Fire Destroys Whiteley Landmark

WAYNESBURG — Fire of unknown origin destroyed a large farmhouse in Whiteley Township Tuesday afternoon, with the loss estimate ranging as high as $50,000.

The house, painted colonial blue, was located adjacent to the Kirby interchange of Interstate 79 and was a landmark for motorists driving south on the highway from Waynesburg.

Waynesburg Fire Chief Pete Walker said the roof had collapsed by the time firemen got to the scene and the house quickly burned to the ground. The blaze was seen at 3:15 p.m. by a passing motorist, who went to the nearby home of Frank R. Headley to sound the alarm.

Walker said none of the occupants were at the scene when the fire company arrived. He said he was told the house was occupied by two families, one of them the Bill Martin family.

Dan McCoy of Waynesburg R.D.2 said he had entered into an article of agreement some time ago to sell the property to a Michigan resident, but the sale had not been completed. He also said he has been unable to determine if the purchaser had allowed the insurance to lapse.

"At this point, it looks like I'm the owner," he said. McCoy estimated the loss at $50,000.

Tuesday's alarm was the second time firemen had been called to the house. On Feb. 16 a malfunctioning furnace posed the threat of a fire but did no damage.

Walker said Thursday's blaze started in a second-floor bedroom on the northeast corner of the house. He said the state police fire marshal will be asked to investigate because of "suspicious circumstances" surrounding the cause of the fire.

Mt. Morris firemen assisted at the fire, with efforts to control the blaze being hampered by lack of water.

The house is a landmark in Whiteley Township. It was once the home of James White, a former county sheriff, and was originally known as the Stephens farm.

W. Greene Reverses Decision

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

ROGERSVILLE — The West Greene School District has reversed a controversial decision it made last month to have the high school band director devote part of his time to teaching music in the elementary schools and has restored the music program at the high school and middle school to its former status.

Acting Superintendent Paul Polink confirmed the action following a meeting Thursday night of the West Greene School Board, stating that it eliminates any question that the district might not be in compliance with state Department of Education requirements for music education.

The situation arose when the board recently decided not to replace an elementary music teacher who had resigned. Instead, it authorized the administration to make changes in the schedule of Band Director Ron Jesso to provide him with time to visit the elementary schools on a part-time basis.

Parents of high school band members protested on the grounds that it eliminated band practice for one period during school hours, for which students had been receiving credit and grades.

At Thursday's meeting, board members were provided with copies of a letter from the office of the state Commission for Basic Education. While there was no discussion of the letter, it was written in response to inquiries from district residents expressing concern about compliance with state regulations. It asked the district to provide the office with information about the music program, and particularly about the instrumental program at the senior high level.

Polink said that while the district will reply to the letter, there is no longer any question about compliance since the high school program has been fully reinstated. He said classroom teachers in the elementary schools will be responsible for teaching music as part of their regular curriculum, with all of them being certified to do so.

In action at the meeting, the board accepted the resignation of Frank Farley, district maintenance superintendent, effective April 30.

Farley said he "finds it very difficult to work under present circumstances, mostly because of misunderstandings." While he did not elaborate, he cited as an example questions raised at the meeting by a board member regarding the purchase of four portable radios for $1,500 as part of moveable equipment purchased out of the building construction fund.

Farley said it was his understanding that board members had authorized purchase of the equipment, which is being used by maintenance department personnel for communication purposes.

He suggested that the board advertise for a replacement for him as soon as possible so that his successor can begin work while he is still around to acquaint him with the job.

In response to a question from the board, he said that he planned to continue as inspector for the new building project until the job has been completed. "I would hope that the job will be completed by then (April 1)," he said.

Farley, who has been with the district for six years, said later that he has no new position to go to at this time.

The school calendar was adjusted to provide a vacation day on Good Friday. As a result, the final date for classes was moved up by one day to Friday, June 24, with high school graduation to be held at 7:30 p.m. on that day.

A request from Byron Hughes to construct an outdoor storage area for the vocational-agriculture department was referred to the building and sites committee for consideration.

A sabbatical leave for the 1983-84 school year, for purposes of travel, was granted to Barbara Swartz, a member of the teaching staff.

A number of student field trips were approved, as was attendance at conferences by several staff members.

A slide presentation was given by the FFA on the state farm show and other activities, and Isaac Bowers reported on a field trip to the Hatfield Power station by members of the senior high gifted class.

Candidates Draw Lots For Top Spot

WAYNESBURG — A large number of candidates for county offices were on hand Thursday morning for the drawing of lots to determine ballot positions for the May 17 primary election.

