HERB CAPEHART

Evangelist Is Featured

CARMICHAELS — Evangelist Herb Capehart will be featured at "Here's Hope" services at 7 p.m. nightly Sunday, June 5 through Saturday, June 11 at the First Baptist Church in Carmichaels. A special service will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday, June 5.

The local services are especially significant in that the Southern Baptist Convention will be held in Pittsburgh this year for the first time.

Local church members will be making a survey in the area to gather information about religious preferences and to determine needs of the handicapped, the elderly living alone or families needing food or other assistance.

Over 1,000 volunteers will be working in Southwestern Pennsylvania to gather this information with 100 volunteers working in Greene County.

In cooperation with the "Here's Hope" services, the United Methodist Church of Carmichaels will host the Florence, Ala. Baptist tour choir at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 11. The 35-member choir will present the musical "The Witness."

The Rev. Don Gillenwater, pastor of the First Baptist Church, has announced transportation is available to the special services by calling 966-7362 or 966-8616.

STUFFED SHIRT

You've met this man before! Remember him? What grand airs he liked to assume! What vain boasts poured from his lips! He was forever trying to make an impression, but most people saw through his false front. They called him a STUFFED SHIRT!

Airs and vanity rarely fool us. We look for the inner qualities of a man's character. Only when those inner qualities are just as fine as the external impression he makes—only then are we sure we have met a man of the highest caliber.

Our sanctuaries build character! Into the life of the individual and of the community it pours those moral and spiritual influences which develop man's innate nobility. Through religious education and the worship of God, they point young and old to the high goals and rich resources of Christian living.

May Brings Bad News For Property Owners

May has come to be an unhappy month for property owners, for it is the time of the year when they get the bad news that school taxes are continuing their upward spiral.

This year is no exception, as virtually every school district in the area is announcing real estate tax increases as part of their 1983-84 budgets.

The largest we have heard of to date is in the Southeastern Greene District, where home owners face a whopping 38-mill boost unless the school board can do some paring between now and next month, when school budgets are finally adopted.

While salaries and employee benefits are generally being cited as the major reasons for escalating costs, there are many other factors which complicate the fiscal picture, not the least of which is the continuing erosion of state support.

In the Central Greene District, for example, the business manager pointed out that a $144,000 increase in state subsidy represents just 22 percent of the $631,000 budgetary increase proposed for the coming year. Overall, the level of state support will fall to 40 percent, which is well below the 50 percent for which Harrisburg is supposed to be responsible.

It was also interesting to note that the Central Greene District this year experienced a 96 percent collection rate on local property taxes, when it had estimated the rate at the normal 97 percent. That one percent decline meant a $56,000 drop in anticipated revenues. Had the district received the $56,000, it would have meant a proposed five-mill tax increase could have been held to four mills for the coming year.

Real estate taxes are the most stable sources of local income for the support of public education, and a one percent decrease in those revenues is most unusual. The fact that it occurred could mean that a lot of property owners are reaching the point where they can't stand the load.

County Keeps Program

WAYNESBURG — Noting the success of the program during the past year, the Greene County Commissioners Thursday unanimously approved a one-year extension of a special program to aid the unemployed.

Using a $150,000 federal grant, the Human Services Agency last year served 11,000 citizens in Washington and Greene counties in the past fiscal year.

Branch offices around the county offered counseling, resume help and job searches for the unemployed.

Henry Fiumelli explained the grant will be increased to $163,000 next year. No county money is involved in maintaining the several assistance centers in the two counties.

The commissioners, noting the unemployment rate in Greene County is nearly 19 percent, voted unanimously to continue the program. It was also noted this program was another example of the cooperation between Washington and Greene counties in a joint venture to aid the public.

Three Greene County citizens serve on the Human Services Advisory Board which recommends action. Board member Frank Bogan recently announced his resignation because he will be leaving the area. The commissioners are now considering a replacement.

Honor College Chemist

WAYNESBURG — Dr. Mildred May Maguire was named the "Outstanding Woman for 1982-83" by the Waynesburg Branch of the American Association of University Women during the club's annual spring banquet in the First Baptist Church of Waynesburg. She and the other honored women from the 76 branches in Pennsylvania will receive special recognition during the AAUW convention this month.

