Rebel Church Is Sued By Presbytery

The Washington Presbytery has filed legal action in Greene County Court in an effort to recover all real estate and personal property of a Carmichaels church which voted last year to leave the United Presbyterian Church in the United States and join the Reformed Presbyterian Church of the Evangelical Synod.

Darrell C. Robertson, president of the Presbytery board of trustees, has asked the court to appoint the Presbytery as liquidating receivers to oversee the sale and distribution of all assets of what was once the Greene Valley United Presbyterian Church. It is now called the Greene Valley Reformed Presbyterian Church.

The rule is returnable at 10 a.m. Monday, Sept. 14, at which time a court hearing is scheduled to be held.

The Greene Valley Church was created in 1968 through merger of the First Presbyterian Church of Carmichaels, Nemaquin Community Presbyterian Church, New Providence (Glades) Presbyterian Church, Muddy Creek Presbyterian Church and Crucible Presbyterian Church.

The Presbytery, in its complaint, states that the Greene Valley articles of incorporation adopted in 1978 stipulated that the new church would be governed by the constitution of the United Presbyterian Church, and that the constitution stipulates that when a church is dissolved its property remains with the United Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Harold O. Kelley, pastor of the Carmichaels church, said Friday that he and the congregation would contest the Presbytery's claim. He noted that when the congregation voted to disassociate itself from the United Presbyterians in April 1980, it did so by a unanimous vote, and also pointed out that the Supreme Court has handed down a ruling which obviates the section of the United Presbyterian constitution relating to the ownership of property of a dissolved church.

"The church voluntarily associated itself with the United Presbyterian Church in 1975 and it has now voluntarily disassociated itself," he said.

Church property includes church buildings in Carmichaels and Nemaquin, a new education building at Carmichaels, buses and other vehicles, and other assets.

The Presbytery complaint states that it received a letter April 21, 1980, from C. Ronald Miller, Greene Valley clerk of sessions, informing it of the vote to disassociate, and that it wrote back that the action "was unacceptable." Following efforts to resolve the matter, the Presbytery on Nov. 11, 1980, voted to dissolve the church and notified the Greene Valley congregation that all property was to be turned over, but that it refused to do so.

It states that Kelley and Miller "have persisted in their unlawful course of conduct and have neglected and refused to surrender to Washington Presbytery and real and personal property of the Greene Valley United Presbyterian Church."

Governor Welcomes Queen

Lisa Gavlik, the 1980 Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Queen, was a recent guest of Governor Dick Thornburgh in Harrisburg. She toured the Capitol and spoke to the House of Representatives and the Senate. Miss Gavlik will relinquish her crown Sunday, Aug. 23, when the new queen will be selected during the 28th Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show.

Pastor, Service Station Owner Seek Nomination In November

WAYNESBURG — A Waynesburg minister who is now serving on the board and a Waynesburg service station owner are seeking nomination to the Central Greene School Board in the November election.

The Rev. Ralph W. Brownfield, pastor of the Washington Street United Methodist Church, has applied for endorsements from both the Greene County Democratic and Republican Committees. Jack Beabout, owner of a service station at the corner of Greene and Washington Streets, has applied only for endorsement of the Democratic Committee. He is a Democratic precinct committeeman in the First Ward, Precinct I.

Party endorsement is necessary before a candidate's name can be placed on the ballot for the November election. The two men want to be the candidate to complete the unexpired term of Robert Teagarden, one of three board members from Waynesburg, who resigned several months ago for reasons of health.

The school board subsequently appointed the Rev. Brownfield to fill the vacancy, but the appointment is good only until the annual board reorganization meeting in December. At that time, the person elected in November will be installed to complete Teagarden's term, which runs through 1983.

By law, each political party is entitled to endorse one candidate to the Greene County Election Board, and only that person's name will be placed on the ballot. Since school directors are entitled to cross-file and run as candidates of both parties, the same individual can be endorsed by both the Democratic and Republican committees.

Democratic Chairman William Groves and Republican Chairman Leonard Frye in June announced they would accept applications from interested persons until July 31.

As they had indicated they would do, Groves and Frye will refer the names of the applicants to Republican and Democratic precinct committeemen in Waynesburg Borough, asking for their recommendation on the name to be certified to the county board of elections.

With just one applicant, Frye said he anticipates no problem in having the Rev. Brownfield endorsed as the Republican candidate. Groves said he would meet with the borough's 10 Democratic committeemen, two in each precinct, probably later this week, to obtain their recommendation on selecting either the Rev. Brownfield or Beabout.

making terrorist threats, aggravated assault and criminal mischief.

Magistrate Bertugli dismissed the borough charges after ruling the borough police lacked jurisdiction in making the arrests without warrants or not having been in "hot pursuit" of the defendants.

Roger Bristor was arrested by Borough Detective Dave Clark after another patrolman had stopped Bristor along Route 21, just over the borough line in West Waynesburg. Porterfield and John Bristor were arrested by two other borough officers in a West Waynesburg restaurant over an hour later.

At a hearing before Bertugli on Tuesday, Detective Clark testified that he didn't think warrants were necessary considering the possible danger to the public because a felony was involved.

"I felt the lives of some people were in danger because of the alleged threats," Clark told the court. In testimony during the hearing, the brother of the police informant said one of the defendants threatened "to grenade my house."

Magistrate Rules Boro Police Lacked Jurisdiction

CARMICHAELS — Magistrate Emil Bertugli has ruled Waynesburg Borough Police lacked jurisdiction when they arrested three local men on several charges in connection with threats against a police informant. But similar charges brought by state police were upheld and the trio was bound over to court.

State police have charged John Bristor, 25, of Waynesburg Star Route, Rogersville, with conspiracy to retaliate against a witness, Roger S. Bristor, 19, also of Waynesburg Star Route, Rogersville, with terrorist threats and conspiracy to retaliate against a witness, and Roy S. Porterfield, 35, of 58 South West Street, Waynesburg, with conspiracy to retaliate against a witness,

11 Injured In Collision On Bridge

MASONTOWN — Eleven persons, seven of them children, were injured in a collision between their pickup truck and a tractor-trailer on the Masontown Bridge at 2:45 p.m. Thursday.

The children, members of five separate families, were in the back of the pickup truck which had a cap over the bed. They were en route to a picnic area near Jumboville in the mountains overlooking Uniontown.

Four adults, Arthur W. Bane, Patsy J. Bane, Denise Bane and Brenda Bane, who were accompanying the children were also injured. They are residents of Rices Landing.

Rices Landing children injured included Robert Riley, Margaret Riley and Jennifer Moore. Also injured were Carla, Lisa and Debbie Cooley and Angela K. Bane, all of Rockville, Md. They were reported to have arrived in Rices Landing Wednesday night to begin a family vacation.

Ages of the victims were not available from Masontown Borough Police who investigated the accident.

Driver of the 18-wheel truck was identified as Jeffrey Lantz McConnell, 24, of Johnstown. He escaped injury.

