Alternatives For Railroad Crossings Outlined

WAYNESBURG — Alternate proposals for the location of a grade-separated crossing over Monongahela Railroad tracks on Route 218 in Waynesburg were outlined Tuesday at a public open house in Waynesburg Council chambers.

The session was held to acquaint residents and local officials with progress on a design location study being prepared by the Federal Highway Administration, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation.

At the present time, two proposals are being given primary consideration.

One would involve construction of a bridge over the railroad track and over Ten Mile Creek at the foot of South Morgan Street, where the present Route 218 grade crossing is located.

The other would involve construction of a bridge over the railroad track and the creek at the foot of South Washington Street, which would move the location of Route 218 one block to the west of its present route.

A third alternative is also being studied. It would involve construction of the bridge over the tracks and the creek at the foot of South Porter Street, with the accompanying construction of a new road along the south bank of the creek to tie back into Route 218 in Blairtown.

A fourth option involving a bridge at the foot of South Richhill Street has been eliminated from consideration because of the extensive excavation and problems which would be involved in building a connecting road along the south bank of the creek, at the bottom of Duvall's Hill.

The design location study is being prepared by Salvucci and Associates of Pittsburgh under a contract with PennDOT. They will study the economic feasibility of the various proposals, as well as their environmental and community impact.

A PennDOT delegation headed by District 12 Engineer John Claypool of Uniontown was on hand for the public meeting, along with representatives of the consulting firm, to outline the various proposals and solicit opinions from those attending.

Claypool said that the study is to be completed by May as the first step toward eventual construction of the grade separation. He said the project would be eligible for federal assistance, but that no provision has as yet been made for the allocation of construction funds. He could give no estimate of when the project would be undertaken.

It has been estimated that it would cost some $2.5 million to construct the bridge at the foot of South Morgan Street, which would keep Route 218 in its present location.

Beginning at Elm Street, south of the Miller Middle School, the grade of the street would gradually be raised to a point near First Street, where the bridge itself would start. It would stretch 400 feet to the south side of Ten Mile Creek. The bridge would cross above First Street and would be some 22 feet above the grade of the railroad track.

Because of the need to build up the grade of the street, some four houses and some business places would have to be acquired for the project. The cost of damages is not included in the construction cost estimate, which officials said is very preliminary at this time.

The alignment on South Washington Street would be much like that on Morgan Street, with the exception that a new piece of road would have to be built along the corner of Duvall's Hill on the south side of the creek to tie it into the existing highway. It would also require the condemnation of property, with one of the drawbacks being that Route 218 would be moved to Washington Street, which is more residential in character than is Morgan Street.

The South Porter Street alternative would require the construction of a complex bridge having a side ramp to Lincoln Street and extensive road construction along the south bank of the creek to get back to the existing highway at Blairtown; with much of the construction having to be carried out in a flood plain. It is estimated that it would cost about four times as much as the Morgan Street and Washington Street alternatives.

PennDOT and the Federal Highway Administration are considering the project because of the extended delays to motorists resulting from the present grade crossing. Delays are expected to increase still further when new mines are developed in western Greene County, one of which is already under construction in Richhill Township.

Those attending the open house were asked to comment on the various proposed locations. The comments will be considered when the alternate alignments are considered. After the alternate alignments have been further developed and refined, an additional open house will be held to again obtain community comments.

Central Greene Acts To Comply With Health Rules

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — A large number of students in the Central Greene School District, most of them in the upper grades, will have additional disease immunizations before they can be admitted to classes for the 1983-84 school year.

The school board, at its meeting Tuesday, adopted a policy to bring it into compliance with new regulations of the state Department of Health. The regulations, which are effective Aug. 1, 1983, stipulate that all students in grades kindergarten through 12 must have all required shots to attend school.

"All school districts in Pennsylvania will be bound by the new standards," Superintendent Ronald Ferrari said. "We are adopting the policy at this time to give our students and their parents eight months in which to obtain the required immunizations."

Dr. Ferrari estimated that about 50 percent of high school students will require additional shots since the Health Department has added to the required list in the years since they were small children. He feels that most elementary students, particularly those in the primary grades, are probably in compliance. This year's high school seniors will not be affected since they will have graduated when the regulations go into effect.

Dr. Ferrari said the three school nurses will immediately begin the process of identifying students who do not meet immunization requirements. Parents will then be notified as soon as possible of those which must be obtained, and where they are available.

"Any student who has not complied by the time classes begin next fall will be suspended until they get the immunizations," Dr. Ferrari said. Exceptions will be made only when a student has a medical exemption signed by a physician, or when the parents have signed a statement of religious or strong moral or ethical conviction opposing immunizations.

The only board action which created controversy was the appointment on a 5-4 vote of Brett Moore of Waynesburg as junior high head basketball coach, a position which car-

King Coal Planning For 1983

CARMICHAELS — The King Coal Association met Thursday night in Carmichaels and for the third and final time voted to nullify the present by-laws. A committee will present preliminary by-laws for the approval of the association directors at the Dec. 9 meeting.

Discussion was held on a carnival for the 1983 State Bituminous Coal Show set for Aug. 20-27. The carnival committee headed by William Groves will present a recommendation at the Dec. 9 meeting.

In preparation for the 30th anniversary of the Coal Show, the directors discussed decals, tee shirts which will be available through the B&V Outlet, structuring of the association to attract more volunteer workers and also more participation from the directors serving from the five organizations.

President Sara Ruth reported that a formal invitation will be extended to UMW president-elect Rich Trumka to participate in the 1983 Coal Show parade.

Coal Queen Debbie Tekavec will participate in the annual Carmichaels Lions Club basketball tournament by presenting the trophies. She was in the recent Waynesburg College Homecoming parade and will participate in the annual Christmas street lighting program on the town square Saturday, Dec. 11.

ries a salary of $1,017.

Board member Lila Ayersman said she felt another applicant, John Johnson, should have the job because he has worked for two years as a volunteer coach and had the support of Glenn Kyle, head varsity basketball coach. A member of the varsity team, Kurt King, told the board he was attending the meeting on behalf of the varsity team to urge Johnson's election.

Robert Stephenson said he could not vote for either candidate because neither of them had the full support of the athletic staff, with athletic director Jack Cassidy and principal John Barbero having recommended Moore. Joining Ayersman and Stephenson in voting against Moore's appointment were Warren Bowers and Furman Wade.

In other action regarding the coaching staff, the board named John Garber as assistant junior high school basketball coach and accepted the resignation of Joseph Zorosky as assistant varsity football coach.

In keeping with a break-even concept adopted for the new ala carte lunch program, the board, with regret, approved the layoff of three part-time food service employees and the transfer of two others.

The administration was authorized to submit an application for a grant of $3,185 in federal funds to implement a computer literacy program for seventh and eighth grade students at the middle school. Dr. Ferrari said the Department of Education is accepting applications for the funds on a competitive basis, and there is no assurance the application will be approved.