The Greene County registration office staff conducted the procedure. Candidates have traditionally considered the top spot on the ballot an advantage in a contested race, particularly when a large number of candidates are running for an office.

In the seven-way contest for the two Democratic county commissioner nominations, top spot on the ballot was won by former county Treasurer T. William Barnes of Waynesburg. Second through seventh positions went, respectively, to James M. Rizer of Deep Valley, L.R. (Butch) Santore of Greensboro, Dan Bailey of Carmichaels, W. Jack Whitlatch of Wind Ridge, Kelce Mosley of Waynesburg and Marian C. Rush of Waynesburg.

Top position in the five-way Republican contest for county commissioner nominations went to Frances Tompkins of Waynesburg. Placing second through fifth were Joyce B. Pecon of Carmichaels, John R. Gardner of Waynesburg, Richard S. Cowan of Waynesburg and Lloyd (Odie) Rohanna of Waynesburg.

The only other contests on the county level are all in the Democratic primary.

In the clerk of courts race, Karen E. Sabo of Mather won the top spot over Al Darney of Carmichaels; in the prothonotary contest, top spot went to Charles Hogue of Waynesburg over Dave Coder of Garards Fort, and in the treasurer contest, Joseph R. Souders of Waynesburg will have the top ballot position over Robert E. (Bob) Elliott of Waynesburg.

Auditor General's Office Criticizes Health Agency

WAYNESBURG — The state auditor general's office has taken the Washington-Greene Mental Health / Mental Retardation agency to task for paying a Waynesburg landlord $18,000 rent for a house considered "structurally deficient and unacceptable to house mentally retarded children."

Although the house had previously been cited by the Department of Labor and Industry, the agency continued to pay rent for three years. The house located at 292 East Lincoln Street is owned by George Albert of Waynesburg.

According to an audit report released Monday, the agency hired Life Management Associates, Ltd. (LMA) of Greensburg, a private non-profit agency, to operate a home for three mentally retarded children in Waynesburg.

According to the audit report, LMA entered into a three-year lease agreement with MH/MR to operate the home beginning in May 1979. However, the MH/MR coordinator for such programs inspected the house six months later and listed several deficiencies.

Cited were such things as a spiral staircase which violated Fire and Panic Code regulations, a balcony railing was missing which could allow a person to fall two stories, the basement was loaded with undesirable amounts of junk and considered to be a breeding ground for vermin, an electrical wire was exposed and several other complaints.

The coordinator considered the Waynesburg home no longer eligible for further funding unless all necessary repairs, replacements and additions were made within 60 days.

Following the 60-day period, the coordinator said some repairs had been completed and others started and he "assumed" all deficiencies would be corrected. However, the repairs were not completed.

During a later inspection in December 1981, the coordinator noted a general rundown appearance.

According to the report, the Department of Labor and Industry is responsible for inspecting community residential housing facilities for compliance with fire and safety codes. These inspections which are made for licensure purposes are required only for houses occupied by four or more residents.

Because the Waynesburg house had three residents, the inspection was not required. However, in October 1981, Labor and Industry made an inspection when it learned this house was occupied by retarded children and because they had previously cited the house for numerous structural deficiencies when a youth program occupied the house previously.

Previous citations included an illegal spiral stairway, outside stair and porch improperly constructed, the fire escape was not maintained, the third-floor attic was not sealed off and doors opened inward rather than outward causing a hazard during an emergency exit.

Both the president of LMA and the Washington/Greene coordinator agreed the house was structurally deficient, but they claimed it was the only house available at the time the lease was signed. They said the landlord promised to make the corrections, but only if a long-term lease was signed.

Subsequent to the lease agreement, the landlord would not make repairs even though LMA personnel made many requests, the report stated.

Program Director Ron Barshick

said Monday the landlord eventually corrected the safety violations. But because of the overall, rundown condition of the house, the lease was broken.

The attorney general's office said that although inspection and written approval of such residential settings is required, these functions were not performed.

The attorney general said LMA, the county and Department of Public Welfare office acted irresponsibly and jeopardized the health and welfare of its clients by placing three mentally retarded children in a structurally deficient house.

State officials said they inspected nine houses used in this program and the one in Waynesburg was the only one considered unsuitable for mentally retarded residency.

According to the state audit report, LMA moved the residents out of the house on February 15, 1982. It also was noted the Department of Public Welfare formally adopted regulations the following month to cover home inspections.

