Dilworth Mine To Reopen

WAYNESBURG — U.S. Steel's Dilworth Mine, Rices Landing, will resume operations Sept. 20 after being shut down since April 20.

A company spokesman said about 190 miners, representing half the work force, will be called back at that time.

A substantial long-term contract with a Yugoslavian concern has made reopening of the mine possible, the company spokesman said. Coal will be transported to the new pier 124 at Philadelphia and from there will be shipped overseas.

"I think it's fantastic," Sam Uveges, president of Dilworth Local 1980 said. "It's great to finally get word that we will be going back to work."

The Rices Landing resident said he has been notified the company will start calling people immediately to take their physicals, at the rate of from five to 10 each day. As many as 199 employees could return to work. Call-back will be on the basis of seniority.

"That would leave 176 still on the layoff panel, and we have been told there is a possibility that the contract with the Yugoslavian company could be expanded in the future, with satisfactory performance, to the point where all nine units could be called back and a long wall unit added on top of that."

Uveges said that those called back will work a steady five-day shift starting with the midnight shift on Sept. 20 — exactly five months after the mine was shut down for lack of a market for its coal. Since that time the only people working have been a few maintenance employees.

Teachers To Review Contract

ROGERSVILLE — Teachers in the West Greene School District will meet today to review a contract offer which their negotiating team turned down Wednesday.

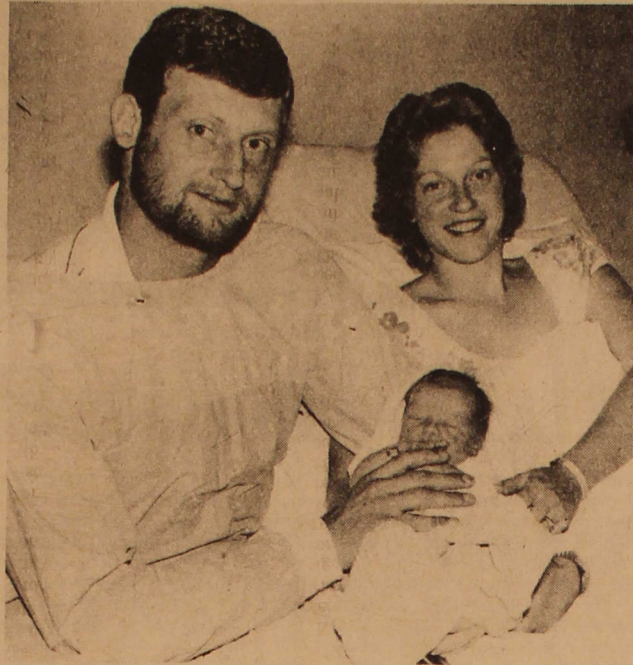

The district offer consists of annual pay raises of $1,400 in each of the next three school years, along with a new fringe benefit — family vision coverage.

The school board, in a statement issued Thursday, said the teachers made no counter-offer to the proposal, maintaining their latest position of seeking $1,800 in 1982-83, $1,700 the following year, and $1,600 in the third year, along with family vision coverage.

Larry Piper, chief negotiator for the West Greene Education Association, confirmed that his team had rejected the board offer but had agreed to present the proposal to the full membership.

"We will be meeting sometime Friday to discuss the proposal," he said Thursday, but declined to speculate on what might occur if the teachers reject the offer. The teachers' in-service program will be held today as scheduled. Classes are slated to start next Monday.

Anne Bower, a member of the school board negotiating team and its spokesperson, said that some movement was made by both the board and the WGEA on both monetary and non-monetary issues at Wednesday night's negotiating session, but that the meeting was adjourned when it reached a stalemate on the money offer. No further talks have been scheduled pending the outcome of today's WGEA meeting.

2003 Draft Choice

Steeler defensive tackle Tom Beasley and his wife, Margie, pose with the latest addition to their family, Jared Scott. Jared was born at Greene County Memorial Hospital Saturday night while dad was playing against the Baltimore Colts in the third quarter. It is the third child for the Beasleys, who live on a farm near Ruff Creek. A possible draft choice in 2003, Jared will have to gain some weight. At 8 pounds, 4 ounces he's a little light for the Steeler line.

County Seeks Funds To Upgrade Airport

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners will apply to the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) for funds to make improvements at the county airport under a grant program which would provide 95 percent of the cost involved.

Two requests will be submitted, one for an asphalt overlay on the airport runway and the other for extension of a taxiway which would permit construction of an additional T-hangar.

George K. Stennett, county development director, will prepare the applications. He noted that the Airport Development Aid Program (ADAP) has been continued as a source of funding. It provides that 90 percent of the cost of airport improvements be borne by the FAA. The state Bureau of Aviation and the county would each provide five percent.

The application for the runway overlay, with an estimated cost of between $260,000 and $275,000, will be given top priority. It would consist of laying two inches of blacktop on the present runway surface, which has been in place for many years. The cost of extending a present taxiway has been estimated at $100,000.

In response to a question from the commissioners, Stennett said ADAP funding is not available for a new airport administration building since it is limited to functional improvements.

In other action at the meeting, the commissioners awarded a contract to Ringler Decorating of Greensburg for painting and repairs at the court house on the basis of its low bid of $13,800.

Work will include painting and repair of the roof; repair and painting of the rear addition; painting of columns, clock tower dome and statue, and caulking and painting of window frames and outside doors.

Strosnider Printing Co., Waynesburg, was awarded a contract for printing of ballots for the November election. The company's bid of $5,222 was the only one submitted.

The commissioners noted that repairs to a county bridge on a Gilmore Township road over Roberts Run, near Pine Bank, have been completed and the bridge has been reopened to traffic. They also said that work on a county bridge at Mt. Morris is nearing completion.

Nancy L. Dukate was appointed assessor for Rices Landing to replace Christopher Bertugli, who recently resigned. Dukate's appointment was recommended by Rices Landing Borough Council. Chief County Assessor Perry Bayera noted there is no conflict of interest involved in the fact that she also serves as borough secretary since that is an appointed position rather than an elective post.

Jeff-Morgan Teachers Strike, Talks Stalled

JEFFERSON — Teachers in the Jefferson-Morgan School District announced they will go on strike beginning this morning when contract talks Wednesday night failed to produce sufficient progress toward a settlement.

Although their contract had expired on Tuesday, teachers in the district had agreed following contract talks Monday night to continue working on a day-to-day basis as long as they felt "some progress" toward a settlement was being made.

Forrest V. Cottle, school district business manager and chief negotiator in the Jefferson talks, said negotiations had progressed to the point where all non-economic issues had been settled and the two sides were close on salary and fringe benefits.

Following Wednesday's meeting, Cottle said it was the intention of the school board to allow the football program to continue through any work stoppage. But he could not say what the district's professional association's stand on the matter would be.

Jefferson's first football game of the season is scheduled for this Friday with Waynesburg Central High School in Waynesburg. Schools in the district opened Monday.

High Court Upholds Methane Gas Ruling

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

PITTSBURGH — The Pennsylvania Superior Court has affirmed a Greene County Court ruling that methane gas found in coal seams is the property of the landowner and not the corporation or individual who owns the underlying coal.