Dr. Maguire was born in Leetsdale and graduated from Leetsdale High School, earned a bachelor's degree from Carnegie-Mellon University, a master's degree from the University of Wisconsin and a Ph.D. in physical chemistry from Pennsylvania State University.

She is a professor of chemistry at Waynesburg College and an Oak Ridge Associated Universities Faculty Research participant with the United States Department of Energy. She has been a research chemist for the Koppers Company and the American Cyanamid Company of Stamford, Conn.

Dr. Maguire was the recipient of the Research Corporation of New York Grant, the American Association of University Women Fellowship to England in 1980-81, and the United Kingdom Leverhulme Trust Research Fellowship to the University of Leicester, England, in 1980-81.

While at the University of Leicester, she conducted research with Professor Martyn Symons, chairman of the Physical Chemistry Department, on radiation effects on organometallic compounds. This work has implications in biomedical and coal research.

Professor and Mrs. Arthur Humphreys, former chairman of the English Department for the University of Leicester, were her hosts in England and the Isle of Arran in Scotland.

Dr. Maguire is a member of St. Ann Church, AAUW, Waynesburg Women's Club, American Chemical Society, American Association of University Professors, American Physical Society, and American Association for the Advancement of Science. She is listed in Who's Who in Technology Today, and American Men and Women in Science.

Dr. Maguire was recently chairwoman of a tea for Waynesburg College graduating women, hosted by the Waynesburg Chapter of the AAUW and the Drus Society of the college.

Dr. Mildred Maguire receives corsage from Sarah Olmstead after being named "Outstanding Woman for 1982-83" by the Waynesburg branch of the AAUW.

WWII Memories Led Dutchman To Prosperity

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Nearly 38 years ago a young Dutch soldier defied his Japanese captors at a prison camp near Tokyo to retrieve a message dropped from a U.S. fighter plane.

This month he finally met the author of that message, John VanArsdale, who lives near Prosperity.

In the summer of 1945, Rudy Michielsen was a prisoner of war working in a Japanese factory near Tokyo. A 24-year-old cavalry soldier stationed in the Dutch East Indies, he had been captured in March 1942 when the Japanese invaded the islands.

He was first taken to Singapore and then to Japan where he was among a large group of prisoners used as forced labor at a copper smelting operation. Many Americans were also in the camp.

When American planes were first seen flying over the area, there were mixed feelings. The raids were a strong indication the war was nearing an end but it also meant strafing runs that killed allied prisoners as well as Japanese soldiers.

Michielsen and his fellow prisoners were forced to remain standing out in the open when the fighter planes attacked. The Japanese ran for shelter. The prisoners discussed the air raids with a recently captured American pilot who told them to wave at the planes and hope the pilots would recognize them as prisoners of war.

The plan worked. VanArsdale was a member of the flight deck crew aboard the aircraft carrier, U.S.S. Shangri-la from which the Tokyo raids were being launched. One of the returning fighter pilots told VanArsdale he thought perhaps the group of men at the Japanese base were Allied prisoners of war because of instead of running, they waved furiously at the planes.

VanArsdale got the idea to place a message inside a tin can and have a pilot drop the can over the camp. After writing his military address and home address on an envelope, VanArsdale penned, "Lots of Luck."

On the next raid, one of the pilots dropped the can in the middle of the prisoner of war camp. Knowing his actions would lead to another beating at the hands of his captors, Michielsen broke ranks, retrieved the can and pocketed the envelope.

The message was the talk of the camp for a few days but eventually Michielsen placed the envelope in his diary and forgot about it.

It wasn't until last August the envelope again surfaced and then only by accident. Michielsen decided to clean out his garage and in the course of moving around some old military items, the envelope dropped out of the diary.

Regretting that he had never attempted to contact his unknown American friend, Michielsen decided to make the effort, despite the 37 years that had passed. Michielsen wrote a letter addressed to VanArsdale or the "occupant" at the address in Carnegie where VanArsdale had resided when he entered the service.

The unknown "occupant" took some extra time and began calling VanArsdales in the Pittsburgh phone book. In short order, the right VanArsdale was located at his farm near Prosperity. For the next several months, the two veterans exchanged letters and a visit was soon arranged.

Although he seriously considered a vacation to Indonesia, he decided to instead visit his friend in the United States and he couldn't be happier about the decision.