Police said the accident occurred on the Fayette County side of the bridge and caused a detour for over two hours.

All the injured were taken by ambulances from both Masontown and Carmichaels to Uniontown Hospital where they were treated and released. One of the girls suffered a broken leg while all of the others received multiple abrasions, contusions and lacerations.

Man Dies In W.Va. Accident

GLEN DALE, W.Va. — A former Cameron, W.Va. man died in Allegheny General Hospital in Pittsburgh Saturday as the result of injuries received Friday night in a one-car accident near Glen Dale, W.Va.

Police said Timothy A. Byerly, 22, of Fourth Street, Moundsville, W.Va., was a passenger in a sports car operated by Gerald Lanham of Moundsville which crashed into a hillside along Route 7 at 8:45 p.m. Friday.

Lanham, who was treated and released from Reynolds Memorial Hospital, was cited by Marshall County officials for driving while under the influence. Lanham pleaded guilty to the charge and was lodged in jail.

Another passenger in the car, Lewis Reynolds was also injured but was released from Reynolds Memorial Hospital following treatment. Byerly was taken by a Life Flight helicopter to the Pittsburgh hospital but died of his injuries at noon Saturday.

Marshall County police said Lanham had been stopped earlier in Moundsville after he collided with a parked auto. However, he fled the scene and struck a second vehicle before crashing into the hillside.

Carmichaels Negotiations Continuing

CARMICHAELS — Teacher contract negotiations are continuing in the Carmichaels Area School District, and both sides agree some movement is evident although many issues remain unsettled.

"We hope we'll be able to get an agreement by the time school opens," Louis Pascuzzo, school board secretary and a member of the district negotiating team said. The 1981-82 school year is scheduled to begin with an in-service day for teachers on Monday, Aug. 24, with students reporting the following day.

"It's been real slow, but some progress is being made," said Pete Busti, president of the Carmichaels Area Education Association. "We're working on contract language to take care of some of the problems we've had during the past few years and we're also into salaries and other economic issues."

Carmichaels Area is the only school district in Greene County which is negotiating a teachers' contract this year.

Carmichaels Council Acts On Plans For New Building

By THELMA CALLAGHAN
Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — Carmichaels Borough Council Monday authorized its building committee to proceed with preparation of preliminary plans for a borough building, with the stipulation the borough is under no financial obligation for those plans.

A local contractor, International Homes, has estimated a 34- by 36-foot building, with full basement, carpeting, heating and other necessary facilities, would cost $79,000 and has agreed to draw up plans for the structure.

The motion on the plans passed with Steve Yarish, Ted Blasinsky and Jean Abinader voting yes, and Robert Dobbins and David Klimek voting no.

The legal question of the rights of the unknown heirs of Lydia Jennings, original owner of the borough lots on East Greene Street, was discussed. Solicitor Robert Berryman was authorized to complete all legal steps necessary to finalize title rights to the property.

John Clarchick, owner of the building now occupied by the borough, was present and offered an adjoining one-story brick building to council for municipal use for $40,000. He outlined several options council could consider in purchasing the building.

Clarchick said he is concerned that taxes would increase if a new building is constructed. Dobbins, saying he voted no on the motion because of the financial situation, asked other councilmen to seriously consider Clarchick's offer.

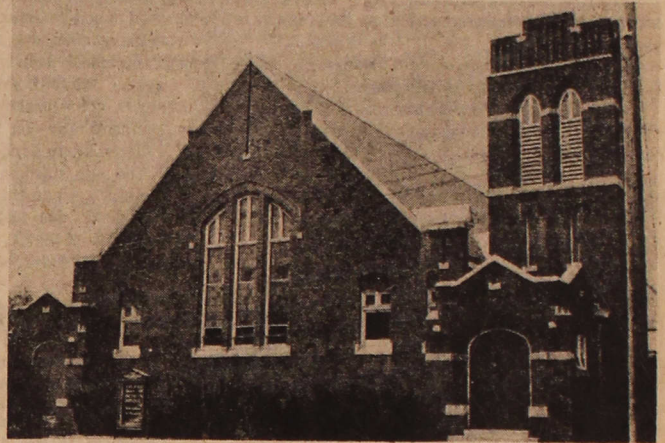

The solicitor reported on his investigation into the distribution of funds from the defunct Carmichaels-Rices Landing-Cumberland Township Planning Commission. The approximately $8,000 in the fund includes a $2,000 donation from a planning consultant firm that was unable to complete its contract. Cumberland Township has suggested that all funds be distributed with 82 percent going to the township and nine percent to each of the boroughs on the basis of their original contributions.

Berryman has suggested that the $2,000 grant be distributed equally to the three municipalities. Council authorized him to seek equal division of the $2,000 and the accrued interest, and that each municipality recoup its original contribution, plus interest.

A major portion of the meeting was spent discussing the financial situation. Due to a lack of funds, several bills were set aside for payment when money becomes available. Tax notices have not been sent to borough taxpayers and council is concerned that the late mailing date will result in receipt of revenues at a later time than is normal.

Council discussed taxes owed to the Carmichaels-Cumberland Township Volunteer Fire Company. One mill of tax revenues is set aside for fire protection. Councilmen said payment of this obligation has been overlooked for the past four years. The fire company has asked for an accounting of the fund. One mill currently brings in $1,600 in tax revenues.

President Dobbins reported he will resign his office as president effective at the September meeting but will remain on council. He said he has come under fire from other members and feels that someone else should assume the responsibility. Dobbins has also withdrawn as supervisor of the two summer youth program employees and Mayor Paul Connor is responsible for overseeing their work.

Borough Police Chief Testifies At Hearing

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Civil Service Commission held a hearing Friday on the complaint of five borough policemen that the selection of Patrolman Timothy M. Hawfield as police chief violated civil service regulations.

The five filing the complaint also had applied for the position: Lt. Kyle Eddy and Patrolmen Michael J. Fuller, D. Glenn Bates, M. Terry Livingston and James M. Gregan.

Borough Council named Hawfield to the post in May to fill the vacancy created when Chief James Rogers stepped down for reasons of health.

Washington attorney Robert N. Clarke, who represents the five officers, said the petition was based on the contention that Hawfield did not have the required two years of continuous service as a police officer, pointing out that the key word is "continuous." He agreed, however, that service on another police force would count toward the two years.

He also contended that Hawfield's application was not sworn to, and that it was not dated or numbered.

Borough manager James Ealy produced a letter from Point Marion Mayor Nick Gaeto which stated that Hawfield had worked there as a partolman from Dec. 3, 1978, through June 17, 1979, and another document to show he had started to work for the Waynesburg force on June 18, 1979, with no time lapse between the two jobs.

Hawfield, who was the only member of the force to testify, said that although he was hired as a part-time patrolman, he worked a regular shift, from 40 to 48 hours a week, during his time there.

Ealy also said that the matters of attested applications and dated and numbered applications apply to formal applications for civil service examinations.

