Trumka Married Secretly After Death Threat

Trumka, newly elected United Mine Workers president, married his workers president, married his fiancee in secret Saturday morning after receiving a death threat and canceled a scheduled afternoon cere-mony before 2,000 invited guests.

Although all police agencies de-nied any knowledge of the threat,guests who were at the wed-ding reception held Saturday night in Carmichaels said Sunday that heavy security was obvious and that it ap-

WAYNESBURG - Adminis-

WAYNESBURG — Administrators and department heads at Waynesburg College are in the process of streamlining and updating curriculum offerings as part of a program which is expected to save the college some $400,000 in annual operational costs, and which will include some staff reductions.

Ewing B. Pollock, chairman of the board of trustees, said the program is expected to involve administration, academic staff and non-academic staff, with position eliminations being

Another guest reported the bridal couple's car was closely checked before they got in it when they left the reception about 9:30 p.m. following a traditional bridal dance. They were escorted by state police although the state police at the Waynesburg substation said they received no escort request.

One of the firemen who was helping to ready the hall for the reception reported considerable confusion Saturday afternoon when the original band scheduled to play for the recep-tion cancelled because they also received a threat. A new band had to be found, but he did not know the name of either band.

There was a lot of nervousness, but everything was beautiful," said Katherine Vidovich, the bride's mother, who confirmed Sunday to the Associated Press that the secret ceremony was held because of a threat to

Pressed for details about the threat, she responded, "I'm not supposed to say anything."

Trumka and Barbara Vidovich, a coal miner's daughter, were to ex-change vows during a 1:30 p.m. cere-mony Saturday at St. Procopius Church in the Fayette County community of New Salem.

Although it could not be confirmed, the threats were reportedly made in three telephone calls to the pastor of St. Procopius, the Rev. Ed-ward McCullough, who married the couple in the private ceremony.

Guests were turned away from the church, however, shortly after they arrived, family members said. Immediate family members were reportedly not told the couple had already been married in a private cere-

Not even their parents were present when Trumka and Miss Vidovich were wed ahead of schedule, Mrs. Vidovich said.

The guests, told at the church that the reception would go on as planned, filed into the Carmichaels Fire Hall Saturday evening, where the newlyweds arrived about 6 p.m. to the sounds of a polka band.

The couple left for their honey-moon at 9:30 p.m. and did not disclose their destination, Mrs. Vidovich said. State police, the FBI and local police said no report of a threat was made to them.

But the Rev. Sebastian Pajdzik of St. Thomas Roman Catholic Church in Footedale said he was told that the couple had gotten married privately 'security reasons Pajdzik said he had been asked to co-celebrate the Catholic wedding Mass with the Rev. Edward McCullough. 12:40 p.m. the rectory was closed. Pajdzik said he entered the sanctuary, where about 200 people were waiting. A man asked the priest to announce that the couple already had been married.

"He said there would be no wedding and that they already were married because there was a threat on his (Trumka's) life. They wanted to kill Mr. Trumka," Pajdzik said.

The elderly priest was unable to identify the man who approached

Pajdzik said the guests were told the wedding was over, but that the reception would take place as planned at 5 p.m.

"We prayed for them and for God to save them, and everyone left," the priest said.

The bride had planned to be escorted down the aisle by her father, John Vidovich, 73, a retired coal miner who Trumka had referred to many times during the campaign along with his own father.

Parade Marshall

Selected WAYNESBURG — Greene County Treasurer Joseph R. Souders will act as the 1982 parade marshall for the annual downtown Waynesburg Christmas parade to be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 4.

The parade units will form on West

Street, proceed east on High Street and disband at Porter Street. The Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the annual event which ushers in the shopping season, selected Souders as marshall because of his service and committment to the safety of county, the state and the nation.

A member of both the American Legion and VFW, Souders served in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater during World War II. Following his discharge, he served 32 years with the Pennsylvania State Police. From 1972 until his retirement, Souders served as station commander in Waynes-

$3.5 Million Was Spent On County Highway, Bridge Improvements

UNIONTOWN — The Pennsylva-nia Department of Transportation spent over $3.5 million for bridge and highway improvements for Greene County during the recently completed construction season.

This figure represents the Department of Transportation's increased use of private contractors to repair the state's transportation system.

