McGilton Given Sentence

WAYNESBURG — Paul A. McGilton, 32, Waynesburg, was sentenced Friday in Greene County Court to serve a weekend sentence of four-to-23 months in the county jail.

McGilton was convicted last June for recklessly endangering and simple assault following a non-jury trial before Judge Glenn Toothman, who recently refused his application for a new trial.

The jail sentence was imposed despite a plea by defense attorney John Stets that his client be given a suspended sentence.

"By virtue of the lesser charges against him, Mr. McGilton should not be treated any different from Michael Fuller," he said.

Patrolman Fuller fired the shot which fatally injured Celia McGilton on Jan. 16, 1982. After being tried and found guilty of involuntary manslaughter in March of last year, he was fined $1,500 and placed on probation for six to 12 months.

In rejecting the plea for probation, Toothman said he was basing his sentence on the fact that McGilton's actions created the situation which resulted in the fatal shooting.

"Your actions that day set in motion a tragic course of events that resulted in the death of your wife," he said.

Following imposition of the sentence, Stets said he would appeal both the conviction and the sentence to State Superior Court. He was given permission to post an appeal bond which will permit McGilton to remain free until the appellate court review is completed.

The Jan. 16 incident came about when Fuller and another borough patrolman went to the McGilton apartment in Waynesburg in response to a complaint about "a man with a gun." Fuller claimed that when they got there, McGilton came to the door of the apartment with a shotgun in his hand. Fuller fired two shots. One of the bullets went through a wall and struck Mrs. McGilton in the heart.

Stets said he expected to base his Superior Court appeal on the same points he made in his unsuccessful attempt to gain a new trial for his client.

One of the principal points was that McGilton's shotgun was not loaded and that pointing an unloaded gun can be subject to a penalty no higher than simple assault.

He also contended the court should have granted a change of venue motion on the grounds that the incident had polarized the community and pretrial publicity made it impossible for him to obtain an impartial trial in Greene County.

He also will object to a part of the presentencing report prepared for Toothman, in that it made reference to two police investigations of McGilton on possible assault charges since no charges were ever filed.

"Mr. McGilton has no prior record of criminal charges against him and to bring to the court's attention that he was a suspect 10 years ago, where no charges were ever made, goes beyond the pale," Stets told the court.

In pleading for a suspended sentence, Stets said the court was justified in giving Fuller a suspended sentence and McGilton should receive the same consideration.

Firefighters at Greensboro house fire Thursday morning.

Wood-Burning Stove Is Blamed For Blaze

GREENSBORO — Fire officials blame an overheated wood-burning stove for a fire that heavily damaged a large house in this eastern Greene County rivertown Thursday January 28.

The large two-story, nine-room brick house, dating back to the early days of the town, is owned and occupied by William L. Kelley and his wife, Meccie.

Greensboro firefighters received the call at 9:45 a.m. Fire Chief Edward Helmick said the fire burned up the wall from the stove located in a first-floor family room and into the second floor and attic. Helmick said firefighters were able to contain the fire to one section of the house.

Fire gutted two second-floor bedrooms above the family room as well as the attic area. Helmick said the family room and adjoining rooms in that section of the house received some fire damage, while the remainder of the house suffered moderate water and smoke damage.

Although Helmick is certain the overheated wood-burning stove caused the fire, Kelley thought otherwise saying, "I don't think it (the fire) started from the stove. I think it was wiring. I've been using that stove and chimney for years," he said as firefighters poured water on his home.

"When I noticed the smoke, it was burning up the wall," Kelley said, pointing to the house. I tried to turn on a light to see through the smoke, but it wouldn't work."

The house was constructed in the early days of Greensboro when it was a thriving river town. Helmick said they were hampered in fighting the fire by the oak ceiling beams in the house. The section of the house that was damaged once served as a doctor's office.

Greensboro volunteer firemen were assisted by the Bobtown Volunteer Fire Co. No estimate of damage was made.

Receives Honor

WEST MIDDLESEX — Dave Clelland of Greenville, a Waynesburg native, was inducted into the Mercer County Hall of Fame during ceremonies held Saturday, January 29 in Sheraton Inn, West Middlesex.

An all-around athlete at Waynesburg High School and Waynesburg College, Clelland began his coaching career at Waynesburg High School in 1955 and 18 years later retired with 229 wins, only 22 losses and one tie.

While at Waynesburg, his teams compiled a 58-8 record. He accepted the Greenville position in 1959 and coached five unbeaten teams while winning 171 and losing only 14 matches.

During his career, Clelland coached five state champions, six state runners-up and 19 regional champions. Over 60 of his wrestlers accepted college scholarships on the basis of their wrestling abilities.

He was inducted into the Pennsylvania Wrestling Coaches Hall of Fame in 1976.

Also honored at the banquet was Waynesburg College wrestler Richard Scheuermann who placed in the NAIA wrestling tournament last year to gain All-America honors.

Featured speaker was Howard (Bo) Schnellberger, head football coach at Miami University in Florida. Guest speakers were Paul Householder, an outfielder for the Cincinnati Reds, and John Stuper, pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jim Rooker, Pirate broadcaster, was master of ceremonies.

Attending the ceremonies from the Waynesburg area were the honoree's brother, George Clelland of Garrison, and John Ketchum, a former wrestler for Clelland at Waynesburg High School.

State OKs Waynesburg College Program For Nursing

WAYNESBURG — The Pennsylvania State Board of Nurse Examiners has approved Waynesburg College's application to establish a bachelor's degree program in nursing.

The state board approved a feasibility study at its January meeting that outlined the need for regis-

J&L Recalls 230 Miners

NEMACOLIN — Jones and Laughlin had some good news and some bad news about its mine in Nemaacolin.

Over 230 miners were called back to work Tuesday and are expected to work five days a week. However, another 116 miners were not recalled. The steel company furloughed 350 men last Dec. 11 citing economic conditions.

A company spokesman told the Observer-Reporter Tuesday afternoon the retained miners would work as long business conditions permit. Recall of the 116 furloughed miners would also depend on the economic climate according to Margo Barnes, J&L public relations director.

The company is currently mining four sections of coal on both the daylight and second shifts but there is no coal production on the midnight to 8 a.m. shift when only construction and general maintenance work is done.

According to Cy Rechichar, president of UMWA Local 6290, the company plans to mine anywhere between 42 and 45,000 tons of clean coal each month, or about 450,000 tons annually.

Opened in 1918, employment at the facility has been dwindling since last September when 57 miners were not called back following a layoff.

State Approves Ambulance Loan

HARRISBURG — State Rep. Bill DeWeese has announced that the Richhill Township Volunteer Fire Co. has been awarded a $15,600 loan to help purchase a new ambulance.

DeWeese said the money is being channeled through the auspices of the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency's (PEMA) Volunteer Loan Assistance Program.

DeWeese was appointed several years ago to be a legislative liaison to PEMA by the Speaker of the House and in this capacity has been involved in the administration of this and other public service projects.

DeWeese explained that the volunteer fire company's 1972 van ambulance is severely deteriorated due to road conditions in the service area. Consequently, the fire company has ordered a 1983 van ambulance equipped with an ambulance-to-hospital telephone.

The new ambulance will cost $31,329. The fire company will provide the amount over and above the loan.

"I'm pleased to see money from this program coming into the district," DeWeese said. "There are no more worthy organizations than volunteer fire companies. When they're willing to work hard and put up some of their own money, I'm especially glad the state can also inject some revenue into the program. It's good to see this money going toward enhancing their ability to serve the public."

tered nurses in Fayette, Greene and Washington counties and outlined the college's ability to offer baccalaureate nursing education.