In light of the landmark ruling, the appellate court warns landowners and potential purchasers of oil, gas and coal rights to "proceed with caution" in drafting lease and sales agreements.

"The parties ... must be careful to include coalbed gas in their negotiations and agreements lest the failure to do so result in unnecessary and potentially costly litigation," it noted.

The case, which has held the attention of the coal, oil and gas industries, dates back to 1978. At that time, U.S. Steel Corp. filed suit to block Mary Cunningham, then a Waynesburg independent oil and gas producer, from drilling gas wells into Pittsburgh Coal it owned. The coal lay under two Greene County farms, whose owners had given Mrs. Cunningham a lease to drill for oil and gas, including methane gas, on the properties known as the Hoge and Murdock tracts in Whiteley Township.

Mrs. Cunningham, who now resides in Somerset County, was owner of the Kinloch Development Corp. When contacted Monday she said she was "overjoyed" with the Superior Court decision. "It should mean a lot of money to landowners." She added that she is uncertain about her future plans at this time.

The case, which for the first time raised the question of the ownership of coalbed gas, was in litigation in Greene County for more than two years and involved many hours of testimony by geological experts, both in government and private practice, resulting in a transcript which contained 1,054 pages.

Judge Glenn Toothman eventually rejected U.S. Steel's contention that methane was an integral part of the coal and therefore belonged to whom-ever owned the coal.

Toothman agreed the coal owner had the right to dispose of the gas as part of its mining operation because of the hazard it posed. He also gave the landowner the right to drill into the coal and remove the gas before mining, provided the coal was not hydrofractured (broken by water forced into the seam) to speed the flow of gas.

"When drilling by conventional methods is done in areas sufficiently removed from the vicinity of the immediate area of active mining, it should not and need not create any further burden or hazard to the coal mining operations," the Greene County jurist stated.

The case has been before the Superior Court on appeal by U.S. Steel for almost two years. The high court's opinion was written by Justice P.J. Cercone, with all members of the court concurring. The 28-page opinion takes up each of U.S. Steel's five arguments in turn.

In response to the contention that ownership of the coal embraces everything in the geological stratum comprising the coal vein, the appellate court pointed out that Pennsylvania law has long recognized separate ownership of each of the valuable minerals underlying a tract of land. And the owner of each mineral has the right to use the surface to extract the mineral, with methane being no different from other minerals.

The second contention was that coal and coalbed gas were commonly identified as different aspects of the same substance when coal severance deeds were executed. In response, the court held that methane gas, which is generated by coal, is no different from other natural gases which are generated from oil and have long been considered separate entities.

Thirdly, U.S. Steel argues that the right to drill through the coal seam to recover gas in lower strata does not include the right to drill into the seam to recover methane.

"U.S. Steel's argument ... assumes that the surface owners intended to part with the rights to the coalbed gas when they granted the rights to the coal," the court replied. "The argument ignores both the historical facts of gas exploitation in the region and the law of gas ownership in Pennsylvania."

The coal company's fourth argument rests on the right granted by severance deeds to ventilate the coalbed gas. The appellate court agrees with Toothman's opinion that this gives the coal owners the right to ventilate gas from their mines, or even to capture and sell it in the course of mining operations. But this does not mean "that the coal owner has an absolute right to all coalbed gas in place."

The final argument is based on considerations of public policy on the grounds that separate ownership of methane would work against rational exploitation of energy resources with an eye to efficient, low-cost production.

"We have already held that U.S. Steel may exploit the coalbed gas released in its mining operations," the court stated. "Aside from that limited holding ... the cases would seem to point toward a clear victory for the landowners and their gas leasees."

Falling Door Hits Teacher

ROGERSVILLE — A teacher in the West Greene School District escaped apparent serious injury when a heavy door fell against her during an in-service day program Friday.

Lola Tornabene of Holbrook R.D.1, a mathematics and physics teacher, was taken to Greene County Memorial Hospital, where she was treated and released following the accident at 8:30 a.m. in the high school cafeteria. She is the wife of William Tornabene, assistant football coach at Waynesburg College.

When contacted Friday night, Mrs. Tornabene said the steel door, estimated to weigh about 250 pounds, was standing against the wall of the cafeteria when it fell for no apparent reason.

"I was standing with my back to the wall and didn't see it coming," she said. "It struck me on the left side of the head and knocked me into a table."

She added that she was permitted to return home after X-rays were taken and was told to consult a neurologist if there are further problems. "Right now I have quite a headache," she said.

The door had apparently been propped against the wall in connection with clean-up operations still underway at the school, where construction of a large new addition has been underway for more than a year.

mediate good news for the declining coal industry when he addressed the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Coal Mining Institute of America Thursday.

"Things are tough in our business," Evans told some 200 coal officials, miners and government leaders in the auditorium of the Carmichaels Area High School.

"It takes an optimist to be in the coal business; but we can take pleasure in knowing we're doing the best we can," he added.

Evans pointed out that coal is a growth business and said this was the reason his company purchased coal reserves in Greene and Washington counties from U.S. Steel and Republic Steel. Citing Pennsylvania's railroad network, the Ohio River, Lake Erie and river outlets to the Atlantic, he said his Chicago firm has confidence Pennsylvania coal will be in great demand in the future.

Evans predicted coal production will increase some 400 million tons by 1990 with utility companies requiring additional coal. Industry will be the second largest user in the United States and foreign exports will account for the third largest amount in 10 years, Evans said.

Speaking of Sohio's coal reserves in this area, Evans said his company is currently mapping, drilling and studying transportation methods so that when the market gets better, the company will be ready to produce.

Evans called on state lawmakers to help the industry by taking a closer look at the laws in three areas.

The coal executive said lawmakers must be careful in not making the subsidence laws so tough that it would not be economical to mine coal.

"Unreasonable restrictions can harm the industry. States must balance the rights of the industry and the consumer," he said.

Speaking of safety, Evans believes that with the cooperation of union and management high production and safety can be obtained. "We must work together, for if we fight each other neither side can win," he said.

Evans concluded his address by calling for cooperation between the union and management by saying, "We have an important part to play in the nation's future."

Waynesburg Man Killed In Crash

HUNDRED, W.VA. — A 20-year-old Waynesburg man died of multiple injuries at 11:05 p.m. Friday when he lost control of his motorcycle and crashed into a utility pole in Hundred. Killed instantly was Brent E. Martin of 32 West Elm Street. The accident occurred on W.Va. Route 69 near the ball field in Hundred.

According to the West Virginia state trooper who investigated the accident, Martin was traveling at an estimated 70 mph. The trooper said Martin had just left a tavern and a Hundred police officer, standing along the street, had waved for Martin to pull over. Instead, Martin sped east toward Waynesburg and traveled only a short distance before hitting the pole.

The victim, who had served in the U.S. Air Force, was a 1980 graduate of Waynesburg Central High School. He is survived by his parents, stepfather, a brother and a sister.

Court Grants Ex-Mayor New Trial On Malice Verdict

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Court granted former Carmichaels Mayor Paul Connor a new trial Monday, solely on a malicious prosecution complaint.