John E. Claypool, District 12 engineer, said, "The projects that were initiated and completed this summer represent one of the most ambitious and aggressive construction seasons experienced by the depart-

Claypool further explained the benefits of this new emphasis by stat-ing that, "Because of our increased productivity and increased use of private contractors, department work forces have been able to perform more preventative maintenance work on state highways."

Claypool noted some of these ac-tivities which included crack and joint sealing, pipe repair and replace-ment, shoulder cutting and skin patching. These types of maintenance repairs help to seal the roadway and prevent water from seeping under-neath which would eventually cause deterioration and create potholes.

heavily traveled secondary road system, the Department of Transportation developed purchase order contracts for surface treatment projects. These contracts pay private contractors for performing a seal coating process that involves the application of a bituminous material followed by a cover coat of stone. WAYNESBURG — Betty Jean Wise, 35, of Mt. Morris R.D.1, was spiracy when a Greene County criminal court jury refused to believe that her husband was acting under her directions when he set fire to a farm house she owned in Perry Township,

The not guilty verdict was re-turned early Tuesday afternoon after the jury had deliberated for just 45 The commonwealth case was built around the testimony of Willis M. Wise, 40, Greensboro R.D.1, who told police that he burned the house on May 6 this year so his wife could collect on a $49,000 insurance policy.

He said he had been living there after his wife moved out and that he agreed to burn it because his wife, from whom he was estranged, told him that if he did so she would allow on May 5 with candles she provided but was unsuccessful in burning it that day. He returned the following day, cut open a mattress, and set it on fire. By the time the blaze was spotted by neighbors and Mt. Morris firemen were called, the two-story frame dwelling was beyond saving. Mrs. Wise denied being involved in the fire in any way and also denied having any advance knowledge of what her husband planned to do. She said he had frequently threatened to harm her and the children and to burn the house in Brock when they were living there together. She also said that he had abused her and on two occasions had left her to live with other women.

Cleared Of Arson Charge In his closing argument Tuesday morning, District Attorney Charles Morris stressed the fact that Mrs. Wise had not denied giving her hus-band two candles on May 4, even though she claimed she did so be-cause there were electrical problems in the farm house. He also argued that Wise's story had credibility because his wife had allowed him to move into her Waynesburg apartment after the fire, even though she knew he had idmitted to police that he set the WAYNESBURG - The Greene County Court has been asked to ov-erturn an arbitrator's ruling that the present Wayne Township supervisors are legally bound by a labor contract executed on Nov. 1, 1981 by the former board of supervisors.

The contract with Local 286 of the Laborers' District Council of Western Pennsylvania was negotiated on behalf of nine township employees by former supervisors George Adams, Robert Simpson and John Jenkins. It was executed on Nov. 1, 1981, a few days before they were voted out of office in the general election.

The contract was to have gone into effect Jan. 1, 1982. When Charles Raber, Charles Tedrow and Kenneth Kerr took office as members of the new board on Jan. 4, they laid off all nine employees because of a lack of operating funds. They followed up that action on Jan. 29 by adopting a resolution disavowing the union contract on the grounds that it had been executed illegally.

When the union filed an unfair labor practices complaint with the Pennsylvania Labor Relations Board, the case was referred to arbitrator agreed to its provisions.

Carl F. Stoltenberg, who held a hearing in the matter. He subequently ruled that while the supervisors may not have complied with all legal requirements in negotiating the agreement, the union should not be penalized by invalidation of the contract since it had negotiated in good faith.

In appealing the ruling to the court, the present board again That the agreement was executed by a person purported to be a member of the bargaining unit and not by the supervisors.

That official minutes of the township make no reference to presentation of the agreement or authorization to execute the contract. That the township supervisors never voted at a meeting to approve or disapprove the contract.

That the contract contravenes the legislative function of the township supervisors.

Musician Has Ties To County

WAYNESBURG — Jenny Lou Fredley Harris of Somerset, a vio-linist with the Johnstown Symphony and the Westmoreland Symphony, will appear in Waynesburg as Concert Mistress when Handel's "Messiah" will be presented by the Greene County Community Chorus and the Westmoreland Symphony Orchestra on Sunday, Dec. 5. "The Messiah" will be presented in the First Method-Church on Richhill Street in Waynesburg at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Harris is the daughter of Theodore Fredley and the late Mrs. Fredley, both former Waynesburg residents. A graduate of Waynesburg High School, Mrs. Harris studied with the late Ellen Reid Carter a former violin teacher at Waynesburg College. She graduated from Western College for Women at Oxford, Ohio as an applied music major. While in college she played with the Dayton Symphony. In addition to her work with the two symphonies, Mrs. Harris gives private violin lessons.