"In this case, all of the officers were notified of the vacancy and were merely asked to submit a letter of intent to apply for the job and a list of qualifications," he said.

"Council has a wide latitude in the appointment of people to administrative positions, and no formal applications were requested," he added.

Two of the three members of the civil service commission, chairman Ewing B. Pollock and Kenneth Willison, were present for the hearing, with Robert Robinson being absent. Clarke said he would have no objection to Robinson's participating in the decision on the appeal after he had read the transcript of the hearing.

Pollock also indicated the commission would hand down a ruling on the appeal within 15 days.

Three Hurt In Pile-Up On Rt. 21

WAYNESBURG — Three persons were injured in a three-car, chain reaction collision on foggy Route 21, two miles east of Waynesburg at 1 a.m. Sunday according to state police.

Police said James A. Roberts, 23, of Waynesburg, was having electrical trouble with his car and had pulled partially off the highway. Dennis R. Eibling, 27, of Payne, Ohio, stopped in front of the Roberts car to offer assistance.

Because of the thick fog, Orvil A. King, 78, of Greene Street, Waynesburg, failed to see the parked vehicles and collided with the Roberts car, which in turn crashed into the Eibling car. Both the Eibling and Roberts vehicles were destroyed.

Marsha Roberts, 27, was standing near the parked vehicles and was pinned to the guard rails when the collision occurred. She received leg injuries.

Also injured were King who suffered a lacerated nose and Anne D. Eibling, 23, one of the passengers, who suffered an abrasion to the head.

The injured were taken by the Waynesburg Volunteer Fire Company ambulance to Greene County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Police also reported a one-car accident on Route 218 in Franklin Township at 1:45 a.m. Saturday. James Wise, 18, of Waynesburg R.D.3, lost control of his vehicle while traveling south and struck a fence.

A minor accident occurred at 9:30 a.m. Friday when a parked car owned by Mrs. G.L. Chaney, 66, of Holbrook, drifted into the home of Evelyn Houser of Pine Bank.

County Native Fatally Injured

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. — An 84-year-old Greene County native was fatally injured Saturday evening when struck by a pick-up truck at Nutter Fort, W. Va., near Clarksburg.

Clarence Lee Webster of 211½ Burton Avenue, Nutter Fort, was dead on arrival at the United Hospital Center, Clarksburg, after being hit by the truck while crossing Route 20 near his home.

Nutter Fort police said the accident happened at 9 p.m. Roger Lee Dean, 36, Jane Lew, W. Va., driver of the truck, was charged with involuntary manslaughter and was released on $2,500 bond after being arraigned before Magistrate Louis Trupo.

He was born February 4, 1897, in Ryerson Station, a son of John I. and Mertie Durbin Webster. He had resided at Nutter Fort for many years and had worked as a self-employed house painter until his retirement. He was a member of the First Baptist Church of Nutter Fort.

Webster, who never married, resided with a brother, Robert Webster. Also surviving are another brother, Daniel Webster of Nutter Fort, and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Small of Clarksburg.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, August 5, in the Greathouse Funeral Home at Nutter Fort. Burial will be in the Wind Ridge Cemetery, where an interment service will be held at approximately 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

$50,000 Spent On Fairgrounds Improvements

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Some $50,000 has been spent this summer on improvements to the Greene County Fairgrounds, and just in time for the opening of the 1981 annual Greene County Fair which begins Monday, Aug. 10.

The 50-acre site has been a beehive of activity since early spring as the result of a concentrated effort by county maintenance manager John O. Higgins and his regular crew of eight employees which expanded with specially hired summer help.

In the past few weeks, workers have erected a new fence around the outside of the race track and the inside of the back stretch. Gateway Forest Products of Mather, through the efforts of State Sen. Barry Stout, offered treated lumber at a special price for the renovation.

New lights have been installed in the show ring. Utility hook-ups for 75 campers or trailers have been completed and both block buildings have been repainted.

Crews installed 380 feet of 16-inch drain pipe across the track and the infield to provide for better drainage and 75 tons of stone has been spread on the track.

Additional wiring was completed in the cattle barn because of the extra power drain caused by fans and other equipment used during shows and the fair.

Higgins, who believes the facility is not being used to its capacity by local organizations, also had gravel placed on the roads, fences painted, new gates installed and all entrances painted and repaired.

Most activity on Friday was confined to washing the outside of buildings and the grandstand in preparation for the thousands of people who will be visiting during fair week. Also to benefit visitors, new signs have been painted and installed on the grounds.

Higgins was quick to point out that all costs have not been borne by the county. "The Fair Board was largely responsible for the new wiring in the cattle barn and the Greene County Horseman's Association donated money toward the show ring improvements."

The regular county work force has been aided this summer with the addition of four CETA employees and three college students hired just for the summer.

The sewer system which connects into the Franklin Township sewer system was completed this year and should allow for any future expansion and less troubles at comfort facilities.

Although efforts are made each summer to prepare for the annual county fair, the fairgrounds can be used year-round by local residents and organizations.

More than 200 horses are permanently housed at the fairgrounds. Residents include 117 trotters, most of which are trained for competition at The Meadows race track in Washington County. Stall rentals alone account for about $30,000 annually.

Until recently, use of the fairgrounds was pretty much a hit-or-miss proposition, with some organizations paying and some not. Now, reservations are handled in a business-like way with all organizations paying the same fees.

Auctioneers pay $75 for a barn to hold sales. Use of the entire grounds will cost $200 or, if lights are used, $250. Rental of a block building is $25. Only the local 4-H clubs are exempt from the rental fees.

All rentals during the year amount to some $50,000 according to Higgins. The county has budgeted $74,099 this year for fairground operations.

William Whoolery is the fairground manager responsible for rentals, some of the maintenance and day-to-day activities at the facility.

Court Lets Verdicts Stand

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court has refused to disturb jury verdicts returned earlier this year in two civil court cases.

Appeals filed in both cases were dismissed by Judge Glenn Toothman in opinions and orders handed down Friday.

In one of the cases, a jury awarded $8,500 in damages to Barry L. and Roberta I. Teasdale of Rices Landing R.D.1 as compensation for an inadequate solar heating system and a malfunctioning septic system at their house in Dry Tavern. The verdict was returned against Arleigh A. Halterman of Pittsburgh, who built the house and sold it to the Teasdales in 1977.

Toothman ruled there was ample evidence to support the verdict and the amount of damages which were awarded.

In the other case, the Greene County jurist refused to grant a new trial to Jean L. Carter of Carmichaels, who brought suit against Midtown Auto Sales in Waynesburg after she was struck on the head by a falling light fixture while sitting in the company office on March 19, 1978. She contended she had suffered injuries requiring extensive treatment.

The jury ruled in favor of the defendant, dismissing the plaintiff's argument that the accident was the result of negligence due to the manner in which the fixture was installed.

