Council Informed Of Progress By WERC

WAYNESBURG — Borough council was told this week that the Waynesburg Economic Revitalization project is now 75 percent complete and the final phase of the $500,000 project will begin soon.

The final phase includes the installation of 20 new street lights and the removal of power lines from the two-block business district by West Penn Power Co.

Bob Lang, executive director of WERC, showed council members a sample of the cast aluminum lights which will replace the seven mercury vapor lights now being used.

The seven lights in use cost the borough $63.92 per month. The 20 new lights are expected to cost $61.40 per month and will be used for 12 hours each day, but will not be maintained by West Penn. Under the new system, the borough will be responsible for all maintenance.

New lighting would also require West Penn to tear up sidewalks and streets to lay underground cable since the power lines will be moved off High Street.

Councilman Frank VanCleve suggested the possibility of power for the new lights being supplied from privately owned buildings with the building owner bearing the $3 monthly charge. VanCleve said three building owners have already volunteered to do so.

Cost of relocating the power lines must be borne by WERC and by having business owners volunteer, the cost of the relocation would be drastically reduced.

In other action, council was informed that VanCleve recently attended the Duncan Meter School and is now repairing parking meters.

In answer to residents' questions about the refuse collector taking lawn clippings and tree limbs, council president Glenn Richard said Long Trucking will take such items as long as the customer does not exceed the three-can limit for each household. For larger quantities, the homeowner must contact Long Trucking Co. for a special pickup or residents may take the items to the Long firm and place the items in a truck.

Sewer Authority Hopes To Keep Rate Constant

CARMICHAELS — There should be no sewage rate increase for residents of the Carmichaels area in the coming year.

James Hook, solicitor for the Carmichaels and Cumberland Township Joint Sewer Authority, made the prediction Tuesday as work was begun on the 1983-84 budget.

With the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, Hook said he hopes the authority will have the budget ready by the first week in September for presentation to the Cumberland Township supervisors and Carmichaels Borough Council for their review.

Hook also reported that negotiations with the sewage laborers' union are in progress. The authority recognized the union at the request of its three employees earlier this year. This will be the first negotiated contract.

Daniel Murphy was elected chairman of the authority to fill a vacancy created by the death of Steve Morris. Mickey Lesako will retain the office of vice chairman and authority member Alex Eddy was elected to replace Murphy as assistant secretary.

Plant manager Edgar Harris reported that flow meter panels have been repaired by Rich Roman of Pittsburgh and that a power entrance pole and starter box near a pump station on Route 88 were destroyed when hit by a car during a recent storm.

Harris also reported on the status of this year's budget. He said collections "have been good and expenditures are generally in line with budget estimates." He said a few accounts have been overspent, but most spending has been less than estimated.

Harris was given permission to attend a conference of the Water Pollution Control Association of Pennsylvania at Penn State in August. He has been asked to speak at a workshop on "preparing for and responding to sewage plant emergencies." His topic will be "foreign materials in the system: gasoline."

The authority voted to spend $2,776 to purchase a gasoline-powered pressure washer to remove all paint and rust in preparation for painting the sewage tanks and other equipment.

The corn in this field on a hill above Rutan in western Greene County reaches up toward a sky dotted with puffy clouds. A good corn crop is dependent upon a number of 80-degree days in July and August and, should nature cooperate, a number of roadside vegetable stands should be springing up across the county before long.

Exterior Work Vetoed By SE School District

By Christie R. Molzon, Staff Writer

MAPLETOWN — The main topics at the meeting of the Southeastern Greene School Board Tuesday night an exterior cover for the Bobtown school and furniture for the renovated Penn Pitt school.

The board voted against adding an insulating cement mixture for the exterior of the Bobtown school which was expected to cost $117,000. The covering, which had been recommended by the architect, would also have included two inches of insulation.

Some board members argued whether the work is necessary at the present time, while others felt it would be a good investment.

Assistant Superintendent Charles Wyda, noting there is about $180,000 in the construction contingency fund, said it was estimated the exterior cover could save up to 25 percent in heating costs and would also prevent any water seepage.

But Board President Jim Minor said, "If the building did leak in ten or 20 years the district might be in better shape (financially) to take care of it then."

The agenda also calls for repointing the chimney and windowing a chimney. There was some disagreement whether waterproofing the building is also included in the original construction contract.

The board also hesitated to purchase new furniture for the Penn Pitt Elementary School which is to be finished Aug. 19. Wyda and Superintendent Gerald Marcinak both argued the district needs to purchase furniture to replace some of the pieces now in use. "I feel if we're going into a new complex like that and we have the money we should go first class," Wyda said, noting some of the student desks and chairs are 12 to 15 years old.

