

Area Residents Protest Rent-Subsidized Housing

By THELMA CALLAGHAN
Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — A meeting held Saturday morning by a group of residents protesting the construction of a federally rent-subsidized housing development off the Ceylon Road in Cumberland Township ended three hours later with little resolved.

The protesting residents asked agencies that had been involved in any way in giving the go-ahead for the development to attend the meeting.

Representatives were present from the Greene County Planning Commission; Louis DeMola, director of the Greene County Housing Authority; Greene County Commissioner Leonard Santore; all three Cumberland Township Supervisors; Laura Hensley, Greene County public family housing representative from the Department of Housing and Urban Development; and U.S. Representative Austin J. Murphy.

Although Murphy had to leave the meeting early, he did get a firsthand look at the construction site.

Edward Commons, who chaired the meeting held in the Cumberland Township Municipal Building, opened the meeting by stating that procedures have begun for a federal investigation into the project.

The housing project in question is Parkview Knoll being developed by the National Development Co. At the request of the protesting residents, the Cumberland Township Supervisors filed charges against the developer claiming he violated a township ordinance by not beginning construction within the required six months after receiving a building permit.

A magistrate ruled, however, that the developers were not guilty of violating the ordinance because the developer should have been issued an exemption certificate, not a building permit. The building permit is required for construction inside flood plain areas of the township and the exemption certificate for construction outside flood plain areas. The Parkview Knoll construction site is outside any flood plain.

The group of residents have spent many hours reviewing every permit issued for the project, every contract, deed and minutes of meetings concerning the project in an effort to find an inconsistency or loophole that would permit any of the governing bodies to halt construction.

At the meeting, Commons and fellow residents went into such technical aspects of dates of official papers, sequences of permits and incomplete forms that County Commissioner Santore was prompted to say they were nitpicking and the whole issue was one of zoning, which up until the time it affects someone personally, is a dirty word in the county.

Santore believes the only way the construction could be stopped is for the group of residents to take the issue to court themselves. He said the county planning commission and the township supervisors would not have "a leg to stand on" if they were to file a suit.

HUD representative Hensley commented that she has strong feelings about assisted housing and claimed it is not a detriment as the protesters assume. She said it will provide good housing for area residents who need it. Its main asset will be to provide affordable housing for those members of the community who have been unable to get reasonable housing. Ms. Hensley said. She added that tenants will be paying taxes just as other residents and will be contributing to the community.

In answer to a question about children being added to the already overcrowded schools, she said the majority of the residents would probably be from the community anyway, and their children are already in the district's schools.

She pointed out that the housing is also for moderate income families and quoted the levels for the tenant income requirements. She said that the neighboring residents are making assumptions based on little fact and as additional clarification pointed out that residents of the development would be of all types, not just families with children.

DeMola said that the key as to how the new development will affect the area will be the proper resident manager. He said that person would have a direct effect on the way the tenants assume responsibility for their housing and how they integrate into the main stream of the community and surrounding neighborhood.

Commons concluded the meeting by asking township supervisor William Groves if the supervisors would file an appeal from the magistrate's ruling. Groves said they could take no action without consulting their attorney.

State law provides no process for an appeal on a summary complaint before a magistrate such as was brought against the Parkview Knoll developers. This differs from a criminal complaint, which may be appealed.

Golden Key Awards

The Greene County Health and Welfare Coordinating Council held its annual recognition luncheon Thursday in Waynesburg and presented Golden Key Awards for outstanding community service. From the left are: Florence Chamber, a Golden Key recipient last year, presenting this year's awards to Barbara Coccari, who received an individual award for her work with the Catholic Social Services and Intermediate Unit I; Jane Schomp and Anna French, who accepted the organization award for Hospice of Greene County Inc.; and Nancy Ferrari, who accepted an individual award for Beth McGuire president of Greene County Women.

Miners' Firing Upheld

PITTSBURGH — The firing of six miners who protested work schedules at U. S. Steel's Cumberland Mine at Kirby has been upheld by a district arbitrator.

In doing so, the arbitrator has agreed with U. S. Steel's position that action of the employees constituted illegal picketing, not a protest as they claimed. The dispute triggered a walkout at the mine which spread to most other mines in the area just prior to the nationwide coal strike in March.

The employees, all under the age of 30, are members of Local 2300, United Mine Workers. They protested a four-day work week for some miners while longwall crews and outside workers were scheduled for five and six days. After the disciplinary action, Cumberland miners again walked off the job and roving pickets closed more than a dozen other mines.

The miners were defended in the case by Rich Trumka, a Nemaconin lawyer who recently was elected International Executive Board member for District 4.

District 4 President James Kelly said he was unhappy about the decision and will explore further steps which can be taken. "We'll see if we have any rights under the law," he said.

He explained that arbitration is the final step in the grievance process set forth in the coal contract.

A possible appeal to the state Labor Relations Board is being discussed, as is an appeal to the courts.

"There's nothing we can do. If we go on strike the company will get an injunction against us. No man in his right mind is going to go out when it could cost him $50 a shift and the local could lose $1,000," one union official was quoted as saying.

Those fines were set by U.S. Judge Barron McCune when miners violated a back-to-work order during the second walkout on the afternoon shift of March 24. Only miners who missed that shift were fined.

S.E. Greene Adopts Revised Building Plan

MAPLETOWN — A revised building plan which calls for the expansion and renovation of two existing elementary buildings and the abandonment of a third was adopted by the Southeastern Greene School Board at a special meeting Tuesday.

The Bobtown and Penn Pitt buildings will be retained while the Glassworks building will be closed. Both the Penn Pitt and Glassworks schools are in Monongahela Township on opposite sides of Greensboro Borough, while the Bobtown school is about five miles away in Dunkard Township.

Total estimated cost of the project, translated into the size of the bond issued required to finance it, is $5,350,000, which includes estimated construction costs of $4.9 million.

Solicitor John Stets said that at the 1980-81 assessment rate, it would require an increase of 27.13 mills above the present 79-mill levy to finance the project, with the required increase beginning to be felt in part by the 1982-83 school year. It will have no effect on the 1981-82 budget which is scheduled for adoption at a special meeting at 9 p.m. Thursday, June 25. Adoption will be preceded by a two-hour work session to work out a final budget.

The motion to amend the building plan was made during a very brief meeting which followed a closed session at which architect Robert Scheerlin of Indiana went over the plans with school board members. The motion passed on a 6-3 vote, with Robert Watson, Emil Enoff, Floyd Hornick, Dave Bierer, John Mason and James Minor voting for the plan. Voting against it were Adam Novak, Gary Yoskovich and Robert Headlee.

