West Greene Approves Revised Building Program

By ROBIN ROBERTS
Staff Writer

ALEPPO — The West Greene School Board late Wednesday night approved a revised building program which calls for the elimination of a large gymnasium addition included in plans rejected in June.

District Superintendent Elliott LeFaiver, in a presentation to the board, explained that the district is faced with making an addition to the existing high school building because of crowded classrooms and a lack of storage space and modern laboratory facilities.

He noted that each month the district delayed in making its decision to construct the addition and make renovations, it was losing in the neighborhood of $50,000.

The superintendent, who came to the district in July, a month after the board had rejected earlier construction and renovation plans, also told the board and an audience of approximately 80 people that the addition of the middle school complex to the high school building would help alleviate crowded conditions in the district's three elementary schools.

LeFaiver's revised plans are basically the same as those rejected by the board in June, but greatly reduce the dimensions of the physical education facilities.

The new gymnasium called for in the first set of drawings is eliminated in the revised plans, but a 3,500 square foot remedial and auxiliary gymnasium remains.

The revised plans calls for a kindergarten through fifth grade elementary program, a sixth through eighth grade program in the middle school addition, and a four-year high school program in the existing building, which will undergo extensive renovation.

LeFaiver told the board that it has already expended over $400,000 on the plans for the project and that if the revised proposal was not approved the money would in no way be recoverable.

With the elimination of the large gymnasium area, the cost of the program would drop from the $6.55 million bid price in June to an estimated $5.5 million.

The superintendent said his revised program would also increase state reimbursement from 30 percent on the original plan to 34 percent on the revised proposal. He said by eliminating the large gymnasium area, taxpayers in the district would be saved between one and two mills per year over the life of any bond issue needed to finance the building project.

He said if the proposal was approved, he hoped the district could accept bids by early spring, have ground breaking during the summer of 1981, and occupy the building in the fall of 1982.

"I feel we have only three alternatives: Accept the original plan, the revised plan, or do nothing at all," LeFaiver told the board.

In a brief, prepared statement from Ron Jesso, president of the West Greene Education Association, the district's teachers' union, the revised plan received the endorsement of the educators.

Board member Rich Barnhart made a motion that LeFaiver's proposal be rejected and the motion was seconded by Roger Stalnaker.

However, a vote on the motion was defeated by a 7-2 margin with board members, Tom Braddock, Jim Helphenstine, Bill Zeifel, Frank Johnston, Bob Andrew, Lawrence Headlee and Roger Grimes voting not to kill the plan.

Headlee then made a motion to accept LeFaiver's proposal and received a second from Helphenstine.

But, before the board was able to vote on the motion, Zeifel asked that the two reconsider their motion. Headlee refused and Johnston then asked that the motion be tabled for three months before reconsideration. Again, Headlee refused.

Headlee's motion carried by a narrow 5-4 vote, with Braddock, Headlee, Andrew, Helphenstine and Grimes voting in favor of the motion, and Stalnaker, Zeifel, Barnhart and Johnston voting against.

In other action on the board:

- Accepted the resignation of Marlys Closser, effective at the end of the first semester and approved Grace Riggall as a cafeteria substitute.
- Hired Carol Houser as assistant girls' basketball coach and Earl Finney as assistant wrestling coach.
- Approved Hurbert Petrie

- as a bus driver.
- Heard a report from Stalnaker, building and sites committee chairman, on a study being made of track facilities at the high school. He said an engineer has been contacted to look at the existing site.
- Gave high school principal Paul Polink permission to make approximately four trips per school year to Harrisburg as Intermediate Unit I liaison to the Department of Education.
- Applied for $7,537 in Title IV-B funds for the elementary and secondary library program.
- Employed four to six students involved in the Intermediate Unit's Work-Study Program. The students will

- work with the custodial staff and will be paid $1.55 per hour, half of the minimum wage. The cost to the district for the program will be approximately $2,300.
- Tabled action on a list of goals established in the areas of education, administration and school board, presented by LeFaiver, until the board can further study the superintendent's recommendations.
- Granted permission to the New Freeport Volunteer Fire Co. to use the grounds of the Springhill Freeport Elementary School for an activity to be held Nov. 15.
- Voted to allow two members of the student council to attend all board meetings and have input into decisions made by the board.

Coal Owners Association Seeks Grant For Study On Natural Gas Recovery

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Coal Owners Association (GCCOA), a group of individuals from the county who have organized their coal holdings into a huge block, has applied to the United States Department of Energy (DOE) for an $885,840 grant to conduct a 12-month feasibility study for recovering and using unconventional natural gas from the coal seams.

The proposal, the second filed with DOE by the group, involves Emway Resources Inc. (which recently purchased the Emerald Coal Mine in West Waynesburg), Westinghouse Electric Corp., and the engineering firm of L. Robert Kimble and Associates.

The feasibility study approach focuses on the concept of integrating the functions of ventilation planning and early degasification of the coal in an active coal mine.

The process would involve drilling a large borehole, perhaps 12 to 15 feet in diameter, on property belonging to the Emerald Coal Mine at a site where the mine will eventually wish to place a ventilation shaft.

The borehole may be used as an access to coal formations for early removal of methane gas from the coal seams several years before the coal is to be mined, thus making it safer to mine the coal. Later the borehole will serve as a ventilation shaft for the coal mining operation.

Methane will be recovered from the coal seam by drilling a series of small, horizontal boreholes into the exposed coal from the larger borehole.

The gas removed from the coal could then be injected into a commercial natural gas pipeline on the site. The process would have the combined effect of degasification of the coal seam and producing a supply of gas which is currently not being used commercially.

Tony Hartlage, president of the GCCOA, recently said that the coal company has been looking at ways of turning methane gas, which is very prevalent in most county coal seams, into a useful product. He noted that most attempts by coal companies to accomplish this "have been thwarted."

The coal owners currently control approximately 115,000 acres of coal, other than Pittsburgh, in the county, according to Hartlage. He said his group has discussed the proposal with area gas companies, which seem interested in the proposal. He also said that the lack of ownership by the GCCOA has caused some complications.

Hartlage estimates that, if completed, the plan could produce as much as four million standard cubic feet of methane per day.

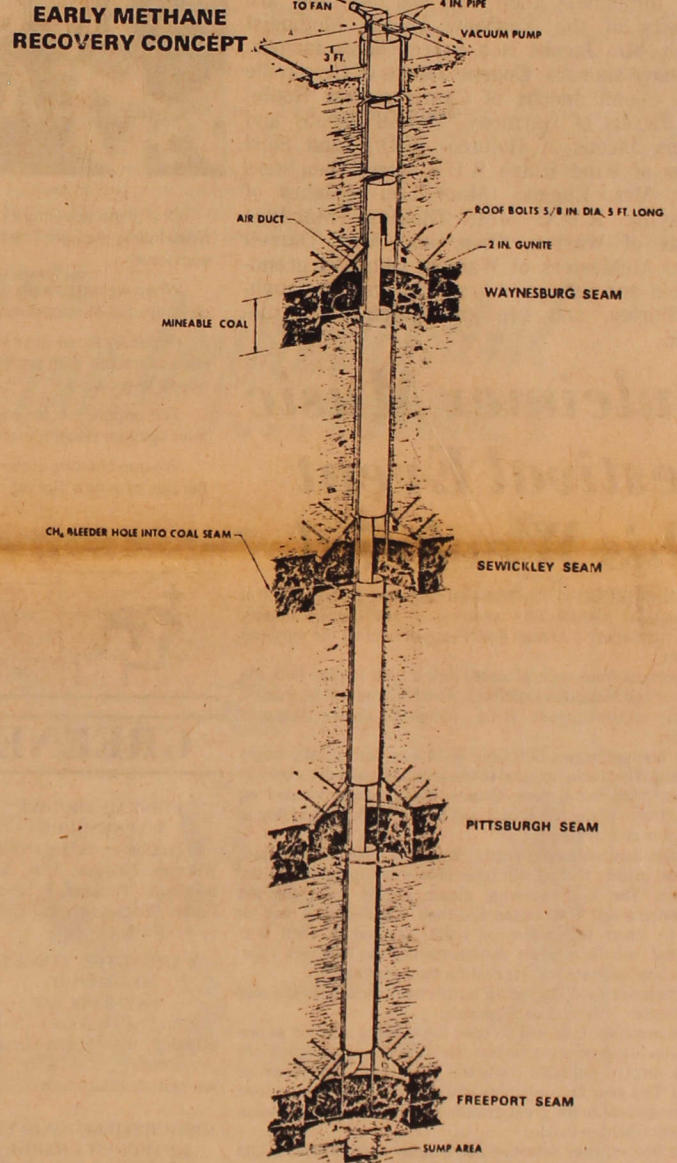

Hartlage also points out that the concept is not a new one, but that prior experiences have been restricted to a single coal seam.