Blaze Starts In Kids' Room

WAYNESBURG — A fire which started in a room where two children were sleeping damaged a house on Waynesburg's north side Tuesday.

John Eddy of 104 East Wayne Street said that both his children, Kevin, 7, and Felecia, 5, escaped without injury.

Waynesburg firemen, who were called at 2:45 p.m., said the blaze started in the closet of a second-floor bedroom. It was confined to the one room, although there was some smoke damage in other parts of the large brick house, which had been divided into two apartments. It is owned by Mary Hartley of Waynesburg.

Eddy said his son was home sick with chicken pox. He and his wife, Mabel, were downstairs.

"My wife had just been upstairs to check on the children and told me they were both sleeping," Eddy said. "A few minutes later the children came downstairs and said something was burning. I ran upstairs and the room was full of smoke."

Firemen said cause of the fire has not been determined. No damage estimate was made.

J-M Schools Keeping Coach Options Open

By Stan Diamond, Staff Writer

JEFFERSON — The Jefferson-Morgan School Board Thursday night kept its options open on coaches for winter sports by declaring those positions open with the exception of football.

Under the teachers' contract for the district, coaches of a particular sport must be notified by the board within 30 days of the close of that sport's season whether they will be rehired. If not notified within that time, their rehiring for the following season is automatic. The head football coaching position was excluded, because it carries a three-year contract.

Coaching positions declared open were wrestling, boys' basketball and girls' basketball. The board also accepted the resignation of Ernest Benedict as track coach and voted to hire Robert Antion to fill the position if no other applications are received within the required two-week position opening posting period in the teachers' contract.

In a matter unrelated to the opening of coaching positions, board President Stanley Fowler took issue with published remarks made by head wrestling coach Tony Barbetta several weeks ago in which Barbetta, in Fowler's opinion, placed athletics ahead of academics.

"I think our wrestling coach ought to learn to grow up," Fowler said just before the board adjourned. "Someone should talk to him. Our business is to educate. Sports are just an extracurricular activity."

Other board members as well as administrators also disliked Barbetta's comments. One board member was even moved that the board require a student to have at least a "C" average in order to participate in a sport. The district currently follows the state policy that a student can continue to participate in sports as long as passing grades are maintained. In other action, the board approved the district's share of the Intermediate Unit I administrative budget in the amount of $3,806. A $100 fee to be paid to the Jefferson Volunteer Fire Co. ambulance service for staffing football games and other services during the year also was approved.

A letter was read from Robert Wilburn, state education secretary, commending school officials and personnel on their "outstanding jobs of managing the financial operations" of the district in light of state audit reports for school years ending June 30, 1980 and 1981 which contained no criticism or audit exceptions. It also was pointed out in Wilburn's letter that it was the fifth consecutive year that the district had a favorable audit from the state "without reproach."

It was announced that a grievance concerning a transfer by Local 585, the district's Service Employee Union, which was denied by the board last month would go to arbitration.

The board accepted an administration recommendation to continue participating in ECIA Title I remedial reading and remedial mathematics for the 1983-84 school year. Superintendent Kenneth Macek said it appeared the district would receive about the same amount in federal money it has received in previous years and that the current remedial programs were being reviewed.

Requests from personnel to attend conferences were approved for John Bayer, William Phillips and Stanley Sagosky, football clinic at Penn State on April 21 and 22; Tony Barbetta and Allen Rafail, wrestling clinic June 24 and 25 in Wildwood Crest, N.J.; Howard Hair and John Curtis, non-staff basketball coaches, to attend a basketball clinic April 22 to 24 in Pittsburgh; Frank Melega, an art workshop April 20 at Edinboro State College; and Kevin McElheny and band members to take a bank trip to Hershey June 17 or June 24.

One hundred sixty-two feet high and one hundred forty-seven feet wide Napoleon built his arch of triumph. Proudly it rises above the Place de l'Etoile reminding the world of an Emperor's early victories — and later defeats.

On the road from Bethphage to Jerusalem centuries before there had been another arch of triumph. Nature had fashioned it of palm trees. Beneath their bowing branches the Prince of Peace rode into the city that was to crucify Him.

Jesus, unlike Napoleon, never had need of a gigantic monument to help the world remember Him. The doors of a million sanctuaries bespeak His victory. Men pass through them not to gaze upon the majesty of carved stone, but to worship and serve the Son of God.

Napoleon bought for himself a transient glory at the price of other men's blood.

Jesus bought for all men eternal life — at the price of His Own Blood!

