Trumka Win Appears 2-1

By Marcia M. Biddle, Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — Sitting in a small office at his campaign headquarters here Wednesday, Richard Trumka, president-elect of the 200,000-member United Mine Workers expressed disappointment that union president Sam Church Jr. has yet to call him, or concede Tuesday's election.

"It would be good for us to be able to meet and work out a smooth transition, for the good of the union," Trumka said as he sipped from a steaming mug of coffee. "I know Sam Church is a good union man, and I hope he'll do that."

Even without Church's concession, and with a small number of votes not yet in, the margin of the Trumka victory makes a vote challenge unlikely — at least unlikely to change the results. Unofficial vote totals as of early Wednesday afternoon showed Trumka with 81,409 votes to Church's 36,324. About 70 percent of the 200,000 union members eligible to vote did so.

The overwhelming victory for the 33-year-old challenger for the union's helm is evidenced by a breakdown of the voting by union districts showing Trumka a possible loser in no more than three of the union's 23 districts. Those were districts 19, 20, and 21 covering parts of Kentucky, Alabama, and Oklahoma-Arkansas where Church was still showing majorities Wednesday afternoon.

District 4, Trumka's home district, gave Trumka a 5,082 to 395 victory over Church, while District 5, covering Washington and Allegheny counties gave the challenger a 6,648 to 1,545 vote margin. Trumka also rolled up majorities in other area districts such as District 6 (6,031 to 2,047), and West Virginia District 31 (7,800 to 1,629).

The official vote count will be announced Dec. 1. Trumka will take office Dec. 22.

"We're very happy," Trumka said Wednesday afternoon, his non-stop smile mirroring those of his campaign workers who were busy answering the constantly ringing telephone.

Trumka accepted a call from a Pittsburgh radio station wanting a live interview for an on the air newscast. In answer to a question about Church's campaign use of a reported quote from the famed UMW President John L. Lewis that "The UMW elects leaders and hires lawyers," Trumka, an attorney, answered that many lawyers are also leaders. He added, "For the edification of your listeners, too, it might be noted that John L. Lewis frequently studied law and had three or four honorary law degrees."

Asked about his coming marriage on Nov. 27 to Barbara Vidovich, of Fayette County, the Nemaquin native said, "I'm a very fortunate man. I look forward to that day as much as to the election yesterday."

His fiancée is also from a coal mining family, her father, a UMW member for nearly 50 years, is disabled from black lung. She quit her job some time ago to work as a volunteer in the election campaign.

Despite the year-long campaign and his upcoming marriage, Trumka doesn't plan to take any time off at present. "We're having staff meetings today and tomorrow to iron things out with the staff and to make plans."

In discussing his plans as head of the union, Trumka said, "We intend to be more active in the field — it's necessary to make more visits to the miners. And there are three things we need to get busy on immediately — we need to straighten out the union's finances, work on unemployment, and organizing. We plan an organizational review. The union payroll is bloated, we have more people on the staff now than we did when we had 750,000 members."

About his running mates, Cecil Roberts, 36, of Cabin Creek, W.Va., as vice president, and John Banovic, 52, of Litchfield, Ill., secretary-treasurer, he said, "We're all very close friends. We intend to run the union with a team concept. All three officers will function at full steam, rather than just the president."

Church had charged during the campaign that Trumka's election would mean more wildcat strikes in the coal fields, a charge Trumka labeled as "campaign rhetoric."

"All three of us have been able to keep wildcats down in our districts," he said. "The reason is that we are willing to go out and address the problems when they come up, rather than let them fester until they erupt."

As he sat behind a cluttered desk Wednesday wearing a plaid wool shirt and blue jeans rather than a three-piece suit which had become almost a trademark in his campaign appearances, he termed Tuesday's election, "A humbling experience, that's the only word for it. The support has been incredible."

He mentioned his selection as man of the year in his home town of Nemaquin as "one of the greatest honors a person could ever have." Trumka will be honored as man of the year on Nov. 20.

In summing up his campaign he said, "It wasn't a candidate's campaign, it was a rank and file campaign."

Trumka felt confident of victory by 9:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Candles Light Election Eve At Rally For Trumka

By Marcia McKenna Biddle, Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — Some 1,000 supporters of Richard Trumka in his bid to become president of the 200,000-member United Mine Workers Union participated in a candlelight parade and rally in Carmichaels Monday night, the eve of the national election.

Called a pre-victory celebration, the rally attracted the presidents of four UMW districts in Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Each praised Trumka in his effort to unseat incumbent Sam Church in Tuesday's election.

Don Redman, UMWA District 5

president, told the crowd of cheerful miners and their families that his district has been supporting Trumka since November of last year. Gazing over the crowd carrying lighted candles, Redman said he "felt like a kid seeing his first Christmas tree."

The crowd cheered loudly when he told them, "The people who vote are here tonight, not at a $200-a-plate dinner."

Ed Bell, president of District 6 in West Virginia, said he was proud of how the campaign was conducted and said the union is looking for leadership badly needed for the past few years. "Today, we have it in the Trumka slate," he said.

Next on the dais was Carroll Rogers, president of District 31 in West Virginia, whose speech was interrupted by an alarm at the firehall. After the firemen and trucks responded to an alarm at a nearby mobile home park, Rogers told the crowd that the usual motto in West Virginia was "Beat Pitt" and the comment drew the only booping of the night. Rogers said the motto has been changed to "Beat Church."

Rogers told the huge crowd that District 31 has been the biggest contributor to the Trumka campaign and "we are proud of it."

Jim Kelly, president of District 4 headquartered in Masontown, said, "I think tomorrow may be the most important day in the history of the United Mine Workers. Sam Church has let us down by giving away our benefits. The District 4 staff is 100 percent behind Trumka."

Trumka, when he approached the podium, drew a thunderous ovation from the miners, many of them laid-off at area mines.

Council Backs Neighborhood Watch Program

By Bob Eichenlaub, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — The formation of "Neighborhood Watch" programs to combat vandalism and other crimes against property was proposed at a meeting Monday of Waynesburg Borough Council.

Councilwoman Beverly Krill said council should take the initiative to serve as the catalyst to start the programs in light of increasing complaints about property damage being done by vandals.

"It's worked well in other places where neighbors are willing to cooperate with each other and with the police," Mrs. Krill said. "I think if council spearheads such a program here it will work well too."

Police Chief Timothy Hawfield said he would endorse formation of such groups, noting they should be set up in individual neighborhoods rather than on a boroughwide basis.

"Citizen cooperation is very important to a police department and we welcome every idea which will foster it," he said. He also pointed out that the police are available to meet with citizen groups at any time for various programs on crime prevention.

Council agreed to schedule a public meeting to give interested residents an opportunity to respond to the idea. The date will be announced.

In other developments at the meeting, it was announced that the borough's fiscal problems won't be eased in 1983 with a reduction in its allocation of federal revenue sharing funds from $78,582 to $66,320. A public hearing on proposed use of the funds will be held in conjunction with the Nov. 22 council meeting.

In response to a complaint about a dilapidated building on West Lincoln Street near Richhill Street, council will contact the owner and advise him the condition must be corrected in compliance with a borough ordinance. If nothing is done, the borough has the authority to give the owner 60 days in which to either upgrade the structure or tear it down.