"We propose to extend the concept of using a single large diameter borehole to four major coal seams, including the Pittsburgh seam," Hartlage said. "The small diameter, horizontal boreholes, with no stimulation of the coal formations, has been in use over a period of years by the mining industry to gasify virgin coals of high gas content."

According to the grant request, the feasibility study will address two basic options for using the recovered methane — pipeline injection and power generation. A basis for selecting one or the other of these options, or perhaps a combination of both, could benefit both the coal owners and the coal company.

Two alternate sites for the large-diameter borehole have been indicated in the study, both southwest of Waynesburg.

The drawing shows how methane would be removed from coal seams.

Voters Register

WAYNESBURG — Greene County will have 17,478 persons eligible to vote in the presidential election next month.

The county registration office said Tuesday that 1,042 persons registered between the primary election last spring and the sign-up deadline on Oct. 7. This was partially offset by removal from the rolls of 111 persons who have died and 53 who have moved from the county since the last election, leaving a net gain of 878 voters over the 16,600 persons who were registered for the primary election.

"The number of persons who registered was well above average for the county," Mrs. Betty Ray, chief registration clerk said.

Of the 1,042 new voters, 639 signed up as Democrats, 294 as Republicans, 109 as Independents, and one person as a member of the Citizens party.

The current rolls have 13,203 Democrats, 3,873 Republicans, 397 Independents, two "no party", one Constitutional Party member, and one Citizens party member, pretty much maintaining the traditional three-to-one Democratic majority.

Fun Run Scheduled

The Greene County Miners Track Club will sponsor an eight kilometer fun run, a cross country run and a race walk, this Sunday, Oct. 26, at Waynesburg Central High School.

The fun run will be open, in varying age groups, to people aged 13 and up. The entry fee for the fun run is $5 if received prior to Oct. 22 and $6 until race time. The race will start at 11 a.m. and registration will begin at 10 a.m.

Colored, imprinted T-shirts will be awarded to all competitors and medals on chains will be given to the top three finishers in each age group.

Run officials said the course will be well-monitored and is fairly level.

Herds Active Now

WAYNESBURG — Greene County's two game protectors — Steve Kleiner, who is responsible for the western portions of the county, and Bob Shaffer, whose responsibilities are in the eastern half of the county — have issued a warning to county motorists.

In just two days this week (Monday and Tuesday), the two, along with their deputies, have picked up at least 13 road killed deer on county highways.

Kleiner, who has been called to pick up some of the deer, said Tuesday that this is the time of year when road-kills are more common, but noted that this week's toll was "staggering."

"It's the time of year when deer are in rut (breeding), and they travel a lot more and do some crazy things. In addition to that, the start of small game season (the early small game season opened last Saturday) causes increased activity in deer herds.

"We urge district motorists to use caution when driving, especially at night, when visibility is limited, and in areas of known deer 'traffic'."

Persons who do strike a deer should contact either of the game protectors or one of their deputies. They are not required to report it to state police.

Deputy Game Protector Ronnie Martin of Ruff Creek, picked up this eight-point, 211-pound trophy on Route 19 North this weekend.

Waste Authority Gets FHA Application Okay

WAYNESBURG — The Northeastern Greene County Solid Waste Disposal Authority Wednesday received approval for its pre-application to the Farmers' Home Administration of the U. S. Department of Agriculture for a $300,000 low-interest loan for the construction of a transfer station in the Mather area.

Just last week the authority was notified by Congressman Austin J. Murphy's office that it had been awarded a $75,000 FHA grant to be used for land acquisition and development of the transfer station. In addition, the authority also received a $7,500 grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources to pay for engineering and legal counsel for the project.

FHA's approval of the authority's pre-application means the authority is eligible for funding by that agency and a final application may be submitted. The complete application for the loan must be completed and sent to the FHA by Feb. 15, 1981. A representative of the authority will meet Nov. 5 at 1 p.m. with the FHA to discuss the final application.

The authority is composed of 10 municipalities in the northeastern quadrant of Greene County. They include: Carmichaels, Waynesburg, Clarksville, Rices Landing and Jefferson Boroughs, and Morgan, Jefferson, Cumberland, Franklin and Washington Townships.

The loan was applied for in the name of Waynesburg Borough, whose landfill, which has been ordered closed by the Department of Environmental Resources, is being utilized by a number of the municipalities which are members of the authority.

Waynesburg Borough Manager, James Ealy, said he was "very pleased to hear of approval of the pre-application."

Under the existing plan, a site will be developed in the Mather area where garbage haulers from all of participating municipalities will take the refuse where it will be compacted and later hauled to a certified landfill outside of the county, probably to Fayette County.

Authority solicitor William Hook, who announced that the pre-application had been approved by FHA, said Wednesday afternoon if the final application receives approval the authority hopes to be able to start construction of the transfer station by spring and that the station should be operational by summer of 1981.

County Court Names Officer

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court Wednesday appointed William A. Folmar, 21, Kylertown, as a county adult probation and parole officer intern, effective Nov. 1.

The appointment fills a vacancy created by the death of George Evanchek.

Folmar graduated this year from Pennsylvania State University, where he majored in the administration of justice. While in college he served internships with the sheriff and adult probation offices in Clearfield County.

The court set his annual salary at $10,440.

HIDING

One of the adventures of Autumn is hiding in a pile of leaves. Not really hiding, though. The fun is in poking your head out and surprising someone!

When we're growing up, every season brings its adventures. Our days are full of opportunities for having fun.

Hopefully those days will also be marked by adventures that help build character. With each passing season the soul as well as the body needs to grow.

The opportunity for youngsters whose families are concerned for their spiritual development is in religious education.

We don't belong under the debris of Fall — our convictions are the heralds of a new Spring.

Dulcimer Music Festival Event This Weekend

WAYNESBURG — The National Dulcimer Convention will be a special feature this weekend at the Greene County Historical Society's Annual Fall Festival held on the museum grounds.

Musicians from several states will attend to play both the Hammer and Mountain Dulcimer. Also honored will be Russell Fluharty of Mannington, W.Va., nationally known Dulcimer musician.

The festival begins Saturday at 10 a.m. and shuttle buses providing free transportation to the grounds will leave every 20 minutes from the Greene County Fairgrounds, located on Route 21 west of the I-79 Exit 3, and the Ft. Jackson building in the center of Waynesburg.

Artists demonstrating crafts, including woodcutting, spinning and leather tooling will have booths set up outside of the museum. Report Calls For Action To Prepare For Coal Boom

PITTSBURGH — An anticipated coal boom centered on western Greene County and southwestern Washington County may not materialize as early as originally expected, but this does not mean that it won't come or that steps shouldn't be taken to get ready for it.

This is the thrust of a report issued last week by the Pennsylvania Land Policy Project, an activity of the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy, which concludes that there is still an urgent need for action to get ready for major development.