Mrs. Harris is the wife of the late John M. Harris. They are the parents of three children.

I'll Be Glad To"

If you ask people about Mrs. Turner, they will tell you that she is one of the happiest women in town. Yet not so long ago she was feeling pretty sorry for herself. Life seemed such a humdrum affair. As an accomplished musician, she had dreams of the concert stage, but marriage and children had changed all that. Somehow it didn't seem fair!

Then one day, a friend persuaded her to go to church. The sermon happened to be about the ingredients that make a full and happy life. The things the minister said struck home and, the next week, she found herself back in church again. Then several weeks later Mr. Turner went along, and next, the

Now Mrs. Turner is still "just a housewife," but is she dissatisfied with her role? Look at her face and see for yourself! It took the Church to show her that she already possessed all the tools needed for fulfillment and happiness, if she would but use them. Now, she

school calendar with only two vaca-tion days — Thanksgiving and Memo-rial Day — was approved by the West-Greene School Board at its meeting

Tuesday night.

The action came despite a student petition with 390 names asking for two additional days at Christmas. Stu-dents Kelly Yurt and Kitty Crowley presented the petition and asked that they be given off the Friday before and the Monday after Christmas.

But only board member Tom Braddock voted for the extra days. The calendar allows for six make-up days in case of school closings due to adverse weather and June 30 as the last day of school.

The board also failed to approve using five days for scheduling parentteacher conferences, meetings on curriculum, long range planning or in-service days.

Superintendent Elliott LeFaiver requested the time and noted that under the Act 80 Amendment, the district would be allowed the extra days without a loss of subsidy even though the district would fall below the 180-day instructional period because of a prolonged teachers strike.

Two motions made by Anne Bower requesting the time from the Department of Education - one motion for five days and the other for three were defeated

A number of people, including students, attended the meeting to express concern over the possibility of the board hiring a secondary English teacher and eliminating the music program on the elementary level.

Several people questioned why the board would look for another English teacher when Mrs. Karen Lees, a permanent substitute in that position, has been with the district for over a year and has been judged well-qualified by the administration.

Several students carried signs that read "Instead of replacing our teachers replace the school board they're destroying our future," and 'Students speak out, keep Mrs.

Lees."
Mrs. Lees, who was interviewed for the position along with two other candidates, said "I got the distinct impression that the decision was made before I walked into the room."

Arden Melzer noted that Mrs. Lees' husband, Bob, and Ron Jesso, a music teacher, were both members of the teacher's negotiating team. "I can't help but wonder if these two positions haven't been targeted because of some ill will," he said.

But Mrs. Bower, who headed the board's negotiating team, commented, "I personally do not feel there was any grudge," and noted the board was hiring the person deemed best qualified for the position.

Moving UMW Headquarters Idea With Dubious Merit

The idea of moving the United Mine Workers' international headquarters out of Washington, D.C., first proposed several years ago when Arnold Miller was campaigning for UMW presidency, has surfaced once again.

One of Miller's campaign platforms was to move the union's headquarters to some location in the heart of the coalfields presumably in West Virginia - to make it more accessible to the rank and file and to put union officials in closer touch with what the average miner was thinking. After the election was over, there was some talk about carrying out the pledge but nothing ever came of it.

This time the suggestion has come from state Rep. Roger Raymond Fischer of Washington, who is urging UMW President-Elect Richard Trumka to consider a move to Washington, Pa. He points out that it would not only put the headquarters in the heart of the coalfields, but that it would also be close to corporate headquarters of many of the companies which own mines as well as boosting the economy of southwestern Pennsylvania.

Since Trumka is from Greene County, it might seem that he would favor the idea, but that is not necessarily the case. In fact, he was annoyed that Fischer had introduced the idea through the news media without first contacting him about it.

Certainly southwestern Pennsylvania is not the only major center of coal mining in the nation and it would be difficult to justify its selection over other areas with an equally valid

Contact with locals throughout the nation is maintained through district offices, which in the main has proven to be an effective system.

On top of this, as Trumka has pointed out, such a major change could be carried out only with the approval of union delegates to a constitutional convention. The next such convention will not be held before the latter part of next year.

