Party Line Crossed

WAYNESBURG — Greene County may have a Democratic registration majority of almost four-to-one, but Tuesday's election proved once again that voters are not averse to crossing party lines.

At one extreme, U.S. Rep. Austin J. Murphy received 83 percent of Greene County votes enroute to his overwhelming victory. At the other, Cyril H. Wecht was able to corral only 52 percent in a 926-vote win over U.S. Sen. John Heinz.

Heinz' 48 percent showing was by far the best of any Republican candidate, as he carried 20 of the county's 48 precincts, including all five precincts in Waynesburg.

County Commissioner Richard Cowan, who spearheaded the Thornburgh campaign in the county, said he was well satisfied with the governor's vote total.

"He got 4,519 votes and that's 879 more than the number of registered Republicans in the county," Cowan said.

Cowan also noted that Thornburgh's total this year was very close to that he received four years ago, when Pete Flaherty defeated him 7,215 to 4,029 in the county.

County Treasurer Joseph Souders, who coordinated the Allen Ertel campaign in the county, said he was well satisfied with his candidate's showing.

"We did our share," he said. "They (Ertel campaign managers) wanted 7,000 votes out of Greene County and they got 7,480. It was a good campaign. Thornburgh knows he was in a battle."

County Democratic Chairman William Groves, on the other hand, said he was "somewhat disappointed" with results of the gubernatorial campaign, but was very pleased with the voter turnout.

"Voting is a privilege and it should be this good all the time," he said. Returns indicate that 12,290 of the county 17,190 registered voters went to the polls, for a turnout of 71.5 percent.

The three Democratic legislators who were re-elected by overwhelming majorities — Murphy, State Sen. J. Barry Stout and state Rep. Bill DeWeese — all got more than 80 percent of the vote in Greene County.

DeWeese, who was running for a fourth two-year term, unofficially defeated H. Leonard Frye by a 10,865 vote margin in the 50th District, consisting of Greene County and small sections of Fayette and Washington County. The seven precincts in Washington County gave him a 1,599 to 227 majority, while the 12 Fayette County precincts gave him a 3,107 to 471 edge.

DeWeese Assured Win To 4th Term

WAYNESBURG — Indian summer weather with temperatures reaching into the 80s brought Greene County voters out in exceptional numbers for Tuesday's gubernatorial election.

Early results indicated that the big turnout favored Democrats. With their registration majority of almost four-to-one, all Democrat candidates were building overwhelming leads based on returns from 36 of the county's 48 precincts.

Assemblyman Bill DeWeese was assured of a fourth two-year term in the House of Representatives as he held a commanding 5,814 to 1,464 edge over Republican H. Leonard Frye, giving DeWeese 80 percent of the vote cast for that office in the 36 precincts.

The 32-year-old legislator, who was first appointed to the House in 1976 to fill a vacancy, represents the 50th District. It includes all of Greene County, along with Luzerne and Nicholson townships and Masontown Borough in Fayette County and East Bethlehem Township and three precincts of Centerville Borough in Washington County.

"I would like to thank the voters of the 50th District for their continued support and promise that I will continue to make my presence felt and speak out on the floor for the things which I feel will help the people I represent," DeWeese said when contacted Tuesday night.

"For the first time in a decade there is an opportunity to establish a real presence in Harrisburg since, depending on the final outcome of the House races, there is a possibility that I could have the opportunity to chair a committee."

Frye was making his first bid for an elected office, although he is chairman of the Greene County Republican Committee. DeWeese complimented him on the gentlemanly way in which the campaign was conducted. "Even though we are in opposite political parties, I look forward to his continued friendship," he said.

Both Congressman Austin J. Murphy and state Sen. J. Barry Stout were faring equally well in the county.

Murphy, whose 22nd Congressional District also embraces Fayette and Washington counties and part of Allegheny County, had mounted a commanding 6,140 to 1,064 lead in the 36 precincts over his Republican opponent, Frank J. Paterra. Stout had a lead of 5,759 to 1,350 over GOP candidate George H. Stewart in the 46th Senatorial District, covering all of Greene County, most of Washington County, and part of Beaver County.

While U.S. Sen. John J. Heinz and Gov. Dick Thornburgh were also trailing their Democratic opponents in Greene County, they were doing much better than the other Republican candidates.

Heinz was trailing Cyril H. Wecht, 3,235 to 3,946 in the same precincts, while the ticket of Thornburgh and Lt. Gov. Candidate Bill Scranton was running behind Allen E. Ertel and James R. Lloyd, 2,569 to 4,693.

Bewitching Witch

Heather Ann Dinich, 3, casts a bewitching smile towards the crowd that turned out to watch the annual Halloween Parade in Waynesburg Thursday night. Unfortunately the little girl's magic spell just wasn't powerful enough to win one of many prizes awarded by the Waynesburg Lions Club which sponsored the event for several hundred children. SE Greene Ordered To Bargain In Court

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court has again resumed control of contract negotiations in the Southeastern Greene School District in an effort to end a teacher walkout which began more than two months ago.

Judge Glenn Toothman, in an order handed down Wednesday, directed that daily negotiations, with all members of both sides present, be held in the court house from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on a daily basis until the strike is settled, or until further order of the court.

In compliance with the order, the first such session was held until 9 p.m. Wednesday, with talks scheduled to resume at 9 a.m. today.

When they concluded Wednesday night, both sides said they were close to agreement, with the board indicating it had improved its offer to a seven percent salary increase in each of the first two years of a new contract and 8½ percent in the third year.