Dr. Wellington Friday, who now leads efforts to develop and establish a nursing program at the college, called the board's approval, "The first step toward establishing a nursing program at Waynesburg College."

"The State Board of Nurse Examiners adheres to very rigid standards in determining which colleges and universities will be permitted to offer approved nursing programs," Friday said. "The college trustees voted last September to establish a Department of Nursing. Our next major steps are to appoint a nursing director and then develop the nursing curriculum," he added.

Friday, vice president for institutional planning, research and program development, said the feasibility study showed the need for baccalaureate prepared nurses in the tri-state area will become increasingly greater for a variety of reasons.

"Nursing has become a very complex field," Friday said, "and the American Nurses Association has strongly recommended that by 1985, all those entering the field of nursing should be required to hold bachelor's degrees in nursing. This gives impetus to programs like the one being initiated by Waynesburg College."

In approving the college feasibility study and proposal, the State Board of Nurse Examiners agreed there are adequate facilities, resources and support for such a program both within the college and in the local community, and there is both a need and demand for it."

Funding to establish a bachelor's program in nursing was provided under a Title III grant received by the college last fall. Title III funds totaling $445,000 for the 1982-83 year, also helped the college launch its new master of business administration degree and a visual communication major.

The degree program in nursing should be added to the Waynesburg College curriculum by the fall of 1984, Friday said. In the meantime, he said, several prospective students have expressed an interest in the college's pre-nursing program.

Under the pre-nursing curriculum, students satisfy the Core Curriculum courses required of all bachelor's degree students at the college.

Chamber Elects New Officers

WAYNESBURG — Walter Christ-opher of Love's Interior Decorating was re-elected president of the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce at its board of directors meeting this week.

Other officers elected were Teresa Ficara of McDonald's Restaurant, vice president; John Mariner of First Federal Savings and Loan Association, treasurer; and Joseph Ottoviani of the Waynesburg Branch of First National Bank and Trust Co. of Washington, secretary. Barbara Loeper is the non-elected executive secretary for the chamber. The elected terms are for one year.

In other business, the board appointed a committee to study the rental housing situation in the Waynesburg area. Reason for the study would be to determine the feasibility of expanding the number of apartments available.

The board authorized committee members to accept an invitation from Cardinal Industries Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, to tour its facilities. The company is a manufacturer of multi-family housing. The committee expects to work on the project in cooperation with George K. Stennett, executive director of Greene County Industrial Developments Inc.

County Youth's Design Selected For City Mural

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Clean City Committee has selected the design of a Rices Landing youth for a 485-foot mural that will decorate the Department of Public Works Building in the Strip District.

The design of Scot Allen Lippencott, a student at the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, was chosen over 75 other entries from Art Institute students.

He is the son of Allan Lippencott of Waynesburg and Elizabeth Goslin of Rices Landing. He is a 1982 graduate of Jefferson-Morgan High School.

The design was submitted to Jane Hensel, instructor in "Fifth Quarter Visual Communications," as a class assignment.

The mural will wrap around three sides of the Public Works Building at 26th and Liberty Avenue. The campaign motto, "Pittsburgh Is Our Home — Let's Clean House," along with the official logo, appears on the 285-foot front and the 100-foot side wall sections.

A light blue background supports the vibrant rainbow which widens and contracts to attract the eye of passers-by.

When asked about his design, the 19-year-old artist said, "I wanted a flowing effect because of traffic patterns around the building. The increasing and diminishing width of the rainbow gives vitality to the design and provides more interest to the passing motorist."

Lippencott's design for an official logo for the Greene Academy was chosen as a winner last year.

Mayor Richard S. Caliguiri complimented Lippencott on his design to help reinforce the city's campaign to "clean house."

Negotiations are underway to enlist the Professional Sign Painters Union to apply the paint donated by Color Your World Inc. for the mural.

The design selection committee included the representatives from the Pittsburgh Clean City Committee, Color Your World, the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, the Department of Public Works and the Department of Parks and Recreation.

County, State Police Pact Makes Way For 1911 Plan

WAYNESBURG — An agreement with the Pennsylvania State Police which will lead to implementation of a 1911 emergency telephone system for Greene County was executed by the county commissioners at their meeting Thursday, January 27.

The commissioners also agreed to consider a proposal by the Pennsylvania Economy League that an economic impact study be made to bolster the county's long campaign for the construction of a Waynesburg bypass and upgrading of Route 21 as part of a Tri-State Corridor proposal to provide a major east-west highway through the county.

The agreement with state police will clear the way for installation of a telephone system which will enable all residents of Greene County to obtain police, fire, ambulance and other emergency services by calling one number — 1911. Present plans call for the system to be in place and operating by April or May of this year.

Details, which were worked out by the Greene County 1911 Committee, call for the existing countywide police communications system, which is located in the state police station in Morrisville, to be expanded to include the entire spectrum of emergency services. Calls coming into the center would be relayed to the appropriate police department, fire company or ambulance service.

While the 911 system is used in many other parts of the state, this would be the first one to be operated under supervision of the state police.

Under terms of the contract, the county would continue to pay the salaries of the five full-time civilian radio dispatchers who currently work with state police dispatchers to provide countywide communications capabilities for municipal police departments. The state police officer commanding the Waynesburg substation would continue to be responsible for administration and supervision of the program.

Following execution of the agreement by appropriate state officials, the county 1911 committee will be in a position to arrange for the Mid-Penn Telephone Corp. to install the system.

James Eichenlaub, regional director for the Pennsylvania Economy League, and two members of the league's Greene County board of directors, William Nalitz and Charles Baily Jr., met with the commissioners to discuss the status of the long-proposed Waynesburg bypass. They suggested the need for a study on the impact which construction of a major east-west highway, including the bypass, would have on the economy of the county, particularly in terms of spurring development of western Greene County.

Eichenlaub pointed out that while traffic counts have been made in Morrisville to bolster the argument that the bypass is needed to reduce traffic congestion through Waynesburg, no study has ever been made to support the contention that a major east-west highway is needed because of expected coal-related development west of Waynesburg.

"Economic impact is given major consideration when the state plans new highways, and we feel this study would provide a necessary link in documentation of the need for a bypass," he said. "It could be vital in persuading the Department of Transportation to restore the project to the 12-year highway plan."

George K. Stennett, executive director of Greene County Economic Developments, Inc., who has spearheaded county campaigns for approval of the bypass, said he believed the proposal had merit.

"I agree that we have to have some economic facts if we are going to interest anyone in our project," he said.

Eichenlaub said, using a preliminary estimate, it would cost about $15,000 to prepare the study, with 75 percent of the expense being borne by the Economy League and its sponsors. The county would be responsible for 25 percent of the cost, which it was suggested could be financed out of Liquid Fuels appropriations the county receives from the state.

The commissioners agreed to consider a formal proposal from the League for the study, and suggested coal companies be approached to see if they would support the study. They pointed out that Consolidation Coal Company's new mines in Richhill Township would benefit from the highway and might be willing to assist with the cost of making the study.

In other action, the commissioners formally endorsed a plan by Greene Health Care, a private partnership, to construct a 120-bed nursing home in Franklin Township. County endorsement is necessary because financing arrangements for the $3.5 million facility will be made through the state's Industrial Revenue Bond program, which is available for projects which are expected to provide new employment.

A resolution in support of continuation of the federal revenue sharing program beyond its scheduled termination on Sept. 30 of this year was adopted. The county receives some $450,000 a year under the program.

"(revenue sharing) provides the most visible local return of federal tax dollars, allowing municipalities to tailor spending of the money to local needs," the resolution states.

James Kirby of Carmichaels, president of the Greene County Chapter of Abate, requested rent-free use of two buildings at the fairgrounds for a benefit concert on behalf of the county Emergency Medical Services program. He said that Abate, which is a group of motorcyclists, hope to hold the concert sometime in March.

