Taxes: Where You Live Makes A Difference

WAYNESBURG — Greensboro Borough and Jackson Township are about as far apart as you can get in Greene County.

Greensboro is in the extreme southeastern corner of the county, while the rural township is in the far western part.

And just as great as the distance which separates them geographically is the gap between the amount their residents must pay in property taxes.

Clarksville residents this year bear the heaviest real estate tax burden in Greene County. Their combined municipal, school and county property levies for 1983 add up to a whopping 130.25 mills.

That means that a person owning a home in Greensboro which is assessed at $15,000 would pay a total of $1,953 in property taxes. Since property in Greene County is assessed at 30 percent of market value, the tax bill, assuming the accuracy of the assessment, would be just under four percent of the $50,000 market value of the house.

Jackson Township residents, on the other hand, will pay a total levy of 64.70 mills. On that same property assessed at $15,000, the total tax bill would be $970.50 — or almost $1,000 less.

A compilation of 1983 taxes in the county's 20 townships and six boroughs has been prepared by the Pennsylvania Economy League, along with a breakdown of the total assessed value of taxable property in each of the municipalities.

It shows, in general, that the highest property taxes are in the eastern part of the county, gradually shading to the lowest levels in western Greene County, and that 14 of the 26 municipalities have levies which exceed 100 mills, or better than 10 cent on every dollar of assessed valuation.

The big reason for the variation lies with school taxes and with the geographical distribution of coal assessments as a factor in the tax base.

The county real estate levy of 19.25 mills is uniform for all municipalities. Township taxes range from a low of 1.45 mills in Jackson Township to a high of 17.9 mills in Wayne Township. Borough levies range from a low of 6.5 mills in Jefferson and 7 mills in Rices Landing to a high of 31 mills in Waynesburg. Clarksville has an 11-mill levy and both Carmichaels and Greensboro have 14-mill levies.

School property taxes, on the other hand, range from a low of 44 mills in the West Greene District to a high of 97 mills in the Southeastern Greene District. Carmichaels Area has a 77-mill levy, Jefferson-Morgan an 89-mill levy and Central Greene a 73-mill levy.

The reason for the difference lies in the range of the assessed value of property within the school districts, and this in turn is largely influenced by the amount of taxable coal which each has — a taxable mineral which eases the burden on owners of surface properties.

In the West Greene District, for example, taxable property carries a total assessed value of 46.5 million, with 72 percent of it being coal. A mill of school tax brings in $46,500 and it has a 1983-84 operating budget of $4.6 million.

The Southeastern Greene District, with virtually the same number of students to education, must finance its operation by taxing property assessed at $12.6 million, of which 38 percent is coal. A mill of school tax there brings in $12,600, and it needs a 97-mill levy to finance a budget of $3.3 million, some $1.3 million lower than the West Greene budget.

The Carmichaels Area and Jefferson-Morgan Districts are comparable in size and have taxable property assessed at $18.4 and $17.7 million, respectively. In the Carmichaels Area District, 13.8 percent is coal and in the Jefferson-Morgan District coal makes up 33.6 percent of the tax base. They have 1983-84 operating budgets of $3.8 million for Carmichaels Area and $4.1 million for Jefferson-Morgan.

The Central Greene School District has the largest assessed valuation of any district in the county at $59 million, of which 41.3 percent is coal. But it is also by far the largest district in the county in terms of student population and in terms of the amount of money ($8.8 million) it has budgeted for this year.

It was not always that way. Ten years ago, prior to the 1976 general reassessment, West Greene was the poorest district in the county while those in the eastern part had a much larger percentage of the tax base. The shift occurred when coal was reevaluated to place a uniform value on it, regardless of location. Prior to that, coal in the eastern part of the county had carried a much higher valuation than in the western section, which was classified as reserve coal.

In addition, coal which remains in the eastern part of the county continues to be depleted each year through active mining operations, further eroding the tax base, while that in the western section is still untapped and remains a stable factor in the tax base.

The accompanying chart shows the current total of the assessed valuation of taxable land, buildings and coal for each municipality, as well as the combined county, municipal and school property tax levies for each.

Miners Ordered Back To Work

WAYNESBURG — Employees at the Emerald Mine in Waynesburg were back on the job Tuesday afternoon following a meeting of UMWA Local 2258 when members were told the Emerald Mines Corp. had obtained a temporary injunction from the U.S. District Court, Pittsburgh, which ordered them to return to work until a hearing could be held.

George Trevorrow, Emerald Mines vice president, said about 80 percent of men scheduled for the 4 p.m. shift reported for work. "We anticipate a full turnout on the midnight shift," he said.

The walkout, which centers on the disciplining of two miners and on company personnel practices, originally began Friday, Sept. 9. One shift worked on Sunday, Sept. 11, but the men walked back out Monday morning and remained off the job until the midnight shift Thursday, Sept. 15. They again walked out at midnight Sunday, Sept. 18.

During the periods when the men were working, negotiations between management and the union were held.

Roads Better, Larson Claims

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Even though Greene County has not had its own highway maintenance district since consolidation of the the Department of Transportation's administrative units, the amount of money allocated to the county for upkeep of its state highways has nearly doubled. State Highways Secretary Thomas E. Larson said Thursday.