The board had previously submitted a plan to the state Department of Education under its Plancon program which called for the renovation and enlargement of all three elementary buildings. The new plan will now be submitted for approval.

Stets, who outlined the new concept at the meeting, said the latest option is the least expensive of the three viable ideas considered by the board as a means of upgrading the program for students in kindergarten through the sixth grade.

The capacity of school district elementary facilities would thus be expanded to handle as many as 840 students. The present enrollment is 603 students in the three buildings.

"This will enable the district to handle its projected student population growth until at least 1995-96."

The architect said that if everything moves through Plancon on schedule, the district should be in a position to seek construction bids by next spring. The new schools could then be ready for occupancy by the fall of 1983.

Judge Dissolves Injunction

By BOB EICHENLAUB
Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — A temporary injunction which the Greene County Court issued Wednesday to ban picketing at the Gateway Coal Co. mine near Lippencott was dissolved Friday when the court ruled it does not have the authority to grant a permanent injunction.

Judge Glenn Toothman agreed with the argument of Craig Kuhn, a Pittsburgh attorney representing the United Mine Workers, that the Pennsylvania Labor Anti-Injunction Act of 1937 bars state courts from banning picketing in labor disputes except in certain cases, such as violence and mass picketing. There have been no such allegations in the Gateway case.

The ruling came on the fourth day of widespread shutdowns of deep mines by members of UMW construction locals. They still do not have a contract with the Association of Bituminous Contractors (ABC), which represents companies which employ UMW construction people to sink mine shafts and do other mine construction work.

While the contract with 160,000 deep miners was ratified last weekend, contract talks with the ABC have remained deadlocked and miners have been honoring the picket lines thrown up by the construction workers.

All mines in Greene County continued to be idle Friday with the exception of the Gateway mine and the Shannopin mine in Bobtown. Ron Opel, president of UMW construction Local 1846, said they will continue to be bypassed by members of his union because there are no construction sites at the mine.

"We are picketing only those mines where construction work is being done," he said. Gateway and Shannopin were picketed Tuesday and Wednesday, however.

The statement was made following a meeting of Local 1846 at which details of the court hearing were outlined.

Gateway is the only company which has sought legal relief. It brought its action in Greene County Court Wednesday against the UMW international union, District 4, and two people it claims picketed the mine at midnight Tuesday — Hubert Carter and William Clark. Carter was identified as being a member of construction Local 1634 and Clark a member of construction Local 1846, both based in Greene County.

Toothman agreed to grant a temporary injunction Wednesday, and scheduled a hearing on the request for a permanent injunction for Friday morning. Prior to holding of the hearing, Gateway filed an amended complaint naming two additional defendants, James W. Brown of Jefferson and John C. Fisher, identifying both of them as members of Local 1846 and claiming they picketed the mine at the 8 a.m. shift on Wednesday.

At the hearing, Kuhn's principal argument was that the Greene County Court, because of the Pennsylvania anti-injunction act, did not have the power to prevent picketing, and that Gateway's source of relief, if any, would have to be the National Labor Relations Board or the federal courts since the issue was one of a secondary boycott.

He also pointed out that the mine has not been picketed since Wednesday and has been working since that time.

Karl Alexander, Gateway attorney, argued that the anti-picketing law did not apply because no labor dispute exists between the Gateway Coal Co. and members of the construction locals.

"There have to be disputants before there can be a labor dispute," he argued. "Gateway is powerless to help these pickets and is not involved in a labor dispute with them."

He also argued that it is traditional in the industry for miners to honor picket lines, and that picketing of the mine was not done for informational purposes but with the clear intent of shutting down the mine.

"Peaceful picketing is not always protected," he said. "Where its purpose is unlawful it can be enjoined."

Toothman, ruled however, that a labor dispute does exist as defined by the state anti-injunction law, that he cannot therefore grant the permanent injunction and therefore dissolved the temporary injunction granted Wednesday.

Following the hearing, Alexander confirmed that Gateway has already filed actions in federal court in Pittsburgh and with the National Labor Relations Board.

Man Climbs Power Tower; Badly Burned

BOBTOWN — A Dilliner R.D.1 man was listed in fair condition Sunday night in the West Virginia University Medical Center, Morgantown, W.Va., when he was electrocuted Friday night at a West Penn Power Co. substation in Bobtown.

Cletis J. Nicklow, 23, was electrocuted while climbing a power tower inside the substation. His leg was severely burned.

According to state police, Nicklow first climbed over a chain link fence to enter the substation area, then for some unknown reason began climbing the power tower which holds high-voltage power lines.

The incident happened at 9:45 p.m. Friday.

Library Addition Plans Presented

CARMICHAELS — Directors of the Flennick Memorial Library in Carmichaels were presented with plans for an addition to the library by architect Dale Drost of Farmington at a recent meeting.

The addition would provide two rooms, one for a children and teen library and one for meetings or crafts, and enlarge the entrance lobby providing for handicapped access.

Plans were discussed and a special meeting called for 4 p.m. Tuesday, June 23, when all the directors could be present. The directors did vote to have the property surveyed.

Plans are on display in the library and the general public is invited to view them and comments are solicited.

Librarian Ruth Mecera reported the registration for the Summer Reader Program is closed and 115 children have been enrolled. Reservations are still being accepted for a trip to the Pittsburgh Zoo on Saturday, June 20. The fee is $4.50 per person and any child under 12 must be accompanied by an adult. The bus will leave at 9 a.m. and return around 4:30 p.m. The trip is being sponsored by the library.

Recent books added to the library shelves are: "Kindness, What Is It?", "Love, What Is It?" and "Caring, What Is It?" in memory of Todd and Sandra Motzer. Also, "Motorcycling," and "Trails Bike Riding" in memory of Gary Counts.

Barnes Says Gun-Permit Money Was Stolen From Safe

By BOB EICHENLAUB
Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Former county treasurer T. William Barnes testified in Greene County Court Monday that revenues from 9,096 gun permits sold during his 12 years in office were used as an operating fund to make change at the counter, and at no time were used by him personally, or by the office, for improper purposes.

He also testified that as much as $2,900 of the money was stolen when the treasurer's office was burglarized in 1977.

Barnes asked for the court hearing after the board of county auditors ruled last year that the former treasurer owed the county $3,355 covering the period from 1970 through 1979, charging that he ignored a legal requirement to turn permit revenues over to the county on a regular basis. Barnes denies he owes the money.

The auditors — Viola G. Donovan, Genevieve M. Morrow and Betty June Long — first became aware that such a fund existed when Barnes turned in $665.50 at the time he left office in December 1979. Since they did not know about the money they had never audited it.

