UMW, Consol Clash On Equipment Issue

WAYNESBURG — A preliminary skirmish was fought in Waynesburg Thursday in a developing legislative battle over the use of diesel equipment in underground coal mines.

Principal combatants were United Mine Workers President Richard Trumka, who strongly favors legislation to ban its use, and David D. Eyer, vice president of engineering for Consolidation Coal Co., whose company has already applied to the Department of Environmental Resources for use of diesel equipment at its new Bailey mine in Greene County.

Eyer, who represented the Keystone Bituminous Coal Association as a spokesman for the industry, claimed that use of such equipment could substantially improve the productivity of a mine, would increase mine safety, and would pose no threat to the health of miners — positions which Trumka disputed.

"It makes no sense to add further pollutants to the air in a coal mine," Trumka said. "No one can prove that the diesel exhaust would not create a health hazard, and until they can I won't permit my miners to work in such an environment. This is madness driven by greed."

Forum for the debate was a public hearing held by the Mines and Energy Management Committee of the state House of Representatives on legislation which has been introduced by Rep. H. William DeWeese to ban the use of diesel equipment underground in both bituminous and anthracite mines.

The hearing, held in the county commissioners' meeting room, attracted close to 100 persons who gathered in the small room and congregated in the hall outside. Many of them were district UMWA officials and rank-and-file miners.

Joseph A. Petrarca, chairman of the House committee, headed a delegation of 12 members of the House of Representatives who attended and posed questions to the four speakers — Trumka; Eyer; Dr. James Weeks, deputy director of occupational health for the UMWA; and Jack Sallee, director of mining products for the Caterpillar Co., which manufactures diesel motors for underground mines.

As sponsor of the legislation, which has bi-partisan support, DeWeese presided over the hearing. He explained that it was intended to gather information for the benefit of the committee.

At the present time, all bituminous mines in Pennsylvania use electrically-driven equipment. The only diesel equipment in use is in an anthracite mine and a few zinc mines.

Eyer said that replacement of electric mine haulage equipment with diesel equipment, particularly in new mines, could help prevent one of the biggest hazards in underground mining. He stated that from 1978 to 1982, more than 1,100 electricity-related accidents involving haulage equipment occurred in U.S. mines. Those accidents caused 10 deaths.

The use of diesel equipment would eliminate overhead trolley lines and the trailing electrical cable required by present equipment, he added.

"Our studies indicate that with the use of diesel equipment, productivity will increase by 5 to 20 percent at a mine, depending upon the mining system employed," he said. "This is a substantial increase in today's highly competitive marketplace."

He also noted that European mines having been using such equipment for years and that there are 5,000 units of diesel equipment in the United States. He said the only states where it is now banned are West Virginia and Virginia, and that Virginia is currently considering its repeal.

"It makes no sense to prohibit Pennsylvania's underground mine operators from using such a valuable tool and further increase Pennsylvania's competitive disadvantages with respect to the rest of America's coal mining industry," he said, later expressing the opinion that use of diesel equipment "would be worth several million dollars per year at the Bailey mine."

Trumka and Dr. Weeks expressed particular concern over the potential danger of diesel exhaust to the health of miners, both in terms of cancer and increased risk of lung ailments.

Dr. Weeks testified that existing data is inconclusive at best, but said that soot from diesel exhaust contains chemicals that increase the risk of lung cancer and could be dangerous in the closed environment of an underground mine, especially when combined with coal dust.

The UMW president also questioned the argument that diesel equipment would increase safety, contending that such claims presume that maintenance would be improved with their introduction into mines.

GCID Officers Are Elected

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Industrial Developments Inc. elected officers and received a report on activities during the past year at its annual meeting Wednesday evening.

Officers, all of whom were re-elected, are R.A. Matteucci of Dry Tavern, president; Raymond McCracken and George K. Stennett of Waynesburg, vice presidents; Sally Blair of Waynesburg, secretary; Ewing B. Pollock of Waynesburg, treasurer; and Ralph J. Sommers Jr. of Waynesburg, assistant secretary-treasurer.

William R. Davis, Joseph D. Hart, William W. Garrison and Carter Andrew were re-elected to the executive committee.

During the shareholders meeting which preceded the meeting of the board of directors, three new members were elected to the board. They are William Morris of Waynesburg, Edward Stiles of Waynesburg R.D.3 and Dorothy Weston of Rices Landing R.D.1.

In his annual report, Matteucci reported that despite a budget cut which made it necessary to curtail some of its normal activities, GCID "still managed to continue working with prospects and actually 'closed' on three separate projects since our last annual meeting."

He noted that the First National Bank of Carmichaels broke ground for a new facility in January, that Greene Health Care Associates began construction of its 120-bed nursing home in April, and McKnight Plaza started work on Equitable Gas Co.'s new Division H headquarters in Waynesburg in September. Financing for the three projects was arranged through the GCID Authority.

"Total cost for the three projects amounted to nearly $6 million, with 66 jobs retained and 146 new jobs created," Matteucci said. He added that closing on a fourth project is anticipated this month.

Nation's Veterans Honored

'Support Essential'

JEFFERSON — Major Casey Gedmintas told a small gathering for a Veterans' Day observance here Friday that public support is essential for any military victory.

Gedmintas, an original member of the Army Green Berets who served three tours of duty in Vietnam, gave the main address for the Veterans' Day program held in the Jefferson-Morgan High School auditorium following a parade through Jefferson. The parade, held in a steady rain, stopped in the center of town at 11 a.m. while members of the sponsoring Filer-Sadlek American Legion Post 954 presented the traditional gun salute to the dead.

A small crowd braved the rain to watch the parade which consisted of the American Legion honor guard with its massed colors, military vehicles from the Pennsylvania National Guard unit headquartered in Waynesburg, local dignitaries in cars and fire company vehicles. Because of the rain, the Jefferson-Morgan High School band did not march but participated in the program at the high school.

Filer-Sadlek Post Commander Charles Plavi welcomed the audience and gave brief remarks. John E. Titus, a Filer-Sadlek Post member and a past American Legion state commander, served as master of ceremonies.

In his main address, Gedmintas, currently a professor of military science at West Virginia University in Morgantown, said that veterans of both World War I and World War II were welcomed back with parades and ceremonies while those of Korea and Vietnam received no such welcome. It was then he told the small gathering that "public support is essential to military victory."

He said the Army learned some lessons from returning Vietnam veterans and has greatly improved its separation policy for veterans making it a top priority item. Since 1979, he said, the military has opened 135 veteran rehabilitation centers across the country to help veterans make the transition from the military to a productive civilian life.

The program included service songs by the high school band and a Post Everlasting ceremony for members of the Filer-Sadlek Post who have died in the past year.

'The Young Must Know'

WAYNESBURG — Dr. J. Thomas Mills was disappointed that young people of the Waynesburg Central High School Band were stationed outside in the pavilion when Waynesburg's Veterans Day program was held Friday morning at the Veterans of Foreign Wars post home.

The speaking portion of the program was held inside the post home so that the older people attending would not be subjected to the cold rain which fell throughout the morning. But the band, color guard, baton twirlers and firing squad braved the elements to perform their traditional roles in the ceremony honoring those who have served in all wars, and particularly those who gave up their lives for their country.

"Young people need to know what we are doing here today," Dr. Mills said at the outset of his address. "Their generation is the latest to benefit from the sacrifices made by many people to help preserve our freedoms."

The recently-installed president of Waynesburg College traced the roots of Veterans Day to Armistice Day, which was established to mark the end of World War I "at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month in 1918." He noted that it was changed to Veterans Day by Congress in 1954 to more appropriately pay tribute to the veterans of all wars.

He noted that it is appropriate that the principal Veterans Day program in the nation is held at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia, just outside Washington, D.C., since it is the site of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

"We hope they may somehow realize that we honor and glorify them," he said. "That tomb symbolizes the high regard in which we hold those who had their lives taken from them while they protected the freedoms we have in this nation — where you can have a courthouse downtown, churches of all denominations and where children can go about without fear. That is not true in many other countries of the world and we owe an immense debt to the fighting men of all wars who preserved those rights and privileges."

Judge Glenn Toothman served as master of ceremonies for the program, which was held by the V.F.W. post.

Democrats Sweep Township Races

WAYNESBURG — The virtual sweep which Democratic candidates enjoyed in Tuesday's general election in Greene County cost two veteran township supervisors their jobs — Ralph W. Porter in Franklin Township and Oakle Staggers in Gray Township.

The only one to survive was Raymond E. Clark in Whiteley Township, as he defeated his Democratic challenger, David L. Walker, by 39 votes.