The commissioners asked Kirby to meet with fairgrounds manager William Whoolery as to availability of the buildings, indicating that they will act on the request after they have received a recommendation from Whoolery.

Missing Man Found Dead In Wreckage

POLAND MINES — A Bobtown man missing since January 10 was found with the wreckage of his car at the bottom of a 75-foot embankment near here Wednesday, the victim of an accident that went undiscovered for close to a month.

Greene County Coroner Frank Behm said Wednesday night the victim, John Paul Fiedor, 58, of Willis Street, Bobtown, apparently died instantly in the accident. He was pronounced dead at the scene by deputy coroner Bill Lewis of a broken neck and massive multiple injuries.

The accident, even though it apparently disrupted power to two homes when it occurred, was only discovered early Wednesday afternoon when an area resident, Fred Tarasuk, became curious about what he had seen the sun glinting from in the deep hollow on Tuesday.

Although the accident site is just off Spur Route 616 in this southeastern Greene County community and on the south side of Dunkard Creek, the Tarasuk home is some distance away on the north side of the creek but has a view into the narrow hollow.

The steep side of the hollow, covered with brush, trees and overhangs, prevented Tarasuk from seeing to the bottom from the highway. He said he even tried to get down the face of the cliff-like embankment but it was too steep. He finally walked to the end of the hollow and followed a small stream at its bottom until he found the car and its victim.

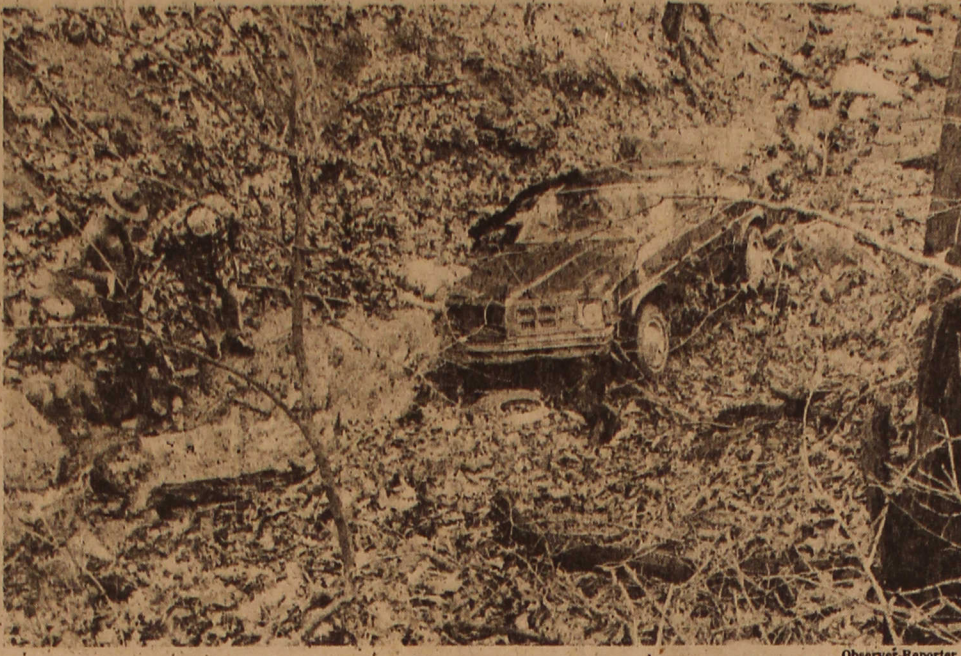

"You would never see anything if you weren't looking for it," Tarasuk said Wednesday. "Nothing could be seen from the highway and if you didn't go into the hollow you wouldn't find it."

Tarasuk notified state police from the home of George Skiles located on the opposite side of the highway from where Fiedor's car went over the embankment.

Electric power to the Skiles home and that of a neighbor's was disrupted at about 10:30 p.m. on January 10 apparently because of the accident, but no one realized at the time what had happened.

"I was watching television and there was a sound like an explosion, like a clap of thunder," Mrs. Skiles said Wednesday afternoon. "The lights in my house and in a neighbor's house went out. George (her husband), got up and went out to see what had happened but he couldn't see anything wrong."

Mrs. Skiles said they called West Penn Power about the power being off and they sent a repair crew which found a line down but nothing to indicate why it had fallen.

"We had our power back by 1:30 in the morning," she said. "It looks now as if the car had glanced off the pole and snapped the line."

Mrs. Skiles said that section of 616 Spur has been the scene of a number of accidents and that guardrails along the highway at that point have been flattened for the past year. "There was nothing whatsoever to show that a car had gone over the cliff," she said. State police said Fiedor was apparently traveling west when he ran off the right side of the road hitting a utility pole and several guardrails before going over the 75-foot embankment. The car then rolled over the embankment coming to rest upright in a small stream at the bottom of the hollow.

According to investigating officers, Fiedor was thrown from the car and was found near its right side.

Boarding House Is Licensed

HARRISBURG — The Harry K. Browell Personal Care Boarding Home in Carmichaels has been fully licensed to operate a personal care boarding home by the Department of Public Welfare.

Licensing of personal care boarding homes began in 1980 as an initiative by Gov. Dick Thornburgh to protect residents by setting and enforcing minimum standards for health, safety and personal care services.

Full licenses are issued only to boarding home operators who meet 100 percent of the state standards. Provisional licenses are available for operators who are in the process of correcting deficiencies. State inspectors monitor operators' continuous efforts to maintain compliance with the standards.

County Vo-Tech To Act As Host

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Vo-Tech school will be host to several other vo-tech schools in the area for a special competition to be held as part of the observance of National Education Week Feb. 7-11.

ALL-WEST ORCHESTRA — Eric Barnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Bruce Barnett of Waynesburg R.D. has been selected to participate in the All-West Regional Orchestra, March 3-5, hosted by Indiana Area School District and Indiana University of Pennsylvania. A French horn player, he is a junior at Jefferson-Morgan High School and was selected to participate this year in District I Senior High Orchestra and the Senior High Band.

New Trial Denied In Dog-Killing Case

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court has refused to grant a new trial to a Whiteley Township man who was convicted last year of cruelty to animals in connection with the shooting of two coon dogs.

In an order and opinion handed down Wednesday, Judge Glenn Toothman directed that Charles E. Spitznogle of Waynesburg R.D. 3 be in court on Friday, Feb. 11, for sentencing.

The shooting took place July 22, 1981, while Vincent Sappington of Pine Bank R.D. 2 and Don Cowell of Spraggs R.D. 1 were running their red tick coon hounds on a farm adjoining the defendant's. The owners valued the two animals at $3,500 and $2,500.

Spitznogle originally applied for admission to the ARD program, but withdrew the petition when he and the dog owners could not agree on reimbursement for the loss of their dogs. When the case subsequently came before Toothman in a non-jury trial, Spitznogle was found guilty of the charge.

In the appeal hearing, Spitznogle's attorney argued that his client shot the dogs because they were chasing a deer across his property and were worrying his cattle.

In his opinion, Judge Toothman states that the case turned on the credibility of the witnesses, and he cites the testimony of Sappington, who said that he went to the Spitznogle home after hearing three shots fired to ask the defendant who was doing the shooting.

He testified that Spitznogle told him he had shot the dogs "because they were barking, and made his dogs bark, and he couldn't make them shut up, so he came out and shot all of them."

The court opinion adds:

"He (Sappington) was talking to the defendant immediately after the incident when he spontaneously and without time to reflect on the consequences told exactly what he had done and why he did it. There is not, in the whole of the record, any evidence that the defendant himself saw the dogs chasing any deer, nor that they were pursuing or worrying his cattle."

