Miss Rain Day's Year Ending

WAYNESBURG — As July 29th approaches, Julie Winslow's year-long reign as 1982 Miss Rain Day draws to an end. Her last official duty will be to crown her successor at the 1983 Miss Rain Day pageant on Sunday, July 24.

The pageant is sponsored annually by the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce and will be held again this year in the Waynesburg Central High School auditorium beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The 17-year-old Miss Winslow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Winslow of Carmichaels, has had a busy year as Miss Rain Day. It all began with her first official duty of performing a baton twirling routine in front of the Greene County Courthouse as part of last year's Rain Day activities. Her ability as a baton twirler won her the talent competition portion of the Miss Rain Day pageant last year and enabled her to win the title.

Miss Rain Day represents Waynesburg during the year at various events and activities throughout Greene County. Other events attended by Miss Winslow during her reign included the Jacktown Fair parade, Waynesburg College Homecoming parade, annual Waynesburg Chamber of Commerce dinner dance and, most recently, the annual Waynesburg Horse Show, where she handed out ribbons to many of the winners. She is currently helping the chamber with this year's pageant program.

The tradition of Rain Day holds that it always, or almost always, rains within the Waynesburg Borough limits sometime during the 24-hour period of July 29th. Though it failed to do so last year for only the 14th time in the history of the 107-year-old observance, it is certainly expected to rain this year and move the record to 94 out of 108 years it has rained in Waynesburg on July 29th. Either one drop of rain or a heavy downpour will satisfy the tradition.

Miss Winslow's baton twirling also won her first place in the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival parade and a feature twirler position last year with the Carmichaels Area High School band. She also is talented musician and played with the school's marching and concert bands, and was selected for the All County Band.

She has received several scholastic honors and was valedictorian this year of her graduating class at Carmichaels and was presented with a Presidential Scholarship to Waynesburg College where she plans to enroll this fall in the nursing program. In addition, she received a nursing scholarship from Greene County Memorial Hospital and the Jaycee Outstanding Youth Scholarship award from the Carmichaels Area Jaycees. At Carmichaels Area High last year, she was president of the school's National Honor Society Chapter.

County Ratifies Wage Agreement

WAYNESBURG — A wage agreement with two groups of county employees was ratified by the Greene County commissioners at their meeting Thursday.

It involves 62 employees who are members of Local 585, Service Employees International Union — 51 of them people employed by the commissioners and the other 11 being court-appointed employees.

Under terms of the agreement, the employees will receive a raise of 25 cents an hour, retroactive to July 1. They will receive an additional 30-cent raise on Jan. 1, 1984, and a final 15-cent raise on July 1, 1984.

Several weeks earlier, the commissioners reached a contract agreement with some 100 employees at the Curry Memorial Home who are also members of Local 585.

During their discussion Thursday, the commissioners indicated that they will probably grant similar raises to some 80 county employees who are not members of the union. Before they do so, however, they want concrete figures on what the raises will cost the county for the balance of this year — with preliminary estimates running anywhere from $30,000 to $45,000.

The July 1 raises are the first to be given this year. At the time the 1983 budget was adopted last December, the commissioners imposed a wage freeze, with the understanding that pay increases would be given after six months if the county's financial position permitted such action.

Before this year, the county had been granting annual raises of 8 percent. The 1983 raise provided by the contract ratified Thursday equates to about 5 percent.

George K. Stennett, county development director, reported at the meeting that the Federal Aviation Administration had conducted a final inspection of the new blacktop surface on the runway at the county airport Thursday morning.

"The work was approved and the airport should be reopened as soon as the lines are painted, probably by tomorrow," he said.

The airport has been closed since June 20, with the reopening coming 10 days later than expected. Problems encountered in meeting the required blacktop compaction standards delayed the work beyond the projected July 4 completion date.

Airport manager Bill Shultz said that the delay caused no major problems.

"We notified aircraft owners in advance that the airport would be closed on June 20, and those that had to use their planes during the construction period moved them to other airports," he said.

The surfacing project involved the laying of a two-inch overlay on the runway, which is 3,500 feet long and 75 feet wide. Blacktop Paving Co. of Washington had the $147,670 contract.

Cost to the county was $9,430, with the FFA paying 90 percent of the bill and the state and county 5 percent each.

The commissioners agreed to make application on behalf of the Carmichaels Borough Municipal Authority for a grant under the Small Communities Program to improve water services to residents of the borough and Cumberland Township.