In the action, the court set aside a civil court verdict which awarded $2,040 to Carmichaels businessman Thomas Russell. Russell had claimed he was the subject of malicious prosecution by Connor.

The ruling by Judge Glenn Toothman, handed down Monday, is the latest development in litigation resulting from an altercation between Connor and Russell on Dec. 4, 1979. Connor claimed Russell, without provocation, came to his office in the borough building and assaulted him. Connor filed an aggravated assault charge against Russell, who was acquitted by a criminal trial jury.

Connor filed for civil damages, and Russell denied the incident and filed a counterclaim for malicious prosecution. The jury dismissed Connor's claim for damages and awarded Russell $2,040 on the counterclaim.

In appealing the verdict, Connor's attorney challenged the validity of the counterclaim verdict, claiming the necessary elements for malicious prosecution were not present, and that the matter was not properly placed before the jury.

The court order noted that three elements must be proven: that the criminal action was instituted without probable cause, that it was prompted by malice and that the proceedings were terminated in favor of the plaintiff.

The opinion adds: "In the present case, where there was a dispute on the facts as to what occurred, and considering those circumstances as they bear on the question of probable cause ... the question of probable cause should first have been placed before the jury for special findings of fact."

"The court must then, as a matter of law, rule upon its absence or presence as a necessary element in the cause of action."

For this reason, the court granted Connor a new trial solely on the matter of Russell's counterclaim for malicious prosecution.

Court opinions also were handed down Monday in two other appeal cases.

In one of them, the court refused to set aside action by the state Department of Transportation in revoking the driver's license of Donald R. Riffle of New Freeport R.D.1 for five years under the habitual offender provision of the motor vehicle code.

The revocation was imposed on July 6, 1981, on the grounds of three convictions in 1977 — one conviction for driving while intoxicated and the other two arising out of the same incident, a second arrest for driving while intoxicated and a concurrent charge of driving under suspension.

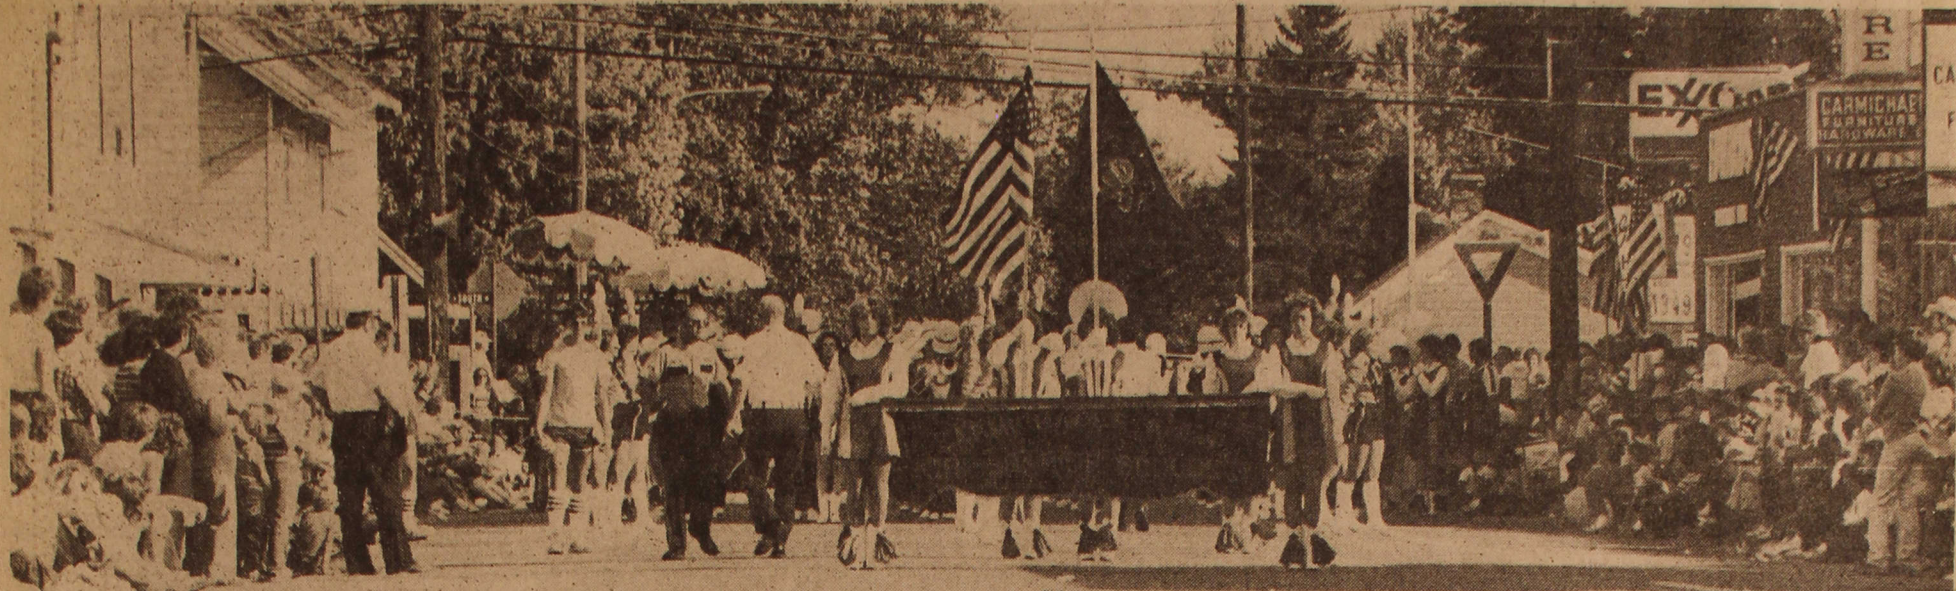

At the time of the sentence on the latter charge, the court recommended, because of extenuating circumstances, that Riffle be charged with only one suspension on the two charges, which would have kept him from falling under the habitual offender provision of the code.

Toothman noted that this recommendation was not binding on the director and therefore dismissed the appeal.

In the third case, Toothman refused to grant a new trial to Larry W. Nalls, Cameron, W.Va., who was convicted in a jury trial on a charge of rape. He was charged with taking a 15-year-old girl from her home on Dec. 29, 1981, and assaulting her in a nearby graveyard.

The court directed that Nalls appear for sentencing on Friday, Sept. 17.

Coal Show Ends With 3-Hour Parade

By Thelma Callaghan, Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — Cool temperatures and blue skies combined for a perfect day for the more than 15,000 people lined the streets of Carmichaels Saturday for the 29th annual state Bituminous Coal Show parade which climaxed a week-long celebration.

The three-hour parade, which included 231 units, began following the release of 800 helium-filled balloons by the Carmichaels Area Jaycettes in a project to benefit the cystic fibrosis fund drive.

Musical and marching units were judged by the All-State Judges Association and the fire equipment was judged by Verne Horan of Belle Vernon, Larry Marshall of Waynesburg and Larry Deluze of Sturgeon. Parade marshal was William C. Groves and the announcers were Stephen McCann, Al Smalara and Michael J. Lucas.

Badger Coal Co. entered the first-prize float and was awarded $200. The second prize of $125 went to the Bobtown Girl Scouts and the Carmichaels Area Women's Civic Club won third place, $75.

