

Hughes Appointed To Planning Commission

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners Thursday appointed Byron Hughes of Holbrook R.D. 1 to the board of directors of the county planning commission.

Hughes, a teacher at West

Greene High School, was named to a four-year term to replace Paul Day of Wind Ridge, who had declined reappointment.

In other action at their meeting the commissioners reappointed Dr. Prayun Chayaprugs (Chai) as medical director at the Curry Memorial Home.

"He's doing a very fine job at the nursing home," Commissioner Richard Cowan commented. The salary was set at $1,283 a month, representing an increase of eight percent over his 1980 salary.

Thomas Boyd Jr., acting director of the Curry Home, presented a report to the commissioners which shows that five department heads are now earning less than some of the people they supervise because of the new contract negotiated with nursing home employees who are members of Local 585, Service Employees International Union.

The two-year contract calls for wage increases averaging out to 10.2 percent. As a result, Boyd said, the maintenance supervisor, administrative secretary, housekeeping and laundry supervisor, licensed waste water plant operator and director of adult welfare and activities are now receiving less wages than some people in their departments.

None are in the union and therefore received the eight percent pay increases which all other county employees received on Jan. 1.

His report also indicated the county paid $4,614 to union employees who were on skeleton crews permitted to work during the five-day strike at the nursing home earlier this month. Earnings of union employees would normally have totaled $16,851.

4,000 County Drivers Obtain Photo License

Of the 25,000 persons in Greene County who are licensed by Pennsylvania to drive, 4,000 received the state's new photo license during 1980.

The new four-year plastic photo license in Pennsylvania replaces the two-year paper license. Operators whose number ends in an even number will receive a photo license in the first two years of the phase in program. The remaining will receive one in 1982 or 1983, according to John L. Sokol, district engineer for the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

Sokol said that throughout the state in 1980, the transportation department has also issued over 1,100 non-driver photo identification cards in 1980. These cards provide the same identification privileges as a driver's license.

Drivers who file their renewal applications will receive a camera card which is a temporary driver's license for 60 days. During that time they may go to any state authorized photo center to be photographed and their license validated for four years.

85 Give Blood In Area Drive

JEFFERSON — Eighty-five donors gave blood when the Red Cross bloodmobile visited the Jefferson fire hall Friday, collecting 80 units of blood.

A spokesman for the Greene County Red Cross Chapter expressed its appreciation to the fire company, which provided seven men to help set up the donation center. The auxiliary provided the canteen. Seventeen students from the licensed practical nurses' class assisted staff members from the regional blood center at Johnstown.

Temporary Injunction Limits Picketing

WAYNESBURG — A temporary injunction limiting picketing at Brodak's Family Supermarket on Route 88 at Carmichaels was granted Friday by the Greene County Court.

The restraining order was served Friday afternoon on pickets placed at the store by Local 1407, United Food and Commercial Workers (AFL-CIO), with headquarters in Pittsburgh.

A court hearing to determine whether the injunction should be made permanent will be held at 10 a.m. Monday, Jan. 26.

A similar injunction has been sought in Washington County for the firm's store on Route 88 in Millsboro. A hearing there has been scheduled for Tuesday.

The petition signed by John Brodak contends that the strike is illegal and violates regulations of the Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board.

Named as defendants are James Lee, Local 1407 president, Larry Scott, described as an organizer-picket, and Audrey Daniels of Clarksville, whose status is not described.

The complaint states that on Nov. 25, 1980, a union representative, Jack D. Lewis, went to Brodak and demanded status for the union as collective bargaining agent for non-supervisory employees of his stores in Carmichaels and Millsboro. It states he refused to furnish proof that a majority of the employees desired such representation, or that an election had been held as required by the Labor Relations Board.

It states that the union demanded a contract and demanded that no employee should be permitted to work who was not a member of the union.

On Jan. 22, 1981, it states, pickets appeared at the stores, engaged in mass picketing, and "by coercion and threats" have been attempting to intimidate employees, suppliers and customers.

It also alleges pickets have been loitering on the property, throwing refuse around, interfering with the parking lot access, and jeering at people going into the store.

Under the temporary injunction, the union is restrained from having more than three pickets at any time at any store access. The pickets must keep off store property and must keep moving at all times.

David Hook of Waynesburg, attorney for the plaintiff, said he had been in contact with the union late Friday and is satisfied that the union intends to comply with restraints imposed by the temporary injunction.

He also said the union described the picketing as supporting an "informational strike," with no Brodak employees involved at this time.

Sheriff Seeks Another Term

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Sheriff Remo E. Bertugli has announced his candidacy for re-election in this spring's primary election.

Bertugli, a Democrat, was a deputy sheriff for 13 years before his election in 1977.

"I'm running on my 17 years of experience in the sheriff's office and the belief that I have fulfilled my promise four years ago that I would be a full-time sheriff. If re-elected, I will continue to serve the county as a full-time sheriff," Bertugli said in announcing his candidacy.

Bertugli, a native of Greene County, has been very active in various community and fraternal organizations in the county.

He is a veteran of World War II, having served with the United States Army in the European Theater of operations and receiving three battle stars and a number of other citations. He is a member of the Brooks-Crago American Legion Post No. 816 at Rices Landing, where he resides, and served as post commander for two years and as deputy commander of the 25th District of the American Legion for eight years, representing both Greene and Washington Counties.

He is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the BPO Elks, the Loyal Order of the Moose and is a former member of the Governor's Justice Commission. He served for four years as a member of Rices Landing Borough Council and as an assessor for Rices Landing for a number of years.