Barnes testified that the money was kept in the safe until the burglary in 1977, and after that was kept in a cigar box in a desk drawer where everyone in the office had access to it during the day to make change at the counter.

"I never took any of it and put it in my pocket," he said.

He conceded that he had never made any accounting of the money to the county until he turned over what was in the fund when he left office.

The auditors, after becoming aware that the treasurer's office received revenues from the sale of gun permits, reviewed all receipts back to 1970 to come up with the figure of $4,548, based on the cost of 50 cents for each permit. Prior to 1973, however, Barnes was entitled to keep 20 cents out of each sale as his fee.

Starting in 1973, after the treasurer's office became a salaried office rather than a fee office, he was required to turn over the entire 50 cents to the county. It is for this reason that the amount being sought is $3,355.

Much of the testimony at the hearing centered on the 1977 burglary.

Mrs. Donovan, chairman of the board of auditors, said that nothing was said at the time about gun permit receipts being money stolen from the office safe. She said that she had received a report from Mrs. Ruth Shultz, deputy treasurer, that the stolen money totaled $4,292 and consisted of tax revenues and money belonging to the Tax Claim Bureau.

"No mention was ever made to the auditors that there was any such thing as gun permit money or that it was stolen," she said.

Mrs. Shultz, while agreeing that she had never mentioned the money to the auditors, testified that she had told Chief Clerk Herbert Cox about the money being stolen, and that he had told her he would testify to that effect when the auditors held a hearing in the matter. Her husband, Kenneth Shultz, confirmed that he had heard her tell Cox.

At that hearing in October 1980, however, Cox testified that he could not recall being told about the money by Mrs. Shultz.

Ewing B. Pollock, attorney for the auditors, introduced testimony taken at the auditors' hearing into the record, noting that it included a report of the Waynesburg Borough police investigation of the burglary and stating that police were never told about any loss of gun permit revenues.

John McIlvane, attorney for Barnes, said that it is his position that Barnes cannot be held responsible for the money which was stolen from the safe and that therefore the only money at issue is $463 of 1978 and 1979 receipts which were not turned in.

"You aren't claiming that there was any fraud here, are you?" he asked Mrs. Donovan.

"Whether by fraud or by neglect, we think this money is due the county," she answered.

Judge Glenn Toothman directed that the testimony be transcribed and said that arguments in the case will be scheduled within 30 days.

MR. AND MRS. BURTON BROOKS

Couple Celebrates 62nd Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Brooks will observe their 62nd wedding anniversary on Friday, June 12, 1981. For the past four years they have made their home with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alvie Black, 711 Providence Drive, Monroeville.

From 1929 until they moved to Monroeville they lived in Greene County on the Brooks family property at Dunns Station R.D.2. They were married June 12, 1919, in the West Washington Methodist Church parsonage by the Rev. Thomas Morris.

Mrs. Brooks is the daughter of the late George and Minnie Bradford Pettit who lived on Fayette Street. Her husband is the son of the late William Zelia and Nancy Elizabeth Meek Brooks. He is a retired Jessop Steel Company employee.

When they lived in Washington following their marriage they were members of the Broad Street Baptist Church and when they moved to Dunns Station were members of the Swarts Methodist Church. The Brookses are parents of William B. Brooks, at home, Mrs. Royal (Sarah) Sprowls, Amity; Mrs. Alvie (Gene) Black, Monroeville; and Carl W. Brooks, Ravenna, Ohio. One son, Elmer B. Brooks, is deceased.

Bible Research With Computer

WAYNESBURG — A Wayneburg College faculty member is working on a research project that will expand understanding in the area of scholarly Biblical study through the use of a computer.

Dr. John Abercrombie, assistant professor of religion at Wayneburg College, is working on a Biblical research program on the Old Testament Book of Kings II. The project is partially supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities and is being conducted in conjunction with the Old Greek Lexicon Project.

Abercrombie explained that the project has two major aims and said considerable progress in the last six months has been made. "The first is to develop and refine our existing programs for date entry, maintenance, processing and printing on Wayneburg College's computer system. The second is to make a scholarly contribution to the understandings of this text."

The programming of the project is nearly complete, Abercrombie noted. "We have developed more than 30 programs to accomplish various

Our energy-conscious world can learn an important lesson from the candle that flickers out. The problem is not that its fuel is all gone. The fuel has been dissipated so it is no longer in a usable state.

The flickering candle conveys a religious lesson, too. Some of us burn out spiritually. Not because we lack God-given resources. Because we let those resources dissolve in a hodgepodge of confusion and doubt.

The ancient Psalmist called God's Word a lamp for his feet and a light for his path.

Keep close to your church or synagogue and its teaching. The spiritual resources we constantly renew cannot melt away.

Lack Of Money Delays Start Of Greene County's SYEP

By BOB EICHENLAUB
Greene County Editor
WAYNESBURG — The kids have been hired, program monitors are ready to start work, and 32 work site sponsors have been obtained. The Greene County Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP) is, in a word, ready to go. Except for one important detail. No money has been made available. "We can't possibly put any people to work until we get the money to pay them and we can't seem to find out when that will be," George K. Stennett of Waynesburg said Tuesday. Stennett is executive director of Greene County Industrial Developments Inc., which administers federal manpower training programs for the county. The county was notified last February that it would be allocated $121,000 to operate the program under Title IV of the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA). It was told to submit its preliminary plan by March 16 and its final plan by April 15 so that the state could review and approve them in time to get the program underway by June 1.

Stennett said the county program was approved in plenty of time by the Pennsylvania Balance of State Manpower Council, which supervises allocation and administration of the federal manpower funds in smaller counties such as Greene. Acting on the council's authorization, Stennett has signed up 67 young people and has hired two monitors for the SYEP, which is designed to provide summer jobs for disadvantaged young people between the ages of 16 and 21. They are paid the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour for between 35 and 40 hours of work each week for public and non-profit agencies, such as municipalities, school districts and authorities. They are also provided with training programs throughout the summer. "The program is supposed to run for 10 weeks, which is why the June 1 start-up date was important," Stennett said. "Most of the participants are high school students and can only work until classes begin at the end of August. With this kind of a delay it will probably be impossible to run the program for the full 10 weeks."

He also pointed out that a full-day career program has already been scheduled for program participants on Tuesday, June 23. "We've already arranged for speakers to come and speak to the participants about job opportunities," the GCID executive said. "I just hope we are underway by that time." A check with James McCarron, press information officer for the state Department of Labor, indicates it might be. He explained that the holdup has resulted because of failure of the U.S. Department of Labor to make the SYEP funds available to the state. "We couldn't tell the counties to go ahead until we were sure the federal funds would be forthcoming," he said. McCarron said, however, that the state has just now received that authorization, and that "letters will go out to the counties tomorrow or Thursday advising them to initiate their programs. I would think they could get started by next week."