"We're offering 22½ percent over the life of the contract and the teachers are holding out for an additional half percent," Board President James Minor said.

Don Peroni, PSEA negotiator, said the teachers' team has been more than willing to compromise, but has to get a contract which is acceptable to the membership. "We've made a lot of proposals which we feel the district can afford and we get close to an agreement, but somehow or other it always breaks down," he said.

In an addition to ordering both sides back to the table, Judge Toothman handed down an order Wednesday rejecting the school board's request for an injunction ordering teachers back to work. He was doing so, he said, because the school board failed to produce evidence that continuation of the strike, at least at the present time, constitutes a "clear and present danger to the health, safety and welfare of the public, as required by law for the imposition of injunctive relief."

He did not completely close the door, however, on the possibility of a back-to-work order being issued if the strike drags on much longer. To this end, Judge Toothman reserved the right to hold further hearings at the request of either party, or by motion of the court itself.

"The court... recognizes that continuation of the strike imposes grave hardships on several and numerous parties, and that the continued loss of educational benefits to the students becomes increasingly and progressively onerous with the passage of each day," the order states.

With settlement late Tuesday night of the teacher's walkout in the Burgetstown Area School District, the Southeastern Greene area has become the longest in the area. It began on Aug. 30, the day before classes were scheduled to begin for the school year, and affects 1,100 students and 61 teachers.

In an opinion outlining his reasons for refusing to issue a back-to-work order, Judge Toothman cited testimony which was taken at the injunction hearing two weeks ago.

He noted that Superintendent Gerald Marcinak, while stating that no more than 174 educational days could be provided even with drastic calendar revisions, had admitted under cross examination that lengthening of the class day could enable the district to provide the state-required 990 hours of education, even if schools did not open until the latter part of November.

He also cited the evidence of business manager Floyd Geho to the effect that while the district faces a daily loss of $5,981 in state subsidy for each day less than the required 180 days of school, that it will not suffer any financial loss because of money it will save with the non-payment of wages on each of those days.

"The evidence is clear that the district, as yet, suffers no great financial loss, that furloughed employees (other than teachers) are entitled to unemployment compensation, and, most importantly, that the lost educational time can still, and for several days to come, be recovered," the opinion states.

Both School Board President James Minor and Southeastern Greene Education Association President Harry Schuessler told the Court Wednesday morning that they felt their sides had been bargaining in good faith and would continue to do so.

Prior to Wednesday's session, the board was officially offering salary raises of seven percent in each year of a new three year contract.

"At one point we offered to increase the raise to eight percent in the third year, but the offer was rejected

UMW Official Ousted

By Marcia Biddle, Staff Writer

UNIONTOWN — In the heat of the United Mine Workers presidential election campaign, Ernest (Hap) Mallick of Masontown has been removed from his office as chairman of the State Council of COMPAC, the union's legislative and political arm.

Mallick has been also been replaced on the District 4 Area Council of COMPAC by Emil Buchtan of Carmichaels. Both Mallick and Buchtan are members of Robena Local 6321.

At a press conference in Uniontown Friday, Mallick charged his removal earlier this month came as a result of his refusal to involve COMPAC in intra-union politics. While Buchtan is an avowed supporter of UMW President Sam Church, Mallick said "I have not stated a preference in the union (presidential) election and have attended no campaign functions for either side. And no propaganda is allowed at meetings I chair."

COMPAC state staff coordinator Larry Cani and COMPAC associate director Frank Thurman removed Mallick from his office as state chairman and from the boards of the area and state councils because of alleged violation of election by-laws in a 1981 local election.

In reply, Mallick noted that his election was approved by both the area and state boards. Further, he said, Cani and Thurman are staff members appointed by President Sam Church and have no authority to remove an official elected by the membership.

The dispute stems from results of the May 1981 election of Local 6321 COMPAC representatives. Mallick said that two seats on the Area COMPAC Council were guaranteed to Fayette County and one to Greene County because of the distribution of membership.

Mallick had served on the Area Council since 1974, had been elected to the State Council, and currently was in his third term as chairman of the State Council.

Since Buchtan received one vote more than Mallick in the 1981 election, he is claiming that he should be seated in the council along with Mike Simkovic of Nemaocolin, making two representatives from Greene County. He disputes Mallick's claim that COMPAC guidelines dictate two from Fayette County and one from Greene County.

"I asked to see the guidelines and they didn't produce them," he said when contacted later in the day. "I want to see them in black in white."

Mallick also charged that Buchtan did not contest the election results within the 14 days required by the by-laws. In rebuttal, Buchtan said: "I beat him in the local election and I've been talking about this for a year."

The Area Council voted in Mallick's favor, however. The State Council, which is made up of about 64 members elected from the four UMW districts in Pennsylvania, also voted on Sept. 1 to seat him, and re-elected him as chairman.

"No one has the right to review and challenge credentials after a year and a half," Mallick said. "I am still the state chairman and will conduct myself as the state chairman."

Thomas Taylor, secretary of the State Council, was also present at the conference. He said he had been asked to move up to chairman but refused.

"COMPAC is not to be used as a weapon to benefit either candidate," he said.

Carmichaels Council Elects New Members

CARMICHAELS — Carmichaels Borough Council Monday elected two new members to seats made vacant by the resignations of Paul Connor and Ted Blasinsky.

Joseph Baker was chosen to fill Blasinsky's seat and Christopher L. Watson will replace Connor.