Stennett said the authority had applied on its own behalf last year without success, and feels that it would have a greater chance of receiving money if the application is submitted by the county.

The authority is seeking money to install an additional water storage tank and to extend its water lines.

The commissioners formally agreed to accept a $55,000 public assistance transportation block grant from the Department of Welfare to provide free transportation to and from medical facilities for assistance recipients.

Former Supervisor Ordered To Pay Up

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Court ruled Friday that former Wayne Township Supervisor Robert L. Simpson owes the township $3,704.92 for funds which were improperly spent by board members during his term of office.

The court also ruled that he will be liable for payment of one-third of any penalties and interest which might be assessed against the township for its failure to pay $10,814 in federal withholding taxes, Social Security and state withholding taxes in 1981.

The order was made by Judge Glenn Toothman in sustaining civil surcharge action brought by the township board of auditors against Simpson and his two fellow supervisors, George M. Adams and John G. Jenkins, following its review of 1981 expenditures.

Toothman based his order on evidence produced during a court hearing last December. At that time, the auditors accepted stipulated settlements of $3,000 from Adams and $2,500 from Jenkins, but Simpson elected to continue his fight against the surcharge.

While he admitted liability of $230 for taking five more paid holidays than the auditors had authorized, he denied knowledge of any township property which the auditors found to be missing and denied being involved in the purchase of any items which were not meant for use of the township.

The $3,704.92 surcharge against Simpson consists of the $230 for the unauthorized holidays; $1,009.13 for improperly claimed work days at the

Local Man Sues County Over Racetrack Injuries

WAYNESBURG — A man who was injured while watching a horse race at the Greene County Fair last year is seeking damages in excess of $10,000 from the county and the Greene County Fair Board.

The lawsuit was filed in Greene County Court Friday by Thomas Lemley, 30, of Waynesburg R.D.3.

The complaint states that Lemley was standing outside the racetrack fence watching a race on Aug. 11, 1982, when a horse crashed over the fence into a crowd of spectators. Lemley and the jockey were the only ones injured.

Lemley charges that the fence was inadequate to protect spectators from possible accidents, and there were no warning signs to alert spectators to the possible danger of watching a race in that location.

He suffered a severely fractured ankle and other injuries in the accident and states he was unable to return to work until May 16, 1983.

W. Greene Board Hires High School Principal

GRAYSVILLE — The West Greene School Board Monday night hired a high school principal, purchased new bleachers for the football field and returned some fiscal responsibilities to the supervising principal's office.

The board, by a 5-2 vote, hired Frank Blout as high school principal at a salary of $30,000. Approving the move were Roy Barnhart, Anne Bower, Frank Johnson, Rick Barnhart and William Ziefel. Voting against the measure were James Helpenstine and John Berdine. Board member Thomas Braddock, who joined the others in a closed, executive meeting to discuss the hiring, failed to return for the regular meeting.

The board also voted to post the dual-position of assistant principal/athletic director.

The Johnson W. Taylor Co. of Martinsburg, W.Va., was awarded the contract to provide bleacher seats to accommodate some 600 fans on the basis of a $20,002 bid. The actual bid for the bleachers was for $16,852 and for the freight, $3,150. Two other bids were received, but neither met the specifications.

In an effort to return some fiscal responsibilities to the supervising principal, board member Anne Bower moved, and Frank Johnston seconded, a motion to allow the principal to write checks up to 80 percent of a budgeted line item. The motion failed to pass with the Barnharts, Ziefel and Berdine voting no.

Bower and Johnston then proposed allowing the principal to write up to 75 percent of the budgeted item with a maximum of $3,500. On this motion, Ziefel broke ranks and voted yes with Bower, Johnston and Helpenstine. A simple majority of 4-3 was enough to pass the motion.

Bower and Johnston then moved to give the superintendent the power to allow teachers and staff members to attend one-day seminars, conferences or meetings. Previously, the board had to vote its permission for such events.

Bower, Johnston, Berdine and Helpenstine voted yes.

The resignation of board member Lawrence Headley was accepted with regret and the board will accept nominations for the post until the next meeting on July 28, when a new member will be appointed.

The resignation of Ansel Haines, a member of the custodial staff, was accepted effective Sept. 1.

The board voted to award the fire extinguisher service contract to William and David Ziefel on the basis of a low bid. Advanced Fire Equipment Inc. of Greensburg offered the only other bid.

Andrea B. Holloway was named cheerleader sponsor by a 6-1 vote and Mrs. Susan Miller was named majorette and colorguard sponsor.