A request was received from a property owner on High Street asking for a yellow line in front of her house to guarantee a parking space because of illness in the family. Council said it could not grant the request for a number of reasons, including the fact that it would set an undesirable precedent.

A request from the Chamber of Commerce to change the time of the Dec. 4 Christmas parade from 2 p.m. to 11 a.m. was granted, subject to PennDOT approval. The time is being changed to avoid a conflict with a production of the "Nutcracker Suite" being sponsored at 2:30 p.m. that day by Greene County Memorial Hospital.

A request from the Bureau of Employment Security for rent-free use of borough council chambers on Monday and Tuesday of each week to process claims for unemployment compensation was denied in light of the rent policy for use of the room.

Hawfield reported that council will no longer have use of the auxiliary police station wagon after Jan. 1, which will leave the police force with no backup vehicle if the patrol car breaks down. He was authorized to attend a state auction to be held on Nov. 18 to attempt to purchase a low-cost vehicle.

A request from the First Christian Church for permission to erect church directional signs at the corners of Richhill Street with High Street and Greene Street was turned down on the grounds of avoiding a precedent.

A resolution adopted at the last meeting to make Wood Street one-way for northbound traffic was rescinded. The streets runs north and south along Howard's parking lot, across from the Waynesburg fire hall, and it was felt that making it one-way would assist emergency vehicles leaving the fire hall.

Since then it has been learned that many volunteer firemen from the East End use the street to go from High Street to Howard's parking lot, where they leave their cars in responding to an alarm. Making the street one-way would prevent them from doing so.

Court Confirms Property Ruling

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court on Friday confirmed a ruling it first made in 1977 that a 1964 agreement by the W. A. Wilson Stave Co. of Graysville to sell 8.45 acres of land to A. Clyde and Mary Beillion of Graysville was legal and binding.

As a result, the court invalidated subsequent sale of the same property in 1974 to Dana Wilson and directed the prothonotary to execute a deed to the Bedillions upon payment of the final $1,785 due under the original sale agreement.

According to the complaint, the late W. A. Wilson entered into the agreement in 1964 to sell the property to his brother-in-law, Clyde Bedillion, with payment to be made in the form of services to the company or monthly payments. The lawsuit was filed after the death of W.A. Wilson in 1975, naming the stave company and Wilson's widow and son, M.R. Wilson and Dana Wilson, as defendants. The defendants contended the agreement was invalid because the Bedillions had defaulted on the payments.

In its original ruling in 1977, the court also found in favor of the Bedillions, but the ruling was appealed to the state Superior Court. In 1979, the appellate court remanded the case to the county court for further hearings and findings on the questions of whether the failure of the Bedillions to make timely payments on the contract discharged by the stave company from its obligation to convey title to the land, for clarification of the amount due on the contract, and for determination of whether the Bedillions were guilty of delay in filing their lawsuit.

The court, in its opinion, stated that the Bedillions were never notified that the agreement was being terminated, that Wilson continued to WAYNESBURG — A proposal which would provide 8 percent annual salary increases for elected county officials, starting in 1985, was presented to the Greene County commissioners Thursday by Clerk of Courts Al Darney.

Darney, who said he was acting with the support of the other officials, was following up on a request made in September. At that time, the group presented a petition which asked the commissioners to fix salaries for officials who will be elected in 1983.

The action must be taken by the end of this year if the officials or their successors are to receive any salary increases during the next four-year term of office, running from Jan. 1, 1984, to Jan. 1, 1988.

While the commissioners did not arbitrarily dismiss the request, they pointed out that office holders elected next year will automatically receive higher salaries when they take office in 1984 because the classification of thecounty has been changed from seventh class to sixth class.

"When we decided to change the class of the county we did so with the idea that it was much simpler than going through the process of establishing salaries under the new law," County Commissioner Joseph Pawlosky said. "Now you're asking us to approve additional raises on top of that."

The situation has arisen because of Public Law 495, which became effective in 1979. It gives county commissioners, for the first time, the responsibility to fix salaries of county officials. Prior to that, the power resided in the state Legislature.

The commissioners now have the right to provide annual raises on a percentage basis and they must apply equally to all elected officers. To do so, they must advertise and hold a public meeting to give residents an opportunity to comment.

Those who are to be elected in 1983, and who would benefit in 1984 from any salary scale approved at this time, would be the commissioners, district attorney, clerk of courts, prothonotary, treasurer, register and recorder and auditors. The sheriff, coroner and jury commissioners could not receive any benefit until 1986 since they are not to be elected until 1985.

With the change to a sixth-class county, the salaries of the commissioners will go from $15,500 to $19,000 in 1984; the district attorney from $15,500 to $18,000; the clerk of courts and register and recorder from $16,500 to $18,000, and the prothonotary and treasurer from $15,500 to $17,000.

Darney said his proposal would make no change in those 1984 salaries, with the eight percent annual increments not starting until the following year.

"We selected eight percent because that is the amount of annual raises the commissioners have been giving to all county employees for the past 10 years," the clerk of courts said. "Only the elected officials have been locked into fixed salaries with no raises during their terms of office."

In response, Pawlosky said that county officials have always been aware that they will receive no raise during a term of office.

"When we run for office we know what the salary will be. Why do you now feel you should be treated as employees? Are you running for an office or a job?" he asked.

While commissioners Leonard Santore and Richard Cowan also seemed cool toward the proposal, Pawlosky agreed to submit Darney's proposal to the county solicitor for a legal opinion on granting of percentage increases on an annual basis. He also said a decision would be made in time for the required public hearing to be held before the end of the year should the commissioners change their minds and approve a program of salary increases.

In the only other development at the meeting, Marcia Biddle appeared before the commissioners to present the annual budget requests of the Greene County Council on the Arts and the Greene Academy of Art.

For the past four years, the county has been allocating $2,500 in federal revenue sharing funds to the council to qualify it for a matching grant from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts. The Greene Academy has been receiving $700 to assist it with restoration of the academy building in Carmichaels.

Southeast Greene Board Ratifies Teachers' Pact

MAPLETOWN — School Board President Jim Minor cast the only negative vote Tuesday night as the Southeastern Greene School Board ratified a contract agreement reached last Friday with the teachers' union.

Board ratification assures that schools will remain open after a 47-day strike that began Aug. 31. Classes started in the district on Monday.

Voting for the agreement were board members Dave Bierer, Mark Brozik, John Mason, Bob Watson, Emil Enoff and Gary Mosier. Two directors were absent from the meeting — Adam Novak, due to a death in the family, and Floyd Hornick.

Prior to his vote, Mosier said he was voting for the ratification of the contract "not to give anybody a raise, but to get the kids back in school."

The contract gives the Southeastern Greene Education Association a 7, 7½ and 8 percent increase over three years plus a vision care package in the third year. The board was unable to state how much the contract would cost the district, but it was estimated that it could amount to a 20-million increase over the three-year period.

Although a new school calendar has not been approved, Superintendent Gerald Marcinak said there will be 159 days of school. He said the vacation schedule includes Thanksgiving and the day after, Dec. 24 to Jan. 2, Good Friday and Memorial Day. School will be in session until June 30.