The board also:

✓ Authorized high school students Amy Osso and Kim Stewart to compete in the national Make it With Wool contest at Oklahoma City in January.

Both were winners on the state level.

✓ Awarded a contract to Fox Auto Sales to furnish the district with a van on its bid of $8,998.

✓ Accepted the resignation of Arthur E. Stafford as a member of the Central Greene School Authority.

✓ Approved a Red Cross blood donation drive at the high school on April 21.

✓ Granted tenure to Mrs. Cathy Carter, a special education instructor at the middle school.

✓ Adopted a resolution opposing passage of the proposed new school code because of changes which have been made in the legislation which weakens local control of public schools.

✓ Scheduled the annual reorganization meeting for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 7, and the December board meeting for Tuesday, Dec. 14, which is one week earlier than usual.

Court Sentences Aleppo Man Under State's New Guidelines

WAYNESBURG — Dennis Earl Phillips, 21, of Aleppo on Friday became the first person to appear before the Greene County Court for sentencing under newly promulgated guidelines of the Pennsylvania Commission on Sentencing.

District Attorney Charles Morris said it is intended to produce more uniform sentences in criminal cases throughout the state with a view to preventing repeated suspended sentences for habitual criminals.

"The act is aimed primarily at urban centers such as Philadelphia and Allegheny County where the heavy caseload is a problem, but all counties are required to abide by its provisions," he said.

Under the system, "points" are assigned for all prior convictions, weighted according to the seriousness of the crime and whether or not a weapon was used. A defendant's total score must then be considered by a judge in determining the sentence to be given for the crime with which the defendant is currently charged.

The act also sets forth ranges of sentences which can be imposed in three categories — minimum range, aggravated range and mitigated range. The latter comes into play when there are special circumstances which should be considered.

As a result of the act, Morris said, both state and federal authorities must be contacted to determine if a defendant has any prior criminal record and the minimum sentencing guidelines must be adhered to in any plea bargaining which is held.

Public Defender John Stets said that in his opinion the new regulations will greatly increase the number of criminal trials which will be held since there is less leeway for bargaining on behalf of defendants.

Phillips came under provisions of the act since he was charged with crimes committed after July 22, the effective date of the new regulations.

He and a co-defendant were charged with burglarizing Rohanna's Iron and Metal Co. on Oct. 3 and Levine Iron and Metal Co. on Oct. 3 and Oct. 8.

With no prior record, Phillips was sentenced to serve from 11½ to 23 months in the Greene County Jail on the one charge. Suspended sentences of 6-to-12 months were imposed for each of the other two burglaries, so that he will remain on probation after serving the jail sentence.

Four Others Hurt

Spraggs Man Dies In Head-On Crash

SPRAGGS — A Spraggs resident was killed and four others were injured in a head-on collision at 9:35 a.m. Monday on Route 218, a mile north of Spraggs.

James V. Jones, 43, died instantly when his Volkswagen sedan crashed into the pickup truck operated by Johnny M. Bell, 21, Spraggs. Emergency medical technicians from Waynesburg and Blacksville, W.Va., worked for more than an hour to extricate Jones from his vehicle. Deputy Coroner Charles Behm of Waynesburg said he died of multiple injuries.

Two passengers in his car, Barbara Lee, 27, Spraggs, and her 7-year-old son, Miles Lee, were taken by the Blacksville ambulance to the athletic field at Clay-Battelle High School, from where they were taken by Life Flight helicopter to West Virginia University Hospital in Morgantown.

Ms. Lee was in fair condition late Monday night following surgery. The little boy was in critical condition in the surgical intensive care unit.

Two passengers in the Bell vehicle, Christine Louise Bell, 19, and 1-year-old Tracy Bell, were taken to Greene County Memorial Hospital, where they were treated for facial injuries and released.

State police said the accident happened on a straight stretch of road on the southern side of Brant Hill. Jones was driving south, while Bell was traveling in the opposite direction.

Police said the cause of the accident was not immediately determined. Behm said plans are being made for an inquest after the investigation has been completed.

Fire Destroys Home Along Route 21

WAYNESBURG — A family of eight was left homeless Wednesday night when fire destroyed their home on old Route 21, just east of the Curry Memorial Home.

They all escaped injury, but a fireman, Mark Fisher, was taken to Greene County Memorial Hospital for treatment of a burned foot. Several other firemen also suffered minor burns but did not require immediate treatment.

The house, owned by John Barna of Waynesburg, was occupied by Edna Toland and members of her family. Making up the household were her mother, Vera Martin; her uncle, James J. Purman; her five children, Diane, 17; LeAnn, 16; Lisa, 14; George, 12, and Artie, 10.

"We were all downstairs when the fire started about 8:30," George Toland said. "It started upstairs, where we had a kerosene heater." He said the family managed to save their six dogs, but got nothing else out.

The two-story, seven-room dwelling was a log house covered with siding, with a concrete block addition on the rear.

Assistant Fire Chief Ron Fox said cause of the blaze was not immediately determined. No damage estimate was made.

"Because of the thickness of the walls it was a very difficult fire to fight," he said. Firemen, who remained on the scene for more than two hours, were also hampered by a lack of water.

Stubborn Field Fire Battled

CRUCIBLE — A field fire burned approximately two acres of ground along the Carmichaels-Crucible road owned by James Hathaway Tuesday afternoon.

Volunteer firemen from Crucible, Carmichaels and Rices Landing fought the fire for an hour and a half, Susan Sotak, public service, North Huntingdon.

Eric Wright, math and computer science, Mercer.

OUR DAILY BREAD

At the heart of the most cherished of Christian prayers is the plea "Give us this day our daily bread."

The Lord seems to be reminding his followers that we depend, for our very survival, on what God provides.

With strong emphasis, too, on the simple but wholesome nature of God's giving—bread, not cake.

Stressing the fact that our need continues without abatement—day after day after day.

Our thanksgiving, too, should be continual. But it never hurts to express it all together with common fervor as on Thanksgiving Day. Then live it every day of the year.

Although fall precedes winter and therefore always reminds us of cold, ice and snow, it also can refresh our joy in celebrating several special holidays. Starting with Halloween and continuing through New Years, many of us will enjoy family get-togethers. We will plan, prepare and celebrate.

At Halloween we used pumpkins to decorate. The practice of carving jack-o-lanterns is an old English custom. Legend tells that the eerie light cast by the hollowed, lighted pumpkins would ward off evil spirits.

At Thanksgiving time, the pumpkin is used for culinary purposes. The pumpkin was part of the first Thanksgiving celebration and today the pumpkin pie is still important for our holiday meal.

It has been estimated that more than 145,000 tons of pumpkins are processed each year in this country. Pumpkin is a rich source of vitamin A and also contains vitamin C, iron and potassium. It is low in calories, sodium and fat.