It points out the current softness in the coal industry merely provides some additional time to prepare for the impact such development will have in terms of increased pollution, congested roads, crowded schools, housing shortages and potential loss of those rural qualities that now lend the region much of its charm.

The report, "Coal and Its Consequences: Outlook for the '80's for Greene, Washington and Fayette Counties, Pennsylvania," was sponsored by the Commonwealth and funded through a grant from the Economic Development Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

It suggests ways in which the region can capitalize on the unique economic opportunities presented by large scale underground mining development and related activities, while holding their adverse social and environmental consequences to a minimum.

It points out that the present market for coal is weak due to cutbacks in steel, slowed growth in demands for electricity, and a national recession.

"Instead of the boom that had been forecast the counties are suffering from slackening economic activity and rising unemployment," it states. "Yet as the national economy recovers and energy policies take firm shape, it seems undeniable that demands for coal will trigger major initiatives to recover the areas's enormous underground deposits.

"In fact, it seems likely that the region will be the focus of more development activity in a relatively short span of time than has ever been experienced by a rural area in the Commonwealth."

While the anticipated new mining activities will be centered in western Greene County and southwestern Washington County, the study sees the overall industrial development as being regional in scope.

"Large users of coal, such as synfuel plants and coal-fired power stations can be expected to locate in the area. Secondary development — manufacturing plants, retail businesses and service industries — also will be drawn to the region. Thus...energy-related developments will be expanded throughout the three counties as well as in adjoining areas of West Virginia."

The report deals at length with the need for additional sources of water, not only for the mines and related developments, but for residential use; improved sewer services; improved highways and other means of transportation; the need to provide adequate housing to meet an expanding population; and the need to improve the capability of local governments to finance needed community services and facilities and to carry out adequate land use planning programs.

A major recommendation in the report is the organization of a tri-county council on energy development, with participants including representatives from borough and township governments, municipal authorities, and selected state and federal agencies to help speed decisions on major development actions, resolve controversies, and channel technical and financial assistance when and where needed.

"The council would be led by the three counties and supported by the state. It would not duplicate existing government programs but serve as a forum to help resolve problems, and capitalize on opportunities generated by major mining and energy-related activities."

The report points out that lack of communication between corporations planning major developments and public officials often helps compound problems and that large-scale development will invariably engender opposition from those who "fear that such operations will virtually destroy the rural way of life and environmental assets now enjoyed by the region."

The tri-county council, it notes, could provide a forum for addressing these issues.

It also suggests that the state must recognize the needs of the three counties "in some special and tangible way" through utilizing the powers of the state to organize energy impact assistance and other technical and financial aid.

"The newly-established Economic Development Subcommittee of the (governor's) cabinet is an appropriate point of leadership for such an effort," it states.

The report also presents information on the importance of coal to the region, including its history, current situation and future prospects, and includes a profile of the principal physical, economic and social characteristics of the three counties. It points out that nearly half of the bituminous coal reserves in Pennsylvania are located in the area, with an estimated four billion tons in Greene County alone.

"If coal is to be our basic energy resource for the rest of this century, as widely predicted, this region seems certain to be an important source of supply for Pennsylvania, the Northeast, and even international markets," it concludes.

The Pennsylvania Land Policy Project, which prepared the report on the basis of a year of research, was organized in 1974 and is directed by Arthur A. Davis of Pittsburgh as a function of the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy. The 71-page report was prepared under the direction of Davis and Raymond R. Christman, a research associate with the agency.

Local Hospital Officials Defend Intent Of Teen Health Program

WAYNESBURG — A swirl of controversy has arisen over the Teen Health Program operated by Greene County Memorial Hospital.

Concern is being expressed by several ministers and a group of parents who fear the program will put the individual rights of juvenile girls above "parental rights," in terms of providing sex counseling and services.

Hospital Administrator Michael Flinn said Tuesday that he does not feel the fears are justified, stating the program will never make abortion referrals or provide birth control pills or devices to those seeking services. "and will always, whenever possible, involve the participation of the family" in providing services.

People who are objecting to the program have formed an informal organization they are calling "Concerned Parents." They will hold a meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 19, in the 4-H building at the Greene County Fairgrounds to discuss their concerns and to prepare for a public meeting on the hospital program which is to be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 23, in Benedum Hall at Waynesburg College.

"We feel the hospital has been less than candid in telling people about the Teen Health Program," said one parent who asked to remain anonymous. "People with teen-age girls have a right to be concerned when a young girl can go to the hospital and receive counseling on a pregnancy or other sex matters without their parents being told about it. It's one more example where the state is taking over the rights of parents and contributing to the breakdown of families."

The parent also charged that the application which the hospital made for a federal grant to fund the program specifically provided that abortion referrals would be made when the teen-ager requested it, without parental knowledge or consent.

In response, Flinn said the application was amended to delete any such reference, but that in any event the funding application had been rejected by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. "The program is being run and financed by the hospital, and no other application has been submitted," he said.

He also stressed that in cases of teen-age pregnancies, two options, and two options only, will be advised.

"We will counsel adoption or keeping the child," he said. "Should the client make up her mind to seek another solution, she will be told she must make her own arrangements."

Flinn also said "we are urging parental involvement in every applicable case. It is a part of our program."

He pointed out, however, that both state law and court decisions demand recognition of the individual rights of people even if they are under the age of 18, and that this applies to every program which the hospital or any other agency provides.

Flinn also said that the concerns being expressed involve just one part of the Teen Health Program, which is staffed by a nurse practitioner and a patient educator.

"We are making available counseling on nutrition, value clarification, dermatology and a whole spectrum of services," he said. He added that any parents with questions about the program can feel free to contact him at the hospital.

Home Health Care Celebrated In State

WAYNESBURG — The Home Health Program at Greene County Memorial Hospital, which was initiated during early 1979, is receiving special tribute this month.

Governor Dick Thornburgh has proclaimed October Pennsylvania Home Health Care Month to call attention to services provided by these organizations, 80 of which are represented by the Pennsylvania Association of Home Health Agencies.

Both agency and hospital-based home health care organizations make approximately two million professional visits annually into homes, offering a variety of services such as physical, speech and occupational therapy, skilled nursing, social work, dietary instruction and counseling, homemaking help and distribution of medical supplies.

"The various benefits of home health services include more rapid patient recovery, earlier discharge from the hospital, reduction in hospital readmissions, improved patient emotional well-being and savings over costs of institutional care," Gov. Thornburgh said in his proclamation.

Greene County Memorial Hospital's program, headed by Mary Zsiros, made 1,094 visits into the home during the one-year period from February 1979 to February 1980. Some 187 patients were admitted to the program during that period, more than one-third of them being homebound patients over the age of 80. A number of these patients had metabolic, orthopedic, neurological, urological, pulmonary, cardiovascular or gastrointestinal problems.

Four guidelines are used to determine an individual's eligibility for the program. The patient must be: essentially home-bound, willing to accept the program, under the care of a physician, and must reside within the designated area (Greene County and up to five air miles outside the county line).

Jail Dedication Scheduled

WAYNESBURG — An address by Judge Glenn Toothman will highlight a brief dedication program at 2 p.m. Friday, Oct. 24, at the new Greene County jail, located on old Route 21 adjoining the Curry Memorial Home.

Jail tours will be held following the dedication program. The facility will also be open for public inspection from noon to 5 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday. The jail will be placed in service on Monday.

The dedication program will begin with invocation by the Rev. James D. Donahoo of Clarksville, who will serve as Assisting Mrs. Zsiros with the program are Ruth Wade, supervisor, Kathleen Connolly, Robin Martin and Jeanine Duke, all registered nurses, and Susan Six, secretary.

Helen Litman, assistant administrator for nursing services, is director of the program and Dr. John C. Buterbaugh is medical consultant. A professional advisory committee, consisting of 12 members, meets several times during the year to discuss home health care.