Larson, who was making his second visit to the county within the span of a week, spoke about the county's role in the overall state highway maintenance program at a press conference in Waynesburg. His visit to the county was arranged by Rep. H. William DeWeese and was made in company with John Claypool, PennDOT District 12 engineer, and Merle Bolen, maintenance manager for Greene and Fayette counties.

Unlike last Thursday, when his visit was geared primarily to meeting with Consolidation Coal Company officials to work out a plan for upgrading of Route 18, Larson's primary purpose this week was to look over county roads and review maintenance work which is currently being done.

He pointed out that in the 1978-79 fiscal year, before his being named secretary of highways, Greene ploration bore hole.

Decontamination of the site in a valley west of Jollytown is being done under supervision of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) and the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources. It has been under way for more than a year.

"We're up into the millions of dollars in terms of what it is costing," said Sterling L. Wagner, Consol resident exploration manager, who has overall responsibility for the project.

In the past year, the process has involved dredging of a small stream which runs through the property and identification and collection of all surface soil which contains the slightest trace of Americium, a low-level radioactive material which has a number of industrial and commercial applica-

Zoning Permission Granted

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Zoning and Hearing Board granted permission to Edward Poach of Washington to continue with the installation of a second apartment in a building at the corner of Greene and Cumberland streets under the hardship clause of the zoning ordinance.

Permission was granted under condition that the owner guarantee that there will be no parking permitted in the vacant portion of the lot between the building and Greene Street, which would satisfy a concern expressed by residents of the neighborhood.

Elmer W. Dickey Jr. of McMurray, a contractor who is doing the work, said that Poach already has invested $10,000 in the project under a verbal go-ahead from the board, which was given before knowledge was obtained that the building being remodeled and an adjoining house are on the same lot. The property is in an R-1 zone, which normally permits no more than two dwelling units on a property, even with a variance.

A preliminary application from Janet S. Lively for a permit to establish a residential center for the frail elderly at 154 West High Street was tabled pending receipt of additional information on off-street parking and submission of plans.

Side-yard variances were granted to Arthur L. Huffman for erection of a carport on his property at 582 Braden Street, with the understanding that it will not be less than 10 feet from the adjoining property on one side.

Lloyd Cole was granted a variance to erect a carport at 283 Bridge Street, with adjoining property owners having waived the 10-foot side yard requirement.

Dr. and Mrs. Stanley E.L. Falor were granted permission to erect an annex between the main building at 325 East High Street and a smaller building on the rear of the property, contingent upon their filing of a formal appeal form.

Paul Tomasetti's application to convert a garage at the rear of property at 146 West Lincoln Street into an apartment was tabled until he submits evidence that neighbors do not object.

Larson displays a map showing Greene County road improvements Thursday.

improvements during this fiscal year and close accounting is made of every dollar spent to assure that the legislative intent is carried out," he said. "I feel Mr. Claypool and Mr. Bolen have done a good job, and that you have gotten better roads in the last four years."

In speaking of projected capital improvements, Larson said, as he did last week, that the department is planning for a grade separation at the railroad crossing on South Morgan

Street in Waynesburg, a project which he said will cost from $4 million to $5 million.

It is being planned because of the large number of coal trains already moving through the town and in anticipation of an even greater number of coal trains once Consolidation Coal's new Bailey mine in northwestern Greene County is completed.

He also spoke of the long-proposed Route 21 bypass around Waynesburg, but said the department could make necessitating a process to remove the water, which is still under way. The NRC, he explained, demands that the drums be free of water before they can be transported and disposed of.

Water from the drums is being drained off into holding ponds and is then being repacked into new drums. Constant monitoring is being done to make sure it is free of any of the radioactive material.

"There is no contamination whatsoever in water in the ponds or the stream," he said.

The problem occurred on Aug. 27, 1982, when a metal container housing two aspirin-sized pellets of Americium ruptured several hundred feet underground in a hole which was being drilled to explore coal reserves in the wooded valley in Gilmore

Township. During recovery of the container, contaminated mud was raised to the surface, where it spread over the ground and into the small stream.

According to the NRC, Americium is a synthetic element which emits fairly low levels of radiation. It is licensed by the NRC for use in measuring the depth and density of a coal seam.

Wagner pointed out that the same material is used in household smoke detectors.

"There is more Americium in one smoke detector than there is in each of these barrels of earth," he said. "But that does not mean that smoke detectors are dangerous, although I wouldn't want to smash one."

At the time of the spill, 28 people who were at the site and who stepped in the contaminated earth were given complete gamma counts, all of which proved negative.

Following clearance of all the people who could have been affected, Consol began the process of cleaning up the site, first purchasing the land on which the bore hole was located.

Guards have been maintained at the site ever since, and sophisticated equipment has been used at every stage to make sure there was no further contamination.

"You couldn't detect most of this stuff on a regular geiger counter, but the equipment which is available now makes it possible for us to pick up the slightest trace," Wagner said.

The cleanup project is now being done under supervision of experts from Conoco, Consol's parent company. Once it is completed, the NCR will send in a team of specialists to go over the ground and make sure the last bit of contaminated material is gone.