Bertugli is also active in the Boy Scouts of America and is a member of the Sacred Heart Church in Rices Landing, the Rices Landing Volunteer Fire Co., the Southwestern Pennsylvania Chiefs' and Assistant Chiefs' Association and the Greene County Firemen's Association.

He was appointed chief deputy sheriff April 1, 1967, was elected sheriff in 1977, and was sworn into office in early 1978.

He is the son of the late Attilio and Albertina Bertugli, who resided in Cumberland Township, and is married to the former Margaret Trafford. The couple has four children, Renetta Doreen Fatula, Bonnie Lee Myland, Remo C. Bertugli Chris Bertugli.

Library Hours Will Change

WAYNESBURG — Bowlby Public Library in Waynesburg will shorten its operating hours effective Friday, Jan. 30.

The library will close on Fridays at 6 p.m. and, effective Feb. 1, will be closed on Sundays.

"The new schedule will be temporary due to changes in staff," Mrs. Margaret Baker, acting administrative librarian, said. "A future announcement will be made when needed."

There will be no change in operating hours on other days of the week. The library will now be open from 1 to 9 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, 1 to 6 p.m. Friday, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

College Receives Unrestricted Grant

WAYNESBURG — An unrestricted grant has been received from the Sears-Roebuck Foundation by Waynesburg College. Amount of the grant was not disclosed.

Waynesburg College is one of 10 independent colleges and universities in Pennsylvania to receive a grant from the foundation.

Board Receives Bids On West Greene Clinic

ROGERSVILLE — Bids for the construction of the West Greene Health Services' new clinic in Rogersville were received by the board Thursday night and were within the range expected.

The apparent low bid for general construction was offered by Val Colussi & Sons of Eighty Four at $178,800. Other bids came from Jenec Construction Co. of Bethel Park, $179,300; J.R. Katusa & Sons, Carmichaels, $188,588 and Fairchance Lumber Co. of Fairchance, $201,000.

Apparent low bid for the heating, ventilation and air conditioning came from Greene Mechanical Corp. of Carmichaels at $15,300. Mechanical Contracting of Uniontown bid $16,668 for the same work.

Greene Mechanical was the only bidder for electrical work. The firm bid $21,500. They were also the only bidder for plumbing work at $13,300.

John Watson, president of the West Greene Health Services board, said the bids were within the range expected by the architect. "We felt the construction bids would be between $150,000 and $170,000," Watson said.

Bids were turned over to the board's building committee and the architect for further study. The board will have 45 days in which to review the bids and make a decision.

The modular building will contain offices for two doctors and a dentist, consultation rooms, examination rooms and office space for five support employees.

The health service is currently operating out of a mobile home parked adjacent to the Center Township Fire Hall. A dentist is available three days each week but there is currently no doctor available.

The proposed clinic will receive help from Greene County Memorial Hospital, the Greene County Commissioners and the Greene County Medical Society in various forms of support.

Because the area has been declared a medically underserved area, financial aid has been received from the Appalachian Region Commission which will provide an estimated two-thirds of the total cost.

Greensboro Plans Ambulance Drive

GREENSBORO — The Greensboro (Monongahela Township) Volunteer Fire Co. has announced that the company will start an ambulance service in the near future.

The company has authorized the purchase of a new modular-style ambulance which should be delivered and put into service later this week. The company has 10 Emergency Medical Technicians and a trained rescue squad to man the ambulance 24 hours a day.

According to Fire Chief Ed Helmick's 1980 year-ending report, the company had 53 calls last year, half of which were medical/rescue related calls.

The company will start a subscription drive to help finance the new ambulance service. Funds raised in the subscription drive will help pay for the new vehicle and equipment. As a member of the ambulance emergency service, a family will receive unlimited emergency service for a full year.

Members of the ambulance committee will be soliciting subscriptions from each family in the community during a door-to-door campaign.

New officers for the company were elected for 1981 during the company's January meeting. Executive officers are: Charles Fox, president; Lynn Carnahan, first vice president; Paul Burich, second vice president; Ed Gluvna, treasurer; and John Harlow, secretary.

Line officers for the new year are: Ed Helmick, chief; Rich Podolinski, assistant chief; Paul Burich, captain; Mike Washko, first lieutenant; Dave Cox, second lieutenant.

Lions Football Award

Pittsburgh Coal Discussed

WAYNESBURG — Wyonna Coleman, president of the Pennsylvania Sierra Club, addressed the Association for Rural Conservation at the group's meeting Wednesday evening.

Coleman pointed out that the Pittsburgh Coal Seam which underlies most of the county is largely unmined. She used a large map to illustrate areas in the county which have been mined out and areas of the county where the Pittsburgh seam coal has yet to be mined.

"Greene County has rugged topography, with hills, valleys, and ridges. But there is another view of Greene County that is almost flat — it's called the Pittsburgh seam," Coleman told ARC members attending the meeting.

"This is the richest coal seam in the world, and as you can see, Greene County is almost completely underlaid with the Pittsburgh seam."

She explained that the last great area of high-profit coal exploitation is under the county and that no environmental organization could or should attempt to prohibit the mining of the coal. She noted that the challenge for years to come will be seeing that coal owners do not destroy the environment of the area, saying "it (the environment) can be destroyed just once."

Prior to Coleman's presentation, ARC held a business meeting during which the initiation of direct talks between ARC members and representatives of the Wheeling Creek Watershed Commission from Wheeling were discussed.