Authority Member Responds To Suit

JEFFERSON — In an independent response to a law suit filed this week by the state Department of Environmental Resources against the Lower Ten Mile Joint Sewer Authority, authority member Ben Parker said he has no regrets about having stalled the project.

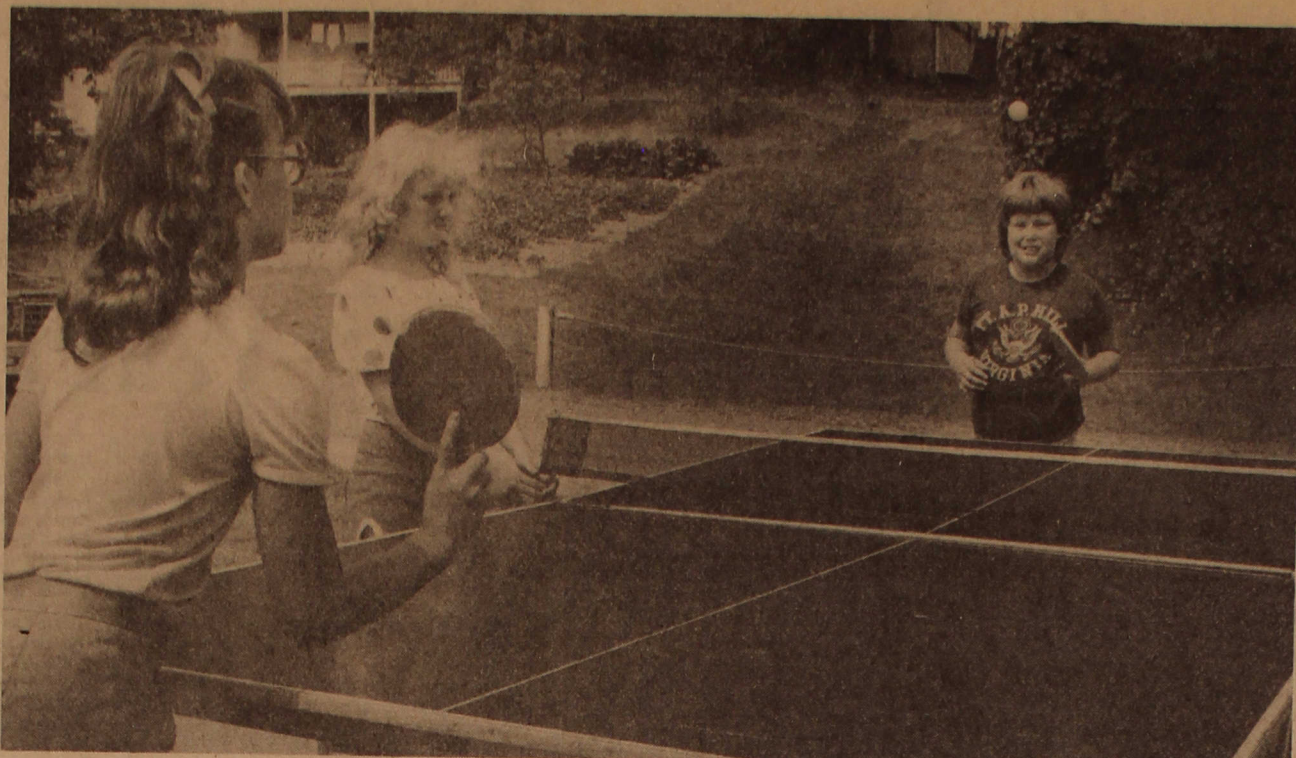

The state agency several years ago ordered the five municipalities involved to cease discharging raw sewage into area streams and to eventually construct a sewer system and treatment plant.

Although some preliminary engineering work has been completed, the project appears no closer to completion than it did 10 years ago.

Bike Stolen

RICES LANDING — A 12-speed bicycle owned by Brett Kronk of Rices Landing was stolen sometime between 12:30 and 9:30 a.m. Friday, Patterson was told, however, that he would need the approval of the owner of the adjoining property owner, waiving the side-yard requirement, if a permit is to be granted without a formal hearing.

A request from Dr. E.L. Falor to build a connecting room from his medical office and health fitness center to a small house at the rear of the property was also tabled until a plan has been received detailing the scope of the work. The property, located at 325 East High Street, is in an R-2 zone.

Arthur L. Huffman, who wants to build a carport on his property at 582 Braden Street, submitted a request for a side-yard variance. He was told that if he cannot obtain a signed waiver from one of the adjoining property owners, a formal hearing will be scheduled for the Aug. 1 meeting to give that property owner an opportunity to be heard. The board would then act on the request.