Above all, the United Mine Workers is international in scope with an active national legislative and lobbying arm. Its Washington, D.C. headquarters is vital to these efforts, and logically it should provide the home of the international offices.

Shows Off Facilities

CARMICHAELS — It was the day after Thanksgiving, and there was something else going on besides the Pitt-Penn State football game — an open house being held by the Cumberland Township

During the morning hours Friday there were people touring the township's maintenance garage and looking at the equipment on display and walking through the municipal building. But by noon, kickoff time for the football game, the only people to be seen around the township facilities were William "Bud" Schifko, Nick Maddich and William Groves, the three township supervisors.

The open house was held to give township residents a chance to see the township facilities and equipment as well as to boast that all is paid for with the exception of the final $20,000 payment to be made next year on the municipal building. The municipal building, which opened in 1979, provides offices for the township, supervisors, police and a meeting room.

A large maintenance garage adjacent to the municipal building was completed in 1981 at a cost of $65,000 houses the township equipment. All maintenance on the equipment is done by the township.

Faces From The Past-Do You Recognize Them?

Gone, but not forgotten, is the old Reeses Mill west of Waynesburg which was recently razed to make way for the new railroad spur to coal mines in the western part of Greene County. Material from the mill has been stored on a farm in Fayette County by a private contractor.

The photograph of the old Waynesburg & Washington narrow gauge railroad train leaving Waynesburg on one of its four daily trips to Washing-ton which appeared in last week's Republican had more significance than just recalling pleasant memo-ries for those who lived in Waynes-

Despite the ridicule sometimes heaped on the old Waynie by those who insisted on cmparing it with the standard broad-gauge lines in other parts of the nation, the Waynie, as it was called by many of its patrons, played a significant role in the history of the town which was its southern terminus.

On arrival it Washington, it provided a link to Pittsburgh, its nearest large city, and to Wheeling and the interior of West Virginia.

Originally conceived and financed almost entirely by Greene County residents and institutions, it had a truly dedicated board of directors headed by its long-time president, the late J. Warren Shull, who in his personal appearance was the character-

Sara E. Nutt, who was ization of the head of a corporation. His capability was much more than skin deep, however, and he was highly respected in the railroad incar being backed from the garage by Mary Nyswaner, state police dustry for his judgement and knowledge of the entire scope of the W&W's The incident occurred operations.

Running a railroad at that time is said to have required a greater knowledge of transportation than in this day of the coast-to-coast truck lines which have grabbed such a large share of the transportation dollar.

The Waynie not only served its patrons well but was also among the most profitable operations of the vast Pennsylvania system when it was taken over by that line in terms of the percentage of return for capital in-

It was organized by forward-looking land owners and owners of the vast deposits of Pittsburgh Coal that underlies Greene County. It's in-teresting to note that while the earlier mines were built in the eastern part of the county to provide access to lower-cost river transportation to Pitts-burgh steel mills, railroads are just now being built in the western part of the county as its coal begins to be developed.

Gradually, of course, the memories of the old Waynesburg & Washington Line will be forgotten, but the manner in which it served its patrons will still deserve to be preserved. Several villages, each with its own cluster of homes and families, grew up along the 28 miles through which it rounded the hairpin curves between Washington and Waynesburg. The one at the midway point was Dunns Station, near the Washington-Greene County line, and was the most beneficial to farmers

The best-known stip along the rout was the one at Chamber's Mill, some the large mill dam served as a public swimming pool for residents of Washington and to a lesser degree for persons from Waynesburg during the summer months.

The W&W ran right beside the mill and dam, and in summer months special trains were often run out of Washington to the mill dam on Memorial Day, Fourth of July and Labor

In its long history as an outlet for Greene Countians to Pittsburgh and thence to other cities, the Waynes-burg brought many notable people in and out of Waynesburg. These in-cluded former president Howard Taft when he was on a lecture tour; Will Rogers at the start of his career as a public speaker and actor and then known as the Voice of America; William Jennings Bryan on lecture tours between his races for the presidency, and baseball stars such as the late Hans Wagner before his later-day

Hans Wagner before his later-day visits by automobile to Golden Oaks Park at Rogersville.

Tragedy dimmed the last run of the Waynie from Washington when the conductor on the last regular passenger run fell dead as a special train carrying celebrators rounded the bend at the bottom of South Rich-bill Street hill Street.