Baker is a newcomer to council but served on the Carmichaels Area School Board for 18 years. He is one of the owners of Carmichaels Mining Machine Repair Co. Watson served an unexpired term on council from 1979 to 1981 and narrowly lost in the next election. He operates Watson's Video Center and Warne's Coach House restaurant.

In another election, Betty Hudson was named vice president to succeed Betty Morris, who moved up to the office of council president on Blasinsky's resignation. It was necessary to elect a new vice president due to a banking regulation that there must be two signatures in addition to that of the borough secretary's on checks.

Mrs. Morris announced that the borough has no unpaid debts at this time. Several debts had been carried over from 1981, including $3,351 due to the county communication system, but that obligation has now been taken care of.

I DON'T NEED TO GO TO CHURCH

Yes, I'm one of those seventy-five million Americans who are not members of a church.

Saturday and Sunday are the two days of the week I like to devote entirely to relaxation and recreation. Why should I spend an hour or so in church?

I try to live straight—to put in a full day's work for my boss, to get along with my neighbor, to bring up my children in the proper way. As long as I'm trying to live respectably, why do I need to go to church?

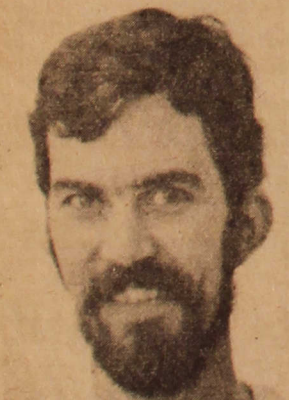

There is an answer, my friend: Since the beginning of history, you and millions like you have been trying to run your lives and this world of ours by your own knowledge and strength. You've said you didn't need help. But human experience declares that you have failed. The past has left us an ugly picture of cruelty and bloodshed, of hate and crime. The present finds us on the edge of fresh disaster—of devastating war on the outside and moral decay from within. This is the tragedy of man's proud attempt to live without God.

You need help—help beyond the pale of human resources. You need the love of God that empowers a man to live a good life. You can find this love only in your place of worship—in fellowship and communion with Him. He is in His Church—forgiving, loving, strengthening, giving men the courage and power for right living.

Susan Pawlosky, Erik A. West Wed

WAYNESBURG — Susan Pawlosky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Pawlosky of Greensboro Star Route, Waynesburg, and Erik A. West of Las Vegas, Nev., were married Saturday, Oct. 23, 1982, in St. Ann's Church, Waynesburg.

The Rev. John Corbett officiated at the double ring candlelight ceremony, with Nelson Fox as organist and Gerald Manolas as soloist.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and was given in marriage by her parents.

She appeared in a Victorian-style formal gown of imported rosepoint cantilly lace with a high neckline and sheer yoke, featuring an overlay capelet of ruffled lace. The A-line skirt was accented with a detachable cathedral-length wateau train. Her matching blusher and veil of bridal illusion was attached to a camelot headpiece of rosepoint lace.

She carried a cascade bouquet of white silk roses, orchids and stephanotis entwined with ivy and baby's breath. She also carried a rosary which belonged to her great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Leona Pawlosky, and a cross and medal belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. Edna Pawlosky.

Sharon Ladecic of Las Vegas attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Joyce Scott and Trish Fox. Shari and Jodi Pawlosky, nieces of the bride, were junior bridesmaids.

The attendants wore identical burgundy gowns and carried cascade bouquets of burgundy and rose silk flowers.

Larry Pawlosky of Waynesburg, brother of the bride, served as best man. Ushers were Joseph Pawlosky of Morgantown, brother of the bride, and George Scott of Waynesburg.

A reception was held at Rohanna's Restaurant, with music by "Top Shelf." Brenda Pawlosky of Morgantown, sister-in-law of the bride, attended the guest book. Out-of-state guests attended from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and West Virginia.

The bride is a graduate of Waynesburg Central High School and of Wittenberg University, where she was a member of Gamma Phi Beta. The bridegroom is a graduate of West High School in Minneapolis, Minn., and of the University of Minnesota. Both are employed by the Stardust Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas.

Following a wedding trip throughout Pennsylvania, the newlyweds have returned to their home in Nevada.

Appalachian Trail His Home

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Dr. Kenneth Lemley, 56, a retired Waynesburg dentist, took a hike last April.

He came home 166 days later. His 2,126-mile walk on the Appalachian Trail from Georgia to Maine was the culmination of an eight-year dream and an experience of a lifetime.

"I started thinking about the hike about eight years ago and even bought special boots five years ago to begin breaking them in," Lemley said. "I wanted to retire early so I would still be in good enough health to stand the trip."

Aside from the spectacular views along the trail, Lemley praised the many nice people he met and the hospitality afforded him in the small towns along the way.

During his trek, Lemley wore out the special boots made in New Hampshire and saw his weight drop from 160 pounds to 120 despite eating a lot of macaroni and cheese on his small camp stove. Freeze-dried food and soup packets were light to carry and therefore popular.

Although every effort was made to keep his backpack light, he still carried about 60 pounds. On the days he stopped for supplies, the pack weighed 60 pounds. During the entire 2,000-mile journey, he made only 18 stops for supplies.

His odyssey began April 15 in Amicalola Falls, Ga., with his wife, Mary, and her sister, Ruth George. Mrs. George quit the trail a few days later in Deep Gap, N.C., and Mary continued on to Hot Springs, N.C., when leg problems forced her to retire.

"The shin splints were just too painful," she said.

