Dry Spell Almost Over For 1,500 Residents

DILLINER - A two-day dry spell for some 1,500 residents of southeastern Greene County was scheduled to come to an end at midnight Tuesday

The East Dunkard Water Association expected to begin turning water back into their lines starting at 10 p.m. Tuesday, and anticipated that all lines would be back in service by 12 o'clock.

The association suspended water service at 9 p.m. Sunday when all four of their storage tanks were drained dry. It required two days to pump the 800,000 gallons of water needed to refill them

"It has been a very difficult time for everybody," plant manager Isaac Lewis said Gerald Marcinak, superintendent of the Southeastern Greene School District, said that students who attend the elementary school at Bobtown will be back in their classrooms Wednesday morning. Classes were suspended Monday and Tuesday because the school was without water, as was the entire town.

The association also provides water for the communities of Dilliner, Garards Fort, Sugar Grove, Headlee Heights and other parts of Dunkard, Monongahela and Greene Townships.

Firemen at Bobtown and Greensboro, as well as officials of the East Dunkard Association, said they knew of no emergencies which resulted from the lack of water.

Paul Novak of the Bobtown fire company said that the company tanker truck was used to distribute water to residents on Monday until it broke down.

'We couldn't haul any today (Tuesday) and we got a lot of calls from people who wanted water, but there wasn't anything we could do about it," he said. "It was a hard way to learn, but what happened should make people aware of the need for conservation in the months ahead."

Conservation is necessary because the East Dunkard filtration plant can pump just 280,000 gallons of water a day, and its customers have been using 300,000 gallons. Sunday's critical situation was created when hot weather demands decreased the supply in storage to a low level, and customers responded to a radio plea for conservation by drawing additional water for storage as a hedge against a cut-off.

17-Year-Old Boy Drowns At Pitt Gas

CLARKSVILLE - A 17-year-old youth was drowned Tuesday evening when he jumped into Ten Mile Creek from the steel superstructure of the highway bridge at Pitt Gas, near Clarksville.

The body of Kevin Ross was re-covered shortly before 6 p.m. by scuba divers from the East Bethle-hem Volunteer Fire Company after he had been in the water for about 45 minutes. He was taken to Greene minutes. He was taken to Greene County Memorial Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Ross had moved to Pitt Gas less than a week ago after being placed as a foster child in the home of Aileen Overby, who said the placement was made by an agency near Latrobe. He was reported to have previously resided in Donora, where he had been a student at Ringgold High School.

State police in Waynesburg said the youth, who could not swim, had gone to the creek with three compan-

One of them, Arthur Garrett of Pitt Gas, said he and the other two youths, Larry Jamison and Raymond Davis, attempted to rescue Ross. He said he reached the victim at one point, but was forced to let go when Ross began to drag him under. Clarksville Volunteer firemen said they were called about 20 minutes after Rossjumped into the creek. They called the East Bethlehem scuba team, who searched for 25 minutes before finding the body. Attempts at artifical resuscitation were unsuccessful.

Labor Contract Brought To Court

WAYNESBURG - The Greene County Court heard arguments Wednesday on the contention of the Wayne Township board of supervisors that a labor contract entered into by their predecessors was ex-ecuted illegally and should be de-clared invalid.

The matter is before the court on an appeal from a ruling by a Pennsyl-vania Labor Board arbitrator that the present board is bound by the contract which was executed on Nov. 1981, by Charles Adams, who at that time was chairman of the board of supervisors

The arbitrator, Carl F. Stoltenberg, said in effect that while

Carmichaels Breaks Ground For New Municipal Building

By Stan Diamond, Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS - Members of Carmichaels Borough Council broke ground for a new municipal building Sunday afternoon following five years of controversy sparked by the dying embers from a fire that destroyed the previous one.

