Pawlosky Announces Candidacy For State General Assembly

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Commissioner Joseph Pawlosky made it official Thursday.

At a meeting attended by some 50 persons, held following the county commissioners' meeting, he announced he will be a candidate next year for the state General Assembly.

Pawlosky said he plans to seek the Democratic nomination in the primary election next April for the 50th District seat now held by H. William DeWeese of Waynesburg. The district, with a total of 59,000 people, encompasses all of Greene County and small adjoining sections of Fayette and Washington counties.

The 57-year-old Waynesburg resident said he did not run for re-election to the board of commissioners because he feels he can better serve county residents in the House of Representatives. He said he feels his 12 years as a commissioner has made him aware of the needs of the county and the entire area, not only by being involved in county government but by serving on the boards of many regional agencies which serve all three counties.

"I feel the major problem our three counties is lack of employment and would give top priority to those things which could be expected to bring new jobs to the area," he said.

In response to a question, Pawlosky said that while the commissioners have always promoted the construction of a better east-west highway through the county, including the Waynesburg bypass, as a means of developing the western end of Greene County, he feels he will have a much better opportunity to work for its accomplishment in Harrisburg.

"The coal industry is our major economic asset and its development would be greatly expedited by an improved highway system," he said.

He cited the advances made by the county during his three terms in office, making particular mention of the accomplishment of Greene County Industrial Development in helping bring 1,000 new jobs to the county since 1972.

"In those 11 years, the county invested $600,000 in the effort to bring in new industry," he said. "It has brought us a return of about $61 million in new businesses, and I think that's a pretty good investment."

He said that during his years as a county commissioner he does not feel the 50th District has had the kind of closeness with its representative needed "to get the job done for our people. I have been close to the people and I feel I can do a good job for them."

As he has done in running for his three terms as county commissioner, Pawlosky said he will be conducting his own campaign, without the assistance of a formal committee working on his behalf. He said that Herbert Cox, chief clerk of the county, will serve as his campaign treasurer.

"Everyone can expect to see a lot of Joe Pawlosky in the months ahead," he said. "I'm a politician and I hope I've been a good servant of the people I represent. You are not looking at a loser."

Washington County communities in the 50th District include three precincts of Centerville Borough, plus East Bethlehem Township.

Christmas Parade Draws Large Crowd

WAYNESBURG — One of the largest crowds to ever attend a parade in Waynesburg turned out Saturday for the annual Christmas Parade sponsored by the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

Approximately 65 units, including floats, bands, a Miss Merry Christmas from each of the five school districts in Greene County, local Boy and Girl Scout troops and equipment from several fire companies, participated in the 45-minute parade which formed along West Street and marched down High Street.

Dr. J. Thomas Mills, president of Waynesburg College, headed the parade as parade marshal. Bringing up the rear was Santa Claus on a sleigh pulled by a small tractor.

Winners in the float category were Lisa Elek's Academy of Dance, first place, and the Rolling Meadows Church of God, second place.

Waynesburg Central High School won first place in the marching band competition, West Greene, second place, and Mapletown, third place.

Members of the Chamber's parade committee said they were pleased with the large turnout and participation for the parade.

Barnhart Named President Of W. Greene Board

ROGERSVILLE — Rick Barnhart was named president of the West Greene School Board at its reorganizational meeting Monday night. Anne Bower was named vice president.

The five new school board members are Dan Morris, Arden Melzer, Ron Lohr, Marie Carter and Glenn Kennedy. They join, in addition to Barnhart and Mrs. Bower, board members Roy Barnhart and John Berdine.

The regular meeting date was set for the third Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m.

Berdine was chosen to serve as the district's representative to the Joint Operating Committee of the Greene County Vo-Tech School, with Lohr named as the alternate.

Requests For Funds Have 'Little Chance'

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners said Thursday that the county again this year will probably be required to use its entire allocation of revenue sharing funds to balance the general fund budget, virtually eliminating any chance that appropriations will be available to outside agencies.

While a revenue sharing fund use hearing was held during Thursday's meeting, as required by law, it was apparent that the entire allocation of $401,677 in federal funds for 1984 will be needed to meet county fiscal obligations.

Proposed use of the money includes $192,024 for the annual payment on the county jail construction loan, $15,000 for computer services for the assessment department, $2,500 for the county library system, and $202,153 to be transferred into the general fund to help meet a variety of operational costs.

The commissioners agreed that requests for grants totaling some $70,000 which had been received from seven agencies in the county had little chance of being approved when the budget is conditionally adopted next week.

The requests came from the Dunkard Water Association, Shanopin Civic Club, Mt. Morris Water and Sewage Authority, Wayne Township Community Center, Waynesburg College Greene County Scholarship Fund, Try-Again Homes and the county library system, with the latter requesting a supplemental grant of $15,000.

The only person to make a request at the hearing was Clerk of Courts Al Darney, who asked for an appropriation for major repairs to his office in the courthouse.

The commissioners also said that legislation currently being considered by Congress to extend the revenue sharing program at its present level for another three years contains one provision which would increase the cost of administering the program.

For governments which receive more than $100,000 a year, it requires an annual audit rather than an audit once every three years. This provision, if retained, would require the county to have an audit of all county funds by a certified public accountant on an annual basis.

The general fund budget is scheduled for preliminary approval at next Thursday's meeting. The commissioners have not as yet announced if there will be any change in the current 19 1/4 real estate tax levy.

In the only action at the meeting, the commissioners executed a contract with National Expositions Inc. of New Kensington to provide midway attractions at the 1984 county fair next August. The company, which has been furnishing rides, shows and rides at the fair for many years, will pay the county $14,000 for the concession.

