

Only One Southeast Greene School To Get Major Facelift

By CHRISTIE MOLZON
Staff Writer

MAPLETOWN — At least one elementary school in the Southeastern Greene School District is going to get a major facelift.

Last night the school board voted to proceed with the addition and renovation program for the Penn Pitt Elementary School at a cost of $2,038,748. But the board voted down a proposal to renovate the Bobtown school, presumably because the cost of upgrading both buildings would cost about $5 million — a cost several board members felt was too much of a burden for taxpayers in the district.

The low bids approved were: Walter Mucci of Perryopolis, $1,315,239 for general construction; Greene Mechanical Corp. of Carmichaels, $301,675 for heating and ventilation; Tamasy Brothers Inc. of North Huntingdon, $176,550 for plumbing; and Electrical Services Co. of Uniontown, $245,284 for electrical work. All the above bids represent low base bids with a number of alternates that cut costs by $72,317.

The Penn Pitt school will be remodeled to house students now attending both it and the Glassworks school. A major addition to Penn Pitt will include 12 classrooms, an art kindergarten and multi-purpose room and kitchen. The present four classrooms will be remodeled for a library, special education classroom, faculty room, as well as music room, health suite, office and another classroom. When the project is completed the Glassworks school will be closed.

President of the board, Jim Minor, estimated the project will add 12 mills to the district's real estate tax, currently at 57 mills. The board has yet to act on the district budget and plans to schedule another meeting before June 30.

The motion to renovate both the Bobtown and Penn Pitt schools was made first by board member Dave Bierer and seconded by Floyd Hornick. Both men were the only two who voted in favor of the measure. Board member John Mason seemed to sum up what several directors felt when he said, prior to voting, "I'm going to have to vote no. I don't feel we can tax this district another 35 mills, even though I'd like to see it (both schools renovated) done."

When the measure was defeated, Bierer made the motion to upgrade Penn Pitt only. Voting yes were Bierer, Hornick, Gary Mosier, Bob Watson, Jim Minor and John Mason. Adam Novak and Mark Brozik voted against the renovation. Board member Emil Enoff was absent.

Diving Boards Going Back Up At County Pools

WAYNESBURG — There may not be as much water under them as the AAU recommends, but diving boards are going back up at the county-operated swimming pools in Waynesburg and Carmichaels.

The Greene County commissioners, at their meeting Friday, rejected a recommendation by the Department of Parks and Recreation that the boards be eliminated because there is only nine feet of water in the diving area at the Waynesburg pool and 10 1/2 feet at the Carmichaels pool. The Amateur Athletic Union recommends 11 1/2 feet.

Allen Hughes, director of the Parks and Recreation Department, said pool Supervisors Betty Walker and William Rankin learned of the recommendations at a conference.

"There are no regulations on depth requirements, but the AAU recommendations are designed for the safety of those using swimming pools and would be considered if an accident should ever happen," he said.

After consulting with the county solicitor, the department advisory board decided to recommend that the boards be eliminated. The boards were not set in place when the pools were opened for the season last weekend.

"I can't imagine a swimming pool without diving boards,"

County Commissioner Richard Cowan said when the recommendation was presented to the board Friday. "Our pools are well managed and are adequately staffed with lifeguards and I can't see any real danger."

After it was brought out that there are no "high" boards at the pools and that there has never been a diving accident, the commissioners directed the boards to be put up as soon as possible.

In other action at the meeting, the commissioners executed a $2,000 contract with Hopkins and Sons of Waynesburg for removal of the one-room addition on the east side of the Sayers-Hooper building on East High Street, adjoining the new County Office Building.

The commissioners said the building must be removed to make room for stairs which will give access to the new adult day care center being developed in the basement of the office building.

The vacant Sayer-Hooper building itself will be left standing until some decision is made regarding its disposition or use.

Michael Mulholland and William Groves of the county 911 emergency telephone committee reported to the commissioners that they will be recommending some changes in the county 911 plan which they recently presented for adoption by the commissioners.

The changes, they said, will be made to provide for greater involvement by state police in operation of the system, which will be set up to operate out of the state police barracks in conjunction with the police emergency radio system.

"We drew up our plan to minimize state police involvement as far as possible because we felt they would not want to be responsible for any of the operation," Mulholland said.

But when the plan was presented to the commissioner of state police at Harrisburg for his approval, he set up a meeting of the county committee with Cpt. Harry Kreitzer, director of the state police communications division.

"We were very pleased to learn that he wants the state police to play a larger roll, and we will be making changes in our plan to reflect Captain Kreitzer's recommendations," Mulholland said, adding that the county committee "is still shooting for Oct. 15 as the date for activation of the emergency telephone system."

No action was taken on payment of a bill for $19,356 from McDonald Associates of Charleroi for the preparation of plans for improvement of 14 county bridges dating back as long as five years.

McDonald, as county bridge engineer, prepared the designs at the request of the county when the possibility existed that federal funds could be obtained for improvement of the bridges. All of the applications have been turned down because the county cannot meet the requirement of having road approaches to the bridges widened to 28 feet without incurring major costs which would more than offset the advantages of federal funding.

Linda Kolat, assistant county planner, said McDonald had withheld submission of the bills since the design costs could have been included as a reimbursable item if federal funding had been obtained.

The commissioners indicated they would defer payment of the bill until they could further clarify the matter.

County Maintenance Manager John Higgins was authorized to purchase a repossessed Ford 3000 tractor for use at the county fairgrounds at a cost of $3,950.

She'll Have 5 Children In College

By JIM MOORE
Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — In these troubled times of economic misery, how would you like to have five children in college?

You could ask Chrysan Franco of 539 South Market Street, Carmichaels, who will have four daughters and a son in college next year, including triplets entering their junior year at Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Youngest daughter Carmella will graduate from Carmichaels Area High School June 11 and follow her sisters to IUPUI a week later. Son Jaime will be a senior at Edinboro State College this fall where he is majoring in criminal justice.

Mrs. Franco, divorced from her doctor husband for several years, is justifiably proud of her children and says they all work hard to keep their mobile home immaculate. All are active members of St. Hugh's Roman Catholic Church, Carmichaels, and have held various positions with church-related organizations.