Township Takes Over Roadway

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township Supervisors Monday approved a resolution taking over 1,200 feet of Colonial Drive in the Colonial Plan which was left uncompleted by the developer last year.

Before doing so, the township received assurances from the First National Bank & Trust Company that it (the bank) would assume responsibility for the costs of the remaining improvements to the road.

The bank purchased the development at a sheriff's sale last month and plans to sell the property as soon as possible.

Township officials moved quickly on the resolution in order that they could legally maintain the street during the winter and provide for snow removal.

In other action at the short meeting, the township tabled an offer from Masaro Corporation for payment of damages to a township road caused when the new system was being constructed. Masaro offered a $2,500 settlement but the supervisors felt the sum was far short of the costs expected to repair the road near the new Granview housing development.

The township engineer and road superintendent agreed to hold a meeting with James Johnson, of Waynesburg, who owns property along Route 188, and is seeking road permits for hauling stripped coal.

There's an old saying that "blue eyes belong to leaders and brown eyes to dreamers..." We can't tell the color of this child's eyes from her picture, but they look a great deal like the eyes of rich wisdom.

Wisdom comes to most of us only after many years of struggle and growth. And even when we feel a bit wiser, we soon realize that there is always much more to learn — that, in truth, learning is a life-long process.

But whatever age and degree of wisdom we may attain, our need for a changeless source of inspiration remains the same. Within your place of worship you will find a power of truth founded on eternal love and maintained by divine wisdom. On such, character is built and wisdom enhanced.

Draw new courage and hope from the wellspring of knowledge that makes men free. Worship this week!

Lang is sales manager for Systemics, a metal building firm in McMurray, and is also a member of the Greene County Planning Commission. He succeeds Waynesburg attorney Robert Berryman as WERC president for 1980.

Berryman was elected vice president. Dr. Bruce Shipe, secretary, and William Morris, treasurer. Other board members are Farley Toothman, Peter Jabour and John McCall. All board members are from the Waynesburg area.

The board commended Berryman for "his leadership and accomplishments during 1980."

Executive Director Frances Thompkins announced that Pittsburgh architect Richard Glance, WERC consultant for facade renovations on High Street, has moved ahead on this phase of the revitalization project in downtown Waynesburg.

She also informed the board that Neilan Engineers, Inc., Somerset, has submitted a contract for preparation of plans for HUD Section 8 housing, which will be a major feature of the downtown project. The contract proposal is now being studied both by WERC and by Greene County officials.

If approved, the upper stories of five buildings in the downtown area will be renovated to accommodate at least 23 apartment units. Neilan's engineering cost will total some $52,000.

Lack Of Public Support Kills Greene Bus System

Lack of public interest has apparently killed any chance that Greene County had for establishment of public transportation.

The state Department of Transportation has informed the county commissioners that an insufficient number of people took advantage of a pilot program last year to justify continued funding of the bus system.

The application for funding was submitted by the county last summer on behalf of the Washington-Greene Community Action Corp., which operated the pilot program from January through June of 1980. It sought both state and federal monies to expand the system to serve additional sections of the county.

Refusal was based on the fact that 96 percent of those who rode buses during the test program were elderly people who were clients of the Area Agency on Aging, which had a contract with Community Action to provide them with free transportation. Only four percent were fee-paying riders from the general public, which was far short of the 50 percent required to qualify for public transit assistance.

Perhaps part of the lack of public acceptance lay with the routes and times set up for the buses, but the fact remained that the vehicles were virtually empty on many of their runs.

With the increased cost of gasoline, sponsors had felt that the time was ripe for a rural transportation system. But with the size of the county making it extremely difficult to provide for convenient scheduling, people continue to rely on their cars to get around.

It was one more good idea that just didn't work out.

Waynesburg Council Finally Adopts Budget

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg Borough Council, during a special meeting Monday evening, finally adopted its 1981 operating budget.

The budget, which was originally approved at 17 mills — 16 for general borough operations and one for fire protection — was reopened with court permission so that council could impose an additional two mills tax for fire protection.

This means the Waynesburg Volunteer Fire Co. will receive three mills worth of revenue from the borough during the new year, rather than the one which was originally called for. In addition to adopting the 1981 operating budget, council opened bids for a three-quarter-ton, four-wheel-drive pickup truck for use by the borough street crews in snow removal.

The four bids were received from Bortz Chevrolet of Waynesburg, Pat's Motor Sales of Waynesburg, Robert Trauth of Waynesburg and David Magerko.

Council took no action on the bids, but directed Borough Manager James Early to re-view them and report back to council with a recommendation at its February meeting.

Union Attorney, Store Agree On Picketing

WAYNESBURG — An attorney for Local 1407, United Food and Commercial Workers, entered into an agreement Monday with Brodak's Family Supermarkets, Inc. under which union picketing will be kept within acceptable bounds at the firms two stores on Route 88, one in Carmichaels and the other in Millsboro.

In light of the agreement, the Greene County Court Monday indefinitely continued a temporary injunction it issued last week, subject to reconsideration if any of the provisions are violated.

It limits the number of pickets to three at the Carmichaels store and dictates that they keep in motion and keep themselves and their cars off company property. It also bans interference of any type with employees or customers.

A similar hearing is scheduled for Tuesday in Washington County with regard to the store in Millsboro.

Brodak has charged that the strike is illegal, contending that the union has not been certified to represent store employees, none of whom are involved in the picketing. The union has labeled the action an "informational strike."