Legal Action Continues

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township Sewer Authority at its regular monthly meeting Tuesday voted to continue legal efforts against a woman who has not connected to the sewer system. But, at the same time, authority members said it has no intentions of having her arrested for failing to do so.

The woman, who lives in a home without indoor plumbing in the Pickensville section of the township, claims she does not have the money to install a bathroom and pay the necessary connection charges.

To comply with the ordinances, Margaret Galloway would need to install plumbing, construct a bathroom, pay a $750 tap-in fee and pay the front-foot assessment. The authority has filed a $2,300 lien against the property until the work is completed.

There also was a question about the ownership of the two-story, frame house. The complaint was filed against Ethel Thomas, the deceased mother of Mrs. Galloway.

The legal aid society, in a letter to the sewer authority, has questioned the legality of bringing charges against Mrs. Galloway since the property is still in an estate and she does not hold title.

Authority members have claimed they are only following the ordinance and to allow some residents not to connect to the system would be selective enforcement.

Complaints were filed against three residents including Mrs. Galloway. One has made arrangements to be connected and another has made arrangements with the magistrate to pay the fines involved but no arrangements have been made to connect into the system. Future action against this individual was discussed but not finalized at Tuesday's meeting.

The consensus of the authority was Mrs. Galloway should leave the Pickensville home and find low-income housing.

Coaching Positions Open

ROGERSVILLE — The West Greene School Board completed its business in 15 minutes after calling a special meeting Monday night.

On recommendation of the athletic committee, the board opened all football coaching positions and voted to post the jobs to seek applications from faculty members. Under the teachers' contract, action to open coaching positions must be taken within 90 days following the end of the prior season, which made Feb. 4 the deadline for making the move.

The current head coach is Gene Falvo of Waynesburg, who was elected to the position in May of last year to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Earl Finney. Prior to that, Falvo had served as an assistant coach for eight seasons.

Because of a teachers' strike, the job of coaching the team for much of the last season was taken over by Paul Polink, then high school principal and now acting superintendent of the school district.

In other action, the board employed Laura Stratco of Washington as a special education teacher at a salary of $10,600. She is a graduate of Duquesne University and has been substituting in the Intermediate Unit.

Polink explained that the position is a new one made necessary by an increase in the number of students enrolled in special education classes.

Optimists To Build Ballfield

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Optimist Club announced a fund-raising campaign to purchase 9.7 acres of land adjacent to the borough on which it will build a Little League baseball field.

The local club has an option on the property owned by Matilda Cosgray. The land is located between Crescent Hills and the railroad tracks east of Waynesburg. Entrance to the field will be from Sixth Street.

The Optimist Club has until June to raise the $18,000 needed to purchase the property, which will be known as the Waynesburg Optimist Club Memorial Field.

To kick off the drive, the J.A. Goodwin Agency and First Federal Savings & Loan Association each purchased five $100 shares. Although the partnership shares will be non-interest bearing, they will be refundable through a drawing procedure.

In addition, the 21 members of the club have agreed to purchase at least one share. Taking part will be George Chapman, H. William DeWeese, Charles C. Huffman, John W. Glass, Thomas Jackovic, Robert Keeper, Marc Cardillo, Joseph Pawlosky, Barry Crumrine, William Winters, Edward Gannis Jr., Thomas Ayres Jr., Thomas Stiffler, Peter Rogers, Ronald Pennington, Kenneth C. Baily, David Pollock, David Coder, Douglas Lee, Paul Fike Jr., John B. Corbett and John McCall.

The Optimist Club, whose motto is "Friend of Youth," erected a Little League field several years ago in the West Waynesburg area. The field was dismantled, however, to make room for expansion of Emerald Mine.

SE Greene Board Refinances Bond

MAPLETOWN — The $2.9 million bond project for the Penn Pitt Elementary School has been refinanced by the Southeastern Greene School Board. The action, taken at a special meeting Monday night, will result in a $303,516 savings for the district.

As a result of a dip in the money market last Monday, solicitor John Stets said the district reborrowed the $2.9 million at 9.6 percent interest. The money had originally been borrowed at an interest rate of 12.6 percent. Stets said the district should save from $128-130,000 in the first year of the refinancing.

Construction to renovate and add a major addition to the Penn Pitt school started over the summer.

Coins Taken From Tavern

WAYNESBURG — State police from Waynesburg are investigating a burglary which occurred sometime Sunday night at Helen's Place on Route 88 in Dunkard Township.

Police said an undetermined amount in coins and two fifths of whiskey were stolen from the tavern, which is owned by Helen E. Rice of Carmichaels.

Youth Needed In Conservation Campaign

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Conservation District has mounted an effort to interest young people in its campaign to preserve the environmental integrity of the county.

Martin A. Niverth Jr. of Jefferson R.D.1, who was named executive director of the Conservation District a month ago, has been conducting programs this week at schools throughout the county. He hopes to acquaint students with land preservation work being done in the county and to interest them in attending a free camping program next summer.

"I feel that anything you do to make young people aware of the need for preserving our natural heritage will pay off in the future," Niverth said.

In his meetings this week with groups of students in four of the county's five school districts, he has spoken on some of the problems he believes are paramount in Greene County, including:

- Supervision of surface mining and subsequent land reclamation,
- Steps that need to be taken to keep agricultural land as productive as possible.

- The dangers of improper use of chemicals,
- The need for protecting streams and other sources of water, and
- The importance of preserving woodlands and natural areas as habitats for flowers and wildlife.

As part of his program, he also outlines the role of the Conservation District in working with other agencies to achieve these ends.

When a subdivision or other development is proposed, for example, the district staff works with the county planning commission to work out an appropriate program to minimize erosion when construction begins. The district also cooperates with such agencies as the Extension Service, Game Commission, Fish Commission and Forestry Department in carrying out their environmental programs.

As part of his presentation, Niverth is acquainting students, particularly those interested in biology, with a free summer camp which county Conservation Districts conduct on a cooperative basis in Armstrong County.

The camp, which is run in conjunction with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, is open to boys and girls from 14 through 16 years of age. They spend a week camping out in tents, attend lectures, take part in field trips and enjoy outdoor recreational activities.

"Greene County is entitled to send at least 10 students each year, but we have never filled our quota," Niverth said. "I would like to see at least that many go each year, which would mean that each of the school districts would be entitled to send two students."

Selection of the students, he said, would be based on recommendations by their biology teachers. The cost of sending the students to camp is borne by the Conservation District.

Niverth presented his programs this week to students in the West Greene, Southeastern Greene, Central Greene and Jefferson-Morgan school districts. He plans to meet next week with those in the Carmichaels Area District.

In addition to explaining the work of the Conservation District, Niverth is discussing with high school biology teachers the idea of creating a county outdoor laboratory for use by all schools. "It would be like a vo-tech class for biology students," he said.

Niverth, who received a degree in biology from Washington & Jefferson College in 1974. He brings a varied background to his new job.

His family operates the Stony Point Inn near Mather and he has worked there. He also has been a coal miner, has operated heavy equipment in the western states and, because of his ability to speak, read and write Spanish fluently, worked as an interpreter with a commission which re-surveyed the border between the United States and Mexico.

"It's good to be back in Greene County and I am particularly enthusiastic about the chance to work with young people," he said. "It gives us a chance to bring home the fact that protection of the environment should be a concern for people of all ages."

Blanket Law Enforcement Can Lead To Inequity

On the face of it, it seemed absurd. As neighbors indignantly pointed out, the Franklin Township Sewer Authority laid itself open to a charge of harassment when it brought charges against an indigent woman for failure to connect her house to the township sewerage system, subjecting her to a fine of $150 and the threat of a jail sentence.