All agree there are few arguments and no jealousy among the siblings and each encourages the others in whatever activity they choose. There is some good-natured kidding about Carmella being "momma's pet." Actually, all the children show some favoritism toward the baby of the family.

Carmella is the family athlete; she was instrumental in leading her high school softball team to section titles. Carmella entered a crucial game during her freshman year as a last-ditch pitcher. She won the playoff game and has pitched every game since then. During her recently completed high school career, she won 46 games and lost only three.

Her accomplishments are not limited to the athletic field; she was recently crowned May Queen at her church and has won state awards in art and bowling. She also is a top student. Carmella plans to follow her sisters to IUPUI and major in accounting.

Jaime, named after his Colombian father, has an exceptionally busy schedule at Edinboro. He is company commander of the college ROTC unit, a residence hall aide and director of college housing. For the past two summers, he has taken part in Army ROTC training camps in Fort Knox, Ky.

The triplets, born Feb. 10, 1962, in Atlanta, Ga., naturally draw the most attention in the family. Even if they weren't triplets, their natural effervescence would draw attention anywhere they go. Their secret to getting along in college appears to be a family pact which dictates no boyfriends on campus.

They roomed together their freshman year but split up during their sophomore year. They will get together again this fall when they move into an off-campus apartment.

All three were named to the dean's list last year and all three are business majors with a concentration in accounting. They laugh about starting their own accounting firm after graduation. Christina, the middle triplet, laughs about an official-sounding name of "Franco, Franco and Franco" for their future firm.

Chrysan is the eldest of the three by seven minutes. She is considered the best dresser in the family and chides her sisters about wearing jeans all the time. Carlina, according to her sisters, is the best singer and Christina is considered the best athlete of the three.

All three love math and share other interests and thoughts. During an election on campus, all three voted for the same candidates without ever having discussed them. All three list "Days of Our Lives" and "Edge of Night" as their favorite soap operas and all three rate Jackson Browne, Donna Summers and Styx as their musical favorites.

The girls admit they fought among themselves when little, but as they got older they banded together against their older brother. They feel the greatest disadvantage of being triplets is people always compare them.

They hope to find summer jobs but realize it's a tough order to find one job, let alone three.

Mrs. Franco, the hub of the household, is employed at Vera's Lounge and also remains very active in church and community affairs. She served as chairman of the ESEA Title council and on many church committees.

PUC Offers Mid-Penn A Rate Increase Of 23 Percent, If...

HARRISBURG (AP) — Mid-Penn Telephone Co. was offered a 23 percent rate increase Friday by the Public Utility Commission if it drops plans to press for a $9.8 million rate hike.

The PUC approved 3-2 a plan to raise Mid-Penn rates by $4.6 million rather than suspend the Kittanning company's request for a bigger increase hike.

If Mid-Penn accepts the PUC option, the cost of single party service in the utility's western district would range between $9 and $11, rather than $12 to $15 proposed by the company.

The staff recommended Mid-Penn be allowed to raise the cost of single party service in its eastern territory from $2.70 to $5.75.

The PUC proposal also increases the cost of installing a telephone to $76 from $39.50 in the western district and $14 in the eastern district.

Voting against the option, Chairman Susan Shanaman said she supported a full investigation because of the number of complaints against the increase. Nearly 3,000 Mid-Penn customers signed a petition against the rate hike.

The utility serves 112,000 customers in Crawford, Armstrong, Ridgway and Greene counties in the western district and Lycoming and Carbon counties in the eastern district.

Flight School Owner Wins Injunction

WAYNESBURG — A Fayette County man was placed under a court order Wednesday to restrain him from interfering in any way with operation of a flight school at the Greene County Airport.

The temporary injunction was issued by Judge Glenn Toothman on a complaint filed by Dennis P. Hillen of McDonald, owner and operator of Hillen Flying Services. Defendant is James V. Giambardini of McClellandtown.

Hillen charged that Giambardini, one of his former students, had been maliciously slandering him because the flight school owner felt he was not qualified to take his solo flight, with the statements he was making costing Hillen an opportunity to sell the business.

The plaintiff asked the court to restrain the defendant from making threats and slanderous statements, and also asked that he be awarded damages.

A preliminary hearing in the case had been scheduled for Wednesday, but Giambardini's lawyer could not be present. The defendant agreed, however, to subject himself to the court order, with no further hearing to be held until either party requests it.

McGilton Trial Is Postponed

Greene County Court Thursday granted a one-week postponement of the trial of Paul McGilton of Waynesburg on charges of aggravated assault and recklessly endangering.

It will begin Monday, June 14, rather than June 7, and will be tried before Judge Glenn Toothman, without a jury.

The charges were filed after the defendant's wife, Celia McGilton, was fatally shot Jan. 17 by Waynesburg Borough Patrolman Michael J. Fuller.

The commonwealth contends that McGilton threatened Fuller and Patrolman Timothy Stevenson with a shotgun, creating the situation in which Mrs. McGilton was accidentally shot and killed.

The postponement was requested by defense attorney John Stets, who said that he needed the additional time to make arrangements for the appearance of a material witness.

Demolition Draws Crowd

WAYNESBURG — It was only a one-day run, but while it lasted demolition of part of the Sayer-Hooper building in Waynesburg was the most popular show in town.

Despite periodic clouds of brick dust which sent them running, there were no lack of spectators Monday as the Hopkins Construction Co. ripped off a storeroom which had been added to the east side of the original structure, along with part of a frame addition on the rear.

The bulldozing job, begun early in the morning and completed by afternoon, was contracted for by the county commissioners to widen the space between the old structure and the New County Office Building.

The additional room is needed for construction of steps along the side of the office building to provide access to a day care center for the elderly. The center is being developed in the basement for the Area Agency on Aging.

In tearing off the additions, Hopkins was careful not to damage the original 1832 structure or most of a large frame addition at the rear, although one wall of the frame addition had to be removed, since the commissioners have made no decision as yet on disposition of the building, which is vacant.

Until January of this year, the origi-inal building, a two-story brick structure on East High Street between the two county office buildings, housed two storerooms. The county purchased the building in 1974 for $40,000.