A small crowd, many of them municipal employees, attended the ceremony held at the building site at the corner of George and Pine Streets. But even the location, one block from the town square, was not without its share of controversy when purchased recently for $18,000. But before she turned the first spadeful of dirt, Council President Betty Morris said, "I expect con-troversy, but as long as I have council's help this building will be built." Apparently to keep controversy at a minimum and correct information flowing, she asked that people come to her with questions they may have about the project, "and just don't believe what you hear on the street." She also vowed that taxes would not the building construction. "I have spent hours and hours going over these figures," she said, "and it can be done Although specifics of the building are still to be decided, it is expected to measure approximately 45 by 35 feet. It will not have a basement and no date has been set for its completion. Most of the labor and expertise for its construction will be volunteered, and the $30,000 in the construction fund is to be used for materials.

An early Sunday morning fire in April, 1978, gutted the former municipal building, an old school which council purchased when it was closed in 1967. The two-story building, constructed in 1893, was completely re-stored by countil as its contribution to the county as a Bicentennial project. But the fire was so intense that it structurally damaged the building, and it eventually was razed for safety purposes when immediate plans to restore what remaind of the building proved too costly and unpopular, as did plans to construct a new building. The site of the former building also had certain deed restrictions which the chairman Connie Morris reported during a meeting of the association that 17 area high schools have entered candidates for the Coal Queen Pageant. Candiates will be announced in August.

The current Coal Queen, Debbie Tekavec, of Fairchance-Georges High School, made her latest ap-pearance of a busy year at the Waynesburg Horse Show held last weekend and presented ribbons to winners in many of the events.

A request from the St. Paul Lu-theran Women to operate a food stand along the Coal Show parade route was granted by the KCA. It was angranted by the KCA. the supervisors may not have complied with all legal requirements in negotiating the contrct, Local 286 of the Laborers's District Council of Western Pennsylvania should not be penalized by invalidation of the contract since it had negotiated in good faith

In arguing the case Wednesday, attorney Laura A. Candris of Pitts-burgh contended that the agreement had no validity since it was executed unilaterally by Adams, with no record in the minutes that the entire board had ever taken formal action on it at a public meeting, as required by the township code.

"It is incredible that any union could believe that one official could commit a municipality to a labor contract," she said in responding to the arbitrator's ruling that the union could not be expected to be an expert in township law

Attorney Ewing B. Pollock of Waynesburg, also representing the present board of supervisors, pointed out further that Donna Simpson, who signed the contract as township secretary-treasurer, was a member of the union. He also noted that two of the supervisors who were in office at the time had already been defeated in the primary election and were due to leave office two months after Adams executed the agreement.

Pittsburgh attorney Stephen M. Schmerin, representing the union, reiterated his claim that while the su-pervisors may have been culpable. the union should not be penalized for their shortcomings.

Sheriff Loses Case For Higher Salary

WAYNESBURG - Sheriff Remo Bertugli's effort to obtain the $17,000 salary which goes to the sheriff of a sixth class county was denied Friday by the Greene County Court.

Judge Glenn Toothman ruled that the constitutional ban on raising or lowering the salary of a public official during his term of office applies because the county commissioners' action in raising Greene County from a seventh class to a sixth class county did not take place until after Bertugli had been elected to his second term as sheriff.

Bertugli was elected on Nov. 3, 1981. On Dec. 31 of that year — five days before the sheriff was sworn into office — the commissioners adopted a resolution changing the classification to sixth class. But Bertugli has continued to receive the $15,500 annual salary as sheriff as a seventh class county

As a result, he brought a mandamus action against the board of commissioners in an effort to force them to pay the higher wage. He claimed that the change in classification automatically entitled him to the higher salary and was not subject to the constitutional ban.

In his opinion, Judge Toothman pointed out that the change would have to have been made prior to Nov. 3, 1981, when Bertugli was elected, to entitle him to the sixth class compensation. He also pointed out that in a similar case in another county, the Supreme Court rejected the claim of a county commissioner for a higher salary midway through a term of office because there had been a change of county classification.