A similar request for permission to erect a garage on the property of James Hughes of 551 Race Street was considered, but action was deferred pending the receipt of additional information on the location of the building with regard to yard clearances.

Sidney Mancuso was given permission to convert a house at 178 East High Street from a single-family dwelling to a two-family dwelling. The board indicated that it is a permitted use since the house is in an R-2 zone.

Larry Strobe was given permission to build an addition to the rear of his house at 93 South West Street. The action was taken in light of side-yard waivers signed by the owners of adjoining properties.

Rabies Clinic Scheduled

WAYNESBURG — Expressing concern over the increasing amount of rabies being reported in Pennsylvania, officials of the Washington County Humane Society have scheduled three rabies vaccination clinics in Greene County this month.

Pet vaccinations will be offered from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, July 23 in the office of Dr. Charles R. Wood in Carmichaels and on Saturday, July 30 at the Waynesburg Fire Hall from 10 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Wind Ridge Fire Hall. Cost of the vaccination is $4.

Rabies has always existed in wild animal populations. The disease is now spreading slowly northward from southern states, primarily in raccoons. In Pennsylvania, the disease has also been diagnosed in skunks, bats and woodchucks. Waynesburg, the disease can be fatal. According to Dr. Melvin Butler of township dump; $53.92 to cover one-third of the cost of purchasing auto and truck parts which did not fit any of the equipment owned by the township, and $2,512.87 to cover one-third of $7,538.65 in machinery fund money which was spent for items other than machinery and equipment.

In his opinion, Toothman said that while a supervisor might be liable for his failure to act in strict conformity with the law, it must also be found that the township suffered a financial loss as a result of his actions before a surcharge can be sustained.

For this reason, the court dismissed that part of the surcharge centering on the fact that the township had purchased reddog without benefit of advertising or bids, paying for it with three separate checks of $2,420, $2,440 and $1,000.

"This was obviously done to avoid the limit of $2,500 where the (township) code requires advertising and bidding. From testimony at the hearing it appears that its cost to the township was lower than that available from other suppliers, and thus a loss to the township was not established so no surcharge can result," the opinion states.

The court also dismissed the auditors' attempt to recover the value of missing tools and equipment because it was not determined if the missing items were stolen, worn out or misplaced.

In their surcharge, the auditors claimed the supervisors were improperly paid for work at the dump which they claimed to have done on Saturdays during 1981. At the hearing, Simpson testified that while he had not worked at the dump, he had been working on the roads on Saturdays — testimony which was supported by that of his wife, who held the post of township secretary-treasurer.

Toothman based his finding of liability on testimony of the dump caretaker, who said that Simpson had come there only one time during the year, and that was when he and his father-in-law brought garbage to the landfill. He dismissed the rebuttal testimony as "self-serving and unreliable."

The major item in the surcharge centers on purchases made from the machinery fund which could legally have been made from the general fund, with Toothman dismissing the defense contention that such expenditures, even if improper, did not result in a loss to the township.

He pointed out that the machinery fund is a type of trust fund to be used only to add new equipment or replace worn out equipment.

"If it is used for general operating expenditures, the loss to the township is the comparable purchasing power for new or additional equipment, and in the ensuing year's budget, either the general fund millage must be raised to offset the difference or the machinery fund millage must be increased. It is therefore, in our view, a direct loss to the township."

The terms of all three of the accused supervisors expired on Dec. 31, 1981. Simpson had served on the board since March 1980, when he took office to fill a vacancy.

Artists Appearances Being Scheduled

CARMICHAELS — Scheduling is now being done for U.S. Steel Affiliate Artists residencies in Greene County for 1983-84.

Directors of the Greene County Council on the Arts announced at their meeting Tuesday that any group wishing to schedule a performance by one or more of the artists may call the Arts Council office at the Greene Academy in Carmichaels on any Tuesday, Thursday or Saturday.

Artists scheduled to be in the county are Brad Liebl, baritone singer, from Sept. 21 through Oct. 4; Peter Phillips, actor, from Jan. 8 through Jan. 21; and Rachel Lampert, modern dance, from May 13 to pets and owners and precautions should be taken. "This disease can be prevented by vaccination," Dr. Butler said. Cost of the vaccination averages about $10 at the veterinarian's office.