From then on Lemley was a solo hiker for the most part. He set his own pace and traveled anywhere from five to 25 miles on any given day.

"If I liked the scenery or was tired, I would just remain for awhile and enjoy nature," he said.

He watched spring emerging in Georgia, North and South Carolina and the summer through Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York. And fall rustled in while he hiked the New England states.

"I walked in snow, sleet, rain and on cloudy days, foggy days and in the bright sparkling days with blue sky, white clouds and the sun streaming through the trees and glistening on the wet leaves. Every day was different. Every day was beautiful," he said.

"I met many wonderful people on the trail and in the towns where I stopped for supplies. There was Don Cheek of Neels Gap, Ga. We hadn't seen a town or a store for six days. We were greeted by this big man with a big smile," Lemley recalled.

The hikers asked the friendly storekeeper for six cans of soft drink and some fresh fruit. Cheek said he had the drinks but no fruit. He tossed Lemley the keys to his car and said there was a grocery store down the road and they were welcome to go get what they needed.

After the ladies had left the trail, Lemley found shelter at a Methodist hostel in Damascus, Va.; a Catholic hospice in Pearisburg, Va.; a firehall in Waynesboro, Va., and the basement of a small Presbyterian Church in Delaware Water Gap, Pa.

An interesting stop was the Graymoor Monastery near West Point, N.Y., where the Franciscan monks gave him his own room and a welcome dinner of turkey, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes and gravy, broccoli, Jello and spice cake. The next morning a hearty breakfast was offered before he resumed his hike.

"It was all given with love and without any effort at religious doctrine," Lemley said.

He met David Brooks, a day-hiker from Johnson City, Tenn., along the trail where both had stopped for lunch. Lemley was invited to Brooks' home for the night where he enjoyed a bed, a home-cooked meal and a rare bath in a tub. Mrs. Brooks washed and dried Dr. Lemley's clothes and after a big breakfast, he was driven 20 miles back to the trail so he could be on his way by 6 a.m.

Lemley said he had company or saw other hikers on every day of his journey. Most of the hikers were men and for some reason the majority of them were either 23 or 28 years old. A coincidence he couldn't explain. He never saw a poisonous snake but did see four bears and four moose during his long trek.

"I worried some about my personal safety before I started the hike but there was no reason to because everyone was friendly," he said. "The things that impressed me the most were God's wonders. The buds would swell on the trees and the leaves would burst forth in all shades of green and red. I saw the largest Dogwood blossoms I have ever seen as we came down the mountain into Wesser, N.C. I saw flame Azalea blooming along the path in all shades ranging from light yellow through dark yellow to orange and salmon," he fondly recalled.

He ate wild strawberries and raspberries in Virginia, blackberries in Pennsylvania and blueberries in New England. "I probably would have been home two weeks earlier if I hadn't been slowed down by the ber-

Cumberland Panel Favors Strip Mine Request

CARMICHAELS — The Cumberland Township Zoning Hearing Board unanimously approved Monday night variances requested by Boyle Land & Fuel Company, allowing the firm to strip mine coal on three properties totaling nearly 450 acres.

Only one private citizen appeared to offer testimony during the hour-long hearing in the township municipal building. Following testimony, board members David Jones, Ed Commons and Mabelle Ream all voted for approval.

Involved are 55 acres owned by James and Mary Udovich, 94 acres owned by Felixa and Doris Montury and 300 acres owned by James and Mary Hathaway. All three properties adjoin each other.

Attorney Gary Rosen and leasing agent Vaughn Brunazzi represented Boyle and explained the plans for stripping the coal and also the requirements they must meet to receive Department of Environmental Resources approval.

Although the zoning board requires written requests from citizens who wish to testify, they asked Boyle representatives if they objected to waiving the requirement and having anyone in the audience offer testimony. Rosen said he had no objections and would gladly answer any questions from the audience. No one requested to speak, however.

Clyde Jeffries, who had requested formally to speak, questioned Boyle representatives about the possibility of trucks ruining the water well on his property near the strip mining project. Jeffries was told the operator carries insurance against such problems and state law also holds the operator responsible if found guilty of ruining a private well.

"We want to be good neighbors. If there is some question we would much rather drill you a new well because we have the drilling equipment readily available," Rosen told Jeffries.

When Jeffries questioned the possible damage to local roads, Rosen said PennDOT now has uniform regulations which call for bonding by the operator to repair and maintain state roads damaged by stripping operations. Rosen said his firm also would sign maintenance agreements with the Cumberland Township Supervisors.

Jeffries then expressed concern about school buses using the township at the same time coal trucks were hauling.

Rosen suggested, and the board required, a bus schedule be made available and the operator would cease hauling during the period when the school buses would be on the road.

As to daily road maintenance, Jeffries was told to call the supervisors immediately if the road became damaged and the supervisors would then deal with the operator.

A question of blasting was raised and the audience was informed that blasting regulations were enforced by DER and that a pre-blasting survey would be made within a half-mile of the project.

Landfill Open

The Washington Township Supervisors announced that the township landfill will be open only on the fourth Saturday of each month from November through March.

and we are back to the 7-7 position," Minor said.

Schuessler said the teachers' request is for raises of 7½ percent in the first year, eight percent in the second year, and 8½ percent in the third year.

"We thought we were pretty close to agreement on Saturday when we offered to split the difference, but the board went into caucus and couldn't get enough votes to approve the offer so we have withdrawn it," the SGEA president said.