He therefore dismissed the peti-tion for a writ of mandamus, stating:

"In doing so, the court is not in-sensitive to the inequitable salary disparity created by these circum-stances, as controlled by the constitutional provision. And while it dictates our dismissal of the action, our doing so does not diminish our conviction that the sheriff's services are as valuable as those of any other elected county officer, and is certainly an invaluable arm of the court."

Parking Ban Eyed During Fair Week

WAYNESBURG — Franklin Township Supervisors said Monday they would consider a no-parking ban on Route 21 at the Greene County on Route 21 at the Greene County Fairgrounds during fair week. J. Riley White and Larry Marshall, representing the fair board, approached the supervisors and cited the dangerous conditions created by parked vehicles on both sides of the busy highway. White mentioned a fatal accident that occurred in the area last year that occurred in the area last year and said the fair board had been in contact with Pennsylvania Depart ment of Highway officials. PennDOT officials told the fair board it would be up to the township to legislate noparking ordinances

The township had considered park-ing restrictions a few years ago but dropped the idea when it became apparent there would be no way to enforce the ordinance. The township has no police force and, according to township officials, the state police said they could not enforce the parking ban

The supervisors said they would meet with their solicitor later this month to determine further action.

It also was learned Monday that township would not receive state th aid to improve roads and storm sew ers in West Waynesburg. For the third time, a grant application for the project was rejected. Because the township has not received an official letter on the matter, the reason for the rejection was not known. It was also noted during the meeting, the township recently spent $70,000 to tar and chtp over 40 miles of road. The annual tar and chipping project is the largest capital outlay in the township budget.

WAYNESBURG - Sherri L. Van-Druff and John V. Curry were mar-ried Saturday, June 4, 1983, at the Claughton Chapel United Methodist Church near Waynesburg. The Rev. David Hackenburg officiated the 4:30 p.m. double ring ceremony, with Stan Ferek as or-ganist and Robert and Christa Cowell as soloists

The bride is a daughter of Harold and Gertrude VanDruff of Waynes-burg R.D.2. The bridegroom is a son of Glenn and Gladys Brewer of Gar-ards Fort and the late Neil Curry.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She selected a gown of pleated chiffon knit and swiss embroidery with an embroidered collar, sheer yoke, swiss embroidered caplet, Rachel lace gauntlets and pleated skirt edged in lace and crystal pleating. Her bonnet cap with Rachel lace and seed pearls held a waltz length veil and blusher trimmed with Rachel lace. She carried a bouquet of orchids, pink roses, ivy, baby's breath and stephanotis. Sharon Cowell attended the bride as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Nancy Reagan, Brenda Brinker and Colleen Curry, sister of the bride-groom. The attendants wore gowns of pink tissue taffeta and carried bou-quets of pink daisies, lilac mums, status and baby's breath.

Rachel Tustin, niece of the bride-groom, and Mark Bouchard were flower girl and ringbearer.

Scott Cole of Spraggs served as best man. Ushers were Will Smith, Richard Hopkins and H. Brion Van-

Candlelight Rites For Elek, Jones

WAYNESBURG — The First Field byterian Church of Waynesburg was the setting of a candlelight ceremony on May 22, 1983 uniting in marriage Lynn Ann Elek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Elek of 381 Ceylon Road, Carmichaels, and David Thomas Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jones of Roscoe Officiating ministers were the Rev. David Barrett of Waynesburg and the Rev. Robert Loughborough of Roscoe. Musical selections were played by Christopher Loy, a member of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and sung by Bonnie Shock, a member of the Mandelsenb, Chair of Bitts of the Mendelssohn Choir of Pittsburgh.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white gown which featured a fitted sweetheart reembroidered bodice with seed pearls, full bishop sleeves that de-scended into pointed cuffs, and a full chiffon skirt which cascaded into a deep flounce of imported Venice lace ended in a chapel-length train. Her Lady Dianne headpiece of pearls and rhinestones held a cathedral-length veil of illusion with rhinestones scattered throughout. Cassandra Cassetta of Waynesburg attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lisa Elek, sister of the bride; Regina Elek, cousin of the bride; Carol Jones, sister of the bridegroom, and Susan Goughnour of Carmichaels. Junior bridesmaid wasChylene Ross, cousin of the bride. Flower girls were Tricia Adam and Amy Jones, both cousins of the bridegroom. The maid of honor were a dusty