"It was an unfortunate accident and we are doing everything we can to make sure it causes no lasting problems," Wagner said. "And the NRC will make sure we do."

sewer system and with allowing illegal discharge into area creeks.

Following several meetings, the authority agreed to proceed as directed by the DER and the various municipalities agreed to fund the preliminary study by the authority's engineer. Having received an oral promise the project would proceed, the DER halted the suit.

All members present approved the resolution accepting the decree. The only board member absent was Ben Parker from Jefferson Borough.

Several members openly expressed their opposition but felt they had little choice because their respective municipalities have agreed to the decree.

Solicitors for the municipalities convinced DER to amend two sections of the proposed decree. One concerned the right of the municipalities to refuse the final study and eventual construction of the system should the local communities feel the costs were too high. Another change involved methods by which authority members could resign.

Plant Will Shut Down

WAYNESBURG — Greenway Manufacturing Co.'s stitching plant at Nemaacolin will be phased out of operation by the first of the year, according to James Rush, Greenway plant manager at Waynesburg.

Closing of the plant, which began operations in 1971, will mean the loss of 45 jobs. The company will work with the local Job Service Bureau to invite local employers to review the available operator pool.

Donmoor, Greenway parent company, said Wednesday that the firm is engaged in a restructuring program to maintain a competitive position in a changing market place. Company officials cited a need to eliminate small operations as an economic measure.

The Nemaacolin plant contains 7,500 square feet of floor space and was initially set up to produce a specific product line.

90-Year-Old Patient 'Good Medicine' For Hospital Staff

WAYNESBURG — Gail Horn, 90, of Ruff Creek, became the first patient at Greene County Memorial Hospital to receive a total hip joint replacement about 10 days ago. She is doing remarkably well according to all accounts.

In fact, all those connected with her case are unanimous in saying, "She really is good medicine for all of us."

The operation was performed by Dr. Arunava Das, an orthopedic surgeon who recently joined the staff at the hospital. Das said this type of surgery is commonly performed on patients between 70 and 75 years of age and is usually performed to relieve arthritic conditions.

This was not the case with Mrs. Horn. She had suffered severe pain since fracturing her hip in a fall at her home three years ago. When she arrived at the hospital emergency room she was in severe pain and had been unable to walk for almost three weeks.

Das noted a marked deterioration of the hip joint. Considering Mrs. Horn was in generally fair health, Das proceeded to remove the prosthesis inserted in her leg three years ago and scheduled the operation.

Mrs. Horn did extremely well and was out of bed on the second day following her surgery. She said there has been no pain, but plans to continue walking with the aid of her walker instead of a cane because she feels more secure with the added support. Mrs. Horn went home last weekend.

Born Nov. 21, 1892, in Morris Township to Benjamin and Maria Miller, the remarkable Mrs. Horn has lived on a farm most of her life and is no stranger to work.

She and her husband, the late Z.D. Horn, were married in 1917 and, following a short period in Colorado, returned to Greene County and operated a poultry farm for nearly half a century. At one time, they had 20,000 chickens on their well-kept Ruff Creek farm. Since her husband's death in 1969, Mrs. Horn has lived alone but is visited frequently by her son, Paul, who lives nearby. She also has a daughter, Mrs. Robert (Ellen) Maedeker, who lives in Ohio. Her five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren also are frequent visitors to her home.

Extremely shy about all the fuss around her, Mrs. Horn feels the publicity should be about the doctor and the attentive medical staff because, "All I did was lay around and let them do the work."

Mrs. Horn said the nursing care has been excellent and couldn't praise the hospital staff enough during this short interview.

No one entering the room would believe the former schoolteacher will soon reach her 91st birthday.

Mrs. Horn, following graduation from California Normal School, taught school for four years in western Greene County and rode her horse to school each day.

When a brother contracted tuberculosis in 1916 shortly after his graduation from medical school, Mrs. Horn and her husband accompanied the young man to Colorado. Hoping the mountain air would cure him, the Horns found jobs and lived in Boulder for several months before the 1918 flu epidemic claimed the young doctor's life.

They returned to Greene County and never again left.

Chamber Looking For New Coal Show Ideas

By Marcia Biddle, Staff Writer

CARMICHAELS — Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce Vice President Stephen McCann asked members for new ideas about the organization and operation of the annual King Coal Show at a Chamber meeting Wednesday night.

Following the successful completion of the 30th Coal Show, King Coal Association members are looking toward the future and will be discussing new ways of approaching the show and the possible reorganization of the King Coal Association which plans and sponsors the annual week-long event.

"It is my personal view, that the Coal Show gives more publicity to Carmichaels than anything else and we want to see it continue," said McCann, a former president and long-time member of the board of directors of the King Coal Association.

He went on to say that it is an expensive undertaking for organizations to help with the Coal Show and that they receive little for their work. He said he plans to present a proposal at the next King Coal Association meeting to the effect that each member organization would promise to provide a certain number of workers and then would share in any profits accordingly.

"I don't know whether that will be accepted," McCann said, "but I think that those organizations that do the work should share in the profits."