Freight runs were held after that, but the burdgeoning of the automobile had killed passenger traffic and brought a definite end to what older residents of Waynesburg will always regard as a romantic era in the history of Greene County

At a recent women's club meeting, the reading of the minutes was the most interesting part of the evening. This usually means that the remainder of the meeting was inordinately dull but, in this case, the secretary used the minutes to make the confrontational shock tactics and irrlevancies sometimes seen on TV talk shows.

She reported on an excursion the club memberrs had taken to Chicago. They were in the audience of the Phil Donahue Show there, and the secretary seemed to have mixed feelings about its success.

The club members listened to the show's guests talking about some kind of new life style and something they call relationships," reported the secretary, "then we were invited to ask questions. At first, the club members were shy about asking questions, since none of us could understand anything the guests were talking about. The host seemed to think we should know -all about it, but we didn't. All we knew was that hot tubs or something like that were mixed up

The host next brought out a doctor who tried to explain the guests' problems to us, but the guests didn't like the doctor and started yelling at

One club member got up and asked if they were kidding about their life-style, if that was what you called it, and they started yelling at her. The host said they wanted her to know that they were serious about what-ever it was, and that they felt their life style was the wave of the future— or else a throwback to the past. We weren't sure which.

"The doctor said that we must try to understand where the guests were coming from, if they were ever to be helped, and the guests started yelling at him again. We were not sure why, but they didn't seem to want to be helped.

'A club member asked the guests if they were coming from California and we all got a laught out of that, but e guests didn't seem to think it funny. Californians are touchy about what you say about their state, I guess. The doctor said he was from California, too, and he wanted us to know that now everybody out there was as crazy as these two.

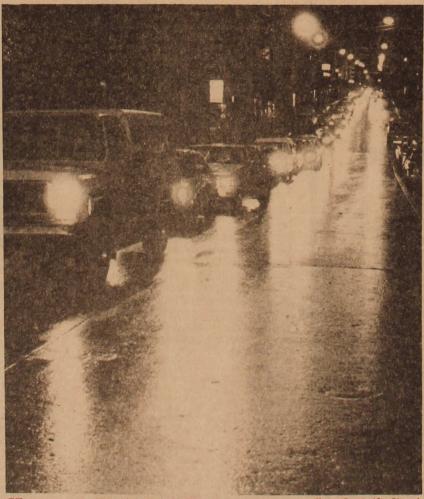

"After the yelling died down, another club member asked if the guests had told their mothers they going on television to talk things they shouldn't. The guests said their mothers knew and approved, and we got another laught out of that.
"One member got up and said her

"Another told the guests they Another told the guests they should go out and get an honest job and forget what they're doing now, whatever it was. They yelled at her and called her some names.

"The club president then stood up and asked what good the host thought it did to have guests on that nobody agreed with, and have all this yelling instead of intelligent conversation. CSC Weaves Web Of Defeat For Jackets

By Tom Rose, O-R Sports Editor

CALIFORNIA - Michael Wilson has found the perfect cure for a sore

Score 30 points in a basketball

And that's exactly what Wilson did here Wednesday night, stepping from the bench after missing a practice to lead California State to a 77-69 victory over arch-rival Waynesburg College at Hamer Hall.

The 6-6 sophomore forward was simply spectacular, especially in the second half as he scored 20 of his points with thunderous inside play.

"Wilson made a difference but I can't believe he had 30 points," Cal State head coach Tim Loomis said. "To me he played an average game, but then again I'm around him every-

The game was hardly average to Wilson, who admitted he was a bit tentative at the start of the game after receiving a painful knee in the chest in Monday night's 65-63 loss at Fairmont (W.Va.) State.

"Waynesburg is a big rivalry," he said of his decision to play. "I was afraid I'd get hit in the chest but after a while I just forgot about my injury problems. This was probably my best game so far this year.

While Wilson was having a great deal of success, both teams were experiencing turnover and foul prob-lems. The teams traded 15 turnovers apiece in the first half, with Waynesburg (now 1-1) committing five crucial mistakes on its last five offensive possessions of the half.

And the Jackets didn't handle things much better in the second half, committing 15 additional turnovers while Cal State (2-2 overall) had nine in the final 20 minutes.