The antique car parade drew 64 entries and the oldest was a 1920 Ford owned by Michael Pokorny of Masontown. Traveling the greatest distance under its own power was a Dodge owned by Robert Lutes Jr. of Troupsburg, N.Y., who drove 300 miles to enter.

Parade winners included Waynesburg Central High School, best senior high band, $150, and Albert Gallatin, second place, $75. Frazier High School was judged best junior-senior high band and received $150 and Beth-Center was judged second and received $75; Redstone won as best junior high band and received $150.

Uniontown VFW was judged the best senior band and Keystone Steelman, the best junior drum and bugle corps. The Royal Ambassadors from North Huntington were judged the best senior drum and baton corps with the Red, White & Blue from Connellsville placing second. The Martinettes from Fairhope placed first in the junior drum and baton category with Lazelle Unionettes from Morgantown placing second.

The Greensburg Fire Company had the best drill team and the Koal Krackin' Klowns were judged the best comic unit.

In the fire equipment judging, Braddock had the best appearing ladder truck; Washington Township, the best appearing snorkel; Parkview, the best ambulance; Evergreen Ross Township, best heavy pumper; Ronco, best light pumper; Leesburg, Va., first and McDonald, second for the best appearing squad truck; Imperial, best brush truck; Washington Township, best tanker; Confluence, best mini-pumper; Fairchance, best air truck; Rices Landing, oldest hand-driven fire apparatus; Leesburg, Va., traveled the furthest (204 miles); and Greensburg, most men in uniform marching.

The end of the parade was signaled by the appearance of the Chamber of Commerce float carrying, Debbie Tekavec, 1982 state Bituminous Coal Queen. She was preceded by her high school band from Fairchance-Georges. Also on the float was her court comprised of Dolly Goodwin of Waynesburg, Betsy Dandrea of Frazier, Annette Janco of Jefferson-Morgan and Lois Bower of Beth-Center.

County Reviews Plans For Ash Disposal Site

WAYNESBURG — Plans for expansion of two fly-ash disposal sites in eastern Greene County were reviewed by the county planning commission at its meeting Monday.

In both cases, the state Department of Environmental Resources asked the planning commission to examine the plans for conformity with the county land use plan and suggest changes.

Final review was given to the Shannopin disposal facility in Monongahela Township, north of Poland Mines. The facility has been in use for some time but is to be expanded.

The commission, which had first reviewed the plan last year, indicated it had no adverse comments.

The DER submitted preliminary plans for expansion of the Fort Martin power station ash disposal site in Dunkard Township, operated by the Dunkard Disposal Corp., noting that it covers some 53 acres of land and is serviced by private roads. The proposed expansion would add 15 years to the life of the site.

County Planner Valerie Cole said the DER will provide additional information prior to the date when the planning commission response is due. Arrangements also will be made for commission members to visit the site.

The commission approved a request to amend the building setback line provided for the Coal Lick Plan of Lots, just off Route 21 near the Curry Memorial Home. The setback of 75 feet from the center of the highway was reduced to 60 feet to permit the construction of a house on one of the four lots in the plan. It was noted that the 60 foot set-back still meets requirements of the county subdivision ordinance.

A four-lot subdivision in Dunkard

Township along Routes 30022 and 30020, known as the Orange Sub-division, was approved. The commission recommended that a load capacity test be conducted on one of the lots before construction begins since the possibility of mine subsidence exists. Each of the four lots contains more than 10 acres.

A site plan for construction of the new church to be erected by the First Church of the Nazarene was approved contingent upon compliance with a few recommendations by the Soil Conservation Service.

The church will be built just off old Route 21, east of Waynesburg. The architect, William Gunther, said church members hope to begin preparing the site by Sept. 15.

Approval was given to a request from Paul B. Stokes for a variance in lot split requirement on property along Route 21 in Richhill Township. The request will permit Harry D. Gillispie, an adjacent property owner, to increase the size of his property.

Ellsworth Hamel was given permission for lot splits of 2.8 acres and 3.1 acres on property in Washington Township.

Waynesburg College Gets Its First Coed Dormitory

WAYNESBURG — Several changes have been made in residence halls at Waynesburg College this year, including establishment of the college's first coed dormitory.

Ray Hall, a dorm housing 60 students, has been made into a coed residence, two other dorms have special "quiet" areas, and a men's residence features a "contract" floor with student self-government.

The new living arrangements came from an experiment tried two years ago when members of Alpha Phi Delta fraternity lived on the first floor of Martin Hall. The floor, informally known around campus as "the pit," had traditionally been a trouble spot in that dorm.

But the first year the frat lived on the floor things changed. "For the last two years they have made a very pleasant place out of that floor," Mrs. Patricia Byers, associate dean of student life, said.

The experiment with the fraternity led to greater changes this year — the most significant change being made at Ray Hall. Since it is one long floor with two wings off of a main lounge area, Ray Hall was considered an ideal dorm to be made into a coed dorm for upperclassmen.

One wing houses women, the other men. Both sides have a resident advisor and the resident director is a graduate of Waynesburg College now attending West Virginia University for his master's degree in counseling. The dorm is set up to be self-governing and follows the same rules as in other residence halls, including visitation hours.

In Denny and Thayer Halls, a floor has been designated as a quiet area. These areas were advertised as such last year so students could select a dorm room on that basis and Mrs. Byers indicated mostly upperclassmen chose rooms designated in quiet areas. Denny Hall is a women's residence and Thayer is for men.

In Martin Hall, a men's dorm, the second floor has been made a "community contract" floor. Each resident of the floor is expected to sign a contract. As with Ray Hall, the floor is self-governing. Students are expected to organize the floor cleaning, social programs, make policy changes, manage floor funds and have the power to recommend a student be expelled from the floor. In return the floor receives $200 a semester which can be used for social activities.

"It's an attempt to get residents to take greater initiative in the floor atmosphere," Mrs. Byers said. Joe Rettura, a student from Monessen who works as a resident advisor in the building, was instrumental in setting up the contract floor.

One other change this year has been the number of single dorm rooms available for students who have requested them. "It's too bad enrollment is down, but the good side is that it makes living conditions in the dorm very pleasant and uncrowded," Mrs. Byers said.

If the living experiments prove successful this year, a number of others are planned for the future. There is hope that computer terminals can be installed in some of the dorms for students' use. Another plan is to have students with common majors grouped together — giving them the opportunity to help each other with their studies.

Ray Hall is Waynesburg College's first coed dorm.

Cumberland Twp. Supervisors Will Establish Sewer District

CARMICHAELS — The Cumberland Township supervisors, at their meeting Thursday, Sept. 16, will adopt an ordinance creating the Crucible Sewer District for purposes of administering the new sewer system being built in that community.

Construction costs, spread out over three years, are expected to total just under $1 million, all of which will be absorbed by a $2.1 million federal renovation grant the community received in 1981 through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The ordinance creating the sewer district stipulates that none of the costs of construction will be charged against the 225 properties to be serviced by the system.

Supervisor William Groves said the only expense to residents will be the minimal cost of operating and maintaining the system after it is completed in 1984.

Groves said that future contracts will be awarded for completion of the lines and construction of a treatment plant and pump stations.