The woman, with a monthly income of $150, had no plumbing or electricity in her house, getting all her water from a well. There was nothing to connect into, and she certainly couldn't afford to install plumbing in the old house. Nor could she afford the $750 tap-in fee. It looked like a move to force her from the house in which she had lived all her life.

The authority's position was that they had little choice, particularly in the face of complaints from residents that the authority had been too lax in requiring participation by all residents so that the average monthly charge could be lowered for those who had complied with the regulations.

"The state township code, which is reflected by our ordinance, requires that every house within a certain distance of the sewer lines be connected to the system, and the law does not permit selective enforcement," the authority solicitor said.

It still seems absurd, because there is no way in which the woman can meet the requirements of the Greene County authority. Fining her and threatening her with the possibility of going to jail if she doesn't pay it is certainly not the answer. Nor is it right to force her to leave the home where she is perfectly content to live, even if she doesn't have the advantages most people enjoy.

"The Invisible Scar," by Caroline Bird. David McKay Co., paperback. The President asked all corporations and businesses to hire just one extra worker to ease unemployment. Not President Reagan, President Hoover. Although Reagan has asked the same thing, it is interesting if not disquieting to read of Hoover making the request at the beginning of the Great Depression.

This book is one of many written on the depression, which started in 1929, but it's one of the most readable. Since it was written in the 1960's and reprinted in 1974, it's a bit dated in some of its comparisons, but still worth reading. Taking an anecdotal approach, Caroline Bird did much of her research in old newspapers, and analyzed the depression more from a human angle than an economic one.

"In Detroit, men stood outside automobile plants all night long to be at the head of the line when the office opened. They built bonfires to keep warm. They wrapped their feet in gunny-sacks to keep them from freezing while they waited."

And, "Construction was so hard hit that you could have an architect for an office boy if you wanted one. Many employers did not. The personnel problems of hiring people who 'thought they were too good for the job' were indignantly discussed. Meanwhile, skills rusted with disuse. Unemployed stenographers hired on work relief were known to bread down and cry, out of sheer nervousness, the first time they tried to take dictation on their new jobs."

Well, there was the stock market crash. "It was like a conjuring trick. The morning of Tuesday, October 29, 1929, stocks on the New York Stock Exchange had a real value. By 5:30 that night, when the ticker finally caught up with the 3 o'clock closing transactions, that value was $14 billion less.

AROUND TOWN

By The Staff

Residents of Greene County are just like all other sports fans from coast-to-coast—they have had enough televised football to last them until the pre-season games next summer.

Because a former Waynesburg College player, Mo Scarry, was an assistant coach for the losing Miami Dolphins, most Waynesburgers were rooting for the Dolphins. Scarry, a former center for the Cleveland Browns, later coached football at Waynesburg College.

Now the sports crowd will focus their attention on the wrestling and basketball seasons for both the college and the various high school teams in the area.

It's still a little early to be talking about making gardens but one member of that group of Greene Countians who would be preparing for the season would have been the later Harry Cree. Although born on the family farm near Carmichaels, his professional life was linked to the phone company but he never lost interest in the soil and was one of the best gardeners in the county.

SE Greene Board Refinances Bond

MAPLETOWN — The $2.9 million bond project for the Penn Pitt Elementary School has been refinanced by the Southeastern Greene School Board. The action, taken at a special meeting Monday night, will result in a $303,516 savings for the district.

As a result of a dip in the money market last Monday, solicitor John Stets said the district borrowed the $2.9 million at 9.5 percent interest. The money had originally been borrowed at an interest rate of 12.6 percent. Stets said the district should save from $128-130,000 in the first year of the refinancing.

Construction to renovate and add a major addition to the Penn Pitt school started over the summer. The school is expected to be finished for occupancy this fall.

For as long as amateur weather prophets have enjoyed that art, the sighting of a first robin has always been the classic harbinger of Spring. Entirely unknown to most residents is the fact that a large flock of robins live year around on the north portion of the Allison farm along Route 188 about four miles east of Waynesburg. Many deer hunters have noticed and commented about the flock.

The recent death of Clarence (Craig) Crago marked the passing of another of the North Side youths who were born and reared in that section of town prior to World War I. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Crago of North Morris Street and was a nephew of the late Atty. Thomas Crago, a former congressman.

He attended Waynesburg High School and became a civil engineer before moving to Islip, N.Y. He worked on the massive reclamation of Long Island Sound. His mother was a member of the pioneer Flenniken family of Carmichaels.

Mr. Crago had been a member of the Presbyterian Church in Waynesburg and in Islip and also of the Masonic lodge in Islip. He and his wife traveled extensively through New England and California where their daughter played in several movies. He was buried in Islip.

Navy Petty Officer 2nd Class Jack Dean of Waynesburg

Local Man Is 'Plank Owner'

PASCAGOULA, Miss. — Jack D. Dean of Waynesburg, with 360 other men, just helped bring a 9,600-ton, 563-foot baby into the world.

A ship's commissioning is much like its birth, and the crewmen and technicians at Ingalls Shipbuilding in Pascagoula, Miss., labored for three years and a day to make the guided missile cruiser USS Ticonderoga ready for its birthday on Jan. 22. That was the day it became a United States ship and joined the active Navy fleet.

As a member of the Ticonderoga's commissioning crew, the 30-year-old son of Clarence and Louise Dean of 199 North Liberty Street is a "plank owner," entitled to a free and unencumbered title to a plank from the ship's forecabin upon decommissioning.

"I think being a plank owner is definitely something special," Dean said. "Being able to say I was a member of the first crew on this class of ship gives me a good feeling."

The Ticonderoga is the lead ship in the "most powerful class of guided missile cruisers ever built," according to Navy officials. It is capable of defending itself against submarine and surface threats, but its innovative Aegis system dramatically improves the U.S. Navy's ability to protect the carrier battle group and other ships against air attack.

The ship, delivered ahead of schedule and below cost, is designed around the Aegis system which integrates radar, computer and weapons systems.

The Aegis' computer-controlled radar can "see" in all directions simultaneously. It can detect and track guided missiles approaching from wavetop to the stratosphere and watch for hundreds of new targets at the same time.

Once a target is identified as hostile, by the Aegis computer, its range, bearing and direction are determined and an appropriate defense response is chosen automatically. Petty Officer 2nd Class Dean is a fire control technician who helps operate and maintain the ship's Harpoon Missile System.

"I helped with the installation of the missile system," he said. "The Harpoon is a cruise missile system controlled by Aegis."

Dean was assigned to the Ticonderoga's pre-commissioning unit last July.

"I joined the Navy because I wanted to travel and receive training in an advanced electronics pro-

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

Death came recently to a former Waynesburg resident, Clarence F. Crago, who was a member of two early Greene County families — the Cragos of Waynesburg and the Flennikens of Carmichaels.

He and I had known each other well since our grade school days at the former Hanna Hall building at Waynesburg College when it was "on loan" to the Waynesburg public school system in the early 1920's.

He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Crago, with his mother being a member of the Flenniken family. There was lots of Greene County pioneer blood flowing through his trim physique, which remained agile from his many years of baseball and from playing tennis, both on courts in Waynesburg and at Lake Chatauga.

His mother and his sisters were among the hardest working volunteers at the New York resort and played prominent roles in creating that area into one of America's best nown musical and cultural centers. Less well known is that it was also a center for the learning of aquatic skills, particularly in lifesaving and water safety.

Like all other youths in Waynesburg who loved to play baseball, Clarence came under the spell of the late Joe (Hooker) Phillips, who had played in the top minor leagues such as the American Association and the short-lived Atlantic State League.