Most of the 67 young people employed in Greene County will work as laborers, assistant janitors and as aides of various kinds. The sponsors who agreed to provide them with work are responsible for their job supervision. Municipalities utilizing the young people will be Carmichaels, Greensboro and Waynesburg boroughs and Center, Cumberland, Dunkard, Franklin, Morgan, Richhill, Springhill and Washington townships, for a total of 21 of the 67 people. Eight others will work for water and sewer authorities and two for the county housing authority. Each of the five school districts will provide jobs for three employees, for a total of 15. Of the others, four will work as library assistants at the Bowlby and Flenniken library, one for the Association for Retarded Citizens as a residential aide, two at the county vo-tech school, two at the historical society museum, four for the county maintenance department, one for the county recreation department, two for the Southeastern Greene Health Center, and two as bathroom attendants at the MonView Park pool in Greensboro.

Waynesburg Band Enjoys Sweet Sound Of Success

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Sweat and toil on the high school practice field is not confined to the athletic teams which normally have only a short time in the public spotlight.

Band members, especially those at Waynesburg Central High School, are busy almost 12 months a year. For many observers, the band program is the greatest bargain in the educational system, considering the number of students involved and the total budget expense. Although the state mandates that music classes be offered in our schools, participation in the band is a voluntary, extracurricular activity that annually attracts over 100 students. No other extracurricular activity offers so much to so many. At Waynesburg Central, the band program is ranked right up there with the wrestling program when school activities are discussed. Much of this can be attributed to the dedication of Waynesburg native Gene Cappellini who returned to his alma mater in 1970. After graduating from Salem College and leading the West Greene band program for two years, Cappellini took over a band at Waynesburg Central that had dwindled to only 33 members. He immediately initiated the color guard which is comprised of the rifle squad and flag bearers. In doing so, positions were opened for another 35 girls to participate in band activities. He expanded the band to include the stage band which had been inactive for years, the wind symphony, concert band and pit band. Music students were then able to play more advanced arrangements. In a short time, the band expanded to include almost 140 members and gained a reputation that has resulted in more invitations than the band can handle. According to Cappellini, "We receive more invitations than we can accept, considering our budget."

The band's reputation was gained by winning a truckload of trophies in highly-competitive concerts and festivals. An indication of the band's success in the past decade under the baton of Cappellini can be seen in the trophy case at the high school. "There are 87 trophies and plaques in the trophy cases and 83 have been received since 1970," Cappellini said.

added expense of making the band an extracurricular activity costs the school district about $12,000 — a small price when one considers 137 youngsters are involved in a wholesome activity that presents to the world a glowing impression of Waynesburg Central High School. A large measure of the success can be attributed to a fine boosters club which has been responsible for the many "extras" required during the course of a school term. "The boosters have been a tremendous help," Cappellini said. "They help with transportation and buy equipment and the little extra things we need after the budget has been established," he added.

Jefferson-Morgan Board Conducts Busy Session

By STAN DIAMOND
Staff Writer

JEFFERSON — In a busy session Monday night the Jefferson-Morgan School Board hired three teachers, accepted four resignations, opened bids for replacement of exterior high school doors, adopted a new elementary science textbook series, and awarded a cafeteria food service contract for the coming school.

With two members of the nine-member board voting against the motion, the board awarded a one-year contract to Custom Management Corp. of Kingston, to provide cafeteria food service for the 1981-82 school year on their low bid of $25,920. In a related matter, the board set lunch prices for the coming year at 75 cents for all students, $1.50 for adults and 20 cents for milk. They are the same prices as last school year.

Bids for the replacement of 40 exterior doors at the junior-senior high school were opened and turned over to the administration for review and recommendation. Three contractors bid on steel doors and "total doors" which include the hardware in their construction. Bids received were from Fairchance Lumber Co., Fairchance, at $27,500 for steel doors and $33,500 for total doors; Val Calussi of Eighty Four at $30,700 and $34,800; and George Sirakos Construction of Pittsburgh at $34,868 and $29,678.

The board accepted the retirement of elementary principal George L. Misher, who has been employed by the district for 40 years; and elementary teachers Thelma Harrison and June Minor. Also accepted was the resignation of James Lovetere, band director and music instructor.

Lovetere's resignation came as a surprise to board members early in the meeting when a group of band parents asked if it was true that Lovetere was going to resign with the group spokesman saying the parents "felt that he had done a fine job with the band and had really brought it up since he had been there." At that point the board had not come to the resignations section of the agenda and since Lovetere had only submitted it to the administration on June 12 it was not on the agenda. But Forrest V. Cottle, district business manager who is also board secretary, dug deeply into his ever-present pile of papers and produced Lovetere's resignation letter.

Kenneth Macek, superintendent, said the resignation had also come as a surprise to the administration. He said he has had several talks with Lovetere and knew he was not completely happy with the schedule, which did not allow what he felt was enough time for band director duties. Joseph Davis, high school principal, said he had also talked with Lovetere during the past school year and had eliminated several study hall duties. Macek told the band parents that he agreed with them that Lovetere "has done an excellent job in the few years he's been here. But frankly he gave us an ultimatum — he wanted to be just band director."

Lovetere also teaches general music classes for seventh, eighth and ninth graders. In his letter of resignation Lovetere said in part, "The lack of time to work with the band program, poor scheduling of band students, and an ineffective discipline policy are the main reasons for my decision. My interest in teaching is band directing. A successful band program is centered around individual instruction for students."

Offered employment as elementary teachers were Shirley Parker of Clarksville, and Melissa Gilliland of Marianna R.D.1. Both have teaching experience. Their salaries were set at $10,835 each. Offered employment as a reading specialist was Alan Rafail, of Uniontown. His salary was set at $12,910.

Jackets Nest New Recruits

By DOUG BELL
Sports Writer

WAYNESBURG — When a college football team posts a 5-3 record, finishes strong and loses only five members of its starting lineup, the long, hot days of early summer should be a peaceful time of restful reflection.

But not in the case of Waynesburg College. Head football coach Hayden Buckley was hardly disappointed in the Yellow Jackets' performance in the 1980-81 season, but he is no less enthusiastic about his new crop of recruits for the upcoming season. "I think we did very good," said Buckley in a telephone interview Tuesday night, as he looked over his list of incoming football-playing freshmen.

"We have a freshman class of about 45 coming in.