In the meantime, pet owners are reminded the threat of rabies can be reduced by following a few simple rules:

- Make sure your dogs and cats are vaccinated and vaccinations are kept up to date.
- Restrict movement of pets to prevent contact with wild animals and stray dogs—observe leash laws.
- Avoid attracting wildlife—make sure garbage is disposed of properly.
- Do not approach or handle wild animals such as raccoons, skunks, bats or fox. Contact your local game protector if it is necessary to remove a wild animal from your property or if it exhibits strange behavior.

through May 26. They will be available to perform for any community groups or schools.

The Arts Council is also making plans to sponsor arts classes again this fall. Among classes being planned are drawing, tote painting, watercolor, duck carving, calligraphy for children, stained-glass making and others.

It was announced that the Arts Council has obtained a grant of $600 from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts to help the Greene County Chorus bring the Westmoreland Symphony to the county for a performance of "The Messiah" in December.

CARMICHAELS — State Police Fire Marshal Walter Anderson has determined that a fire which destroyed a vacant house near Carmichaels last week was deliberately set.

The small house, located off the Nemaocolin Road, was owned by Mary Ester Rush of Carmichaels. It had not been occupied for many years.

The fire occurred at 8:45 p.m. Thursday, July 14. Carmichaels Fire Chief William Groves said the loss was minimal.

Anyone with information about the fire is asked to call the Cumberland Township police, state police, or the arson hotline at 1-800-462-0322.

Free Blood Pressure Screening Offered

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Memorial Hospital will once again participate in the Rain Day activities on July 29. There will be a free blood pressure screening and health education information booth.

The hospital display and screenings will be located on the patio of the court house. Staff will be available from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. to provide free blood pressure screenings for citizens of the community.

Also available at the hospital display will be information on the hospital's range of services. Free information will be distributed on "What to do in an Emergency," nutrition, risk factors that lead to heart attack, diabetes and more.

According to Betty Long, director of Community and Patient Relations, "Participating in Rain Day gives the hospital an opportunity to provide a very important health service screening service to the community as well as giving the hospital a chance to inform the community about health education and prevention of illness."

Big Brothers / Big Sisters

Try-Again Homes Begins New Program

WAYNESBURG — Children and adolescents in Greene County will soon be able to enjoy the friendship of a mature adult volunteer with whom they can talk, look to for advice and find companionship.

Try-Again Homes, Inc., a non-profit, United Way agency which serves children and adolescents in Greene, Fayette and Washington counties, recently implemented a Big Brothers / Big Sisters program in Greene County.

The Greene County chapter is affiliated with Big Brothers / Big Sisters of America, an international program that matches an adult volunteer with a child from a single-parent family.

The goal of the program is to establish a supportive relationship between a caring and sharing adult and a needy child. The Big Brothers / Big Sisters program has received acclamation because of its efforts towards preventing juvenile delinquency.

There is only one qualification to being a Big Brother or Big Sister, and that is a willingness to spend a little time with a child. Volunteers are screened and interviewed and then given a short training session before they are matched with a child. The child, the child's family and the volunteer must all be happy with the "match."

The types of activities a Big Brother or Sister can do with their Little Brother or Sister is endless. It is recommended that the volunteer spend between three to six hours a week with his or her little brother or sister. They can go to the movies, to a ball game, on a picnic or take a walk in the park. The volunteer is not expected to continually entertain the child. The match is to establish a bond of friendship between the volunteer and child.

Try-Again Homes completed a feasibility study and community needs assessment study, and through these two studies, it was discovered that Greene County was the second highest county in Pennsylvania with problem areas that directly relate to children and families with children.

With a program such as Big Brothers / Big Sisters in Greene County, Try-Again Homes hopes to combat this problem and help the youth of the community.

If you are interested in becoming a Big Brother or Sisters, or for more information about the program, call the Greene County Chapter at 852-2227.

Foot-Dragging Tactics Won't Eliminate Problem

After more than 10 years of trying persuasion — both friendly and not so friendly — the state Department of Environmental Resources is starting to apply some real pressure on five municipalities in Greene and Washington Counties to force them to take action on their sewage problems.

The state agency has asked the Commonwealth Court to find the Lower Ten Mile Sewer Authority in contempt for failing to comply with orders to actively move toward the construction of a sewerage system. It also wants the court to prohibit the issuance of any building or construction permits unless compliance with the Sewage Facilities Act is guaranteed.

Greene County municipalities involved are Jefferson and Morgan Townships and Clarksville and Jefferson Boroughs. The authority also encompasses East Bethlehem Township in Washington County.