The public defender's office was located on the second floor and the board of commissioners in office at that time decided the building might be useful for other county offices. Subsequently, however, the county purchased half of the former Long Building and remodeled it to create the New County Office Building, eliminating the need for the Sayers-Hooper building.

In February of this year, the commissioners petitioned the Greene County Court for permission to raze the entire structure on the grounds it was structurally unsafe. The petition was not approved, and the court expressed concern over the demolition of one of the oldest buildings in the town's business district if there was any chance that it could be strengthened and put to use.

Subsequent passage in May of this year of new state legislation gives the county authority to act without court permission. But the commissioners have decided against proceeding with their original plan to tear down the entire building until they have definitely determined that the original section cannot be used.

His First Love

Woodworking — Not Just A Job

By JIM MOORE Staff Writer

RUTAN — There is a small Greene County manufacturing firm, comprised of husband and wife, that deals with nearly a dozen major companies and the U.S. Navy, but only a handful of residents are aware of it.

Tucked away in the village of Rutan in eastern Greene County is the Option Woodwork Co. It is owned by George Sligar, a former schoolteacher who quit that profession to return to his first love — woodworking.

Certainly more residents will become aware of his skills now that he has decided to build banjo clocks. Three of his clocks are on display in the window of the First National Bank of Washington, Waynesburg branch. Other samples of his recent venture into clockmaking can be found in the Greene County Craftsman, Hillcrest Shoppes.

turned out thousands of scientific instrument cases for Fisher Scientific and assorted items for tool companies all over the United States.

But after watching his three children grow up and leave home, George decided to leave the bustling city life. He noticed a home and store for sale in Greene County and one visit made up his mind. He immediately moved to Rutan into the former general store, which was large enough to contain his saws, grinders, drills and other equipment.

During his career, George has produced many items from walnut, beech, ash, pine and most other woods. His products have ranged from parts for diver's shoes to special wooden plugs for the nation's first nuclear plant at Shippensburg.

He often has no idea as to the use of the item he produces in his shop along Route 18 in the former Sander's General Store. He receives the blueprint and specifications from a client and proceeds to make the item. Among his many contracts was the manufacture of an atom kit used in college laboratories to teach students about the atomic age. Some contracts are so large it requires a tractor-trailer to haul the products away.

He purchased most of his supplies in Waynesburg and over the years became friends with the former Wilma Lewis who worked in a Waynesburg hardware store. George, who had been a widower for several years, finally got enough nerve to ask Wilma to dinner. They have been married for nearly three years now and Wilma has become an important part of the business as well.

"I never got rich but the business has always paid the bills," George said.

His interest in woodworking began early for George when, as an eighth grade student in Triadelphia, W. Va., he entered a bird house building contest in Wheeling. He won the $25 first prize and used the money to buy a motor for a band saw.

"That was in 1927 or 1928 and that motor is still running that band saw," he said.

Wilma was quick to point out that her husband takes exceptional care of his tools even if he doesn't always know where everything is.

Up until a few years ago, George purchased his lumber in Greene County but is now forced to shop in Pittsburgh for the kiln-dried wood which he must have. He prefers to work with hardwood but of course many of his clients dictate the material to be used.

It wasn't until a recent visit to the New England states that George decided to manufacture banjo clocks. During a visit to New England, a grandfather's clock caught their eye but the price and workmanship was not to the couple's liking. George felt he could build a better clock himself.

He committed several of the details to memory and began sketching his own idea when he arrived home. His first attempt at making a grandfather's clock is a beauty by anyone's standard and it occupies a special place in their living room.

He next built a smaller wall clock for his wife and then decided to work exclusively with the banjo clock. He uses ash, walnut, butternut and cherry wood for the casing and orders the movements from a firm in California. Some have quartz movements.

His formal training in mechanical drawing has helped considerably in his vocation and avocation down through the years. Early in his career, after resigning from the teaching profession, George specialized in kitchen cabinets and church pews among other things. But a friend finally convinced him scientific instrument boxes was a better paying business.

His workmanship soon became well known throughout the industry and a new career was launched.

The son of a piano tuner, George said he was the only one in the family to show interest in woodmaking. "My mother always knew where to find me. I would be in the basement building something," he said. His mother, by the way, will observe her 100th birthday in September. She is confined to a nursing home but remains in good health.

George and Wilma are planning another trip to the New England states this year and they hope to find an outlet for their clocks. They feel sure their workmanship is far superior to what they found last year.

There are many firms and the U.S. Navy ready to support that contention.

3 Held In Shooting Incident

WAYNESBURG — A Gilmore Township man who raises wild animals for sale as pets was shot at late Monday night after he surprised two men walking near his property along Route 30010, between New Freeport and Jollytown.

Robert S. Ealy, 36, New Freeport R.D.1, told state police and Game Protector Steve Kleiner the shot sounded like it came from a light caliber revolver. He was not hit.

Three Masontown residents, two of them teen-agers, were subsequently apprehended when they wrecked their car following an automobile chase with police. No charges have been filed and the identity of the suspects was not revealed.

Ealy told police that he has been alert for intruders since Wednesday of last week, when someone stole two arctic fox pups and two baby racoons. The theft occurred after two men had come to the house late at night to inquire about purchasing animals.

Shortly before 11 p.m. Monday, he heard his dog barking and went to the porch to investigate. When he saw two men partly concealed by shrubbery, he called to his wife, Karen, to get his gun.

At that point he heard the shot and the men started to run toward a car. Ealy fired several shots to one side to keep them going and, after they had fled in their car, he called police.

Neighbors who heard the shots were in the yard when the same car returned and drove past the house. It subsequently passed the property three more times. Police and Kleiner had arrived by the time they drove past for the final time, and they gave chase. In an effort to elude the pursuing officers, the suspects turned onto a side road and wrecked their car.

One was apprehended immediately. The other two, who had fled into the woods, were picked up a short time after.

Jeff-Morgan Makes Money Deal

JEFFERSON — In a special session Wednesday night, the Jefferson-Morgan School Board entered the money market by accepting a proposal from West Penn Mu-nicipals to issue tax and revenue anticipation notes in the amount of $690,000.