"We lost three starters to graduation, one because of grades, and another two-year starter was dropped from the team," Buckley continued. "We've got to really work at finding a defensive tackle, a nose guard, and a linebacker." Many local high school players will be among the candidates vying for those open spots in the Yellow Jacket defense. Kevin Joswiakowski, a 6-2, 197-pound graduate of Fort Cherry High School, will be in contention for the open linebacker slot in the Waynesburg defense. "We think he's going to be a great prospect for us," Buckley said. "He's a good athlete. He's got a chance."

Another "good" athlete attending the Yellow Jackets' camp this summer will be Jeff Cettin, a 6-3, 187-pound quarterback out of Mapletown. Cettin was named the Outstanding Athlete in Greene County in his senior year, and Buckley has high hopes for the freshman. Even though Waynesburg's starting quarterback, Mike Forbes, will return to the lineup as a junior this year, Buckley may still be able to find a spot for Cettin — possibly at wide receiver.

"He may be a great one for us," Buckley said. "We're going to give him a shot — if not at back-up quarterback, then at wide receiver. "He's got good speed and size. He's my kind of athlete — he can play all sports."

Other local high school players planning to continue their careers at Waynesburg include Washington's Rich Barnes, West Greene's Dave Ziefel, Terry Jones and Jon Lightner, Crowley of Fort Cherry and Tim Daudet of Avella.

Man Pulled To Shore

CLARKSVILLE — Clarksville firemen Sunday rescued a man who was caught by an undercurrent while floating down Ten Mile Creek in an innertube.

Glenn Gasica, whose address is not known, was caught by the current after he went over a four-foot dam wall at the pump station near the Clyde shaft, a fire company member said. Firemen were called by a man at the pump station. Fireman Den Benyi, secured to the shore with a rope, swam out to Gasica and threw him a line so he could be pulled ashore. He was not injured.

Case Settled

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court Friday approved a $2,500 settlement in a damage suit which was brought following the death of a Waynesburg man on June 10, 1978.

The lawsuit was brought by Pamela Berdine of Imperial, widow of John William Berdine, who was 24 at the time of his death. Defendants were Robert Harvey Miller of Waynesburg and Suburban Motors, Inc., Waynesburg R.D.2. Berdine was a passenger in a Jeep which rolled over on Route 616, south of Waynesburg. The vehicle, owned by Suburban Motors, was being driven by Miller.

J-M Rehires Football Staff

JEFFERSON — Bob Antion, head football coach at Jefferson-Morgan High School, was rehired for a second year during a Monday night meeting of the school district. Antion was rehired by an 8-1 vote of the board. Assistant football coaches rehired were athletic director Stanley Sagosky and Tony Barbetta. The board also authorized the administration to post as open an additional assistant football coaching position.

School Building Delay Can Be Costly Matter

Five years ago, the Southeastern Greene School District was considering the construction of a new, centralized elementary school to replace three existing buildings.

At that time it was estimated that it would cost $2.3 million to erect a building to accommodate 650 students from kindergarten to the sixth grade, complete with all ancillary facilities.

The plan created a storm of protest which resulted in the election of Concerned Citizen candidates who campaigned on a platform of opposing the project, both from the standpoint of cost and that of eliminating "neighborhood" schools.

Armed with the knowledge that the new board would have the required votes to scuttle the project after those opposing it took office, the Concerned Citizens took the school board to court and obtained an injunction which barred the pro-building board from taking any additional steps to carry out its plan.

It seems ironic that the anti-building board last week approved a plan which calls for the complete renovation and expansion of two of the three existing buildings at an estimated cost of $5,350,000, which is about $3 million more than the district would have spent to erect that centralized building five years ago.

It also seems to be stretching it a bit to label as "expansion" a project which calls for an existing four-room building to be converted to a building containing 13 regular classrooms, a special education room, a kindergarten room, a multi-purpose room with kitchen, a library, art and music rooms, and an administrative and health suite. That's seems to come as close to erecting a new building as anything can be without actually starting from scratch.

Incidentally, the estimated cost of erecting a complete new centralized building is now estimated at $6.6 million. What a difference five years can make.

It should be safe to assume that there are quite a few residents of the Southeastern Greene School District who now wish they hadn't opposed the project quite so adamantly back in 1976.

REPORT FROM . . .

HARRISBURG

BY

Rep. H. William DeWeese

MAKING A BUDGET: A NOCTURNAL FINALE HARRISBURG — Last week's struggle to pass the 1981-82 fiscal year state budget was marked by a personal tragedy—and by an all-night session that exhausted just about everyone present.

On Tuesday, June 9, members arrived for the start of the session and learned the sole Republican House member, Arthur F. Earley, had died during the night of a heart attack. His death was unexpected and renewed in the minds of all here, the often ignored sense of human mortality and the precariousness of both life and fortune.

Rep. Earley was first elected in 1978 and following his reelection in 1980, had moved to the fore in the Republican caucus as one who had strength to buck the governor, the caucus and the party in a tough vote-welfare reform—earlier this spring.

Both sides of the aisle will miss his quiet determination and firmness when confronted with the other issues facing us today—unemployment compensation, welfare reform, PennDOT, etc.

His death reduced the already rickety Republican margin of control in the House to 101—one vote less than the constitutional majority needed to pass legislation. If anyone ever asks another, "Why vote? What possible difference can one vote make?" then let him ponder the current state of affairs well.

One special election will be held June 23 to fill the House seat vacated by Roy Wilt, now a state senator and another to fill the late Rep. Earley's seat awaits the call of the speaker of the house Matthew J. Ryan. Usually 60 days is the rule, so this contest will not be decided until sometime in August. When the House convened on the morning of June 10, many sensed it would be a long day. When the House finally adjourned shortly before 7 a.m. on June 11, the budget was at last history. Recess after recess was called by the speaker, as the Republican majority struggled to corral the votes they needed. At last, during the early morning hours, the numbers 102-95 flashed on the vote board and the budget was finished.

A little later, at 6:30 a.m. the numbers read 112-88 and PennDOT was assured of an additional $192 million. They money will come from a wholesale gasoline tax on transportation fuels and will have the effect of increasing gasoline prices for most grades of fuel by an additional two cents a gallon. (This latest increase follows hard upon the heels of another two cent a gallon increase in the state gasoline tax voted in 1979.)