Nemacolin Showing Way To Community Improvement

Residents of the small Greene County town of Nemacolin are currently doing something which people in other communities might do well to copy

Under the leadership of Nemacolin, Inc., an organization of community leaders, they have mounted a "Let's Make Nemacolin Beautiful Again" campaign. Begun just recently, it will consist of eight "work days" on Saturdays from June to September.

Volunteers will undertake such things as cleaning streets, hauling away junk cars, refurbishing the honor roll and other community landmarks, clearing out weeds and unsightly shrubs, tearing down old garages and in general giving their town a face lifting.

Nemacolin, a well-planned coal town, has always been regarded as a model for such communities, and its residents have always been proud of it. Over the years, members of Nemacolin, Inc., all of them volunteers, have undertaken a number of projects involving recreation, playgrounds and general betterment. It's community action at its best.

There are doubtless many problems that small communities can solve without help. But with civic pride and a little work, any town can be a better place in which to live.

Specially Made Mace Presented To College

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College, for the first time in its history, has an official mace. The ornamental staff, described by the dictionary as a "symbol of authority borne before a public official or legislative body," was pre-sented Tuesday to Dr. G. Wayne Smith, academic dean at the college, by Cally Hudson of Midland, Mich.

She and her husband, Dr. Kirk Hudson, a Presbyterian minister who is a member of the college board of trustees, commissioned James and Carol Randolph of Waynesburg to make the mace when they observed that Waynesburg College didn't have one

"Both my husband and I are grad-uates of St. Lawrence University, (Canton, N.Y.) and he is also a trustee at Alma College in Michigan," Mrs. Hudson said. "We'd noticed that maces were used in ceremonial functions at both of them and at other colleges and felt Waynesburg should have one.

The wooden staff was two years in the making and incorporates materi-als from various buildings on camas well as symbols reflecting both the college and the community "Carol designed it to have as much meaning as possible," Randolph said.

"A lot of hours went into its making. The lamp on the top of the mace is the college symbol. The head is made of a block of oak from Miller Hall and sections of the original cherry hand-rail from Hanna Hall. Set into the four sides of the head are a celtic cross, symbolic of the college's affiliation with the Presbyterian Church; a square of coal representing Greene County; the college seal, and a diamond of stained glass from a win-dow at Miller Hall. The cross was donated by Seville Jewelers, who made it to specification especially for the mace the mace

The shaft is made of oak from the balusters at the former Sayers Manor. Oak was selected to represent the alumni because it is the college symbol.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph also made a special case for the mace, again using different kinds of woods from various buildings on campus.

Smith, who accepted the gift on behalf of interim president Dr. John P. Strange, said the mace would prob-ably be used for the first time at the ceremony at which Dr. J. Thomas Mills is installed as president of the college

We certainly thank Dr. and Mrs. Hudson for this beautiful gift," Smithe said. "It was very generous of them.

High Street will be pleasant surprise to former residents when they come to visit this summer. Many store fronts have been remodeled and West Penn will soon have the "unsightly" power lines removed from the downtown area. The facade at the Fashion Shop and Opera House has been receiving the most comments.

Fellow residents in Avalon Court are mourning the passing of Ralph Bane who was always the first person to offer help to fellow senior citizens. A long-time employee of Strosnider Printing Co., Mr. Bane was a familiar sight on Main Street and always had time to pass the day with his many friends.

It's no use for those who were reared in Greene County to try pretending any longer that they can have their cake and eat it too, insofar as being able to maintain their deeply imbedded roots while being part of

It started slowly enough some three or four decades ago when the first deep mines were opened along the Monongahela River at such places as Nemacolin, Crucible and Bobtown.