More Flood Insurance Offered

PHILADELPHIA — Residents of three Greene County municipalities can now obtain increased levels of flood insurance protection, according to the regional office of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Philadelphia.

Expanded limits of coverage are now available in Carmichaels, Rices Landing and Waynesburg because borough officials have taken the steps necessary to qualify for the regular phase of the National Flood Insurance Program, while other county municipalities remain in the Emergency Phase, FEMA spokesman Hugh C. Laine said.

Entry to the Regular Phase, he said, is predicated on the fact that a complete survey of flood prone areas have been made and on adoption by the municipalities of regulations to control new construction in flood plains.

In the emergency phase, a home owner can purchase no more than $35,000 of coverage on his dwelling. This limit is raised to $185,000 in the regular phase. Increases in contents coverage from a previous $10,000 limit to a limit of $60,000 is also available, as are increased coverages for commercial buildings and other classes of structures.

Laine also said that qualification for the Regular Phase can, in some cases, result in lower premiums for coverage under the National Flood Insurance program. Household rates, he said, depend on a number of factors, such as age of the building and its location in the municipality in terms of susceptibility to flooding. During the emergency phase, all rates are uniform.

Additional information on rates and amounts of insurance available can be obtained from any licensed property and casualty insurance agent in Pennsylvania, Laine said.

Tourney Champions

Willie Walker, left, accepts the first place trophy after his Kirby All-Stars captured the first Rogersville Community Softball Tournament. Making the presentation is tourney director Scott Moore. The Kirby team fought back from the loser's bracket and won six straight games including the final two over Hillcrest Shoppes, the second place team.

Little Leaguers Treated

Players and coaches of the seven teams in the Waynesburg Little League were treated to a spaghetti dinner Monday night hosted by the Waynesburg Elks Club which sponsored the winning team this year. E. Bryan Jacobs, standing, exalted ruler of the Waynesburg Elks Club, greets some of the 105 players attending the dinner. Phil Amos, coach of the Elks team, was named league coach-of-the-year. The Elks team posted an 11-0 record for the season.

Greene County Must Do Without Inheritance Tax Appraiser

WAYNESBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Revenue has notified the Greene County Bar Association that it will no longer assign a full-time inheritance tax appraiser to Greene County.

In a letter to Bar Association President Harry Cancelmi, Acting Secretary of Revenue Robert K. Bloom indicated the decision is based on two factors — the comparatively small number of estates handled in the county and a recent department decision to gradually phase out the present system of processing inheritance tax returns throughout the state.

"It is my determination that we can no longer afford the luxury of detailing an individual to Greene County," Bloom wrote. "Our survey indicates that in 1979 Greene County had 189 inheritance tax cases, and 201 cases in 1980. This certainly does not call for the need of a full-time appraiser in your county."

The issue came up with the recent retirement of Robert L. Stephenson, who for several years had served as inheritance tax appraiser for the county. Upon learning that the state had no intention of replacing him, the Bar Association on July 23 adopted a resolution urging that it do so.

In a letter to Gov. Dick Thornburgh informing him of the action, Cancelmi wrote that there is "a need in our community for a permanent inheritance tax office to serve in the appraisal and evaluation of real estate and personal property and in the inventory of safe deposit boxes and the like." He also urged that a county resident "competent to evaluate local conditions" be appointed to the post.

The issue is not a new one. During the administration of Gov. Milton J. Shapp, the Department of Revenue consolidated inheritance tax offices and proposed to have Greene County served by a staff member from the Washington office. The Bar Association was successful in persuading the state to continue assigning of an agent to Greene County, even though he was made responsible to the Washington County office.

In addition to refusing to continue this arrangement, Bloom informed the Bar Association that he announced a plan on July 30 to "streamline and modernize the Commonwealth's present antiquated system of processing inheritance tax returns."

The new system, which will be phased in gradually starting in October, will call for:

- ✓ A single, simplified report, including new self-assessment features and new schedules for all inheritance tax returns, to replace the three different forms and various schedules now used by the Department.

- ✓ Elimination of the initial reviews conducted in the Department's field offices, allowing immediate forwarding of the returns by county registers of wills to Revenue headquarters at Harrisburg.

- ✓ Accelerated review by Department tax examiners.

- ✓ Increased automation and computer tracking in the processing of returns, including billings and assessments.

- ✓ More efficient use of field office personnel to provide not only the necessary service to local areas on inheritance tax but on other taxes as well.

Bloom said he feels the new system will not only be less expensive, but will also speed up the process to the benefit of both the state and parties involved in handling estates.

"I am convinced that the increased efficiency resulting from this new system will mean that executors and administrators of estates generally will be able to receive their completed appraisements in a matter of weeks instead of the months they not have to wait," he said.

He indicated that it will require about a year to fully implement the new system throughout the state and indicated that before it is placed in operation seminars will be held in each area to acquaint attorneys with the new process.

Jeff-Morgan Deals With Head Teachers

JEFFERSON — The Jefferson-Morgan School Board, at a special meeting Monday, refused to authorize the appointment of a second head teacher at the district elementary school, but did create a head teacher post for the junior-senior high school.

The administration was authorized to post the position of head teacher at each of the schools. Teachers named to the two positions will receive an additional $920 per year. They will assist building principals in their administrative duties.

The administration had sought to have two head teachers at the elementary school to assist Vicki Monas, who was recently named principal to succeed George Misher, who has retired. Miss Monas was promoted from the position of Title I reading specialist.

Board members indicated they felt that one assistant was sufficient at the elementary school, but did agree that a comparable position should be created at the junior-senior high school to assist principal Joseph Davis.

Charles Braden has been serving as head teacher at the elementary school on a year-to-year basis.

All teachers in the district have been notified of the openings.

The administration was also authorized to post the position of Title I reading specialist to fill the vacancy created by the promotion of Miss Monas, and that of an elementary teacher to fill a vacancy created Monday when the board accepted the resignation of Joan M. Voycik, a first grade teacher.

Beverly Sue Adkins Weds Richard Curtis

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Beverly Sue Adkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry H. Adkins of 1033 Eighth Street, Huntington, W.Va., and Richard Allen Curtis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Curtis, of 526 Old Waynesburg Road, Carmichaels, were united in marriage at a double-ring ceremony held at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 18, in the Pea Ridge United Methodist Church in Huntington, W.Va.

The Rev. John Grandstaff performed the ceremony. The bride wore a semi-fitted and flared white gown trimmed in Chantilly lace. The bodice, overlaid with Chantilly lace, featured a sweetheart neckline and full length bishop sleeves with a pleated top and lace trim at the cuff.

The chapel-length train adorned the dress with two rows of re-embroidered Chantilly lace at the bottom. Her veil of illusion was trimmed in matching Chantilly lace with a Juliet cap.

The bride was given away by her father, and her sister Sherrie Adkins served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cecile Keene, Kathy Slover, Laura Canterbury, Brenda Berry, Cindy Curtis and Lisa Bierer. Lynn Bierer was a junior bridesmaid and Brandy Adkins served as flower girl. All were attired in blue.