In Morgan Township, John D. Thistlethwaite captured the supervisor seat now held by veteran Isaac E. Gayman, who did not run for reelection. In Richhill Township, a write-in effort on behalf of incumbent supervisor Paul Day fell short as the post was won by Democrat Ray L. Whipkey.

Admissions Head Appointed

WAYNESBURG — A four-month search for a new director of admissions at Waynesburg College has ended with the appointment of Timothy Thyeen to the position.

In making the announcement Tuesday, Dr. J. Thomas Mills Jr., college president, said that Thyeen will assume his new duties immediately. He had been serving as associate director of admissions since he joined the college staff in May of this year.

Mills also announced that Pamela

Abbe and Lorraine Cassidy have both been named to the position of assistant director of admissions. They previously had served as admissions representatives.

In making the announcement of Thyeen's appointment, Mills said that a search committee of faculty, administrators and admissions staff had reviewed more than 80 applicants for the post. The final decision, he said, "came after lengthy deliberation. The committee unanimously concurred with the appointment."

It used to be that a picture like this could only mean harvest time—big orange pumpkins, shiny red apples, colorful stalks of Indian corn. And, of course, a turkey in the pantry.

But what about today? You can buy apples almost any time. Pumpkins are available in a can twelve months of the year. And you can buy a frozen turkey as easily in July as in November.

We Americans take for granted what was a real treat in our parent's time. But in the midst of this material plenty, there is danger of spiritual famine. To keep the proper perspective, to appreciate the gifts of life to the fullest we need the Church and the story it has to tell us.

Maybe you can't be a pioneer—a Pilgrim. But you can follow your forefathers' example at Plymouth that first November. You can utter genuine thanks in the church of your choice.

Drug, Alcohol Task Force Organized

WAYNESBURG — The National Chemical People TV series concluded Wednesday, Nov. 9, but at the same time a Drug and Alcohol Task Force was born in Greene County.

A meeting of people interested in serving on the committee was held at Greene County Memorial Hospital by Linda Mosier and Bonny Roche, who had formerly served as county coordinators for the SWPA Chemical People Project.

Approximately 35 people met with Mosier and Roche to express concern for the increasing number of teenagers whose lives are being dramatically altered by the use of drugs and alcohol.

Agreeing to co-chair the newly-formed task force were Mrs. Rose Marie Knight of Jefferson R.D.1, Mrs. Carol Barnish of Waynesburg R.D.1 and Mrs. Sue Virgili of Jefferson R.D.1.

Following the organizational meeting and viewing of the Chemical People series conclusion, "Community Answers," the task force announced that a program for teens and their parents, entitled "Rock 'N Roll Awareness" will be held.

The program, co-sponsored by the task force and the Family and Teen Health Services Department of Greene County Memorial Hospital, will be held Wednesday, Dec. 7, at Waynesburg Central High School, starting at 7 p.m.

The program will be presented by Steve Walker, a rock 'n roll aficionado who has taken his stereo receiver, cassette deck and speakers before hundreds of youngsters and parents. He presents a spirited 90-minute program that amounts to a comparative analysis of what he considers good and bad rock 'n roll.

Walker, 27, is a McKeesport-based youth minister, operating out of the Pittsburgh Catholic Diocese, who travels throughout western Pennsylvania with the unique presentation. He has appeared on "Amplified," a Sunday morning radio program, and on other radio programs and television shows.

Walker's program is designed to highlight the difference between positive and negative rock music. Positive rock emphasizes motivation and dedication through upbeat, life-giving lyrics, he believes. Negative rock is a conversely suggestive medium that glorifies rebellion, drug and alcohol use, illicit sex and defeatism.

"Teens are often unskilled at sorting out the difference," he says. "Ideally, I would like to see parents become more involved with their children's musical tastes and listening habits."

Instead of condemning all rock 'n roll, he would like to have parents critique music along with their teens for mood value, then phase out the bad and phase in the good.

With 87 percent of the nation's youth listening to rock from three to four hours a day, Walker realizes its role as a social force and, more importantly, an opinion shaper.

Tickets for the event will be available at the administration office at Greene County Memorial Hospital and from members of the task force. They will also be strategically placed throughout Greene County for easy access by teens. No charge will be made, but donations will be accepted following the program. All proceeds will benefit the task force.

Tickets must be obtained in advance, however, since a capacity audience is anticipated. For additional information, contact Linda Mosier at 627-3101, extension 300.

Combined Aid Helps Students

WAYNESBURG — A new student financial aid program has been launched at Waynesburg College. The program combines the resources of churches, college scholarship funds and family resources in a three-way sharing of tuition expenses.

The new program, "Partners in Education," is designed to meet an individual recipient's tuition expenses. Recipients can be selected by the individual churches participating in the program, or by the college.

Dr. J.E. Victor Carlson, who is developing the "Partners in Education," program calls the new venture, "an opportunity for home, church and school to share in providing financial assistance for deserving students."

Under the program, individual churches provide awards equal to one-third of the annual tuition, the college matches that amount with a scholarship and the family of the student provides the remaining third.

Dr. Carlson said that seen students have been selected to participate in the program this year. The seven, selected by the individual churches, met the admission requirements of the college and make application for the award through their local church.

The new program is another way in which churches and Waynesburg College can work together to help deserving students according to Dr. Carlson. He noted that several other churches are considering participation in the future.

"The seven recipients of the awards this year have demonstrated their ability and need," he said. "and they are able to attend Waynesburg College because of this program."

Since Dr. Carlson, a 1940 graduate of the college, outlined the three-part sharing program, he and others from the college have met with several church leaders.

Election Law Loophole Undermines Free Choice

Considering the amount of time the job requires and the controversy it can frequently generate, it is surprising that so many people want to serve on school boards.

Since those holding school board seats are unpaid, the desire for a paying job is probably the only motivation that can be ruled out. But despite their reasons for running, last week's election again proved that there is rarely a scarcity of school board candidates.

Some people, in fact, wanted the job badly enough to run for both four-year terms and two-year terms, taking advantage of a quirk in the law to double their chances of being elected.

The unusually large number of two-year terms were on the ballot this year as part of the changeover process necessary to switch the terms of school directors from six years to four years. But two-year terms also crop up when a mid-term vacancy occurs and the appointee must run for the office at the next available election.

The problem with permitting candidates to run for two offices on the same board becomes apparent when the results of last week's election are reviewed. In the Carmichaels Area School District in Greene County, two individuals were successful in getting elected to both two-year and four-year terms.

In Washington County, the same situation, but each involving just one candidate, exists in the Bentworth, Burgettstown, Charleroi, Chartiers-Houston, McGuffey, Peters Township and Washington School Districts.

In each case, the successful candidates will have to elect whether he or she wants the two-year term or the four-year term. The other office will then be declared vacant and the school board which takes office next month will fill the vacancy.

The same thing can happen for other local offices. In Dunlevy Borough, for example, one person was elected to both a four-year term and a two-year term on borough council. It seems to us that this subverts the election process in that it takes some of the choice out of the hands of voters.

The state legislature should seriously consider changing the law to make it impossible for any candidate to run at the same time for two positions on the same governmental body. And the change should be made before the next municipal primary.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

Greene County 4-H club members have been doing very well this year in state competition.

The latest achievements came at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition in Harrisburg, where Pamela Kerr of Carmichaels R.D.1 placed first in the Ladies Lead Line competition.

Twenty-seven girls from throughout Pennsylvania competed in the event. They were judged on their woolen outfits, poise, presentation, and the response to halter training of the purebred ewes they were leading.

Janet Mawhinney of Waynesburg R.D.2 placed seventh in the event, and Pamela's sister, Valerie, also competed.

Miss Mawhinney was also the District 6 pre-teen winner in the Make It Yourself with Wool contest held last month at the Washington Mall and, as district winner, took part in the state contest held Oct. 29 at State College.

Natalie Renner of Waynesburg exhibited the champion heifer in the Herford division of the Junior Breeding Cattle competition at the Keystone International. Her entry, "RF Miss Squaw," placed first in the junior calf class.

Natalie was recently accepted as a junior member of the American Her-ford Association.

The Bowlby Public Library at Waynesburg held a very nice open house Sunday to mark the 25th anniversary of its move into the Bowlby mansion and the 40th anniversary of the foundation of its predecessor, the Waynesburg Children's Library.

Mrs. May Clovis of Waynesburg, who was largely instrumental in establishment of the original library, was the guest of honor and received some well-deserved tributes for her many years of dedication to the improvement of county library services.

R. A. Matteucci of Dry Tavern, veteran president of Greene County Industrial Developments, Inc., was re-elected to that position when GCID held its annual meeting last week.

Despite the slowdown in the economy and a cutback in its funding, GCID has continued to do a good job in working with industrial and business expansion in the county and feels future prospects are bright.