'Cal State played well as a team," Waynesburg head coach Rudy Marisa "I really believe all that recruiting talk Tim (Loomis) has made is accurate. They're bigger than us, Belko was in there for the duration," Loomis said. "Against any team that is predominantly a zone defense team, Belko will stay in there. He can shoot, and they were

Waynesburg jumped off to a quick id in the fast-paced and foulplagued first half. Jacket senior cofirst 11 points as Waynesburg raced to an 11-4 lead. But the Vulcans, after a timeout, made a defensive adjust-ment and took the lead for the first time on a long jumper by Belko (19-17) with 9:52 left in the first half. Meanwhile the Jackets were held scoreless for nearly five minutes dur-ing the CSC 11 point run. The teams then traded baskets and turnovers for the next seven minutes until Waynes-burg assumed a 37-32 advantage with 2:27 left. That's when the Jackets committed five straight errors and Cal State rallied to tie the game 37-37 at halftime.

Wilson began to find his niche in second half as CSC began to slowly pull away. Waynesburg closed to within five points (59-54) with 7:30 left to play but a pair of acrobatic baskets by Wilson and three points from Moe Yeoman settled the issue.

"I wasn't worried about the team losing its confidence after that loss at Fairmont," Loomis said. "This is a mature, confident basketball team, that's the difference from this time last year. Waynesburg made a run but then — boom, boom — it was over.

"I feel we played our worst game in our last three, maybe it was Waynesburg's defense, but our in-tensity and aggressiveness wasn't there. But I think it's a good sign when your team plays poor but still beats a heck of a veteran team."

Marisa was also looking for good signs in the Waynesburg locker room. It could be found in the scoring of Tyler with 22 points and sophomore forward Paul Stanley with 18. But the Jackets received only two points from co-captain Tim Walker, who even tually fouled out of the game.

"We put a lot of emphasis on him not fouling out," Marisa said. "It's ironic that we were devastated that

Cranking Up The Season

By Joe Tuscano, O-R Sports Staff

McDONALD - There was no snow on the ground or ice on the roads. Two good signs wrestling season was still a good ways off. Ah, but it's not nice to fool

Mother Nature.

For inside Fort Cherry High School's gymnasium, the mat was rolled out and the season began in earnest, even if it didn't seem like it outside. While most Fort Cherry fans were just having the affects of a long successful football having the effects of a long, successful football season wear off, somehow wrestling snuck in.

And while it's bad enough to start the season so early, it's even worse losing early, which the Rangers did, 36-20, to Jeff-Morgan here in an exhibition match Wednesday evening.

This match marked the head coaching debut of Duane Day and, even though the evening ended in defeat, he was quite happy to get his feet wet in western Pennsylvania wrestling.

"It was hard to picture the first night," said Day, who replaced Ron Dellapina in September. "It felt pretty good though." pretty good though."

Both teams showcased young wrestlers as only six of the 24 wrestlers were seniors. Jeff-Morgan started a freshman, sophomore, seven juniors and three seniors while Fort Cherry had three seniors, two juniors and seven sophomores in the starting

"We were a little sloppy," said J-M head coach Tony Barbetta. "We expected a close match and that's what we got."

The Rockets used a mixture of youthful inexperience and talented veterans to open a 21-9 lead. Sophomore John Jento (98) and his brother, Jeff (105), opened the match with back-to-back pins to push J-M up 12-0. After Fort Cherry's Brad Wurtzer (112) pinned Del Nyswaner, senior Dan Basinger (119) registered a pin and junior Alan Yanak (132) an 11-4 decision to extend the Rocket lead to 21-9.

"The Jentos really did a good job," Barbetta d. "We expected both kids to win but not by

Fort Cherry rallied through the middle weights, picking up a pin and superior decision to close the gap to 21-20. The Rangers' Mark Baldigowski (138) got his first pin of the year against Jeff Hill and teammate Rick Kaposy took Jerry Nelson 20-6.

The Rockets repelled Fort Cherry's comeback by capturing the final four matches. Senior Robbie Knight (155) won a hard-fought decision over Dan Whoolery while teammates Brian Virgin (167) and Tim Starostanko (185) also took decisions. Heavyweight Clay Behm pinned senior Scott Bish at 3:28 of the match to finish Jeff-Morgan's scoring.

"Our lightweights did a real good job," said Barbetta. "You know we lost five starters and we had two of them WPIAL champions. That's hard to replace at a small school like Jeff-Morgan."