Michielsen, who retired from the Dutch army with the rank of major, has been most impressed with the friendly people in Greene County and the informal way of life. Michielsen and his wife, Anna, a classical singer, enjoyed their first hot dog and both rave about American hamburgers. Anna, according to her husband, has become a doughnut "freak" and has three recipes to take home. The Dutch visitors can't get over the way Americans raid the refrigerator every two hours.

They also have been impressed with the clean shopping malls.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Another Waynesburg Horse Show has come and gone and much of the credit for its usual success should go to Bill Woolery and Jody Ross. Both men worked continuously through the four-day event to keep the track in shape despite the heavy rains.

State Trooper Joe Albani, a criminal investigator out of the Waynesburg Barracks, has returned home following hospitalization in Pittsburgh. He suffered a heart attack last month while on duty at the local substation. He makes his home in Mason-town.

Traffic in Waynesburg over the past weekend was bumper-to-bumper on Greene Street. What with the annual horse show, national motorcycle races in Mt. Morris and out-of-town visitors back to decorate graves, it was one of the busiest days on the highways this year.

Colleen and James Walkley of Stratford, Conn. and Doreen Drew of Harrisburg were weekend guests in the home of their parents and sister, Eugenia Kuran of Carmichaels R.D.1 over the Memorial Day weekend.

Dr. Frank Burnarde Hill of Doylestown, a native of Greene County, died this week in Abington Memorial Hospital in Abington at the age of 68. He was the son of the late Frank B. and Oma Waychoff Hill of Waynesburg.

Two experts on the intoxilizer which measures the alcohol content in a driver's blood flew to Waynesburg from Oregon this week to testify in a drunk driving case and it was all for nothing because the driver entered a plea of guilty before the testimony began. It was especially significant in that it was the first test of the instrument in Pennsylvania.

Volunteers Sought

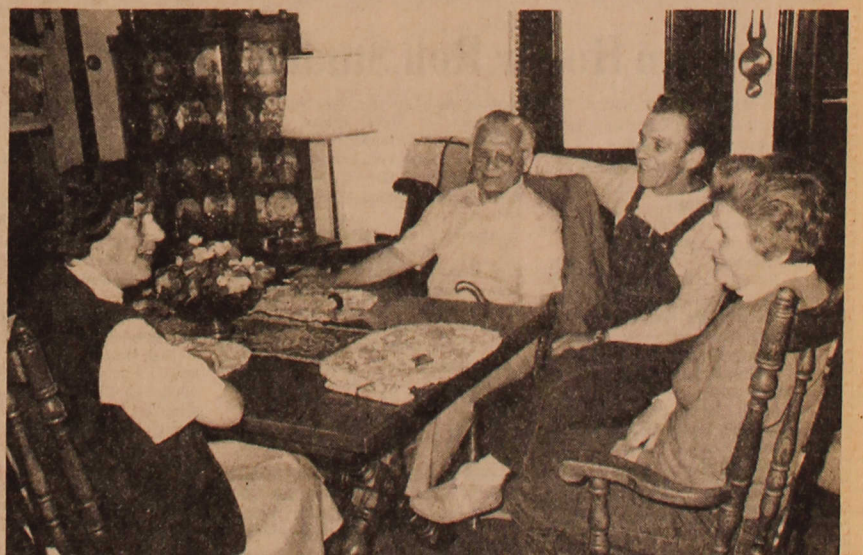

WAYNESBURG — The federally funded Upward Bound program at Waynesburg College is seeking volunteers to organize and run summer workshops for high school students on a variety of topics.

Upward Bound program Director Jan Harris said interested individuals are being sought to teach workshops in personal finance, consumerism, employment skills, calligraphy, art, music, shorthand, sign language, sports, meteorology, and a number of other areas.

"The summer Upward Bound program is the most important part of the project," Harris said. "During the six weeks that students are on campus, they participate in four weeks of rigorous classes and two weeks of workshops."

"Because the Upward Bound budget is limited, we are seeking interested individuals who will give their time voluntarily," she said.

Harris added that the summer component of the Upward Bound program at Waynesburg College will run from June 26 through Aug. 5 this year, with more than 50 students from Greene and Washington counties planning to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Michielsen of Oosterhout, left, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John VanArsdale of Prosperity.