By borrowing the money on a tax and revenue anticipation note issue and then reinvesting it at a higher interest rate the district expects to earn between $16,000 and $18,000.

Steve Drizos, a representative of West Penn Municipals which is a unit of the First National Bank of Pennsylvania, made a presentation to the board late last month and was asked for a formal proposal. Wednesday night the board passed a resolution accepting the proposal and meeting Internal Revenue Service Code and arbitrage requirements.

Only one resident of the district, who identified herself as Mrs. H. Blair, questioned the board's action, but seemed satisfied after having her questions about the soundness of the investment answered by both Drizos and district solicitor C. Robert McCall.

"I am not against my school district making money on paper," she said to board members. "I am not opposed to making $15,000 to $18,000 as long as it is totally risk free to this community. I just don't particularly like the borrowing aspect of it."

Drizos said that once the board gets the money on July 1, all areas of investment will be reviewed including government securities and certificates of deposit and "there is no doubt in my mind that local CDs will be better."

Although they will not be known until July 1, interest rates on both the note issue and the invested money will be fixed. Due date on the note issue will be June 30, 1983. Interest rate on the note issue is expected to be approximately nine percent while the district expects to earn three percent interest on the invested money.

One mill of real estate tax in the Jefferson-Morgan district brings in $16,200.

McCall told Mrs. Blair that the investment of borrowed money by school districts is "a method that's been used throughout the state for many years" and assured her that it was "worth pursuing."

In answer to a question by Mrs. Blair on how the amount of money to be borrowed was determined Drizos said that it was a very simple formula used under the IRS Code and arbitrage requirements that took the biggest deficit month for the district and the following month's expenditures which were then divided by 99 for the top amount the district could borrow on a tax and revenue anticipation loan.

BIRTHDAY HONORS — Mrs. Harold H. Tracy of East Greene Street, Waynesburg, who was 90 years old on June 3, was honored Friday, June 4, by 27 members of her Sunday School class at the First Baptist Church at a luncheon at the Lettuce Patch Restaurant. Mrs. Tracy has taught the Tracy Sunday School Class for more than 49 years.

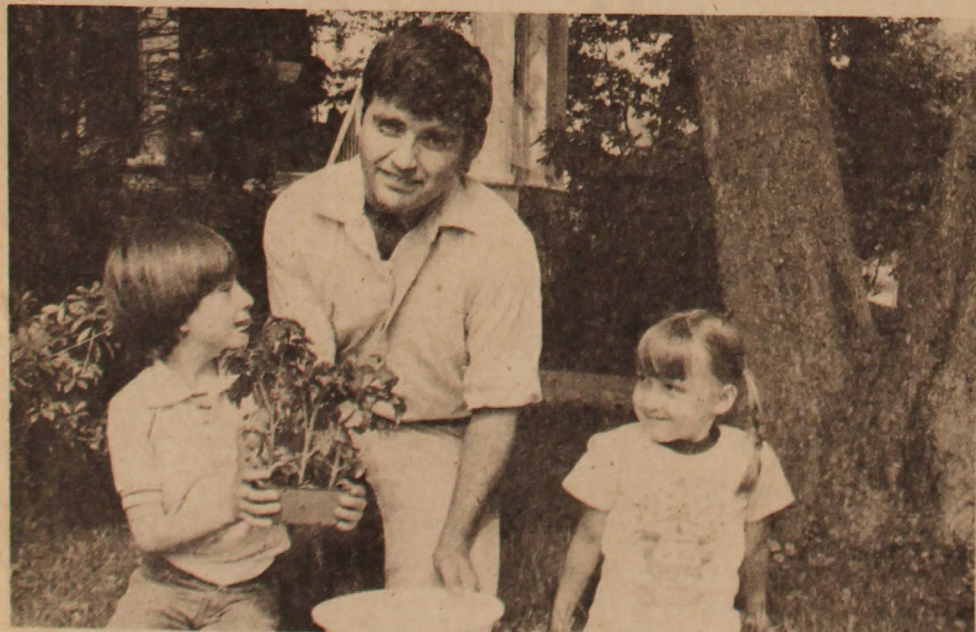

Rain Day '82 Planned

WAYNESBURG — Rain Day '82 will be celebrated in Waynesburg Thursday and Friday, July 29 and 30, with events scheduled from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. both days.

As in past years, the Special Events Commission of Waynesburg Borough is accepting booth applications. Those interested should contact the borough manager's office at 627-8111.

This year there will be an international food market, a children's carnival, a window dressing contest for merchants and businesses, the annual umbrella contest, Koal Krackin' Klowns, playground activities and contests, a flea market, bands, bathtub race, a Company K memorial service, tug-of-war and many booths.

For anyone interested in any aspect of the celebration they should contact the borough manager's office.

Planting Advice

Children enrolled in the summer reading program at the Bowlby Public Library, Waynesburg, have begun a project to grow cherry tomatoes in a hanging basket. The project will culminate in August with a tomato roundup, when prizes and ribbons will be awarded. The youngsters were given a good start on their projects Tuesday afternoon when Roger W. Smith, center, assistant Greene County agent, explained the finer points of growing tomatoes in a basket. Smith is shown with 6-year-olds Danny Leo, left, and Jessica Brewer.

Carmichaels Adopts Ordinances

CARMICHAELS — Five ordinances were adopted unanimously by Carmichaels Borough Council at its regular meeting Monday.

Two of the ordinances — one prohibiting the use of firearms and one prohibiting the consumption of alcoholic beverages on the streets — are new. The others required adoption to replace ordinances burned when the borough building was destroyed by fire.

Ordinance No. 1, 1982, prohibits the firing of any type of gun in the borough. Ordinance No. 2 makes it unlawful to consume or distribute alcoholic beverages on borough streets, with exemptions for public functions at the discretion of the mayor.

Ordinance No. 3 provides penalties for disorderly conduct, creating an annoyance or any boisterous disturbance. Ordinance No. 4 establishes a 10 p.m. curfew for any one under the age of 18, and provides for penalties to be levied on the parents of boys and girls who are out after curfew. Any youth violating the curfew more than two times can be referred to juvenile court.