The Rockets will have their hands full this season in Section 8-AA and Barbetta views the race for the top two spots as too close to call.
"I think we can compete with anyone there," he said. "I don't think we're the team to beat. There's still West Greene, Beth-Center and Mapletown too. It's just going to depend on who's sick and who's WAYNESBURG — The sliding 2-3 zone defense is a way of life at Waynesburg College. It is as expected

Although just one of a variety of defenses coach Rudy Marisa used here Saturday night, the familiar 2-3 zone was the most impressive.

The Yellow Jackets held Wheeling College scoreless for the initial 4:54 of the first half and the opening 5:06 of the second half of their basketball game at College Gym, helping themselves to a season-opening, 68-53 victory.

Waynesburg scored 15 points dur-ing its periods of defensive frugality; its final margin of victory, not coincidentally, was 15 points.

But if the Yellow Jackets' 2-3 zone getting better with age, it comes as a surprise to Marisa.

"To tell you the truth I wasn't aware of that. I wasn't watching the clock to that extent," he said. "Ironically, our guys were getting restless thinking we weren't doing good enough defensively at the start. They wanted to do more pressure stuff; they wanted to get out of the zone and do something different.

"I do remember looking up one time and saying, 'Hey, we're doing well. Why are we in a hurry to change?' I think at that point they had six points and our guys were getting restless like we were doing something wrong. I said, 'Let's not panic.' ''

The Cardinals (1-1) rebounded from an early 6-0 deficit to take an 11-10 lead with 12:22 remaining in the first half. But Waynesburg's 9-0 surge at the start of the second half gave it a 37-24 lead and forced Wheeling to play

"I can only answer for the first couple minutes," said first-year Cardinals coach Jim O'Brien, unable to pinpoint the reason Wheeling went exactly one-quarter of the game with-out scoring. "We obviously had the out scoring. We obviously had the jitters — we were playing away for the first time this year. We just weren't executing. I think we were a bit intimidated in the beginning of the

"They (Waynesburg) are a very, very talented group of individuals despite not being the biggest team in the world. There was really no way of preparing our kids for the type of kids were physically intimidated, but they weren't expecting that caliber of

After committing nine turnovers and converting just two of eight free throws for a four-point halftime lead, the Yellow Jackets used nine second half points from senior guard Tim Walker, eight from sophomore for-ward Paul Stanley and six each from junior guard Ray Natili and senior forward Tim Tyler to break the game

"Team play — that was an objec-e," Marisa said when asked what he liked about the victory. "I feel comfortable, at least after Game One, that we sincerely felt good about one another. We realize there are no significant laurels for individuals to achieve on this level. Any attention you get is through team effort."

Marisa got a good look at his team

Saturday, using all 10 players on his bench. Freshmen Keith Coleman and Clyde Singleton scored four and two points, respectively, while junior transfer Ernie Mills added six.

WAYNESBURG - It certainly wasn't a match made in heaven.
But at least Waynesburg College's wrestling team gained something it didn't have before Tuesday night's match against the University of Pittsburgh.

to some breaks. It's pretty hard to find anything you like when you're handled that way. But they were fairly spunky. We're about 20 percent where we'd like to be and heading up. I think we'll be real competitive. We just have to give them some time." It's hard to imagine that the Panthers (1-0) would have anything to gain from wrestling an NAIA school, but it's what head coach Rande Stottlemuse redeed. tlemyer ordered. And he doesn't resay they wrestled the University of Pittsburgh."

The Yellow Jackets were shut out The Yellow Jackets were shut out until the 177-pound bout when Brian Ross won by forfeit, while their other two points came when Phil Gifford (190), a two-time NAIA national runnerup, battled to a 6-6 tie with Pitt's Kurt Karanovich. Gifford held a 6-4 lead before Karanovich scored a reverse with 12 coords resorting in the state of the state verse with 13 seconds remaining in

There were no breaks to be had for the Yellow Jackets from the start. Freshman Rich Kubistek (118) lost a 19-0 superior decision to Kyle Nellis and then Gary Stralko, who led 7-4 after two periods, suffered a slim 10-9 defeat to Rich Esswein at 126. Accenting just the front door or a large window instead of outlining the entire house with lights will save energy, too. Also, remember to decorate safely. Inspect all decorative light sets for frayed wires, broken insulation, loose sockets. Unplug tree lights before going to bed or leaving the house. Use lighting sets designed for outside when decorating outdoors. Waterproof the connections by covering with electrical tape or plastic wrap.