The board will hold its reorganizational meeting with a regular meeting to follow on Monday, Dec. 6.

Approval was given to turn the Penn Pitt Elementary School over to the general contractor while the school is under renovation. Students have been moved from the building and the contractor will be responsible for the care of the building while it is under construction.

The board also approved two change orders at the school. One change calls for a new concrete floor in the amount of $11,266. It was noted that the new floor is needed since concrete is only a half-inch thick in some places. The other change was for lining of the chimney stack at the school at a cost of $11,330, since the interior mortar of the chimney has decayed.

Permission was granted for the Varsity Booster Club to begin work excavating the high school football field. The club will undertake the project at no cost to the district. The work includes sloping the field for better water runoff, reseeding it and adding new goal posts.

At the start of the meeting John Milinovich, representing Dugan and Milinovich of Washington, presented the annual audit report. Milinovich was required to prepare next year's audit at a fee not to exceed $4,000.

Three teacher vacancies at the high school, for a librarian, business education and science teachers, will be posted.

Her Comments Caught Ford's Eye

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Because she liked her new car and told Ford Motor Co. so, Carol Moore of Huffman Street, Waynesburg, will soon have her comments and picture published all over the United States.

It all began last fall when Mrs. Moore received a survey form in the mail from Ford Motor Co. asking for comments on her recently purchased car. She dutifully filled out the questionnaire and added a few extra comments about how she loved her Mercury Lynx.

Within a few weeks, Ford executives called and asked her permission to use some of the comments in advertising. Mrs. Moore agreed, and she was called again to see if she would agree to some photographs.

A photographer and illustrator from an advertising firm came to Waynesburg in July and took about a 100 pictures.

The crew photographed her in several scenes in her home and, because they needed some skyline shots, went to Mountain View Gardens for additional photos.

Mrs. Moore, who is the purchasing agent for C&N Parts in Morgantown, W.Va., was surprised by the amount of pictures taken but still felt only one or two would be used in a brochure. Her husband, Lee, an employee of Equitable Gas Co., felt the same way about the whole thing.

Mrs. Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Throckmorton of Rogersville, will be featured on wall posters, car toppers, direct mail brochures and other advertising material during the current sales period. Her comment, "I love my Lynx," is displayed in bold headlines on many of the items.

When asked if perhaps a new car would be offered because of all the attention, Mrs. Moore said she received a $50 check from the film crew after she signed a release but has heard nothing further about financial rewards.

Perhaps she can "catch on" with her older brother, William, who owns an advertising and public relations firm in Chicago.

She still can't get over the attention her letter received in Detroit.

"I didn't even think they would read it," she said.

Mid-Penn Telephone Corp. Offers Security Alarm System

WAYNESBURG — A state-of-the-art security alarm system for use in homes, apartments and small business offices is being made available by the Mid-Penn Telephone Corp. in its Waynesburg Operating Area.

Known as the Security 300/C, the four-channel security system is designed to detect burglary, fire and smoke, as well as summon help in medical emergencies.

The basic alarm system consists of a control unit, detectors, back-up power supply and a 20-watt siren speaker that sounds a piercing five-minute alarm at the first sign of an intruder entering the home.

Additional accessories which are available include smoke alarms, a portable "panic button" for summoning help in cases of emergency or sudden illness, and a digital communicator that gives customers the option of subscribing to the Security 300/C's alarm monitoring device.

When the Security 300/C alarm is triggered, the digital communicator, inserted in the control console, automatically phones the Security 300/C alarm monitoring central station and transmits data indicating the type and location of the alarm. Trained alarm monitoring station operators then consult the customer's personal data file for instructions on who to call to respond to each type of alarm. Within moments, help is on the way.

Gordon Curry, customer service manager for the Waynesburg Operating Area, said the system is completely wireless, offering customers ease of operation.

The Security 300/C provides protection without disrupting the home or business," he said. "The control unit itself looks like a stereo speaker, making it very unobtrusive. And its ease of operation lets customers program any alarm setting in seconds. Most important, its detection methods are less prone to false alarms than other systems."

Curry noted that many major insurance companies offer reduced homeowner or business insurance rates to policy holders with alarm systems such as the Security 300/C. The system was developed by Sterling Security Systems Inc. of Mid-Continent Telephone Corp., parent company of the Mid-Penn Telephone Corp.

Additional information about the system is available at the Waynesburg Operating Area's headquarters at 55 West Greene Street, Waynesburg.

Northern Medical Services Nursing Home officials had presented the plans to the Franklin Township Sewer Authority last week and received approval. Developer's hope to begin construction later this year with a completion date tentatively set for next November.

No formal action was taken on several other items of business, including an earlier request for an anti-pornography ordinance; a possible new appointment to the sewer authority; a reduced speed zone on Route 21 west of Waynesburg, and a boundary dispute between two individuals in the eastern section of the township that involves a road right of way.

Rotary Club's Goals Outlined

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Rotary Club joined in the observance of "Rotary International Foundation Week," Nov. 7-14, at its weekly meeting Monday.

David Cumberledge, the club's Foundation officer, updated members on the local club's contributions to the Rotary Foundation over the past year and outlined goals which the Foundation hopes to achieve in the future.

The Foundation was established in the 1940's to provide scholarship grants to college-bound students who wish to study in a foreign country. Selection is based on scholastic ability.

Cumberledge urged his fellow Rotarians to encourage high school seniors and college students "to get into the Rotary scholarship program." He said that scholarships are granted in five study areas — undergraduate, post-graduate, vocational, journalism studies, and for individuals who want to work with the handicapped.

One major source of funds which has helped the Foundation to grow is the "Paul Harris Fellow" award which is presented when a gift of $1,000 is made to Rotary International in the name of an individual. The Waynesburg club has several Paul Harris Fellows.

Cumberledge said that the Rotary Foundation also sponsors group study exchanges, helps to support Rotary's "Health, Hunger and Humanity" programs, and contributes special grants to clubs with projects on a matching-fund basis.

Most Bingo Licenses Renewed For A Year

WAYNESBURG — Nineteen of the 20 non-profit organizations in Greene County whose bingo licenses expire this year have already obtained one-year renewals from the county treasurer's office at Waynesburg.

The twentieth is not due for renewal until next month, and three others have licenses which run to the early part of 1983.

By state law, any non-profit organization can obtain a county license to operate bingo games provided it has been in existence for at least two years. With the exception of recognized senior citizen groups, the license fee is $100 per year. Senior citizen groups can obtain a license for $50 provided they conduct bingo for their members only. If the public is admitted, they must pay the same $100 fee as other groups.

The new law legalizing bingo under certain conditions became effective last year. Licenses are issued for one-year terms, effective on the date of issuance, so that the expiration dates vary.

The non-profit organization must own the equipment used in conducting games and must either own the building in which games are held or lease it under a written agreement providing for a fixed rental which is not dependent upon receipts realized from the games.

Games cannot be conducted oftener than twice a week, and prizes cannot total more than $4,000 per day. Persons under the age of 18 cannot be permitted to play unless accompanied by an adult.