During the spring of 1922, Hooker also coached the Waynesburg College team and induced both Clarence Crago and Morgan Hunnell to play for it, although neither had yet finished high school. They thus both became the first subsidized athletes at the college.

They were followed by the first formally recruited football team that fall (1922) that included Leo (Coach) Cunningham and John (Freckle) Hoy from Waynesburg, Bob Weisner from Cameron, Bill Reid from Pittsburgh, George (Beans) Jefferson from Washington, and a host of others who laid the foundations for Waynesburg's later football greatness.

Getting back to Crago, he worked on a state highway surveying crew and shortly afterward left for Long Island, where one of the nation's largest land reclamation projects was just starting along Long Island Sound.

Week-by-week, month-by-month and year-by-year Clarence became more and more of a New Yorker rather than a Greene Countian. His boyhood memories of skating on the tiny pond in College Park and on Ten Mile Creek grew fainter and fainter.

He gradually was absorbed into the suburban lifestyle of Islip on Long Island, which as an engineer he helped create from Long Island Sound, and that was where he continued to reside and work until his death.

In addition to his wife, Gertrude, his immediate survivors included a nephew, William Patsch. Funeral services were held in East Islip.

UMWA District 4 Schedules Election

MASONTOWN — James W. Kelly, president of UMWA District 4, has announced a special election will be conducted for the office of one-member of the international executive board. The election will be conducted and supervised in conformity with Article 6, Section 3, in the District 4 Constitution.

Nomination meetings of local unions in District 4 will be held Sunday, March 6. The election will be held Tuesday, May 3, with the results certified by the District 4 Election Committee May 13. The member elected will assume office on Monday, May 16.

gram," the 1970 graduate of Waynesburg Central High School said. "Since enlisting I've spent most of my time in the Navy attending schools for fire control technicians and the Aegis system."

"I like the Navy; there have been certain hardships for my wife Deborah and I but we've adjusted. She's excited about my being a plank owner too."

The Deans have three children: Scott, 8; Brian, 6 and Thomas, 5.

"Being separated from my family will be difficult, especially since the Ticonderoga is expected to spend a great deal of time at sea," he said. "It's something we all have to live with though."

Built on a destroyer hull design (Spruance class), the Ticonderoga has airplane-type gas turbine engines. Using the same mode saved millions of dollars in design and construction costs.

The Ticonderoga, the fifth ship to be named for Fort Ticonderoga—captured from the British Army in the Revolutionary War—will go to sea for training in February.

"This ship has some fantastic capabilities," Dean said. "It's the finest ship around today. I'm looking forward to going to sea on it."

Tyler, Jackets Back On Track

By Tom Rose, O-R Sports Editor

WAYNESBURG — Some were surprised, others hinted it was tainted.

And there were those who believed it was a vintage Waynesburg College performance, one that had been missing for much of this basketball season.

Whatever school of thought you choose, one fact remains quite evident. Waynesburg's 90-54 rout of Pitt-Bradford was crucial in the NAIA District 18 standings and more important at this stage, in the Yellow Jacket locker room.

"Finding ourselves is the key," said Waynesburg's senior guard Tim Tyler after Saturday's game. "The home court advantage and playing well as a team go hand-in-hand. If you play well, you'll get to play at home."

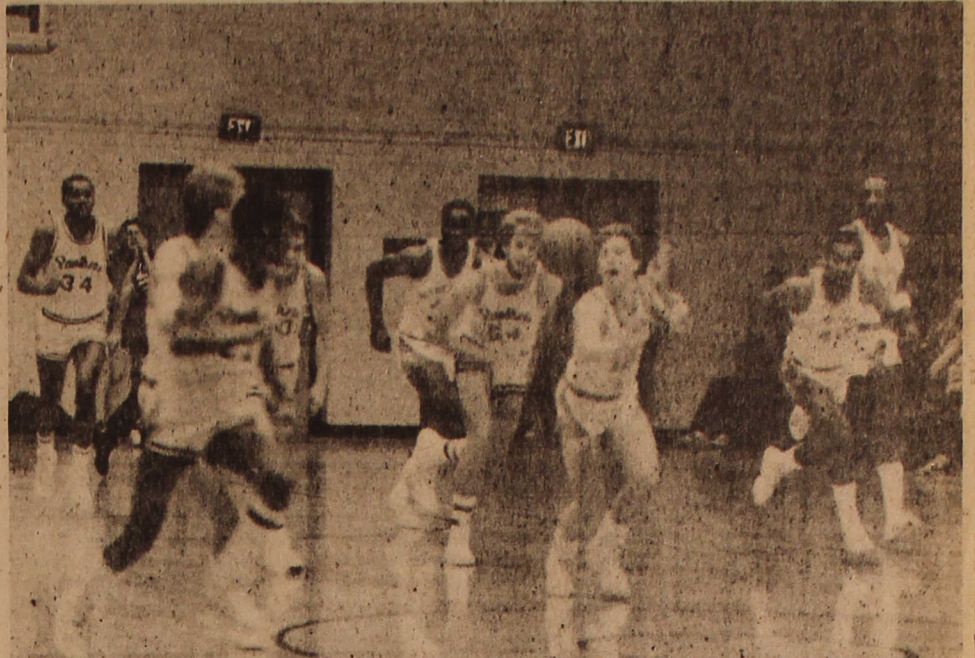

Tyler certainly found his game against Pitt-Bradford after suffering through a recent slump. In fact, Waynesburg head coach Rudy Marisa actually benched his senior co-captain last Wednesday at St. Vincent. But Tyler's sizzling performance — he scored a game-high 22 points, including 18 in the first half — appeared to put Marisa's concerns and his slump to rest.

"It really had to do with his entire floor game," Marisa said. "But when Tim tends to go into a slump he also tends to find himself again. He was standing around a bit and his passing had become erratic; that pretty much characterizes his slump. But he's seemed to pull himself out of it."

Waynesburg, now 6-4 in district play and 10-6 overall, has pulled back into the race for one of the four home court positions in the upcoming playoffs. Pitt-Bradford (8-3, 14-5) had led the district until the lopsided loss, but was without its leading scorer Randy Wade and starting point guard Pat Jones.

Wade had burned Waynesburg with 42 points in the Panthers' 91-85 victory earlier this season.

"I'm not the kind of coach who would say that if we had Wade and Jones we would have beaten Waynesburg," said Pitt-Bradford head coach Dick Danielson. "I'll just say our record speaks for itself. Wade is the cataloger for our team, you saw Kenny (Barber, who scored eight points) just standing around out there. The guards we had in there just couldn't penetrate and get the ball inside.

"At this stage of the year everybody has pretty much gotten into a rhythm. But when you have to put two new guards in there and make them responsible to run the show, it takes away your continuity."

Jones missed the game with a sprained ankle but there were two versions attached to Wade's disappearance.

"Wade pulled a groin just before Christmas so I just decided if we're going to do anything in the playoffs we have to have a healthy Randy Wade. So we didn't let him play," Danielson said.

"There are a couple versions, one of which actually had him missing the bus at 12:30," Marisa said. "I don't know which is true, but he is obviously nursing a hurt muscle, though."

"But it's not less of a win for us. In practice yesterday (Friday) I felt more assured that we'd come to play."

The Jackets jumped on Pitt-Bradford early, as Tyler scored 10 of the 12 Waynesburg points for a 12-2 lead. After the Panthers closed to within three (19-16) with 9:08 left in the first half, Waynesburg scored 11 unanswered points on a flurry by Tyler and teammate Tim Walker to assume another commanding lead.

From that point, Pitt-Bradford never mounted a serious threat.