After hearing the reports, Judge Toothman urged both negotiating teams to make every possible effort to break the impasse.

"Each day that is lost, regardless of the 180-day rule and whether it can be made up, represents a serious loss for students and a serious deficiency in their educational opportunities," he said.

Lengthy Teacher Strikes Prove Need For Change

There has to be a better way!
 It's something that is heard every time there is a punishing teachers' strike, not only from school board members but also from teachers themselves.

But much like childbirth, the pain is quickly forgotten in the joy of a safe delivery — until the next time, that is.

There might not be much anyone can do about the travails of producing a baby, and with the entrenchment of the public employees' bargaining law (Act 195) it might be almost as hard to amend the way in which teacher contracts are reached.

It's an uphill battle because the PSEA (not necessarily the teachers it represents) seems to be satisfied with the present system and the state legislature is extremely reluctant to do battle with such a powerful lobby.

Shortcomings of the present law are underscored by the fact there have been almost 600 school strikes in Pennsylvania since Act 195 became law in 1970, with the state having suffered through more than one-fifth of all public school strikes which have occurred in the nation. In the current school year, according to the school board association, school strikes have interrupted the education of more than 100,000 children in 35 districts.

Both Greene and Washington Counties have been particularly hard hit this year, with several of the strikes lasting longer than at any time in the past. For the first time, students in some districts won't be getting the 180 days of education required by law.

In one strike which lasted six weeks, the salary differential which separated the teachers and the board was no more than $100 a year. But both sides took a stand and the silly walkout resulted.

As has been noted many times, students and their parents are the forgotten pawns, despite all the lip service they are given. As Judge Glenn Toothman noted in Greene County when the Southeastern Greene strike reached court, the union and the school board were both represented by counsel, but no one was on hand to speak for the kids.

There does have to be a better way.

The school board association is advocating mandatory fact finding before any teacher strike is permitted. Why not go one step further and require binding arbitration when a strike threatens the students' right to 180 days of education, and set it up so that the arbitrator must accept the "last best offer" of one side or the other, with no power to compromise between them.

Act 195 seems to be doing the job for policemen and firemen through providing for arbitration without giving them the right to strike. It is not doing the job where school teachers are concerned and should be changed.

Program Teaches
 How To Get Grants

WAYNESBURG — The Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a program designed to help college-bound students and their parents find scholarships and grants to offset the ever-increasing costs of higher education.

"College Grants and How To Get Them" will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 9, in McCance Auditorium, Buhl Hall, on the Waynesburg College campus.

The program points out that being eligible for a scholarship or grant and getting that financial aid are two totally different issues. The purpose of the workshop is to show students and their parents how to get results on applications for all types of student aid.

The slide show presentation was established in 1975 by Robert Leider of Alexandria, Va. A retired Army colonel whose daughter was preparing to attend college, Leider began research on the availability of grants-in-aid and scholarships.

During the past seven years, the popularity of his program and booklet have spread to all parts of the country. Leider and the Octameron Associates Publishing Co. now carry the distinction of being the principle author and publisher of student financial aid guides in the nation. Copies of his five booklets will be available at a nominal cost after the workshop.

Locally, the 45-minute program will be presented by Francis Gressly, supervisor of the Greene County Vo-Tech school. John Loeper will narrate the presentation.

The program covers such topics as where to apply for scholarships; the forms that must be filled out and how to do it properly; the availability of government loans and grants; finding the best loan programs to fit the family budget, and the affect the family income will have on the application process.

A question and answer period will follow the presentation. Refreshments will be available.

Trial Settled Out Of Court

WAYNESBURG — An out-of-court settlement Monday morning canceled the first trial scheduled during the November term of Greene County civil court.

Judge Fred C. Adams, who had come from Fayette County to preside at the trial, dismissed members of the jury panel until Nov. 10, when the next trial is scheduled.

The case which was to have been tried arose out of a highway accident in Carmichaels on July 1, 1980, involving cars operated by Edward Gannis of Waynesburg and Frederick E. Brady of McClellandtown.

Fact & Folklore

John O'Hara

Last Sunday, Oct. 31, was one of those days in Greene County that fit like a glove the old poetic line, "Ye cannot rival for one hour, October's bright blue weather."

According to newspaper and electronic weather reports the following day, the perfect weather seemed to have prevailed almost from coast-to-coast, but apparently nowhere more so than in Greene County.

It was a day which was beguiling to be afield on foot, or even in an automobile or any other conveyance which made one a part of the outdoors. The perfect day, so to speak, to get away from it all, including the TV tube, and look for the woodland beauty which is still so much a part of the county despite the efforts of those who almost denuded the countryside in searches for whiskey barrel staves in the 1930's, for coal mine pit props before they were replaced by roof-bolts, and be people who in the present energy crunch are looking for plain, old-fashioned firewood.

Cruising eastward on Route 188, a break in the dense foliage was visible on the Allison farm just a short distance west of the foot of the Mack Coal Company hill. It was like an invitation to leave the beaten path and follow the now almost invisible bit of the old dirt road that led south through the hilly terrain of the farm to an opening onto the blacktop road that leads to the county airport.

The only way to go, of course, was on foot to experience the true feel of the outdoors as the pioneers did who first came here from the Old Dominion commonwealth of Virginia. In the little jaunt, the foot traveler crossed the tracks of the Monongahela Railroad that is now hauling coal from mines in northern West Virginia and Waynesburg to Brownsville, and from there to steel mills and power plants across the nation.