School Board Elects Bacan

CARMICHAELS — Six newly-elected board members took the oath of office at a special meeting to reorganize the Carmichaels Area School Board Monday night.

Gerald P. Fortney, James C. Hathaway and David Stuvek are new to the board, while Henry Bacan, Edward Tekavec and Erna Jean Thomas have served previously. Edward Chess remains on the board since his term of office had not expired.

Superintendent Dolores Zoldos presented certificates of honor from the Pennsylvania School Board Association to Bacan for his 18 years of service on the board and to Tekavec for 16 years.

The new board elected Bacan as president, Chess vice president, and Tekavec as interim treasurer. The treasurer will serve until May, filling out an unexpired term and will receive $100 for this service.

John Stets was unanimously re-named board solicitor at his present salary of $1,200 a year plus $50 an hour.

Bacan and Tekavec had been elected to both two-year and four-year terms. Both chose to serve the four-year terms leaving two vacancies for two-year terms. The board announced that persons who wish to serve on the board should apply by letter to board secretary Louis Pascuzzo and include a resume of their experience. The letters will be due by noon on Monday, Dec. 12.

The two new members will be elected at a recessed meeting set for Friday, Dec. 16, at 7:30 p.m.

The board's regular meetings were set for the third Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m.

A short board meeting followed the reorganizational meeting. The board accepted the 1984 proposal for workmen's compensation insurance from PMA. The premium was listed at $16,203, but with dividends and deductions it will total $10,435.

The board approved a field trip for the first and second grade to attend the production of "Alice in Wonderland" at Waynesburg College on Thursday. The $600 cost of the trip will be paid by the elementary activity account.

Also approved was a trip to the Pittsburgh Ballet by the National Honor Society as well as fund raising activities for the society and for the Varsity "C" Club.

The board also approved the building of a wooden ramp to provide access for handicapped persons to attend athletic events in the junior-senior high school gymnasium. The ramp will be constructed by school personnel at the entrance near the band room off the parking lot. Business manager Louis Pascuzzo told the board that the only cost would be for materials and that a permanent ramp would be constructed later. A handicapped parking space will also be reserved.

Merger Is Discussed

WAYNESBURG — The often-discussed idea of consolidating Waynesburg Borough and Franklin Township into one municipality was brought up again at a luncheon meeting Wednesday of the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

Borough Council President Glenn Richards, who was the guest speaker, said it was his personal opinion that some sort of merger of the two municipalities held "the best promise in the long run" for advancement of the Waynesburg community as a whole.

He suggested that the Chamber of Commerce consider working for some type of consolidation as one of its projects "in the interest of residents of both municipalities."

He pointed out that the borough already has police services which could be expanded to cover the entire area, and that there is duplication of a number of services which could be provided more efficiently if they were combined.

In response to a suggestion, Richards said that council would probably be willing to support a study by the Pennsylvania Economy League on the pros and cons of merger as it affected residents of both municipalities if the Chamber of Commerce would also provide support.

Speaking of the borough, he noted that its tax base is pretty much stabilized with little chance of expansion through new construction, and that the town has an exceptionally high percentage of tax-free properties.

J-M Board Waives Waiting Period For Rices Landing

JEFFERSON — In a regular session following its reorganization meeting Monday night, the Jefferson-Morgan School Board granted a request from Rices Landing Borough Council which will allow the borough to begin collecting a proposed realty transfer tax on Jan. 1.

Had the school directors not waived a waiting period, the borough would not have been able to collect its half share of the one percent transfer tax until July 1 since the tax is also levied by the school district. Rices Landing Borough Council plans to adopt the realty transfer tax ordinance during a special meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 27.

The school district has levied the tax for several years as have four other municipalities within the school district with each receiving one-half percent of the tax. Rices Landing was the only municipality within the district not levying the tax.

Although it was not brought out during the meeting, there has been speculation that the Dilworth Coal Mine owned by the U.S. Steel Corp. is close to being sold. Much of the surface property of the mine as well as portions of its coal holdings lie within Rices Landing Borough. Should the mine be sold before July 1 of next year and the school district not waived the waiting period for the borough to collect its share of the realty transfer tax, the school district would have received the entire one percent from the mine property within the borough.

In its annual reorganization meeting, the board re-elected veteran board member Stanley Fowler of Clarksville to his 15th consecutive term as board president. Karen Sabo of Mather was elected vice president on a 6-2 vote over Clarence Virgin Jr. of Jefferson who was sworn-in for a four-year term on the board along with David Saunders, of Mather. Sworn-in for a two-year term as a new board member was Vito Virgill of Khedive. Also elected to a two-year term but absent from the meeting because of work requirements was Margaret Simmons of Jefferson.

The board voted to retain its regular meeting date as the third Monday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

In other action the board heard a report that its state subsidy payment to be received Dec. 15 will be reduced by 75 percent until state monies become available. The reduced subsidy payment is because of the delay by the Legislature in passing bank tax legislation to replace one declared unconstitutional. Until the legislation was passed last week, the state was unable to borrow money.

A lease agreement with Intermediate Unit I for rental of two classrooms in the district was approved. The IU rents the rooms at a rate of $1,500 each for the school year.

Following a report that the Jefferson-Morgan Wrestling Boosters Club had donated a portable whirlpool machine to the district, the board agreed to pay a minor installation cost. The boosters club raised the $2,112 for the whirlpool through various activities during the year.

Board member Floyd Haney was appointed as the board's alternate representative to the Joint Operating Committee of the Greene County Vocational-Technical School.

Young Patient Example Of Home Health Care At Best

WAYNESBURG — Governor Dick Thornburgh has proclaimed the week of November 27 as Home Care Week honoring the home health care agencies which collectively make some 3.5 billion visits each year.