The Carmichaels Grange is to be congratulated on the 75th anniversary of its founding. It has remained active for all of those years and has been involved in many projects which have benefited the community.

Parking Revenues Concern Council

WAYNESBURG — The possibility of employing a code enforcement officer whose duties would include patrolling parking meters was discussed at a meeting Monday of Waynesburg Borough Council.

Although the position has been under consideration for some time, the idea has been given impetus by a drop in the number of borough patrolmen, which in turn has led to a falloff in meter revenues.

The mayor's report for October, which was presented at the meeting, indicated that meter revenues for October totaled $2,671, which was $340 less than in October 1982.

While fines for motor vehicle violations were up by more than $150 at $733, fines for ordinances and other violations were down by $380 at $1,072.

When asked for an opinion on why the meter revenues were down, Police Chief Tim Hawfield pointed out that there are currently two vacancies on the police department, and plans to fill only one of those vacancies.

"People quickly become aware that we don't have the manpower to write parking tickets and when that happens they stop putting in coins and run the risk of getting a ticket," he said.

Frank VanCleve, chairman of the Public Safety Committee, pointed out that the chief is the only officer on duty during the day and, with his administrative duties, does not have the time to adequately patrol meters.

He pointed out that he has been collecting money from the meters from the past two months as a volunteer assistant, and frequently finds meters on violation when he makes his rounds.

"I can't write tickets; sometimes I wish I could," he said, adding that his concern is not necessarily for the lost revenue but for the fact that some motorists park for hours at a time in the same place.

"The primary purpose of parking meters is to provide a turnover of parkers to make spaces available for people who come to town to shop," he said. "What's happening now has to be hurting our merchants."

At VanCleve's request, Hawfield and the Public Safety Committee were authorized to proceed with the preparation of a job description, outline of duties, and suggested salary range for a borough code enforcement officer for consideration in connection with preparation of the 1984 budget. While it would not be a civil service position on the police department, the person employed would work under supervision of the police chief.

In a related matter, council approved a suggestion to establish a 15-minute parking zone at the corner of Washington and High streets, in front of the First National Bank of Carmichaels, where no meters can be placed because the sidewalk is over a basement.

At the present time, there are no restrictions on the five or so parking spaces at that point since a yellow line cannot be enforced for a greater distance than 15 feet from the intersection.

Council will also consider the possibility of installing meters in borough lot No. 4 on East High Street, where motorists are now expected to pay 25 cents an hour to park. Because there is no one on duty to collect the charge, revenue from that lot in October totaled just $153, well below that in metered lots.

In other action, council:
 Formally accepted the resignation of Patrolman Tim Stevenson, which was effective Oct. 29, and authorized the Civil Service Commission to carry out procedures for filling the post.

Gave permanent status to Patrolman Michael Meighen, who completed his one-year probationary status, and gave him a $500 per year merit raise, retroactive to his anniversary date, on recommendation of VanCleve, who said he "has been

Flenniken Library To Set Up Crucible Deposit Collection

CARMICHAELS — In response to requests from residents of Crucible, the Flenniken Library board of trustees voted at its meeting Tuesday to set up a library deposit collection in that community.

A board committee will attempt to find a public location at which a small collection of books can be placed for community use.

Board members noted that deposit collections are part of a Greene County Library System program called "Outreach for Books," which was started when bookmobile services had to be discontinued last year because of funding cuts.

Books in the collections are rotated every two weeks by library staff members. In addition to taking books into communities throughout the county under this program, both the Bowlby and Flenniken libraries will deliver books to individual shut-ins on request.

Librarian Ruth Macera reported that book circulation at the Flenniken Library for October was 3,008, an increase of 700 over October of the previous year. A total of 227 children attended pre-school story hour during the month.

She also reported $225 was donated to the library building fund and volunteers worked 125 hours at the library during the month.

The board also heard a presentation by Lynne Mayer, project librarian and data coordinator for the county library system.

Mrs. Mayer plans to organize a planning committee made up of 15 people from all parts of the county. She will supervise surveys of library users and non-users, and the committee will help to determine library needs in the county and plan ways of increasing library usage.

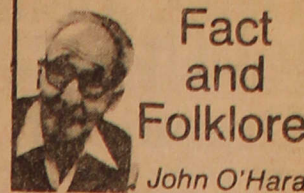

WERC Receives Street Light Bids

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Economic Revitalization Corp. has received bids for the installation of new street lights on High Street, between Morgan and Morris streets.

The lights will be installed as part of the WERC program to rehabilitate the downtown business section of Waynesburg.

The low bid of $16,700 for electrical work involved in installation of the lights came from M&K Electric Co., Monongahela. Three bids were received, ranging to a high of $55,500.

WERC also received one bid for sidewalk replacements and curb cuts for the handicapped. The bid from Vince's Electrical Service was $41,365.

Fact and Folklore
 John O'Hara

All sports, especially football at both the high school and college levels, have a rich folklore that is repeated from year to year or by play by play going back so far that few people can remember the actual game.

Both Waynesburg High School and Waynesburg College, because of their early start in the game have a rich lore of this kind of fun.

Waynesburg College got involved with football in the early days of the sport. There was some hesitation on the part of the academic faculty to grant permission for the sport to be played because of the bad reputation the game had in the east where it originated. The college Board of Trustees finally gave it their okay, but only because the captain was a ministerial student.

His named was Henry Whittles, and he had played at Princeton where he was also a student in the ministerial school, before coming to Waynesburg where he played on the team as well as coached the other players.

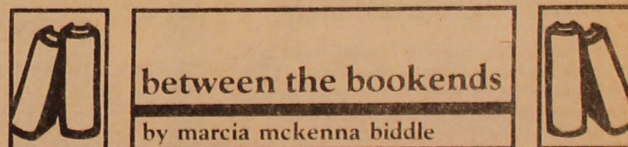

In a sort of ironic twist, he scored the first touchdown in Waynesburg's history when he stole the play from an opponent and made a touchdown. However, there was nothing criminal about his act as easing the ball from an opponent was legal, and still is.

Football in Waynesburg became so important that eventually the Waynesburg townspeople contributed a fund of some $20,000 to recruit a team that would defeat Washington and Jefferson, then one of the strongest football teams in the country, and had played in the Rose Bowl in California the year before. The Waynesburg Coach, Brit Patterson, had used the money to recruit a team of giants from all over the area to beat W & J. One of his stars was Ray Williams, from the mid-West, a sharp witted individual who wanted to help beat his alma mater in a major game with a team from Washington, D.C.

Somewhere in the second half Georgetown had scored another touchdown and the referee asked "What do you choose?" (to kick or receive) and Williams popped right back with "Waynesburg will receive from now on." However, the Jackets did get a touchdown before the game ended.

Williams was still only a junior and had been a professional wrestler before coming to college.

He did start a college wrestling team which started Waynesburg's greatest heritage of wrestling for both the colleges and high schools in this area. His knowledge of the sport which has continued to this day and has benefited hundreds of youths, many of whom have received college scholarships to the top rated schools in Pennsylvania and other states.

I'm looking forward to seeing a copy of "The Pennsylvania Writers Collection." This is a catalogue produced by the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, and lists books written by writers and poets of Pennsylvania.

I hear the Council plans to distribute the catalogue to libraries all over the state in order to promote Pennsylvania writers. Writers of books for children were not included in the catalogue, but otherwise the work should be an interesting and valuable addition to libraries as well as being a big help to the writers listed. The arts council says, "People will be surprised and pleased at the variety and richness of the voices of Pennsylvania writers."

I was also "surprised and pleased" to find that the state council has engaged a Pittsburgh ad agency to further develop a promotional campaign for libraries. They are going to have posters, book marks and T-shirts which read, "Take a Pennsylvania writer to the Beach." (A Philadelphia agency would have said "to the shore.")

I like the part about the beach. Even though I will not be listed in the book, I would be glad to be taken to the beach. And I think I can safely say that any member of the staff of this newspaper would be happy to go along.

Furthermore, I am willing to offer my services as a coordinator of this project. I will not even charge a fee.

In my proposal to the arts council, I will offer to be a clearinghouse for offers to writers. Writers who wish to be taken to the beach would send me their names. Then, I would match them with the names of volunteers. The volunteers would be persons who, with honorable intentions, of course, have been inspired by reading these T-shirts and desire to perform charitable, tax-deductible work. (I just threw that in. I don't suppose that trips to the beach are tax-deductible, even for writers.)

Anyhow, the assumption is that writers don't make enough money to take themselves to the beach, so somebody has to do it for them. I'm not sure what purpose the trip to the beach will serve. Maybe writers are going to go down there and write poetry about seagulls. Maybe it's just supposed to be a vacation, in which the writer doesn't have to worry about anything but sunburn. Somerset Maugham once complained that he would like to look at a sunset without having to think about how to describe it. So I don't think the traveling writers should have to describe the beach as part of the deal, either.