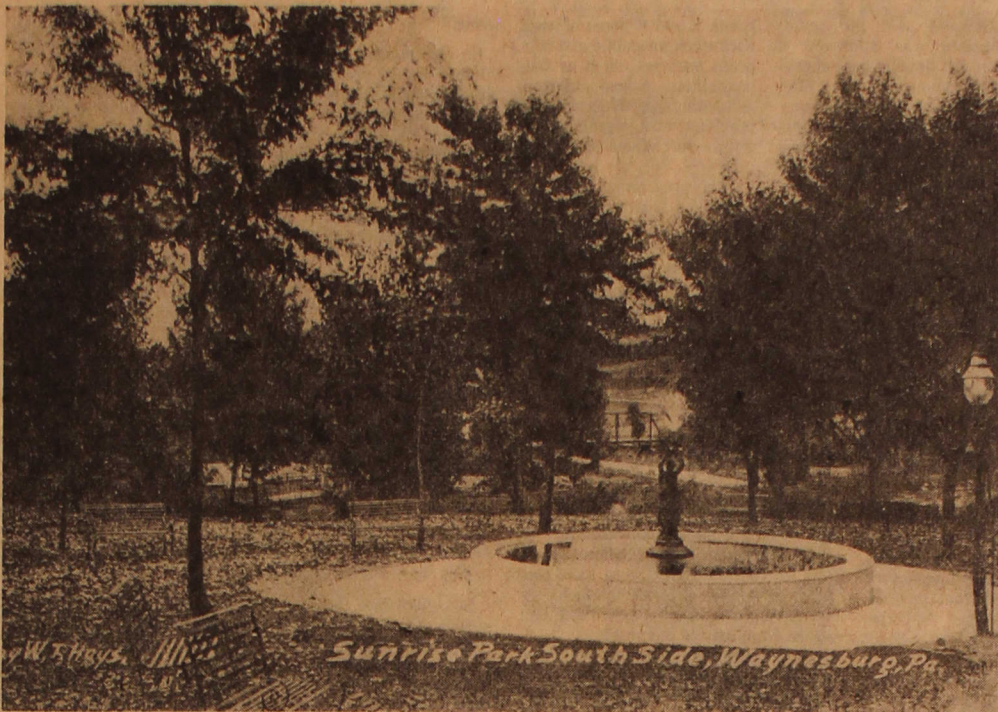

Legislators of both parties have felt the heat from constituents outraged by the cratered county roads deteriorating highways in southwestern counties of the state in particular, and all hope that the new funds will ameliorate the sorry conditions of our roads.

Legislators also believe that despite inflation and other troubles, PennDOT has been given ample funds from the two increases—and they want to see results before that department ever comes before the House and Senate again to ask for additional funds.

After passage by the house, the budget goes to the Senate. A conference committee will meet them and when the report is approved, the upward and conflict cease. The House will continue to meet during the rest of June, and committee meetings will continue throughout the summer.

Yey, the passage of the budget last week removes all possibility of another brawl like the one in 1977 (When the document was not passed until August), or even 1979 (which was also late) and which was not passed until the wee hours of the Fourth of July. Anyone for next year?

Faces From The Past—Do You Recognize Them

The former fountain in the East Greene Street public park at Waynesburg is shown above. It is another of the old-time picture postcards of Waynesburg scenes in the early 1900's which have been purchased by Henry Rodney, a former Waynesburg College student, in postal card auctions in the greater Philadelphia area. The card was postmarked Oct. 25, 1911 and was mailed from Waynesburg to Miss Sylvia Hewitt of Greensboro by a man named Walter who omitted his last name.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

One of Greene County's versions of the "Great American Dream Come True" has reached another turning point with the sale of the Albert Grocery Store in the West Waynesburg section of Franklin Township to a person outside the Albert family.

This particular version of the American dream of hard work, family togetherness and a worthwhile goal—and in this case, the rearing of a family—will also be a part of the future.

It was shortly after the turn of the century that Sherman Albert, a native of Syria, and his wife, Penelope, a native of Greece, located in Monessen, where he was employed in a tin mill.

A few years later they came to Waynesburg after a short stay at Clarksburg, W.Va. By that time, Mr. Albert had become skilled in the tin house department of the mill and became superintendent of that work in the Waynesburg mill on the recommendation of Hugh Scanlon, the mill superintendent.

Shortly after arriving here, Mr. Albert had the opportunity to buy a small grocery store in West Waynesburg from the late Charles Sowers Sr. and the late Harry Weaver, which was located within a stone's throw of the mill.

The second source of income was acquired as a sort of insurance policy against mild inflation which prevailed at the time and also as a means of knitting their family ties closer that they may have been without it.

Soon the family and the store became inseparably united especially after the tin mill closed leaving only its vacant buildings and many longings for its re-opening but which never happened.

What with the mill shut-down, Mr. Albert, a man of great strength and boundless energy, worked endlessly in improving the store property. He also built an apartment for his family on the second floor where he and Mrs. Albert reared their four sons and five daughters. The parents and offspring all had total involvement in making their family dream change from a wish to a prosperous reality.

A strong rapport also developed between the Albert family and their customers. From year to year they shared their joys and sorrows. The pleasant atmosphere that evolved between the Albert family and the store's patrons extended through two and three generations of both groups.

For many of the store's patrons, shopping was a social call as well as a shopping trip. The customers had implicit faith in the recommendations of the store owners, their four sons and five daughters and also their employees.

Older patrons were especially appreciative of the consideration given them as shopping became a burden rather than a pleasure but which they clung to as long as they could walk or drive to the store.

Following the first death in the immediate family, that of Mr. Albert, his wife continued as head of the store as long as her health permitted. She, in turn, was succeeded by the second oldest daughter, Miss Sophia Albert who had served as her mother's chief assistant for as long as Mrs. Albert could be in the store.

As previously mentioned, all of the family were a part of the store while still living at home and were widely known among the two and sometimes three generations of customers.

It was a store which combined the efficiency and instinctively good sense of merchandising with the personal touch and friendliness of an old-fashioned country store. It was, in short, a place where rural and small town folk liked to deal.

The merchandise was tailored to the needs and preferences of the customers and was never shuffled around from place to place to trick customers into visiting all parts of the store.

The rapport between the owners and staff of the store was so close that most brands of merchandise preferred by the heads of households were remembered by heart by the clerks which saved many extra trips for youngsters or absent husbands who couldn't remember one brand, flavor or size of any merchandise cleaning up their number four shovels that they bought at the hardware store and are washing their work clothes. They have to be at the mine at 4 a.m. because the straw boss is picking a crew at 4:05 — better not be late!

All I can say is thank you, Mr. Church, for taking us back 60 years to the "good ol' days."

Bill Watkins, Waynesburg, Pa., Local 2874, District 5

Yeah, a few years back we didn't need two cars in the garage. As a matter of fact, we didn't even need one. Besides the pay wasn't so good and most miners could walk to work; it helped their circulation. Back then there was no black lung (miners smoked too much); there was no inflation (inflation was for balloons). Most of my friends are preferred by the real heads of the households—the wives, mothers and/or sisters of the many far-flung households who were served by Albert's store all the way west to the West Virginia line at Wind Ridge.