Although the board opened the furniture bids, they were tabled for further study. In the meantime the board decided to take a firsthand look at how much furniture is needed for the school, setting Thursday, July 14, at 7 p.m. as the time to take a tour of the buildings. However, the board also recessed last night's meeting until Thursday, July 14 at 7 p.m. It was noted that an alternative proposal by the bus contractors would be presented to the board by that time.

Since the roof at the high school needs to be replaced, Dale Radcliff, of D and P Commercial Roofing in Westover, W.Va., was present to talk about re-roofing the building. The board asked him to submit a quote on what it would cost to re-roof the building and add insulation.

The board also voted to give access to three men to determine what it will cost to replace burned out lights on the football field.

The board raised the salary of Homer Dick, the site supervisor for the two elementary renovation projects, up ten percent to $19,800.

Cleanup Week Scheduled

Town Prepares For Coal Show

CARMICHAELS — The Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce has designated the week of Aug. 1 as Cleanup Week for the Carmichaels-Cumberland Township area. During that week the town will be decorated for the Coal Show.

The action came during the chamber meeting Wednesday night and King Coal Association President Sara L. Ruth said residents and businesses had done a wonderful job in past years and hoped that they would do so again this year. Residents are asked to clean up trash and mow weeds. All businesses and individuals also were asked to decorate with bunting and flags for the Coal Show Aug. 20-27.

Plans also were made for the Chamber of Commerce float for the Coal Parade which will carry the Coal Queen and her court. A committee was named to plan a sidewalk sale to be held on Aug. 25 and 26 during the Coal Show.

Also at the meeting, Miss Ruth was authorized to have four new signs erected at the entrances to town that read "Welcome to Carmichaels." She was authorized to pay up to $500 for each sign which will be four by eight feet.

The chamber also discussed the repair of the town public address system. Miss Ruth was asked to contact the borough council and offer to have the speakers repaired.

At Miss Ruth's request, the chamber set Saturday, April 28, 1984, as the day for the 39th annual Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

Issues At Town Meeting Include Coal Industry

By Christie Molzon, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — The need for a national energy policy, particularly one that would enhance development of Greene County's coal industry, was just one of the topics addressed by U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter at an open house Monday afternoon on the Waynesburg College campus.

Specter spoke briefly on unemployment and nuclear disarmament before turning the open house into a question and answer session. About 50 people attended the open house which was held in the McCance Lecture Hall in the Buhl Humanities Building.

Noting that there is a 19 percent unemployment rate in Greene County, Specter placed emphasis on not just getting jobs programs through Congress, but developing the coal and steel industries.

"The coal industry needs a great deal of attention and I have regretted seeing the gasification projects held up," he said.

Speaking on nuclear disarmament, Specter noted he had been invited to attend a briefing Tuesday by the National Security Council on the Geneva talks and said, "We face a real threat from the Soviet Union and I agree with the President that we have to follow two tracts — strength and reduction of arms."

Specter noted he would like to see a summit meeting between Reagan and Soviet President Yuri Andropov. "I have a feeling we are not working as hard as we could on arms reduction talks," he said.

During the second part of the open house Specter emphasized the need for an energy policy on a national level. Noting that there are safety concerns with nuclear power, and the possibility of being held hostage by foreign oil producers, he favors further development of the 30 billion tons of coal in Pennsylvania, saying the coal can be mined and used within environmental guidelines.

"We're going to wake up someday and be caught again," he said, referring to the gasoline shortages of the early 1970s.

Responding to a woman's question about the government's treatment of Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange, Specter said the federal government has moved much too slowly compared to the accumulating evidence that the defoliant causes health problems. But, when asked by a representative of the Area Agency on Aging if there is any effort toward getting certain illnesses, such as Alzheimer's Disease, covered by Medicare, he said the "temper of the times" has been to cut back on such benefits. He noted, however, that legislation is close to being enacted which would give health insurance coverage for the unemployed.

Specter noted Monday was his third visit to this area and that most Mondays he holds such open house sessions around the state. He also answered questions on mine subsidence and the Industrial Revenue Bond program before ending the 45-minute session.

Grant Aids The Jobless And Elderly

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Commissioners were notified Thursday by the U.S. Department of Labor and Industry that $1.9 million will be made available this fall to train the unemployed and senior citizens in Washington and Greene counties.

Details of the program have not been determined, but the grant will cover a nine-month period between Oct. 1, 1983, through June 30, 1984. One quarter of the grant will be carried over for the period from July 1 through Sept. 30, 1984.

Of the total grant, $1,925,793 will be used to train the unemployed and $52,171 to train older workers. No age limits have been established in the "older worker" category.