Actually, I don't think the slogan goes far enough. Or, there should be more slogans. I think "Take a Writer to Paris" has a ring to it. And surely a trip to Paris would serve a writer's purposes better than a trip to a beach. I could think of other destinations, too. London, Dublin, even New York. And why not Moscow? I'm sure this paper would rather print impressions of Moscow than seagull poems from the beach, however lyrical.

To come down to earth, I'm not entirely sure what the arts council actually has in mind with its beach slogan. But I'm willing to find out.

The council does have one other slogan, and it's even more interesting: "Spend a Romantic Evening with a Pennsylvania Poet." But you're on your own with that one.

Bomb Threat Empties Schools

JEFFERSON — Some 1,300 students in the Jefferson-Morgan School District were sent home early Thursday when they were forced from school buildings into a steady rain because of a bomb threat which state police said proved to be false.

Police reported a complete search of both the elementary and junior-senior high school buildings was made with no bomb found. The threat was reportedly called in shortly before 10 a.m.

Superintendent Kenneth Macek said that since students were soaked when they had to leave the buildings in the rain, arrangements were made for a 12:30 p.m. dismissal.

Carmichaels Chamber Agrees To Coal Organization Change

CARMICHAELS — The Carmichaels Chamber of Commerce agreed to participate in a new organizational concept for the King Coal Association at the chamber meeting Wednesday night.

The idea had been proposed by Stephen McCann, vice president of both the Chamber of Commerce and the King Coal Association. The Chamber is one of the five organizations which make up the King Coal Association which sponsors the annual Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show in Carmichaels.

Coral Brodak explained the new plan to the chamber. She said that all five of the member organizations are now considering the plan to decide whether or not to approve the re-organization. If the plan is approved by all five, two members from each group, will make up the executive board for the association. One member from each organization will serve on each of the King Coal's standing committee such as the parade committee or the town decorating committee.

At the end of the week long Coal Show, any profits would not remain in the King Coal treasury but would be divided equally among the five organizations. As it is presently set up, the volunteer fire companies from Carmichaels and Nemaocoln receive the profits from bingo games and the Carmichaels fire company operates and benefits from the food sales from the fire company kitchen.

The chamber of commerce has not received a share of profits in the past but has received donations from the King Coal Association for Christmas lighting. Chamber members said that if they were to receive any funds from the Coal Show the funds would be used for community service projects.

In other business, Coral Brodak reported that the new Christmas tree bulbs which feature a drawing of the Carmichaels town square will be on sale at several stores in Carmichaels after Nov. 18.

For next year she was given permission to ask students in the high school art class to make drawings of a local scene. A prize for the best drawing will be presented to the winning students at the Chamber of Commerce banquet next spring. The sketch and the artist's name will be placed on the Christmas bulbs to be sold next year.

Sara L. Ruth reported that 292 costumed people marched in the Halloween parade and 240 children were given treats at the fire hall following the parade. Donations of $123 were collected for the program with $83 given in prizes and the remainder going for other expenses.

The chamber voted to send two delegates to a Department of Community Affairs conference on downtown revitalization.

New chamber officers and directors will be elected at the Chamber's on Dec. 14 and installed during the January meeting.

Observe Anniversaries

WAYNESBURG — On Nov. 9, 1958, the Waynesburg Children's Library held a dedication ceremony to mark its relocation in a stone mansion it had received as a bequest from Mrs. Carhart Bowlby upon her death in 1957 at the age of 92.

That ceremony followed by almost 15 years an earlier formal opening and dedication on June 23, 1944, which planted the seed of Greene County's present public library system.

An open house celebrating both the 25th anniversary and the 40th anniversary of those events will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the Eva K. Bowlby Public Library, which is still located at 311 North West Street.

While no formal program is planned, the library facilities will be open for inspection and staff members will be on hand to explain the various services for both adults and children which are available in a system which now includes the Fleniken Library at Carmichaels, an Operation Outreach program, and book deposits in various parts of the county.

Among those planning to attend is Mrs. May Clovis, whose name is virtually synonymous with Waynesburg's library program. Not only was she one of the driving forces behind establishment of the community library, but she also served as librarian at Waynesburg College until her retirement several years ago.

The story of the Children's Library (the name was changed to Eva K. Bowlby Library a number of years ago to honor its principal benefactor) began with a talk by Miss Hazel Shultz in 1942, delivered at a meeting of the Waynesburg Women's Club. In it she pointed out the need for reading facilities for youngsters.

The idea took root and resulted shortly thereafter in formation of a committee at the First Methodist Church to organize a church library in the Sunday School. Mrs. Clovis, Miss Shultz and Miss Aldine King were members of that first committee.

Once the church library was set up, other churches in the community became interested and joined the project. When it became apparent that additional facilities were needed, churches involved decided to investigate the possibilities of reorganizing as a public library. Waynesburg Borough Council, the Waynesburg School Board and the Greene County commissioners each agreed to contribute $300; community organizations offered financial support, and a community-wide fund drive netted $2,500.

The Waynesburg Library Association was formed as the governing organization and the First Federal Savings and Loan Association donated the use of three rooms on the second floor of its building for the library.

At the time the new Children's Library was dedicated on June 23, 1944, the late C. A. Roderfer was chairman of the board of trustees, Mrs. Clovis was first president of the Library Association, and the late Mrs. Glenn Arnold was librarian.

The library had a collection of 1,400 books, a list of 450 patrons, and a circulation of some 900 books per month.

The biggest single breakthrough came with donation of the Bowlby mansion, along with the income from a sizeable block of steel stock to provide operating funds.

By the time the move to the Bowlby house was made in 1958, the collection had grown to 11,000 books. Mrs. Michael Baker was the librarian, Mrs. Audrey Huffman was president of the Library Association, and Walter B. Montgomery.

Hospital's 1983 Retirees Are Honored At Banquet

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Memorial Hospital honored its 1983 retirees who are participating in the hospital pension program at a banquet at the Greene County Country Club on Thursday, Nov. 3.

In attendance were 110 fellow employees, retirees from previous years, members of the board of trustees and staff members.

Various presentations were conducted by Michael Flinn, hospital administrator; William P. Thomas, president of the board of trustees; and Steven A. Mariner, associate administrator, who also served as master of ceremonies.

Four of the five employees who retired this year were at the banquet.

They were Katharine Kormendi, who retired June 30 with 17 years of service in the dietary department, Helen Baniecki, who retired April 29 with 26 years service as a switchboard operator, Arlene Donham, who retired May 5 with 29 years of service as director of medical records, and Grace George, R.N., whose retirement from the nursing department ended a career of 38 years.

Jean Williams, R.N., also retired during the past year with 19 years of service in the nursing department. She was serving as assistant director of nursing at the time of her retirement, which became effective Jan. 1, 1983.

A musical program featured Betty G. Long, director of the Community and Patient Relations Department at the hospital. She is a soloist with the First Lutheran Church in Washington and studies voice with Charlotte Sonne of Mt. Lebanon.

Through musical selections, Long encouraged the retirees to keep active with their "new-found" leisure time. She selected songs with topics involving travel, exercise and enjoying grandchildren. She was accompanied by Cassie Boyd of Waynesburg.

Retirees from previous years attending the banquet included Margaret P. Moore, Olive Jeffries, Evelyn McCollum, Hazel Ketchum, Mabel White, Cassie M. Gray, Opal Cross, Velma Morris, Anna Clark, Desta Six, Helen C. 'Greetings' Help Carmichaels Girl Wins State Ladies Lead Class

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Unit of the American Cancer Society has completed arrangements for two holiday fund-raising events.

The annual "Season's Greetings" page will be published in newspapers again this year. In addition, the cancer unit, in cooperation with the Waynesburg Optimist Club, has again made arrangements for Santa Claus to call Greene County children during the holiday season.

The Season's Greetings page will appear Saturday, Dec. 17, in the Observer Reporter and the Democrat Messenger.

Under the program, a $15 contribution for a single name or family name, and $20 for memorials, gives participants the opportunity to send their Christmas and New Year wishes to thousands of people in Greene County and other counties.

Each year for the past 21 years, this special page has been published in the two newspapers, listing the names of those who subscribe to the plan along with a special message of greeting.

Under the other program, parents may arrange to have Santa Clause make a three-minute call to their children for a donation of $3 per child. Santa will be making the calls on Thursday, Dec. 22, between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Proceeds from both programs will be used to further the research, educational and service programs of the American Cancer Society.

Club Scholarships

WAYNESBURG — Rotarian David J. Cumberledge reviewed the Rotary International Foundation for his colleagues at the Waynesburg Rotary Club meeting on Monday. Cumberledge is chairman of the club's Foundation Committee.