Nine volunteer fire companies are among the 19 which have already renewed their 1982 licenses. They are the Jefferson, Rices Landing, Bobtown, Carmichaels, Graysville, Crucible, Clarksville, Center Township and Mt. Morris Fire Companies.

Others which have renewed are the Waynesburg, Elks Club, Shannopin Civic Club at Bobtown, Dunkard Valley Rifle Club, Waynesburg V.F.W. Post, St. Ignatius Church at Bobtown, Sacred Heart Church at Rices Landing, St. Marcellus Church at Jefferson, St. Hugh's Church at Carmichaels, Touchdown-Takedown Association and Women of the Moose at Waynesburg.

The license of the Perry Township Community Center is due for renewal next month, while those of the Carmichaels Area Senior Citizen Center, Wayne Township Community Association and Richhill Township Fire Company are valid until the early part of next year.

Sandra Yarish Wins Role In 'Forty-Second Street'

By Marcia Biddle, Staff Writer

NEW YORK — Sandra Yarish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Yarish of Carmichaels, has won a role in the chorus of the first road company of the Broadway hit musical, "Forty-Second Street."

The new production will open in Chicago Dec. 28 at the Civic Opera House and will run through the end of April. It will be produced by David Merrick, who brought the show to Broadway in 1980.

The show is based on the 1933 movie of the same name, which starred Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell with dances choreographed by Busby Berkeley. For the present show, choreography was done by the late Gower Champion and features precision tap dancing by a chorus of 22 girls and 13 boys.

Coincidentally, the story tells of a young girl from a small town in Pennsylvania who wins a part in the chorus of a Broadway show. When she is disappointed, she starts to leave New York but is stopped at the train station.

Sandy, on the other hand, was cut after two days of auditions and flew home. But she was paged at the Pittsburgh airport. There was a message from Merrick's office. He wanted her to return in two days for another audition.

The competition was intense. Auditions had been held for the past two years in major cities around the country. At Sandy's first audition, there were more than 400 other dancers. At the second, there were 78. For the last one, the number was down to 45.

Finally, there were only six. For the first time, the girls were asked to sing. Sandy sang, "Adele's Laughing Song," from Die Fledermaus by Johann Strauss. Soon she was being fitted for her costumes.

Of the 15 musical numbers in the show, Sandra will appear in 12. The songs include many old favorites including, "Lullaby of Broadway," "We're In The Money," "Shuffle Off To Buffalo," and "Forty-Second Street." The stars of the Chicago production are expected to be Elliot Gould and Tammy Grimes.

Sandra studied dancing at Barbara Moschetta's Dancing School for 14 years. She graduated from Carmichaels Area High School in 1978 and from West Virginia University in 1982, with a degree in music education. She has also studied voice for several years.

She was first runner up in the Coale Queen Pageant in 1977 and first runner up for Miss West Virginia in 1981. She was elected homecoming queen at WVU in 1981 and appeared in many productions at the university.

During the past summer, she worked with the Kenley Players in Akron, Ohio, then went to New York for her first Broadway audition.

WAYNESBURG — Carol Adamson of Brave Star Route was elected president of the executive board of the Greene County Cooperative Extension Service at the 67th annual dinner meeting held Thursday evening in the Benedum dining hall at Waynesburg College.

She will succeed Robert Reynolds of Carmichaels R.D.1, who has held the position for the past two years.

Close to 200 persons attended the banquet, which featured a concert by the Presidents of Harmony, a barbershop chorus from Washington. Speakers included Homer F. Mazer, regional extension director, who reminisced on the five years he spent as an assistant extension agent in Greene County 25 years ago and outlined some of the new services to be offered in the 17 counties which make up the southwest region.

Brief remarks were made by County Agent William C. Brown, Assistant County Agent Roger W. Smith and Home Economist Carol A. Christen.

It was noted in a prepared report that the Penn State Extension Service has been functioning throughout the state for 67 years, with services and programs being offered in the areas of agriculture; family living, including expanded food and nutrition programs; 4-H programs, and resource development.

"Extension is currently and must continue to work at doing a better job evaluating methods and programs to sort out the most effective ways to deliver programs that achieve results," it states. "Those programs that do achieve results will be the ones emphasized in the 1980s."

The report noted that 284 young people are enrolled in traditional 4-H programs during 1982, with another 550 youth involved in non-4-H programs. There were 27 clubs organized with 94 adult and teen leaders directing the youth program.

College To Offer MBA Degree

WAYNESBURG — A master of business administration degree (MBA) will be offered by Waynesburg College beginning in January to complement the college's undergraduate programs in business-related fields.

The MBA program, the first graduate-level program at the college, was announced by college president Joseph F. Marsh. He calls the new program "one example of the college reacting to the needs of students and the community."

"In recent years, leaders in higher education have seen the master of business administration degree gain in popularity and importance," President Marsh said. He noted the number of applications for the graduate management aptitude test has tripled during the past decade.

"Members of the faculty have expressed their support of a graduate-level program in business," he said. "Through the efforts of the Department of Business Administration and Economics and others, an MBA proposal was developed for inclusion in the Title III proposal recently funded by the U.S. Office of Education."

Jr., director of the MBA program, noted, "Salaries of MBAs have increased dramatically over the past several years. Within the business and corporate community, the MBA is being viewed as an avenue to better positions, career advancement and salary increases."

Cowan said the MBA program at Waynesburg College will be a 36-credit program that could be finished in 11 months of intense study. However, he said, "We are hoping to make the MBA degree program available to more people by scheduling courses in the evenings. During the second semester, for example, we are planning to offer eight courses on Monday through Thursday evenings."

The MBA program at Waynesburg College concentrates on accounting, finance, management and marketing. Cowan said, "In addition, students in the program will work with quantitative techniques, computer applications, case studies, report writing and the theoretical and social issues confronting the modern firm."

All MBA degree candidates will be required to take courses in managerial accounting and control, financial management, operations management, marketing management, statistical methods, business research techniques, seminar in applied economics and management policy. All candidates also will be required to write a master's paper.

Degree candidates will develop an area of specialization in accounting, finance, management of marketing through selection of elective courses.

Cowan said admission to the MBA program is being offered to all graduates of accredited colleges and universities. Candidates will be evaluated by the Graduate Admissions Committee on the basis of undergraduate achievement, graduate management test scores, special skills and other factors.

"Based on our research, there appears to be a significant number of people in southwestern Pennsylvania interested in career advancement. The MBA program at Waynesburg College can be one important factor in career development," Cowan said.

A complete schedule of courses and list of requirements will be available by the end of the week, Cowan said.

New County Salary Law Points To Needed Reform

Because of a new state law enacted two years ago, nine of Greene County's elected officials find themselves in the uncomfortable position of having to look to the board of county commissioners for any salary increases they will get in the future.

Through the act, the state legislature gave up its traditional role of setting the compensation of county officials throughout Pennsylvania and delegated the power to the commissioners in each county, authorizing them to provide annual increases on a percentage basis. In any county in which the board of commissioners does not chose to act, salaries will remain at the level set by the legislature in 1978.

Greene County officials who are currently asking the county commissioners to exercise their power have been receiving $15,500 or $16,500, depending on the office, since 1980. They or their successors will be elected next year, and will receive raises of $1,500 when they take office in 1984 because the commissioners have already exercised the option of changing the classification of the county from seventh class to sixth class.