Baking with pumpkin during the holiday season evolved because it closely followed the harvest time when pumpkin was in greatest supply. Over 52 million homes now serve pumpkin between Halloween and New Years, making it by far the most popular pie of the holiday season. Besides pie, pumpkin can be used in nut breads, cakes, muffins, cookies, main dishes and refrigerator desserts.

And what do we think of at Thanksgiving besides pumpkin pie? Why, turkey, of course! As Thanksgiving approaches, questions regarding turkey roasting also arise. What is the best roasting method? Should frozen birds be thawed before roasting? What method of cooking is most energy efficient?

Traditionally, turkey is roasted at about 325 degrees to an internal temperature of about 180 to 185 degrees. Recently procedures for low-roasting temperatures (200-225) have been studied. Evaluation of various roasting methods show that frozen turkeys roasted at 200 degrees fahrenheit generally received the highest rating on attributes such as color uniformity, general appearance, flavor, tenderness and overall quality.

Birds roasted in microwave ovens rated low in appearance and eating qualities and often had undesirable pink thigh joints.

Two disadvantages of low temperature roasting are longer roasting time and increased energy consumption. The microwave was the fastest and most energy efficient.

Although whole turkeys can be satisfactorily roasted from the frozen state, energy and time can be saved by thawing the bird before roasting. A word of caution — the recommended method to insure optimum safety and quality is to thaw frozen turkeys at refrigerator temperatures.

2 Ministers To Lead
1984 European Tour

WAYNESBURG — Two Waynesburg ministers will lead a tour to Europe in 1984 centering around the 350th anniversary of the Oberammergau Passion Play.

Because of the great demand for a limited number of tickets for the world-famous dramatic telling of the story of the passion of Christ, the tour is now being planned for mid-June of 1984, with the Rev. Kenneth Thomas, pastor of the First Christian Church of Waynesburg, as host. The Rev. David Barrett, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Waynesburg, will join the tour as co-host.

While the play is usually presented every 10 years, a special presentation is being planned for 1984 to mark the anniversary date. It is held in Oberammergau, a small village in the Bavarian Alps.

The tour will include seven days in central Europe, visiting Austria, Germany, Switzerland and Liechtenstein. It will include confirmed reservations at the Passion Play, hotels, meals, airfare, sightseeing and guides.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the Rev. Thomas at 627-3592 or the Rev. Barrett at 627-8241.

Mon River Buffs Hold Annual Banquet

GREENSBORO — The 1982 king and queen were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith Jr. Smith was captain of Hillman Boats and piloted most of the boats of the Mon River Towing Co.

The new king and queen spoke on the Waterways Journal, describing it as "the riverman's bible."

It was announced that copies of the "1859 Directory of the Monongahela and Youghiogheny Valleys" will be available by mid-December. Those who wish to order a book should send a check for $19.50 to the Mon River Buffs Association, Box 330, Greensboro 15338.

President Harold Laughery said all meetings of the association are open to the public. The next meeting will be held Sunday, Nov. 21, at McDonalds in Monongahela.

Trumka Election Heralds New Era In Mine Fields

The overwhelming majority by which Rich Trumka won the presidency of the United Mine Workers gives credence to his repeated assertion that union's 200,000 members are eager for the type of leadership that is necessary to reunite the union and return it to its former strong position among the nation's labor organizations.

His campaign priorities of putting miners back to work, organizing the large segment of the industry which is non-union, and getting UMW finances back in shape struck such a responsive chord that the 33-year-old Nemaconin resident collected an amazing 70 percent of the miners' vote to unseat incumbent Sam Church Jr. of Virginia.

Trumka, a graduate of Pennsylvania State University and Villanova University Law School, is the first attorney to head the mine workers. Both his age and his education put him in tune with the modern miner, who is both younger (average age 32) and better educated than at any time in the past.

The contract which Church negotiated with mine owners in 1981 undoubtedly had a lot to do with the outcome. Miners were unhappy with it and Trumka was one of the leaders of a revolt which led to rejection of the first settlement proposal. As a result, he is being seen in many quarters as a militant labor leader who will be unable to exercise the give and take necessary to help lead the industry out of its present economic doldrums.

But while he is young and relatively inexperienced, the Greene County native is well aware of the need for a stable work force which is not subject to the disruption of wildcat strikes. Preventing them will be one of the tests of his fledgling administration.

Fortunately the next union contract is not due until 1984, and by that time Trumka will have had an opportunity to solidify his leadership and the UMW house should be put in order.

A Carmichaels man who grew up with the Trumka recalls that his friend, as the son and grandson of miners, aspired to the UMW presidency from the time he was a boy. He was fortunate to be able to run for the job at a time when members of the union were ready for the type of leadership he has promised.

Delivering on those promises will be a difficult job — one which is vitally important in Greene and Washington Counties where mining plays such a large part in the economic health of the community.

We wish him well.

Veterans' Service Honored

WAYNESBURG — Eighty-six-year-old John Christopher of Carmichaels stood in the center of the National Guard firing squad, rifle in hand and wooden cane hanging from his hip pocket.

He wore his American Legion cap (Carmichaels post) and, considering his lack of practice with the squad, did a good job of keeping in time with the youthful Company C riflemen as they fired the traditional salute to the dead.

Eighty-nine-year-old Morgan Henderson of Waynesburg (he'll be 90 next February) recalled that he and the late Edward Martin joined the Veterans of Foreign Wars at a national convention in Philadelphia in 1936.

"I think I'm the oldest VFW member in Greene County," he said, explaining he was speaking about length of membership rather than age.

Eighty-year-old Roy R. Lynch explained his relative youth by noting that he had entered the army at the age of 15 and served with an ambulance company in Belgium, France and Germany, remaining overseas with the army of occupation for 33 months following the armistice Nov. 11, 1918.

Their common bond is that all are veterans of World War I. They came together Thursday to observe a holiday which was originally established to commemorate the end of that war.

They and other veterans of "the war to end all wars" were guests of honor of the Waynesburg VFW post at a Veterans Day program to honor Americans who have fought in all of the nation's wars.

"There have been many wars to end war," State Rep. Bill DeWeese said. "People in Rome probably thought the Punic Wars were fought for that purpose. Today we're not only honoring these World War I veterans, but those who fought in wars which came before and those which came after — World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

"This is a day on which we gather to remember our past, but also to rededicate ourselves to the future of our country."

The featured speaker noted that, of the 260 countries in the United Nations, only 20 are democracies. He used Tuesday's election of Rich Trumka as president of the United Mine Workers as an example of de-

Pleasant Hour Club Hears Ornithologist

Ralph K. Bell, a well-known local ornithologist, spoke at the Nov. 5 meeting of the Pleasant Hour Club. The club met at the home of Mrs. Bennett Rich with 12 members and one guest present.