It, in short, became a part of the lives of the hundreds of local and rural families to the extent that the new owner of the store will continue to run it under the Albert name.

Word of the sale of the store and the fact it will continue as a store was greeted with joy by older residents of the West Waynesburg community for whom a trip to the store where they could chat a bit in person with other shoppers, was often a pleasant relief from day time TV dramas and their endless escapades in ceaseless dilemmas in the electronic tubes.

Although the grocery store was the hub about which the odyssey of the Albert family revolved, it was by no means the only achievement by which family members made their American dream come true.

One son, the late Eddie Albert, opened a small one-room restaurant which through the years has been developed into a large scale restaurant and motel. Their daughter Ann, and her husband Russell Scott, established the community's first automated laundry.

Their youngest son, Tom is the owner of one of the community's largest mobile home parks located in Morrisville. Their oldest son, Sherman owns a market in a suburban area of Cleveland. Their daughter Helen and her husband Louis Georgalis, owned a market in Carmichaels before they retired and moved to Parsippany, N.J. Two other daughters, Mrs. Asa Scott and Mrs. Raymond Menni live in Uniontown.

Their son George, who continues to live in Waynesburg, established his own home improvement business—and in doing so has saved Greene County's colonial day, log courthouse on East Greene Street. It was built in 1796 and is thought to be the only one of its kind in the United States.

Members of the family have been active in many community groups, cultural and educational organizations.

Their son Tom achieved singular fame in scholastic and intercollegiate athletics and was the county's first to win a national wrestling title while attending Pitt. He is now a teacher at Trinity High School in Washington.

Although she has retired from business Miss Sophia Albert will continue active as a volunteer escort at Greene County Memorial Hospital, the Waynesburg Business and Professional Women's Club, the Waynesburg Rebekah Lodge and St. George Episcopal Church.

And that, in brief, is only a short account of how one family's American dream came true in Greene County.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Nice to see a familiar face along the courthouse wall again this week when long-time Waynesburger Calvin Fisher, who now lives in California, arrived in town for a visit. A former employee at the old A&P store in Waynesburg he has spent the past several years on the west coast. He is among a constantly growing number of Waynesburgers who are impressed by the excellent appearance of the courthouse plaza as the first step in the downtown revitalization if the High Street area of the town.

Another of the series of so-called "high intensity" rainfalls predicted by a state highways department engineer at the Greene County Supervisors Convention last month hit Waynesburg last Saturday evening. The blinding rate at which the fall occurred made it almost impossible to travel in the broad daylight at that time. So far, the intensity of this new type rainfalls continue to bewilder the scientific community and is making it almost impossible for farmers to harvest any early maturing varieties of hay.

Although illness at the time of the Waynesburg College 1981 commencement that was held last month in the accelerated graduation made it impossible for one of its oldest graduates, Douglas Gold to be in town for that event. He made it back last weekend and once again renewed his long, long campus day friendships with Worthy Scott of the Blair Apartments on West High Street and the Denny sisters, Josephine and Denny and Mrs. Helen D. Howard. They are among the few living alumni from the early 1900s who get together. Gold, who is 90 years old, had improved enough to make the trip. Scott and Josephine Denny were both members of the class of 1916; Mrs. Howard in the class of 1917 and Gold in the class of 1914. Gold's early career was with the U.S. Indian Service in Montana and he is still active in psychological testing work at the University of North Carolina.

Expresses Concern For Injured Dog

Dear Sir:

"My schedule is full," replied Mr. Oliver Kelley, Greene County dog law enforcement officer.

Monday morning I found a severely injured collie in the field behind my home. After telephoning around the neighborhood and not locating the dog's owner, I took it upon myself to contact Kelley.

Ironically, he is unable to be reached during his working hours. All calls and emergencies are directed to his home and are returned after 4:30 p.m. At this time he is not permitted to take the state vehicle out on call. Hence, animal emergencies must wait until the next day.

At approximately 4:35 he returned my call. By then the dog had seemed to improve. Kelley was told to wait another day in hopes of the dog's recovery and located its owner.

Later the same evening, at approximately 9:30 p.m., I telephoned Kelley and told him the animal had become worse. I ask him to come and take the dog Tuesday. At this time he said that his schedule was full. He had planned out his day and could not fit the collie into his schedule until Wednesday. Kelley went further to say if I wanted to dispose of the animal myself to go ahead.

To say that I am upset or disgusted is an understatement, disillusioned may be a better word. Disillusioned of the fact that an animal will be permitted to suffer in this county needlessly and a county animal shelter has not been constructed even with Harrisburg's funding available.

This second fact was brought to my attention by Kelley's supervisor, Adrian Zappa who is in charge of the 10-county area in Southwestern Pennsylvania. According to Zappa, the state has pleaded with our "concerned" commissioners to construct an animal shelter in the county. Harrisburg would provide the majority of the funds leaving a minimal cost to we, the taxpayers.

All four have been among the most loyal alumni of the college and can still recall their undergraduate days in the Boola Boola era. The most exciting campus activities were the chafing dish parties and the occasional spook parties up in Alumni Hall when Davey, the campus skeleton housed in a glass cage on the first floor, was occasionally dragged out of the case and taken to parties.

A long planned trip from Oakland, Calif. by a life-long resident of that city but whose earlier ancestors were members of a wagon-train trip from the Jefferson community in Greene County to the 1849 gold rush finally came true this week when Mrs. Jane Morris Reiff of Oakland and her two daughters, Carol Reiff and Audrey Reiff Hermle made the trip from Oakland to the home of Mrs. Janes Morris Faddis of Franklin Street, Waynesburg. From there, they visited several points in western Greene County where many members of the Morris family had lived before joining the wagon train caravan. Mrs. Reiff and Mrs. Faddis are double cousins and had communicated with each other for several years but met for the first time Tuesday. It was the first trip to Waynesburg for all three of the west coast visitors. They were immensely impressed with the beauty of the countryside at this time of the year and were especially impressed by the many hills and the beautiful grass and trees which grow so profusely at this time of year. Several members of the Morris family from Greene County became the statewide leaders of the dairy industry in California and were owners of nationally known dairy herds which they had developed by selective breeding of their herds.

Several years of correspondence between the two women preceded the visit of the California residents to Waynesburg. Mrs. Faddis is the widow of the late Col. Charles I. Faddis, who served in combat areas in both World Wars and later was a United States congressman.

Commissioners, your job is to look out for the welfare of Greene Counties. You must work toward our general concerns.

I feel it is time for we taxpayers to emphasize the animal concern. The funding is available commissioners and you must now make the move and construct an animal shelter for every living animal that may be suffering.

WAYNESBURG — Operation Outreach, operated by the Bowly Public Library, has announced a temporary change in office hours.