The King Coal Association currently has five member organizations: Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce, Carmichaels-Cumberland Township Volunteer Fire Co., Nemaquin Volunteer Fire Co., Carmichaels Jaycees and United Mine Workers District.

Since the Chamber of Commerce was one of the original members, McCann asked the group to contribute their own ideas to help ensure the shows' future success. Many of the present leaders have been working for the show from its beginning, McCann said, and will soon be retiring or taking lesser roles and new leadership and ideas are needed.

King Coal Association President Sara L. Ruth echoed McCann's concerns and the Chamber members said they would consider the proposal and bring their own ideas to the next King Coal Association meeting.

Ms. Ruth also thanked the Chamber for building the two floats which carried the present and past coal queens in this year's Coal Show Parade.

In other business, Chamber members discussed plans for the Carmichaels Halloween celebration. Chairman Mitch Brozik said he would hold a committee meeting to decide the date of the parade and other celebration details. The committee will attempt to discover whether or not the town merchants would like to combine the parade with a business promotion.

Stephen McCann added, "I don't think any more money should be spent on promotions unless the merchants themselves want it. Chamber money is for everybody."

Missing Mail Mystery Baffles Postal Service

It's been almost eight weeks since a load of mail left the Waynesburg post office and disappeared. And yet the mystery of what happened seems no closer to being solved that it was when the U.S. Postal Service began looking for it.

The best estimate seems to be that some 5,000 pieces of mail are involved. Waynesburg Postmaster Robert Renko knows it was put on a truck for Pittsburgh on Aug. 2. What happened thereafter seems to be anybody's guess.

The search by postal inspectors began about a week after the loss occurred, when people began to call in to inquire about letters and parcels that had not reached their destination.

Authorities don't think the mail was stolen because there have been no attempts to cash checks. They also feel that chances are very remote that it was lost from a truck between Waynesburg and Pittsburgh. But they have no idea what happened.

Since the disappearance, people have been reporting a variety of experiences which indicate what can happen when mail is lost.

A savings and loan association lost 100 passbooks being mailed back to customers, and insurance companies began to call saying that fire policies were about to be cancelled because renewal payments had not been received.

One woman who was made a "last chance" utility payment in that mail said her service was subsequently cut off.

A college student was evicted temporarily from her dormitory room when a check did not arrive.

People who were scheduled to be in Greene County Court never showed up because they did not receive their notices.

Several hearings requiring public notification had to be rescheduled when the required legal advertising did not reach newspapers and were not published.

Papers connected with the closing of an estate, together with a large check, are missing.

All in all it caused a lot of trouble for a lot of people, pointing up the important part which a reliable mail delivery service plays in everyone's life. Fortunately, such goofs don't happen very often.

Professors Do Energy Study

WAYNESBURG — Two Waynesburg College professors spent the summer doing research under appointment to the Faculty Research Participation Program of the U.S. Department of Energy.

Dr. Robert LaCount, professor of chemistry and chairman of the Chemistry Department and Dr. Mildred M. Maguire, a professor of chemistry, were among 55 faculty members selected nationwide for the program.

LaCount's research project at the Pittsburgh Energy Technology Center involved the investigation of the nature of carbonaceous deposits on catalysts used in coal liquefaction experiments. Maguire did work at the Pittsburgh Center involving various aspects of ongoing magnetic resonance studies.

The Faculty Research Participation Program, administered by the University Programs Division of Oak Ridge Associated Universities, Oak Ridge, Tenn., enables faculty members to participate in ongoing research and development at designated DOE research and energy facilities.

Firing Of Park Manager Squelched

GREENSBORO — The board of directors of the non-profit corporation which operates Mon View Park, Greensboro, will undergo a complete reorganization as the result of a public meeting held Sunday at the park skating rink.

Between 200 and 250 residents of the borough and Monongahela Township attended the special meeting to protest any action by the board to terminate the contract of John Harlow of Greensboro, who has managed the park since 1977.

Not only was Harlow not fired, but the community organizations which originally were involved in setting up the non-profit corporation agreed to appoint a study committee which will recommend a new structure for the board at its meeting next month. The present seven-member board will continue to serve on a pro-tem basis until the reorganization has been completed.

Attorney John Stets of Waynesburg, who represented Harlow at the meeting, said the board withdrew its motion to terminate his contract. It had been made at a meeting last Monday, but was not voted on because two board members were absent.

There was no discussion at Sunday's meeting concerning the reason or reasons that certain members of the board wanted to dismiss him, but the board agreed to drop the motion after virtually all of the people attending the meeting voiced their opposition to the action.

During the meeting it was brought out that when the corporation was set up in 1956 the board was to consist of 12 members — three each from the Greensboro Volunteer Fire Company, Greensboro VFW post, Southeastern Greene Women's Civic Club and Greensboro Lions Club. They were the organizations which were active in establishment of the community park and in raising funds for its swimming pool and other facilities.

The board serving in 1980 amended the bylaws to reduce the number of members to seven and to provide that members would be appointed by the board itself as vacancies occurred.

"It became in effect a self-perpetuating body and community involvement was reduced," Stets said.

As a result of Sunday's meeting, the VFW post, fire company and women's club will each appoint three members to serve on the study committee to recommend board reorganization. Two members of the Monongahela Township board of supervisors will also be on the committee to broaden citizen representation. There is no longer a Lions Club in Greensboro.