Ordinance No. 5 regulates traffic and encompasses parking, traffic signals, meter fines and speed detection devices. It also prohibits the operation of large trucks on Morgantown Street and from South Street to the town square. Class I and II trucks and those making local deliveries are exempted.

Finance Chairman Betty Morris reported all departments, with the exception of the part-time police payroll, are well within budget limits. She said that "for a change finances are in the black."

Council approved a request from Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce President John Brodak to provide free parking in the community on June 18 and 19 for a merchants' and organizations' sidewalk sale. Saturday, June 19, South Market from South Street and one-half of the town square will be closed to traffic for entertainment, demonstrations and other activities.

Solicitor Robert Berryman said all legal steps had been taken concerning the vacant Barkman house on North Market Street, but the owner has not responded. He said council now has the option of boarding up the vacant house and filing a lien against the property for expenses.

County To Get Training Funds

HARRISBURG — Gov. Richard Thornburg has announced that Greene County will be receiving $106,240 to provide jobs and training for 87 young people this summer.

The Washington-Greene Community Action Corp. will administer the program which is being held in 23 counties not populous enough to serve as CETA prime sponsors.

In addition, the governor will provide $1 million to the state Transportation Department to provide 316 jobs statewide for children of welfare families.

While at Wesleyan, she served as president of Sigma Tau Delta, the national English honor society; vice president of Delta Mu Delta, national business honor society; was a member of Phi Kappa Phi, national academic honor society; and a member of Wesleyan's Centenary Issues Committee. She also served as a volunteer tutor, student assistant to the department of English and managing editor of the campus newspaper.

She is the daughter of Donis Morris Murdock and Harry Murdock Jr. of Greensboro Star Route, Waynesburg. She plans to pursue a management career.

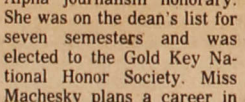

RECEIVES DOCTORATE — A Doctor of Education degree was conferred upon Charles E. Meacci in commencement ceremonies at West Virginia University on May 15. In December, he successfully defended his dissertation: "Alteration in Human Skeletal Muscle through Isokinetic Cycle Ergometry."

He and his wife, the former Delilah Tornabene, and their three children reside in Waynesburg. Dr. Meacci is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Meacci of Imperial.

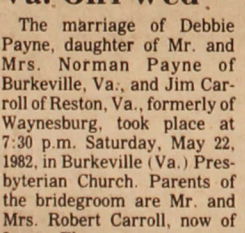

GRADUATES — Kassy Jo Machesky, daughter of Mrs. Alberta Nicholson of 109 Inwood Ave., Carmichaels, and the late John Machesky, graduated with highest honors from West Virginia University with a BS degree in journalism and a double minor in business management and psychology. She was campus editor of the university newspaper, vice president of the Public Relations Student Society of America, and a member of Kappa Tau Alpha journalism honorary.

She was on the dean's list for seven semesters and was elected to the Gold Key National Honor Society. Miss Machesky plans a career in corporate public relations.

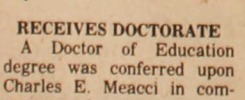

ENGINEER — Matthew R. Morgan was one of 1,139 students who graduated from Lehigh University in Bethlehem Sunday, June 6. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard V. Morgan of Waynesburg R.D.3, Matthew received his B.S. in Mechanical Engineering. While at Lehigh he was vice president of Sigma Chi fraternity, a member of the Pi Tau Sigma Mechanical Engineering Honor Society, named to the first team all-Sigma Chi football team, was a member of the 1980 Lambert Cup Champion football team, was active in varsity football and a four-year intramural wrestling champion. He has accepted employment with Duquesne Light as an engineer in the nuclear operations department of the Beaver Valley Power Plant.

RECEIVES DOCTORATE — A Doctor of Education degree was conferred upon Charles E. Meacci in commencement ceremonies at West Virginia University on May 15. In December, he successfully defended his dissertation: "Alteration in Human Skeletal Muscle through Isokinetic Cycle Ergometry."

He and his wife, the former Delilah Tornabene, and their three children reside in Waynesburg. Dr. Meacci is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Meacci of Imperial.

GRADUATES — Lis Murdock graduated magna cum laude from West Virginia Wesleyan College with a bachelor of science degree in business administration and a second major in English. While at Wesleyan, she served as president of Sigma Tau Delta, the national English honor society; vice president of Delta Mu Delta, national business honor society; was a member of Phi Kappa Phi, national academic honor society; and a member of Wesleyan's Centenary Issues Committee. She also served as a volunteer tutor, student assistant to the department of English and managing editor of the campus newspaper.

She is the daughter of Donis Morris Murdock and Harry Murdock Jr. of Greensboro Star Route, Waynesburg. She plans to pursue a management career.

Last Recipe Sold

WAYNESBURG — The 4,000th copy of "Our Favorite Recipes," a locally produced cookbook project started by Mary Parkinson, has been sold and the $6,000 generated by sales has been turned over to Greene County Memorial Hospital.

An employee of the hospital for 13 years, Mrs. Parkinson gathered the favorite recipes of many hospital employees and published a cookbook. Proceeds from the original 3,000 books were to be used to establish a pediatric ward at the hospital.

However, pediatric beds were included in the 1976 expansion so the money was placed in savings for a future project.

"While the entire staff participated in selling the books," Mrs. Parkinson said, "the switchboard staff was especially helpful in selling the books. After the first 3,000 books were sold, popular demand made it necessary to have a second printing of 1,000 copies in 1977. The last book was sold recently and Mrs. Parkinson turned over $6,000 to the hospital. The money will be used for a development fund."

Mary Parkinson, center, gives $6,000 to hospital representatives Marge Jones, left, and Carolyn Wolff.

Wedding In Delaware

WILMINGTON, DEL. — Carolyn Parkinson Collins of Webster Farms, Wilmington, Del., and Michael Patrick O'Brien of Jacksonville, Fla., were married Saturday, May 22, in the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, Cragmere, Wilmington, Del.