The staff of Greene County Memorial Hospital's Home Health Program conducted 18,500 home visits during fiscal year 1983. Patients of the program range in age from infancy to 100 years.

Russell Caldwell, 14, of Deerfield Lane, Waynesburg, is one of the younger patients of the home health program. His treatment is also unique and Russell serves as somewhat of a testing model for his physicians and the home health staff.

Two years ago, Peggy and Jim Caldwell learned their son had cystic fibrosis, a hereditary disease which affects mucous secreting glands and organs. The chronic disease causes severe respiratory problem for its victims.

For two years, Russell was in and out of Children's Hospital suffering bouts of pneumonia and other respiratory problems. After his most recent discharge in October, his physicians referred him to Greene County Memorial's home health program. The physicians had decided to try a new procedure on Russell—and a new procedure in the treatment of patients with the disease.

Russell's surgeon inserted a broviac catheter into a central venous vessel. The semi-permanent IV catheter eliminates future multiple punctures to give medication in the IV solution. Because Russell has cystic fibrosis, he is very susceptible to respiratory infections and an open catheter makes it easier to administer the medication on a more regular basis. Initially, Jeanne Katruska, RN, with the Home Health Program visited Russell every day to check his vital signs, start infusions through the catheter, assess his lungs and check the catheter site. She was in constant communication with Russell's physicians and the staff at Children's Hospital in monitoring his condition.

Now that Russell's condition has stabilized, home visits have been reduced to three times a week. Even so, Mrs. Katruska stays in touch with Russell's physicians, the surgeon who inserted his broviac catheter and pharmacies about his drugs on a weekly basis. Judging from the reaction of his physicians after his last visit, Mrs. Katruska reports they were pleased and almost surprised at his color and appearance and general health.

Peggy Caldwell thinks that the home health care concept is especially good for patients like her son. "We can take care of Russell ourselves and he can continue to keep up with all his activities like playing the flute, bowling on Saturday mornings and having friends in." Mrs. Caldwell also mentioned the other side of home care which is a reduction in the number of hospitalizations for Russell and hence a reduction in their health care costs.

Russell Caldwell is not too concerned about his condition, by his own admission, and he realizes that he will have to live with cystic fibrosis for the rest of his life. "It does not keep me from doing anything I want to do," he said.

His room is filled with model cars that he has constructed. Spending time on his car models is worked into his daily schedule which now includes several hours with two tutors "and a mother," says Russell. He expects to return to school within the next few weeks.

"Russell has been a real inspiration to the Home Health staff," said Mrs. Katruska. Not only has his positive attitude rubbed off on staff but also his knowledge of his condition and his desire to help in his treatment have made him a joy to care for.

"Russell helps with his own dressing changes and irrigation and he does a lot of his own inhalation therapy by himself," says Mrs. Katruska.

Admiration from the Caldwell's for the work of the Home Health staff is just as great. Mrs. Caldwell is grateful for "another pair of eyes to look over my shoulder," in caring for her son at home. Russell summed it all up by saying, "I am glad they're available. I need all the help I can get."

Board Rules Sign May Remain

WAYNESBURG — The new sign on the front of McCracken's Drug Store on East High Street will remain following a ruling by the Waynesburg Zoning Board this week.

The recently erected 22-by-3-foot sign was approved on the basis that it is replacing an old one.

In another matter, the board failed to approve the installation of two signs at a glass service business on Cherry Alley. The business is operated by Arthur Fulton of Washington in a building formerly occupied by Klear Kable.

Fulton had planned to erect a 4-by-3-foot sign on the Cherry Alley side and the Greene Street sides of the building. Fulton will be allowed instead to place one sign or the other. The board ruled the square-footage requirement prevented two signs.

Paul Tomasetti was asked to file a variance request to create as many as six apartments in a home at 146 West Lincoln Street. The board has scheduled a public hearing on the matter on March 5 to gather input from neighbors.

A request for conditional approval of an auto repair business at the corner of Cherry Alley and Wood Street was tabled. The request was made by Joseph Balaban.

Steve Lauer was elected chairman of the board during the reorganizational part of the meeting. Lisa Schwarz, recently appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Robert Romanosky, was elected secretary. Charles Berryhill is the third member of the board.

Power Out Because Of Winds

WAYNESBURG — West Penn Power crews were still working late Wednesday to restore power to some 299 customers when high winds knocked power out in several areas served by the utility at approximately 6 p.m.

A West Penn spokesman said crews were still working at 10:30 p.m. and would continue on the job until all power was restored. He said 12 cases of power loss were reported through the utility's Jefferson Division coverage area which includes Greene County as well as parts of Washington and Fayette counties.

Power was lost in the Porter Street Extension area of Franklin Township at 5:10 p.m., the Curry Home and Old Route 21 area about 6 p.m. and in the Willow Tree area near Greensboro at 5:50 p.m. Power was still out in the Porter Street Extension and Old Route 21 area at 10:30 p.m.

Coal Firm Argues Case

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Court will hear arguments at 10 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 22, on a request by Consolidation Coal Co. for a preliminary injunction order to allow the drilling of methane drainage holes in Gilmore Township.

The coal company wants to drill the drainage holes on property owned by Robert Lee and William E. Holt but has been refused entry.

In an equity action filed last month, the coal company contends the property owners are asking for an exorbitant and unreasonable sum of money and are demanding unnecessary and unrelated work on the property.

Company officials say they have the right to enter the property to drill the holes on the basis of having acquired the right-of-way when the coal was severed from the surface in 1945.