John R. Curtis, of Rogersville, served his brother as best man. Ushers were Chuck Bokot, George Rice, Denny Osborne, Dave Katusa, Jim

MRS. RICHARD A. CURTIS

Corder and Jerald Adkins. Organist was Judy Forbush and Beth Dabney was soloist.

A reception followed in the basement of the church and the home of the bride's parents. Aides at the reception were Ori Adkins, Joyce Adkins, Karen Bierer, Rhonda Baker and Theresa Baker.

The bride is a junior at Marshall University where she is a member of Delta Zeta sorority. She is currently employed at First Huntington National Bank.

Mr. Curtis, a graduate of Marshall University where he was a member of Kappa Alpha Order, is employed by Nationwide Auto Parts.

The newlyweds will reside in Huntington following a honeymoon to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Elevator Bids Surprise Commissioners

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners were pleasantly surprised when they opened bids Thursday for the installation of an elevator in the new County Office Building.

The apparent low bid of $42,684 from the Marshall Elevator Co. of Pittsburgh was well below what the commissioners had expected to have to pay.

"It was my impression that it would cost from $80,000 to $100,000 to have it installed," Commissioner L. R. Santore said. "At this price, the county should have put it in a long time ago."

Architect G. Garey Dickson Jr. of Washington pointed out that additional costs will be involved since the county itself is planning to do some of the work, but he agreed that the total cost of the project should not exceed $60,000. He said the $42,684 bid was about 10 percent lower than he had anticipated.

He also pointed out that the cost is as low as it is because he and his father persuaded the commissioners to install the elevator shaft and the underground pit required for hydraulic equipment at the time the county remodeled the building after purchasing it in 1976. "If that had to be done now, the cost would be about $100,000," he said.

Dickson said that five companies had been asked to submit bids, with only two of them doing so. The other bid, for $55,000, came from Pittsburgh Elevator Co.

The architect said he and county solicitor A. J. Marion will review both proposals and make a recommendation at next week's meeting. At that time, the commissioners will also meet with representatives of the Southwestern Pennsylvania Area on the Aging (AAA), which is involved in financing the project since the county has agreed to the establishment of an AAA senior citizen day care center in the presently unused basement room.

In addition to making the basement available for the day care center, the elevator will enable the commissioners to install offices on the third floor which is not being used now because the Department of Labor and Industry requires an elevator when a new public building is more than two stories high.

In another development at the meeting, the commissioners decided to allow state officials to make the decision on how the county allocation of $268,429 in CETA Title II-B funds should be used.

Four proposed programs with a total price tag of $337,209 will be submitted to the executive director of the governor's balance-of-state manpower commission, which supervises the administration of federal manpower training programs in the county. The commission will decide between cutting out one program or reducing all of them because of the $69,780 shortfall in available funds.

Among programs to be submitted is a new "job factory" project proposed by Greene County Industrial Developments Inc. It requests an allocation of $79,550 to set up and operate a program which would consist of a series of four-week classes to teach people how to look for a job and then help them in doing so. The program would be unique in Pennsylvania.

Proposals will also be submitted for continuation of three existing programs — a home improvement training program operated by the Community Action Corp. ($99,319), an in-school youth training program operated by the Pittsburgh Catholic Educational Program ($59,054), an adult training program also operated by the Pittsburgh agency ($91,266), and a health training program operated by the Greene County Vocational-Technical School ($18,790).

PSU Testing Van Will Be At Fair

WAYNESBURG — The mobile forage testing van from Pennsylvania State University will be used this year in judging entries in the hay show at the Greene County Fair.

"Greene County farmers have an opportunity this year to have their hay show samples placed according to feed value rather than visual appraisal," County Agent William Brown said. The testing van will be at the fairgrounds Tuesday, Aug. 11, and will run the same forage tests on hay displays that are done in the lab at Penn State.

Brown also said that the list of hay show classes was accidentally omitted from the fair premium list this year. Exhibits are to be entered Monday, Aug. 10, at the wool and hay show area in the livestock barn. There is no entry fee.

"Samples should be a minimum of 16 inches thick since we need a larger sample this year because of the forage testing," Brown said.

The exhibits should consist of at least two flakes from a square bale. Extra samples should be prepared as if they were being sent to the forage lab. For example, a silage sample should consist of several forage auger cores or several handfuls of silage placed in a plastic bag.

Six classes of hay will be accepted: 1) Alfalfa first cutting, not over 50 percent grass; 2) Alfalfa later cutting, not over 50 percent grass; 3) Other legume or legume grass mix, not over 50 percent grass; 4) Grass hay, first cutting, not over 10 percent legume; 5) Grass hay, second cutting, not over 10 percent legume; 6) Mixed hay, any mixture not classified in previous classes.

The forage tests will be made without charge and, if time permits, hay samples not entered in the fair will be tested on a first-come, first-served basis.

"This mobile hay testing unit was developed at Penn State and is unique," Brown said. "Pennsylvania is the only state with such an operational unit and it has been demonstrated to educators and farmers all over the country."

"Even if you don't have a sample to test, stop by the livestock barn at the fair on Aug. 11 and see one of the new innovations in agriculture in action."

Tompkins, Waynesburg. The bridegroom, a 1979 graduate of Waynesburg Central High School, is employed by Jerome Electric Co., Waynesburg.

Charter Limits Power Of Sewer Authority

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township Sewer Authority heard from its solicitor Tuesday night that it would be impossible for the authority to take over the Southeastern Franklin Water Authority.

John Hook, the authority solicitor, said it would not be possible to take over the financially-trouble water authority under the current charter which limits the sewer authority to the sewer business. The water authority had approached township officials last month about the possibility of a takeover. There was no further discussion of the matter.

McAnallen Corp., which constructed the townships just off Route 188, presented rights-of-way agreements with property owners, including the contractor himself, for the authority's approval. The agreement is necessary for the authority to eventually take over the maintenance of the new sewer line. The contractor also presented a $50,000 performance bond to cover initial operation.

The authority also expressed concern over the lateness of the audit report from Milinovich Inc. of Waynesburg. No official action was taken however.

John C. Parker of Waynesburg R.D.2, who owns an auto painting business, was welcomed to his first meeting. Parker replaces the late Charles Carpenter on the five-member board.

Proposal Calls For Building Of Locks

HARRISBURG — Clifford Jones, secretary of the state Department of Environmental Resources, has announced the support of his office and Gov. Dick Thornburgh for legislation calling for the replacement of locks and dams at Grays Landing and Point Marion.

The Monongahela and Upper Ohio River Waterways Improvement Act, introduced last May by U.S. Rep. Austin Murphy, Joseph Gaydos and Robert Mollohan, has been referred to the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Army, acting through the chief of the engineers, to construct Grays Landing lock and dam to replace Lock 7, and a lock and abutment to be called Point Marion Lock, replacing Lock 8 on the Monongahela River.