Years ago, the late Harry Free-land and his brother Dawson, and the late Wilda McClure and his son Ray, successfully drilled several gas wells in that vicinity and sold their gas to Pittsburgh-based utility firms. The gas field is no longer active and nature has struck back with a growth of small trees. Their foliage encases the buildings that housed the equipment for pumping the gas and it's difficult to envision it as the active place it once was.

From there, the old earth road climbs a steep bank with several offshoots right and left where large transmission lines running east and west parallel each other, and where weeds and other growth is kept meticulously mowed so the lines can be reached instantly when repairs are needed.

Telephone lines also parallel each other through the otherwise dense growth which is too steep to be farmed, and for those who wish to do a bit of mild adventuring it's an almost instant departure to an area little changed since the Indiana roamed over this identical area.

The only travelers there aside from those on foot are owners of the new type of cross-country motorcycles who have mastered the skill of off-road driving. It's nice to thing they might be a valuable asset in rusing first aid to occupants of an airplane if it had to make a forced landing as it approached the county airport.

Traces of the ancient wagon road which runs north and south the entire width of the farm is paralleled by a brook rising almost perpendicular to the fields.

The steeper lands of the Allison farm is in virtually the same state in its trees and flowers as was a part of the present Greater Pittsburgh airport that was the favorite hiking place for the late Max Henriis, who earned a master's degree in botany from Carnegie Tech, mostly from research done in that similar bit of wildness before the Pittsburgh airport was created.

By sheer happenchance, a similar situation exists in Greene County, as an industrial park is in the plans for future development at the Waynesburg airport, which borders the Allison property on its eastern side. Until then, the student of nature can learn a lot about the mysteries of plants and flowers in their native state in this spot so close to Waynesburg, as Mr. Henriis did in his favorite haunt.

For the immediate present however, a Sunday afternoon stroll along the trails used for beagle dog trials and by crow hunters will turn time backward a few years and bring the feeling of a day well spent.

Sports Violence
 Topic Of Speech

WAYNESBURG — Attorney Richard Horrow, who authored the Sports Violence Act of 1980, will speak at Waynesburg College Monday, Nov. 8, on "Violence in Sports."

Horrow's talk, a multi-media presentation that includes 22 minutes of film clips, is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Alumni Hall located on the third floor of Miller Hall. The talk is open to the campus and community without charge.

Horrow, a graduate of Harvard Law School, has said, "I don't necessarily want the federal government to intervene in sports, but someone has to put a stop to this (the excessive violence in sports)."

His perspective led him to draft legislation that became the Sports Violence Act of 1980.

The bill, introduced by U.S. Rep. Ronald Mottl (D-Ohio), is intended to deter and punish, through criminal penalties, acts of excessive violence in sports.

"Players, team organizations, fans and the sports we all enjoy would benefit from a statute making it clear that you can play rough and hard, but you cannot play to deliberately or recklessly hurt someone," he said.

Excessive physical force in sports is defined as force that has no reasonable relationship to the competitive goals of the sport, is unreasonably violent and could not be reasonably foreseen or consented to by the person affected. The Sports Violence bill calls for a $5,000 fine and a year in prison for a professional athlete who "knowingly uses excessive force and thereby causes a risk of significant bodily injury to another person."

Playing Child Causes Crash

WAYNESBURG — A 2-year-old escaped injury when she climbed into her mother's car and it drifted backward down a steep hill into a parked car.

State police said the accident happened at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Albert's Trailer Court, Waynesburg R.D.3.

Police said the child, Dana Marie Fisher, got into the car and pushed the shift lever out of park. The car drifted into a parked car owned by Ruby T. Closser, a resident of the mobile home park.

The Closser car was badly damaged, but damage to the Fisher automobile was moderate, police said.

AROUND

By THE STAFF

Last Tuesday's election for various state offices from governor on down generated a lot of local interest, with pleasant weather no doubt being a big factor in the large voter turnout. Local interest centered mostly on the contest for state representative between incumbent Democrat Bill DeWesse and Leonard Frye of Morgantown, who is the county's Republican chairman.

Contractors working on various phases of the new railroad being built from West Waynesburg to haul coal from projected new mines in Richhill Township are taking advantage of weather conditions to speed up their work.

Huge concrete abutments over which the line will span the creek from Waynesburg to Morris Township are already approaching the halfway mark. The line, within a stone's throw of the highway at West Waynesburg, will swing south of Nineveh before moving northwest to its terminus at Enon.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Tharp of Cleveland, formerly of Waynesburg, were recent house guests of Mrs. Marjorie K. Wilson of South Morgan Street. Mr. Tharp has been employed for several years at a Republic Steel mill in Cleveland.

Members of the East End Merchants Association have donated an unmarked car for use by the Waynesburg Borough police force in checking criminal offenses in the town. Previously the merchant groupmembers donated a reward that led to the apprehension and conviction of a mugger in that part of town.

Ralph Roseberry of Rices Landing, former musician on Monongahela River old-time show boats, and Harold Herrod, a long-time self-employed newspaper route owner, are both critically ill in Greene County Memorial Hospital at this writing.

Despite the unbelievably weather Greene County enjoyed through the middle of this week, none of the "regulars" who have been going south or southwest every winter for many years have cancelled their travel plans or their leases on winter living quarters far, far below the Mason-Dixon line.

The Waynesburg downtown revitalization project in which many of the older structures along High Street are being given a face lifting is moving along at a good pace now and will likely be completed well within the target date. Mrs. Fran Tompkins guiding the project, which ultimately will make the town much more attractive.