Sibling Rivalry

A local brother and sister were among the successful Greene County hunters last week. Albert L. Rhome of West Finley R.D. 2 downed his nine-point buck with a 15-inch spread at 7:15 a.m. Monday. His sister, Marilyn Jones of Kirby, shot one a half-hour later, getting an 18-inch spread, 10-point buck. Both kills were made on the family farm near Nebo.

Neighborhood Welcome

Bill and Joyce Morgan Winters were given an unusual welcome to the neighborhood on the north side of Waynesburg over the weekend. The couple, who were married Nov. 19, returned from their honeymoon to find that their neighbors had decorated their lawn with an assortment of objects — a garbage can, his and her aluminum Christmas trees, an old doll, tennis shoes, plastic flowers, toilet tissue, sewer pipes, and several signs, one a "for sale" sign and another advising the house was condemned. The whole thing was enhanced by spotlights.

Archaeological Research Too Important To Abandon

The fascination which archaeology holds for all types of people was demonstrated at a meeting held recently at a coffee shop in Waynesburg.

Proprietors of the Oasis Cafe were overwhelmed by the number and diversity of people who attended a session at which state archaeologist James Herbstritt reported on results of a dig conducted last summer at the site of a Monongahela Indian village in a remote section of western Greene County.

As might be expected, the meeting attracted members of the county archaeological society. But it also drew housewives, environmentalists, college students, businessmen, a group of middle school students, and others of all ages.

Herbstritt, who is collection manager for the Division of Archaeology of the Pennsylvania Historic and Museum Commission, had their undivided attention while he showed slides of the various artifacts which were found and explained what further exploration might mean in unraveling the mystery of why the Monongahela people disappeared about a century before the first white men ventured into western Pennsylvania.

When he was done with his presentation, his audience had pointed and knowledgeable questions about his hopes for the future.

Their interest made even more disappointing Herbstritt's statement that future exploration at the site will have to be abandoned unless private or foundation funding can be obtained to complete excavation of the village — a task which could require several more summers of work.

Considering that last summer's dig cost the state agency less than $10,000 and the fact that Herbstritt considers it one of the most important finds of its kind in the state, it seems inconceivable archaeologists should be forced to abandon their task.

If the sought-for private funding cannot be found, the Historic and Museum Commission should reconsider its decision to abandon the project.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

One of the largest crowds ever turned out to see the annual Waynesburg Christmas Parade Saturday. The weather was a bit chilly, but fortunately the rain held off until long after the parade, and people had done their Christmas shopping and gone home. The parade is sponsored each year by the Greater Waynesburg Area Chamber of Commerce and always ends with Santa Claus riding into town on his sleigh.

A Lee Blair, who operated a hardware store in Waynesburg for many years, celebrated his 99th birthday Dec. 4 in St. Petersburg, Fla. He has four sons and a daughter.

Sandra Yarish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Yarish of Carmichaels, is a member of the cast of the national touring company of the David Merrick musical, "42nd Street." The show opened last month in Philadelphia. Miss Yarish is a member of the chorus and dances in all 15 musical numbers. She is a graduate of West Virginia University.

When Bill and Joyce Morgan Winters got back to Waynesburg last weekend after their honeymoon, they found all their new neighbors on Waynesburg's north side had "decorated" their house. The neighbors, who all wish to remain anonymous, put such items as his and her Christmas trees, garbage cans, toilet paper, old tennis shoes and the like around the exterior of the home. It was all in good fun.

Waynesburg College held its annual Christmas Concert in Alumni Hall Monday night. Each year, after the concert, the "hanging of the greens," is held, which means everyone goes outside to help light the large tree next to Miller Hall which is decorated for the Christmas season.

Calvin Smitley of North Morris Street, Waynesburg, was recently honored on his 88th birthday. A family party was held in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wilma Havanis of Carmichaels. Mr. Smitley has nine children, 23 grandchildren, 39 great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren.

Another annual Christmas event in Waynesburg is the production of Handel's "Messiah," the first Sunday in December. The production is performed by the Greene County Community Chorus, directed by Allen Emerick with accompaniment by the Westmoreland Symphony Orchestra. It was held in the First United Methodist Church of Waynesburg and a large crowd attended.

Orlen McCullough of Moundsville, W. Va., and formerly of Aleppo, celebrated his 89th birthday Nov. 29.

Lawmakers Concerned About Status Of YDC

HARRISBURG — Expressing concern about the possibility of the Youth Development Center near Waynesburg closing in the near future, Rep. William DeWeese and members of a House sub-committee will conduct a fact-finding tour of the local facility on Monday, Dec. 19.

DeWeese said Wednesday his office has been bombarded by letters and calls about the status of the YDC. Despite inquiries to the governor's office and various state agencies, DeWeese said he has received no official word about the future of the center.

He did say the state Department of Corrections has expressed interest in the possibility of turning the complex into a prison for females found guilty of non-violent crimes should the YDC be closed. DeWeese said Muncy, the only women's prison in the state, is overcrowded at this time.

The sub-committee is chaired by Rep. William Wachob of Elk County and is a part of the Health and Welfare Committee of the House. DeWeese said the group will consist of six legislators and the tour will probably begin at 10 a.m.

The legislators, according to DeWeese, would welcome public comment during their short stay in Greene County.

Testimony Ends In Case

WAYNESBURG — Testimony was completed Tuesday in the trial of Daniel Fisher of Waynesburg who has been charged with sexual abuse of three teen-age, retarded boys under his care at a group home. He is also charged with burglary and intimidation of a witness.

Final arguments will begin at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday followed by Judge Glenn Toothman's charge to the jury.

Fisher was recalled to the stand when court began Wednesday morning. During cross-examination, Assistant District Attorney Mary Pruss reviewed his employment record since his graduation from college.

Fisher explained he was dismissed from his job at the Youth Development Center near Waynesburg in 1979 because a girl under his care was found to be carrying a knife.