Construction of these projects would be carried out on an expedited and priority basis in accordance with the recommendations contained in the report filed by the chief of engineers in May 1972, which was approved by the Secretary of the Army the following year.

According to Murphy, "renovations of these locks and dams would not be enough. In addition to being in an advanced state of deterioration, they are too small to accommodate modern barge traffic. It's created a serious bottleneck that is resulting in financial losses to industry."

Jury Indicts Spraggs Woman

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Caroline Martin, 23, of Spraggs, was indicted by a Monongalia County, W.Va. grand jury this week in the strangulation death of a Morgantown, W.Va., man whose body was found in an abandoned barn in Wayne Township last fall.

Martin was returned to the Preston County Jail at Kingwood. Bond has been set at $75,000.

Also facing murder charges in the case is Georgeann Lewis, 26, of Morgantown. Both women are accused of murdering Wilvey E. Stampler of Westover, who was reported missing last June. His body was found in a barn between Blacksville and Spraggs last October.

A.J. Murphy Will Visit County During Recess

WAYNESBURG — Taking advantage of the August recess of Congress, Congressman Austin J. Murphy will be making a three-day swing through western Greene County this week.

Starting today and running through Thursday, he will be visiting with various township officials and area residents to talk about issues of local and national interest. Traveling in a self-contained camper, the congressman will be stopping at local post offices and community buildings and plans to spend two nights at Ryerson Station State Park. He has no fixed schedule for the tour.

Congressman Murphy expected that while he travels back to southwestern Pennsylvania from Washington, D.C. every weekend, he wanted to make a special effort to meet informally and talk with local residents in the western areas of Greene County.

"I receive many invitations to address groups and meet with individual constituents during the two days each week I'm back home," he said. "Usually these are in the larger communities such as Waynesburg and Carmichaels. I wanted to take advantage of the August recess to travel to those areas that I don't get to visit as much as I'd like."

WEDDING SET — Mr. and Mrs. Morris Catalano of Mather announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Carmella Doreen, to James F. Nichols, son of Betty Nichols of Mather and the late James V. Nichols. The bride-elect is a 1975 graduate of Jefferson-Morgan High School and a 1977 graduate of Median School of Allied Health Careers. She was in the class of medical assistants. Her fiancé is a 1972 graduate of Jefferson-Morgan High School and is employed by Westmoreland Construction Co. A Sept. 12 wedding is being planned.

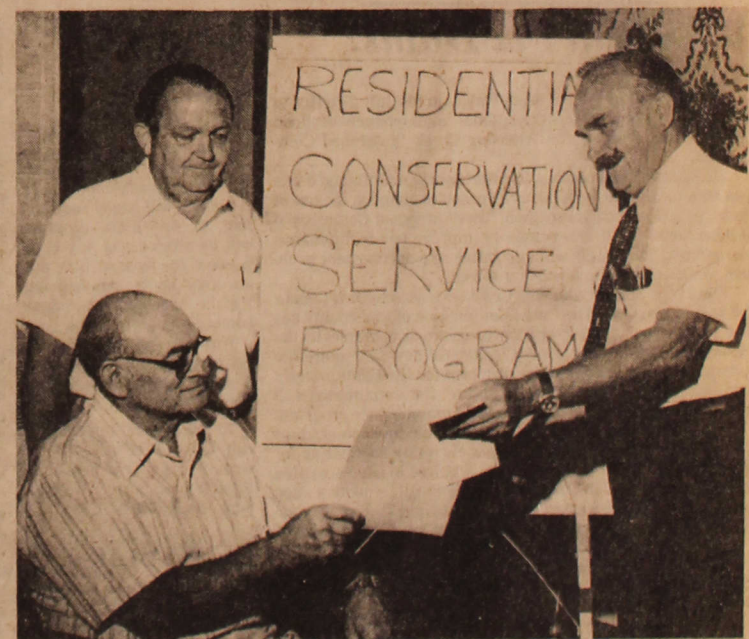

ENGAGED — Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Sadosky of Uniontown have announced the engagement of their daughter, Deborah Ann, to Donald Edward Mack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mack of Rices Landing R.D.1. The bride-elect, a graduate of Laurel Highlands High School and St. Francis Hospital School of Nursing, is a nurse at Uniontown Hospital. Her fiancé, a graduate of Jefferson-Morgan High School and Pennsylvania State University, is attending the School of Engineering at West Virginia University and is employed by the Diamond-Shamrock Corp. The wedding will take place Sept. 26, 1981, at St. Mary Church, Uniontown.

Golden Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. David L. Graham are marking the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents, Joe and Mary S. Graham of 242 South Washington Street, Waynesburg, with a celebration at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 8, in the social rooms of the Washington Street United Methodist Church. Friends and relatives are invited to attend but the couple request gifts be omitted. Mrs. Graham is the daughter of the late Harry and Emma Stockdale. Her husband is the son of the late John and Eva Harker Graham and is a retired employee of the Peoples Natural Gas Co. They were married October 16, 1931, in Oakland, Md., by the Rev. Dawson. They are the parents of one son, David L. Graham of Bossier City, La., and have three grandsons, Randall, Ronald and Russell, and one great-grandson, Joey. Mr. and Mrs. Graham are members of the Washington Street United Methodist Church.

Building Trades Meeting

West Penn Power Co. officials met recently with local building contractors to stress the importance of thermal recommendations as an effective energy-conservation measure. F.J. Bogan, manager of the utility's Jefferson Division, told the builders that meeting these recommendations assures homeowners of savings in energy and operating costs. Joe Watson, right, discusses the recommendations with Shirl W. Headlee, standing, and Al Palone, both of Wayne Lumber Co. Over 40 members of the building trades attended the meeting at the Nemaocolin Country Club.

Public Works Department
Could Benefit Township

Last week's decision by a Greene County municipality to pay members of an authority $25 for each meeting they attend brought into focus some of the problems which can arise over a period of years as public works projects are carried out in a developing municipality.

The Franklin Township board of supervisors approved the request for pay by one of two sewer authorities in the township. The Franklin Township Sewer Authority built and manages a new system which covers much of the eastern part of the municipality and members have devoted a lot of time to the job. Their request for pay is probably justified.

But at the same time, members of the Southeast Franklin Water Authority have served without compensation for many years, as did members of the West Waynesburg Sewer Authority during the years when a system was being installed in that part of the township.

On top of this, the supervisors themselves are responsible for management of the Bonar Sewer District, which encompasses another part of the township.

The sewer district and separate authorities were created because the various public services they administer were developed over a period of many years. Although their activities are all similar and related, they have continued to exist as separate entities with various rate structures and administrative policies.

There very well could be defensible reasons why this is so, but we suspect it is due to inertia. It's always easier to maintain the status quo than it is to carry out a reorganization.