Persons seeking information about the program can contact Mrs. Zsiros at the hospital from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Two Charged With Assault

WAYNESBURG — A Greensboro area man and a juvenile have been charged in connection with a fight Oct. 4 in which two men were injured to the point where they required hospital treatment.

Kurt Anthony Hainzer, 19, Greensboro R.D.1, for whom a warrant had been issued, gave himself up Monday at the state police barracks in Waynesburg. He was arraigned before Magistrate Emil Bertugli of Carmichaels on charges of aggravated assault, recklessly endangering another person and criminal mischief, and was subsequently lodged in the Greene County jail. Bail was set at $5,000.

Police said a juvenile petition will be brought against the other suspect, who was released into the custody of his parents.

Police identified the injured men as Eric Michael and Ron Cumberland, both of Greensboro R.D.1. They said Michael was treated at the Uniontown Hospital for a head laceration inflicted by a bicycle chain, while Cumberland was treated for a knife wound of the chest.

Two Charged With Assault

WAYNESBURG — An antique show and sale will be held at the Waynesburg Elks Club Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 25 and 26, as a fund raiser for Hospice of Greene County.

Dealers from throughout the tri-state area are expected to display their wares.

The Hospice Association of Greene County is a legally incorporated, non-profit organization.

Hospice itself was established by concerned county residents to assure that terminally ill persons in the county would be able to choose to spend their final days in a familiar environment with compassionate care from their families, medical professionals, and other concerned members of the community.

Installing New Phone System

West Penn Power Company is installing a completely new telephone system at its Jefferson Division office to better service customers.

Beginning Monday, October 20, West Penn will have twice as many telephone lines between its offices in Brownsville, Carmichaels and Waynesburg. The system will enable more employees to answer incoming calls.

Although West Penn officials anticipate no difficulties in changing over to the new equipment, they said such a major installation could delay getting through during the transitional period.

The West Penn telephone number will remain the same, according to F. J. Bogan, manager of the Jefferson Division.

Christmas Comes Early For Bobtown Minister

BOBTOWN — Christmas came early this year for Rev. Rudy Mayak, pastor of the Bobtown and Mt. Calvary United Methodist Church.

A student at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, Rev. Mayak has been serving the two local churches for the past year. Five days each week, he travels to Pittsburgh to attend school.

Until recently, Mayak had nursed his old car up and down Interstate 79 and prayed each day the 80,000-mile veteran would not break down along the way. His luck ran out on several occasions. He had five flat tires, muffler trouble and a myriad of other troubles. His troubles touched the heart of a Mt. Calvary parishioner, Mrs. Evelyn Smith, who decided to do something about it. Her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Linda Smith, also of the Mt. Calvary Church, was an immediate volunteer to help.

They called Mrs. Connie Fell, a member of the Bobtown church, and members of both churches were soon working toward a dependable car for their pastor.

After only a week, 28 church members had come up with the funds to purchase a 1980 Volkswagen Rabbit from Scott Motors in Washington. The speechless Mayak and his wife Chris were presented with the keys at an informal ceremony at the Washington car agency on Oct. 6.

Following the presentation, the entire group gathered for a fellowship lunch at the home of Mrs. Wayne Smith in Headlee Heights. Centerpiece for the lunch was a miniature Volkswagen and a huge cake topped with a toy car.

Mrs. Mayak told the group, "I could believe this happening to Billy Graham or Oral Roberts but not to Rudy Mayak." Mayak, who considered a new car just an impossible dream, has dubbed his new vehicle, "The Miracle Car."

The Mayaks and their daughter Megan reside at Garards Fort.

Scholarship Aid Program Paying Off For County

Two years ago the Greene County commissioners agreed to undertake a unique program of providing $30,000 a year in financial support for Waynesburg College, to be used in providing scholarship assistance to students from the county.

Apparently it is paying off even better than expected.

The 197 Greene County students enrolled at the college this fall represents a 40 percent increase over last year, and a 234 percent increase since 1970.

College President Joseph F. Marsh feels a significant part of that increase is the result of increased awareness among county residents of programs at the college and of the expanded financial aid opportunities made possible by the continued support of the county commissioners and other organizations. Not only are county students receiving $233,722 in state and federal aid, but they have qualified for $118,000 in college grants funded by the county and private sector sources.

The program has, to a great extent, enabled Waynesburg College to be competitive with state institutions which, combined with its reputation for academic opportunities, makes it an attractive alternative for college-bound students from the county.

The county support is not a one-way street. The college, with an annual payroll in excess of $3 million and a total operating budget of $5.4 million, has a substantial impact on the economy of the county. More than 75 members of the faculty and staff own homes in the county and scores of students shop and bank in the community.

It has to be unusual when a county helps finance a scholarship program for a private college. But it is easy to justify in terms of the help it provides students from the county and by the role it plays in contributing to the well being of an institution which is a very important part of Greene County.

Between The Bookends

Marcia McKenna Biddle

"Father in a Fix," by Neil Boyd. William Morrow Co. $9.95.

"That woman could put a tank out of action with a knife and fork," says Father Duddleswell in describing his housekeeper.

In turn, the housekeeper, Mrs. Pring, often remarks on seeing the approach of Father Duddleswell. "Here comes the Great Depression."

Obviously, this book is very Irish—sarcastic, witty, and warm. If it weren't for "Going My Way," it would be the definitive work on the wit and adventures of an elderly Irish priest and his young assistant, and it's delightful to read. Father Neil, the young assistant, is not as much of a know-it-all as Bing Crosby was in that movie, and Father Duddleswell is even sharper-tongued than was Barry Fitzgerald.

The author graduated from the Gregorian University in Rome and has written many scholarly theological works. He must have had great fun writing this one, with its old-fashioned humor about daily life in the parish.

As the story opens, Father Neil is making his New Year's resolution for 1951. It is, "Wise up." He has been at St. Jude's in West London for six months, and is sure he has aged ten years. He knows he is entirely too naive, and he needs to "become more a man of the world." To achieve this goal, he subscribes to the London Times, determines to read Cardinal Newman and Dostoevsky, and to make a study of Impressionist paintings.

But these good intentions come to nothing, as Father Neil plunges into good works and, as often as not, into trouble. His first problem of the new year comes when a wealthy parishioner asks for his help. It seems she has stolen a couple of pairs of stockings and now feels guilty. She would like Father Neil to help her return them. He agrees, only to discover that she has 40,000 pairs to return. Father Neil's solution to the problem naturally leads to encounters with the police.

Further misadventures occur when Billy Buzzle, the gambler next door, wins a pair of pigs and installs them in his yard. Father Duddleswell declares war. Carving knife in hand, he "was scampering off in search of retribution." Billy Buzzle, That Adomination of Desolation. Now his odious bloody pig is trespassing on me land."

After the pig invades the church, he mysteriously disappears — kidnapped by the good father, says Billy Buzzle, and everybody ends up in court again.

Father Duddleswell has, of course, a heart of gold. As Mrs. Pring says, "In spite of his gall-stone face, he is that generous he would burn his harp to warm your toes." As an act of kindness, he invites Father Neil to a soccer match, where an announcement is suddenly made over a loudspeaker:

"Will the Reverend Father Charles Duddleswell please return to his church where a bride and groom are waiting to be wed."

"Even the players walking out of the tunnel on to the pitch were falling about," observed Father Neil. "I guessed that for many spectators this was the only bright spot in a goalless afternoon. Certainly it received the biggest cheer." This escapade is far from over, we know. With gentle, delicate humor, there is much more to come. And if you happen to have an Irish grandmother, here's her Christmas present.

Trick-Or-Treat

WAYNESBURG — Trick or Treat Night will be held at the Curry Memorial Home at 6 p.m. Friday, Oct. 31.