Fisher's wife was called to the stand by defense attorney Oliver Hormell and explained her husband's mental anguish over staff relations at the group home. She also said the family had received numerous anonymous calls following his arrest and one call in which the caller stated, "He's dead."

Mrs. Fisher said the threatening call was reported to state police but no phone tap was requested.

Elizabeth Vellenowith, a former house parent at the group home on Route 188 where the alleged incidents took place, was called to the stand. She told the court she had warned Fisher "they" would try to get rid of him, an apparent reference to other staff members at the home.

Dr. Edward Patterson, a psychology professor at Waynesburg College and a clinical psychologist at local hospitals, was recalled to the stand. As he had in previous testimony, Patterson said that in his opinion the alleged victims would not be able to recall specific events that had occurred several weeks previously.

During rebuttal, Mrs. Pruss called Cindy Cummings, a caseworker with Centerville Clinics. Mrs. Cummings testified she has known the alleged victims for several years and began to notice something was wrong with the boys in August. Speaking of one boy, she said, "He was very changed. He wouldn't make eye contact and would change the subject when I tried to talk to him."

"He was very displeased with Dan (Fisher)," Mrs. Cummings said. The caseworker said she had no part in the investigation of the charges but only counseled the boys after official investigations had been completed.

After the jury had been excused for the day, defense attorney David Pollock asked for a directed verdict to dismiss burglary charges but the motion was denied by Toothman. Pollock also asked for a directed verdict on one of the four charges of deviate sexual intercourse. That motion was also denied by the court.

SE Greene Board Takes Several Votes On President

MAPLETOWN — Joe Spiker was chosen to serve a two-year term on the Southeastern Greene School Board at its reorganizational meeting Tuesday night.

Spiker was chosen from four candidates nominated to fill the vacancy which was created when new board member Terry Ganocy chose to serve a four-year term. Ganocy had been elected to both a four-year and a two-year term in the Nov. 8 election.

By secret ballot, the board voted Spiker in as the ninth board member from a slate including Jim Rumble, Alex Pekar and Art Wilson.

The other new board members who were sworn in were Bob Headlee, Ganocy, George Billez, Jack Provanice and Vic Shine. All were elected to serve four-year terms. They join Mark Brozik, Gary Mosier and Adam Novak.

Several votes, again by secret ballot, were taken to name a board president and a vice-president. Votes of elected officials by secret ballot are of questionable legality and have been challenged in several municipalities.

Billez was elected to serve as president with Mosier as vice-president. Ganocy was named treasurer at $150 for six months to fill an unexpired term.

The board elected to keep the second Tuesday of each month as its regular meeting date, but changed the starting time of the meetings from 7 to 7:30 p.m. The board's next meeting will be Dec. 13.

John Stets was retained as solicitor at a yearly retaining fee of $1,200 plus $50 an hour.

Before adjourning the meeting, Billez noted the new board intended to set up several committees with members of those committees to be named later.

"Writing the Novel," by Lawrence Block. Writer's Digest Books, Cincinnati, Ohio. $10.95.

I liked this book because I like Lawrence Block. He writes a monthly column for "Writer's Digest" magazine and has written many books. He's responsible for a series of mysteries which feature Bernie Rhodenbarr, a professional burglar.

Old Bernie is a lovable character, with just one defect. Other than that, he possesses ethics. And he's an intellectual. He runs a second-hand bookstore, when he's not figuring out how to break into houses, an activity which deservedly gets him into scrapes which are very funny to everyone, except Bernie.

So I thought that anyone who thinks up this crazy burglar should be interesting on the subject of how he does it, and how he gets his ideas.

Block's first rule on that subject is, "Pay attention." Another one is, "Stay awake." And, "Remember what you're looking for." For example, he says, "I was with a group of people, and one woman complained about a problem she was having with her upstairs neighbor. He was evidently a drunk, and was given periodically to turning his radio on at top volume and then either leaving the apartment or passing out cold on the floor. Efforts to reach him invariably failed, and the radio blared all night, keeping the woman awake and doing very little for her peace of mind."

Other people suggested that the woman should call the police, report him to the landlord, and other conventional solutions. Block said, "Get a flashlight, and go down to the basement and find the fuse box and remove the fuse for his apartment. Just turn him off altogether. Pull the plug on the clown."

Afterwards, he realized how revealing his answer had been. "That I'd thought of the fuse box play was not inconsistent with my choosing burglars and such types as viewpoint characters; I'm blessed or cursed, as you prefer, with that type of mind. I thought of that, and I thought that my burglar hero, Bernie Rhodenbarr, would offer the same suggestion if a friend called him in the middle of the night with that particular problem."

"And then, because I've learned not to walk away from thoughts along these lines, I asked myself what Bernie would do if..." And, moving right along with that, you see the way books get started.

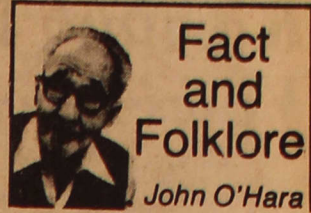

Notice I said started. "Writing a novel is hard work," Block reminds us. "Writing anything well is work, whether it's an epic trilogy or the last line of a limerick for a deodrant contest. But when it comes to the novel you have to work long and hard even to produce a bad one."

But you do have to work at it every day, he says. "Obviously, the more steadily you work the sooner you'll be done with this monumental task. If you write two pages a day, a two hundred-page book is going to take you one hundred days. If you write every day, you'll complete that book in a little over three months." With luck, of course.

Block insists, as do most people, that characterization is the most important part of writing fiction. "The chief reason for almost any reader to go on turning the pages of almost any novel is to find out what happens next. The reason the reader cares what happens next is because of the author's skill at characterization."