Lowered Insurance Premiums Show Value of Competition

There are several lessons to be learned from the experience which the Greene County commissioners had in awarding county insurance contracts this year.

Due to prodding from a few local agents, the commissioners agreed to accept proposals for both their comprehensive coverage and their life insurance package instead of automatically renewing existing contracts.

As a result, the premium on the comprehensive insurance (fire, liability, accident, etc.) dropped from $59,000 a year to $46,682, for an annual savings of almost $13,000. The proposal was submitted by the same agency which had been providing the coverage at the higher cost.

Premiums on life insurance coverage on county employees, which had been costing the county $9,696 a year, dropped to $5,756, for a savings of almost $4,000. This contract went to a new company, but it is interesting to note that the agency which had been providing the coverage for more than 40 years — on an automatic annual renewal — also cut its rate, submitting a proposal which would have saved the county $2,619 had its bid been the low one received.

The most obvious conclusion is that it pays to shop around. There's nothing like competition to encourage a company to sharpen its pencils and come up with the best possible offer.

Another is that the county, and indeed every level of government, owes it to the taxpayers to get the best value for their money. By state law, a municipality must go through a public bidding process when it purchases a product if its cost exceeds a certain amount. No such bidding process is required for a service, such as purchase of insurance.

Too often, a municipality falls into the habit of giving this business to one company. It seldom looks around to see if it can get a better price, probably due to inertia as much as anything else. And that is just poor business practice.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Moore and daughter Rita of Waynesburg attended funeral services Thursday for Mr. Moore's brother Robert R. of Richmond, Va. who died earlier this week. Mr. Moore had lived in Virginia since returning from service in France during World War II.

Thoughts of the annual Greene County Fair are far in the future for most local folks but for the energetic and active members of the 4-H Clubs who are working hard. Girls and boys alike are getting up an hour or two before daylight to get their animals ready. Currently there are 65 lambs and 52 baby beefs in the program.

Speaking of the fair, the late Harry Cree of Waynesburg will be honored with a special event at the Greene County Fair this year. Mr. Cree was struck and killed by an automobile while leaving the fair last year.

By the time this appears in print, the century-old home at Reese's Mill will be razed to make room for the new railroad. The mill itself was dismantled last year and taken to a farm in Fayette County.

Eugenia Kuran, an Observer-Reporter employee, flew to Vero Beach, Fla. last week where she joined her husband Michael for a ten-day vacation and car trip back home.

Waynesburg businessman Matt Barton is a patient in West Virginia University Hospital in Morgantown where he was admitted this week for observation. He is in Room 5306.

Central Greene 7th Grader Wins County Spelling Bee

CARMICHAELS — A seventh grader from the Central Greene School District correctly spelled "mariculture" to win the annual Greene County Spelling Bee held in the Carmichaels Area High School auditorium Tuesday night.

Kelly Sonneborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Robert Sonneborn, of Waynesburg, and a student at the Margaret Bell Miller Middle School in Waynesburg, outspelled 22 other contestants to become the champion speller.

Runnerup was Janet Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Baker, of Carmichaels, and a seventh grade student at Carmichaels Junior High School.

Janet missed the word "tocin" which Kelly correctly spelled then correctly spelled "mariculture" to become the champion. It was the 122nd word in the spelling bee.

Kelly is now eligible to participate with winners from other counties in the Western Pennsylvania Spelling Bee to be held in Pittsburgh on May 7.

The county spelling bee is sponsored by the Greene County Concerned Citizens and was hosted this year by the Carmichaels Area School District. Enunciator was Richard Macino, of Pittsburgh. Judges were Linda Koballa, Craig Baily, and Nancy Masuga, all teachers in the Carmichaels Area School District.

Kelly Sonneborn, right, placed first, and Janet Baker was runner-up in the Greene County Spelling Bee held Tuesday night.

Fire Company Asks Township For Help

CARMICHAELS — A representative of the Crucible Volunteer Fire Co. asked the Cumberland Township board of supervisors Thursday night for help in developing a community recreation area being planned by the fire company.

James Walters stated his plea at the meeting of the supervisors Thursday night.

Walters said the fire company has donated ground for the park and members have agreed to maintain the grounds and equipment. He told the supervisors the entire project would cost about $15,000.

"There are virtually no recreational facilities in Crucible. We have been talking about this for 10 years but nothing has been done," Walters said. "We hope to get started this summer, but we need equipment and material."

Plans call for a basketball court, tennis court, walkways, bike path and a playground with slides, swings and other facilities.