"It's hard to say what was wrong. Maybe I was thinking too much and in some ways maybe I wasn't thinking enough," Tyler said. "It really comes down to getting into the spirit of the game. You've got to get a little aggressive and a little mean. Playing together is one thing that helps and knowing that everybody coming off the bench can do the job is a help, too."

Walker, who will be honored before Monday night's (8 p.m. tipoff) game against Pitt-Johnstown for recently eclipsing the 1,000 career point mark, added 22. Paul Stanley had 11 while Craig Harris and freshman Keith Coleman contributed fine efforts off the bench. Harris scored 11 points while Coleman filled in admirably for the foul-plagued Mark Doppelheuer during the competitive minutes of the first half.

Bruce Naughton led Pitt-Bradford with 17 points while Keith Rolick had 12 and Lorenzo Newsome 11.

CSC Finds Winning Recipe

By Joe Tuscano, O-R Sports Staff

WAYNESBURG — Take two slightly inexperienced freshmen and mix them with three consistent seniors. Blend in three hustling juniors and a talented sophomore. Now stir in two parts desire, one part intensity and two parts positive attitude.

Shake well and pour into a winning mold. Let it stand for a while and then remove the mold and place it on a wrestling mat. And if you've followed the directions, you have assembled one of the best collegiate wrestling teams in Western Pennsylvania.

That's exactly what California State College's head coach Frank Vulcano has done and the results: 15 consecutive dual meet victories. The latest triumph came Tuesday night against a stubborn Waynesburg College, 26-19, in exhibition action at the Yellow Jacket gymnasium.

The victory also leaves the Vulcans within two matches of a perfect season, the first in the school's history. But included in the final two is a match against powerful Slippery Rock Thursday night at Cal State's Hamer Hall.

"I thought, at the beginning of the season, that the potential was there," said Vulcano, who is in his 13 year of building successful teams at Cal State. "Our freshmen came on strong in the beginning, and they've done a good job for me."

Although Vulcano indicated he may have coached better individuals, this team is "one of the best balanced teams we've ever had at Cal State."

And true to form, the Vulcans used a total team effort to dump the pesky Yellow Jackets, who are now 4-4 overall. At 118 pounds, Cal State's Harry Heint, who along with George Harvey (134) have given a potent one-two freshman punch all season, started things off as he's done 13 times in 14 matches: winning, this time a 12-0 superior over Dave Stewart.

Dean Uschak (126) followed with a 13-3 major decision to give the Vulcans a quick 9-0 lead. Uschak joined senior heavyweight Guido DeLuca in victory while Conrad Caloric (177) dropped a 5-3 decision to Brian Ross. The three seniors have a combined 25-8 record this year.

"All our kids have winning records," Vulcano said. "Balance has been the key to this team."

Juniors Clyde Caldwell (142) and Bill Harris (167) were victorious while Mike McWilliams (190) was pinned by Phil Gifford, a runnerup in the NAIA championships in 1979 and 1980.

"I was proud of McWilliams," Vulcano said. "He wanted to challenge Gifford. Both are good kids but it was too much weight for Mike to cut. He just ran out of gas."

After Vinnie Hanlon of CSC and former Wash High standout Lonnie

Barnes battled to an 11-11 draw, Cal Sate held a 14-5 lead. But Waynesburg's Steve Burchianti (153) and Ross sandwiched wins around Harris' pin of Bill Mundell to cut the lead to 20-13. Gifford's pin made it 20-19 before DeLuca secured the victory with a pin of Waynesburg's Tim Mathias.

Basketball

WAYNESBURG — The Yellow Jackets have not slowed the pace.

After an impressive 90-56 stomping of District 18 opponent Pitt-Bradford Saturday, Waynesburg College breezed past the University of Pitt-Johnstown 80-66 in an exhibition basketball game Monday.

The victory raises the Jackets' overall record to 11-6 while UPJ falls to 5-10.

As he's done so often in his career, junior guard Ray Natili sparked Waynesburg with 20 points on eight field goals and six foul shots. He was joined by senior forwards Tim Tyler, who had 19 points, and Tim Walker, who chipped in 17. Craig Harris also had 11 to round out the Yellow Jacket scoring.

Natili finished with six assists while Walker had eight rebounds and Tyler seven. Waynesburg turned the ball over 15 times during the game.

Waynesburg held an eight-point lead at halftime, 33-25, before outscoring UPJ 47-41 over the final 20 minutes.

Mike Gresik had 20 points while teammates Dave Higinbotham had 16 and Tim Eberly 11 for Pitt-Johnstown.

The Yellow Jackets shot a whopping 49 foul shots, converting 34, while UPJ hit 14 of 20.

Jackets Take Fourth Place

WEST LIBERTY, W. Va. — Waynesburg College used first-place finishes from Brian Ross (177 pounds) and Phil Gifford (190) to capture a fourth-place finish Saturday at the West Liberty State College Invitational Wrestling Tournament.

Ashland (Ohio) College won the tournament with 120 points. Liberty Baptist (92) finished second, the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown (87) third and the Yellow Jackets (78) fourth.

Waynesburg's Gary Stralko (126) finished second to UPJ's Rudy Rura.

Early Benefits For B-C

By Joe Tuscano, O-R Sports Staff

This season was supposed to be a rebuilding year for Beth-Center High School's wrestling team. But something happened along the way.

The Bulldogs have developed quickly and positive results have come earlier than expected. Last week, B-C dropped a close 32-29 decision to the Section 8-AA leader Jeff-Morgan. It was only the second loss in the section — the other was to West Greene — and raised some eyebrows at how well the Bulldogs battled J-M.

Then last weekend, Beth-Center captured three individual championships at the Burgettstown Tournament and finished third, three points behind the Rockets and nine and a half back of the host Blue Devils.

This week, Beth-Center broke into the O-R's WPIAL Class AA wrestling poll, taking fifth place. Jeff-Morgan, which was tied for first last week, moved into the top spot with 17½ points, ½ ahead of Washington. Carlynton, fifth a week ago, jumped to third on the heels of a convincing win over Section 10-AA rival Riverview. West Greene rounded out the poll in fourth place.

In the Triple-A poll, the top five spots remained the same with Canon-McMillan, Chartiers-Houston, Trinity, Derry and Hempfield. Seneca Valley fell from sixth to a tie for eighth with North Allegheny while Connellsville and Moon each jumped one spot. Thomas Jefferson, after a week's absence from the top 10, replaced Hampton in the final position.

"Our kids have really been doing a job," said Bulldog head coach Dick Caputo, who is in his 13th season. "To be picked in the poll — and our boys read it — will give them a big boost."

One of the keys to the Bulldogs this season has been the performance of four underclassmen — Scott Rhodes at 98 pounds, David Nelson (106), Mike Kanalis (126) and Pete Keruskin (167). Rhodes and Nelson have the better records, 20-2 and 11-2 respectively, but it's been the progress of all four which has propelled B-C.

"We felt next year was going to be a great year for us," Caputo said. "The rest of the team has come to count on these kids. In the past when you're (an underclassman) called up, you weren't counted on to help."

But things have been different for these four.