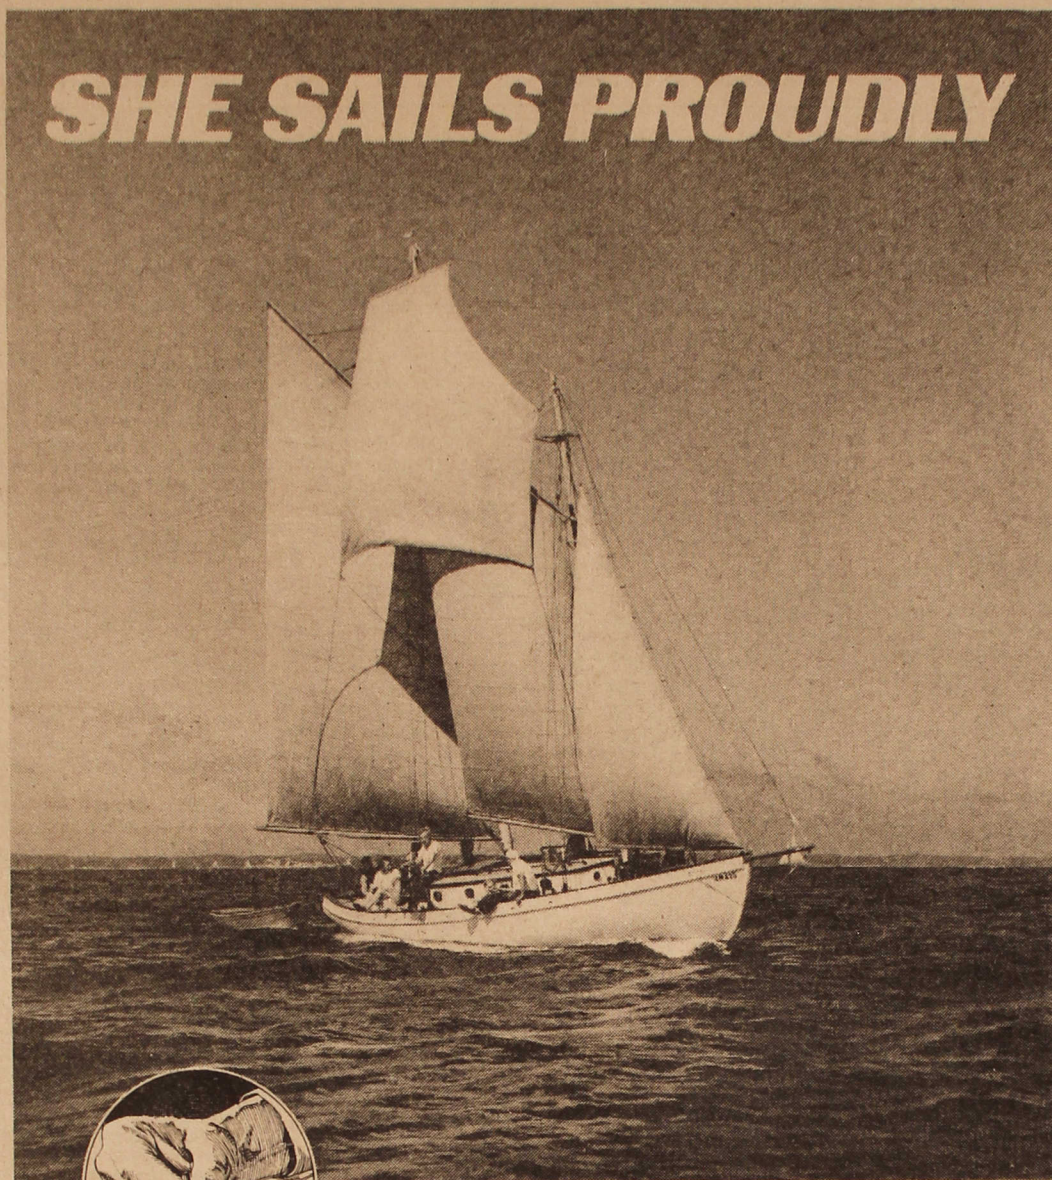

Guidelines for the program will be announced in the near future. Tentative plans call for the unemployed to be trained at such places as the Greene County Vo-Tech School and California State College. The program in Greene County will be handled by the Private Industrial Council.

The funds are being made available through the Job Training Partnership Act.

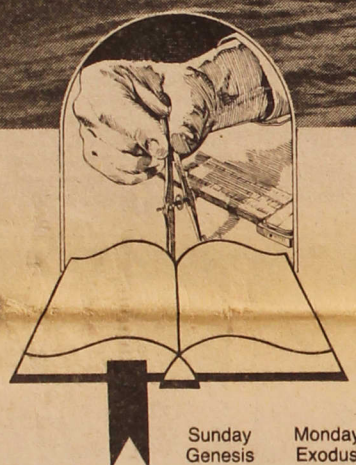

In other action, the commissioners formally approved a labor contract for employees at Curry Memorial Home. Under the contract, licensed practical nurses who are now receiving $5.80 an hour will receive a 30-cent an hour increase on Aug. 1, 1983, and Jan. 1, 1984, and a 20-cent an hour increase on July 1, 1984. Other employees, who now receive $5.40 per hour will receive 30-cent an hour increases on July 1, 1983, and Jan. 1, 1984, and a 20-cent increase on July 1, 1984.