Children up to the age of 12 are welcome to participate, but must be accompanied by an adult.

Faces From The Past—Do You Recognize Them?

Terrance (Terry) Dorricott, a native of Scotland who with other members of his family lived at Crucible during the organizing days of the UMWA in Greene County in the late 1920's and early 1930's, is shown at left as he appeared in a rally and speaking program at Waynesburg with a visiting UMWA official from Pittsburgh. He also played bagpipes at many of the union parades and rallies. Dorricott has lived in Cleveland for several years.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

The recent death in Louisiana of Raymond Cummings, a former Waynesburg resident and one of three brothers who for years were owners of the former Downey House barber shop, later known as the Fort Jackson barber shop, reminded many of the shop's former patrons that Charles Bosworth is now the only living man who was among the regular staff which worked in both shops.

Hundreds of memories of the two shops were recalled by the relatively few former patrons of the establishments.

The Downey House shop was located on the Washington Street side of the original Downey House hotel building. When the hotel burned in the fire of Dec. 23, 1925, the exquisite eight-chair shop operated by the Cummings Brothers — Harry, Roy J. and Raymond — was swept out of existence.

The three later reopened their shop under the banner of the Fort Jackson Hotel which replaced the Downey building.

The three original owner were sons of Michael Cummings, an oil and gas man who came to Greene County from the "upper country" of northern Pennsylvania where oil was first discovered. After following its trail south to Greene County, the older Cummings remained in Waynesburg until he died.

Travelling men of the early 1900's, most of them salesmen, or "drummers" as they were also known, said the shop was one of the best equipped and most ornate of any outside Pittsburgh.

Much of its splendor has been preserved in Fred High's pictorial history of Waynesburg, circa 1905, that includes a flash powder picture of the interior of the shop, which was the general way of illuminating an indoor picture at that time.

It shows only six chairs, but later two were added to the parallel rows of chairs facing the north and south walls. Hair trimmings were kept swept up almost as they fell on the multicolored tile floor which was kept spotless by vigorous moppings several times during the day.

The walls were covered with mural paintings of outdoor scenes done by professional artists from Pittsburgh. All of the barber chairs were covered with finely-finished leather, as were the chairs and upholstered benches of solid oak or mahogany provided for those awaiting their turn.

Electrically propelled, overhead fans kept patrons from being annoyed by the many flies that invaded any indoor public facilities such as storerooms and restaurants in that pre-air conditioned era.

It was, in short, a city-type barber shop in a small town in which there were then many affluent residents, many of whom came into their money by selling coal from the Pittsburgh vein to millionaires such as Henry Clay Frick of Pittsburgh or J.V. Thompson of Uniontown.

Many other Greene Countians became wealthy from the sale of fine wool used in men's clothing and other apparel, or from the sale of livestock. Others made money from independently-owned oil and gas wells. At any rate, their affluence was reflected in the town's leading barber shop, which occupied the room which now houses the state public health clinic.

Among other touches of elegance which we lost when the original Downey House shop burned was the big collection of ornately decorated shaving mugs kept at the shop by its patrons. They were reserved for their own use, along with their own shaving brush, to "lather up" their beards before, as many wags commented, "having their whiskers whittled."

That, of course, was long before anyone even thought of dreaming up an electric razor, and even before the day of the safety razor. All shaves were given with the old-fashioned straight razor, and the slightest twitch the wrong way could inflict a deep gash that often took weeks to heal.

The straight razor thus automatically eliminated just about anyone suffering from St. Vitus dance from being a barber or even from taking the risk of shaving himself.

A complete list of barbers at the Downey House and its successor was never compiled, but there were many real good ones, such as the late William (Billy) Cree; the late Bill DeWeese, whose grandson and namesake is now a state legislator; Raymond Crawford; Lawrence Chess, one of the very early barbers at the Downey House; the late Gerald Jones; Millard Stockdale, who is still working, and Jerry Rishell.

Residents knowing of any others still working or living are asked to phone or mail their names to The Republican at Waynesburg so that a fascinating aspect of which is rapidly becoming a part of the past can be preserved.

Thanks, Folks! You Make It Work

To The Editor,

I think its about time we give thanks where it is due. I want to thank Robin, Jim, Christie, Bob and Stan in the Greene County office of the Observer-Reporter. If there has been a fire I call the office and the minute I call they know what I want.

I do volunteer work with the needy or when a family loses their home and all of their belongings. I put a write up in the paper asking for what I need. No one can believe how the Waynesburg people respond with clothing, food and furniture. When I get a good response my day is made and I always get a good night's sleep. Waynesburg is a wonderful place to live. I can never give enough thanks to everyone. I am working with the Mary Cross family from Brave which lost everything in their house in the recent floods and now its gone again following last week's fire. Water you can clean up, but with fire everything is lost.

I also wish to thank the radio station, they have also been a wonderful help. Here it's a first name "Hello."

Well, thanks again to everyone. You all are wonderful, the Greene County pages say everything.

Commissioners Will Consider Appointing Safety Coordinator

By BOB EICHENLAUB
Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners were asked Tuesday to consider the appointment of a public safety director to coordinate the operation of all emergency services in the county.

The suggestion was made at the commissioners' semi-weekly meeting by Dr. Stanley Falor, emergency room physician at Greene County Memorial Hospital and a member of the Greene County Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Council.

He said the idea came out of an EMS Council meeting held this week and was generated by the fact that CETA eligibility for Joni Jai Clutter, the EMS coordinator, will expire in January.

"The council feels that if this position were upgraded to a full-time county post held by a qualified person with a master's degree in public safety or industrial safety, it could be very valuable as a focus for coordinating all of the county's emergency services," he said. Dr. Falor indicated that the Greene County Firemen's Association, which has been meeting with the EMS Council, is interested in the idea, as are Larry Marshall and Wayne Long, director and assistant director of the Greene County Emergency Management Agency (formerly civil defense).

William Groves of Carmichaels, who is on the board for establishment of a Greene County 911 emergency telephone system, also expressed his support for the proposal as a means of having an individual who could assume responsibility for carrying out that project.

Dr. Falor pointed out that the coordinator also could be made responsible for taking advantage of various state and federal programs which provide funding for the improvement of emergency services.

"We have been getting some grants, but I feel that we miss out on programs many times because we don't have anyone to seek them out," he said.

The commissioners expressed interest in the idea and said they would consider it in preparing the county budget for next year. They asked Dr. Falor to obtain endorsements of the proposal in writing from the various agencies which would be involved, so that the county could be assured of their support.

In other action, the commissioners agreed to transfer William Rankin, a supervisor in the County Department of Parks and Recreation, to the county payroll since his CETA eligibility is expiring. He has held the position for the past three years. His present CETA salary of $851 per month will be reduced to $906 for the balance of this year to conform to the county salary structure.

The action was taken after Allen Hughes, executive director of the department, said the agency has sufficient funds in its budget to absorb the salary for the balance of the year.

A check for $35,000 was received from Greene County Industrial Developments to complete repayment of a $70,000 loan made by the county in 1976 for construction of the package sewage treatment plant at the Paisley Industrial Park in Carmichaels. The commissioners indicated the money will be used to pay the $32,000 cost of connecting the county fairgrounds and Central Swimming pool to the new sewerage system in Franklin Township.

The latest in what have come to be known as "big boom" studies of Greene County has been issued by the Pennsylvania Land Policy Project, an activity of the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy.

In reality, this one is a regional study in that it is intended to assess the impact of future coal development not only on Greene County but on neighboring Washington and Fayette Counties. But the focus is primarily on Greene County because that is where the major impact will be in terms of increased pollution, congested roads, crowded schools, housing shortages and potential loss of the predominantly rural character of the county.

The study, which was sponsored by the Commonwealth with a grant from the Economic Development Administration of the U.S. Department of Commerce, took about a year to prepare and breaks no new ground.