They have been charged with permitting the discharge of raw sewage into Ten Mile Creek and its tributaries, and with failure to regulate malfunctioning on-lot septic systems.

There has been some movement since the original citations were issued in 1972. The Lower Ten Mile Authority was formed, engineering studies were made, and at one point several years ago plans were proposed for providing the needed facilities.

The plans generated both opposition and support from residents of the municipalities involved, but the real reason nothing ever happened with a division of opinion among members of the authority board of directors. One of the most outspoken critics was Ben Parker, a board member from Jefferson Borough who at one time represented Greene County in the General Assembly.

He has no regrets about having stalled the project, and says he will continue to do so until some way is found to reduce the cost to a point where construction assessments and user fees won't be a burden on the many elderly and low-income people who live in his town.

Unfortunately, as people have learned in other communities which have been forced to build new sewerage systems, the facilities do cost a lot of money. Even with sizeable grants, front foot assessments, tap-in fees and monthly charges can be high.

But that does not mean that communities should be permitted to continue polluting streams. The DER is right in insisting that something be done to solve the problem. Unfortunately, it will probably cost considerably more now than it would have five years ago.

SE Greene Board Starts Bids On Furniture Over

By Christie Molzon, Staff Writer

MAPLETOWN — In complete disagreement with the administration over what furniture is needed for the renovated Penn Pitt Elementary School, the Southeastern Greene School Board drew up Thursday night a new list of furniture bids would be taken on.

What the board decided was needed was much different from figures drawn up by Superintendent Gerald Marcinak. In his summary to the board, Marcinak said 488 student desks and chairs had originally been bid, but actually 579 were needed.

So, the board recessed the meeting for an hour and a half, while some board members went to the Bobtown school and upstairs in the high school to count furniture, and other members held a negotiating session with the non-professional union.

After its tour, the board decided there were 311 desks and chairs that could be used.

Several motions were made to purchase furniture from Maffie Associates, the low bidder, but then there was some confusion over what the board was buying. After Joe Maffie went up and explained the bid, all motions were withdrawn.

Instead, the board decided to advertise for 60 one-piece student desks and chairs with 60 separate pieces as an alternate item, 60 additional classroom chairs, three teachers' desks and chairs, 400 metal folding chairs for the multi-purpose room, a recovery couch for the nurse's station, a wheelchair, 36 music stands and a school scale.

Marcinak disagreed with the board's action and, noting $80,000 had been allotted for new furniture for the school said, "this building should be equipped in a decent fashion." He also expressed doubts whether the board was buying everything it needed, noting no new shelving was being purchased for storage rooms in the basement. But Dave Bierer said the Glassworks school, which would be empty, could be used for storage.

A motion by Bierer to put an exterior covering with a two-inch insulation on the Bobtown school at a cost of $117,000, was defeated for the second time. The board did agree to bid out the project.

The board failed to agree on a contract proposal to the contractors for pupil transportation services. Assistant Superintendent Charles Wyda reported that SJM Diversified Services had requested a 10 percent increase in the first year, an 8 percent increase in the second, third and fourth years, with the fifth year open to negotiations. Wyda said the company was asking for the 10 percent increase in the first year because it was buying four new buses.

A motion to offer the company 10 percent in the first year, 8 in the second, 6 percent in the third and fourth years with the fifth year subject to negotiations, failed.

Wyda also reported the other bus contractor, Joe Zalar, was requesting a 5 percent increase for five years if he bought a new, 72 passenger bus this year. If he didn't purchase the bus, Wyda said, he would stay with the current contract.

Wyda also reported he had been advised that if the district purchased new buses and ran its own transportation this year, the buses would cost $28,500 a piece and could be delivered in time for the start of school.

No report was given on the negotiations with the non-professional union.

New Ryerson Manager Likes Greene

WIND RIDGE — David L. Barrett, 32, a native of Curwinstown in Clearfield County, has been superintendent of Ryerson State Park for less than two months and, despite warnings from colleagues, finds Greene County a pleasant place to live.

"When the opportunity came up to relocate here, friends told me they knew little about Greene County except it was remote," Barrett said interview Friday.

An employee of the Department of Environmental Resources for the past 13 years, Barrett said Curwinstown State Park near his home town was more remote. It was here Barrett started his career as a seasonal laborer.

He earned an associate degree in park management from Butler County Community College and his bachelor's degree in park management from California State College in 1973. During the summers he was a seasonal laborer at Curwinstown.

His first full-time position was offered in April 1976, when he was assigned to Hyner Run State Park in Clinton County.