It was brought out that since Harlow became manager six years ago, the park has moved from a deficit position to the point where it now has $43,000 in the bank and has completed $75,000 worth of capital improvements.

School Deadline Set

By Christie R. Molzon, Staff Writer

NEW FREEPORT — The West Greene School Board voted to set a date when contractors must finish their jobs on the middle-senior high school or the district will hire other companies to finish the work. The action came at the board's meeting Thursday night in the Springhill-Freepoint Elementary School.

Solicitor Robert McCall recommended a certain period of time for the work to be finished be decided upon and if the work isn't done by that time, the board should then use the retainage fees to hire other contractors. The board agreed to let Frank Farley, the building inspector, set the amount of time left for the work to be done.

At last month's meeting Farley said only minor work was still unfinished and it would probably take only a month to complete, but the project was supposed to be finished in December.

McCall also told the board that a settlement had been reached with the Fruehauf company regarding the damaged band uniforms. The company has agreed to replace the 31 jackets and 16-19 pairs of pants that were damaged the first time they

Crash Victim Sues Driver

WAYNESBURG — Craig Ely, 18, of Sycamore R.D.1, filed suit in Greene County Court Tuesday asking damages in excess of $10,000 for injuries he suffered in a highway accident on Dec. 10, 1982, on Route 21 west of Waynesburg.

Hallie McCollum Jr. of Holbrook R.D.1, who was driving a truck which slammed into Ely's car, was named as defendant.

According to the complaint, Ely suffered multiple fractures and severe internal injuries. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ely.

The accident claimed the life of a passenger in Ely's car, 15-year-old Ralph E. Moore of Rogersville.

McCollum subsequently pleaded guilty to homicide by motor vehicle and driving while intoxicated and is serving a 17½-to-35 month sentence.

"Decent From Glory," by Paul C. Nagel. Oxford University Press.

It wasn't easy, being an Adams.

Paul C. Nagel, who is Director of the Virginia Historical Society, has used the John Adams family papers to trace the great suffering which accompanied the well-known accomplishments of four generations of the family. It makes for sad reading. Being an Adams, it seems, was both a blessing and a curse.

The mark of the Adams greatness, Nagel says, "was the capacity to see with painful clarity the shortcomings within themselves and those about them." If you did not seem to notice your failings, an Adams would quickly and frequently point them out to you. It was no wonder that, "Rarely was any family member said to have much personal charm."

But they were hardest on themselves. All the Adamases were torn by a sense of duty "to labor for lofty causes," combined with a belief "that mortals are capable ultimately of only evil and folly."

They held their children to impossibly high standards, while scaring them to death about what faced them when they grew up. Nagel makes the appalling statement that, "For John and Abigail, the most strenuous part of marriage was to prepare their children for worthy lives, a project which soon had the youngsters struggling with apprehension, compulsive behavior, rebelliousness, withdrawal, and depression." The children received "a bewildering mixture of affectionate support and cruel distrust." Very early in life, they learned that, "To be less than excellent in affairs both great and small meant that they were ultimately betraying their family."

As John Adams wrote to his son, John Quincy, "You come into life with advantages which will disgrace you if your success is mediocre. And if you do not rise to the head not only of your Profession, but of your Country, it will be owing to your own Laziness, Slovenliness and Obstinance."

John Quincy was the only one of the four children who was able to live up to, and in fact survive, his father's expectations. The other two sons had good qualities, but not the right ones for an Adams, and soon gave up and sank into depression and alcoholism. The only daughter was painfully shy, and lived a tragic life married to a playboy type.

The unlucky pattern repeated itself in the next generation, too, as some of the children found themselves unable and unwilling to be forced into the mold.

Louisa Johnson, John Quincy's wife, received the Adams treatment, as did all the wives, who wrote often of their depression. Louisa and John Quincy met in England, and he was so noncommittal that everyone thought he was courting her older sister. At dinner one night he suddenly presented Louisa with poems he had written for her, which shocked the family so much that everyone got up and ran out of the room.

After they were engaged, he wrote to her that he "had been blinded by an irrational love," which had "left him temporarily unable to point out her share of humanity's imperfections." He went on to point out, ordered her not to think about politics, and took her, in a state of complete fright, to meet the family. They told her she would probably never fit in.

Still, the marriage was considered successful, and lasted 50 years. Their granddaughter, Louisa, rebelled completely. She was the eldest child of Charles Francis Adams, who was distraught because she wasn't a boy. Louisa, therefore, "never overcame her anger and guilt at not having been a boy." According to Nagel, "From her own letters and the accounts of family members, she emerges as a highly talented person who was bored with what was expected of a woman." Blessed with the Adams talent and drive, and not permitted to use them, she married and ran off to live a directionless life in Europe. She didn't escape the Adams depression, either.

As the third John Adams (brother of Charles Francis) said, "I should be grateful once (but I know it is useless) if I might in any one thing be considered as an individual and not as a Son or Grandson." He also objected to being "absolutely beaten over the head with ancestry," and was another one of the sad casualties of the Adams drive for achievement.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

From one end of the county to the other, local residents are enjoying the beautiful late summer weather. It has been the most enjoyable September most can recall.