Court Approves Sale Of Dry Tavern School

DRY TAVERN — The Greene County Court Monday approved the sale of the former Dry Tavern Elementary School by the Jefferson-Morgan School District to a private individual for $62,000.

In its petition to the court, the school district pointed out two real estate firms confirmed the price was higher than any price offered at either a public auction or through sealed bids. The board said the offer equals the value set on the property by the assessment department.

The school building is located near the intersection of Routes 88 and 188 in Dry Tavern. The school was closed last year when the school district opened its new $4.2 million consolidated elementary school.

The sale of the property to John C. Gill of Rices Landing R.D.1 also includes the 7.2 acres of ground on which the building is situated.

The school measures 80 by 130 feet and contains six large classrooms, a gymnasium and other ancillary rooms. It is serviced by city water and an on-site septic system.

Gill has not revealed his future plans for the property.

Around The Town

By The Staff

Only one more day left in January in 1981 and Greene County residents are counting on the "short month" of February to get them through to the coming of another Spring in mid-March.

But down in Florida, their many friends and kinfolk who are spending the winter in that state or are living there permanently are looking ahead to the annual Greene County Day in that state at Largo on March 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Lemley, former Waynesburg residents, are again coordinating the event and may be contacted at 22 Fourteenth Avenue S.W., Largo, Fla. 33540. Another record breaking attendance is anticipated what with more present and past Greene Countians living their permanent or during the winter months than ever before.

The death of John H. Minor, a Greene County native and former Waynesburg bank official, earlier this week at Camp Hill, near Harrisburg, was a shock to this many friends and former associates in Greene County. He was active in grange work in the Carmichaels area for many years. Funeral services were held Thursday in Waynesburg with burial in Greene County Memorial Park. After leaving Waynesburg, he was associated with a bank in Morgantown, W.Va. before going to Camp Hill to work with the Commonwealth of Penna.

Guy Tornabene, of McDonald, a former varsity football player and wrestler at Waynesburg College, has returned home after being a patient in Canonsburg Hospital. He is the father of William Tornabene now an assistant football coach and intramural sports director at Waynesburg College.

Sister Mary Joy (Haywood), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Haywood of Lippencott, who was a surgical patient and critically ill for several weeks, has recovered sufficiently to resume her duties as a professor of biology at Carlow College in Pittsburgh. She visited her parents for several weeks while recuperating from her illness.

K.R. Christopher of Carmichaels R.D. 1, owner of the Nine-to-Nine Store for many years, is enjoying the sunshine of Texas instead of enduring the snow and cold of Pennsylvania this year while visiting at the home of his daughter Mrs. Shirley Romine of Dallas.

The 1981 political season was opened this week in Greene County with the first formal announcement for a county office. It was that of Sheriff Remo Bertugli of Rices Landing who will be seeking his second term of office.

What may be the last echos of the long remembered Sackville Stogies baseball team which played at Waynesburg during the 1922 sandlot season was the death of its leading slugger Joe Varesko of Mather at the age of 80 at a Pittsburgh medical facility after a long illness. He followed his manager, the late Joe Hooker Phillips of Waynesburg, to the Middle Atlantic League in organized baseball and later lived in Florida for many years. He was a native of Mt. Pleasant and had played both baseball and football at Waynesburg College in 1921. Burial was in Greene County Memorial Park.

Several Waynesburg tennis and racket ball enthusiasts are spending their spare time at the indoor courts operated by former West Virginia University football star Fred Wyatt, near Morgantown. They include Larry Krutko, who also played at West Virginia and for the Pittsburgh Steelers; Mark Booth, former player and coach at Waynesburg College; Dick and Ellen Stuck, Dr. Jack Kruze, of the Waynesburg College faculty; Mark and Scott Zimmerman, Christy Haney and Nancy Hyde, a news lady from Uniontown.

Michael Petek, a career member of the U.S. Air Force, who has been stationed in Iceland for several months, is visiting his foster parents Mr. and Mrs. James Haywood, near Jefferson, and will later report to Ellsworth Air Force Base in South Dakota before returning to Iceland.

Girl's Death Investigated

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Coroner's office is still investigating the cause of death of a 15-year-old resident of a group home operated here by the Life Management Association of Washington and Uniontown.

An autopsy on Pamela Bonjono originally of Perryopolis was performed in Westmoreland County Thursday, but, according to deputy coroner Chuck Behm of Waynesburg, final results of the autopsy will probably not be known until sometime early next week.

The girl was discovered dead in her bed at about 8 a.m. Thursday by workers in the group home, which is located at 262 West Lincoln Street. The girl, who according to Behm had a history of epilepsy, had gone to bed at about 10 p.m. the Wednesday evening.

The advisability of installing lights at the Waynesburg Central High School athletic field has been the subject of periodic discussion by the Central Greene School Board, but there had never been any indication that serious consideration was being given to their erection.

It came as quite a surprise, therefore, when a motion was made at last week's school board meeting to have specifications drawn up for the purchase of materials and equipment which would be needed to light the field.

Most unusually, the motion was attached as a rider to an item which was on the agenda calling for board action on the purchase of 130 new band uniforms and footwear.

Several board members protested the action vigorously, charging that Stephenson was resorting to a "political ploy" as a means of getting the five votes he needed for the field lighting action.

Others protested that bringing the matter to a vote violated a board policy which dictates that action shall be taken only on matters which are listed on the agenda — presumably after discussion in committee. In fact, the motion was accepted only after five of the nine board members had voted to add field lighting to the agenda.