The Department of Community Affairs informed the commissioners there will be $94,000 made available to the county to provide weatherization service.

Approval has already been given by the commissioner for the Greene County Housing Authority to administer the program. However, the DCA requires an official letter of intent by July 11 in order to process the necessary paperwork.

No Need For Subterfuge In Collection of Taxes

Greene County residents are receiving delinquent tax notices for allegedly not paying their per capita taxes and the correspondence is causing some confusion.

The confusion is not necessary and the fault lies with the private collection agency and the municipality involved.

It's confusing enough these days with the many taxes levied by federal, state and local governments without the further complication resulting from a letter being mailed by a collection agency.

The A&A Collection Agency, a private business, has offices on the third floor of the Hillcrest Shoppes at 93 East High Street, Waynesburg. The firm has contracts with four school districts and most of the townships and boroughs in Greene County to collect delinquent per capita taxes.

Once the tax collector in a municipality has made an effort but fails to collect the per capita taxes, the collector is exonerated by the local government body from responsibility for collection. The delinquent accounts are then turned over to the A&A Collection Agency which receives a percentage from money collected.

However, the communication between the agency and the delinquent taxpayer leaves a lot to be desired. Although the process may be legal, the agency, to many people, is not as direct nor forthright as it might be.

The first thing the taxpayer sees on the letterhead from A&A is "Delinquent Tax Department," and what appears to be the state seal. A&A officials say it is not the official state seal but just appears to be at first glance. The letter warns, "Pleased be advised that I will bring Suit In Assumpsit against you..." However there is no indication who the "I" represents because the letter is not signed.

It would seem a little truth-in-advertising is called for here. A&A has a legal right to collect the delinquent taxes so why not properly identify the agency and make the letter or notice otherwise clear.

Cumberland Twp. Board Extends Mining Permit

CARMICHAELS — The Cumberland Township Zoning Hearing Board met Tuesday and extended for six months a permit to Boyle Land and Fuel Co. The special use permit had been issued for strip mining in an A-1 agricultural district for the Mary Rapchak property on Jacobs Ferry Road.

The board also accepted with regret the resignation of Chairman Edward Commons. Commons cited the press of other obligations as his reason for leaving the board. With the resignation, Vice Chairman David Smith became acting chairman until the board reorganization in January 1984.

Smith stated that further action on applications and other permits for the Cedar Wood Development proposed for a site along the Nemaocolin Road would not be acted upon by the board until an appeal by the developers to the Greene County Court on the board's denial of applications is clarified.

Cedar Wood is proposed as a 31-unit garden apartment complex, had been denied development permits by the board because plans for it did not meet the side yard requirement of the zoning ordinance. The developers then appealed to the Greene County Court. Although the appeal is still on the court docket, the developers have changed their blueprints to meet the side yard requirements and have been issued a building permit by the zoning officer.

Union Vote Narrowly OKs Contract Offer

WAYNESBURG — Employees in the Greene County road offices and courthouse have voted 16-13 to accept the commissioners' latest offer.

Negotiations have been held since January with 49 members of the commissioners unit and 11 court-appointed employees. Both groups are aligned with Service Employees International Union, Local 585.

Two other unions, the 14-member jail guard unit and Curry Home employees, reached agreement earlier this year.

Under terms of their new contract, the commissioners unit and courthouse employees will receive hourly increases of 25 cents effective July 1, 1983; 30 cents per hour effective Jan. 1, 1984, and 15 cents per hour on July 1, 1984.

Also included in the package was the accumulation of 42 sick days — it was previously 36 — and tuition reimbursement for training if required for work.

According to Sharon Thomas, a member of the negotiating team, the commissioners agreed to review the restructuring of the classification system if it was still desired by the union.

IUP Student Gets Award

WAYNESBURG — Mary Catherine Durco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Durco of 388 Grant Avenue, Nemaocolin, has been awarded the Francis J. Harvey Memorial Scholarship by the American Lung Association of Southwestern Greene County.

Francis Harvey was a long-time member and respected friend of the Lung Association and was a strong advocate of special assistance programs and improved care for needy lung disease patients in the area.

Miss Durco is a student at Indiana University of Pennsylvania and is majoring in respiratory therapy. She is a graduate of Carmichaels Area High School in 1981.

She was selected from scholarship applicants from Fayette, Greene, Washington and Westmoreland counties.

For the first time, the scholarship has been equally divided between two worthy students. Miss Durco will share the award with Matthew A. Vargo of Greensburg, who is also a student in the respiratory field at Indiana University.