While the office holders are satisfied with that raise, they are asking that the commissioners approve a plan that would give them additional annual raises of eight percent starting in 1985.

So far the commissioners have not been receptive to the idea. They feel the $17,000 and $18,000 annual salaries which the classification change will provide are sufficient for the next four-year term of office.

(Ironically, the classification change is most beneficial for the three commissioners. Their salaries are currently lower than some other office holders, but in a sixth class county they will receive $19,000, which is $3,500 more than they are currently getting and putting them $1,000 above the next highest paid official.)

The fundamental problem lies with the the difference between the offices.

The three county commissioners are responsible to the taxpayers for the county's fiscal management and for overall administration of county government. But their office has traditionally been a part-time responsibility involving decision making and the setting of policy.

The other officials, such as the clerk of courts, prothonotary, treasurer and register and recorder, function as department heads. At least in Greene County, most work eight hours a day in overseeing their offices, most of which are clerical in nature.

They asked for the annual raises of eight percent because that is the amount the commissioners have been giving their employees — and all other county employees — for a number of years. But if the commissioners give them what they want, they are bound by law to give themselves the same annual increments.

Over a period of years, many people have suggested that it is inappropriate to elect people to a job which could be done by a regular department head. They feel the positions should be eliminated. The officials and their state associations have always resisted the change.

As one of the commissioners said when the request for annual salary increases was made, "You are elected officials and yet you want to be treated as county employees."

Perhaps the new salary law will give impetus to the obvious need for reform of county government on a statewide basis.

The 1983 "Old Farmer's Almanac" is rather depressing reading this year. The winter weather forecast for the "greater Ohio Valley," which is us, doesn't look promising.

"Although the winter is expected to be relatively mild until Christmas, with below-average snowfall," says the Old Farmer, "Thereafter some prolonged cold spells and substantial snowfalls may be anticipated, with record-breaking cold periods possible."

I don't know whether to trust the Old Farmer or not. The Almanac still insists that it is written by a Robert B. Thomas. He, however, has been writing it since 1792, which is probably a record.

In the introduction, though, the editors admit that letters should no longer be addressed to Robert B. Thomas, his name on the masthead being purely, well, honorary.

To be precise, Robert B. Thomas, late of West Boylston, Mass., started the Almanac back in 1792 and distributed it throughout New England using "itinerant booksellers," for sixpence, or about eight cents a copy. It was filled with pertinent information, such as, "Mr. William Hershell is now said, by the aid of powerful glasses, to have reduced to a certainty the opinion that the moon is inhabited."

So, should I believe Old Farmer now, and get out the long underwear, or not?

Mr. Thomas, who was also a schoolmaster, farmer, and book-binder, produced the first 54 editions of the almanac and it has been carried on by various editors ever since. In the 1983 edition, Dr. Richard Head is given credit, or blame, for "supplying all the weather data."

On the same page with ads for some things this paper wouldn't even mention, is more bad news for us sitting ducks in the greater Ohio Valley. "November will be colder and drier than usual, with a mild spell for relief about mid-month. December will have several mild periods to end up considerably above average in temperature." That's the good news.

The bad news is that December is also predicted to include "a sizable snowstorm the last week of the year." That's the week in which most people wish to travel, of course.

Now for worse news. "Prolonged cold is anticipated for January, with a brief respite the third week. Above-average snowfall is expected in January, while February may well have almost twice the usual snowfall."

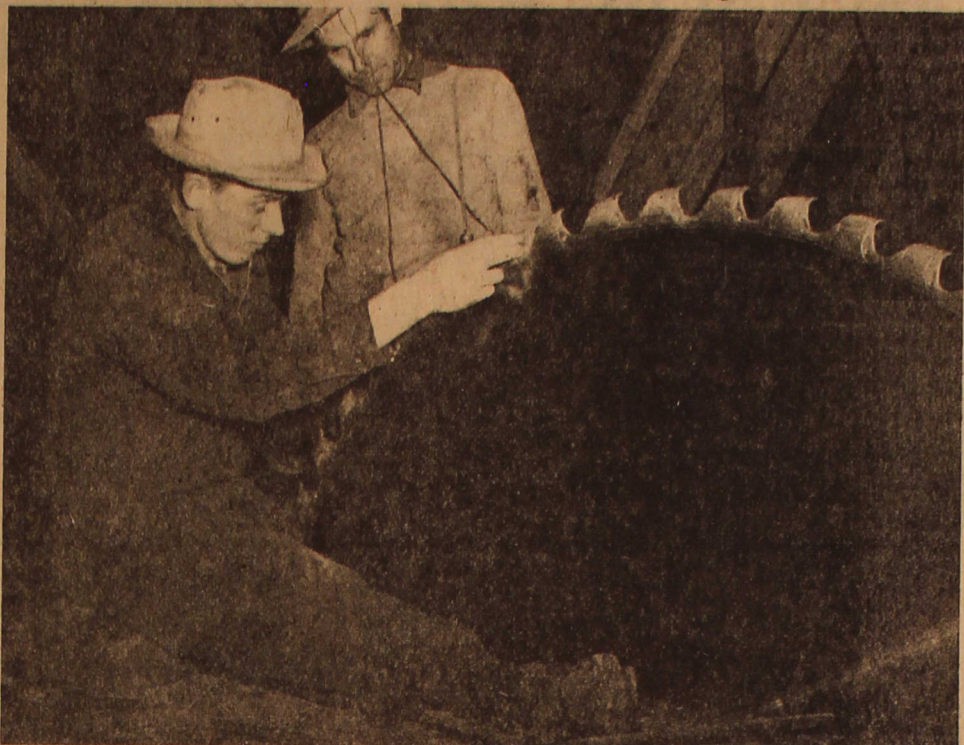

If you are looking forward to spring, you can forget it. "There will also be cold spells at the middle and end of March. April will be quite wet, mild the first half and cool the latter half, and spring may be delayed by two to three weeks."

You can't really look forward to summer, either. "Heavy rains early in June may cause some flooding. An unusually long hot spell at the end of July may last well into the first week of August, with a draught developing..."

I don't know about you, but I'm not going out of the house.

Faces From The Past-Do You Recognize Them?

The man in the foreground is either the bravest man in the world or more logically is sharpening or repairing the blade. John O'Hara, who owns the picture, can't recall the event but it was taken in 1950.

Fact & Folklore

John O'Hara

The rather unexpected death last week of Clay Hoy, a life-long resident of Waynesburg and Mather, reopened the flood gates of pleasant memories for many of his fellow senior citizens who shared his companionship for so many years.

A sturdy built individual, he carried his boyhood nickname of "Roundy" with him to the end. To his friends, it was a name which referred to his pleasant disposition and also to his sturdy physique.

Waynesburg, during his early years, was a town which in some ways resembled a large family where practically everyone knew everyone else and also the name of the family's dog or cat.

Because of its comparative isolation from the "outside" world, Waynesburg in those days had more the nature of a mini-sized city than just a small town with a small population, which in a way made it quite self-sufficient to itself.

Hub of the community of course was the High Street neighborhood in which the Hoy family, John Sr., the husband and Meade, the wife and mother, and their two sons, John Jr. and Clay lived for many years.

