce and thoroughly cooking it before the produce is eaten.

What precautions should I follow?

Keep all ladders away from electric lines. Pay particular attention when moving an extension ladder so it doesn't fall against the wires.

Also, if installing an antenna or aluminum siding, guard against it coming in contact with the wires.

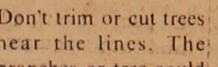

Don't trim or cut trees near the lines. The branches or tree could fall onto the wires and become electrical conductors.

And keep a clearance of 10 feet or more between power lines and boom equipment, post-hole diggers, raised truck beds, and other equipment.

What if I see a fallen wire?

Don't touch it or even go near it. Keep others away, too. Report the downed wire to West Penn Power or to your local fire or police department.

For additional tips, contact the West Penn Power office serving your location for a free copy of "Electrical Safety Outdoors." Or write West Penn Power, c/o The Electric Consumer's Corner, Cabin Hill, Greensburg, PA 15601.

Water, Food May Be Unfit Because Of Flood

By JIM MOORE, Staff Writer

Unless flooding was light and there is no danger of bacterial contamination from flood water, avoid using fruits and vegetables that were ready for harvest at the time of flooding, unless they can be disinfected, peeled, and thoroughly cooked. Some fruits and vegetables are more susceptible than others to bacterial contamination.

Leafy vegetables such as lettuce, cabbage and spinach and fleshy vegetables and berry fruits such as tomatoes and peppers would be highly susceptible to bacterial contamination. Silt and other contaminants might be imbedded in the leaves, stems or other natural openings and could be difficult to remove.

Root, bulb and tuber crops such as beets, carrots, radishes, turnips, onions and potatoes would be less susceptible to bacterial contamination. Disinfect these vegetables, peel and cook them thoroughly before eating.

Produce with a protective fruit or impervious outer skin such as peas, melons, sweet corn or squash should be washed and disinfected before the outer shell, skin or husk is removed. Then shell, peel or husk the produce, and cook it if possible.

Disinfecting can be accomplished by washing in a strong detergent with a scrub brush and removing all silt. You should immerse produce for 15 to 20 minutes in a chlorine solution.

Officials also warn that contaminated food may be a problem. Flood waters may carry silt, raw sewage, oil or chemical wastes. Filth and disease in flood water will contaminate food making it unsafe to eat.

Paul Lora, manager for the Greene County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, said Tuesday that farmers who are enrolled under the 1980 Federal Feed Grain Program may be eligible for financial assistance if their corn or grain fields were ravaged by flood waters.

"In cases where such farmers suffered 40 percent or more in crop losses, they may be eligible and should contact our office at Waynesburg for information," he said.

Farmers who were not enrolled in the feed grain program would not be eligible, he said.

NOTICE OF 1980 PUBLIC DELINQUENT TAX SALE
To the owners of properties described in this notice, and all persons or taxing authorities having such liens, tax judgments or municipal claims against such properties:

In accordance with the provisions of the Act of 1947, P.L. 1368 and its amendments, known as the Real Estate Tax Sale Law, the following described properties will be offered by the Greene County, Pennsylvania, Public Delinquent Tax Sale, at public sale for delinquent taxes in front of the Court House in Waynesburg, Greene County, Pennsylvania, on MONDAY, the 8th day of SEPTEMBER, 1980, at 10:00 A.M. Daylight Savings Time, and continuing thereafter with adjournments and re-adjournments to such other days and times as may be announced at the sale or subsequently advertised.

The purpose of said sale is to dispose of properties against which taxes remain unpaid, the tax claims have become absolute, and the legal period of redemption expires on July 1, 1980. The terms of said sale shall be as follows: No sale of any property shall be made unless the bid equal to the final upset price is made. The approximate upset price is hereinafter set out after the description of each property and including penalties, penalties, returning fees, interest and costs as recorded in the Tax Claim Bureau and the approximate cost of this sale pro-rated. The final upset price will be announced at the time of sale.

The purchaser of any property shall, as soon as the property is struck down, pay the entire purchase money to the Bureau. In case said amount is not paid, the sale shall be voided and the property put up again for sale.

Any taxing districts having municipal claims against any property herein advertised shall file the amount thereof to the Tax Claim Bureau before sale in order to include the same in the final upset price.

The sale of any property herein advertised may, at the option of the owner thereof, or any lien creditor of the owner, before the date of sale, enter into an agreement with the Tax Claim Bureau to pay the taxes in installments in the manner provided by the Act of assembly, and the Agreement entered into.