Faces From The Past-Do You Recognize Them?

This picture was taken in the late fall of 1939 by Leonard Martin, who now lives at 176 East Lincoln Street in Waynesburg. Martin owned the car in the center, a 1936 Chevrolet. The Greene County Courthouse in the background was still painted at that time and an old World War I cannon was on the lawn. Notice the cars parked heading east because High Street was a two-way street at the time.

"Orchestra," edited by Andre Previn. Macdonald & Janes'. London.

Few people understand the problems involved in somebody else's job; fewer still the classical musician's. This book is made up of frank and revealing interviews with many musicians and orchestras in this country and in England.

In his introduction, Andre Previn tells a story to demonstrate the pride a musician takes in his work. "Some years ago, someone in the London press accused the London Symphony Orchestra of a whole catalogue of misdemeanors: slovenliness, tardiness, drinking, womanizing, the lot. The orchestra took this litany quite calmly. But then, the man quoted in the article went too far. He accused them of not caring about the music, and of playing only because it was a way for them to earn a salary.

"That tore it, and the indignation was towering. Our principal bassoon, Bob Bourton, probably spoke for all of them when he said to me, 'Let the fellow accuse me of anything and everything, I've possibly been guilty of some of those things at one time or another, but by God, no one can say I don't love music!'"

"He was genuinely shocked and hurt, and for good reason," Previn says. "The life of an orchestral musician is a truly difficult one, and the one thing that makes it all possible is the fact that there is a solid gold love of music behind the troubles of every working day. Why else would they put up with it?"

Even professionals admit to having trouble with practicing, at least as children. One says, "From the beginning I heard my father playing the piano, and music was always going on in the house. I started on the piano, but didn't like it because I couldn't come to terms with practicing, when everybody else was having fun. My piano teacher was rather perceptive and let me drop it." But, parents take heart, he went back to it.

Another says, "Maybe it was unusual, the way I came to music. The family is from West Pennsylvania, Somerset County, farmers, a variety of occupations, but no musicians at all. Ask my dad what instrument he plays and he says 'radio.'" But this man started playing trombone in the school band, and went on from there.

Others seemed to be born to be musicians, despite all obstacles. The man who is principal trumpet with the London Symphony Orchestra says he grew up listening to the brass band made up of workers in a quarry near his Yorkshire home. And, "When I was nine, I'd take the rubber hose from my mother's wash-tub and play all the bugle calls on that, which made it terribly easy when I finally got a bugle. My father taught me to read music, but he didn't know the fingering, so a young man in the band wrote them down. I got an instruction book which showed me the scale and the chromatic scale..." and, almost self-taught, he was playing solos before he was sixteen.

In other chapters, musicians reflect on their roles with the orchestra, and problems with their particular instruments. John Fletcher says, "A weird instrument, the tuba. On the tuba you have to cover four fully-working octaves and plunge from one end to the other with no warning... Waiting for your part to come in, loitering around, is a problem. The lip goes stale, the tuba goes flat, and you sink into a lower mental state. With an orchestra in full flight, you get a communal buzz, a high adrenalin flow, but to be just outside and then to come in, it's like jumping on a merry-go-round going full-tilt."

And Previn recalls his fears on first becoming a conductor, and some good advice given him by one of the principal players in the London Symphony: "When you get lost," the man said, "and you will - everybody does at one time or another - just make some elegant vague motions and we'll put it all to rights quickly enough. But don't lose your nerve and start flogging away at us, then we'll get lost too and everybody's in trouble."

For musicians and music lovers, this book is a treat.

Three Rivers Waynesburg Day Bonus

WAYNESBURG — A bonus is in store for those attending this year's Waynesburg Day at Three Rivers Stadium on Saturday, Aug. 20 — it will also be one of the postgame fireworks nights at the stadium.

Jack Smith is this year's Three Rivers Day chairman for the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

Smith said tickets may be purchased by individuals or in blocks for families and employee groups, or church or social organizations which may want to have an outing at Three Rivers Stadium combined with Waynesburg Day.

The tickets available for Waynesburg Day are located along the first baseline on the second tier of the stadium. The tickets and bus transportation are $12.50 per person or $7 per person for the tickets alone.

Tickets or additional information may be obtained at the Chamber office located in the old County Office building in Waynesburg or by calling the office at 627-5926 between noon and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Rain Day Prophet Takes On Golf Pro

WAYNESBURG — Tom Kite has an established reputation as a perennial winner in the world of professional golf.

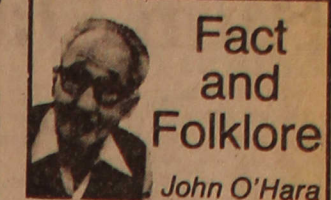

But that doesn't mean anything to Waynesburg Rain Prophet John L. Daily.