Bell, who has been interested in birds since he was ten years old, gave a talk and slide show presentation and answered questions from the club members. He brought with him a house finch to show how a bird is handled and banded and spoke about the feeding and nesting habits of some birds. Bell also displayed a nylon net used to catch migrating birds.

Faces From The Past-Do You Recognize Them?

The uniform being worn by these girls would look out of place on the court today but they were in vogue back in 1911 when they were members of a dorm basketball team at Waynesburg College. The two girls in front are Ruth Schneider and Erma Tennant Hough. Rear, from left, are Alice McCracken Strosnider, Ruth Tennant, Elizabeth Clovis and Harriet Luse Bell.

Fact & Folklore

John O'Hara

They buried Charley Balazick the other day in Greene County Memorial Park near the village of Jefferson, in Greene County, Pennsylvania. His last resting place is a long, long way from his birthplace 88 years ago in Czechoslovakia.

He had lived most of those 88 years in Clarksville, the Greene County side of town. He died November 9, 1982, following a brief illness.

When he first came to the United States he was only 14 years old, a long way from home, and looking for work. His first quest led him to a coal mine, where so many others from his homeland had already found jobs.

It was a strange experience, hundreds of feet under the surface of the earth, and with none of the assuring warmth and cheerful glow of the sun.

The gloomy atmosphere of the underground tunnel, intensified by the experience of a fellow worker who was injured by falling slate or some other cause.

"That job was too dangerous for me," he often told friends and his family in later years. It was quite a weighty decision for a teenager so far from home to make but even at that age he demonstrated his resolute state of mind just as earlier when he bid his homeland farewell to get to the United States.

It was a decision which had to be a hard one for a 14 year old away from his family to make but one which he never had any reason to regret having made, he often said in later years.

Shortly after leaving the mine, he went into the furniture business followed some years later with a retail meat market in the Borough of Jefferson.

Gradually he got started in the highway construction field, initially at the township level in both Greene and Washington Counties in western Pennsylvania and also in northern West Virginia.

To "take up the slack" in his busy schedule he also started a restaurant in Jefferson Borough to keep him busy during the winter when work for the Balazick Construction Co. slowed.

He also involved himself in politics to some extent at the township, county and state levels.

Day by day, month by month, and year by year after he walked out of the coal mine to seek his own future and happiness by his individual effort Mr. Balazick fulfilled his own version of the great American dream.

His success in his career as a businessman and the happiness of his family life paralleled one another in a classic fashion.

Just as he and his wife, Helen, who survives him, found happiness when they first met, it was enhanced five fold by the births of their children, Charles Jr., who lives at Jefferson, Mrs. Robert (Edith) Bunting, of Addison, Ill., Mrs. George (Theresa) Albert, of Waynesburg, Rose Iwanski, of Lavonia, Mich., and Lois Ireton, of Bethel Park.

There are 16 grandchildren, 10 great-grandchildren and two sisters also surviving, Annie Potubsky, of Summit Hill, and Agnes Osvaldova, in Europe.

between the bookends

by marcia mckenna biddle

For mystery fans, here are three of this year's good ones.

"Death and the Princess," by Robert Barnard Scribner's, $10.95. I'd like to find out how Robert Barnard does it. He churns out about two of these mystery novels a year, and they are becoming more and more popular. One reason for this popularity must be that he doesn't take himself seriously. He's witty, floats through his stories with a blithe spirit, and always entertains.

His stories are well-plotted — he leaves no loose ends lying around, and his characters are interesting, but not so deep that you care anything about them. In this story, the esteemed Superintendent Perry Treathowan of Scotland Yard is assigned to protect the Princess Helena, a fringe member of England's royal family.

Perry is naturally not delighted to be babysitting a renegade princess, even though rumor has it that her life may be in danger.

And then there is "Resume for Murder," by Claire McCormick. This one is a hot potato. It's moving so fast at the library that I haven't been able to get it back to find out the publisher or price, or get a quote from it. That's probably just as well, since quoting it could only lead to trouble.

The author wrote it under an assumed name, very good idea, under the circumstances. However, the jacket assures us that the setting of the novel is "only slightly skewed."

The setting? Well, you guess: as the book opens, the hero is emerging from the Fort Pitt Tunnels. Luckily for us, he turns north on I-79, not south. He is a job recruiter, on his way to interview seniors at a college.

The identity of the college is supposed to be concealed, since the author once taught there. However, it is a small Presbyterian college, and its name in the book is Witherspoon (or Weatherspoon. I forget which). It is located in Amish country, in a town called New Arcadia. Two people are murdered on campus, and in the process of solving the crimes, both the campus and the town are portrayed as, well... If the author was looking for revenge, she got it. Slightly skewed? She didn't leave a brick standing.

Last but far from least is a new book by English author P.D. James. ("The Skull Beneath The Skin," Scribner's, $13.95) James is a serious writer who happens to write mysteries. Her books are full of literary allusions — in this case almost everybody can quote Shakespeare at will — and all her characters are gold mines of secret pasts and hidden motives.

James takes time to set moods, and to probe into her characters with a very sharp scalpel. She never fails to describe all the furniture in a room. But since most of the action in this book takes place in a Victorian castle, even that is interesting.

In this book, young private detective Cordelia Gray is hired to watch a famous actress who has been receiving death threats in the mail. Cordelia has mixed emotions about everything, and so does everybody else. As she explores these emotions, James' prose is a pleasure to read, but it's not for the impatient.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Beautiful autumn weather continues to be enjoyed in Greene County — and everyone "around the town" is hoping that the Indian Summer will last.

The big talk on Main Street these days is about a proposed bridge for cars that have to cross South Morgan Street to the Smith Creek road without being clobbered by one of the many coal trains that cross the street both day and night. Many more trains are expected to rumble through the area as more mines are developed in Richhill and other western townships within the next few years.

Generally when a church organist and choir director retire they receive conventional sort of gifts but that wasn't the case when Mrs. Mary Hawkins recently concluded her long service as organist and choir director at the First United Methodist Church in Waynesburg. Along with many conventional remembrances, she was presented with a registered, pure bred beef calf — a gift more appropriate than it may seem to many townspeople because Mrs. Hawkins and her husband, James, live on a farm near Lippencott. The gift was donated by a member of the church, Dr. D. Paul Greenlee, a retired surgeon who also has one of the finest beef herds in the county. The animal, incidentally, was brought to the church for the presentation at which time Dr. Greenlee assured Mrs. Hawkins that the animal "had been raised a good Methodist."

Worthy Scott, former Carmichaels automobile agency owner who now lives in Waynesburg, breezed through major surgery in a Pittsburgh hospital last week and is now completing his recuperation at his home in the Blair Apartments on High Street. He is just as chipper and pleasant as when he was a three sport letterman — in football, baseball and basketball — first at the former Waynesburg Borough high school, at Waynesburg College and as catcher for the Presbyterian team in the old Waynesburg church twilight baseball league during the summer months.