As have previous studies, it predicts that the vast coal reserves of western Greene County and southwestern Washington Counties will inevitably be developed and that when it happens "it seems likely that the region will be the focus of more development activity in a relatively short span of time than has ever been experienced by a rural area in the Commonwealth."

While the study is very general about when, and exactly what, will happen, it does quite lucidly assess the present situation and, like previous studies, urges that steps be taken as soon as possible to assure that the growth can be absorbed as painlessly as possible.

It realistically points out that it is difficult to mount such an effort at a time when the coal market is soft and the prospects of development are not as imminent as was thought a few years ago.

The study suggests the formation of a three-county council comprised of local officials to tackle the development process in an orderly and coordinated way. It also stresses that the state must recognize the areas needs in some special and tangible way as an area of special concern to the economy of the state, suggesting that an appropriate point of leadership for such an effort might be the new-established Economic Development Subcommittee of the governor's cabinet.

The most important result of the study could come from the fact that it was made at the request of the Commonwealth, and will therefore command some attention at Harrisburg. Because no amount of study will get around the fact that substantial outside assistance will be needed if the county is to solve the water, sewage, highway and housing problems which it faces in the years ahead.

The Route 21 by-pass around Waynesburg, for example, is a key element in providing improved highway facilities for the western part of Greene County. The state has been dragging its heels on the project for more than a decade, despite every effort by county officials to get it funded.

If the Pennsylvania Land Policy Project will help get even this one job moving, it will have been worthwhile.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

The bright hues of the Indian Summer season are starting to fade here in Greene County as Mother Nature starts setting the stage for the onset of another winter a month or so from now. It's strange how well Nature controls the unending cycles without the use of a single computer, isn't it, when you think of it.

homes there. But the big push won't get started until after Thanksgiving. A few who are taking a chance on another mild winter are not planning to go at all despite the high cost of fuel.

Dr. and Mrs. George Bumgardner of Orisonia, Huntingdon County, were guests last week at the home of her brother, Robert Davis of Jefferson. It was Mrs. Bumgardner's first extended visit to the county since she was in training for the nursing profession some 40 years ago. She was amazed at the many changes which have occurred, especially the new developments in the Bonar Addition in the East End and the new malls and other developments in the Morrisville section.

Charles Bosworth of Waynesburg R.D. 5, a retired barber, one of the town's first automobile salesman, and one of the few surviving World War I veterans of Company K, has been released from Greene County Memorial Hospital, where he had been a patient for several days. He is the only long-time barber from the original Downey House Hotel barber shop that was destroyed by fire in 1925.

Mr. and Mrs. Attilio Rota, well-known Clarksville residents, are looking forward to visits with their sons, Albert, in Cleveland, and Leonard, in Chicago, in the near future. They have delayed the trip for five or six years because Mr. Rota has served as construction inspector for the new north wing at Greene County Memorial Hospital, the new middle school at Waynesburg and the new county jail which will be dedicated today.

A former Greene County couple, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grimes from the Hopewell section of Center Township, have been house guests at the home of John Throckmorton of the Waynesburg-Nineveh road near Sycamore for several days. Both are retired teachers. They have lived at Bradenton, Fla., spring training base of the Pittsburgh Pirate baseball team, since their retirement.

Speaking of warm climates, several Greene Countians are already preparing for departures to southern states, particularly those with winter

Word has been received by Waynesburg friends of Leo (Coach) Cunningham, Waynesburg College football star in the 1920's who has been living at San Juan, Costa Rica, since his retirement from the U.S. Maritime Service, that inflation there is at a higher rate than in the United States.

His brother, James, is now living at Phoenix, Ariz., and his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Goodman, is in Detroit. Two other sisters, Mary (Sr. Mariam Francis) and Catherine (Sr. Rose Angelina) are affiliated with the religious order of the Sisters of Charity at Seaton Hill College in Greensburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Moore of East Greene Street were honored recently on the occasion of their 48th wedding anniversary. Their seven children hosted a dinner at the Mansion House and a reception at Avalon Court the following day.

They are the parents of James, Waynesburg; Mark and Jerry, Rogersville; Richard, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Mrs. Ann Hale, Clinton, Md., and Mrs. Joyce Baldwin and Mrs. Billie Jo Rinehart, Waynesburg. Mr. Moore is a retired Waynesburg Borough police officer.

Most Greene Countians could care less about when the first old-fashioned "sledding snow" will fall during the coming winter. But Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Long would welcome it tomorrow and hope it would stay on the ground for several months.

The Carmichaels couple have a reason. They are the owners of a fancy Currier and Ives type of sleigh which has been in the Long family for many generations. It has been refurbished at Miles Davins's new furniture shop in the former Long building on North Morgan Street, Waynesburg, and they can hardly wait for the first chance to use it.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Grandon of South Richhill Street have returned to their home from Virginia, where they spent the weekend Mrs. Grandon's brother, Lt. Col. (Retired) Paul Campbell, a career officer who is recuperating from a severe heart attack suffered several years ago.

Jackets Rout Bobcats Bogeys Part Of Pilot's Life

By ROBIN ROBERTS
Sports Writer

WAYNESBURG — Frostburg State College was what the young Waynesburg College football team needed; somebody to take its frustrations out on. And the Yellow Jackets did just that here Saturday afternoon, clobbering the Bobcats by a 38-12 score.

A disappointingly small Homecoming crowd watched as the Yellow Jackets, now 2-3, dismembered the visiting Bobcats, scoring just about every way imaginable.

Freshman fullback Bob Astleford, who replaced Lee Corazzi in the Yellow Jacket backfield, was the offensive standout for Waynesburg for the second week in a row.

Astleford, a 5-11, 195-pounder from Uniontown who began his college career as a linebacker, scored three touchdowns while leading Waynesburg to the easy win.

Waynesburg scored first late in the opening quarter when Ted Rodavich booted a 35-yard field goal and from that point on it was nearly all Waynesburg.

With less than two minutes gone in the second quarter, Astleford burst into the end zone for the first time on a one-yard plunge. Rodavich's conversion made it

10-0. Less than three minutes later, Kirk Neal, the Yellow Jackets' nationally-ranked punter who also doubles as a kick rusher, scooped up a Frostburg punt which had been blocked by Don Hython at the Frostburg 39 and topped into the end zone from a yard out. Again, Rodavich kicked the point after to make the score 17-0.

Neal played a big part in Waynesburg's third touchdown. The Jackets, facing a fourth and about a half mile, dropped into punt formation from their own 44. The snap was perfect to Neal, who surprised everybody in the stadium by taking the ball and flicking a soft pass to Marc Steele who was behind a wall of Jacket blockers. Steele could have walked into the end zone with the ball and quickly had Waynesburg's third touchdown of the second quarter.

Frostburg finally got on the scoreboard in the third quarter when a quick kick by freshman Mike Zeglen was shanked and the Bobcats took control of the football near the Waynesburg 20.

Six plays later, sophomore running back Steve Langan, who scored both Frostburg touchdowns, went in from two yards out to cut the Waynesburg lead to 24-6. It didn't take long for the Yellow Jackets, particularly Astleford, to strike back.

Sophomore quarterback Mike Forbes quickly found Astleford for a 17-yard touchdown strike and Rodavich made it 31-6 with the conversion, and on the ensuing kickoff Hython separated the ball from Chuck Fales and on the second play from scrimmage, only 29 seconds after his second touchdown of the day, Astleford went in from four yards out and Waynesburg's final touchdown of the day. Rodavich again tacked on the point after to make it 38-6.

In the waning minutes of the game, against Waynesburg's third team defense, the Bobcats scored again on another two-yard burst by Langan. The win leaves the Yellow Jackets 2-3 on the season and they have an open date next weekend before hosting Grove city, Nov. 1.