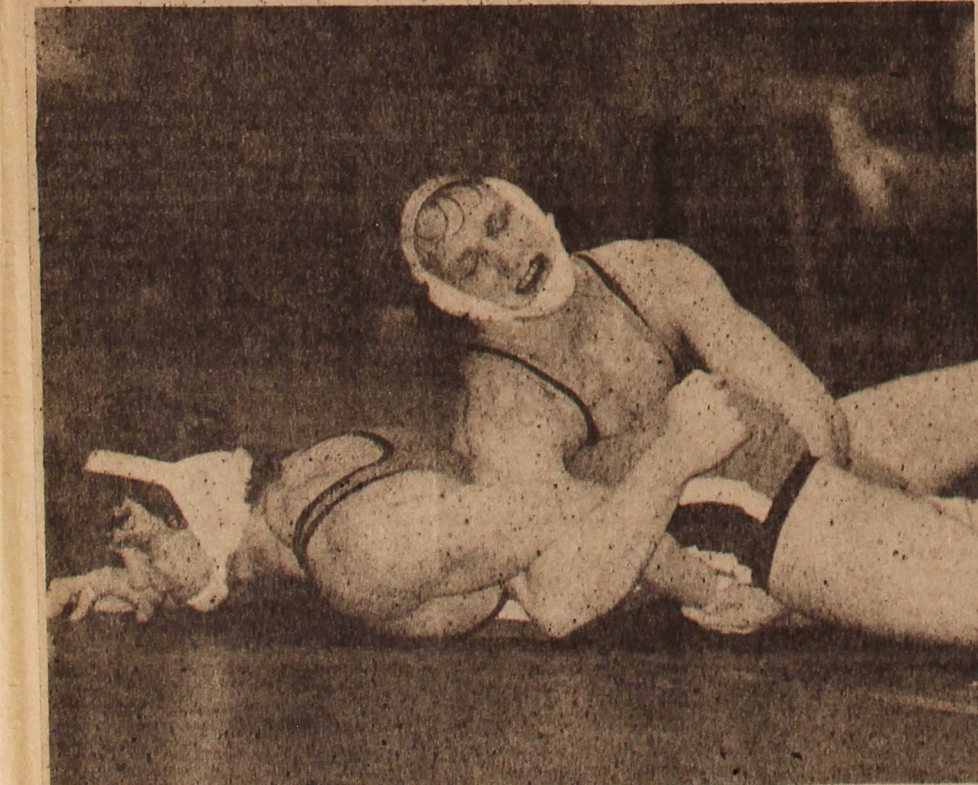

"When you have a 98 pounder (Rhodes) who doesn't lose, that's a good start," said Caputo. "With our 105 pounder (Nelson) and (Mare) Bartolomucci at 119, it helps the team out considerably."

And the Bulldogs are solid after that with Kanalis, Keruskin and heavyweight Mike Blazus leading the way. Blazus, who was 19-6 last season, has compiled a 21-0-1 record and was a winner at the Burgettstown tournament.

"I thought he might be too light for heavyweight but he's doing just great," said Caputo. "He has terrific balance and doesn't get excited. He matured a lot last year but was in the same weight class as (Charleroi's) Jim Edwards and (Jeff-Morgan's) Al Starostanko."

While Blazus graduates after this season, Caputo is confident of the future.

"This year we have the nucleus to be competitive," said Caputo. "Next year I think will be our year. This year has just been a bonus. I've had more fun this year than the last 12 I've coached."

2 Youths Arrested

WAYNESBURG — Two juveniles were taken into custody last Friday evening when they tried to cash a forged check at the Kroger Store in the Greene Plaza.

Serving In Sinai

ELGORAH, Sinai — This, the headquarters of the eleven-nation, Multinational Force and Observers (MFO) which serves as a buffer between Egypt and Israel, is a study in contrasts.

A former Israeli fighter base, El Gorah currently houses soldiers from around the world. Army Staff Sgt. John P. Wunder of Waynesburg is one of them.

Wunder, 37, son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Wunder of 77 North East Street, is an electronic repair supervisor serving with the Logistics Support Unit of the United States contingent to the multinational force.

"It's been a challenge to initiate and maintain this communications electronic repair shop," Wunder said. "I started with nothing but managed to find enough technical manuals, test equipment, repair parts and a vehicle to provide 100 percent service," he said.

The mission of the MFO, an outgrowth of the Camp David accords between Egypt and Israel, is to provide warning to both the Egyptians and Israelis of any hostile acts or violations of the treaty by either side.

To accomplish this, three infantry battalions — one American, one Columbian and one from the Island of Fiji — occupy strategic locations in an area known as Zone C, running roughly north to south from the Gaza Strip to the Gulf of Aqaba and the Israeli town of Eilat.

The U.S. 101st Airborne Division currently has responsibility for the southern-most section of Zone C, including the narrow — and very important — Straits of Tiran at the tip of the Sinai Peninsula.

The soldiers of the Logistics Support Unit (LSU) have the mission of moving many tons of supplies and equipment from El Gorah to the southern base camp at Sharm El Sheikh, a distance of over 360 miles through the Sinai Desert. LSU receives many of its supply items through the Israeli port of Haifa, and must then transship them south by road, usually a full day's drive. This includes fuel and water, particularly for some of the more isolated observation posts maintained by the 101st division. Most are accessible by road, though barely.

The LSU provides services to the Sinai which would normally be handled by separate specialized units anywhere else in the world. Food and fuel, mail and munitions, repair parts and recreation equipment—all are handled, in some manner, through the LSU.

"Perhaps the worst part of this tour has been having people from different units trying to perform as a complete unit," Wunder said. "I feel that people who are part of the MFO should come from the same unit, such as a maintenance unit or an individual company."

A 1963 graduate of Waynesburg High School, Wunder enlisted in August of that year. "At the time, I wanted to go to Vietnam," he said. "The Army offers everyone the opportunity to see the world and go to school; personally, I plan to stay until retirement and I want to see as many countries as possible between now and then."

Assigned to the 13th Support Command, Fort Hood, Texas, Wunder will be returning to the states in early 1983.

New Freeport Woman Testifies

UNIONTOWN — A New Freeport woman testified at a Public Utilities Commission hearing Wednesday, January 26 on whether West Penn Power Co. should be allowed to clear transmission line right of ways by aerial herbicide spraying.

Karen Lyons testified that the water supply on her property had been contaminated after the area was sprayed by the helicopter. The hearing took place in the Fayette County Courthouse before Judge Joseph Matuschak.

The PUC had placed a ban on any further spraying by West Penn Power until after hearings were held in Pittsburgh and Uniontown. Matuschak has given the electric company 30 days to work out an agreement with the Department of Agriculture, Office of the Consumer Advocate, state game and other parties.

Mrs. Lyons testified that after her property was sprayed on Aug. 8, 1980, testing showed the water was contaminated with the chemical Picloram. The creek is located behind her house and is used as a water supply in the winter and for livestock all year long.

Mrs. Lyons is involved with PennCATS (Pennsylvania Citizens Against Toxic Sprays), an organization which has been trying to establish landowner agreements with the utility. Under such an agreement, the landowner could opt to clear his own land and be reimbursed for his work by the utility.

In addition to Mrs. Lyons, members of PennCATS living in Fayette County testified at the hearing. Also testifying was State Grange Master Charles Wismer, who said he advocated the rights of property owners to clear their own land, either by ground applications of pesticides or mechanical means.

West Penn Power maintains that aerial spraying is the most economical and safest method for assuring continued electrical service. In 1982, 6,100 acres were cleared of vegetation by the power company, but almost 75 percent of that amount was done by hand clearing methods and not with the use of helicopters.

Mason-Dixon Park Plans To Develop

MT. MORRIS — The Mason-Dixon Historical Park, Inc. Association will hold a planning session at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 8, in the Mt. Morris Community Center, association President Charles R. Snider said.

Representatives of churches and organizations in Greene and Mongalia counties and all interested persons are urged to attend the session.

Dr. A.J.W. Headlee has already presented a 14-point development plan. In addition, Evelyn Teagarden has offered several suggestions and three landscaping-architectural students from West Virginia University have been assigned to help with the plans.

Citing examples of the Jake's Run gym and the athletic field at Clay-Battelle High School, Snider has told the group, "When people of the Dunkard Valley area decide to do something, they usually succeed."