The nice weather we've been talking about hasn't made small game hunters particularly happy, especially those who like to hunt rabbits. It's made it pretty uncomfortable to wear the heavy clothing which is advisable for tramping through briar patches and other heavy undergrowth.

Items Stolen

MT. MORRIS — Items valued at $84 were stolen from H&W Exxon near Mt. Morris sometime between 9:10 p.m. Saturday and 7:45 a.m. Sunday, state police said.

Taken were cigarettes, sanding pads and oil. The station is located along Route 19 in Perry Township.

Day At The Polls

Election workers at Waynesburg's Ward 3 polling site in a basement room of the East Ward School had a more pleasant day at the polls Tuesday than in the past. Members of the Waynesburg Lions Club recently remodeled the room as this year's World Service Community Project. The project included patterned wall paneling and a new ceiling. Temperatures in the low 80s are credited with encouraging a larger voter turnout than expected. Elections workers, from left, are Norma Bell, Thelma Watson, judge of elections, Jean Barnhart, Wilma Doty and Dot Wagener.

Bowlby Library May Open Downtown Branch

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners said Thursday that they would consider use of the Sayers-Hooper building on High Street as a downtown branch of the Bowlby Public Library if the library is willing to assume responsibility for restoring the building for that purpose.

The proposal was submitted to the commissioners at their weekly meeting by a committee which is charged with exploring various ways in which the library can solve its space problems. Establishment of a downtown branch is one of the alternatives under consideration.

"We are badly in need of additional space to house our book collection, as reading and study space for library users, and as work space for the staff," head librarian Marjorie Johnston said. "The American Library Association recommends 20,000 square feet of floor space for a library of our size and we have 5,000 square feet."

Margaret Cipic, chairman of the expansion committee, and Audrey Huffman, a member of the committee, said they feel the Sayers-Hooper building would be an ideal location if the library board of directors would decide on the option of a small branch since it is in the mainstream of downtown movement.

"Maybe it is a building worth saving as a cooperative effort of the county, library and community," Mrs. Huffman said.

The Sayers-Hooper building, which is located between the two county office buildings, formerly housed two businesses. It was vacated earlier this year and, at one point, the county planned to tear it down after being told by an architect that it was unfeasible to make the repairs required to continue its use as a public building.

After weeks of discussion, the commissioners had a small addition to the building razed, but left the main building standing.

The library committee pointed out that a downtown branch would become part of the Greene County Library System, which includes the Bowlby Library, the Flenniken Library in Carmichaels, a bookmobile operated in rural areas, and Operation Outreach, which is the systems audio-visual arm.

The commissioners said that if the board of directors is interested, they will consider a proposal under which they would grant the library use of the building with the understanding that any necessary renovations would have to be undertaken by the library.

In action at the meeting, the commissioners accepted the resignation of Linda L. Taylor, an employee in the prothonotary's office. She is resigning effective Nov. 12, because her husband has accepted a job in Springfield, Ill.

Two Waynesburg insurance agents, Jeff Hughes and William Morris, met with the commissioners relative to county insurance.

Hughes submitted a proposal which he said would save the county $2,780 per year in its cost for employees' life insurance, which currently requires the payment of a $745 monthly premium.

Morris asked the county to bid its unemployment compensation insurance, stating that he feels there can be a substantial saving in the current annual premium of some $57,000. The policy is due for renewal on Jan. 2.

The commissioners agreed to consider both proposals as part of budget preparation for the coming year.

Following a closed meeting with members of the Greene County Conservation District Board, commissioners Leonard Santore and Richard Cowan deferred action on the appointment of a Conservation District executive to replace John Reagan, who recently resigned, because Commissioner Joseph Pawlosky was unable to attend the meeting.

Court Refuses To Close Road

WAYNESBURG — The state Commonwealth Court has confirmed the Greene County Court's refusal to order the closing of a rural road in Springhill Township.

The petition to close the road, known as the Henry Hollow Road, came from Victor Zeni, a paving contractor whose property adjoins the road. After the township supervisors refused to act on the petition, Zeni appealed to the county court on the grounds that the road was useless, inconvenient, and a burden on the township in terms of maintenance.

The Commonwealth noted that Zeni supported his claim by pointing out that the road has little use, is not on a school bus or mail route, is impassable during some seasons of the year, and has not been regularly maintained by the township.

In rejecting the claim, the appellate court stated:

"The concepts of useless, inconvenient or burdensome are not cast in stone. Witnesses testified that they use the road for a variety of purposes — as a short-cut, as a route for deer hunting, as the only means of access to a local garden, and as the only road for checking and maintaining leased oil wells. Even the appellant testified that he used the road as a means of access to his property."

Officers of the Quarterback Club made a $12,000 donation to the Central Greene School District Friday night as the club's contribution towards the $88,800 cost to install lights this year at the Waynesburg Central High football field. Grants Made Available To Help Pay Fuel Costs

WAYNESBURG — Norma Jean Blackhurst, director of the Greene County Assistance Office, has announced that applications for the 1982-83 Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program are now being taken.

Those interested in applying should call for an appointment at the county assistance office located at 35 South West Street, Waynesburg or call 627-8171.

Income eligibility for this year has been changed from the previous year's 125 percent of the poverty level to 150 percent. This should qualify those applicants who were slightly over last year's income limits.