A Graysville resident, David Thompson, had every reason to believe Monday was his lucky day when he escaped injury when his car went over a bank along a rural road. But less than an hour later he was taken to the hospital in Waynesburg after a car in which he was riding with Janie Gilbert of Graysville collided with another vehicle. This time Thompson's good luck had run out and he had to be treated at the hospital, according to investigating officers.

The long strike of teachers in the Southeastern Greene School District has finally ended but a snafu over their Blue Cross benefits still faces some 18 members of the teacher's union. How long it will take to unravel that particular bit of red tape is anybody's guess, but in the meantime everyone seems glad to be back in school after the nine week strike.

The most ignored activity in the county this year has been the small game season. Although the county is an ideal area for small game hunters, especially those who figure themselves as being better than average grouse hunters, hunting has been very inactive as compared to previous years. But just until the deer season opens up. Last year not only every man, woman and child strong enough to carry a gun seemed to be out, especially for the first two days, but some came from as far away as Tennessee and Illinois to get a big Pennsylvania buck.

Trenna Ann Wilson And Ronald Alvy King Marry

The First Christian Church of Waynesburg was the setting for the Friday, October 29, 1982, wedding of Trenna Ann Wilson and Ronald Alvy King.

The bride is a daughter of Robert and Lou Ann Wilson of Waynesburg R.D.4.

MRS. KING

Ray and Helen King of Waynesburg R.D.5 are parents of the groom. The Rev. Kenneth Thomas officiated at the 6:30 p.m., double ring ceremony and the bride was given in marriage by her father.

Mary Christopher and Janet Headlee were attendants and wore gray and white gowns. Christina Wilson, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Randy King, the groom's brother, served as best man. Ushers were Robin Roberts and Robert Wilson Jr., the bride's brother.

Following the ceremony a reception for 100 guests was held in the social room of the church. Out-of-town wedding guests were from Pittsburgh, Morgantown and Ohio. The wedding cake was made by Mary Kiger and Detta Price.

A graduate of Waynesburg Central High School, the bride is currently attending West Virginia Career College where she is studying to be a legal secretary. Her husband is a graduate of West Greene High School and is employed at the Cumberland Mine. They are residing at Waynesburg R.D.4.

Places Second In Jr. Shearing

Michael Belding, 19, of Waynesburg R.D.2 placed second in the 1982 Junior Sheep Shearing Contest held during the Keystone International Livestock Exposition this week in Harrisburg.

He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Belding and a sophomore at Pennsylvania State University.

MICHAEL BELDING

The contest, co-sponsored by the livestock exposition and the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association, was won by Daryl Schafer of Spring City, Chester County. He will compete in the National Junior Sheep Shearing Contest.

The state contest was open to any boy or girl between the ages of 15 and 20. Each contestant sheared two sheep and was judged on total time, condition of the fleece, absence of second cuts in fleece, handling of the sheep, absence of cuts on the sheep and appearance of the shorn sheep.

Third place in the contest went to Kelly McConnell of Fredericktown.

Belding, who graduated from Waynesburg Central High School in 1980, was a member of both the Greene County Market Lamb and Market Swine 4-H clubs while in school. At Penn State, he is a member of the 4-H square dance team which gives exhibitions throughout the state.

Robert Calvert of Spraggs was one of two Pennsylvania exhibitors who placed in the top five of their class in the Cheviot breeding sheep show held as part of the exposition.

Joanne Michaels stars as "Clara" in the American Dance Ensemble's presentation of "The Nutcracker."

Hospital Sponsors 'Nutcracker'

WAYNESBURG — The American Dance Ensemble will perform the ballet, "The Nutcracker" at Waynesburg Central High School auditorium Saturday, Dec. 4, at 2:30 p.m. The show is being sponsored by Greene County Memorial Hospital as a part of its continuing series for child development.

The American Dance Ensemble was created in cooperation with Point Park College and the Pittsburgh Playhouse to develop talent and fulfill some of the many needs for professional dance arts in western Pennsylvania. The ballet stars

Joanne Michaels as Clara and Pete Degnan as the prince.

As an added attraction this year, the American Dance Ensemble has agreed to more actively involve local children by offering a free ballet lesson prior to the performance.

Children will be instructed in basics including warm-up exercises. Parents are requested to state their children's names and ages at the time reservations are placed for tickets if they plan to participate in the ballet class. The classes will be divided by both age and group size.

Tickets are on sale now in the hospital administration office or may be reserved for pickup at the door. The cost is $1.50 for adults and 50 cents for students, with children ages four and under admitted free. A special ticket must be obtained for any free admission, however. There will be no ticket sales at the door.

Wrestling Boosters Sponsor Tourney

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Wrestling Boosters Club will sponsor a one-day, double elimination wrestling tournament this Saturday, Nov. 20, at Waynesburg Central High School.

Approximately 500 wrestlers are expected to participate in the tournament.

Entry fee for the tournament is $5 and medals will be awarded to the top three finishers in each weight class. Interested wrestlers may receive additional information by contacting

Two Win Rotary Distinction For Service To Community

WAYNESBURG — The Paul Harris Fellow, Rotary International's highest award to individuals recognized for contributions to their communities, was presented Monday to two well-known Waynesburg residents by the Waynesburg Rotary Club.

Receiving the award at the club's weekly meeting at the Elks Club were Rotarian W. H. (Wib) Stewart, owner of the community's oldest car dealership, and Robert Scott, who has 13 years of Boy Scout service to his credit, including his current duty as scoutmaster of Waynesburg Troop 1287.

In charge of the ceremonies were David Cumberledge, the club's Rotary Foundation officer, who served as master of ceremonies; Thomas Milinovich, governor-nominee for District 733, who presented the award to Stewart, and John Graham, former Greene County Boy Scout executive, who presented the award to Scott.

Cumberledge noted that the award is named for Rotary's founder, attorney Paul Harris of Chicago, who started the movement in 1905. Cumberledge explained the award is presented to individuals in whose name a contribution of $1,000 or more has been made to the Rotary Foundation.

The foundation is the Rotary arm which distributes millions of dollars annually among scholarships for study in foreign countries. It also sponsors such programs as the Hunger-Health-Humanity project, group study exchanges, and many others.

Milinovich took note of Stewart's long association with Rotary, which included club presidency in 1952-53, as well as a "long list of meaningful contributions in personal effort, devotion and contributions to the club and to Rotary International." Stewart's wife, Edith, was on hand to share the occasion.

It was noted that Stewart is a long-time supporter of Waynesburg College and has established an endowment fund at the college for deserving students.

The award to Scott, it was brought out, honored two men — Scott and his uncle, the late Harry Cree, who was the victim of a tragic highway accident during the past summer but "whose efforts on behalf of young people throughout his life will long be remembered by local Rotarians."