Mr. Hoy owned a livery stable which in those days made him privy to all the goings on in town, not only the business affairs but also the family affairs that were the common property of every neighborhood of the community.

These included the North Side where the largest houses, financed by the first sales of Pittsburgh coal, stand to this day and monuments of the battle to control the coal supply to Pittsburgh mills. Eventually, Henry C. Frick of Pittsburgh finally drove the Uniontown coal baron, J.V. Thompson to financial ruin.

Some of that money finally filtered into the ten separate borough of East Waynesburg, dominated politically by the late B.N. Freeland and later by his son, the late John Freeland.

An even smaller portion reach the South Side and northeast fringe of town along East Franklin Street known as Red Bird Hollow.

That, of course, was before Henry Ford invented the Model T. It was one of the first invention which proved to a small extent at least, Abraham Lincoln's philosophy that "all men are created equal" if they could afford the first payment on a "flivver" or pick up a second or third-hand one much later even if it couldn't pull either town hill in high gear.

As mentioned earlier, Waynesburg even though its only connection with the outside world up to that time was the four trains a day over the W&W causing an urban rather than a rural pattern in town.

Up around the corner of High and Morgan Streets, the teen-agers got more adult knowledge than in any other part of town.

In addition to the Hoy family, there were the Alex Purman family that owned a sedate billiard parlor on a part of the lot of the present Greene County Office Building from which their sons Alex and Andy and their daughters Mary, who became a nun and Ann who became the wife of Art Rattigan.

The Omler family lived across the

Tree Program
 To Reforest
 Land Begun

WAYNESBURG — Landowners in Greene and Washington counties can purchase tree seedlings from the State Bureau of Forestry for reforestation of idle land.

"Trees are a renewable resource which benefit the environment in many different ways," Service Forester Bill Wentzel of Waynesburg said. "They can be planted on worn-out pastures, eroded banks, steep slopes, strip-mined areas and unused corners of the farm."

To be eligible to purchase the trees, a landowner must have at least 1 1/2 acres of open ground to plant the minimum order of 1,000 trees in rows eight feet apart. These seedlings cannot be used for ornaments, wind-breaks or Christmas trees.

Tree varieties available are pine, spruce, larch, European alder and black locust. The cost ranges from $50 to $75 per thousand. The trees will be delivered to the Greene County Fairgrounds around the second week of April 1983.

Well, it finally happened—Indian Summer got tired of hanging around in Greene County so much longer than usual and took off for Florida, California, South Carolina and other places it's supposed to be this time of the year.

Today, Tuesday, Nov. 9, the mercury submerged to 26 after being up in the high 30s and low 40s with lots of pleasant sunshine for weeks at a time. Today's weather feels worse by the almost complete lack of even a faint ray of sunshine. But as they old saying goes, "You can't have everything." Also, everyone might as well remember that a lot of much colder weather than this and some snow will be around before it's time for another Memorial Day parade.

See the sports section for the windup of the college football season last Saturday when the Yellow Jackets had no trouble winning against Salem College. It ended almost three minutes before time was up when the losers turned the game into a slugging match which they also lost.

A Greene County girl's picture will be seen on thousands of posters all over the United States just because she was gracious enough to respond to a letter from Ford Motor Co. Mrs. Carol Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Throckmorton of Rogersville, will be pictured on posters, car-toppers and brochures. Her husband Lee is employed by Equitable Gas Co.

Atty. Terry Grimes of Waynesburg who recently purchased a portion of the Sayers Building on South Washington Street will move his law offices into the building after extensive remodeling. It is the same site where the late John C. Knox, a Waynesburg native and attorney, practiced law before going to New York City where he became a federal judge.

The last vestige of Manufacturers Light & Heat Company offices in Waynesburg has disappeared with remodeling on South Washington Street. A two-story frame shed behind the former office was razed earlier this month. It was the scene of countless cinch games during rainy days when the company employees couldn't work in the field.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Andrews of Waynesburg have moved to Chazy, N.Y. He has accepted a position as a producer/director for remote projects for public television station WCFE at Plattsburg, N.Y.

Santore To Seek Another Term

GREENSBORO — County Commissioner L.R. (Butch) Santore of Greensboro on Sunday will become the first person to officially let it be known that he will be a candidate in the municipal election in 1983.

The announcement will be made at an open house to be held from 4 to 6:30 p.m. Sunday in the UMWA union hall in Greensboro.

Santore, a Democrat, will be seeking a second four-year term on the board of commissioners. The first hurdle will be getting one of his party's two nominations for county commissioner in the primary election next spring.

The open house, to which the public is invited, is being held by the "Santore for Re-election" committee. It is chaired by Lawrence Piper, with John Burich as treasurer. All Democratic committee members have been invited to the open house, at which refreshments will be served.

County offices to be filled next year, in addition to those of the three county commissioners, are district attorney, treasurer, prothonotary, clerk of courts, register and recorder and auditors.

Doctor Joins Staff

Dr. Bernard J. Imrich, a specialist in internal medicine, has joined Huffman Medical Associates and is now a member of Greene County Memorial Hospital's medical courtesy staff.

Imrich was born and reared in Bobtown where his parents, John and Betty Imrich, and grandmother, Mary Pesosky, still reside.

He attended West Virginia University on an Army ROTC scholarship and received his bachelor of arts degree in 1971. He graduated from West Virginia University Medical School in 1975 and completed a year's internship at WVU Medical Center.

In 1976, Imrich began a four-year tour of duty with the U.S. Army and was stationed with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C. He then spent two years in a training residency with WVU Medical Center and also assisted in providing office coverage for Huffman Medical Associates.

Jackets Rise Above Adversity And Survive

WAYNESBURG — What could have been, in terms of winning, didn't quite pan out with what was for Waynesburg College's football team this season.

The Yellow Jackets, loaded with talent and potential, believed they were legitimate contenders for a national title. It was a realistic goal.

That goal, however, was quickly put to rest when the Yellow Jackets dropped their first two games of the season. They finished with an average season, recording a 4-4-1 mark.

But sometimes success cannot be measured by the number of wins. And Waynesburg is a case in point. The odds were stacked against the Yellow Jackets even before the season started as the locker rooms were under construction and uninhabitable until midway through the season, forcing the players to dress in their dorm rooms. As a result, the Yellow Jackets lacked immediate cohesiveness.

The instability was later compounded by unfortunate breaks in games, attitude problems among some of the players and general inconsistency on offense.

Still, the Yellow Jackets persevered and by the end of the season developed into one of the finest teams Waynesburg has ever had. So much so, that already head coach Hayden Buckley is optimistic about next season.

Reflecting on the season Monday afternoon at his weekly press conference, Buckley blamed himself for part of what transpired this season.

"As I look back, I get upset with myself because I wasn't able to foresee some of this and take care of it," he said. "I fully believe that any denise bachman

coach is responsible. If I let things go on (among the team), then it's my fault.

"I'm disappointed that I lacked the ability to see this. I've been in coaching a long time. Every coach has to realize failures and successes. So many things just built up."

And even though the Yellow Jackets didn't measure up to Buckley's, or their own, preseason expectations, Buckley still views the season as a success.