He's confident that one of the amiable Texan's golf caps will soon be added to the collection of chapeaus he has won over a period of years from both national and local celebrities who were foolish enough to bet that it wouldn't rain in Waynesburg on July 29.

"It was fortunate that we made the bet before Kite went to Pittsburgh last month to play in the Open," Daily said Wednesday from his winter home in Venice, Fla. "He's from Austin where it doesn't rain much this time of the year and he probably didn't realize what the weather can be like in western Pennsylvania. He sure learned about it when he played Oakmont."

Although he finished in a tie for 20th in the Open, Kite is one of golf's leading money winners. In 10 years on the tour, he has amassed close to $1.7 million while capturing just five championships — a record of consistency that is unique in his highly competitive sport.

The world-famous golfer accepted the Rain Day wager in the spirit of fun which has always been the hallmark of the holiday, and he is not awed by the fact that he is bucking a record of 93 July 29 rains in the last 107 years. He's used to beating the odds.

Fact and Folklore
John O'Hara

Another Greene County Fair is rapidly approaching and I, like thousands of others, am glad of it.

It comes at an appropriate time of the year for one thing. The weather is generally pleasant.

Again this year, the fair will begin Tuesday and continue through Saturday with special events planned each day.

Fairs, such as the annual Greene County Fair, date back to the early history of the nation and the format remains about the same today as it did then.

The Greene County Fair was preceded by a privately operated "Waynesburg Fair," held during the early 1900's. The private fair eventually folded because of financial problems and other, bigger fairs in Washington, Wheeling and Pittsburgh.

The local fair was revived in later years and featured harness racing, a carnival midway, dirt track auto racing and a new fangled flying machine with DeLoyd Thompson at the controls. Thompson, for a few dollars, would fly his passenger around the field.

Now it can be told.

Last fall there were several old-time teamsters on "stand-by" but because of the mild winter they were never called.

It seems several oil and gas drilling firms had plans for exploration wells in the area but were afraid a bad winter might force cancellation of their plans.

The few remaining residents familiar with the huge draft horses were contacted and asked if they could come out of retirement. They were veterans of an earlier era when heavy drilling equipment was hauled to the site with horses and sled.

Because the planned exploration sites were located on high hills in Washington and Morris Townships, drillers were afraid the modern machines could not handle the job.

Unfortunately we will never know how the old veterans would have fared. The winter was too mild.

This is the Messenger Building following renovation under the WECR project.

Rain Day Believers Dust Off Their Umbrellas

WAYNESBURG — Two days of events are scheduled this year for the annual Rain Day celebration in which the 108-year-old tradition holds that it always rains in Waynesburg on July 29th — or nearly always.

And last year was one of those years it did not rain, bringing the record to 93 times in 107 years that some form of rain has fallen within the borough limits of Waynesburg on July 29.

"I kept my umbrella at the ready until the courthouse clock struck midnight, but it was no use, it just wasn't to be," Rain Prophet John L. Daily said last year when it failed to rain on July 29, the 14th "no rain" year for the borough. The 13th "no rain" year was recorded in 1975.

Also as part of the tradition, Daily each year bets a hat with a well-known person that it will rain. Last year he lost a hat to Pittsburgh sports writer and announcer Myron Cope.

Daily is keeping this year's bet under his hat, at least for the time being. He is hoping there won't be plenty of sunshine again this July 29th as there was last year.

Rain this year would move the record to 94 in 108. And with one of the wettest springs on record, and plenty of heavy rains already this month, Daily expects to collect yet one more hat for tradition's sake.

The hat bet part of Rain Day goes back to the late Byron Daily, a Waynesburg druggist, who took up recording the oddity. It was first started by two drugstore clerks, the Allison brothers, when they began making notations on the store's ledgers after a chance remark by a farmer that "it always seems to rain around here on July 29th."

Byron Daily enjoyed making the hat bets with traveling drug salesmen who couldn't believe the legend until they lost their hats. After Byron Daily's death, his son, John L. Daily, became Waynesburg's official Rain Day Prophet and continues the hat bet tradition. Daily retired from his law practice several years ago but keeps his interest in Rain Day.

A Rain Day committee of the Waynesburg Special Events Commission has planned two days of activities for this year's celebration and the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual Miss Rain Day Selection Pageant.

Activities will be held both Friday and Saturday, July 29 and 30, with most of the activities being held on High and Washington streets around the Greene County Courthouse. Food and craft booths along with a children's carnival and other activities for children will be featured beginning at 10 a.m. Friday. Special activities and events for children will be held on the courthouse lawn by the Waynesburg Central Playground staff on Friday.