Graham cited Scott's commitment to the Boy Scout movement. "During his 13 years in scouting, he has successfully trained 10 boys who have earned the Eagle Scout distinction," Graham said.

Scott is an elder of the First Presbyterian Church and is noted for his skill as an organist with the United Methodist Church. His interest in nature and environmental concerns prompted him to walk Greene County's Warrior Trail, a distance of 60 miles, three times in the past few years. He is the first non-Rotarian to win the Paul Harris Fellow award through the Waynesburg club.

Cumberledge noted that the club has now awarded Paul Harris Fellows awards. Other recipients were W. Robert Thompson, the club's first president; Dr. Harry Gardner, Michael Milinovich, Harry A. Cree, Michael Mulholland and Thomas Milinovich.

GCID Urged To Continue Aggressive Program

By Bob Eichenlaub, Staff Writer
WAYNESBURG — The importance of continuing an aggressive economic development program during the present period of severe economic recession was stressed by President Renardo A. Matteucci in his annual report to officers and shareholders of Greene County Industrial Developments Inc.

The report was presented at the 22nd annual GCID meeting Wednesday at Rohanna's Restaurant. The program also included the presentation of two 25-year membership plaques, an address by Louis A. Vidic, executive director of the Southwestern Pennsylvania Economic Development District, and the election of directors, executive board members and officers.

Much of Matteucci's report dealt with the importance to development efforts of the Industrial Revenue Bond program and with changes in the program which will result from new federal legislation enacted this year.

The IRB program makes tax-exempt revenue bond and mortgage financing available to firms which plan industrial and commercial construction or expansion projects. It is administered in Greene County by GCID and the GCID Authority.

Through use of the IRB program over a period of years, the agencies have assisted in the financing of $48 million in construction and expansion projects which have resulted in the creation or retention of more than 1,000 jobs. "The annual payroll created by these jobs is conservatively estimated at over $10 million," Matteucci said.

During the past year, he said, capital investments of almost $7.7 million have been approved. Closings have been held on two projects totaling $575,000 which created 37 new jobs. The remaining $7.1 million may be closed before the end of the year with the resulting retention of 35 jobs and the creation of 131 new jobs.

Principal changes in the enabling legislation deal with the type of projects which can be financed through the IRB vehicle, a requirement for public hearings on each project, a requirement for separate approval by the county commissioners and perhaps the approval of municipal subdivisions in which the project is to be located, and the setting of a "sunset date" for termination of the IRB program.

Matteucci said that they will make the processing of applications more difficult and time consuming. "The sunset provision could be particularly damaging to industrial development financing since it will take away a most valuable tool," he said. "Hopefully the Dec. 31, 1986, termination date will be either extended or repealed."

Matteucci also noted that during the past year GCID invested a considerable amount of its funds in the construction of a speculative "shell" building in the Paisley Industrial Park near Carmichaels. An active promotional campaign is currently being conducted in an effort to find an industry to lease the building.

He also reported that the agency recently prepared an application for the county which resulted in obtaining a federal grant of $234,000 for improvements at the county airport which will cost $260,000. The state and county will each provide $13,000 to make up the balance.

During the business meeting, four new members were elected to the 30-member GCID board of directors. They are John R. McCall, Peter D. Rogers and Wanda Smith of Waynesburg and Arthur Palone Sr. of Dry Tavern. Palone had previously served on the board as one of the three members representing the county planning commission.

Of the 30 board members, 10 were elected to the executive committee, with new members being William R. Davis and Carter Andrew of Waynesburg.

Matteucci, a resident of Dry Tavern, was elected to his seventh consecutive term as GCID president. George K. Stennett, GCID executive director, was elected to one of two vice presidencies to succeed J. Claude Smith. Other officers are Raymond McCracken, vice president; Sally Blair, secretary; Ewing B. Pollock, treasurer; and Ralph J. Sommers Jr., assistant secretary-treasurer. Other members of the committee are Joseph D. Hart and William W. Garrison.

Matteucci presented a 25-year membership plaque to Charles I. Donley of Carmichaels, the only charter member on the board of directors, citing him for his many years "of dedicated and faithful service." Mr. Donley will be 91 on Nov. 22.

A similar plaque was presented posthumously to J. Claude Smith of Carmichaels, another charter member who died on Nov. 1. It was presented to E.L. Jacobs of Carmichaels, who in turn will present it to Mr. Smith's widow, Romaine.

In his address, Louis Vidic spoke of the many years of association between the Southwestern Pennsylvania Economic Development District and GCID. He noted the many community improvement projects which had been carried out in Greene County with Appalachian Regional funds, including sewerage systems, the county vocational-technical school, improvements at Greene County Memorial Hospital and Waynesburg College, and others.

Vidic said that Appalachian funds, which at one time amounted to between $7 and $8 million per year, have been reduced to less than $1 million, necessitating a new thrust toward optimum use of the money in serving the nine counties in the SPEDD area.

He said that emphasis is now being placed on a revolving loan program to provide low-interest loans for development projects, and on a program to encourage people with innovative ideas involving the creation of new products.

Celebrate 60 Years

William R. and Edith B. Waggett of Nemaocolin celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary at a surprise reception in their honor given by their children and grandchildren. They were married November 15, 1922, in the Waynesburg Courthouse, Waynesburg. The former Edith Lint is the daughter of the late William and Lydia Lint. Her husband is the son of the late John and Ann Waggett. They are the parents of three sons, Milroy A. of Butler, Donald L. of Carmichaels and Ronald E. of Washington; 11 grandchildren, and 17 great-grandchildren.

The Littlest Spectators

Any parade always has its littlest spectators sitting along the curb and the Veterans Day parade in Jefferson Thursday was no exception. Watching these young children can many times be as enjoyable as the parade itself. The excitement clearly shows in the faces of the two young ladies as the band leading the parade approaches with its high-stepping majorettes. But the two young men sporting their favorite head gear, which seem a little big in both cases, appear to be looking for the more serious stuff of which Veterans Day parades are made — guys in military clothes and driving military vehicles.

Injuries And The NAIA

WEXFORD — Dont look now, but the district's injury epidemic has found its way to Waynesburg.

Ray Natili, the Yellow Jackets' junior point guard and a graduate of Washington's Immaculate Conception High School, sustained a sprained ankle during a recent practice, according to Waynesburg College head coach Rudy Marisa. Natili will miss Wednesday's scrimmage at Fairmont State but could return to practice next week.

"The doctor wants him to stay off the ankle until at least Friday," Marisa said Tuesday at the annual NAIA District 18 press conference. "I don't know if there's any relationship to his (ankle) injury last year or not."

Natili also sustained a sprained ankle prior to last year's 78-48 loss at California State and was hobbled for the next several games. The Jackets went into a tailspin at the same time and never seemed to regain their momentum. Natili will be replaced in the Waynesburg lineup for the Fairmont State scrimmage by freshman Clyde Singleton.