The parents are Mr. and Mrs. Philip Clarkson Collins of Webster Farms and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene O'Brien of East Islip, Long Island, New York.

The bride graduated from Mt. Pleasant High School in Wilmington and the University of Delaware and worked for the University of Pennsylvania hospital in Philadelphia.

She will be associated with the memorial hospital of Jacksonville, Fla.

A graduate of the University of Delaware, the groom is employed by O.T.T. Life Insurance Company in Jacksonville. The couple will live in Jacksonville.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. C.W. Parkinson of Waynesburg and a niece of Thomas Parkinson and Mrs. John Adamson of Waynesburg.

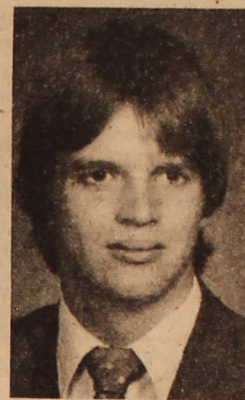

Attending the ceremonies from Waynesburg were Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Pollack and Mrs. John Adamson.

WINS TITLES — Francie Marra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Marra of Mt. Morris, recently won the titles of Miss May and Miss Rhododendron for modeling in the Morgantown area. She also received other awards for twirling during the competition.

The ladies auxiliary to the Center Township Fire Company will meet at 7 p.m. Monday, June 14, in the firehall.

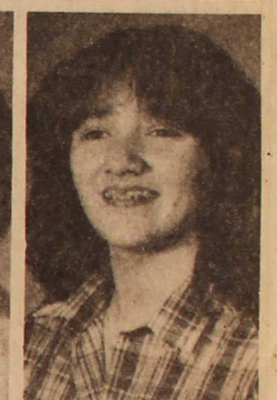

The main topic will be the strawberry festival.

GRADUATE — Fred C. Nopwaskey, son of Fred P. and Betty Nopwaskey of Waynesburg R.D.1, graduated from West Virginia University with a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering. He was a member of the student chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and was on the dean's list. He has accepted a position with General Electric's Installation and Service, Nuclear Division, and will receive training in San Jose, Calif., after which he locate in Ohio.

GETS DEGREE — Daria J. Beatty graduated from Olivet Nazarene College in Kankakee, Ill. on May 24. Miss Beatty received a Bachelor of Science in art and hopes to work in the Detroit area in commercial art, illustration or advertising. She graduated in 1978 from John Glenn High School where she received an art scholarship. She is the daughter of Kenneth W. and Anna J. Beatty of Westland, Mich. Former residents of Sycamore, the Beattys moved to Michigan in 1969.

TOP STUDENT — The United States Achievement Academy has announced that Tami Hooks, daughter of Mrs. Patricia Jones of Nettle Hill and Bill Hooks of Fort Worth, Texas, has been named a 1982 national award winner in English.

Tami, who attends West Greene High School, was nominated by Virginia L. Hughes, an English teacher at the high school.

Tami will appear in the United States Achievement Academy official yearbook published nationally.

Season's First Women's Event Buckley Wins Golf Tournament

JEFFERSON — Marilyn Buckley of Waynesburg has won the Spring Handicap Tournament, the first women's event of the season, at the Greene County Country Club.

Play was completed Wednesday. Louise Cafferty was runnerup having defeated Marie Nagy in the semifinals. Buckley defeated Irene Oneacre to reach the final match.

Results of weekend competition are as follows:

On May 6, Irene Oneacre finished first and Marie Nagy second in the least putts event. Low net winner on the following Thursday was Sara Palone with Marilyn Buckley finishing second.

In the blind event on May 20, Marie Nagy was the winner with Patty Holupka finishing second by draw. Tammy Watreas won the throw-out event on May 27 with Mildred Virgilia coming in second. Addie McDaniels took the blind event on June 3 over the 18-hole course and Peggy Pollock was the nine-hole event.

Pairings for the two-ball, best-ball tournament which began June 3 are T. Watreas and D. Hughes, S. Stennett and M. Vignali, P. Holupka and N. Harry, P. Milliken and

Social Service Grants Face Cool Reception

The Greene County commissioners are facing their first major decision in connection with Governor Thornburgh's policy of transferring responsibility for social service programs to local government wherever it is possible to do so.

For a number of years, the state has helped fund legal services for the poor with federal Title XX funds. In Greene County, the service has been provided by the Southwestern Pennsylvania Legal Aid Society.

This funding was eliminated in the 1982-83 state budget, with the money being added to adult services block grants which will go to individual counties. Greene County's share of legal services money is $29,824 for the fiscal year which begins July 1.

According to information from the Department of Welfare, if the county elects to accept the grant and set up its own legal aid department it must provide at least 343 hours of legal services during the year. Any of the money which is left over could then be used for other social services for needy adults.

The county has some options other than setting up its own program. It could continue to purchase services from the Southwestern Pennsylvania Legal Aid Society or it could turn down the grant completely, in which case the Welfare Department would use the money to contract for the services.

The situation is complicated by the fact that the county has been given very little time to make a decision. The state wants to know by today if the county will accept or reject the offer, and if it is accepted they want the county to submit a plan for a local program by June 28.

The major reservation the commissioners have is that there is no guarantee that the funding will be continued in future years if they do decide to set up a county legal aid program. If it should be cut off, the burden would then be on the county to pick up the program with local tax money or face criticism for cutting off the service.

Indications are that the commissioners may pass up the opportunity for this reason and because they feel the state and not the county is the proper agency to provide social services. If other counties feel the same way, and it seems that many of them do, it could spell failure for the entire block grant concept.

Women And Smoking Focus Of Program

WAYNESBURG — A new program designed to reach all women who are interested in quitting smoking has been set up by the Greene County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

According to the 1980 Surgeon General's report, lung cancer will surpass breast cancer as the leading cancer killer in women by 1985," said Barbara Miller, public education chairman of the county unit. "Our new program, 'Women and Smoking,' is being made available in response to this growing problem."

Mary Jo Buchanan, a member of the social service department at Greene County Memorial Hospital, has been named volunteer coordinator of the program.