In the case of Franklin Township though, particularly in view of the financial problems the water authority is experiencing, it might be time for the supervisors to consider consolidation of all their sewer and water functions under one department managed by one individual who is responsible either to one overall authority or to the supervisors themselves.

Reader Concerned About Nepotism

To the Editor:

Nepotism is defined in Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary as "favoritism shown to a relative (as by giving an appointed job) on a basis of relationship."

Let us look at what happens when nepotism is practiced. The probably negative consequences are: (1) that the general public will not be served by someone most qualified to serve their needs, (2) that there exists the likelihood that more qualified people were available for a position which, if you think about it, is a discriminating as not hiring due to race, color, sex or creed, (3) that it is obviously unethical for a person to use his or her influence for the sake of securing a position for a family member or relations and, (4) that should the person practicing nepotism be a public official elected by the people to represent their best interest, a tremendous loss of faith and trust in that person, as well as the branch of government they represent, will inevitably occur.

The positive aspects of nepotism are: (1) that the family relation has a job.

I find it most interesting that the willful practice of nepotism is not considered illegal. The Human Relations Commission cannot act against someone for practicing nepotism in and of itself. There currently exist no local, state or federal laws (as applicable to Greene County) stipulating the practice of nepotism as

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

Charles B. Orndorff, internationally-known breeder of prize-winning Belgian draft horses at this farm on Route 218 three miles south of Waynesburg, will be honored at the annual Greene County Fair to be held all next week at the county fairgrounds.

A special Charles Orndorff day will be set aside during the week of the fair (the exact date to be announced) to pay appropriate tribute to his accomplishments in agriculture by the Greene County Extension Service.

Mr. Orndorff has devoted his entire life to various phases of agriculture. Although he is best known — on an international scale — for the many fine Belgium sires and brood mares that have been raised at his farm, he has also excelled in many other phases of agriculture and in the excellent manner in which his farms have been operated.

The story of Mr. Orndorff's success as a farmer and breeder had its earliest origins in the famous Rhine River valley of Germany back in the sailing ship era of travel and transportation.

In a well-documented history of the Orndorff family written by the late Barclay Orndorff of Graysville, the definite line of the Orndorff clans in Germany were documented from court and church records. Their initial entry into the United States was in the Philadelphia area, where many present-day descendants still live.

From there some of their members moved south to Winchester, Va. and from there to Greene County when it was still part of the original Commonwealth of Virginia. Before establishment of the Mason-Dixon line what is now Greene County was a part of West August County, Va.

Mr. Orndorff was born in Whiteley Township, a short distance south of his present showplace home. He is a son of the late Bert and Mary Stroinsider Orndorff and has devoted his entire life to agriculture and related occupations.

His career got off to a hard start when as a teen-ager he disregarded his father's advice to sell the first colt he ever owned because it "was ready for the market."

His one and only lesson in marketing was a hard one — his father sold the animal when a passerby made a fantastic offer for the animal.

"It was a hard way to learn the old lesson that if you are in the horse business the time to sell is when you can make a profit," Orndorff has said hundreds of times.

And the large, meticulously kept farm with its lush blue grass pastures, brightly painted dwelling and spacious barns are silent confirmation of the fact that Orndorff learned his "course" in marketing extremely well.

He learned his lesson so well, in fact, that as he grew older he not only practiced what he preached with his own livestock but helped literally thousands of others to do the same in his long career as an auctioneer at sales barns in Greene and Fayette Counties and at public sales of household properties, horses, farm lands, etc. throughout western Pennsylvania and nearby states.

He was the auctioneer at the Waynesburg livestock yards for more than 30 years and for many years at Uniontown and West Alexander and conducted literally thousands of household sales in Greene and adjoining counties.

He once made a 2,700 mile trip to Alberta, Canada to cry a sale.

Mr. Orndorff and his wife, the former Mary Huffman, who was born near Oak Forest across the White's Ridge hilltops from Smith Creek, are the parents of a son, Clark Orndorff, who in many ways has followed in the footsteps of his father.

He too is an industrious worker in his live for the land but there the similarities end, as Clark operates a tractor and general farm machinery agency side-by-side with his father's barns and pastures for his prize winning horses.

Clark and his wife are the parents of three daughters and one son. There are also three grandchildren in the Clark Orndorff family and a great family relationship exists between all of the family generations.

In the many years the Orndorff family dynasty has symbolized the strong family ties and love of farming their accomplishments and participation in public and other activities has enriched the lifestyle of the area in which they have lived.

They have reflected in their new world home area of Greene County the same sturdiness in cultivating the soil with the same competence and sturdy efforts as their European ancestors did in making the Rhine River valley an earthly paradise of productive effort which made Germany one of the leading European nations through almost countless generations.

Work Of Locust
Leaf Miner Is More Apparent

WAYNESBURG — Ravages of an insect which attacks locust trees are becoming more and more apparent in Greene County in recent years, according to Service Forester William C. Wentzell.

"Maybe you have noticed locust trees turning brown in many parts of Greene and Washington counties," he said. "Actually, the same thing is occurring in much of Pennsylvania. Large areas are so badly affected that it looks as though they have been swept by fire."

In Greene County, he said, ravages of the locust leaf miner, were somewhat apparent in the eastern part of the county last year, and are moving in a westward direction this year.

"It is a serious pest which seems to be reaching a high point in its natural cycle of occurrence. Its numbers should decrease in the years ahead as natural forces — weather, biological enemies and disease — work to keep the insect in balance," he said.

Wentzell said that like most insects, part of the leaf miner's life cycle is spent as a larva, or caterpillar. The larvae are flattened and yellowish-white with black legs and a black head. During the summer months they feed (or mine) between the two layers of the leaves of locust trees, resulting in dead, brown areas which many times cover the whole leaf.

The adult phase is a small orange and black beetle which can be seen in the very early spring as new leaves are emerging, or during the winter months in bark crevices and under debris on the ground.

Although the insect frequently causes severe

"browning off" of black locust trees by mid to late summer, the trees are not seriously damaged unless defoliation occurs for three or more years in a row or during a poor growing season. In western Pennsylvania, the trees seem to recover fairly well although they are weakened by the defoliation.

Wentzell said that chemical control is seldom necessary except to protect valuable ornamentals. Spraying of foliage should be done in mid-May or early June and again in early to mid-July for the second brood. Wentzell or County Agent William Brown should be consulted about recommended insecticides.

Parolee Back
In Prison

WAYNESBURG — Michael L. Conklin, 21, of 317 Nazer Street, Waynesburg, was committed to the state correctional institution at Camp Hill for parole violation following a hearing Tuesday in Greene County Court.

Judge Glenn Toothman ordered that he be returned to the institution to complete an indeterminate sentence of up to six years.

Conklin was originally sentenced to the institution Aug. 22, 1978, on charges of burglary, assault and receiving stolen property. He was subsequently paroled and placed on probation for three years on March 30, 1979.

Conklin is one of 16 persons charged recently by Waynesburg Borough police with selling marijuana. He was also cited for failure to carry out provisions of his parole in other ways.