Cumberledge told the Rotarians that the Foundation has grown in recent years to a multi-million dollar source of funds for Rotary services throughout the world. Included in the Foundation's scope of activities are Rotary's scholarship program, which provides complete financial support to young men and women for study in foreign schools, and the fast-growing "3-H" program which provides direct financial support to the needy around the world.

Gardner Unseats Cowan As Commissioner

WAYNESBURG — The defeat of two-term county commissioner Richard S. Cowan and the strength shown by sticker candidate Kelce Mosley were the major developments in Tuesday's election in Greene County.

The election of Democrats L.R. (Butch) Santore and Dan Bailey to the board of commissioners came as no surprise, but John Gardner's feat in unseating fellow Republican Cowan and the overall tightness of the contest were being regarded Wednesday as somewhat unexpected.

Santore led the way with 4,678 votes to become the only member of the present board to be re-elected. Being the top vote-getter puts the former Greensboro postmaster in line for the board chairmanship now held by Joseph Pawlosky of Waynesburg, who did not seek re-election.

Dan Bailey, a coal company employee from Carmichaels, finished 128 votes behind Santore with 4,558.

Gardner, a gas company employee from Waynesburg, edged Cowan by 119 votes, 3,637 to 3,518, for the third seat on the board. Gardner ran strongly in Waynesburg and Franklin Township and in western Greene County. Dr. Cowan, who is vice president for development at Waynesburg College, made his best showing in eastern Greene County, where the two Democratic candidates captured the bulk of their votes.

Kelce Mosley, a Waynesburg television dealer, also showed a lot of his strength in central and western Greene County as he captured 2,611 votes even though his name was not on the ballot.

Mosley, who ran third in the Democratic primary last spring, had mounted a strong sticker and write-in effort in the final weeks of the campaign and had a major influence on the outcome of the election even though he finished last.

Democratic candidates were overwhelming victors in the other races for county offices.

Clerk of Courts Al Darney was an easy winner in his bid for a second term, defeating Republican Ann Clausner of Jefferson 7,813 to 2,767.

Democrat Dave Coder of Waynesburg, who will be succeeding Charles Hogue as prothonotary, did nearly as well as he defeated Pauline Rice of Holbrook, 7,242 to 3,313.

There will be no change in the board of county auditors.

Democrats Betty June Long and Genevieve Morrow polled 6,543 and 6,053 votes, respectively, to win re-election. Viola G. Donovan will continue as the minority member of the board as she ran more than 700 votes ahead of the other Republican candidate, Joan Mason Spitznogle. Their totals were 3,069 and 2,322.

Register and Recorder Thomas M. Headlee was the top vote-getter overall as he received 9,304 votes as one of three incumbents running without opposition. District Attorney Charles J. Morris captured 9,250 votes while Treasurer Joseph R. Souders got 9,056.

With weather conditions being ideal, the voter response was large. Of the 17,180 registered voters, 11,407 went to the polls for a turnout of 67 percent.

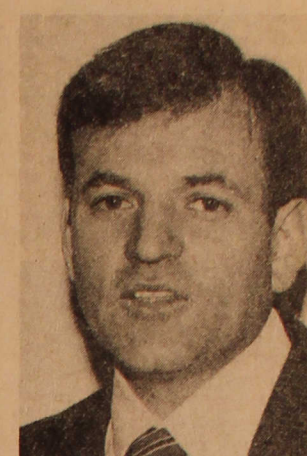

In the special election, county electors voted 5,615 to 3,339 in favor of retaining Theodore O. Registers as a Democrat candidates received the support of county voters in the eight-way contest for five seats on the state Superior Court. The totals were Phyllis W. Beck, 5,627; Peter Paul Olszewski, 5,392; Frank J. Montemuro Jr., 5,275; Joseph A.

DelSole, 5,200, and Patrick R. Tamilia, 5,030. Of the three Republican candidates, James R. McGregor got 2,795, Ward Clark received 2,694 and Jon F. LaFaver got 2,446.

The same thing occurred in the five-way contest for three seats on the state Commonwealth Court.

Democrats James G. Collins got 5,726 votes, Francis A. Barry received 5,515 and John J. Chiovero got 4,776. Republicans John J. Kelly Jr. and Madaline Palladino received 2,881 and 2,875, respectively.

Write-In Candidates Do Well In Carmichaels

WAYNESBURG — Successful write-in campaigns for mayor and a council seat in Carmichaels and a close race for council in Waynesburg's first ward, along with defeat of the incumbent borough tax collector, highlighted Tuesday's election in Greene County's six boroughs.

Results of the borough elections:

CARMICHAELS

Dorothy Helmick received 100 write-in votes to unseat Mayor Luella A. Galatic, who had won both the Democratic and Republican nominations in the spring primary. Galatic received a total of 88 votes.

The three four-year council seats at stake were won by Betty L. Morris with 109 votes, Patricia J. Frankenberg with 89, and Roger Honsaker with 88. Honsaker, who was not on the ballot, got his votes via the write-in route. The third candidate on the ballot, Christopher L. Watson, received 72 votes. Tom Macken also received 30 write-in votes.

Joseph Baker, with 109 votes, and Betty Snyder Hudson, with 84, won the two two-year terms on council. Honsaker and Macken got 62 and 30 write-in votes, respectively.

With no candidates on the ballot, Andy Kovach was elected constable with nine write-in votes and Larry Macera was chosen as assessor with three write-in votes. Chris Watson and Bob Dobbins each got three write-in votes for auditor.

CLARKSVILLE

Porter L. Remington, Roberta Ross and Lance Sahady were elected without opposition to three seats on council. Vance Ross received the largest number of write-in votes for both the six-year term and the two-year term as auditor, creating a situation where there will be a vacancy on the board. Lance Sahady was elected assessor on write-in votes.

GREENSBORO

Harry Drew was re-elected mayor without opposition.

Uarda Riffle and Walter U. Watson received 80 and 79 votes, respectively, for two four-year terms on council, with the third seat going to Paul Dusenberry with 20 write-in votes. Angelo Furia received 12 write-in votes.

Paul Burich with 115 votes and Lydia Aston with 64 votes won two of the three two-year terms on council, with the third seat being won by Paul Dusenberry with 12 write-in votes. Since Dusenberry won both a four-year and a two-year term, he will have to elect which post he wants and the other will become a vacancy to be filled by council.

Kenneth A. Bargerstock was unopposed for assessor and Joe Shine had no opposition for auditor.

JEFFERSON

Robert Davis, Robert Lutz and Charles O. Deter were elected without opposition to the three council seats to be filled. Rhonda Madlock received 11 write-in votes to be elected assessor. Ila Moredock had no opposition for auditor.

RICES LANDING

had no opposition for the two four-year terms on council which were to be filled. A three-way tie for the two-year term on council was created when Victor Kovach, Jack Bayard and John Yenkura each received four write-in votes for the post.

Nancy Dukate has no opposition for assessor. Nancy Buckingham was elected auditor and Earl Dowlin constable, both on write-in votes with no candidates being on the ballot.

WAYNESBURG

Republican Pauline Lucas defeated incumbent tax collector Douglas C. Wagener 610-563 in Waynesburg Borough. The only other contest was in Ward I, where Democrat Lonnie L. Dusenberry received 288 votes and Republican Charles A.

Berryhill 223 votes to win council seats. Berryhill is an incumbent. The other candidates were Republican Donna F. Porterfield, who received 178 votes, and Democrat Michael A. Mulholland Sr., who received 173. Edward A. Marotta was elected Ward I assessor without opposition.

In Ward II, Paul W. Salosky Jr. had no opposition for re-election to council and Eileen S. Millikin was unopposed for assessor.

In Ward III, Kenneth E. Fox had no opposition for a four-year term on council and Charles A. Beiter Jr. was unopposed for a two-year term on council. Mabel A. Robinson was elected Ward III assessor without opposition, and James Johnson received 168 write-in votes to be elected constable.

School Directors Face Choice

WAYNESBURG — As a result of Tuesday's election, there will be two vacancies on the Carmichaels Area School Board when the new board meets to reorganize next month.

Incumbent board members Henry L. Bacan and Edward T. Tekavec were each elected to both four-year terms and two-year terms in the election, which saw eight of the nine board seats up for grabs. They will have to choose which term they want to serve, and it will then be up to the new board to go through the prescribed process to fill the two vacancies.

Results of the election in each of the county's five school districts:

CARMICHAELS AREA

David Carl Stuvek with 1,317 votes, Edward T. Tekavec with 1,208, Henry L. Bacan with 1,128, Erma Jean Thomas with 1,084 and James C. Hathaway with 1,026 won the five four-year terms. Bacan, Tekavec and Thomas are incumbents. Other candidates who ran were James M. Clovis, with 917 votes, and James Diamond with 787.