"The kids did a heck of a job today," said Waynesburg coach Hayden Buckley following the game. "Today's game just helps prove what I've been saying, that we've got an awfully good 2-3 football team. We have a lot of young people out there who are going to be around for a while. Only 10 points separate us from an unbeaten season so far this season."

AG Stuns Blue Devils Mikes Upset German, 21-4

MASONTOWN — Only three things can happen when you pass a football and two of them are bad, is the old football adage and the Burgettstown High School football team proved how true those words are here Friday evening.

The Blue Devils departed from their normally effective rushing game and went to the air and dropped a crucial one-sided 28-0 Century Class AA Conference decision to Albert Gallatin.

The end result was that sophomore quarterback Bob Alvarez put the ball in the air 16 times. Five of his passes were caught by Blue Devil receivers and an equal number by Albert Gallatin defenders. The remaining six dropped incomplete.

This came from the same Burgettstown team which has come to be known as "the ground crew" because of relentless, seemingly unstoppable rushing game. Prior to last night's game, the Blue Devils were averaging just four passes a game and had turned the ball over on interceptions only once in its seven previous games.

The win puts the Colonials in the driver's seat in the Century Class AA Conference with a 4-0 record while the Blue Devils fall to second place with a 4-1 record. Both coaches, Rege Onderick of Burgettstown and Don Franks of Albert Gallatin, feel their teams are destined for post-season play, either as the conference winner or as the wild card selection.

After a scoreless first quarter which saw both teams attempting to find a chink in the other's armor, the Colonials finally got on the scoreboard after they covered a Pete Gianfrancesco fumble at the Burgettstown 26. Three plays later, quarterback Garrett Bowers found tailback Jerry Volansky wide open behind a Burgettstown defender at about the Blue Devil seven-yard line. Volansky took the ball at the seven and stumbled into the Burgettstown end zone with the first points of the night. Ron Popovich kicked the extra point and the Fayette County team had all of the points it was going to need.

It was another fumble which gave the Colonials the ball on their second scoring drive of the evening. The Blue Devils, still trailing by seven with nearly 10 minutes expired in the third quarter, were faced with a fourth and one near midfield. They elected to go for the first down, rather than kick the ball away, but Alvarez didn't get a good handle on the snap and the ball was covered by Albert Gallatin. Just seconds later sophomore running back Bob Hlodan hit the right side of his line, broke two tackles and rambled 34 yards for the second AG score of the evening.

AG put the game out of reach in the fourth quarter when Volansky scored on a 17-yard run and Gene Franks returned an intercepted Alvarez pass 70 yards to conclude the scoring.

"They didn't surprise us when they came out throwing like they did," said Franks. "Rege is a smart man. He knows there's no sense in passing the ball when he can run over top of you. We knew they were capable of throwing and played the run and the pass equally tonight to prevent getting caught and it paid off pretty well."

"Burgettstown has a heck of a tough football team and they came down here to play. But our kids came to play too." Onderick explained that Alvarez, getting his first start at quarterback due to an ankle injury to senior Dan Resnik, was obviously a little nervous about taking over the team for such a critical game.

"It was just a bad game for us. We had a new quarterback in there and he naturally had the first-game butterflies. Once things started going bad, everything went bad. The turnovers really hurt us — the interceptions and fumbles — that's just not the way we've been playing ball. Alvarez did a good job of throwing the ball all week in practice, so we thought we could throw a little more tonight and it kind of backfired on us."

"We have two games remaining (Washington and Charleroi) and I think if we can win at least one of them we will make the playoffs. We'll go back to practice Monday and work on some things and get to playing ball like we can," Onderick added.

Like Onderick, Franks feels if his team can win one of its two remaining games (Washington and Beth-Center) it took well post-season action. "I want to be in the playoffs. These kids have worked hard to get there. A lot of them are seniors, but they have never got a lot of playing time until this year. They're just now starting to really roll," Franks said.

Green Runs Wild In 35-13 MVC Win

CHARLEROI — Mon Valley Catholic High School's Jonathan Green had his best performance of the season, scoring five touchdowns and rushing for 310 yards in 30 carries in Saturday night's 35-13 Tri-County South Class A Conference win over West Greene.

CARMICHAELS — German Township's 21-game unbeaten streak in the Class A Tri-County Conference came to an end here Friday night. The Uhlans were defeated 21-14 by Carmichaels High School and are now forced to share the league lead with the Mikes.

It was a special defensive strategy that killed the streak.

Carmichaels coach Tom McCombs changed his defensive alignment by placing his three best players on the weak-side of the German Township offense. McCombs played five men against the strong side and was willing to give up the six or seven yards out the middle because, "we just didn't want to allow them outside for a long score," McCombs said.

Carmichaels took the opening kickoff and drove 75 yards for the score while eating up the clock for at least 10 minutes. With all the backs gaining yardage, Rick Hribal went off tackle for the final yard and John Townsend kicked the first of his three extra points in the game.

German Township ran three plays and punted to the Carmichaels five-yard line just before the quarter ended.

The Uhlans scored in the second period when Tom Glitz tossed a 32-yard pass to Jeff Dupont who outjumped a Carmichaels defender at the goal line and fell into the end zone. They attempted to run for the two-point conversion but Bob Evans was tackled a yard short of the goal line.

Carmichaels fumbled the ensuing kickoff but the Mike defense and two penalties stalled the Uhlans drive at the Carmichaels 35-yard line. German was hit with a face mask penalty that took the ball to midfield and tight end John Townsend trotted to the edge of the field but not off the field.

The Mikes lined up and Townsend was wide open down the right sideline. He was all alone when he crossed the goal line and he was perfect with the extra point kick as Carmichaels took a 14-6 lead into the locker room.

McCombs was forced to use an all-junior backfield in the second half when Hribal suffered a possible separated shoulder in the second quarter. "It looks like he might be out for the season," McCombs said after the game.

German Township came out looking like a different team in the second half and marched on its own 20 to a touchdown in less than three minutes.

Marvin Truely, the top ground gainer for the Uhlans, gained 61 yards in the drive including the final 13 yards for the score. Evans skirted right end for the two-point conversion that tied the game at 14.

Truely intercepted a Dick Krause pass during the next Carmichaels series and returned it eight yards to the Carmichaels 35. Carmichaels held and ran out the clock for the rest of the quarter.

Facing a third and 14 early in the final quarter, Dick Krause hit Townsend at the nine yard line for a first down and three plays later, Krause found Joe Durco standing at the goal line and threw a perfect strike for the touchdown. Again Townsend added the extra point with his third successful kick.

German Twp. managed three first downs and moved to the Carmichaels 29 but two long passes were knocked down at the goal line and German was forced to give up the ball. Carmichaels ran three plays and punted. Truely had a 30-yard run back but the Uhlans were penalized for clipping and the ball moved back to the GT 30. On the first play, Glitz threw a long pass that was intercepted by Joe Turco at the Carmichaels 45 with a minute left to play.

Carmichaels ran two plays before time ran out. The Uhlans could only muster seven first downs in the game while Carmichaels collected 19. Coach McCombs credited the entire defensive team for the victory. Eight of the eleven Mike starters played both ways.

GOLF STAG DAY

WAYNESBURG — Col. Bob Williamson (USAF, Ret.) has always hated bogeys.

During three wars, the veteran fighter pilot was concerned with enemy planes attacking him (bogeys) but these days the golf course bogey is his main concern.

His military career could be the subject of a movie that most of us would find hard to believe. He has had more time in the air than most angels.

A native of Greensboro, Williamson graduated from Mapletown High School in 1941 and was an outstanding athlete. He is the son of Dorothy Williamson and the late Charles Williamson.

Now retired with over 28 years service, Williamson has nearly 8,000 hours of flying time in almost 50 types of aircraft including helicopters. The much-decorated pilot was shot down in World War II, managed to land a shot-up jet plane during the Korean Conflict and flew back to his base after being shot while flying a spotter plane during the Vietnam War.