Two former Waynesburg fire chiefs are hospitalized. Lawrence (Flip) Tennant and Lew Rush are patients in the Greene County Memorial Hospital and Washington Hospital respectively. At the time of this writing, both were considered in critical condition.

Phone Service Is Restored

WAYNESBURG — A construction accident between Crafton and Pittsburgh Monday caused the toll service in the Waynesburg area to be disrupted by 50 percent capacity, according to Mid-Penn Telephone Company officials.

The mishap occurred when a backhoe engaged in construction work accidentally dug up and severed a main trunk line.

Repair crews were notified and sent to the scene. The outage, partially restored at 11:45 a.m., lasted for an hour.

Waynesburg Gets Review

WAYNESBURG — Officials of the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission were in Waynesburg earlier this week to review an application seeking historical status for a large section of the borough.

The application was rejected last month, but the Waynesburg Economic Revitalization Corp. (WERC), which sought the status, asked for and received another review.

Bearcats Claw Mikes

By Bob Grove, O-R Sports Staff

ELLSWORTH — Pass the aspirin, please. It was one of those nights for Tom McCombs.

The Carmichaels High School coach spent the first half of the Mikes' game here Friday night watching the Bentworth defense take away the football and, after halftime, watched Mother Nature take away his game plan. Being stranded in the rain without a running game is enough to give any football coach a headache.

Bentworth held Carmichaels to minus two yards rushing in eight attempts and turned two first-half Mike turnovers into touchdowns on its way to a 25-0 WPIAL Section 4-A victory.

"I thought our defense just dominated the whole football game," Bentworth coach Ron Skiles said. "I don't think they were ever in the game."

Carmichaels (0-3) trailed, 13-0, midway through the second quarter when a fumbled snap on fourth-and-one at the Bentworth 15-yard line stopped its best drive of the night. After that, it was just wet.

"We gave the ball away too many times early," McCombs said. "Turnovers killed us."

The Bearcats (3-0) had scored their first touchdown just seven plays after senior linebacker Ron Sicchitano intercepted a pass by Carmichaels' senior quarterback Rich Hroblak and returned it to the Mikes' 21-yard line. Bentworth quarterback Jerry Maley threw a four-yard pass to Tim Kennedy for the touchdown with 8:05 remaining in the first quarter.

A Hroblak fumble on the Carmichaels' 30-yard line set up Bentworth's second touchdown. The Bearcats marched 25 yards in six plays, junior running back Keith Winklebleck scoring on a four-yard run with 10:52 left to play in the first half.

Carmichaels, coming off a difficult, 20-15 loss to defending WPIAL Section 4-A champion Frazier, rushed six times in the first half for minus one yard. When injuries decimated the Mikes' backfield before the season began, McCombs had only one alternative. Friday night, it was the wrong alternative to have.

"We do a pretty good job with it," he said of his passing game, "but not in this weather."

Hroblak completed eight of 16 passes in the first half for 74 yards and was 12 of 21 for 103 yards in the second. Throwing 37 times in a high school game and winning is never easy, even on a dry field.

"We knew they weren't going to run the ball. We knew they'd throw it about 40, 50 times," Skiles said.

"They really need a dry field to execute their game plan. Coach (Ron) Sicchitano did a great job with our defense. We wanted to make them execute it, wanted to make them be good."

The Bearcats' game plan was much simpler — give the ball to Winklebleck and John Puskarich. Puskarich rushed for 114 second-half yards, scoring Bentworth's third touchdown on a 31-yard run with 8:32 left in the game. He finished the night with 20 carries for 139 yards.

Winklebleck, who rushed 15 times for 55 yards in the first half, managed another nine yards on five carries in the second half.

"Puskarich is a great runner," Skiles said. "With those two in the backfield, you can't set your defense up to handle just one."

Bentworth finished the scoring with 3:47 left to play, Maley capping a five-play, 35-yard drive by tossing a 25-yard touchdown pass to tight end Rob Powell.

Carmichaels' wide receiver J.L. Lechner caught three passes for 33 yards in the first half and caught eight passes for 80 yards in the second.

The Mikes, still searching for their first touchdown, drove 73 yards in the closing minutes of the game before Hroblak's pass to Lechner in the end zone fell incomplete. Hroblak completed seven of nine passes in the drive, four of those to Lechner.

Bentworth's Keith Winklebleck is stopped by Carmichaels' Tom Rumancik (65) and Barry Guesman (80). Observer-Reporter/Jim Fuller

Garry Saves Jackets

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

WAYNESBURG — Yes, Bill Tornabene does have a quarterback. And he also has a defense that bends then snaps back.

After two games of nearly non-existent offense, senior quarterback Tim Garry practically carried Waynesburg College's football team with his right arm.

Garry completed 17 of 27 passes for 174 yards, including two touchdowns, as the Yellow Jackets upset Fairmont State, 14-13, Saturday at College Field.

The win was the first ever for Tornabene as head coach, and the first of the year for the Yellow Jackets, who are now 1-1-1.