The three two-year terms were won by Paul (Jerry) Fortney, 1,313; Edward T. Tekavec, 1,112 and Henry L. Bacan, 1,090. James C. Hathaway got 636 votes and Robert H. Shea received 546.

CENTRAL GREENE

The Central Greene District, which elects its board members on a regional basis, elected six directors, five for four-year terms and one for a two-year term. All of the candidates ran without opposition.

In Perry, Wayne and Whiteley townships, incumbents Warren B. Bowers and Herman Osso were elected to four-year terms.

In Franklin and Washington townships, Vonnie M. Teagarden and Archie Trader were elected to four-year terms. Both are new board members and will replace Robert Stephenson and Furman Wade, neither of whom sought re-election.

In Waynesburg Borough, incumbent Gerald Matthews was unopposed for a four-year term and Francis Fox Jr., present board president, had no opposition for the two-year term.

JEFFERSON-MORGAN

Six school board members were elected in the Jefferson-Morgan School District, five for four-year terms and one for a two-year term. Stanley Fowler and Floyd Haney, the only incumbents on the ballot, were both re-elected.

Winners of the five four-year seats were Clarence Virgin Jr. with 1,250 votes; Vito R. Virgili Jr. with 1,178; David Saunders with 1,146; Stanley Fowler with 1,072 and Floyd Haney with 1,061. All are Democrats. Republican candidates Colleen Lorence Valosen and Donna L. Murphy Shaffer received 661 and 615 votes, respectively.

Democrat Margaret L. Murphy Simmons won the two-year term by defeating Republican William E. Wilson, 1,188 to 539.

SOUTHEASTERN GREENE

There will be six new board members in the Southeastern Greene School District next month as the only incumbent who survived the primary last spring was defeated Tuesday.

The five four-year terms were won by Bob Headlee with 1,073 votes, George Biletz Sr with 1,025, Terry K. Ganocy with 1,006, Vic Shine with 859 and Jack R. Provance with 859. Robert L. (Bobby) Watson, who was nominated as a Republican candidate, finished last with 557 votes. Biletz and Headlee are both former members of the board.

The two-year term went to Terry K. Ganocy, who was unopposed for the position.

WEST GREENE

The only contest in the West Greene School District was in the area made up of Gray, Jackson and Richhill townships, where three candidates were running for two four-year terms. Winners were John R. Berdine with 330 votes and Marie Carter with 282. Raymond C. Gaines finished third with 274 votes. Ronald Lohr was elected without opposition to a two-year term in the same three townships.

Glenn R. Kennedy and incumbent Rickie L. Barnhart had no opposition for four-year terms in the region consisting of Aleppo, Freeport and Gilmore townships.

In Center and Morris townships, Dan Morris was unopposed for the four-year seat and Arden E. Melzer had no opposition for the two-year seat.

S.E. Greene Board Adopts New Student Regulations

By Christie Molzon, Staff Writer

MAPLETOWN — New regulations governing students' attendance in school and participation in extra-curricular activities were approved by the Southeastern Greene School Board at its meeting Thursday night.

The policy governing absences says that for every fifth day of school missed during a nine-week period, the student's grade will be lowered by one letter. The exceptions include illness (requiring a medical excuse), death in the family, medical or dental appointment (excuse required), authorized religious holidays or approved school activity.

The new policy allows for four parental excuses per nine weeks.

The regulation approved for participation in extra-curricular activities states that a student must maintain an overall "C" average per nine-week grading period.

If a student does not meet the required grade point average he or she will be removed from the activity but may rejoin it at the end of the next grading period if his or her grade average increases.

Service plaques were given to the six outgoing board members: Jim Minor, John Mason, Bob Watson, Floyd Hornick, Emil Enoff and Dave Bierer.

Replacing them will be Robert Headlee, Terry Ganocy, George Biletz, Vic Shine and Jack Provance. The board's reorganizational meeting will be held Tuesday, Dec. 6, at 7 p.m. and Adam Novak requested that copies of all the proposals made to the non-professional union be available to new board members at that time. In a related matter, Solicitor John Stets reported receipt of a letter from the union saying it was not pursuing any grievances at this time.

The board approved a change order for $6,946 for additional steel framing for the stage area of the Bobtown Elementary School. Angry that the work had already been done before the board could vote on it, Gary Mosier made a motion that work not called for in the original project not be approved until first brought to the board. His motion was approved unanimously.

The board tabled three other change orders in the amount of $7,060 until the new board is seated.

The board agreed to pay an additional $1,500, for a total of $5,000, to surveyors R.M. Kaddel for work done on the Penn Pitt project. The board had disputed an additional seven acres that had been surveyed. Stets pointed out that the matter was scheduled for a jury trial if a settlement could not be reached.

On a request from the Pennsylvania Office of Community Affairs, the board terminated the Southeastern Greene Joint School Building Authority so a final audit can be made. Stets said should the audit discover any money remains, it will be turned over to the school district.

Approval was given for the high school band to participate in the Christmas Parade Dec. 3 in Waynesburg and for the 11th grade class of Bernard Kubitz to visit the U.S. Air Force Facility and Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh in December.

The board removed Ralph Keener from the list of approved bus drivers for contractor Skip Brumley.

It was agreed to send each football player and coach a letter commending them on the fine job they have done this season.

Divorce Granted

WAYNESBURG — Patricia Lynn Yeager Bobruska of Carmichaels was granted a divorce from Rick Edward Bobruska of Carmichaels in a final decree handed down Thursday by the Greene County Court.

They were married Dec. 30, 1980, and have one child.

Jackets Found Ways To Win

By John Barker.

WAYNESBURG — If you had asked Bill Tornabene 10 weeks ago if his presence would make a difference on the Waynesburg College football team, he would've said no. He was not a man to make promises as a new head coach.

"There's no magic just because I'm the head coach. I've been at Waynesburg for three years (as an assistant) but it's not a deal where I come in and have all the answers," Tornabene said in late August. "I don't have the coin on knowledge."

"I'm not copying anyone else. What turns out is what you'll see."

And what Waynesburg fans saw was a team filled with question marks shape into a competitive, winning team — a team that showed character enough to come back from a 0-1-1 start to finish 6-3-1.

Tornabene won't openly agree, but he and his assistants deserve a ton of the credit.

Republican Sports

One reason is the staff's work at the quarterback position. The Yellow Jackets started the season without an experienced quarterback. Mike Forbes, who started in 1982, graduated and returning senior Casey Cavanaugh and junior Kent Marisa had very limited experience.

While Forbes was leading the Jackets in 1982, a fellow named Tim Garry was sitting on the bench at California University. He threw just 50 passes that year and was unhappy. So he transferred to Waynesburg to battle for some playing time.

Garry became the Jackets' No. 1 quarterback and threw for 1,775 yards and eight touchdowns. His performance can be closely linked with the Jackets' success.

"He adapted very well to the system and I was pleased to have him here," Tornabene said at the last Jacket of the Week luncheon. "He threw effectively, and in our scheme of things, we relied somewhat on the pass. We didn't want to pass so much like we did but the running game didn't go like we wanted it to at times.

"Tim had a very good season and he blended in well with the team here. This was a not a one-man team but Tim had his contribution."

"I'm a little disappointed to go out this way because we didn't play well," Garry said quietly after losing to Salem, 21-6, Saturday. "I reached some of my goals this year like passing and winning. They are really the same goals as the team's."

"They took me in as a transfer and I wanted to do a good job... I tried my best."

When Waynesburg was struck with an injury to tailback Otto Birkhead, Tornabene and his staff shuffled again. They were able to shuffle the offense and not lose a beat on winning.

Sherley Hairston, Dave Zilli, Dave Tucci and Pete Long picked up the slack on offense, while Garry still had his two talented receivers, Cline Hunt and Matt Toney.