REPORT FROM

HARRISBURG

BY

Rep. H. William DeWeese

NEW FEDERALISM
During the past week, I and several other House members traveled to Atlanta, Ga. to attend the National Conference of State Legislatures' convention.

This gathering, held in a different part of the country each year, is the sole organization formed to represent House members and state senators and to assist them in the discharge of their duties. The NCSL presents a large number of meetings, colloquia, and formal addresses by various state and national political leaders, and through diligent attendance one can learn a great deal about political and social issues in other states and can meet with colleagues in similar positions.

In addition to the social activities normally attendant upon these gatherings, this year's convention was fortunate in hearing an address by President Reagan on July 30, the final day of this convocation. The passage earlier in the week of the President's tax package provided the theme of the speech, "An Economic Plan for the Future." Although I would prefer that the Democratic version of the same proposals had been adopted, it was definitely worthwhile to hear the Administration's views set forth by its chief. (It is a paradox that in this era of mass communications, especially through television, more and more people can see a high official, yet very few have the opportunity to see one in the flesh, as I was fortunate in doing this week.)

The theme of the "New Federalism" described at some length in both the President's speech and in the convention as a whole is, in a sense, nothing new. We have lived for over two centuries under a dual administrative system. The individual states attend to such things as driver's licenses, marriage certificates, registration of wills and other legal documents, while the national government takes care of larger concerns — defense, foreign affairs, postal deliveries, Social Security checks and many more.

What both parties today differ about so much is the degree to which one part or the other of this joint effort will be responsible for some of the matters mentioned above. In the half century since the New Deal, few would disagree that the scale has tipped in favor of the national government — giving it, many would argue, too much control over one's life.

Mr. Reagan and his followers seek to reverse this situation and either bring the two components into a more balanced position or, if the electorate so desires, decisively shift the previous federal responsibilities back to the states. The key to the whole question here is money — those areas of the country that have received large amounts of federal funds over the years don't want them removed.

I am always amused to see NCSL delegates from the South decry the growth of the federal government. If the military, for example, closed its bases in Virginia and the Carolinas — to mention only two locales — and decided to move them elsewhere the outcry would be truly deafening. Southern political leaders could not get to the White House and Pentagon fast enough to ask that the proposed moves be cancelled.

Naturally, this is all hypothetical. What isn't, however, will be the undoubted strains any shift in the federal-state equation will produce in this state in the years ahead. Budget cuts and "shifts in priorities" sound nice in discussions. Their realities in the Keystone State will be quite different.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

In case any readers haven't checked their calendars lately, "it's later than you think," what with the annual Greene County Fair coming up next week with attractions every afternoon and evening.

The usual harness racing events will be held Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Thursday and Friday afternoons, featuring the Pennsylvania Sires Stakes for two and three-year-old colts in which future performers at the Meadows and other wagering tracks will be seen in both trotting and pacing events.

Incidentally a lot of work has been done during the past month by the county maintenance department, under the direction of John O. Higgins, in touching up the fairgrounds for the weeklong race meet. Considerable work has also been done on the grandstand and the ravine at the east end of the grounds is gradually being filled up to a level where it can be used for future parking.

The Republican is happy to add the names of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Mitchell of 4000 Whitman Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, formerly of Ruff Creek, to our subscribers' list. She said she is confined to a wheelchair because of an amputation and will be glad to hear from friends in Greene County. She says she is now past 80.

James (Pete) Smith of New York City, a former outstanding athlete at Waynesburg High School, have been visiting in Waynesburg this week. He is now production manager for a New York cosmetics firm. He was a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dorsey while visiting here.

Perry Bavera of Waynesburg, chief assessor for Greene County, was among those who renewed an old friendship with Joe DeNardo when he was in town Wednesday to pay off his Rain Day bet with John L. Daily. Bavera also accompanied Wette Mancuso, an uncle of DeNardo, on trips to watch the future telecaster play basketball at Martins Ferry High School.

Show Of Generosity

On Friday, July 29, the Waynesburg Playground concluded its eight-week summer recreation program.

Only one year ago, it appeared that the program would be much shorter due to a lack of funds. But once Waynesburg and Franklin Township clubs, businesses and corporations were made aware of the situation, their generosity became apparent.

Immediately these groups, too numerous to mention, came to the aid of the Waynesburg Recreation Board. Because of this community show of generosity, the board's tentative goals for the year are being met. They are:

- To provide an eight-week recreation program conducted at the Waynesburg Playground.
- To plan field trips that interested youth can attend free of charge.

- To provide types of recreational activities on a regular basis during the winter months.

The true meaning of accomplishing these goals goes much further than equipment and activities. At a time when inflation dominates so much of our lives, an entire community has banded together to help others.

To all of you who have unselfishly helped and agreed to continue to help, my sincere thanks. You have improved and enlarged a program that could have disappeared in less understanding and less compassionate communities.

Who Will Fix Dams?

To the Editor:

Mr. Robert Buckbee of Wind Ridge, in his July 27 letter to the editor, expresses concern about maintenance of flood control dams built by the Wheeling Creek Watershed Commission.

He points out the obvious fact that poorly maintained dams can deteriorate. He feels this is a reason to abandon the use of dams as a flood control method. The Watershed Commission instead feels that it is a reason to improve our maintenance procedures. This is an administrative and mechanical problem, at one dam, which is being solved.

Dam 7, on Middle Wheeling Creek, is leased to Ohio County for recreational use. The Parks Commission of that county has not yet devised a maintenance program acceptable to the Watershed Commission. Ohio County will now be required to submit a written maintenance program for the Commission's approval. As "owner" of the structure, the Commission will monitor Ohio County's adherence to its maintenance program.

Dams 23 and 25 in Marshall County have fine potential for recreational use. Marshall County is currently negotiating for their lease. That county will also be required to have a written maintenance plan. The lease on each dam will be content upon adequate maintenance (as is the case at Dam 7). Even so, the Watershed Commission will still own and inspect these dams.

No county or any other governmental unit or agency is required to lease these dams, and when they don't choose to do so the Watershed Commission retains responsibility for their maintenance.

In any project involving construction, maintenance is an important factor, be that project a school, a road, a bridge, a park, a dam or any other structure. There's nothing startling about that. Maintenance costs have to be included in an administration's budget; inspections have to be carried out regularly, and when problems arise they must be dealt with openly so that solid solutions are devised.

Such an approach, which is the approach of the Watershed Commission, allows an organization to learn, innovate and improve.

Anne Bower,
Executive Director,
Wheeling Creek Watershed Commission

While the roundup is scheduled as part of the annual Greene County Fair program, it will be the only fair-related activity on the grounds on Saturday.

The midway will be set up Sunday, filling of cattle barns and exhibition halls will be completed Monday, and the first official fair activity will be held Monday when a pony pulling contest is staged at 7:30 p.m. The fair will then get into full swing Tuesday and continue through Saturday.