The HUD grant will be received at a rate of $700,000 per year for three years. The overall renovation work will also include the rehabilitation of 97 houses, installation of storm sewers and some paving work.

Receives Bids For Apartments

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Economic Revitalization Corp. (WERC) received bids Thursday evening for the conversion of the upper floors of two downtown buildings into apartments for the elderly and for those who qualify for occupancy on the basis of income.

An apparent low bid of $166,000 was received from Riley Associates, Inc., 610 North Porter Street, Waynesburg, for the development of six apartments in a building at the corner of High and Church Streets owned by John McNay. A total of four bids were received, ranging to a high of $196,000.

The low bid was well below one of $204,000 received on Aug. 13. That bid was rejected by the owner on the grounds that it was too high.

Robert Cowell & Sons, Inc., 768 East High Street, Waynesburg, submitted a bid of $186,000 for conversion of the top floor of the Patterson Building at the corner of High and Morgan streets to accommodate seven apartments. The Hillcrest Shoppes are located on the ground floor. It was the only bid received.

Architect Herbert Tiffany of Neilan Engineers, Inc., Somerset, said that bids for both buildings "were well within the range of estimates."

All bids were tabled for study by the engineer and solicitor, who will submit recommendations to the WERC board of directors in the near future.

Also still being considered are bids for the installation of seven apartments in the former Milliken building on West High Street, now owned by Joseph Wilson. Robert Cowell & Sons submitted the low bid of $170,000 for that project at the Aug. 13 meeting.

WERC President Robert Lang presided at the bid opening. He and Executive Director Frances Tomkins said that WERC hopes to take action on all three projects as soon as possible so that work can begin in the near future.

Development of the new apartments will be a major part of WERC's downtown renovation program, which is based on a $463,540 federal Small Cities grant which Waynesburg received in 1980 through the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Construction must conform to standards of both HUD and the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry.

Other projects to be carried out in the two-block development area along High Street, between Morgan and Morris streets, include storefront facelift, removal of overhead utility lines and sidewalk repairs.

Following Thursday's bid opening, Marion Gaydos-Chambers of Gaydos-Chambers Associates, Uniontown, met with the HUD board of directors to discuss the possible availability of new types of development grants.

Good News For Miners

There is some good economic news for about 800 miners in Washington County who have been idle for more than two months.

A spokesman for U.S. Steel Corp. said Wednesday that Maple Creek Mines No. 1 and No. 2 and the preparation plant at New Eagle will start up Tuesday.

The returning employees will be on a reduced work schedule — four days the week of Sept. 6 and three days the week of Sept. 13, before the facilities are closed again for two weeks — Sept. 20 through Oct. 3.

Then, on Oct. 4, the miners will return for three days.

The week of Oct. 4 is as far as the work schedule has been projected, the spokesman said.

In late June, the expectation was that the virtual shutdown would last for six weeks. When that target date was reached, a four-week extension was announced.

Maple Creek's primary customer is a New England utility. Like other utilities, it had a stockpile of coal because of the rather mild winter.

The U.S. Steel spokesman said the startup was made possible through the acquisition of new orders from foreign and domestic customers.

Bridge Project Begins Tuesday

CLARKSVILLE — Repair work will begin Tuesday, Sept. 7, on the bridge that carries Castile Run Road over Ten Mile Creek.

The state Transportation Department will post signs directing motorists to use Chartiers Road and Routes 88 and 188 to avoid the construction area.

The existing bridge deck will be removed and a new deck and approaches will be constructed. Conn Construction Co. of New Castle will do the work under a $608,919 contract from the state.

A second bridge located on the Dry Run-Clarksville Road is also included in the contract, but will not be rehabilitated until the spring.

Seven Countians Qualify For State Horse Show

BRADY'S RUN — Seven members of the Greene County 4-H Horse & Pony Club qualified for the state show in Harrisburg next month following competition in the District 11 show.

Held at Brady's Run Park last weekend, local riders captured 28 ribbons including six first-place awards in a show that drew over 200 riders from Greene, Washington, Allegheny and Beaver counties.

Lisa Warner of Spraggs was a double winner with a first place in the hunter seat equitation (over jumps) in the senior division and in the hunter horses (over 14.2 hands). Her mount was an 8-year-old gelding, "Clipper Bar."

Carol Masuga of Carmichaels placed first in the open trail (over 13.2 hands) and Melody Bennett of Mt. Morris was second in the competition. Both were selected for state competition on Oct. 1-3 at the Farm Show Arena. Carol was riding a 9-year-old sorrel mare, "Shasta Supreme," while Melody was aboard 12-year-old "Midnite Angel," a black mare.

Michelle Sisler of Mather, riding "Dream on Dreamer," won a blue ribbon in the saddle seat equitation, senior division. She too will enter the state competition.

Annie Zalar of Waynesburg rode a 12-year-old gelding, "Ispy," to a blue ribbon in the working hunter ponies (14.2 hands and under). Kim Hoy of Waynesburg, riding "Stormy Weather," a 15-year-old gelding, won first place in the working hunter horse (over 14.2 hands). Both will go on to state competition.

Others who won ribbons but were not selected for state competition were the following:

French Student Gets Taste Of U.S.

WAYNESBURG — Sixteen-year-old Nathalie Cavois will be the first French exchange student to attend Waynesburg Central High School under the local Rotary exchange program.

She will live with Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mulholland of 215 Bowlby Street, Waynesburg, and their two children, Mickey, 17, and Kathleen, 13. Another daughter, Lynette, 18, is an exchange student in Japan as a guest of the Motomiya Rotary Club.

Nathalie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Cavois of Lemesmil Durand in the Normandy region. Mr. Cavois remodels homes and specializes in kitchen improvements and Mrs. Cavois owns a clothing store that specializes in sportswear. She also has a brother, William, 15.

Nathalie, who has a keen interest in politics, decided she needed to improve her English and visit another country before going on to college, so she chose the United States for a visit. She will continue with academic courses at Waynesburg Central High School with emphasis on English courses.

Coming from a village of 300 people, Nathalie was greatly impressed with the vastness of the United States. She hopes to join her American family on several visits to historical places while here.

She has already fallen in love with peanut butter, which she had never tasted. In fact, she goes one step further and adds mayonnaise to her peanut butter sandwich. During an interview last week, she denied any knowledge of pizza, but is willing to taste it.

The Mulholland family is no stranger to foreign exchange students. They were hosts to the first student invited by the local Rotary Club six years ago. Mr. Mulholland, a retired state patrolman, is chairman of the Rotary program and the family has played host to other students.

Mrs. Mulholland has an added advantage because her grandfather was from France. She is rapidly learning the language from Nathalie and the two have taken a giant step in a mother-daughter relationship.

Prompt Decision Needed In Police Officer's Case

Waynesburg Borough Council faces a difficult decision with regard to the future status of Patrolman Michael J. Fuller following his recent sentencing for involuntary manslaughter in connection with the accidental shooting death last January of Celia McGilton.

But even though council might be reluctant to face the problem, it's a decision which should be made as soon as possible.