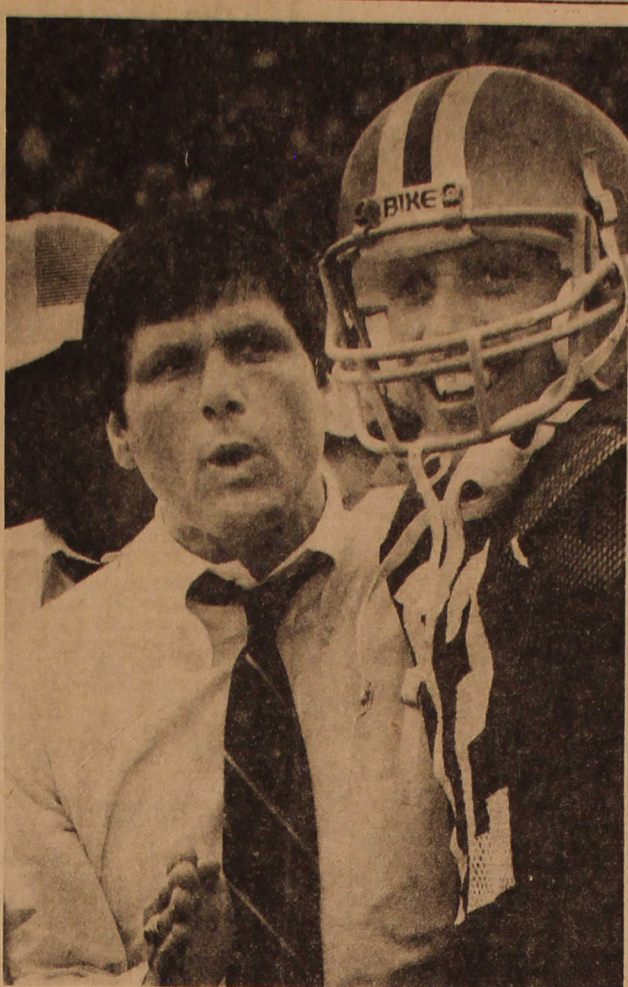

"The team showed character all year and I feel very fortunate to be a part of it," said Tornabene. "I'm fortunate to work in a college situation with the good kids we have. A lot of people came through for us that I didn't rely on at the start of the season."

But more than anything, it was the defense which rose up on many occasions to save the Jackets.

Against Geneva, Duquesne and Emory & Henry, Waynesburg's defense stopped drives on the goal line and reversed the momentum. The defense gave up an average of 336 yards a game, but it was a defense Tornabene characterized as rubber — it bent and stretched but didn't break.

The veteran defensive line of Jeff Standish, Scott Shifko and John Higgins plus linebackers Fremont Catlin, Kevin Jozwiakowski, Joe Persichetti and freshman Pete Butler played well under defensive coordinator Tim Thryren. And defensive backs Rich Barnes, Steve Burchianti, Craig Harris and Bob Abbiatti had most of the team's 18 interceptions.

"We had some good games de-

Waynesburg College head coach Bill Tornabene worked hard with quarterback Tim Garry and the Yellow Jackets.

fensively and it kept us in some games," said Tornabene. "We had some experience on defense and they showed they could play. I was pleased we did so well because we usually have a good defensive ballclub."

Saturday's loss to Salem was a disappointing way to end the season for the Jackets but Tornabene was philosophical about it.

"We play quality football teams and Salem was a much better team than its record indicated," he said. "We didn't play real well and we had our problems."

"Overall, though, we played some big schools and only lost to Westminster, which is ranked second in the nation (in NAIA) and Indiana, a Division II school, along with Salem. We beat Fairmont, which helped turn the season around, then went on a five-game winning streak. At one point we did have a shot for the playoffs and we were ranked and I'm proud the team could do that and be part of it."

FLAK JACKETS — Birkhead, who finished with a 9.4-yard average each time he touched the ball, suffered a separated shoulder against Salem... Harris and kicker Mike Zeglen were chosen Jackets of the Week... Fullback Pete Long missed the last game after being suspended.

Hunters Should Save Deer Hides

By Joe Parry,

An Indian Holy Woman of the Wintu Tribe once said, "When we Indians kill meat, we eat it all up. When we dig roots, we make little holes. When we build houses, we make little holes. We don't chop down trees. We only use dead wood."

That's pretty sound environmental advice, even today.

District Game Protectors Jack Sickenberger and Regis Senko remind deer hunters that the Pennsylvania Game Commission is permitted to accept donations, including land, money and deer hides.

Many hunters discard their deer hides or give them away when the monies obtained by the commission from hide sales could ultimately benefit the sport of hunting and wildlife populations statewide. Perhaps monies received from the sale of hides could be vital to future land acquisitions such as state game lands.

Whatever the generated income is used for, it seems to be a reasonable request and one that could certainly aid the commission's cause — to improve wildlife habitat and increase land holdings.

At a later date, hunters will be informed where they may take their donated deer hides. And what hunters must keep in mind is that the Pennsylvania hunting license fees haven't been increased for 10 years. This donation may help minimize the inevitable increase which is indeed long overdue.

Concerning the dead wood of the Indian philosophy, those owning wood-burning stoves and fireplaces should be reminded that most dead trees are homes for various species of wildlife such as squirrels, raccoons, woodpeckers and insects. As a result, it's illegal to cut, mutilate, destroy or remove trees or shrubs on state game lands.

Pennsylvania game biologists confirm the fact about 17 mammal species and as many as 30 bird types use dead tree cavities as dens. Wildlife experts nationwide report that at least one den tree per acre is necessary if these denning species are expected to remain in good numbers. Hunters must leave squirrels or chipmunks with an alternative, so use dead wood that's on the ground and not on state game lands.

The fox and raccoon hunting season opened Nov. 7. Raccoon hunting continues through Jan. 31, 1984, while fox hunting extends to Feb. 29.

Washington and Greene counties both have unfavorable fox populations which in this case and year are too many. Often times the hunter blames predation (from foxes) for low, unfavorable gamebird populations and this is true to a degree. However, there are surprisingly few fox hunters in this district perhaps because many hunters lack the proper knowledge with regard to hunting.

The only good reference book with regard to hunting fox is entitled The Fox Caller's Guide by Rich Falter. The publication covers just about everything a person needs to know in order to be successful at this sport. Falter's address is P.O. Box 691, Greenville, Pa. 16125.

FIELD TIPS — The new deer hunter in search of a deer rifle may want to look into Smith and Wesson's Model 1500 standard in .243 caliber. They are moderately priced, exceptionally accurate and have excellent trigger pulls for an out-of-the-box rifle. The size of the rifle itself seems near perfect for the small-framed hunter and should not require any alteration. The .243 caliber is balanced so that very little recoil is felt, and may very well be used for summer chick hunting as well. For the first-year hunter, it is suggested that he use the 100 grain Federal or Hornady ammo. Smaller projectiles may provide substantial killing power.

Mapletown Fades Away

By Denise Bachman.

INDUSTRY — As the sun peaked through the clouds and began to melt the snow here Saturday afternoon, Mapletown High School football team's surge to the WPIAL championships began to evaporate also.

The Cinderella team of Section 4-A this season saw its first trip ever to the WPIAL Class A playoffs stop here in the first round as Western Beaver shut out the Maples, 28-0.

Despite the loss, the Maples have every right to take pride in their accomplishments this season. Not only did they compile a 9-2 overall record, but they also captured second place in the section.

That alone soothed some of the disappointment head coach Fred Answine felt Saturday after the game.

"You have to take the whole season into perspective, you can't take just one game that you lost," Answine said. "You can't take anything away from the kids. They came back from adversity (early in the season), and I can't say enough about them."

"They (Maples) feel bad, but we finished with a 9-2 record and there aren't many teams who can say that. I'm proud of these kids. They've had a tremendous year... they can hold their heads up."

The Maples' destiny began to unfold on their first possession. After recovering a Panther fumble on the first play of the game at the 30-yard line, the Maples drove to the three. But the Panthers, co-champions of Section 1 who extend their overall mark to 10-1, stopped Mapletown fullback Bill Watson a foot short of the goal line on fourth down.

"I really think after we took the first sting out of them, our kids took control and stuffed them," said Western Beaver coach Rick Niedbala, alluding to the Panthers' goal-line stand. "We might have let a little bit of air out of them. They're a good football team, but maybe today we got the momentum going."

Thanks in large part to Panther tailback sensation Steve Girting, who despite an extremely muddy field managed to rush for 165 yards on 29 carries, pushing his season total to 1,724 yards. At the same time, Watson was held to just 56 yards on 20 carries.

Girting first struck early in the second quarter on a six-yard touchdown run. The TD was set up when Clayton Diamond picked off an Ed Pekar pass at the 27-yard line, the first of two turnovers the Panthers converted into scores.

Girting wasn't finished as he padded the Panthers' lead on their next possession, rambling up the middle for a 14-yard touchdown run.

"He (Girting) doesn't bend over when he runs but he's so strong in the legs that if you don't hit him right he'll wear you out," Answine said. "They beat us where we thought we were strong — off tackle. They beat us off tackle badly. They executed so well. Today we just got beat by a better football team."

While the Panthers were busy shutting down Watson, the Maples' passing game was also suffering. Pekar had trouble getting any footing as he completed just nine of 19 attempts for 59 yards. Since Girting was having such a spectacular day on the ground, Panther quarterback John Nobers attempted just five passes.

"We've been playing good defense and we've been very tough against the run," Niedbala said. "We were very much aware of Watson, but the kids read the keys well. I don't want to say we outplayed them, we just came off the ball well."