"I want to see what Singleton can do at the point," Marisa said. "We had him at the wing (second guard position) but this may be a good opportunity to see if he can give us some depth at the point."

Natili joins this year's already prolonged injury list in the area. California State's Mike Wilson (ankle), Max Wiley (broken jaw), Barry Wright (broken wrist), Moe Yeoman (foot) and John Acois (knee) are now relegated to watching their teammates in practice. Washington & Jefferson has two players, Joe Balzer and Jerome Smith, out of action at this time.

If you're looking for a darkhorse small college basketball team this year in Western Pennsylvania, look no further than Beaver Falls.

That's where Geneva College and second-year head coach Lee Erickson has assembled an impressive list of recruits. And judging from the hometowns of the Geneva players, Erickson has spent a great deal of time on the road.

"I was only home about three nights during the entire recruiting drive. You can ask my wife about that," Erickson said. "We went out and recruited hard and got the talent we need to turn the program around. Hey, when you're 1-23 you've got to do something."

So what Erickson did was land a former McDonald's All-America player, 6-8½ junior tom rose

sports editor

Lee Stephens, a transfer from Indiana State University. Stephens will not be eligible to play for Geneva until January, and ironically his first game for the Tornados will be at Henry Memorial Center (January 5) against W&J.

"Lee was looking for a place to play basketball while at the same time he was interested in a spiritual and academic future," Erickson, a former assistant coach under Gene Smithson at Wichita State, said. "He's some player and he has aspirations of going on to play professionally or with Athletes In Action when his college career is over. But he'll be a big lift for our program this year."

Geneva will have an impressive front line, as Stephens will be flanked by freshmen giants Lee Fausneucht (6-9), Thomas Gaston (6-7) and Charles Hawthorne (6-7).

Of Geneva's 15 varsity players only four are from Pennsylvania. States represented include California, South Carolina, Kansas and Florida.

"Last year was a humbling experience," Erickson said. "After being part of a program that played in the Final Four at the Superdome and helped set NCAA attendance records and then coaching a team that goes 1-23, it makes you pretty humble. And it makes you go out and work hard to prevent it from happening again."

While Wichita State is currently serving a severe NCAA suspension, Erickson insists the Geneva players are fine students as well as athletes.

"Geneva is a very tough academic institution," he said. "Of the 26 kids I recruited to come here for our junior varsity and varsity, only two are having difficulties and those are only minor ones at this point. These kids will finish school."

"Actually it was easier to bring kids from across the country to Geneva than it was to attract local kids. Peer group pressure got to some of the local ones because Geneva hasn't had a strong program in recent years. But these kids coming in just want to be a part of a program that will be growing, they don't care what's been done in the past."

C-M, Trinity Favorites In Section 7-AAA Race

Quite possibly, the 1982-83 high school wrestling season could be one of the closest, most equal battles in a long time, especially in Section 7-AAA.

Under the new enrollment guidelines to determine class, Waynesburg and McGuffey are now in Triple-A and join Chartiers-Houston, Canon-McMillan, Peters Township, Riggold, Trinity and Upper St. Clair in what is easily one of the toughest sections in the WPIAL.

Gone from what was known as Section 6 last year are Mt. Lebanon, Chartiers Valley, Keystone Oaks and Moon.

The following is a brief look at the teams in Section 7 and a prediction of where they will finish.

Canon-McMillan

The most positive aspect about the Big Macs this season is no one was lost to graduation from last year's team. Canon-McMillan, which finished runner-up to Chartiers-Houston in the section a year ago, should be strengthened by a year's experience and a strong junior high team from last year. The Big Macs, who cruised past Baldwin, 40-15, before dropping a 34-15 decision to Connellsville in the team tournament, may very well win it this year.

Returning from last year's team are Craig Dellorso, who finished with a 33-5-1 record at the 126-pound weight class. Dellorso and junior heavyweight Sean Stopperich (27-12) were the two C-M representatives in the PIAA Championship Tournament last year.

Along with Dellorso and Stopperich, Matt Belfiore (30-7-2, 98); Rich McClain (26-12-1, 105); Dave Ainscough (16-9-0, 138); and Bill Adams (22-11-0, 155) form a good nucleus for the Big Macs. If head coach Dave Cook is able to hone the rough edges, Canon-McMillan should end Chartiers-Houston's domination of this section. Prediction: First

Trinity

The difference between Trinity and Canon-McMillan this season may not be what the two teams have but, rather, what the two teams lost to graduation. While Canon-McMillan need not replace anyone, the Hillers lost Chris Wilson (22-8-0, 112) and Mike Namie (21-4-0, 126).

Trinity has quality athletes returning in Rob Provenzano (20-6-1, 98); Sam Romano (20-8-0, 119); Tom Haight (29-6-1, 132); Rick Lobozzo (21-8-1, 145) and heavyweight Kevin Holley (22-7-2).

If Hiller head coach John Abajace can fill the spots left by Wilson and Namie, Trinity could very easily edge out the Big Macs for the section title. Prediction: Second

Chartiers-Houston

Over the past few seasons, Chartiers-Houston High School has assembled a lineup most coaches only dream about. In Phil Mary, a two-time state champion, the Bucs have probably the best lightweight wrestler in Pennsylvania. Chartiers-Houston is a two-time defending WPIAL team champion and won the PIAA team title last season.

How can you top that? In the Bucs' case, they won't. Mary should win his third state title and brother Chris, who finished last year as a WPIAL champion and a third-place winner at states with a 26-4-0 record, has the potential to add another state championship plaque to the Mary den.

Gone from this year's team are two third-place winners at Hershey, Brian Bell, who won a state championship in 1981, and Jim Vulcano, who ended last year with a 35-2 record. Bob Ammon (24-9-1) and Kurt Kesneck (27-6-1) have also departed. In Tim Gump (16-3-0, 126) and Rob Castelli (24-6, 155), the Bucs have two solid wrestlers to join the Marys. But it won't be enough. Prediction: Third

Waynesburg

Prior to this season, Waynesburg wrestled teams like Trinity, Canon-McMillan and Chartiers-Houston in exhibition matches. Now the matches count in the section and Waynesburg is going to have its hands full.

While the Red Raiders return Greg Eddy (22-8-0, 105), John Throckmorton (27-2-2, 112) and Bill Gerace (13-5-1, 138), graduation claimed last year's PIAA runnerup Todd Eddy (24-2-0, 132) along with John Kuntz (28-7-5, 145); and Ed Shriver (27-5-1), a WPIAL champion last season.

Filling those holes and advancing to a stronger conference should take Waynesburg at least one season to adjust. Prediction: Fourth

Peters Township

Once again this season, Peters Township's finish in the section depends on health. A year ago, key injuries hampered the Indians and head coach Dale Murdock hopes the same won't occur this season.