Now the surge of the new movement of miners and those in mining's support firms is being taken in stride by those who have "always" lived in or near Waynesburg.

The pace continues to be ac-celerated almost daily and gradually it is expanding into a tidal wave that promises to engulf the county from border to border

One does not have to be a prophet, or the son of a prophet, to forsee the changes that are already starting to take place and which will accelerate as mining extends on west. The new railroad being built from Waynesburg to Richhill Township points the way to a time when mining facilities will become as common as oil and gas well derricks were for more than 50 years after that industry born years after that industry began. Even with the more efficient ma-chinery which is a vital facor in the mining industry, the manpower needed to recover the vast deposits of coal which remain in Greene County could bring thousands of more miners

Miners are among the best-paid members of the working force and will be able to purchase extra land for recreation, filling the beautiful little nooks and corners which are still precious hideaway places and giving them a place where they can have their haven of privacy but still not have to live in a sense of loneliness or solation.

The Greene County of tomorrow will be a blend of those who like to express their wealth in large acreages and those who prefer to be to towns and communities with urbanm conveniences.

Greene County's early rural growth was related to the oil and gas industry, and its future rural growth will, like that of Fayette County, be dependent upon the coal industry. Greene County's most pleasurable resource has been its vast areas of open land, which has been available at relatively low cost to those who value self reliance and self sufficiency. It will no longer prevail as urbanization and the coal industry go hand-in-hand into the future

I went to a meeting in Harrisburg last week, and the trip proved to be uneventful. Except for one thing. At 2 a.m., the hotel fire alarm went off. This is not an event to be taken with calmness, rationality or finesse. I jumped up and raced around the room, trying to remember what you're supposed to do in this emergency, and hunting in vain for shoes. I looked out the little hole in the room's door, but the hallway seemed to be empty-no smoke, and no hysterical, half-dressed, potential victims. I tried to call the desk, but of course all lines were busy. Still half awake, I wondeed whether I should start soaking towels to breathe through, or something like that. I thought I remembered that you are not supposed to open your door, rush out into the hall, or get on an elevator. What I did, when I finally found them, was to put on my jogging shoes. If I had to run down four flights of stairs, I would be prepared. Thick soles, plenty of traction, I thought.

Nothing to worry about

Mr. Scranton had time only to express thanks for being invited when the alarms sounded again. Employees announced that there was indeed a problem, and that we should evacuate immediately. With the fire bells still clanging wildly, I paced the floor, looked out the window, out the door. No flames. No people, either. A very lonely feeling. Isolated

At length, a fire truck roared up the street and stopped directly under my window. It was followed by two more. The firemen were reassuring they did not leap off their trucks and into action. they did not connect hoses and start spraying my window with tons of water. They did not raise any ladders to rescue us poor souls—I was sure there must be other people in the hotel, although I couldn't see any evidence of it. What the firemen did was stand

Delinguent Fees Could Lead To Property Liens

CARMICHAELS — Residents of Carmichaels and Cumberland Town-ship who still have not paid the front footage assessment due for sewer line construction on their property face possible legal action. At a meeting Wednesday, the Car-michaels and Cumberland Township Sewer Authority authorized solicitor James Hook to execute property liens in August for any assessments which are still unpaid at that time.

Hook noted that some 45 property owners still have not paid the assess-ments, which were made in 1977 when the new sewerage system was con-structed. Liens against the properties were renewed in 1982, which resulted in additional costs of $100. "It is not fair to the many people who have paid to permit a few to get away without paying," Hook said.

West Greene's PIAA Hopes End In Fireworks

By Joe Tuscano, O-R Sports Staff

NEW CASTLE - West Greene High School's journey through the PIAA Class AA softball tournament came to a peaceful end here Thursday with an 8-2 loss to Iroquois.