"If the writing's competent, my interest in a book may flag if I find that I just don't care whether the characters live or die, marry or burn, go to the Devil or come out the other side. This may happen because I just don't believe in the characters the author has created. They don't act like real people, they don't sound like real people, they don't have the emotions or thoughts of real people."

It's a practical book for writers, as opposed to theoretical. Writer's Digest publishes many such practical guides.

Fact and Folklore
 John O'Hara

When Ivan Parry shot a huge 160 pound buck in Aleppo Township in 1974, he put Greene County "on the boards" for a number of records in that sport.

And also put himself into Greene County folklore for years to come.

A year later the word came back from the national headquarters of the Boone-Crockett Club — the nation's official statistical organization for recording wild game kills — that the 23 and 3/8 inch spread of its antlers gave Greene County these distinctions (ratings) in the world of big game hunting:

✓The largest antler spread of any deer ever killed in Pennsylvania (by more than four inches);

✓The biggest antler spread of any deer shot east of the Mississippi River since 1969;

✓The 31st largest spread ever killed on the North American continent.

Parry and many others hunted for the prize specimen for days. Initially he wounded it with a 357 Magnum pistol at close range and then brought it down with a custom made 458 hunting rifle handcrafted by his father, Taylor Parry, a gunsmith and owner of several oil and gas wells.

Realizing it would be a contender for such recognition from the minute he shot it, Parry immediately contacted Joe Riggs, a Waynesburg sporting goods dealer. He, in turn, arranged for its transfer to the state game commission headquarters in Ligonier where various standard measurements were made.

The Boone-Crockett club was established by former United States President Theodore Roosevelt. It includes men long prominent in hunting, fishing and preservation work to perpetuate the nation's ecology.

The Greene County buck finished with a ranking of 184.6 on the standard test measurements, topping a deer killed in 1930 by Floyd Reibson, which measured 180.4.

The rating given Parry's extraordinary kill projected Greene County into national focus in the explosively growing sport of big game hunting. The year later, news of the kill attracted more than a usual number of hunters to the remote areas of Aleppo Township.

Hundreds more were attracted to Joe Riggs' store where the deer became a permanent display after being mounted by the well-known taxidermist, Edward Shaffer of Somerset County. It has been preserved in all of its grace.

It has become not only a part of the hunting folklore in just Greene County, but in all of Pennsylvania.

Water Rates To Increase

WAYNESBURG — The Southeast Franklin Water Authority, which serves some 125 customers along old Route 21 southeast of Waynesburg, has announced that it will increase its monthly water rates by 35 cents per thousand gallons, effective Jan. 1.

There will be no change in the $10 minimum charge, which covers the first 1,000 gallons used. The increase will apply to each 1,000 gallons above the first thousand.

An authority spokesman said the raise is necessary because the Southwestern Pennsylvania Water Authority is increasing its rates by 30 cents per 1,000 gallons. Southeast Franklin purchases water from Southwestern for resale to its customers.

Yellow Jackets Come Through In The End

By Bob Grove, O-R Sports Staff

WAYNESBURG — There are times when what transpires in the course of an athletic event defeats the purpose for which it is staged, when the outcome of a struggle between two teams is rendered meaningless by the nature of the struggle itself. This was one.

The bench-clearing fight that erupted with 8:50 to play in the second half here Wednesday night at College Gym ruined what was a good basketball game between Waynesburg and California. Two players from each team were ejected, one fan was slightly shaken up and the father of one of the Waynesburg players came out of the bleachers to confront California coach Tim Loomis, who then sent his team to its locker room until order was restored.

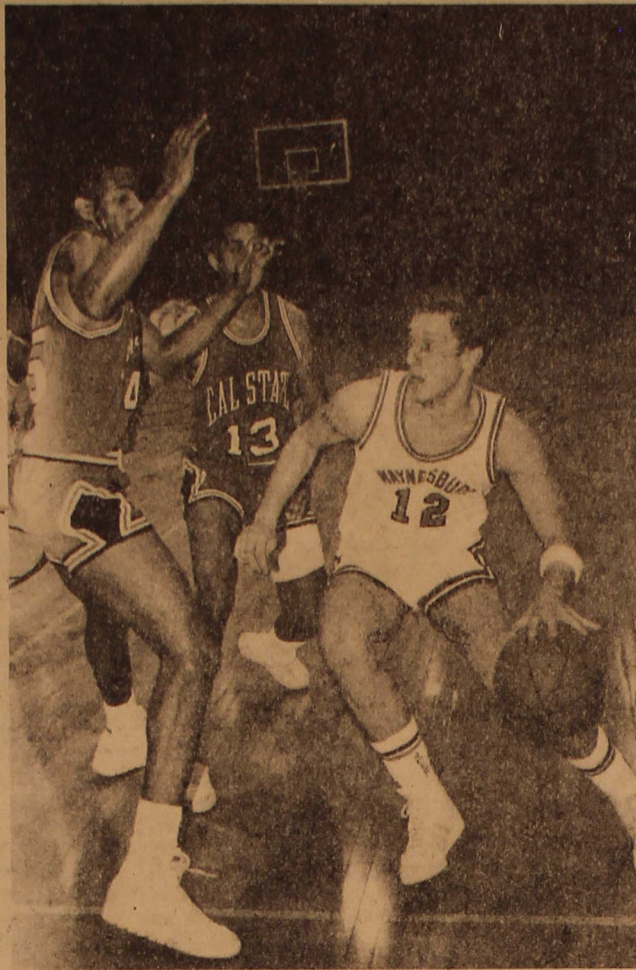

Waynesburg won the game, 74-70. Waynesburg's Paul Stanley and Mark Doppelheuer and California's Max Wiley and Moe Yeoman were ejected from the game. Both coaches admitted the players were at fault.