Gone from last year's team is Rich Rudek and with him, a 25-6-0 record at 185 pounds. Curt Sprouse (21-9-0, 167), who finished third in the Section 6 tourney, will replace Rudek at 185. Others to watch are John Palmer (119), Mike Sprouse and Chris Staley, who had an 11-5-0 record before breaking his foot midway through the season. Prediction: Fifth

McGuffey

The biggest problem the Highlanders face this season is increased competition in the section. McGuffey should have a solid team but may get lost in the shuffle battling Canon-McMillan, Trinity, Chartiers-Houston and Waynesburg.

Rich Gaudi, who finished last year with a 32-3-0 record at 119 pounds, graduated. Rich King (19-3-1, 105) and Brian Czulewicz (14-8-1, 145) will form the backbone of the Highlanders with heavyweight Eric Mounts, Dick Petronka (138) and Ron Sanders (126). Prediction: Sixth

W. Greene 'Schoolwork' Complete

The new addition and renovation project for West Greene Middle-Senior High School is almost complete. Only some minor electrical and plumbing work is unfinished.

Ground was broken for the $5.2 million project in April 1981 and the school was opened for middle school student occupancy this fall.

Currently, 752 students are attending school in the building. The three-story middle school addition, built on to the high school, houses students in grades six through eight. The high school was extensively remodeled and holds students in grades nine through 12.

In addition to new classrooms, features of the project include an auxiliary gymnasium, expanded science labs and enlarged music and art rooms.

The auditorium, library and cafeteria were extensively remodeled to serve both schools. Also undertaken was replacement of windows, new lighting, carpeting of classrooms to reduce noise, roof insulation to lower heating costs, sewage facilities, landscaping, updated faculty rooms and additional storage space.

"Students have shown a great deal of pride in the building, the morale is very high," high school Principal Paul Polink said of the new school.

The West Greene School Board is expected to schedule dedication ceremonies for the school at its regular meeting next week.

3 WCHS Students Attend National FFA Convention

KANSAS CITY, MO. — Three members of the Waynesburg Chapter of the Future Farmers of America attended the 55th National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 11-13.

Greg Statler, a senior; Junior Lockart, sophomore; and Robert Haines, a junior; were selected as representatives to the convention.

The three are students at Waynesburg Central High School. Robert

Born, the chapter advisor, also attended.

Over 23,000 FFA members from each state, Puerto Rico and other countries attended the convention. The boys were involved in six sessions which began Wednesday night and continued until Saturday.

Guest speakers included Secretary of Agriculture John Block, Secretary of Education Terrel Bell and Sen.

Jesse Helms of North Carolina. Celebrity guests included Dale Evans, Melissa Gilbert, Jerry Clower and Barbara Mandrell. The boys also attended the American Royal Horse Show in Kansas City.

The convention concluded with the election of the National FFA officers for the coming year. The FFA theme for 1983 is "Vocational Agriculture — Educating Through Experience."

Options Told On Expansion For Bowlby

WAYNESBURG — The Bowlby Library board of trustees held a special meeting Wednesday night to hear committee reports on the library's possible building expansion program.

Board Chairman Thomas Gerace had assigned the two committees to study four options — to sell the Bowlby house and buy a larger building, to obtain a second building for use as a branch library, to add an extension to the present building, or to do nothing.

For the study, one committee was appointed from the trustees and another from members of the Bowlby Library Association.

The committee reports revealed that both had arrived at the same conclusion — that a modest addition to the Bowlby house seemed to be the most feasible option at this time.

For the association committee, Audrey Huffman reported that a public opinion survey had been taken. A majority of responses also favor an addition to the existing structure.

She read letters from two community groups and stated that she hopes to receive opinions from other organizations in the near future.

Dr. Margaret Cipicic reported that the trustees' committee had studied the feasibility of all the options. Their first choice is to add an extension to the side of the Bowlby house, using plans prepared by the late Harold Jacobs in 1968. Factors leading to this decision included "financial accoun-ability, the current economic situation, and the sizable amount of money already invested in architectural fees."

The committee hopes that the Jacobs' plans might be updated and current construction costs determined without a great deal of extra expense. The board agreed to investigate the possibilities of this proposal, but did not make a commitment for construction. They said more concrete data would be required before a final decision can be made.

Gerace said he hoped the decision could be made final for the next association meeting in March.

Two other options will remain as possible solutions to the problem of library overcrowding if the first choice proves to be too expensive.

The board committee did investigate other buildings to house the library, but the cost involved made them less attractive options than the building addition.

The committee also looked at the Sayers-Hooper building in downtown Waynesburg as the possible location of a branch library, but did not recommend it to the board because of its deteriorated condition. The building is still under consideration, however, if financial help could be found to renovate the building, which is owned by the county.

The option of making no changes was not considered practical because the library has already outgrown its available space.

Firemen Receive Grant

The Department of Environmental Resources, Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry, presented a $2,000 matching fund grant to the Graysville Fire Company Friday. The matching grants are made available to rural fire fighting organizations to help train personnel and equipment purchases. Equipment purchased by the Graysville volunteers with the funds included 1,500 feet of hose, a portable pump, a high pressure nozzle and four sets of bunker gear. From left are, Clyde Bedilion, fire chief; Eugene Hughes, fire company member; Leo Brady, forest fire inspector; and Bill Wentzel, service forester for Greene and Washington counties.

State Farmers' Elect President

WAYNESBURG — Voting delegates at the 32nd annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) re-elected Keith Eckel of Clarks Summit to a two-year term as state president. A policy calling for a national plan to curb milk production in the face of record-high government dairy product stockpiles was adopted.

Delegates also adopted policies on a number of other state and national issues which face agriculture during the four-day convention Nov. 7-10 at Hershey. PFA is a voluntary, general farm organization representing 23,429 farm families. It is affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation, the nation's third largest general farm organization. Delegates recommended development of a nationwide plan which would provide incentives for dairymen who cut back on their herd's production and would penalize those who continue to overproduce. They also recommended that the 50 cents per hundredweight milk price deduction, scheduled to start Dec. 1, be delayed to give dairymen additional time to develop other solutions to the surplus problem.

In addition, delegates recommended that surplus government stockpiles be distributed to the needy; that all foreign markets be explored, and that a nationwide research, advertising and promotional program for milk be established, financed by a 10 cents per hundredweight assessment on milk.

PLEASE!
DON'T SHOOT
AT ME!

WARNING

Shooting at insulators can disrupt and even endanger the lives of others.
It's a criminal act, too!
Such unthinking use of firearms could leave hundreds of customers without electricity. Or worse, it could cut off power to persons dependent on life-support equipment.
That's not all! Shot up insulators mean unnecessary, expensive repairs that add to the cost of electricity.
To protect our customers and facilities, we will provide law enforcement officials with information to prosecute persons who shoot at West Penn Power equipment.
Don't surrender to temptation and commit an act that could harm others... and yourself.