"The program focuses on the physiological as well as the psychological effects of smoking for women," Mrs. Buchanan said. The program includes a film showing three women smokers who are trying to quit, followed by group discussion on such problems as stress, weight gain and family pressure that women face when trying to quit smoking.

"While the program is designed to reach women who would like to stop smoking, non-smokers who wish to help others quit are also welcome," she said, adding that it is particularly aimed at women's organizations, women in the workplace, nurses and pregnant women.

Clubs and businesses interested in providing "Women and Smoking" for their members and employees can contact Mrs. Buchanan at Greene County Memorial Hospital, 627-3101, extension 436.

Musmanno Holds Service

The late federal judge Michael Musmanno of Pittsburgh, noted spokesman for the labor movement, particularly the United Mine Workers, preached the "funeral sermon" for the coal and iron police at a Miner's Day Rally in Waynesburg in the mid 1930s. Justice Musmanno is at the left center of the photograph. Minutes after this picture, Musmanno was struck by a large stone thrown from the audience.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

Although Dr. L. James Lewis was born in Washington, Pa., in 1914, his family moved in 1915 to Waynesburg where he was to spend his most impressionable years, receive his basic education in the local public schools and his first advance training in the mysteries of modern science at Waynesburg College.

Dr. Lewis will be long remembered in the world of science research as a key man in the discovery of polio vaccine by Dr. Jonas E. Salk at Pittsburgh. Dr. Lewis died in May of this year at the age of 67.

Dr. Salk now lives in Los Angeles, but Dr. Lewis lived at Chigran Falls, Ohio, near Cleveland, where he spent the past seven years as director of cell research at the Cleveland Clinic. His work at the time of his death concerned the cardio-vascular system. His research into medical mysteries has helped many people to live many years longer.

From his earliest years, in elementary and high schools, and later at Waynesburg College where he grew to manhood, he was encouraged in his lifelong dream of becoming an accomplished scientist. He found great encouragement and inspiration from the late Dr. Paul R. Stewart of Waynesburg College and his early college chemistry teacher, the late Dr. Cecil Riggs.

His academic excellence at Waynesburg High School won him an academic scholarship to Waynesburg College.

There he expanded his academic horizons year after year. Following his graduation from Waynesburg College in 1939, and intrigued by the most difficult of all natural sciences, bacteriology, he won scholarships to the University of Pittsburgh where he was awarded both his masters and doctorate degrees simultaneously in 1943 in a remarkable accomplishment of academic excellence.

He was not, however, the classic image of a "book worm" who spent all of his waking hours with a book in his hand. Instead he had a good social life, was student manager of the Waynesburg College football team, could rate off batting averages of his favorite baseball players and relaxed after working hours with his old boyhood friends from the west Waynesburg area with whom he had attended grade and high schools.

Of the little time he had for recreation in later years, he would still renew the days of his youth with his friends at the tavern owned by his cousins, the Albert brothers, in west Waynesburg.

It was a distinct honor when he was chosen by Dr. Salk as his biologist for the history making research for a polio vaccine.

The reason he was chosen for that key role is best explained on a Christmas eve experience when he was walking through the laboratory to go to his car to drive back to Waynesburg for Christmas with his mother and sisters.

Stepping inside the lab he discovered an outbreak of virus of some sort had broken out among the research monkeys that were an important part of the project.

At first he thought it would only be a matter of a few minutes, maybe a couple of hours at most to bring it under control. Instead, both Christmas and New Year's day had come and gone before the

Man Asks For Trial

WAYNESBURG — An argument over the value of two coon dogs erupted in Greene County Court Wednesday, leading a Whiteley Township man to ask that he be taken off the Accelerated Rehabilitative Disposition (ARD) program and be brought to trial on a charge of cruelty to animals.

Wednesday's hearing had been scheduled to determine the replacement value of two English-bred red tick hounds which were shot and killed on July 6, 1981. They were owned by Vincent Sappington of Pine Bank R.D.1 and Don Cowell of Spraggs R.D.1, who were hunting with permission on a farm owned by Charles VanDruff.

Charles E. Spitznogle of Waynesburg R.D.3 was charged with shooting the animals after they cornered a racoon in a corn crib near his home. In January of this year, Spitznogle was admitted to the ARD program after he agreed to replace the dogs with animals of comparable value.

The hearing was scheduled because the three men could not reach agreement on a fair replacement. Sappington and Cowell originally asked $3,500 and $2,500, respectively, claiming they had paid $1,200 and $1,000 for the dogs in 1979 and had incurred the cost and trouble of training them.

With the failure to reach agreement, Spitznogle's attorney, James Hoek, asked that his client be withdrawn from the ARD program and be given a non-jury trial before Judge Glenn Toothman on the cruelty to animals charge.

Hospital To Host Meetings

WAYNESBURG — The Social Service Department and Home Health Program at Greene County Memorial Hospital will be host to a monthly meeting of personal care home operators.

Plans were formulated at a recent meeting at the hospital when mutual concerns and problems were discussed to resolve issues surrounding placement, transfers and referrals.

The group will meet quarterly and suggestions for future meetings include such topics as nutrition, ethics, death and dying and legal responsibilities.

Meetings will be scheduled from 7 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday evenings at Greene County Memorial Hospital.

Notice of the September meeting will be publicized in advance. All personal care home operators are invited to attend. For additional information contact Jan Chambers at 627-3101, extension 214.

Cancer Society Raises Funds

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Unit of the American Cancer Society has announced its seventh annual "Save-A-Life Swim for Cancer" will be held July 12 through 16, at the Central Pool in Waynesburg and the Eastern Greene Pool in Carmichaels.

The announcement was made by the recently appointed chairwoman of the event, Beverly Wudkwyh. Assisting her will be Bill Mellars, the Unit Crusade Chairman.

In the Save-A-Life Swim, swimmers will try to swim up to 40 laps per day, each lap being verified. At the end of the week, they will return to their sponsors to collect pledges.

The Save-A-Life Swim for Cancer will provide funds for educational programs, service to cancer patients in the county and for research into the causes and cures for cancer.