"The kids at both schools may thrive on that, but it hurts both teams," Loomis said. "It makes us look bad and it makes them look bad. The fans love it and the kids hate it. But it was the kids who were involved. It's the kids' fault."

"That's not a necessary thing," Marisa said. "There was a great deal of pressure out there, but the players have to keep their cool."

Waynesburg held an 11-point lead, 61-52, when the fight began and a 10-point lead, 66-56, after both teams shot technical fouls produced by the scuffle. California, which had trailed by as many as 13 points in the second half, cut Waynesburg's lead to three with 58 seconds to play but could get no closer.

"Most coaches would go out after this blaming it on the officials, but I'm not," Loomis said. "We didn't play good basketball for 32 minutes. We took them lightly."

The Yellow Jackets (1-0) held a 40-39 lead at halftime and then scored 12 of the next 16 points to take a 52-43 lead with 15:31 to play. That surge opened up a close game and, about eight minutes later, gave Waynesburg a chance to slow the pace of the game to its advantage.

California's Moe Yeoman takes a shot over the outstretched arms of the Jackets' Mark Doppelheuer (42).

"We played very competitively," Marisa said. "We might have had a couple of loose ends, but I thought we played very well."

Senior point guard Ray Natili scored 17 points from the foul line and finished the game as its high scorer with 25. Stanley, a junior swing forward, scored 16 and senior forward Roosevelt Kirby, a transfer, added 13.

Jackets Breeze By Behrend Girls Basketball

By Joe Tuscano, O-R Sports Staff

WAYNESBURG — This was not the classic David-Goliath struggle of college basketball. This tale had a different twist, one which would definitely please those who chose not to root for the underdog.

For in this encounter, it was not David who found fame and glory with a well-placed shot. Rather, it was the giant who raised a mighty foot and stomped David into submission.

Waynesburg College's basketball team played that lead role with a vigor which netted the Yellow Jackets their second straight win, an easy 97-80 decision over weakling District 18 opponent Penn State-Behrend Saturday night at College Gym.

Wearing the biggest stomping shoe was senior guard Ray Natili, who poured in a career-high 30 points in sparking a Waynesburg offense which managed to shrug off an emotional letdown from last week's California victory.

And for the Jacket playmaker, whose previous-high game was a 29-point performance at Frostburg in his freshman season, it was a nice transition going from one who gives to one who receives.

"I don't think I have to score that much," said Natili after the game. "I was just taking advantage of what they were giving us. If I get 12 points and 12 assists and we win, that's fine with me. If they let me go, then they guys will get me the ball and I'll put it in the hoop. Whatever they give us, we'll take."

Natili scored 21 first-half points, mostly on layups which developed when he slipped under the Behrend defense off picks set at the top of the key.

"The guy guarding me was too small and he was trying to overplay me," Natili said. "I was open all the time on my cuts. Our offense is geared for the guard to come off the picks and there was nobody in front of me."

But it wasn't just Natili's scoring which decided the contest. Waynesburg's physical strength overwhelmed the Cubs, who were giving away an average of about 15 pounds per person on the court.

"The weight factor really caused us some problems," said first-year head coach Doug Zimmerman. "When the ball is tipped there, that (weight) comes into play then."

Behrend (3-3) is in a rebuilding season under Zimmerman and the transition has had its tougher moments. The Cubs have five freshmen, four sophomores, and two juniors. There are no seniors and, thus, little leadership.

"We've got a long way to go," Zimmerman said. "Look at who we're playing. We're not very experienced. We're just trying to get the kids some experience."

Waynesburg jumped to a 15-7 lead seven minutes into the game but Behrend's outside shooting kept the Cubs at arm's length through most of the first half. A 9-4 spurt by the Yellow Jackets in the last two minutes, propelled them to a 50-38 lead at intermission.

"I expected our guys to lack a little in emotion because they were aware of Behrend's inexperience," said Jacket head coach Rudy Marisa. "That was compounded by coming off the emotional victory (with California). It's just human nature. It's not what a coach wants but..."

Natili was joined in double figures by guard Paul Stanley, with 24 points, and Roosevelt Kirby and Harold Hamlin, both with 14. Kirby, who had just two points at the half, exploded for 12 in the second half, including a run of three consecutive baskets in a three-minute stretch.

"We've always had a man like a (Tim) Tyler, who was perpetual motion," said Marisa. "We finally got the big man now and he isn't perpetual motion. It'll take me some time to get used to that."

Tony Hasson led the Cubs with 14 points while teammates Darrell Gray had 13, Bill Miklos 12 and Greg Green 10.

Mark Doppelheuer, Ernie Mills and Kirby each pulled down eight rebounds to lead Waynesburg.

AVELLA — Talk about your close encounters.

Lori Maloy scored five of her 21 points in the game's second overtime and Avella High School's girls basketball team withstood a last-minute surge by Jeff-Morgan to take a 48-47 exhibition win Thursday.

Maloy gave Avella a 48-43 edge with less than a minute left to play and the Rockets could only muster two baskets before time ran out.

In regulation play, Denise Doaks, who chipped in 17 points, tied the game for Avella at 37-37 on a basket with one second left to play.

In the first overtime, the Eagles held a 41-39 lead before J-M's Tammy Bedillion, who had a game-high 22 points, tied it again on a basket with just three seconds remaining.

Maloy also had 14 rebounds while teammates Joy Kelly had 13 and Monica Reikai nine. Avella is now 1-1 while Jeff-Morgan falls to 1-2.