Stephenson defended combining of the two motions on the grounds that they were closely allied. He said that several groups, including the band, Lettermen's Club and Quarterback Club have been pressing for installation of the lights and have promised to raise money for the project as well as arranging for skilled labor to install the equipment.

Stephenson's argument is that the district is committing to nothing in having specifications drawn up to find out what it would cost to purchase the lights, poles and whatever else is necessary to do the job.

"This is just an initial step. We're at least five months away from making any decision about spending money and it costs nothing to find out what is involved, and to find out how much help we can expect to have," he said.

One of the most disturbing things to come out of the entire discussion about the lighting was the obvious fact that the board attempts to tightly control matters which come up for discussion and action at board meetings.

Quite evidently the interplay between board members, including the discussion of controversial matters, goes on at a monthly committee meeting held before the official board meetings, with all nine members of the board attending these sessions. Once a matter is placed on the agenda with a proposed motion, there rarely is any discussion at the board meeting itself.

The board might be able to defend the system under interpretations of the sunshine law which have been handed down since the law was passed, but the intent of the law to have public business done in public is certainly being circumvented.

Between The Bookends
Marcia McKenna Biddle

An interesting article by Paul Carson in last week's Observer-Reporter about the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) brought to mind the story of the formation of the CCC as told by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. In her book, "The Roosevelt I Knew," published in 1946 by Viking Press, Secretary Perkins' attitude toward the project could be summed up by saying, "Whew!"

She was, of course, too polite to use such an expression, but she could hardly be blamed if she had. It was in March 1933, that Secretary Perkins and President Roosevelt discussed the idea of "sending some of the unemployed men to camps." The idea caught the President's imagination.

"Roosevelt loved trees and hated to see them cut and not replaced. It was natural for him to wish to put large numbers of the unemployed to repairing such devastation." He then assigned Secretary Perkins to, well, take care of it. Whew.

First there was the problem of the selection of the men, said she.

"You've been talking about resurrecting the Employment Service," the President said. "Why can't it select the boys?"

"Because it hasn't been resurrected yet," said Perkins. She had discovered that the Employment Service consisted only of a name on a letterhead.

"Well, resurrect it," said the President.

Perkins did have a few wry comments on that. "I was to learn that he often did that kind of thing. It was in line with his 1942 request for sixty thousand airplanes. It had to be done, so he put the dynamite under the people who had to do the job and let them fumble for their own methods."

"It was characteristic of him," she wrote, "that he conceived the project, boldly rushed it through, and happily left it to others to worry about the details. And there were some difficult details."

About those details—"In about three days," said Perkins, "we set up the Federal Employment Service and worked out rules for selecting 250,000 CCC boys." But Perkins, a practical thinker rather than a dreamer, had other worries. She did not want to just turn a lot of city boys loose in the woods. She had visions of them getting lost, chopping down of pneumonia, chopping down the wrong trees, or starting forest fires by mistake.

That's why she insisted that the Forestry Service supervise the work. That worked out well, since, "The Forestry Service entered into the work eagerly, happy that it had a President who appreciated forestry. They laid out work programs and selected the sites."

But, the Secretary wondered, who would feed the boys? Where would they sleep? "Forestry had no facilities for housing, feeding, clothing, transporting, doctoring, and keeping order among such a large group." There was only one answer to that. Perkins recommended "desperately," that the army supply the camps, "since they were the only ones who had enough cots, blankets, cooking equipment, and officers who knew how to manage all of that."

Organized labor was opposed to the dollar-a-day wage as setting a bad precedent, and was suspicious of what the army might be up to. The army men had their own doubts, too. But, Perkins said in something of an understatement, "George Dern, Secretary of War, reconciled the army to this limited but important function. It was a new problem for conventionally trained officers, for there was to be no military discipline—the men were not enlisted soldiers but civilians."

In the end, Perkins concluded, "Roosevelt's idea to establish a Civilian Conservation Corps proved to be felicitous, and it operated with great success." She must at least have thought, "Whew!"

Youth Suffers Minor Injuries

WAYNESBURG — A six-year-old Waynesburg boy was treated at Greene County Memorial Hospital for minor injuries after being struck by a car on South Morgan Street at 3 p.m. Monday.

Borough police said Charles F. Cumberland II of 69 South Morgan Street was hit as he ran across the street toward the Margaret Bell Miller elementary school. They identified the driver of the car as Ruby G. Hall of Pentress, W.Va.

Hospital authorities said the child was released after being treated for possible head injuries and an injury to the left arm.

Fact and Folklore
John O'Hara

Greene County's expanding population during the Second Coming of "Old King Coal" in this southwestern corner of Pennsylvania continues to alter the image of its county seat, Waynesburg.

During the initial arrival of King Coal at the turn of the century, the only changes in the populace was that confined to the fortunate landowners who sold their Pittsburgh coal vein to the late J.V. Thompson and became affluent overnight.

Now, in 1981, the opening of new mines is bringing scores of newcomers into Waynesburg, a few at a time. No longer does anyone boast that he "knows everyone in town by their first names."

In those days Waynesburg also had many individuals known personally to almost everyone as "characters" because of some particular aspect of their personality, or some sort of eccentric habit or particular identification.

The best known of this group was probably the late "Abe" Kimble. He was a carpenter by trade but was best known as a "tinker," a term used to describe an individual who preferred to tinker or fool around with jobs no one else had the patience to do.

He was, as the old saying went, "too light to do heavy work and not skilled enough to do light work," such as plumbing, pipe fitting or tailoring.

Kimble was a smallish individual with squinty eyes and a perpetual half-smile on his face.