With four enemy planes to his credit during World War II, he was to meet one of his victims almost 20 years later while serving as an advisor to the West German Air Force.

Col. Williamson joined the Army Air Corps on September 7, 1941, just a few months following his graduation from high school. He entered the service as an enlisted man and almost became a flying sergeant before receiving his officer's commission.

During the early stages of World War II, he was assigned to the Royal Air Force and was sent to England in March of 1943 where he flew in combat during the final 18 months of the Battle of Britain.

From England, he was sent to North Africa and flew night-fighter missions during the Italian Campaign. While based in Corsica, he was ordered to cover a secret mission by two PT boats which were landing agents in southern France.

His Beaufighter was hit by flak but he managed to ditch the crippled plane about two miles from shore. He was rescued immediately and earned a furlough at home.

Following his well-deserved leave, Williamson was sent to Fresno, Calif. where he served as an instructor in P61s (Black Widows). He remained at the California base until the war was over. He received a discharge from the service and enrolled at St. Vincent College in a pre-dental program.

During this period, he was in the Air Force Reserve and attained a promotion to major. He was checking out in jet aircraft and flew coast patrols.

Because of family financial difficulties, he dropped out of college and re-enlisted in the regular Air Force in 1951. He was soon shipped to Japan and again found himself flying nightfighters. This time they were modern jets not the prop-driven planes of his first war. Although stationed in Japan, he was flying combat missions in Korea.

On a mission into North Korea, his plane was hit by ground fire but he managed to pilot the jet back to Tachikawa. He was unhurt but had earned a trip home.

He was assigned to an Air National Guard unit in Wilmington, Del. where he trained young pilots in all-weather nightfighters until the base closed. His next stop was Yuma, Ariz., where he served as squadron commander of the 4750th Air Defense Squadron.

In 1961, he was sent to the Command Staff College at Maxwell AFB where he graduated in the top 10 percent of his class.

His next assignment took him to Bonn where he was an advisor to the German air force. It was here he met Gen. Gerhart Lindburg. The four-star general and Williamson during the course of a discussion determined it was Williamson who must have shot down Lindburg during World War II. The time, the place and the circumstances made it a certainty in their minds. They have remained close friends to this day.

After three years of duty in Germany, Williamson was sent to San Francisco as a wing fighter officer until 1967. He was sent to Vietnam in April, 1967, and became the Air Liaison Officer for the 4th Corps. He commanded 273 pilots from his control plane and directed the planes into certain areas as trouble developed.

He had been in Vietnam for only three days, when his base was hit by an enemy mortar barrage. Williamson suffered shrapnel wounds in the groin and knees and spent six weeks in the hospital. He returned to action and while flying a small, spotter plane was shot in the arm. He managed to return to his base but earned a ticket home. His combat days were over.

While being treated for the arm wound, doctors found additional shrapnel in his knees and he was sent to the Philadelphia Naval Hospital where he spent the next eight months and received three operations. After four months in the hospital at Andrews AFB near Washington, D.C. he received his medical discharge on August 6, 1969.

Most of his spare time has been spent on the golf course at the Greene County Country Club where he was senior champion in 1975 having toured the course with an even par 73.

He and his wife are the parents of two children, Penny Varick, at home and Capt. Bob Williamson, an intelligence officer with the U.S. Air Force stationed in Omaha, Neb.

Hospital Installs New Equipment

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Memorial Hospital recently installed two new pieces of equipment in its effort to keep pace with the latest developments in medical technology for area residents.

The laparoscope for surgery and a defibrillator datascop for the special care unit.

The laparoscope, used mainly for tubal ligations, enables the physician to inspect a patient's abdominal cavity through a small incision. Previously, the physician used much more extensive abdominal surgery for this procedure.

Obtained in July, the laparoscope is a small metal instrument about 12 inches long. It is attached by tubing to a unit containing light, cautery (burning) and insufflator (air replacement) sources.

The defibrillator datascop, obtained in August, is used as an emergency procedure to convert patients back to normal sinus rhythm. A patient requiring use of this equipment, in other words, would be suffering from too rapid a heart beat and would require immediate help.

The plastic machine, a compact piece of equipment weighing 27 pounds, eight ounces and measuring 13 inches high, 15 inches wide and 7 1/2 inches deep, consists of two paddles to shock the patient. One paddle goes directly at the apex of the heart and the other goes to the right of the sternum.

The machine provides a non-fade display of the patient's heart action on a five-inch diagonal screen.

Carmichaels 'House Of Horror'

CARMICHAELS — The Carmichaels Area Jaycees are converting an old farm house located on the Glades Church Road, between Routes 88 and 21, into a "House of Horror" which will be open for tours for Halloween.

Jaycee Dave Batis designed and is directing construction of the 10 rooms of horror. The rooms include the cemetery room, Dracula's cave, the swamp room, head table room, dungeon, funeral parlor, a maze room, sanitorium, witch's alcove and laboratory. Haunting music and sounds will be heard throughout the house.

Escorted tours will be held from 7 to 9:30 p.m. from Monday, Oct. 27 through Thursday, Oct. 30, and from 7 p.m. until midnight on Friday, Oct. 31 and Saturday, Nov. 1. A small donation will be charged for the tour.

Persons wishing additional information may call 966-8246 during the day or the night ghost numbers 966-7072 or 966-2302.

Congregation Revamps School

LIPPENCOTT — The former Lippencott Elementary School located on Route 221, recently purchased by the Faith Baptist Church of Waynesburg R.D.1, is being converted into a church.

Members of the church are completely renovating the building. The rooms formerly used as fifth and sixth grade classrooms have been modified to form the sanctuary, while other classrooms will be used for the family church school.

Much work remains to be done, but the congregation held their first services in their new church last Sunday and a formal dedication service is being planned for Sunday, Oct. 26 beginning at 9:45 a.m. with the family church school and culminating with the 3 p.m. service of dedication.

The Rev. William C. Hammock, who recently took over responsibilities as pastor of the church, will give the 11 a.m. message. The Rev. R. L. Stevenson of Pittsburgh and former pastor the Rev. Glenn Klamm, will speak at the 3 p.m. dedication service. The public is invited to attend all of the services.

The Rev. Hammock began his ministry with the Faith Baptist in July of this year. He came to this area from Jackson, Mich., where he was serving as administrator of the Jackson Baptist Schools. The Rev. and Mrs. Hammock are associated with the Fellowship of Baptist for Home Missions and have been in the ministry of organizing churches for 20 years. They have served mostly in the western and southern states. They have a son, Ray, who is a seventh grade student at the Jefferson-Morgan Junior High School.

The Electric Consumer's Corner

Whom do I call if I have a question about my electric service?

Contact the West Penn Power office serving your location. That office has a complete record of your account so you'll get a faster reply than by calling one of our other offices. Besides, you'll eliminate a possible toll charge.

You'll find the address and phone number of the office that serves your account identified on your electric bill. (The code number appears on the middle portion of your bill.) Or look in your telephone directory's white pages for the number listed under West Penn Power.

Are you sure that office can help me?

We'll certainly give it our best effort. Our employees are well trained and knowledgeable, capable of answering your questions promptly, responsively, and fairly.

When calling the office serving you, briefly describe the nature of your inquiry to our switchboard operator. She then will connect you with an employee qualified to answer your specific question, including, if necessary, one of our engineering or customer services specialists.

What if that employee doesn't answer my question satisfactorily?

If that happens, you may wish to talk with either the customer services supervisor or the division manager.

We'll make every effort to provide you with satisfactory service. That's one of the reasons we're in business.

So don't hesitate to contact us if you have a question about your electric service. We're here to serve you promptly and, at the same time, fairly.

This message paid for by West Penn Power.