Mrs McGilton was shot and killed on Jan. 16 when Fuller and another police officer responded to a call from a neighbor about a man threatening people with a gun. The woman was standing behind a wall when her husband came to the door with a shotgun in his hands when police called on him to surrender. Fuller, fearing for the life of his fellow officer, fired two shots at McGilton. One of the bullets went through the wall and struck Mrs. McGilton.

Council has never wavered in its support of the patrolman, even though a jury convicted him of involuntary manslaughter in March, apparently responding to a defense argument that the tragedy would not have occurred if the police officers had used better judgement in their attempt to apprehend McGilton, who has been convicted of simple assault and recklessly endangering in connection with the incident.

Shortly after the shooting Fuller was placed on administrative status, with full pay, and for many months has been doing paper work and handling routine details which previously were shared by all members of the department.

It's a created job which has deprived the small police force of any meaningful service by one of its members, on top of which the borough is currently facing a lot of financial problems.

The Greene County Court has already rejected Fuller's motion for a new trial, but the possibility still exists for a lengthy appeal process in state courts before the matter is finally settled.

Regardless of how council might feel about the justice of the jury verdict, it would be unfair to the taxpayers to keep Fuller on the payroll in his present status for the indefinite length of time that process might require.

PUC Ruling Could Lead To Gas Service Cutoff

Scores of homeowners in six townships in western Greene County may soon be looking for an alternate source of energy as the result of a current dispute between the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission and Alco Oil Co.

Alco, with headquarters in Avella, is a producer of natural gas and sells to major utility companies. It also supplies gas to some 87 customers in Center, Springhill, Jackson, Freeport, Aleppo and Richhill townships along the route of its supply lines.

Sales to individual homes was started over 25 years ago by Dun-Mar Oil Co. which was purchased by Alco several years ago. Rates are generally somewhat lower than major gas companies.

The Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission, acting on a complaint, investigated the service being offered by Alco and filed suit charging the firm with operating a utility without a PUC permit, threatening to shutoff service and failure to install new lines.

Alco answered the complaint saying it was not a public utility but was only providing service arising from obligations by previous owners. Alco told the PUC it was just an arrangement to accommodate homeowners along its lines.

A hearing has been scheduled before Administrative Law Judge John R. Clements in Pittsburgh on Sept. 23-24.

Alco officials have already made it known that should the PUC rule Alco is a public utility, service to the 87 homeowners will be discontinued on April 1, 1983.

Faces From The Past-Do You Recognize Them?

Paul Oneacre, left, won the first of his four club titles at the Greene County Country Club. His opponent, the late Ed Powell, right, was a seven-time club champion with his last title coming in 1949. Oneacre, a retired pharmacist from Hundred, W.Va., is still an avid golfer and recorded a hole-in-one this past season. Bob Evans, the club pro and a native of Michigan, is in the center. He was club pro in 1964 and 1965.

Fact & Folklore

John O'Hara

Saturday, Sept. 11, will be a day when millions of people throughout the United States will pour into hundreds of college football stadiums from coast-to-coast as another season gets into full swing.

But for a small group of World War I veterans who will gather at Waynesburg, it will be a day of recollection as they hold another reunion to relive the days when they, too, were young and left their homes and families to fight in France.

They marched away from Waynesburg a jubilant, rugged group of 153 enlisted men and three officers following activation of Company K, Waynesburg National Guard unit. By the time they returned home on May 24, 1919, their numbers had dwindled by casualties on the battle field. Since then their ranks have been reduced much, much further by the passage of time.

But neither time nor human frailty has conquered the jubilant spirit which carried them overseas and through the heavy fighting in which they engaged on the battle fields of France.

As many as possible will be here for the annual reunion at the army on North Washington Street, where they will re-live their youth one more time. The current roster has dwindled to the following men: William Gray, Harley Swart, Frank Orndorff, John Barnhart, Dewey Lemley and Austin

Dillie, all of whom still live in Waynesburg; William Hague, who lives in Georgia; Ross Minor of New Orleans; George Wood of Cleveland, and John Shaffer of Pittsburgh.

Age has long since slowed their pace but has not dimmed the spark-

Land Bought

WAYNESBURG — Guardian Food Service Inc. has acquired 1.3 acres of land in Morrisville for construction of a Hardee's Restaurant.

The property, located on Route 21 just west of the East Franklin School, was purchased for $215,000 from Blaine A. and Wilma F. Beeghley of Washington, according to a deed filed Friday in the court house.

Completion of the property transfer capped several months of negotiations regarding plans for construction of the restaurant, which will be the 11th Hardee's owned by Guardian Foods, which is based in Rocky Mount, N.C.

Plans call for a 102-seat restaurant covering 3,600 square feet.

RETIRED TEACHERS

ing spirit which carried them through the ordeals of training sessions at Camp Hancock in Georgia and on through the grim days of fighting in the decisive battles in France where their ranks were depleted heavily by machine gun assaults of the desperate German war machine. And Greene County's own unit played a vital role in the deciding phases of the war.

The comradeship which was forged among them was so strong that within a few years after the war they held their first reunion, an event that was so inspiring and enjoyable it was decided to make it an annual affair.

And so it has remained to this year of 1982.

Wives of living members of the company and widows of the deceased will be guests at the dinner meeting, as they have been in past years. The dinner will be held as usual at the Waynesburg Restaurant on West High Street, which is now owned by Thomas Hill, a son of the late Allen Hill, who was a sergeant in Company K both in Germany and during its Mexican border service prior to the war.

And despite the inroads which time has cut in the roll call of the survivors, all those attending will undoubtedly enjoy their day at the armory, where they initially assembled as boys and to which they returned as men.

O-R Staff Writer Retires After 32 Years Of Service

CARMICHAELS — Thelma Callaghan can remember when she was the only woman at municipal meetings in Carmichaels.

"In the early days there certainly weren't any women serving on council or the school board, and all of the other reporters were men," she said Tuesday in thinking back over the 32 years she has served as the Observer-Reporter's correspondent in Carmichaels.

The reminiscences were in order because Tuesday was Mrs. Callaghan's last day on the job. Taking her place will be Mrs. Arthur (Marcia) Biddle of Carmichaels R.D.1, whose column, "Between the Bookends," has appeared in the Observer-Reporter for almost 15 years.

"I feel better about retiring because Marcia will be taking over," Mrs. Callaghan said. "I feel readers will still get the news coverage from Carmichaels that they deserve."

For the veteran reporter, "covering the news" has meant reporting on everything from fires to women's club meetings. Not only has she been a familiar figure at school board and council meetings, but she has also been closely involved in accounting for the activities of the sewer authority, township supervisors, chamber of commerce, recreation authority and many, many others.

It has involved a lot of hours and many times forced her to go out in the ice and snow ("that's something I won't miss") on a night when it would have been much more pleasant to stay at home with her family.

"The Sunshine Law was my best friend since it limited the length of executive sessions to 30 minutes," she laughed. "I can still remember having to stand in the hall at the high school until 1 a.m. or later while the school board tried to trash out a problem behind closed doors."

With it all, she and her husband, the late William J. Callaghan, raised two daughters, Linda Braun of Mt. Lebanon and Thelma Lee Ferris of Fairfax, Va. She has five grandchildren and two brothers, Glenn Donley of Ogden, Utah, and Harold Donley of Etters, near York. Her parents are Charles and Gala Rich Donley of Carmichaels. She is the sixth generation of her family to reside in Greene County.