What didn't die so easily, however, were the hard feelings Pioneer head

Bill Devore had for his counterpart, l'oquois' Bernie Fitch. "I have no respect for their coach (Fitch), team or organization," said

Devore The cause of that anger stemmed from a first-inning argument on the pitching motion of West Greene's ace Helen Wise. It all started in the botthe first Iroquois batter. As the Braves' Marie Waechter stepped to the plate, Fitch, who was in the third-base coaching box next to the West Greene dugout, began complaining about Wise's motion. "He (Fitch) was saying Helen was throwing an illegal pitch," Devore

Rodeo Is For Hospice $2,500 in prize money for having won

WAYNESBURG - There will be over 200 cowboys and cowgirls at the Diamond World Championship Rodeo to be held at the Greene County Fairgrounds on Friday, Saturday and Sun-day and many of them will be familiar faces to area residents.

However, they will be familiar because in "every day life" these people include a lawyer from Washington, a coal miner from Blacksville, a nurse from Fairmont, a young man from Eighty Four and lady horse trainer from West Finley.

The rodeo, which will benefit Hospice of Greene County, will feature competition at 7:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, June 17-18 and also at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 19. D.W. Minnick, one of the top calf his family in Eighty Four. Last November he represented the northwestern region in the national refinals at San Diego. The 22year-old cowboy came home with a trophy buckle, trophy saddle and the national championship. He is cur-rently ranked fourth in the Rodeo Cowboys of America standings.

Also representing the local area in cowgirls' barrel racing are Nora Anderson of West Finley and Carolyn Gross of Fairmont, who is the current leader in earnings. In the wild brahma bull riding competition, Tim Tuttle of Black-sville is always in the running for the prize money. Tim is a boss at Osage No. 3 Mine in Mooresville, W.Va.

Another of the top calf ropers in the country is Bill Johnson of Wash-ington. Called Billy Rob by his cowboy friends, he has less time for the rodeo circuit because he is a partner in the law firm of Wilson, Johnson and before Wise got Gayle Costolo to pop out to the shortstop. But on the play, the home plate umpire ruled the pitch illegal and called a balk on Wise, which allowed Waechter to score. 'She threw like that for one-third of an inning and the umpires never called it," Devore said. "They waited until the runner was on third and then they called it. If they had called it right off, then Helen would've stopped it but they waited until the runner got to third.

After the balk, Devore, Fitch and the umpires met along the first-base line where Fitch's claim was backed by the rule book. Even WPIAL ex-ecutive secretary Chuck Heberling was called into the discussion.

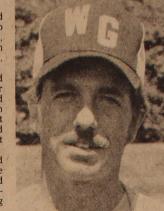

"West Greene's pitcher was throwing an illegal pitch and their coach took offense to it," said Fitch, who has guided the Braves to the District 10 championship and a 27-3 overall record this season. "Once the hands come together, as soon as you take your hand away, you have to pitch. If not, then it's an illegal pitch and the umpire has to call it.

After the meeting, Wise retired Costolo on a popup to the mound and then walked Wendy Turco. Fitch began yelling again from the coaching box and Devore became upset.

"He was trying to upset Helen," said Devore.

After Wise got out of the inning with a fly to right, Devore and Fitch entered into a shouting match as Fitch was heading to the Iroquois dugout and Devore was coming out to complain to the umpires.

"Our kids were rattled by that call," Devore said. "That put us down a run and Helen was upset. When you get this far, to have a coach worry about a technicality like that.

Almost lost in all the uproar was the outstanding pitching performance of Iroquois' Shelley Brown, who threw a three-hitter and struck out 10. So dominant was this sophomore through the first five innings that West Greene did not hit a ball out of the infield. Of the seven balls put in play, four were dribblers back to the mound and one was a bunt to third.

The Pioneers (18-5), third-place finishers in District 7, finally got to Brown in the seventh. April Slifko led off with a single and moved to second when Cathy Cooper was hit by a pitch. Wise then sent a Brown fastball into the gap in centerfield for a two-run