The following income limits apply to this year's program:

One in household, $7,020; two, $9,330; three, 11,640; four, 13,950; five, 16,260; six, 18,570 and $2,310 for each additional person over six.

To qualify, a family or individual has to pay for heat and income must be less than the established limits. However, while the income levels for qualifying have been increased, the automatic eligibility for those households containing a member receiving Supplemental Security Income, veterans pension, food stamps and AFDC type of assistance has been eliminated.

Homeowners, renters and those others who are charged for heat directly or indirectly may be eligible for an energy allowance. This allowance in most cases will be sent to the fuel supplier who will use this as a credit to the customer.

Applicants must provide a social security number, proof of income, their latest fuel bill and the names and incomes of all household members. Proof of income means several recent pay statements, copies of government checks, statements from those such as bank tellers who have recently cashed checks, bank notices of direct deposits, statements from employers, etc.

In most instances, applications will be taken in the office. Those who cannot visit the office should call 627-8171 to make other arrangements.

Payment amounts will vary depending on the number of persons in the home, amount of income and type of fuel used for heating. For instance, a single person in Greene County with a gross income of $4,000 and heating with fuel oil, electricity, propane or kerosene would be granted $344 while the same household using coal, wood or natural gas would receive $275.

Arson Suspected In House Fire; Oak Forest Home A Total Loss

OAK FOREST — Arson is strongly suspected as the cause of a fire which destroyed a small house at Oak Forest early Friday morning.

The house is owned by Roy Dean of Washington, who formerly resided in it. The two-story dwelling, containing five rooms and a bath, has been vacant since August.

Center Township Fire Chief Robert Crouse said a neighbor spotted the flames at 4:45 a.m. and called in the alarm. While the building is still standing, it was gutted and flames burned through one side.

"I would say it was a total loss," Crouse said. "I spoke to Mr. Dean this (Friday) morning and he estimated his loss at $8,500."

Crouse said the fire started on the first floor, in the center of the house, leading him to suspect that intruders had been in the building. Flames quickly spread through the rest of the dwelling.

"The electric power and gas had both been turned off, so it's hard to imagine how it could have started accidentally," Crouse said. He added that the state police fire marshal has been asked to investigate.

Waynesburg volunteer firemen assisted the Center Township company in fighting the blaze.

Blaze Damages Storage Building

CARMICHAELS — A storage building at the Laurel Point Cemetery at Carmichaels was badly damaged and all its contents were destroyed by a fire which broke out at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Greene Exceeds Other Pennsylvania Counties In Bituminous Reserves

WAYNESBURG — According to a report released by the Keystone Bituminous Coal Association this week, there are 4,000,000,000 tons of bituminous coal under Greene County — the largest reserve of any county in Pennsylvania.

To give some prospective to the figure, less than 10 billion tons of coal have been mined in all of Pennsylvania during the past two centuries.

Through 1980 Pennsylvania produced more than 10 percent of the nation's coal but last year the state fell below that figure for the first time. Coal remains a $3.5 billion industry in the state and 32,000 people are employed directly by the industry.

Once the nation's leader in coal production, Pennsylvania has dropped to fourth behind Kentucky, West Virginia and Wyoming, all of which produced over 100,000 tons last year. Pennsylvania produced 78,083 tons in 1981.

In Greene County last year, 7,573,160 tons of coal was produced with 6,497,592 tons coming from deep coal mines. There were 3,894 employed in that production with 3,363 underground, 224 at surface mines and 307 at preparation plants. Only Washington and Indiana counties had more employees in coal production.

It should also be noted that for every 10 coal mining jobs, an additional eight jobs were created to provide the industry with service and supplies.

The informative booklet notes bituminous coal underlies more than one-third of Pennsylvania's 45,000 square miles. It is found in 30 counties and has been basic to the economy of many state communities for as long as they have existed.

The top five coal producers in Pennsylvania during 1981 were Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal Co., 5.8 million tons; Bethlehem Mines Corp., 4.6 million tons; Consolidation Coal Co., 2.7 million tons; U.S. Steel Mining Co. Inc., 2.7 million tons and North American Coal Corp., 2.5 million tons.

Pennsylvania Electric Co. was the largest utility buyer last year with 14.6 million tons. West Penn Power was third with 6.2 million tons purchased.

Arson Suspected In Apartment Fire

WAYNESBURG — The state police fire marshal has been asked to investigate the cause of an early Sunday morning fire in west Waynesburg. The fire burned out two rooms of a second-floor apartment in a building that for many years housed Albert's Grocery Store.

At first it was believed a teenager — thought to have been sleeping in the six-room apartment — was trapped inside, but the teenager was found to have been staying overnight with a neighbor. Firefighters did, however, search the smoke-filled apartment several times before the teenager was located at the neighbors. The fire was reported at 3:05 a.m.

Waynesburg Fire Chief Pete Walker said the fire started on a small landing at the top of the stairs leading to the second-floor entrance at the rear of the building.

"It started outside but caused maior damage to a bathroom and kitchen located near the entrance," Walker said.

Walker asked state police to investigate because of information he received at the scene. He said he was asked not to discuss the information until it could be further investigated.

Firemen said the apartment was occupied by Reubena Norbell and her children. The large, frame building is owned by Tom Village of California. He purchased the property several years ago and for a short time operated a meat market on the first floor where the former Albert's Grocery Store had been located for many years. The storeroom has been empty for the past four months since an arcade and grocery business closed.

Walker said the major fire damage was confined to the apartment's bathroom and kitchen but that the remainder of the building received smoke and some water damage.