Friday's schedule of special events include a Company K Memorial service at the courthouse steps at 5:45 p.m., presentation of Miss Rain Day at 6 p.m. and also the start of the Fun Run sponsored by the County Department of Parks and Recreation, Umbrella Contest at 6:30 p.m., and award presentations for the Merchants Window Display, Children's Art Contest, and Fun Run winners at 7 p.m. Following the award presentation the "Allegheny River Boys" bluegrass band will perform.

On Saturday, street booths will again be open beginning at 10 a.m. The rock band, "Second Chance," will perform from 3 to 5 p.m. at the courthouse. A Rain Day dance will be held at 9 p.m.

Umbrellas entered in the Umbrella Contest must have a handle and afford some shelter from the rain. Prizes will be $25 for first, $15 for second, $10 for third, and a T-shirt for fourth place. Entry fee is $1. Persons must register for the contest at the Waynesburg Borough office before 1 p.m. July 29th.

U.S. And China Math Teachers Trade Lessons

WAYNESBURG — Rosalie Jackson found China to be a nation which was crippled educationally by its cultural revolution, but which is now doing everything it can to catch up.

She also found it to be a virtually classless society with the worker at the top of the social ladder and the intellectual at the bottom; a nation where people seem to manage on an average monthly wage which is the equivalent of $30 in American money, and a country where visitors from the western world are both welcome and the object of friendly fascination.

Mrs. Jackson, an assistant professor of mathematics at Waynesburg College, was one of 59 college and university mathematics education specialists invited to participate in a three-week bilateral exchange with their Chinese professional counterparts in the field of post-secondary education.

The Mathematical Society of the People's Republic of China arranged for the visit through the People-to-People Citizen Ambassador Program set up in the United States in 1956 to advance the cause of international friendship through interpersonal contact.

The group of mathematicians left the United States on May 30 and returned June 19. During their visit they met with groups in Beijing, Shanghai, Wuxi, Suzhou, Hangzhou and Guangzhou (Canton). Their hosts and guides were members of the China Association of Science and Technology (CAST).

Mrs. Jackson said the government placed no restrictions on them, and the people they met felt free to speak about the hardships experienced during the cultural revolution and the subsequent rule of Mao and the "Gang of Four."

"Following the revolution, all schools from kindergarten through the universities were closed down for 10 years, from 1966 to 1976," she said. "Teachers were sent into the fields to work and many of them didn't survive. But those that did (survive) didn't hesitate to talk about it openly."

As a result of the lost years, she said, China is about 15 years behind the rest of the world in its mathematics programs.

"In essence, they seem to be doing everything they can to get China back into the mainstream," she said. "They are just beginning to enter the realm of high technology."

In the various cities they visited, the groups would meet with faculty and administrators from comprehensive universities, research institutes and teacher colleges. They expressed special interest in the undergraduate curriculum for mathematicians, methods of instruction in mathematics, the preparation of mathematics teachers, instructional materials, and the use of computers in mathematics classes.

"Each group needed an interpreter but language was not a barrier for expressions of friendship and sincere interest in each other," she said. "At all sessions, refreshments consisted of very good Chinese tea served from enormous thermos bottles which never allowed the liquid to cool from its original boiling state. On very hot days, Chinese beer and a kind of orange soda were also served."

At each city, at least one day would be spent in intensive meetings with Chinese representatives. Other days the group would be taken to visit classrooms, libraries and/or computer centers at universities. Sometimes they visited middle schools, which are the equivalent of American junior and senior high schools.

In free time, they were able to roam the streets and shops.

"Many times we would be surrounded by Chinese as we browsed in shops or strolled the street. They were very curious about our purchases and often wanted to practice speaking English with us."

Mrs. Jackson has these main impressions of China:

➤ The vast number of people is overwhelming. With a population of a billion people, their cities and countryside are literally teeming with humanity.

➤ The number of bicycles is overwhelming. For almost every person there seemed to be a bicycle.

➤ Construction of new buildings, mainly apartments, confronts you everywhere you turn.

➤ In both countryside and cities, trees are growing in all available spaces. Some are obviously just recently planted, probably as a result of a new law requiring that each Chinese citizen be responsible for planting three trees a year.

➤ The din of traffic is constant. There are not many automobiles, but the buses, trucks, army vehicles and bicycles provide a cacophony of blasting horns and tinkling bells from daylight to dark.

Mrs. Jackson noted that there is little evidence of capitalism or free enterprise, with the government owning everything.

People are assigned to jobs and have little opportunity to change to anything else. Wages average about $30 a month, with the purchase of a bicycle representing an investment which is equivalent to the purchase of an automobile in America.

Everybody seems to work, both men and women, with children frequently being under the care of grandparents. There is no obvious evidence of either affluence or abject poverty.