The supervisors told Walters they have not distributed any of the $5,000 in the budget for recreation, but approved a motion to consider Crucible if and when they do so.

The supervisors also discussed the possibility of site preparation.

In other action, the supervisors announced they will repave the entire length of Old Waynesburg Road during the first week of May. Bids on the project will be opened April 7.

The board also approved the attendance of three members of the Township Zoning Hearing Board at a zoning seminar at Robert Morris College April 30.

Fact and Folklore
 John O'Hara

Rub a dub dub, three men in a tub, And who do you think they were? The butcher, the baker and the candle stick maker.

The writer of those lines didn't know it, but he may have been the first man in history to make a labor survey, starting a process that is still going on to this day.

People back in those primitive times may not have had so many occupations to worry about, but they did attach a sense of importance to what people did and how they did it.

In Waynesburg, for instance, back in the early days of the present century, men were known more by their occupations than by anything else.

Centuries before Henry Ford pulled his first Model T automobile off the assembly line in Detroit, there had been thousands of blacksmith shops in the United States. There were not only in the cities, but in every village and town. And preceding that time there is no doubt that blacksmiths played an important back-stage role in the chariot races in the Roman coliseum.

To get back to the Waynesburg of 75 years ago, a man's occupation and the honesty and integrity in which he pursued it, as well as his skill in whatever trade or occupation he "followed," had a lot to do with the respect he commanded in the community.

While that was long before the days of guarantees, a tradesman was not only expected to be capable, but it was understood that he stood behind his work. A man's word was regarded as his bond, and the guarantee of a good job was implicit in an agreement to take on a job.

All transactions were on a close, personalized basis. It was something that worked to the benefit of the capable craftsman and sent the incompetent to an other locality in a short time.

Good reputations for skill and honesty spread rapidly to everyone in a community and to adjoining villages and towns, just as the bad traits of a riding horse also "got all over town" in a hurry. As a result, good blacksmiths, carriage makers and painters, and later automobile mechanics and electricians, never lacked for work. Usually they had jobs waiting for them as soon as they finished what they were doing. Like the man who made a better mousetrap, the world (on a limited basis, of course) beat a path to their door.

Computer Letters: Dear Aunt (Fill In The Blank)

What I need is an automatic letter writer; one that can be programmed easily, by the punching of a few keys or pads or whatever those things have. Then the letters would type themselves.

I think this is the only way I will ever catch up with all the letters I owe. I am so far behind in my correspondence at this point that I can't even imagine the extent of it, or how many people are soon going to confront me with nasty comments about it.

If I had a computer to write all these letters, I'd be able to keep my relatives at bay, at least for a while. I could punch in "Aunt" and the computer would type out a letter suitable between the bookends

 by marcia mckenna biddle

for any aunt. It would explain that I had been so busy with my spring housecleaning that I had almost forgotten to write. It would describe how carefully I had been washing windows and scrubbing the floors and making new draperies and whatever else you're supposed to do when you clean house. I can't think of anything else right now.

I think my aunts would like to hear about all that. They would write immediately and tell me I shouldn't work so hard, bless them. But then I would owe them a letter again. And I would feel guilty about telling them tall tales. Of course, if they didn't believe me I could just tell them the computer lied.

I could probably get away with sending everybody the same letter, if I could teach the computer to change a few sentences here and there. I hear they can do that. But first, somebody would have to teach me.

If I sent the housecleaning letter to my brothers, they would fall over laughing, or advise me to call the doctor. More likely, they would advise me that an impostor had sent them a letter in my name. They claim they get only two letters a year from me, at the most, but I think they're wrong. I'm afraid their memories are failing, because I think I surely write more often than that. They probably need computers to remember things for them.

I read about one family which sends out a newsletter to all its scattered members. The mother collects all the information and puts it together every month. I thought that sounded like a good idea, but I haven't gotten around to it yet. The computer would make it a lot easier, I think.

If all the children could dial in and interface with my computer, it would have the information and could print it might cut down on phone bills. Surely, they couldn't talk as long to the computer as they do to me. But maybe for that operation they'd all need their own computers, and the cost of this is beginning to get out of hand, I'm afraid.

But if any of my relatives read this, and wonder why they still haven't gotten a letter from me, I want them to know I'm thinking about doing it. It's just the computer that's lazy.

Chief Cautions Area Residents

CLARKSVILLE — Replacement work by PennDOT on a Clarksville bridge has prompted Fire Chief Stanley Fowler to issue an appeal to people living on the western end of the bridge to be extra cautious about fires while the bridge is closed.