"To me, the team won the game and I'm very happy for them," said Tornabene. "We had a lot of frustration in the first two-and-a-half games and the win near the end of the game shows the team's dedication and conditioning."

Fortunately for Waynesburg, Garry found the touch he'd been missing in the first two games. The 6-2, 180-pound transfer from California confidently rallied the Yellow Jackets back from a 13-0 deficit at halftime.

"It's a great feeling because I was getting down on myself," said Garry. "I knew I had to show these guys something because I just transferred and everything was clicking. It was really fun."

"The receivers were running good routes and every time I looked, there were two or three guys open. They were finding the openings and the line was blocking well and everything just clicked."

Waynesburg, trailing 13-0 early in the third quarter, turned the game around when senior nose guard John Higgins recovered a fumble on Fairmont's 11-yard line.

On the next play, Garry rolled to his right and tossed an 11-yard strike to Shirley Hairston for Waynesburg's first touchdown. The extra point failed but the momentum had definitely shifted.

"The momentum started for us on when we got the fumble," said Garry, a graduate of Fort Cherry High School in McDonald. "Everyone was fired up on the sidelines because things started going our way. This win will help a lot."

Waynesburg's offense stalled on its next four possessions before it mounted an 83-yard drive late in the fourth quarter. Garry hit four of five passes for 75 yards on the drive, including the scoring pass of 10 yards to Cline Hunt, bringing the Jackets within a point, 13-12.

"At that point our defense had been on the field so consistently that they were fatigued," said Fairmont's first-year head coach Larry McDaniel. "We don't have any depth on defense and we just got wore down."

"But I think our defense played great. I don't have anything negative to say about them. Our offense put our defense in a precarious position and it caught up with us."

Waynesburg decided to go for the win instead of a tie and attempted a two-point conversion. Garry rolled to his left and drilled a pass through two defenders into the hands of Hairston to give the Jackets the 14-13 win.

"There was no real decision at that point," said Tornabene. "We've practiced that play and our kids wanted to win badly. We didn't feel with the time remaining, that we would get another chance, so we decided to go for it."

While the two scoring plays worked to perfection, Waynesburg's offense didn't execute well the entire game. Fairmont dominated most of the game rolling up 415 yards in total offense to the Jackets 220.

passes for 185 yards and a touchdown of four yards to Joe Thompson.

The Falcons, now 0-2, scored their other six points on field goals of 39 and 37 yards by Erik Soliday.

"Their players fought right to the end," said McDaniel. "Being down in the game, they could have easily rolled over and said here we go again. But they didn't do that. They fought right to the end and I give them credit... they beat us."

80 Is Golfer's Favorite Number

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Clarence (Bus) Spitznogle of Hundred, W.Va., shot 80 holes of golf at Rohanna's Golf Course Thursday.

That's an active day for any golfer, but when you consider he was celebrating his 80th birthday it's an amazing event.

Bus was at the course shortly after daylight and by lunch had played 54 holes. At 1:45 p.m. when he stopped long enough for a picture and a short interview he had completed 72 holes. It wasn't a matter of swatting at the ball and jumping into the golf cart either, because the octogenarian finished the front nine as low as 35 on one of his rounds.

He recently shot a respectable 73 and next week will be playing for the first flight championship. He has won the first flight title on two previous occasions.

He played nine holes with the Rev. Jim Shepherd, his former pastor, but for the rest of the marathon played alone. He did take two of his nieces and a sister for a ride on the golf cart.

Bus retired from Carnegie Natural Gas Co. in 1968 following a 50-year career with the firm that began when he was a nine-year-old water boy. At the time of his retirement, he was chief engineer at the pumping station in Hundred, W.Va.

He has been an active golfer for 60 years and has carded two holes-in-one including one in Sistersville, W.Va., for which he won a case of Wheaties. His other ace came at Rohanna's.

Born Sept. 15, 1903, in Spraggs, Bus remains active despite his retirement and is currently serving as chairman of the board of the Hundred National Bank. He maintains a large garden and only last week canned 69 pounds of sweet corn.

His secret to a long life is keeping busy.

He and his wife Inez, 81, enjoy good health and are both active in community affairs. They have three children, James O. and Ralph R., both of Dunellon, Fla. and Mrs. Dorothy Jackson of Weston, W.Va.

who rode the golf cart with him for the final eight holes Thursday. They also have eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

His two nieces, Jenny Carder of Grafton, W.Va. and Bobbie Howard of McMurray were also on hand for the event and Ms. Carder checked her uncle's blood pressure periodically. "For an 80-year-old man playing golf on a warm day, it was very good," she said.

Flocking To The Rescue

By Joe Parry

At best, the Washington and Greene county pheasant flocks are spotty. Where have they all gone?

Even though both counties offer a fine habitat capable of comfortably supporting vast numbers of pheasants, neither Washington nor Greene county has ever held a great number of pheasants. There are various reasons for this dilemma.

For years the Pennsylvania Game Commission blamed the state's overall deficiency on predation, usage of pesticides and adverse weather conditions.

However, a more logical reason for the decline is due to what is called clean farming methods. There are no corn stalks left standing, no fence-rows for cover and no idle acres for the birds to breed, hide or live. But perhaps the biggest reason of all is the mowing of hay before June 20 destroys the majority of wild pheasant nests.