"Oh, we were very successful," he said. "You go into every season with the idea of going undefeated. But you have to be realistic, too. This is the best squad I've ever had, and by the tail end of the season we were a pretty darn good team. We played well and we played together."

Part of the reason behind the Yellow Jackets' resurgence can be attributed to the fact a few players who lacked a team concept early in the season eventually left the team.

"Apparently some of the guys who dropped by the wayside eliminated some of the problems," Buckley said. "We had more fun and the guys were pulling together more. But when we got into the locker rooms, that's when things turned around."

Despite the lack of adequate locker room facilities, the Yellow Jackets got caught up in their own emotions early in the season. It took a few losses to bring them back to reality.

"Coming in this year, we had high hopes," said linebacker Freemont Catlin, who was named defensive Jacket of the Week after recording 10 solo tackles, eight assists and two sacks. "But the big problem was when we scrimmaged Carnegie-Mellon and we slaughtered them — the defensive unit and the offensive unit."

"When we went into the first game (of the season), we said 'We're Waynesburg. We have the best team ever.' Everyone felt that way. Waynesburg had all this ability and couldn't be beat."

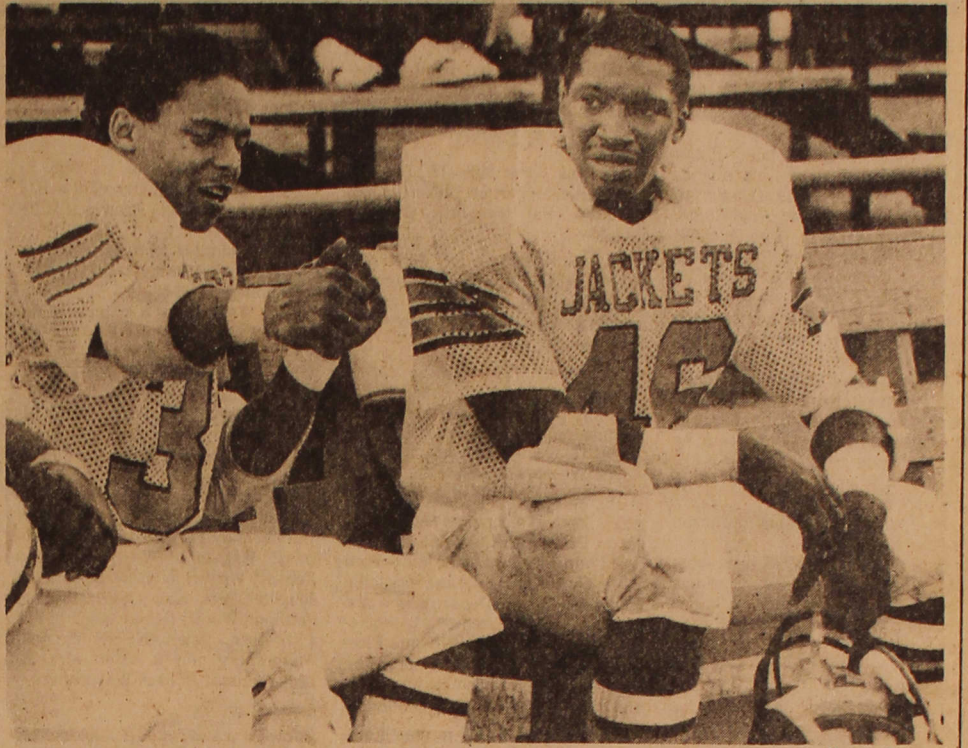

They learned their lesson quickly. Waynesburg dropped its first game of the season, a 20-7 loss to Glenville State. Then it dropped its second game by the identical score to Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

A 48-18 victory over Geneva in game three momentarily restored some lost faith, but then defeat struck again against Lycoming, 7-0.

"The defense played well, but we had our backs to the wall a lot of times," Catlin said. "It took our offense a while to get on the right track. I remember one game the defense was out on the field for 40 minutes. The whole season was like that — up and down."

But a 35-13 victory over Grove City and a 30-0 shutout, the defense's first of the year, against Salem in the season finale was encouraging to Buckley.

"That was the best defensive game of the year," Buckley said.

Observer-Reporter

Freemont Catlin (right) takes time out to listen to teammate Otto Birkhead's explanation.

"The defense dominated the game, especially the first half. Then they gained a few yards in the second half, but nothing of significance. We played like a very good football team the last couple of weeks."

Freshman fullback Pete Long, who was named offensive and specially teams Jacket of the Week for scoring three touchdowns including an 85-yard kickoff return, is proof of the character the Waynesburg football team built by the end of the year.

"I plan on working real hard this winter," Long said. "I was out of uniform for a year and a half. I was overweight and had a toe injury. Everything didn't click until later (in the season). I was playing behind some great guys, and showed some flashes of what I can do.

"Hopefully I'll be better next year."

Jackets Come Long Way In Win

SALEM, W. Va. — Waynesburg College ended its football season with one of its best performances of the year Saturday when the Yellow Jackets routed Salem College 30-0.

Although the defense has played well all season, Saturday's game marked the Yellow Jackets' first shutout of the year.

Waynesburg never trailed after Pete Long returned the opening kickoff 85 yards for the first of his three touchdowns and Jim Czesnakowski kicked the extra point.

"We dominated everything," said Waynesburg head coach Hayden Buckley. "After Long made that big run, it was strictly our ball game, especially after we increased our lead to 24-0 at halftime.

"We got good running from Long, (Otto) Birkhead and (Keith) Davis and our entire defense performed well. It was just an easy victory for us."

And the Jackets haven't been accustomed to easy games.

"Salem never threatened to score," Buckley said, "although they did a little better on offense in the third quarter after they had minus yardage in the first half."

Long, Birkhead and Davis provided most of the Yellow Jackets' ground game with Birkhead carrying 12 times for 62 yards; Davis 14 for 59 and Long 13 for 52.

Long also caught two passes for 39 yards with Mike Forbes completing four of 13 for 54 yards and Ted Rodavich completing his only attempt for 12.

The Yellow Jackets totaled 168 yards rushing and 66 passing, while Salem gained 90 on the ground and added 42 on three of 11 pass completions by quarterback Bill Johnson.

Rodavich kicked a 25-yard field goal to give Waynesburg a 10-0 lead which was increased to 24-0 at intermission on two second-quarter touchdowns.

Long went two yards to score and Forbes got a touchdown on a one-yard sneak. Czesnakowski kicked the extra point after both touchdowns.

Long's three-yard run in the fourth quarter ended the scoring.

Buckley was especially pleased by the Yellow Jackets' defensive play.

"We had our top three tacklers out with injuries but (Joe) Adams and Rich Warren did very well as replacements," Buckley said. "I was really happy with the way Warren played because about the only action he has seen has been with specialty teams. He came through with a great performance."

The win clinched a .500 season for Waynesburg as it won its final two games of the season to secure a 4-4-1 record.

"It might be a disappointing record when you think about what we had expected at the start of the season," said Buckley. "But we did a good job as a team in the last part of the season after we had to overcome all kinds of difficulties."

The 4-4-1 record marks the ninth consecutive non-losing season for Waynesburg under Buckley.