Fact & Folklore

John O'Hara

Well, here it is again, almost before anyone can believe it the now world-famous Waynesburg Rain Day is here again.

Should we be lucky enough to get some rain, it will be the 94th time in the past 108 years that some rainfall has occurred in Waynesburg on that particular date.

Naturally, like all other legends rooted in the vagaries of nature, the accuracy of the legend cannot be measured with such modern devices as computers.

In a way, Rain Day in Waynesburg may have something in common with Santa Claus or good fairies that roam the world unseen and unheard.

There is just enough solid substance about Rain Day to intrigue those who have no faith in fairies and very little in modern, scientific weather predicting.

Waynesburg's Rain Day got off to an innocent start many years ago when two Waynesburg brothers, Albert and John Rogers starting making notes on the margin of the ledgers in the drug store where they worked. They became interested as the result of a casual remark by a store patron that it always seemed to rain on July 29.

Some notes were penciled on the concrete walls but they were eventually erased when the store was redeveloped.

Byron Daily, a jovial individual with an interest in little oddities, purchased the store and started making friendly wagers with traveling salesmen that it would rain on July 29.

Daily won a trunk full of new hats from the salesmen before his retirement in 1920.

Although the drug store was sold to new owners, the legend became a part of the store's reputation and Daily's son, John took over the duties of rain prophet. John, an attorney, now spends his retirement in Florida.

He won hats from such notables as Jack Dempsey, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Muhammad Ali.

His first out-of-town victim was the late Al Abrams, a Pittsburgh sports writer who organized the Pittsburgh Dapper Dan chapter, a charitable club that has raised millions of dollars.

The fact the bets would be made months in advance of the magic day, has added to the interest and has intrigued weather fans around the world.

During World War II, thousands of Waynesburg residents and other county citizens won bets from their war-time buddies.

Among the other things the unique legend has provided is that there is nothing that has more universal interest among most ordinary people is the weather.

According to the ground rules, a drizzle or a drop will be sufficient to keep the legend alive.

It has given Waynesburg a special identity in Pennsylvania, even the world, that the celebration is not a success unless it rains.

Daily's bet this year is with professional golfer Tom Kite of Houston, Texas.

Hospice Volunteers Will Be Trained

WAYNESBURG — Hospice Care Inc. is forming classes for its volunteer training program.

the urban areas come to the park and they need to be educated about ecology," Barrett said. "They need to be entertained beyond what nature provides."

About 50 percent of those who use the park come from nearby West Virginia, Barrett said.

He and his family, which includes his wife, Charlotte, and children, Lori, 5; Lisa, 3, and Brian, 1, moved to the superintendent's home at Ryerson in May.

He will be in charge of the 1,164-acre facility in the western end of Greene County and the five other full-time employees. Seasonal employment accounts for as high as 15 others.

Ryerson offers nature trails, camping, free swimming in a huge pool, fishing and boating and special consideration to the handicapped in all phases of park recreation. Campers, recreation vehicles and motor homes are welcomed at a rate of $5 per day.

The lake is constantly stocked with game fish including trout, bass and muskies.

Barrett said more people should take advantage of the park, especially the campgrounds. He pointed out that senior citizens get a $2 discount Sunday through Thursday.

Barrett said he hopes to expand a recently added program which provides free ecological movies during the weekend. "Many people from

"Road to Tare," by Anne Edwards. Ticknor & Fields. $15.95.

It's hard to feel very sorry for Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone With the Wind. That could be the fault of this biographer, who portrays her as a lively, rebellious "flapper" who became a hypochondriac and chronic whiner as she grew older, and especially after her literary success. The author also tells us that Margaret Mitchell was very popular, and was a great, humorous storyteller. But she gives us very little evidence to show those qualities.

The evidence we have comes through her letters to friends, and these are filled with complaints. "If I had known being an author was like this I'd have thought several times before I let Harold Latham go off with my dog-eared manuscript," she wrote to someone she had never met. "I've lost ten pounds in a week, leap when phones ring and scurry like a rabbit at the sight of a familiar face on the street."

Edwards insists that Mitchell spent years writing a very long book, but never wanted or expected it to be published. There are many legends about how it came to be published, and Edwards gives us her own. She says a young writer taunted Mitchell about it, to the point that she dashed home, grabbed the manuscript, and took it to Harold Latham.