"If you get down you know you have to go to the throwing game. They got down early and had to throw. Let's face it, this was not the day to throw it."

Nobers scored the Panthers' final two touchdowns, both on one-yard quarterback sneaks. The first came one play after Gelling recovered a fumble by Mapletown's Willy Byrne at the one in the third quarter, while Nobers' second TD plunge capped a 63-yard drive early in the fourth.

"As far as the field goes, it hindered our passing game," Answine said. "Ed could get no footing. They (Panthers) just wore us down."

The win advances the Panthers to the second round against Duquesne, which recorded a 3-0 overtime win over Avonworth Saturday.

Davis Wins The Race

By Bob Grove, O-R Sports Staff

The Washington-Greene County scoring race, a race that smacked of anticlimax almost from the very start, is over. Washington High School fullback Brian Davis is in the winner's circle.

The Little Presidents' phenomenal junior scored three touchdowns the first week of the 1983 football season and never looked back. After finishing third in 1982, Davis won the race with 153 points on 23 touchdowns and 15 extra points. He was 41 points better than Mapletown senior fullback Bill Watson.

Davis did not play in Washington's final game of the season against Burgettstown and could have missed the season's final three weeks and still won the title. He did not, however, score enough points to break the area's all-time record of 192 set in 1981 by Mon Valley Catholic tailback Jon Green.

Watson took second place with 18 touchdowns and four extra points for a total of 112 points. California senior running back Randy Wadsworth was third with 14 touchdowns for 84 points; Beth-Center senior tight end Frank Hoak, who finished second to teammate John Murphy last season, was fourth with nine touchdowns, one field goal and 24 extra points for 81 points; and Bentworth senior fullback John Puskarich was fifth with 13 touchdowns for 78 points.

Avella senior tailback Mike Tranquill was sixth with 66 points; Fort Cherry senior fullback Joe Phillis was seventh (63); Canon-McMillan senior wide receiver Gil Fullum eighth (60); Beth-Center senior fullback Drew Witouski ninth (58); and Ringgold senior tailback Jeff Carlock 10th (56).

Davis was the only junior in the Top 10.

Hoak and Fullum were tops among receivers, followed by McGuffey seniors Rich Barr (50) and Mark Weaver (42) and Carmichaels senior J.L. Lechner (37), who led the WPIAL in receptions this season (53).

Ringgold senior Billy Snoddy (36) was the top quarterback, followed by Carmichaels junior Rich Hroblak (32); California senior Alan Husarchick (26); Bentworth senior Jerry Maley (24) and Waynesburg senior Terry Jackovic (15).

Hoak had more extra points (24) than any other area player, followed by Bentworth junior Chris Dziak (17), Washington senior Chris Moschetta and Mapletown senior George Chory (16 each) and Davis and Phillis (15 each).

Dziak had the most field goals (four), followed by Phillis, Canon-McMillan senior John Sandstrom, McGuffey senior Bob Thomas and Avella junior Dave Zatta (two each). Dziak scored more points (29) than any other player who did not score a touchdown.

More than 165 different players scored points for the area's 20 teams this season.

Despite being shutout by Burgettstown in its final game, Washington scored more points (336, or 33.6 per game) than any other team. Beth-Center finished a very close second with 335 points (33.5 per game) after a 36-0 shutout of Albert Gallatin Friday. Mapletown (248, 24.8) was third, Bentworth (203, 22.6) fourth and Canon-McMillan (194, 19.4) fifth.

Mapletown scored between 26 and 34 points seven out of 10 weeks, scoring either 33 or 34 points on five different occasions. The Maples won two games by a 33-6 score and two others by a 34-0 margin. Chartiers-Houston, meanwhile, scored 12 points in each of its last four games.

Only six area teams went the season without being shutout: Bentworth, Beth-Center, Canon-McMillan, Mapletown, McGuffey and Ringgold. The Bulldogs turned in the two best single-game scoring efforts of the season with a 64-6 win over Southmoreland and a 57-0 victory over Waynesburg. Bentworth was the only other area team to score more than 50 points in one game, beating Fairchance-Georges, 54-8.

Mapletown was the best defensive team, having allowed only 51 points, or 5.1 points per game, this season. Fort Cherry (60, 6) was second, Beth-Center (78, 7.8) was third, Burgettstown (103, 10.3) fourth and Washington (104, 10.4) fifth. The Blue Devils were not scored upon in their final two games and allowed just 22 points in their last five games.

Beth-Center, Fort Cherry, Mapletown and Washington all put together three shutouts this season — the Rangers turned in three consecutive shutouts — while Burgettstown, Charleroi, Peters Township and Ringgold all achieved two each.

PIC Members Get Update

WAYNESBURG — The Private Industry Council which will oversee administration of the federal government's new Job Training Partnership Act program in Washington and Greene counties met Tuesday in Waynesburg to receive an update on new developments, particularly as they apply to Greene County.

The PIC, chaired by Robert Mohler of Washington, consists of people from the two counties appointed by the boards of commissioners in Washington and Greene counties, with 51 percent of the membership being from the private sector.

Cindy Derrico, training program coordinator, reported that a Greene County office will be opened in Waynesburg by Dec. 1 to process applications for training from eligible persons who are unemployed. She also said that the agency has made arrangements with the Greene County Vocational-Technical School to accept people for training in its practical nursing program and is attempting to work out arrangements for training in other programs at the school.

Municipalities Asked To Help Share Costs

WAYNESBURG — Greene County's 20 townships and six boroughs are being asked to allocate funds in their 1984 budgets to help offset the cost of operating the county's new 1911 emergency telephone system.

The county commissioners, who face additional operating costs of some $20,000 because of expansion of the former county-wide police radio network into a 1911 system which includes fire and ambulance service, are asking that the municipalities budget an amount equal to 50 cents for each resident since their residents benefit from the new system.

Based on 1980 census figures, this would produce $20,238 for the coming year.

"Even with the municipal contribution, the county's 1984 budget for communications will be $71,000, as compared with $51,000 in 1983," chief clerk Herbert Cox said. "The additional $20,000 represents the cost of equipment and installing the 1911 system."

In the past, just three municipalities — Cumberland Township and Carmichaels and Waynesburg boroughs — contributed to the police radio network since they are the only ones which have municipal police departments.

"Since other townships and boroughs did not benefit from the system, they were not asked to contribute toward its operation," Cox explained. "But now that fire and ambulance service has been added through the 1911 system, residents of all sections of the county benefit."

Waynesburg Central's Band Director Steps Down

WAYNESBURG — The resignation of Gene Cappellini, veteran band director at Waynesburg Central High School, was accepted by the Central Greene School Board at its meeting Tuesday.

Cappellini, who will continue as secondary instrumental music teacher, resigned leadership of the marching band, stage band and concert band for reasons of health, effective with the end of the current school year. The vacancy will be posted in accordance with the teachers' contract.

Cappellini has been band director since 1970 and has been credited with building the band into one of the outstanding high school musical organizations in the area.

In other matters involving personnel, the board authorized the present half-time classroom monitor position in the learning disability program at the Margaret Bell Miller Middle School into a full-time position for the balance of the year.

The change was made because the number of students requiring learning disability services has risen to the point where the half-time position does not meet federal requirements and does not provide a successful program.

Dr. Jeffrey Smith of Waynesburg was appointed school physician for state-required physical examinations at the East Franklin and East Ward elementary schools, the middle school at the high school at his lowest bid of $35 per hour.

Due to the cost involved, the practice of providing a meal or meals to the football team, managers and coaches during the summer football camp will be discontinued. It was noted that meals are not provided for any other sport or extra-curricular activity.

Glenn Kyle and John Garber were again appointed as head varsity baseball coach and assistant baseball coach, respectively, at salaries of $1,455 and $1,095.

Amy Osso, a high school student who won the state "Make It Yourself With Wool Contest," was given permission to attend the national contest in Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 17-20. She will be accompanied by her teacher, Mary Ann Spanovich, with the school district paying the cost of the trip, estimated at a maximum of $950. It was noted that the Greene County Sheep and Wool Growers' Association will contribute $100 toward that cost.

The administration was given permission to seek bids for window shades for classrooms and the multi-purpose room at the East Franklin School, where the job of installing new windows has been completed.

Mrs. Aldine Inghram was employed as a part-time medical secretary, effective Nov. 16, to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Joetta Hoy.

The 1983-84 school calendar was revised to switch the second Act 80 in-service day from March 14 to Jan. 13 to prepare for new curriculum regulations and curriculum development.

Because the third Tuesday in December is so close to the holidays, the board will hold its meeting next month on Dec. 13, one week earlier than usual. The board reorganization meeting will be held Wednesday, Dec. 7.