New temporary hours for the office located at 54 Church Street, Waynesburg, will be from 2 to 5 p.m. on Mondays and Fridays and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Wednesdays.

No Injuries In Accident

WAYNESBURG — State police reported no injuries in an accident at 12:20 p.m. Wednesday on Greene Street in Franklin Township just east of the Waynesburg Borough line.

According to investigating officers, a car being operated by Gerald Orndoff, 35, of Millsboro, and a car being operated by Larry Strosnider, 35, of Weirton, W.Va. collided near Arch Street.

Connie Evans Wed In Brave Church

BRAVE — Connie Arlene Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold V. Evans of Waynesburg R.D.6, and John Mark DeNicola, son of the Rev. and Mrs. John DeNicola of Brave, were married at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, May 30, in the Brave Assembly of God Church.

The bridegroom's father officiated at the double ring service, with Mrs. Patricia Headlee as organist and Donna J. Headlee as soloist.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. She wore a formal-length gown of angel chiffon fashioned with a high neck of alencon lace and pearls, empire waist, full bishop sleeves enhanced with alencon lace motifs, and lace cuffs edged in a ruffle. The entire bodice was done in lace and pearls and the A-line skirt and chapel train were adorned with a triple row of lace.

The bride's waltz-length veil of imported illusion, trimmed with cording and lace motifs, was attached to a matching cap of alencon lace and pearls and she carried a cascade arrangement of yellow carnations, red miniature roses, Sanja roses, stephanotis and baby's breath, centered with a corsage of the same flowers.

Mrs. Debbie Simpson of Cameron, W.Va., served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Patricia Lohr and

Thelma Callaghan Honored By Club

CARMICHAELS — For nearly 30 years, Thelma Callaghan has been chronicling the events of Carmichaels as a correspondent for the Observer-Reporter, reporting on everything from fires to women's club meetings.

She is a familiar figure at meetings of borough council, the school board, sewerage authority, township supervisors, chamber of commerce, recreation authority and many others.

It's been a busy 30 years spent in the background while the limelight was on others. Her turn in the spotlight came Friday night when Mrs. Callaghan was honored as the 1981 recipient of the Outstanding Women's Service Award presented by the Junior Women's Club of Carmichaels Area.

The awards banquet was held at the Carmichaels Grange. Members of Mrs. Callaghan's family, her friends and community leaders were present to pay tribute.

She has served as publicity chairman for the King Coal Association which has staged the Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show for the past 19 years, receiving that organization's service award in 1974. She is a charter member of the Greene Academy of Art and has been its voice in the news media for the past nine years for the restoration and activities at the historic Greene Academy building. In 1979, she received the Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce recognition award for her many years of work in publicizing its activities.

With it all, she and her husband, the late William J. Callaghan, raised two daughters, Linda Braun of Mt. Lebanon and Thelma Lee Ferris of San Diego, Calif. She has five grandchildren and two brothers, Glenn Donley of Ogden, Utah, and Harold Donley of Elters. Her parents are Charles and Gala Rich Donley of Carmichaels. She is the sixth generation of her family to reside in Greene County.

She now works part-time, which permits her to travel extensively and to spend part of each winter with her daughter in California.

Betsy Bailey, president the Junior Women's Club of Carmichaels, presented Mrs. Callaghan with the service award plaque.

In reply to the tributes paid to her, she thanked those who attended and said, "It's a wonderful feeling to be classed in the same category with Ruth (Atalski) and Sarah (Ruth)." They were the first two recipients of the award and were among those who attended.

"Her commitment to her community is widely recognized," said fellow writer Marcia Biddle in the principal address. "In Carmichaels, she is an outstanding example of the journalist's commitment to the principle of the public's right to know, and anyone who has read her articles through the years knows what is happening in Carmichaels."

Her service to her community doesn't stop there.

She was recently appointed to her second term on the board of trustees of the Fleniken Memorial Public Library and is a member of the special building committee. She is also a member of the Greene Academy Chapter of the Daughters of the American

Mrs. Callaghan's writing has played a big part in helping things happen which are good for Carmichaels, because she has been chosen by organizations needing someone to publicize their public service projects.

Golfer Attains Elusive Goal

WAYNESBURG — Bob Rohanna, one of the owners of a golf course near Waynesburg, has been playing golf for more years than he cares to admit — but he had never scored the elusive hole-in-one.

He and his 16-year-old daughter, Jamie, decided to play a round Thursday night and on the way to the second tee, Jamie asked her father to explain just what a hole-in-one was.

Bob explained it was a matter of hitting a tee shot directly into the hole and used a wedge while driving the 120-yard, number two hole. They walked to the green and — you guessed it — found the ball in the hole — the first hole-in-one of his career.

Carpenter

Charles L. Carpenter, 65, of Waynesburg R.D.2, well-known Waynesburg area businessman, died at 11:10 a.m. Sunday, June 14, 1981, in his home of a heart attack.

Chief Pleased With Scanners

WAYNESBURG — The purchase and installation of new radio scanners in one of the Waynesburg Borough police cars and two of the Waynesburg Volunteer Fire Company ambulances will vastly improve service to the public, according to Tim Hawfield, borough police chief.

Each department will now be able to monitor the calls being taken by the other. By knowing about situations immediately, the ambulance or police car can respond to an incident much quicker.

Hawfield pointed out that ambulance crews often run into a situation where police aid is needed. He cited a violent patient, an overweight patient, or a patient with a suspicious wound. By being able to hear details immediately, police can be at the scene to investigate or help within minutes.

Fire calls will also be monitored and police can aid with traffic control much quicker.

Police were installing the scanner in their new police car Wednesday. Money for the scanners has been provided by the fire department.

Hawfield said the new police car, a Chevrolet Impala rental unit from Bortz Chevrolet, could not have come at a better time. "We held our breath on the other two cars," he said. The patrol cars have 100,000 and 86,000 miles on them respectively.

More Than 800 Participate In Playground Activities

WAYNESBURG — Over 800 local children took advantage of the first week of activities at Central Playground in Waynesburg according to playground director William Winters.

In the annual opening day bubble gum contest, Rachelle Metz blew the biggest bubble and Sharon Butler, the smallest bubble. The "bubble-off" winner was Holly McDonald and in the "gum-in-the-face" contest, winners were Tiger Blair, Robert Valentine, Calvin Heasley, John LaGeza and Holly Dodds.

Noise and scream night was also held the first week and the longest, uninterrupted scream was offered by Tim Boyd. Brother Robby had the softest scream.

Special events scheduled this week include a cracker-eating contest Wednesday and a pool party Thursday.

Children accompanied by the playground staff will be