His specialty was replacing broken window glass. During the summer months, rain or shine, he always wore a vest and always stuck his thumbs in the sleeve holes of the vest.

The story by which he was best remembered was the time he measured the width of a broken window by holding his hands against the window frame with thumbs tucked tightly in the sleeve holes of the vest.

Enroute up town to the Jesse Ross Drug Store to have the glass cut to the desired width, he met a friend. As they talked Kimble stuck his hands in the air to describe some object he was talking about and then suddenly shouted, "Doggone it! You made me lose the measure of the glass I was going to buy!"

Another story that was retold many times over in Waynesburg before radio and television supplied humor with professional comics like Bob Hope or Jack Benny, was the one about the late Oscar Buzzard. "Buzz" as he was called, was coming home from a turtle hunt in Ten Mile Creek with a burlap bag strung over his shoulder. On meeting a friend, he greeted him with: "Guess how many turtles I have in this bag and I'll give you both of them."

One of the quickest witted individuals around town in those days was the late Bill Finch from East Waynesburg who was an honor student in mathematics at Pennsylvania State College. He later was one of five Waynesburg youths killed when caught under a falling brick wall while helping to fight the Downey House Hotel fire December 23, 1925.

Bill was forever improvising little scenes that depicted the humor behind the scenes of local incidents.

One evening, while "hanging around" in the long hallway of the Waynesburg Opera House that led from Main Street to the box office, a prominent resident, just recently divorced, came through the hallway escorting a woman from out of town.

As soon as they were out of earshot, Bill stroked his beard in the fashion of an ancient prophet and quipped, "There will be hell to pay when 'the circle' meets next Thursday night."

From that era in Waynesburg's history the town's best rival to Baron Manchausen as the top Tall Story Teller of the Universe was the late Frank Kelley.

A native of Alabama or Tennessee (if you could believe him) one of Kelley's tall tales was about the bull frogs in Ten Mile Creek on a blistering hot day in summer when he was walking a path that paralleled the stream near the Smith Creek bridge at the foot of Morgan Street.

"Suddenly it started getting colder," he would say. "I started home to put on my overcoat. Then I noticed the frogs jumping in the water but their legs would freeze when their bodies were only half submerged so I hurried back up the stream with my lawnmower and mowed myself a mess of frogs legs for supper."

These are only a small sample of the many "characters" who held forth nightly at Frank Bennington's Wagon Wheel Inn after prohibition finally ended. There were other more moderate individuals who gathered each evening before the open grate wood fire at Frank Wilhelm's service station on the "south bank" of Ten Mile Creek.

It was a real life "Lum and Abner" setting — the favorite radio program every evening, summer and winter, with its homespun humor and philosophy as an idyllic transition from a day of hard work to a night of well earned repose.

Truck Damaged

Someone fired a shotgun blast into the front of a 1979 Chevrolet truck owned by Phillip D. Robinson of Dilliner R.D. 1. The incident occurred between 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday along Route 317 in Dunkard Township.

The blast damaged the hood, grill, headlight and windshield. No damage estimate was given on the police report.

Waynesburg Gives Thanks

WAYNESBURG — A huge flag draped over the front of the First Federal building opposite the courthouse set the mood as residents of Waynesburg paused Wednesday to give thanks for the release from Iran of America's 52 hostages.

"After 444 days without sunshine and an equal number of nights when the stars did not shine our people are again enjoying the light of freedom and all of us in America should mark the occasion by thanking God for the blessings of liberty," Judge Glenn Toothman said.

The 30-minute ceremony was held in front of the courthouse with several hundred people in attendance. It was arranged by the Waynesburg Ministerium, with the Rev. David Barrett, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, serving as master of ceremonies.

Judge Toothman, as featured speaker, paid tribute to President Carter and the State Department, as well as to the American people, for the patience displayed in the long and difficult negotiations for release of the hostages.

"The sense of relief we are feeling should be the occasion for a reassessment and realization of the meaning of American citizenship, giving us greater appreciation of our country."

Other speakers were the Rev. Dean Hardy, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene, and the Rev. Kenneth Thomas, pastor of the First Christian Church.

"We should thank God we live in a country in which the government does not control the people, but the people control the government," the Rev. Thomas concluded.

The program also included a solo by Floyd Patterson of Waynesburg and selections by the Waynesburg Central High School band.

The flag draped across the front of the building opposite the courthouse measured 105 feet long and was provided by the high school band. Director Gene Cappellini said it was made by band parents.

Waynesburg Gets No Respect In NAIA Poll

Why isn't Waynesburg College, now 13-3 and just eight points shy of a perfect record, ranked in the latest NAIA Top 20 basketball poll (which appears in this column)?

The reason, according to Charlie Eppler of the NAIA's statistics department in its Kansas City, Mo., office, is quite simple.

"Until a few weeks ago we didn't even know Waynesburg's record," Eppler said in a recent telephone interview. "But this has been a problem with quite a few District 18 schools. It's up to the member schools to inform us by calling in their scores and sending their stats. Some of them flood our office and the poll raters with information while others keep their success a secret."

Unlike the Associated Press' NCAA basketball poll, which is selected by sportswriters and broadcasters across the country, the NAIA's choice list is voted on by 31 coaches, one for each district which comprises the organization.

Third Row

"Here's how we do it," Eppler said. "Each rater votes for 15 teams and we receive the ballots each Monday morning. From their votes we calculate a Top 20 list. We supply the voters with information like scores and stats on top teams in each district on a hotline number they can call. And the voters also receive mail from schools trying to convince them their programs belong in the Top 20.