But according to Pete Duncan, executive director of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, "we have no control over modern farming methods" even though he says that is the major cause for the decline.

A few years ago PGC biologists conducted some tests in two northeast counties. In test fields where hay mowing occurred after June 20, just 30 percent of the pheasant nests were destroyed, whereas in fields customary to early mowings, 95 percent were destroyed.

The Game Commission has finally abandoned the farm-raised pheasant program and embarked on a new program aimed at the development of fewer but harder game birds. However, those birds cannot fly, making it very easy for a hunter to shoot it.

Duncan says it costs the PGC about $40 to put out a single bird, which ends up in the hunter's game bag. As a result, according to Duncan, "the bottom line is that the Commission can no longer underwrite $40 ringnecks on an $8.25 license." Therefore, the new program, which was advised by scientists at Penn State, "will be better suited to fending for itself and surviving in the wild."

Under the current proposal, three conditions must be met for reproduction. First, hatchery-incubated birds will have far less human imprinting from workers. The birds will then be transferred to larger enclosures, similar to those in which they will eventually be released. Finally, other pheasants will be produced under the same conditions which have been used by the Commission for years.

The Commission will legband thousands and back-tag them in an effort to monitor their movements, survival and reproductive success. Duncan says, "There is no guarantee attempts to develop a hardy pheasant will be successful, but there is reason to be optimistic.

College's Elderhostel Program Big Success

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College has found that older people enjoy learning new things and welcome an opportunity to do so in a campus setting.

Judging from the reaction of participants, the college considers this summer's Elderhostel sessions to have been "an outstanding success."

Elderhostel is a program which gives those who are 60 years of age or older an opportunity, for a modest fee, to combine a vacation with a back-to-school adventure.

"Now that is really living it up," Eugene Reuhaf of Newell, W. Va., said of his experience.

Elderhostelers come in all shapes and sizes and from all kinds of educational backgrounds. What they have in common is a taste for living and an appetite for variety.

"By the time you're our age, that's the way it ought to be," said Elderhosteler Howard Bretzger of Newell, N.J.

Elderhosteling is quite an experience for all participants. In the classroom, the students are all older than the teachers. They ask more questions than regular students.

"You have to be sharp to keep ahead of them," Dr. Bob Carnein said. "They are really neat."

For Carnein, who is chairman of the college Geology Department, it was his second year of teaching in Elderhostel. "Next year I hope to arrange my schedule so I can do it again," he said.

It was the first time for the Rev. J.E. Victor Carlson, who conducted a course on "The Sermon on the Mount."

"It was one of the most interested and attentive groups I have ever taught," he said. "What was so amazing was their interest. They were so open and spontaneous in their responses."

All sorts of interesting things can happen in an Elderhostel classroom.

Dr. Vooete Vartikar will remember his class on "Monetary Economics," because a retired banker was enrolled and he had a chance to ask him some questions.

A court clerk and judge's secretary enrolled in Dr. Phillip Weinberger's class on "Making Sense of Crime and Justice." And at least three published poets landed in Dr. Roger Bower's class on "Everything You Always Wanted to Know about Poetry — and Were Afraid to Ask."

"You are really serious about all this," he told the group as he rewarded them with punch and cookies at the end of the course. "You have given me great pleasure. I will not forget you."

For Dr. Fred Silvia, his course in "French for Travelers" was his third round at reaching an Elderhostel group. Part of the experience was cooking a meal "ala French cuisine" in the kitchen at Burns Hall.

"They loved it," he said, and his students agreed. "The course was fun and the quiche was delicious," student Sandy Merino said.

Dr. Bruce Barnett, a professor of biology at the college, is director of Elderhostel activities there. "The students are all so enthusiastic," he said. "It gets better and better."

Barnett was assisted by Otto Hohing, entertainer and veteran local Elderhostler; Carol and James Randolph, Ruth Schenley and David and Mame Convery. The Converys served as dormitory supervisors for this year's sessions and saw to the comforts of the guests.

"It was all so relaxed and family style," Hohing said. "That's what the people like."

"I love all of you and I plan to come back next year," Dorothy Rehanek of Uniontown said. "I have talked about it so much my friends are getting interested."

And in a letter to Barnett, Anne Shub, 82, said she found the college program very rewarding.

"Waynesburg College is one of the smaller colleges we attended, but the quality of personalities and service of the staff, the faculty, and just plain everyday living made it one of the most memorable of my annual programs," she wrote.

Sues Patron
WAYNESBURG — The owner of a Waynesburg tavern wants the price of a new tile floor from a patron he claims rode a motorcycle in his bar.
Harry Lucas, owner of the Colonial Place at 27 West High Street, filed a lawsuit in Greene County Court Monday in an attempt to collect $792 from Daniel Zimmerman of 291 Huffman Street.
According to the complaint, Zimmerman took his motorcycle into the bar on May 7 and rode it in an open area where a pool table sits. It states the rapid acceleration involved in "peeling out" ruined the floor.
Lucas is also attempting to collect another $180 from Zimmerman for an incident on July 21, claiming that the Waynesburg man smashed two bar stools in a fight with another patron.