Fowler said Clarksville firefighters will be delayed in responding to fires in the area west of the bridge because they will have to detour around the work area. Because of this, Fowler said, members of the Jefferson Volunteer Fire Co. also have agreed to respond to any fires in that area.

New Bids For Bobtown Repairs Save $120,000

MAPLETOWN — Bids for the renovation of Bobtown Elementary School were opened at a special meeting of the Southeastern Greene School Board Tuesday night.

Apparent low bids totaled $2,774,900, which is $120,357 less than when the project was bid in May 1982. At that time, the board elected to renovate and construct an addition to Penn Pitt Elementary School, delaying action on the Bobtown school. The $2.1-million renovation project is currently under way at the Penn Pitt school.

The low base bids for the Bobtown project opened last night were submitted by William Garlick and Sons Inc. of Connellsville, $1,822,600 for general construction; Tamasy Brothers, Inc. of North Huntingdon, $438,800 for heating and ventilating; R.D. Goss Inc. of Clearfield, $219,000 for plumbing; and Miller Co. Electrical Contractors of Uniontown, $294,500 for electrical work.

Some alternatives to the project could cut construction costs even further if the board agrees to them. Those included using enamel paint instead of tile in hallways, restrooms and kitchen areas; deleting the stage, curtains and track for the proposed group instruction room, or not adding a new, paved parking area.

It took little more than an hour for the bids to be opened and read and they were turned over to Architect Robert Scheeren and the solicitor for evaluation. It is expected that their recommendations will be made at the next regular meeting of the board, the second week of April.

Plans for the Bobtown school include an addition to house a library, administration offices, multi-purpose room, kitchen, group instruction room with a portable stage, elevator and new main entrance. The classrooms will all be housed in the present building with the auditorium remodeled for five classrooms. Also planned are an art room, music instruction and practice rooms, special education classroom and storage areas.

It is unknown if the board will vote to undertake renovation of the Bobtown school. When the matter was first considered, the board decided to only renovate Penn Pitt because of the high cost of undertaking two construction projects. At February's meeting, however, those voting to re-bid the project were Dave Bierer, Gary Mosier, Mark Brozik, Floyd Hornick and Adam Novak. Voting against the measure were Board President Jim Minor, John Mason, Emil Enoff and Bob Watson.

The Bobtown school was constructed in the 1920s with five classrooms and the auditorium added in 1938.

New Director Takes Stage

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College has a new drama director who feels a woman's instincts can be a valuable asset in the theater.

"I treat a play 'maternally,'" said Ellen Delaney Ball, who recently was named director of the college Theater Department and Playhouse. "On opening night, it's as if I'm turning my child loose."

Mrs. Ball comes to Waynesburg College with experience in directing at summer theater camps and workshops. She also is an experienced teacher who taught at the high school level in West Virginia and has been associated with theaters in the Washington and Pittsburgh areas.

"I began directing five years ago," she said. "Before that, I felt that only men could direct since it is an activity that requires power as well as sensitivity. A friend convinced me to try directing, and since then I've discovered my own style — letting my maternal instincts shape the play which becomes the 'child'."

Mrs. Ball will turn loose her first "Waynesburg child" in "Little Mary Sunshine." The musical comedy will run Thursday through Saturday, April 7-9, with April 9 as the annual Dinner-Theater Night sponsored by the Waynesburg College Alumni Association.

Heart Patients Helped

WAYNESBURG — William Milesky, 70, of Finleyville has a "new lease on life" and his family participated in a program of rehabilitation to assist the recent heart patient with his recovery.

Milesky was the first patient in Greene County Memorial Hospital's recently developed Cardiac Rehabilitation Program. The program is a multi-disciplinary approach to expanded care for cardiac patients.

The program was organized for physicians who have patients suffering from myocardial infarction (heart attack), angina (chest pain), and atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries). Once a cardiac patient is admitted to the hospital — normally to the Special Care Unit — the doctor can refer the patient to the Cardiac Rehabilitation Program as part of the treatment plan for recovery.

The Cardiac Rehabilitation Committee was organized in September, 1982. Greene County has the highest rate of mortality from heart disease in Southwestern Pennsylvania, and approximately 482 cardiac cases were admitted to Greene County Memorial in 1980 and 493 in 1982.

For information about the program, contact Ann Jacobs, coordinator, Cardiac Rehabilitation Committee, 627-3101, extension 534.