"The government places people in jobs according to the greatest needs of the country," she said. "Factory workers and farmers are at the top of the social scale and have opportunities to earn bonuses. Farmers can now obtain a small plot of their own land in addition to working on government land. From it they can sell what they grow, and apparently that concession has greatly increased feed production."

Mrs. Jackson found no supermarkets or other evidence of American-type merchandising in any of the places she visited. The few department stores were much like our early Woolworth stores. Small shops prevailed, and in restaurants there were no menus. She ate what the restaurant happened to be serving that day.

"We found it best not to inquire about what we were eating. Apparently every bit of an animal is used. And we were told to never drink water from the taps in our hotel rooms. We were always provided with thermoses."

DER Sues Joint Sewer Authority For Contempt

HARRISBURG — The state Department of Environmental Resources has filed suit against the Lower Ten Mile Joint Sewer Authority, comprised of five municipalities in Washington and Greene counties, charging the authority with contempt and failure to implement a court-ordered sewage treatment system.

Lower Ten Mile is an authority currently formed and controlled by five municipalities including Jefferson, Morgan and East Bethlehem townships and the boroughs of Jefferson and Clarksville. The authority was formed on June 15, 1977.

The complaint in equity and petition for contempt was filed with the Commonwealth Court in Dauphin County Court earlier this week.

DER officials in their complaint note that on June 21, 1972, orders were issued against Jefferson Township, Morgan Township, Clarksville Borough, Jefferson Borough and Lower Ten Mile to cease sewage discharges into Ten Mile Creek and to begin planning for a sewage system.

DER has asked Commonwealth Court to issue an order requiring the authority to comply with DER's orders to construct the system.

DER also charges the municipalities with violating the Clean Streams

Law by allowing sewage to flow into waters of the commonwealth. The complaint takes note of the existence of sewage treatment plants serving Pitt Gas and Teagarden Homes but calls the plants inadequate.

The sanitary sewer collection systems in Clarksville, Chartiers, Braden, Williamstown, Jefferson and Mather do not have permits and are discharging raw sewage into the Ten Mile Creek watershed. DER also charges that malfunctioning septic systems in Jefferson Borough allow discharges into several tributaries of Ten Mile Creek.

All five municipalities also have been charged with failure to regulate on-lot sewage disposal under the Sewage Facilities Act. DER has asked the state court to enjoin the municipalities from issuing any further building or construction permits except in compliance with the Sewage Facilities Act.

Representation on the Lower Ten Mile Joint Sewer Authority has changed many times over the years and meetings are held infrequently. According to one member who asked not to be identified, "Our biggest troubles have come from the membership. A certain few refuse to go along with future planning," he said.

At one point the authority hired an engineering firm to complete preliminary work on the sewer projects but internal disagreements caused the authority work to come to a halt.

The authority's chairman, solicitor and engineer were called to Pittsburgh in March 1981, and DER officials threatened legal action if the authority did not proceed with the project.

Meetings were resumed but again several authority members refused to move ahead with the project. Some members claimed the project would cause a financial burden for local residents, especially those on fixed incomes.

Franklin Twp. To Appeal To State For No-Parking Zone During Fair

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township supervisors learned Monday they can receive a temporary, no-parking permit from the state Department of Highways to be used during the week of the Greene County Fair.

By having the temporary state permit, the state police will be able to enforce the no-parking regulation.

Officials of the county fair board, concerned with the dangerous situation along Route 21, had appealed earlier to the township to adopt a no-parking ordinance. However, the township said even with such an ordinance they would have no way to enforce the law because they have no police force.

State police could not enforce a township ordinance, but under the proposed permit arrangement, the no-parking ban will be a state function.

Fair board officials told the township board there would be plenty of room for parking inside the fairgrounds.

In other action, township officials again discussed a sewer agreement with Waynesburg Borough by which the township reimburses the borough for treating sewage from West Waynesburg and Bonar Addition. The long-standing agreement calls for the township to pay a pro-rata share of the treatment plant expenses.

However, the borough has apparently changed the formula and has included other charges which have more than doubled the annual figure. It was the consensus of the township board they would pay the usual amount and possibly go to court to settle the difference. In connection with the disagreement, township officials agreed to meet in the near future with borough officials to discuss the issue.

Township Solicitor William Hook expressed concern that should a rate increase become necessary in the West Waynesburg and Bonar sewer districts, customers should be made aware the increase was not the fault of the sewer authority.

Supervisors also objected to the unannounced increase at this time after the budget had been established since last December.

Robert Anderson was appointed permit and code enforcement officer to replace Supervisor Robert Morris. Anderson is not a member of the board as is Morris.

An agreement with Community Preservation, Inc. of Uniontown was executed. The agreement calls for the Uniontown firm to receive $14,000 to handle all phases of the West Waynesburg rehabilitation program expected to begin this fall. The firm was responsible for processing the $100,000 grant from the Department of Community Affairs.