Three years ago she went on a part-time basis to give her an opportunity to travel extensively and spend part of each winter with Thelma Lee, who at that time resided in California. Full retirement will mean more of the same.

"I've hardly had any time to spend with mom and dad even though we live in the same town," she said.

Her activities in Carmichaels have involved much more than reporting on the events happening there. She is also one of the town's community leaders, which was recognized in 1981 when she received the Outstanding Women's Service Award presented by the Junior Women's Club. At the awards banquet, Marcia Biddle summarized it all:

"She is an outstanding example of the journalist's commitment to the principle of the public's right to know. Public officials have told me they often turn to Thelma for an answer to questions about what has happened in the past and she always has the answer. She knows her community and its workings, and because of this has been able to make a lot of good things happen."

She has served since its inception, as publicity chairman for the King Coal Association, which has staged the Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show for the past 20 years, receiving that organization's service award in 1974.

She is a charter member of the Greene Academy of Art and has been its voice in the news media for the past 10 years for the restoration and activities at the historic Greene Academy building. In 1979, she received the Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce recognition award for her many years of work in publicizing its activities.

She is particularly proud of her role as chairman of a special committee which prepared a scrapbook for the West Penn Power Co.'s Community Development contest a number of years ago. It won the $2,000 first prize in the state, providing the nucleus of funds which enabled borough council to purchase the Greene Academy building, leading the way to its restoration for use as an arts center.

For her, perhaps the most rewarding part of her job during the past 32 years has been the opportunity it has given her to meet interesting people. She recognizes there have been many changes in her community since she first started reporting on its activities, but also feels that many things are the same.

"Many of the problems are still there, or similar ones have arisen," she said. "The only change is in the people who are involved."

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Richard Canan, a former Waynesburg resident who has resided in the Harrisburg area for several years, attended funeral services for his relative, Brent Martin, who was fatally injured in a motorcycle accident in West Virginia last weekend.

Photographers interested in getting a pictorial collection of early Greene County dwellings still have a chance to get pictures of the 150-year-old brick residence at Reese's Mill, on Route 18 two miles northwest of Waynesburg. But the chance won't last much longer.

The house is in the path of the railroad being built to new coal mines in Richhill Township and will be reduced to rubble as soon as a new dwelling place can be found for present tenants of the three-story structure.

Miss Sharon Glennen of Richmond, Ind. visited her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Grace Glennen of South Richhill Street, this week. She was enroute to Pennsylvania State University, where she will complete work on her doctorate degree in speech pathology.

She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Glennen, former Waynesburg residents. Her paternal grandfather, the late Walter Glennen, was employed in the oil and gas industry in Waynesburg for many years. Miss Glennen received her undergraduate degree in speech pathology at Purdue University.

Word has been received in Waynesburg that a former resident, Walter Jacobs, is in critical condition in a hospital at Omaha, Neb., where he is being treated for an advanced malignancy. He is a 1940 graduate of Waynesburg High School and is retired following a career in the U.S. Air Force. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Jacobs of Franklin Township.

Glenn DePoe, a native and former resident of Jefferson who has been a guest at the home of his cousin, Kathryn Dryer of South Richhill Street, has moved to Florida where he will make his future home.

Sol Levine, a former resident of Crucible who won a scholarship to Wayneburg College by winning a county-wide spelling bee for high school seniors, plans to attend the meeting of the "Wolfmen" of Wayneburg College at the Wayneburg-Geneva football game on Sept. 18. Besides being an honor student at the college he was manager of the football and basketball teams.

Levine has become a nationally-known physicist and is presently involved as a civilian engineer with the U.S. Naval Department. He played a significant role in development of the first space flights and worked on a first-name basis with all of the original astronauts.

More recently he was a technical consultant in completion of the USS Ohio, first of the Trident class of submarines. For the past nine months he has been aboard the Ohio as a test director to insure that the multi-million dollar craft would meet specifications. The Ohio is now based at Bangor, Wash.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Orndoff of Kirkland, Washington, formerly of Waynesburg, recently spend a week's vacation in Victoria, British Columbia. They were accompanied by their daughter Edith and her husband Jim.

"The World Of Oz," by Osborn Elliott. Viking. $1.99.

Here is another bargain book, published at $14.95 in 1980 and now to be found on the bargain tables at $1.99. In addition to being cheap, it's fascinating in several ways.

First, it's not a children's book. The title comes from the author's nickname—"Oz" for Osborn, see. Oz was editor of Newsweek magazine for many years, and he tells all kinds of stories about how a newsmagazine is put together. These stories range from gossip to his own theories of journalism to discussions of ethics.

The author himself is fascinating because I have rarely seen a man brag so much and so consistently. When he became editor of Newsweek in 1961, after its purchase by Phil Graham of the Washington Post, the magazine "was a shambles. Not only had the editor left, the whole staff was shot through with drunks, incompetents, and hacks."

Oz, of course, changed all that. On his firing by Mrs. Graham in 1975, he writes, "On Kay's side, I am sure, there was some real affection and a feeling that I had served Newsweek well and could continue to be useful."

In between, he set out to make his magazine the best newsmagazine in the country. And of course he claims he did it. "We figured Time magazine was vulnerable because of its set ways, its predictable politics, its snideness, and its cuteness of language."

In one interesting chapter, he tells how Newsweek put together the issue on the assassination of President Kennedy. The issue was, of course, better than Time's. "Newsweek, we believed, had arrived. We began to refer to Time as 'Brand X.'"

Other chapters detail Newsweek's coverage of civil rights struggles, the war in Vietnam, and Watergate. By 1965, though, "Newsweek was a journalistic voice respected throughout the world."

And there is another chapter dealing with Elliott's university — Harvard, of course. Oz is or was a member of Harvard's Board of Overseers, or trustees, elected by the alumni. "It is a distinct honor to serve as an Overseer," he explains. "Aside from anything else," he goes on with an attempt at humor, "it entitles you to wear a silk hat and a cutaway at Commencement." He quotes statements made by fellow Overseers at meetings, which seems rash. "Look, I'm having enough trouble fund-raising, without being burdened with this!" exclaimed one Overseer, referring to the possibility of Harvard's awarding an honorary degree to poet Robert Lowell.

More to the point is a chapter on what Elliott had learned about being an editor. He lost some friends. One was Robert Moses, when Newsweek published a bad review of his book. Moses refused to come to Elliott's parents' 50th anniversary party because of it. Elliott admits to being unpopular at times; the curse of power. "An editor has a lot of power over his people and his product, and it's not a bad idea to admit fallibility now and then." Well, why not?

They are the parents of three children, Mrs. Joe (Doris) Leach of Smithfield; Robert of Elyria, Ohio, and Gary of Pittsburgh. They also have five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

A graduate of an electrical engineering school and a school of mining, his hobbies are hunting, fishing and helping his church and neighbors.