Trinity Girls Win

Trinity High School's girls basketball team, paced by senior guard Denise King's 20 points, defeated Waynesburg Central, 60-41, in the consolation game of the Peters Township Tournament.

The Hillers (2-1) led 30-24 at halftime but held the Sweet Wheats to just 17 points in the second half with a full-court press that Waynesburg couldn't handle.

"We were a little dissatisfied with the slow defense in the first half because our reactions were slow," said Trinity head coach Dave Johns. "Denise King and Lori Slencak had Freshman Harold Hamlin, a 6-6 forward, was instrumental in the Yellow Jackets' first-half effort, scoring nine points.

"I think Hamlin can play," Marisa said. "You have to give him credit. He played three quarters well and he didn't look like a freshman doing it."

California (4-2) received 18 points from junior forward Mike Wilson, 13 from senior guard Barry Wright and 12 from senior guard Mike Galloway.

"We played with them like they were an average team," Loomis said. "We just didn't play good basketball. I could see it (the loss) coming, because they were playing well. They played great."

Wilson grabbed a game-high 11 rebounds while Kirby led Waynesburg with eight. Wednesday's game marked the second consecutive game the Vulcans converted more field goals and grabbed more rebounds than their opponent and lost.

California took the first substantial lead of the game, 17-11, with 11:52 to play in the first half. The Yellow Jackets, however, regained the lead at 26-25 6:52 before halftime. A balanced scoring attack paced Waynesburg in the first half, when Kirby scored 10 points, Hamlin nine and Natili and Stanley eight each.

Waynesburg won the game in the first five minutes of the second half by outscoring California, 12-4. California could not reduce the Waynesburg lead to less than 10 points until there was 10:36 left in the game.

"We got everything we wanted offensively," Loomis said. "I thought (point guard) Cliff Mitchell did a poor job. He has yet to play a good game against Waynesburg." Mitchell scored two points.

Injuries Pin Vulcans

By Denise Bachman, O-R Sports Staff

CALIFORNIA — The wrestling season is only three matches old for California University, and already Frank Vulcano can't wait until it's over.

And you really can't blame the Vulcan head coach.

It's not that Vulcano has grown tired of either the sport or coaching. It's that California has been hit with such a barrage of injuries that it's hard to put together any type of substantial lineup. And that's hard for any team to take, especially a team that finished last season with a 16-1 record, losing only to Slippery Rock in its final dual meet.

The latest proof of California's problems came by way of a 29-16 loss to Waynesburg at Hamer Hall Saturday afternoon, which dropped the Vulcans' record to 1-2.

"I could feel the outcome way before the match," Vulcano said. "I just wanted us to make it respectable. I knew that at 126, 134 and heavyweight it would be close to giving away 18 points."

"It's going to be a hit-and-miss year. If we break 50 percent I'll be happy. I'm looking forward to the end of the year. We have some good individual kids who I hope can go on for themselves and do something."

For Waynesburg (1-1), the outlook appears a bit brighter, although head coach Sam Church wasn't exactly pleased with the Yellow Jackets' performance Saturday. But he attributes some of the Jackets' lackluster ways against California to the fact they were coming off a grueling match against Pitt on Wednesday.

"I think we wrestled better against Pitt, but several of the kids were tired and it's hard to hold your weight," Church said. "California is just decimated (with injuries), and once they get healthy, they'll be tough."

That's if they get healthy. Before the match started Saturday, the Vulcans were forced to forfeit at heavyweight where Roy Hall is recovering from an injury. By the end of the match, the Vulcans had defaulted at two weight classes — 126 and 158.

Tom Bail (126) reinjured his left shoulder, and according to Vulcano he was told by the doctor to either "give it up or have an operation," while Bill Sutton (158) has a pinched nerve in his neck.

Bail and Sutton are just two more that have been added to the Vulcans' already long list of casualties. Besides Hall, the others include Dean DiDomenico (134), George Harvey (142), Vinnie Hanlon (150), and Bill Harris (167).

"We're leaving quality kids out of the lineup and that's hard to swallow," Vulcano said. "Hanlon is one of the better kids and has probably one of the worst injuries of all. He has a neck injury and may be out for the year."

All was not bleak, however, for the Vulcans on Saturday. Vulcano's two sons, Jim (118) and Frank (190), came away with victories along with Mark Stivala (167). Mike McWilliams (177) accounted for the Vulcans' other two points when he drew with Brian Ross.

Jim Vulcano fought back from a 5-0 deficit to record an 11-5 decision over Mark Hogue, while his brother Frank pinned Eric Roller in 3:56. Stivala dominated Bill Mundell in a 16-2 superior decision.

"Jim has had trouble. He's had a hard time getting started," the head coach said. "At Slippery Rock he was down 6-1, but came back to win. He's a slow starter, but he along with Mark Stivala, Mike McWilliams, Frank (Vulcano Jr.) and Harris, if they're right, they have the potential."

After Jeff Hinerman won by default at 126 for the Yellow Jackets, Waynesburg put together a string of four consecutive wins by Mike Buckiso (134), Todd Eddy (142), Rick Romeo (150) and Steve Burchianti (158), who also won by default. Heavyweight Scott Schiffko won by forfeit.

"Romeo's win over (Clyde) Caldwell was a nice surprise," Church said. "We have a pretty solid lineup. We possibly can be more solid, we just have to see how the young kids develop."

And all that's left for the Vulcans to see is how well they can maintain their morale.

"Waynesburg beat us. They have a nice team," Vulcano said. "Our kids were embarrassed. This was our third match this week. It's hard to get back, but we just have to lick our wounds."

The recklessly endangering charge was based on the fact that when he smashed the window with a section of pipe, shards of glass were propelled across the room, which would have caused injury had anyone been in the room.