Trophies will be awarded to the swimmer who raises the most money, the

Convict Receives Life Sentence

MOUNDVILLE — Harold Gower Jr., 31, one of 15 convicts who escaped from the Moundsville Penitentiary on Nov. 7, 1979, and was harbored in Waynesburg for a time, pleaded guilty to felony-murder in a West Virginia court Tuesday.

Gower was sentenced to life in prison with parole possible after serving 10 years.

Gower, who was serving a 10 to 20-year sentence for rape when he escaped, decided to plead guilty after six days of testimony. Although there was no evidence presented to indicate Gower shot an off-duty state trooper during the escape, under the law he could be convicted for felony-murder because he was part of the group that committed the crime.

Gower and David Morgan, 24, were offered shelter in Waynesburg the night of their escape. One of the three local residents charged with harboring the convicts, Donna Hutchinson testified during the trial this week.

Between The Bookends

Personality and character — it is always interesting to see how history turns on the qualities possessed by individuals. Here are two examples of minor incidents which at the same time reveal character and foreshadow the future.

General Braxton Bragg, of the Confederate Army, was said to be "possessed of an irascible temper, and was naturally disputatious." He was so described by none other than Gen. U.S. Grant, in his memoirs.

Grant told the story that Bragg at one time was a company commander and at the same time acted as post quartermaster. "As commander of the company he made a requisition upon the quartermaster — himself — for something he wanted. As quartermaster he declined to fill the requisition, and endorsed on the back of it his reason for so doing.

"As company commander he responded to this, urging that his requisition called for nothing but what he was entitled to, and that it was the duty of the quartermaster to fill it. As quartermaster he still persisted that he was right."

Bragg finally took the whole argument to the post commanding officer, who exclaimed, "Mr. Bragg, you have quarrelled with every officer in the army, and now you are quarrelling with yourself!"

According to Grant, Jefferson Davis himself had to visit Bragg shortly before the Battle of Chattanooga to settle an argument between Bragg and another general. Bragg's mistakes in that battle, caused by the character flaws shown in the Grant anecdote, caused him to be relieved of his command.

A later general was equally known for being irascible and naturally disputatious, but used his qualities (and flaws) to more success. As told by Gen. John Eisenhower in his book, "Allies" (Doubleday, $24.95), Gen. George S. Patton once complained about "the total lack of air cover for our units" in the North African campaign. Air Marshall Sir Arthur Coningham, the senior air commander, "took the remarks as an affront to the entire air command and fired off a wire suggesting that 'II Corps personnel are not battleworthy.'"

Patton was of course infuriated at this insult to his troops, and wasted no time in calling headquarters. Dwight Eisenhower ordered Coningham to apologize. He did, but not profusely enough, and Patton pronounced the apology "altogether inadequate." Eisenhower then ordered poor Coningham to go to Patton's headquarters to apologize personally.

Patton refused to shake hands, and shouted at him, "If I had said half of what you said, I would now be a colonel and on my way home." Coningham quickly agreed to send another wire saying his original message had been misinterpreted, and instead of "II Corps personnel," it should have read "few Corps personnel..."

Patton still had the last word. On his file copy of the new message, he wrote, "The sentence I put in — though a lie — to save his face. I may need his help some day in another matter."

But even that wasn't the last word. A week later, a group of top brass visited Patton to assure him that the Allied air superiority was complete. As they talked, four German planes flew down the street, "passing fifty feet from the window of the command post, and spraying machine gun bullets and dropping small bombs. Plaster fell from the ceiling and the door jambed."

One general said to Patton, "I always knew you were a good stage manager, but this takes the cake."

General Spaatz asked Patton how he had arranged it. "I'll be  if I know," beamed a triumphant Patton, but if I could find the  who flew those planes, I'd mail each one of them a medal."

Patton won this round, and many others, but in the end it was his character and personality that did him in, just like Bragg.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Now that the 1982 Waynesburg Horse Show is over, local residents are starting to rev things up for the July 29 Rain Day observance which started among a half dozen or so early townsmen who first noted the odd sequence of rains here on that date.

From a little-known oddity of the weather which was initially of interest only to local people, it has gradually become known around the world since it first came to outside attention in 1933 when the late Al Abrams, a Pittsburgh sportswriter, accepted the late Byron B. Daily's standing offer to bet that rain would fail as predicted.

M. K. Talpus, retired registrar at Waynesburg College, has returned home from Florida after being called there several weeks ago by the death of his brother, Edward, who had resided at Miami since the end of World War II. Mr. Talpus has been visiting his mother for several weeks. He and his wife reside in the Spraggs section of Wayne Township.

Michael Kuran of Carmichaels R.D.1, a retired employee at U. S. Steel's Robena mine, underwent surgery in Greene County Memorial Hospital Wednesday. He will be a patient for several days while recuperating.

Farm area residents of Greene County report that increases in the intensity of rainfall over the past few years has resulted in the loss of timber-sized trees on the steeper hillsides on their land.

One of eastern Greene County's most esteemed residents, Mrs. Mary Hoge Biddle of Carmichaels, died on Tuesday of this week at the age of 93. She was the widow of Carl Biddle, who died in 1957. She was graduated from Waynesburg College and Columbia University and at one time taught schools in Washington and Cumberland Townships.

Another successful Greene County Fire School was held last weekend by the county firemen's association. Instruction in the use of new types of equipment and in new firefighting techniques was given by experts from the state and local fire companies.

Funeral services were held in Waynesburg on Wednesday for Mrs. Ola B. Call, 91, of Beaver, a former resident of Waynesburg, who died on June 6. She and her husband, the late William Call, operated a number of fish and poultry markets for several years in Waynesburg prior to Mr. Call's death. Interment was in Greene County Memorial Park.

CONVENTION — Lisa Monas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Monas of Mather, will attend the 71st biennial convention of Sigma Kappa Sorority June 24-28 at the Hyatt Regency, Lexington, Ky.

Miss Monas, a junior at Waynesburg College, is president of Delta Omega Chapter of Sigma Kappa.

More than 500 collegiates and alumnae delegates and national officers will attend. Alumnae and collegiate awards will be given to the outstanding chapters in the country. The theme of the convention is "Let It Begin With Me."