Highlanders 7, Raiders 0

CLAYSVILLE — McGuffey High School had several scoring opportunities but capitalized only once in a 7-0 Section 4-AA football victory over Waynesburg Saturday.

The Highlanders, who finished with a 6-3-1 record, second best in the school's history, got their only touchdown in the second quarter on a one-yard run by Jon Carter. B.J. Thomas kicked the extra point.

"We got down deep several times but once we fumbled at the one-yard line; once we tried a field goal and missed and another time, an interception stopped us," said McGuffey coach Frank Stodden.

The Highlanders gained 201 yards rushing and 48 passing, while the Raiders were held to minus 14 rushing but managed 73 passing for a net of 59.

The Highlanders had a 4-3 record in the section, while the Raiders finished 0-9-1 overall and 0-7 in the section.

Jackets Win NAIA Title

Waynesburg's women's volleyball team won the 1982 NAIA District 18 title Saturday by defeating both Villa Maria and host Westminster in a single-elimination tournament.

The Yellow Jackets beat Villa Maria 15-17, 15-5, 15-8 and 15-7 before defeating Westminster 14-16, 15-10, 15-6 and 15-7.

Waynesburg will meet the NAIA District 28 winner this week.

The Yellow Jackets finish their regular season schedule Tuesday with a 6:30 p.m. home match against California and Slippery Rock.

New Faces In Basketball

Quad-A, the center of so much controversy in WPIAL football and its alignment, will become a reality in basketball.

Don't worry, you may not see the same amount of squabbling. But you will see an increased number of teams from the WPIAL in the state basketball playoffs.

Starting with the 1983-84 season, the PIAA has grouped the state into four classes, AAAA through A. And if the state uses the same figures that the WPIAL has based its football alignment on, Washington County will have three high schools (Canon-McMillan, Trinity and Ringgold) in the new Class AAAA division.

To accommodate the new division, the PIAA playoffs will be extended one extra week to allow for the 32-team tournament in each class. With the expansion of the state tournament, the WPIAL (District 7) will have eight representatives in the Class AAAA playoffs, eight in the AAA, seven in the AA and five in the Class A tourney.

The college basketball season has yet to begin, and already two of the district's three teams have been hit with some hard luck injuries.

California State's outstanding sophomore guard-forward Michael Wilson sustained a sprained ankle in practice nearly two weeks ago and is still hobbled, according to CSC head coach Tim Loomis. And to make matters worse, point guard Barry Wright compounded the pre-season woes by suffering a broken wrist while junior forward Moe Yeoman has reinjured his foot.

Wright will be sidelined for an indefinite period and could miss the entire season.

Meanwhile, Washington & Jefferson's senior forward Jerome Smith may not be much of a football fan after his accident. Smith broke his foot during a touch football game with some friends, and it will not be removed from its cast until the end of the November.

Waynesburg, with 12 players presently on the roster, has been fortunate in avoiding the injury bug. The Jackets can least afford it.

This year's local recruiting award goes to John Unice of W&J, who has secured some impressive freshmen who should provide immediate depth.

"We feel we have a couple of first year people who can help us right away," Unice said. "We treat them as we would upperclassmen so whenever they perform to their capabilities and can help the team they will play."

Among the W&J recruits who will see a great deal of action are Tony Torchia (6-4 center), Mike Savrese (6-2 guard), Alan Bradstock (6-5 forward), Randy Klimchok (5-11 guard), Bob Hrdlicka (6-1 guard), Mike Burroughs (6-4 center) and Jeff Conn (6-3 center).

Cal State's major addition will come in the small frame of 5-9 point guard Cliff Mitchell, while 6-5 forward Bob Connor of Carmichaels and 6-6 forward Mark Lewis of Washington D.C. are the Vulcans' other first year players.

Waynesburg head coach Rudy Marisa's first venture to the Washington D.C. area has paid off with two Mackin High School graduates, 6-5 forward Keith Coleman and 6-0 guard Clyde Singleton. But the Jackets will have to wait until January for another notable addition as Elgin Riggins, a transfer from St. Bonaventure University, will become eligible then.

"The fact that Jim Satalin (the former St. Bonaventure coach who is now at Duquesne) recruited him and gave him a full scholarship speaks for his career and the potential he has," Marisa said. "What he found out in reality there was that it was a bit big for him."

Assessment Dept. Will Review Taxes On Privately Owned Coal

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — The perplexing problem of what to do about tax assessments on privately owned coal will be completely reviewed by the Greene County Assessment Department during the coming year.

The issue was brought into focus recently when 18 individuals who own varying amounts of Pittsburgh and Sewickley seam coal appealed the valuation the county has placed on their coal for 1983.

When hearings on the appeals were held last month by the Greene County commissioners, the individuals involved said that increased assessments have placed them in a position where they can no longer afford to pay taxes on their coal while gambling that they will someday be able to sell at a profit.

Most said they would be more than willing to sell the coal at the value assigned to it by the county, but can't find anyone willing to buy it.

In 1983, for the first time, coal which is privately owned will carry the same value as coal owned by major companies — $166.50 per acre for Pittsburgh coal and $112.50 per acre for Sewickley coal. Since all taxable property is assessed at 30 percent of market value, the assessed values on coal translates into an assigned market value of $550 per acre for the Pittsburgh seam and $375 per acre for the Sewickley seam.

For many years, privately owned coal was given preferential treatment through carrying a much lower assessment than that assigned to company-owned coal because the companies were in a position to mine the coal while the individuals weren't. The change was precipitated in 1980, when one major coal company pointed out that the county system was subject to a court challenge on the grounds that the county was violating the legal requirement of making all assessments on an equal basis.

The only concession the commissioners could obtain was a three-year grace period in which to gradually increase the small holdings to the same value as that placed on the large holdings.

"It's a delicate matter since coal valuations represent 48 percent of the county's total assessment base," Assistant County Assessor John Cole said. "Any adjustments which are made for privately owned coal will have to be done on an individual basis to accurately reflect the value of that coal, and will have to be supported by evidence to prove that the reductions are justified."

Decisions made in the 18 cases in which appeals were filed this year reflect this thinking.

In four cases, no change was made in the value assigned for the coming year. "In each of the four, the coal is of proven quality and is located in areas where companies are buying coal," Cole explained.

In 13 others, the value was reduced to reflect the fact that there is no current market for the coal, sometimes at any price, or because of unproven quality. In the 18th case, one involving Sewickley coal, it was removed from the assessment rolls entirely on the basis that there is reason to think the coal does not exist in mineable quantity.

Notices to the property owners notifying them of the county's decisions were mailed Friday, Cole said.

The assistant assessor noted that much of the problem lies with the currently depressed state of the coal industry. As a result, companies are interested only in buying coal that they can use in the foreseeable future. "Anything the county decides to do will be done with that in mind and would be subject to change when the market for coal changes," he explained.

The 18 appeals represented more than 10 percent of the 150 or so individuals who own the 3 percent of Greene County coal not owned by major coal companies. It is coal which at some time in the past was reserved when the surface was sold, thus "severing" it from the surface and giving it individual ownership. Coal which has never been severed and is owned by the landowner is not assessed separately from the surface.