"But the bottom line is this: If we don't know about a team, or the voters don't know about a team, they can't get ranked. We're not a publicity department for the schools. It's up to the individual members to inform the voters, flood their mailboxes if they have to, and make them aware of what they are doing. And to tell us, too."

Eppler maintains that he was not aware of Waynesburg's existence until a statistic sheet arrived by mail which documented the Yellow Jackets' 11-1 start. Waynesburg head coach Rudy Marisa stated he wasn't aware that his team's early season scores weren't reaching the NAIA office, but has since taken steps to correct that problem.

"I don't really know if those game stats were reported or not," Marisa said Tuesday night. "We had to change statisticians in mid-season and I'm not sure if the NAIA was getting the other games or not. I thought they were.

"But I'm quite confident that our present statistician knows what he's doing.

Getting ranked in the NAIA's Top 20 poll isn't just for prestige. This rating serves as a basis for seeding the post-season tournament in mid-March. Teams that aren't ranked among the Top 20 usually find themselves on an improbable road to the NAIA championship.

"It seems imperative to get into the ranking," Eppler said. "Since the tournament is seeded from the poll, and we also invite the highest rated member of the poll that is eliminated in the district playoffs, it's very important that a school with a good record try to get ranked."

"And from what I hear now about Waynesburg, they have a very good chance to win their district and come here for the tournament. And with the record they have, I'm sure they deserve consideration in the Top 20 poll.

"But it's my theory that a school has to promote itself, it can't depend on us to do it. I don't see Waynesburg play. I can't judge Waynesburg or Fort Hays, Kansas, the team that's ranked number one."

So the burden of getting recognition lies with Waynesburg College. Informing the 31 voters of its progress in District 18 would help tremendously, along with filing consistent game reports to the NAIA office.

"Ron Galbreath (Westminster's head coach) is the rater in District 18," Eppler said. "And he's probably the only one who knows Waynesburg is any good."

The Jackets will have to educate more voters than Galbreath, just in case that trip to Kansas City becomes a reality.

WAYNESBURG — Who's on/in first?

I don't know. Neither does anyone now coaching a basketball team in the NAIA's District 18.

Waynesburg College was the choice in last week's district coaches' poll and solidified that position with Saturday's 69-60 victory over St. Vincent.

But true to form, another claim has been staked in the district, and it's a familiar one.

Point Park held off a furious 20-minute Waynesburg rally in the second half to score a 77-72 victory before a packed College Gym crowd here Monday night, throwing the district's race into a frenzy.

"This was a very important win for us. I just can't emphasize how big it was," said Point Park head coach Jerry Conboy. "Waynesburg was the No. 1-ranked team and we had to beat them here to get back in the thick of the race."

The race for the four district playoff berths is indeed close. There appears to be seven contenders: Waynesburg, St. Vincent, Point Park, Westminster, LaRoche, Penn-State Behrend and Pitt-Bradford. None has shown the ability to dominate with Waynesburg's 13-3 record still the best in the lot.

"Maybe it's simply because we're all so doggone even that any of us can win on a given night," Waynesburg head coach Rudy Marisa said. "It's certainly a tight race."

While the district's playoff race may be tight, Monday night's game was surprisingly one-sided for the first 20 minutes. Point Park, now 10-6 overall, used an aggressive man-to-man defense and shut off the Yellow Jackets' vaunted fast break to jump to a 42-27 halftime lead.

Waynesburg's lethargic first half performance prompted Marisa to use three of his team's five timeouts early in the game. It also motivated Marisa to hold his players in the locker room for the entire 15 minute halftime break for consultation and no warm-up shots to start the second half.

But then again, the Jackets were feeling enough heat from Marisa.

"Mentally I was ready for Point Park this afternoon. I'm really surprised that our players weren't ready," Marisa said. "I'm not pleased with our play tonight. The only thing I'm pleased about is that we showed some heart in the second half with that comeback. Nothing else."

While the Jackets desperately tried to cut Point Park's 15-point margin quickly to get back into contention, they never were able to threaten until freshman point guard Ray Natili's driving layup cut the Pioneers' lead to 64-55 with 8:25 left in the game.

With Natili, a graduate of Washington's Immaculate Conception, inspiring the second half rally with 18 points, Waynesburg whittled the Pioneers' advantage to five points on three occasions in the final three minutes but could never find the clutch points to creep closer.

And Point Park, led by sophomore center Joe McMillan's accuracy at the foul line (11 of 13), held off the rally by sinking nine of 10 free throws in the final two minutes.

"We're really playing well now, we've won seven out of nine," Conboy said. "We're starting to come together as a team and playing good team ball.

"But to be honest, before the season started I never thought this team could accomplish what they're doing now."

Sophomore Tim Tyler led Waynesburg with 19 points while Natili followed with 18 and senior Mike Taylor 12.

Point Park's 6-7 sophomore Jim Strickland led all scorers with 20 points while McMillan added 15, and Bob Maher 14. Senior point-guard Tyrone Waiters and reserve Grant Clark added 10 each.

"Natili did a fantastic job bringing Waynesburg back," Conboy said. "He took it on his own and started driving the basket. He took advantage of Waiters' foul trouble and took it right at us."

"But we were pleased we shut off Waynesburg's inside game (Paul Epps and Tim Walker each had seven points for the Jackets) and we didn't let them get that fast break going."

"We're getting down to the nitty-gritty," Marisa said. "It's getting down to prove it time."