Latham, an editor with MacMillan, was in Atlanta to search for promising southern authors. Mitchell met him, but denied that she had written a book. And when the young friend said to her, "You lack the seriousness necessary to be a novelist," the author tells us, "it made Peggy mad." (The author has also written biographies of Judy Garland, Vivien Leigh, and Countess Tolstoy, and was chosen to write a movie sequel to "Gone With the Wind," which has never been produced.)

Anyway, this event does give us a humorous look at Mitchell. "Not until Peggy was in the lobby of Harold Latham's hotel did she realize what she looked like - hatless, hair flying, dust and dirt all over my face and arms, and worse luck, my hastily rolled up stockings coming down about my ankles," she later recalled. She had left the envelopes out in the car, but when she rang Latham in his room and he agreed to come downstairs, she ran back to fetch them, returning with her arm load just as he stepped out of the elevator. She was barely through the door when she began dropping envelopes, and by the time Latham reached her side there were already three bellboys picking them up behind her."

The manuscript consisted of more than two thousand pages, and Mitchell had rescued them from under her bed and from the kitchen cupboards. The pages were "stuffed into soiled manila envelopes" and there was no first chapter, "or, rather, there were sixty first chapters, and they were all terrible," Peggy thought.

Naturally, she did not expect the book to become a phenomenon, and nothing had prepared her to handle the resulting chaos. Still, her reticence seems incompatible with her past history, as a young rebel who was refused an invitation to join Atlanta's Junior League because of her "wild" behavior. Edwards believes part of it was due to fear of her first husband. The first marriage lasted only a few months, and little seems to be known about it, but Edwards says Mitchell lived in terror that he would turn up and sue her for libel, claiming that the character of Rhett Butler was modeled on his.

So Mitchell's inner conflicts are described, but not satisfactorily explained. Insecurities which drove her to spend six hours a day writing but kept her from enjoying her success make a story in themselves, one which needs more understanding and deeper examination.

Pilot Spots Barn Fire

WIND RIDGE — Although no estimate was immediately made, damage is expected to be high from a fire that destroyed a large barn near here late Sunday afternoon.

The fire was spotted by an Ohio pilot flying over the area who was able to contact the Cameron, W.Va., fire dispatch base which in turn notified Greene County Fire Communications in Waynesburg. Volunteer firefighters from the Richhill Township Fire Company in Wind Ridge were sent to the scene about four miles from Ryerson Station.

Richhill Fire Chief Rex Rohm said the barn was not visible from the highway. He said the barn owned by Larry Blair was located on top of a high hill and was probably struck by lightning. An electrical storm passed through the area shortly before the fire was reported at 4:45 p.m.

Rohm said destroyed in the barn were a new cornpicker, mowing machine, ploughs, and about 200 bales of hay.

County employee Wendell (Smokey) Loar water blasts paint from the Sayers-Hooper building in preparation for repainting.

Historic Waynesburg Building Won't Be An Eyesore Anymore

WAYNESBURG — The future of the old Sayers-Hooper building on East High Street has been the subject of controversy for more than two years.

But at least the dilapidated two-story brick structure, sandwiched between the old and new County Office Buildings, won't be an eyesore to mar the beauty of Waynesburg's downtown renovation program.

The job of water-blasting peeling white paint from the brick was begun Thursday. The building will then be painted olive green with burgandy trim and a black roof.

The county commissioners have authorized county maintenance personnel to do the work. The Waynesburg Sherwin-Williams store has agreed to donate the paint.

"It won't cost the county anything but a little time," said John McCall, president of the Waynesburg Economic Revitalization Corp. (WERC). "It will definitely improve the appearance of the block and it will fit in with storefront improvements being made throughout the business district."

The building, which is recognized as one of the oldest in Waynesburg, dates back to the early 1800s. It was purchased by the county in 1974 and for several years the public defender's office was housed on the second floor, with two businesses occupying storerooms on the first floor.

A third storeroom was housed in a one-story structure which at some point had been added to the original building. This small addition was torn down last year by the county.

In 1981, the commissioners petitioned the Greene County Court for permission to raze the entire structure after they received an architectural report that it was in dangerously poor structural condition and would require extensive renovation. Businesses moved out in anticipation of the building being torn down, but the court declined to give permission for its demolition because of its historic value.

"We (WERC) have suggested that the commissioners consider sale of the building under an arrangement which would result in its restoration and preservation as a commercial building, but to date nothing has happened," McCall said.

Once the painting has been completed, a colonial-type sign will be hung labeling it as the "Sayers-Hooper Building, Circa 1800."

"There won't be anything inside, but at least it should be attractive," McCall said.