An active member of the Bobtown United Methodist Church, he maintains the furnace, mows the lawn, and recently dug a drainage ditch, paneled the basement and erected classroom partitions. In addition, he is a member of the Mildred Sifton Adult Bible Class and is assistant teacher. He is a past president of the administration board and currently serves as vice president and trustee. He also is a member of the Bobtown Volunteer Fire Department.

During the ceremonies to honor Scott, the Rev. Dan Glover spoke of good citizenship. Frances Hennessey read a history of Mr. Scott and Gary Scott, son of the honored guest, offered a vocal solo.

Pleaders Sentenced

WAYNESBURG — Defendants in six criminal cases were sentenced in Greene County Court Friday after entering guilty pleas.

Two Uniontown residents, Scott King Ohler, 22, and Frank Bolius Rafitz Jr., 20, pleaded guilty to burglarizing the Ford and Gaskill Drilling Co. office on Dilliner R.D.1 on Oct. 27, 1981. A safe valued at $2,000 and a car valued at $14,000 were stolen.

Ohler also pleaded guilty to burglarizing the home of Conner Gaskill of Dilliner R.D.1 on Oct. 23, 1981. Five rifles, a shotgun and other items with a total value of $2,300 were taken.

Both men were sentenced to serve from one to three years in the state penitentiary, with the sentences to run concurrently with four-to-eight-year sentences they face in Fayette County.

Lee Shriver, 28, Waynesburg, who failed to return to the Greene County jail following a Christmas furlough in 1981, pleaded guilty to prison breach. Since he served five months in jail following his re-arrest in March, which exceeded the term of his original sentence, he was released with no additional jail sentence.

Calvin Kermit Cox, 33, Dilliner R.D.1, pleaded guilty to two counts each of rape, involuntary deviate sexual intercourse and incest.

He was fined $1,000 and was given a one-to-10-year prison sentence, which was suspended on condition that he continue the counseling he is receiving through the Mental Health and Mental Retardation Agency after receiving treatment at Mayview State Hospital.

James L. Burnsworth, 31, Marianna, R.D.1, pleaded guilty to two counts of receiving stolen property. He was arrested in February after state police searched a garage he had rented in Washington Township and found parts from two trucks which had been stolen in West Virginia.

He was fined $200, was ordered to make restitution at a rate of $100 per month, and was given a two-to-11-month weekend sentence in the Greene County jail, effective Sept. 10.

Clarence E. Randolph, 47, Waynesburg, pleaded to operating a motor vehicle without insurance. He was fined $100 and placed on probation for six months.

Oliver S. Forsythe, 39, Nemaacolin, who had pleaded guilty earlier to a charge of driving while intoxicated, was fined $300 and sentenced to serve a weekend sentence of four-to-12 months in the county jail.

Two of them involved countercharges brought against each other by a husband and wife, Delbert Wayne Debolt and Edna D. Debolt of Greensboro R.D.1. The husband was charged with terroristic threats, recklessly endangering and harassment, while Debolt had charged his wife with recklessly endangering.

Charges were also dropped in the case in which Ronald Morris of Waynesburg faced charges of recklessly endangering brought by two women after he allegedly threatened them with a gun. District Attorney Charles Morris said the indictment was being nolo prosequed because there was no evidence the gun was loaded, which would be required for a conviction.

Penn Pitt Site Prepared

Site preparation has begun for a major $2.7 million addition and renovation project for the Penn Pitt Elementary School in the Southeastern Greene School District. The project calls for the present four classrooms in the Penn Pitt building to be remodeled to provide a library, one classroom, as well as space for a special education room, faculty, music, health suite and office. A major addition to the building will contain 12 classrooms, an art room, kindergarten room, multipurpose room and kitchen. The new building will allow the district's Glassworks Elementary School to be closed.

Computer Program For West Greene?

GRAYSVILLE — The West Greene School Board Friday night again failed to decide if computers will join reading, writing and arithmetic as subjects being offered.

Through a special federal grant, up to $15,000 has been made available to the district to purchase computers and related software; however, the board has failed on two occasions to reach a decision if it wants two, five or no computers.

Bids were opened earlier in the week for five computers and the apparent low bidder was Atari at $7,341.

Board president William Ziefel first asked the administration if only 15 student would be involved in computer training, saying the purchase could not be justified if only a few students would participate.

Principal Paul Polink advised the board that 10 to 14 students in another class would be taking part as well as math and science students on a familiarization basis. Polink said as many students as possible would be afforded the opportunity to use the computers.

Superintendent Elliot LaFaiver also supported the purchase of computers, as did board member Ann Bower who said the district must come into the 21st century, the age of computers.

Mrs. Bower was in favor of obtaining the five computers in order that more students could participate. She felt only three students could use one computer and with only two, the program would be too limited.

Finally a board member made a motion to purchase two computers and then review the situation later. Following a second to the motion, the board voted 4-3 to purchase two of them but the motion required five yes votes — a majority of the full board — in order to pass.

LaFaiver pointed out the board will spend $10,000 to offer a football program to 23 boys for a 12-week period and the $7,341 expenditure for hundreds of students was well worth it.

Following an hour of discussion a special committee, made up of board members, the principal and a teacher, was appointed to review the computers and return to the board with a recommendation.

In other action, the board:

- Accepted the resignation of Sheryl Jean May as an elementary music teacher and hired Nancy Kalasky as a replacement.

- Accepted the resignation of Diane Buckland as an elementary teacher and granted a temporary leave of absence to John Marcolini without pay.

- Approved the transfer of high school teacher Richard Lightner from the English department to the business department.

- Hired Jack Barnhart and Leroy Eddy as custodians.

- Heard a report from maintenance superintendent Frank Farley that the high school building will be ready for the first day of school next Monday.

The meeting was recessed until 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 3.

College Schedules Groundbreaking

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College will break ground Tuesday for the construction of its proposed recreation center, marking the start of Phase Two of the renovation and construction project. Phase Two includes construction of the shell of the new building.

Phase One work on the existing College Gymnasium began in early July, with mid-fall set as the time of completion. Phase One included complete renovation of the men's and women's locker rooms and training areas at a cost of $256,000.

Interior finishing and the purchase of equipment will be covered under Phase Three. In order to complete Phase Three of the recreation center project, a total of $323,595 in additional funds must be secured.

The new building will contain 16,828 square feet of floor space, and will cost $802,050.

The Board also authorized renovation of the lobby and entrances of the present gymnasium at an additional cost of $150,000. The lobby and entrance renovations, including installation of new doors on the existing gymnasium, began in early August.

When the recreation center project is completed, the existing and proposed buildings will be blended into one facility. The new building, being constructed on the Wayne Street property, will greatly improve the recreational facilities at the college, according to Ewing B. Pollock, president of the board of trustees.

Improved and expanded locker facilities for men and women was a major need in planning for a new structure. By completing locker room renovations in Phase One rather than Phase Two, the improvements were available sooner for student use.

The completed Phase One and Phase Two projects will cost approximately $1.2 million, leaving the college with a small "reserve" that will be applied to Phase Three. The total recreation center project will cost $1,655,800.

"Although it has taken much longer to secure funding and develop appropriate plans, the recreation center is a tribute to the determination and dedication of trustees, faculty, staff, alumni, students and friends of the college," College President Joseph F. Marsh said.