The Real Estate Tax Sale Law provides: "There shall be no period of redemption after such sale and the sale shall be deemed to pass a good and valid title to the purchaser, free from any liens and encumbrances whatsoever, except such liens as are hereafter specifically saved, and in all respects as valid and effective as if made by Sheriff's deed. Every such sale shall discharge the lien of every obligation, claim, lien or estate with which said property may have been encumbered, or for which it may become liable, except no such sale shall discharge the lien of any ground rent or mortgage which shall have been recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, and which is or shall be prior to all other liens except other mortgages and ground rents."

It is strongly urged that prospective purchasers examine the conditions made of the title to the property in which they are interested. Every reasonable effort has been made to keep these proceedings free from error. However, in every case, the property is offered for sale by the Tax Claim Bureau without any guarantee or warranty whatever, either as to the extent of ownership, size, boundaries, locations, structures or lack of structures upon the land, title or any other matter or thing whatever. No adjustment will be made after the property is struck down.

The properties offered for sale are hereinafter set out by Township or taxing districts and the amount of taxes in arrears in each case is that of the owner or reputed owner in whose name the property was assessed for the taxes returned delinquent to the Tax Claim Bureau.

The 1980 Accrued Taxes will be included in the upset price on the day of the sale, if a record of such tax is furnished to the Bureau by the Tax Collectors:

NOTICE OF 1980 PUBLIC DELINQUENT TAX SALE
To the owners of properties described in this notice, and all persons or taxing authorities having such liens, tax judgments or municipal claims against such properties:

In accordance with the provisions of the Act of 1947, P.L. 1368 and its amendments, known as the Real Estate Tax Sale Law, the following described properties will be offered by the Greene County, Pennsylvania, Public Delinquent Tax Sale, at public sale for delinquent taxes in front of the Court House in Waynesburg, Greene County, Pennsylvania, on MONDAY, the 8th day of SEPTEMBER, 1980, at 10:00 A.M. Daylight Savings Time, and continuing thereafter with adjournments and re-adjournments to such other days and times as may be announced at the sale or subsequently advertised.

The purpose of said sale is to dispose of properties against which taxes remain unpaid, the tax claims have become absolute, and the legal period of redemption expires on July 1, 1980. The terms of said sale shall be as follows: No sale of any property shall be made unless the bid equal to the final upset price is made. The approximate upset price is hereinafter set out after the description of each property and including penalties, penalties, returning fees, interest and costs as recorded in the Tax Claim Bureau and the approximate cost of this sale pro-rated. The final upset price will be announced at the time of sale.

The purchaser of any property shall, as soon as the property is struck down, pay the entire purchase money to the Bureau. In case said amount is not paid, the sale shall be voided and the property put up again for sale.

Any taxing districts having municipal claims against any property herein advertised shall file the amount thereof to the Tax Claim Bureau before sale in order to include the same in the final upset price.

The sale of any property herein advertised may, at the option of the owner thereof, or any lien creditor of the owner, before the date of sale, enter into an agreement with the Tax Claim Bureau to pay the taxes in installments in the manner provided by the Act of assembly, and the Agreement entered into.

The Real Estate Tax Sale Law provides: "There shall be no period of redemption after such sale and the sale shall be deemed to pass a good and valid title to the purchaser, free from any liens and encumbrances whatsoever, except such liens as are hereafter specifically saved, and in all respects as valid and effective as if made by Sheriff's deed. Every such sale shall discharge the lien of every obligation, claim, lien or estate with which said property may have been encumbered, or for which it may become liable, except no such sale shall discharge the lien of any ground rent or mortgage which shall have been recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, and which is or shall be prior to all other liens except other mortgages and ground rents."

It is strongly urged that prospective purchasers examine the conditions made of the title to the property in which they are interested. Every reasonable effort has been made to keep these proceedings free from error. However, in every case, the property is offered for sale by the Tax Claim Bureau without any guarantee or warranty whatever, either as to the extent of ownership, size, boundaries, locations, structures or lack of structures upon the land, title or any other matter or thing whatever. No adjustment will be made after the property is struck down.

The properties offered for sale are hereinafter set out by Township or taxing districts and the amount of taxes in arrears in each case is that of the owner or reputed owner in whose name the property was assessed for the taxes returned delinquent to the Tax Claim Bureau.

The 1980 Accrued Taxes will be included in the upset price on the day of the sale, if a record of such tax is furnished to the Bureau by the Tax Collectors:

Betty L. Morris, Director
GREENE COUNTY TAX CLAIM BUREAU