And there's no team who's on/in first.

Washington Struggles Past Raiders

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Central High School basketball team sensed an upset here Tuesday evening, perhaps they felt it too early, but the Red Raiders blew an early third quarter lead of 12 points and dropped a 55-48 Section 9-AA-A game to Washington.

Waynesburg, scoring 14 points in the first quarter and 17 more in the second quarter, held a 31-21 lead at the intermission. After the halftime break, Brian Sommers, who was the high scorer for the Greene County team with 16 points, hit a quick basket and the Raiders held a 33-21 lead.

"Mark Bonessi really turned things around for us in the third quarter with his rebounding," said Washington head coach Bill Fleissner. "He didn't play much but he came in, scored six points and really gave us a lift. Kevin Anderson and Jon Wise did good jobs for us too and Packy Hull had a decent game."

Raiders Push Past Macs

By JOE TUSCANO
Sports Writer

CANONSBURG — All it took was a little shove to get the Waynesburg High School wrestling team aroused. And Canon-McMillan found that an angry Waynesburg team can be more devastating than any they will face in Section 6-AAA as the Raiders won the exhibition match 34-31.

Canon-McMillan built an early 19-10 point lead literally at the expense of three Raider wrestlers.

Greg Eddy suffered a torn ligament in his shoulder in a loss to Ed Brown in the 98-pound weight class. Ed Henderson (126) received an eye injury and a bloody nose in his loss to Harry Hritsko after 119-pounder Ed Shriver was forced to default to Tim Grego when he was thrown onto the hardwood floor, injuring his back.

But just when Waynesburg's bench was beginning to look more like the emergency room at Canonsburg Hospital, the Raiders became inspired.

Maybe downright angry would be a better way to describe the situation.

Waynesburg began its comeback when John Kuntz (138), Kevin Durkin (145), defending WPIAL champion Doug Haines (155) and Bruce Bartholomew (167) scored consecutive pins from 138 to 167 pounds.

"Yes, we got a little upset when we had our wrestlers hurt," Waynesburg head coach Joe Ayersman said. "The default really fired the team up. The falls won it for us tonight." By the time the Big Mac wrestlers had become familiar with the light patterns on the Canon-McMillan gymnasium ceiling, Waynesburg held a 34-19 lead.

"This was a pleasing win for us in a way," Ayersman said. "We've been giving away too many points. If we can get the points, then that's all right."

Waynesburg has been rubbing shoulders with some of the area's tougher teams in the past week. The Raiders dropped a 29-24 decision to Washington High School last Friday, a match Ayersman felt the Raiders should have won.

"We were counting on beating Wash High but it just didn't happen," he said. "They wrestled really well but we'll see them again."

In addition to the four straight pins, last year's WPIAL champion Marty Stewart (105) and John Throckmorton (112) were winners for the Raiders.

"Things went the way we thought they would," the Raider coach said. "We thought we could take the 98- and 119-pound weight class. Outside of those, we did well."

The Raiders lost the final two bouts with Canon-McMillan's Dom Broglia (185) and heavyweight Sean Stopperich pinning Ernie Throckmorton and Mark Moore, respectively.

Stopperich's pin was the highlight of the night for the Big Macs. It was the first varsity win in eight bouts for the freshman from C-M Cecil Junior High.

When referee Frank Sedlak slammed the mat to signal the pin with 1:25 gone in the first period, fans and teammates poured onto the floor to congratulate the 6-2, 237-pound heavyweight.

"I told you he was going to get even," said Canon-McMillan head coach Dave Cook said. "He's been beat a lot this year and he is only a ninth grader but he had the intensity out there. He'll come along. I'm sure of it."

Cook felt his wrestlers had to avoid a string of pins if they were to beat Waynesburg but it didn't turn out that way.

"I knew we had to stay off of our backs," he said. "We wrestled well. Waynesburg has a good team. Maybe they have some weaknesses on that team but I sure didn't see any."

The win raised Waynesburg's record to 8-1 overall while four Raider wrestlers improved on their perfect records. Stewart, who missed most of last week's action with the flu, is 5-0. John Throckmorton is 7-0, and Durkin and Haines are both 8-0, and Haines is 15-0 overall. Last year's WPIAL runner-up Bill Skelton missed the match with a slight shoulder injury.

The Big Macs are now 6-3 overall.

Red Cross Relies On Communities

WAYNESBURG — Just as the composition of human blood may vary, so does that of groups of donors who support their community hospitals by contributing blood through the American Red Cross blood service program.

Since establishment of the Johnstown Region Blood Bank more than 30 years ago, a number of trends have emerged in the 33 chapters — including the Greene County Chapter — which participate in the program. One of these is the fact that twice as many men as women give blood.

Community donors account for 59.8 percent of all blood which is given. Adding to this are college and high school groups (17.2 percent), organizations (2.9 percent), business and industry (16.3 percent) and military groups (3.8 percent).

During a given year, there are some 30,000 units of blood given in the Johnstown region, representing about 1.5 percent of the population. Some of these individuals have given only once, while others have donated as many as five times or more.

Within the past 10 years, a procedure has developed of giving the patient exactly what he needs. Blood, for example, is made up of various components. Therefore, if a patient requires only red cells, he is given that component rather than whole blood.

Hamelau said that on an average each unit of blood collected was processed into 2.1 transfusable units of different blood products to meet a variety of patient needs.

The Red Cross bloodmobile has visited Greene County 106 times during the past 10 years. Area residents have given 8,783 units of blood during that time.
