County History Told In Show At College

WAYNESBURG — "The History of Greene County in Old Newspapers and Rare Documents" is the name of a show that opens Friday evening in the Waynesburg College museum.

The history show, assembled by Professor James Randolph, goes on display in the basement of the Stewart Science Hall at 7:30 p.m. The show also will be open to the public during commencement weekend at the college and Randolph said special groups wanting to visit the museum can make an appointment by contacting him at the college, 627-8191.

The history show includes old newspapers, rare books and photographs, sheet music and a number of other items about the local area.

Some of the newspapers on display include accounts of the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, the sinking of the Titanic and the end of Prohibition. The papers include a 1817 edition of "The Waynesburg Messenger," as well as early editions of "The Waynesburg Republican," "The Waynesburg Morning Times," "The Waynesburg Daily Times," "The Waynesburg Semi-Weekly Messenger" and one obscure local newspaper known as "True Blue."

Randolph also has gathered together materials on the life of Fred High, a local humorist who traveled the vaudeville circuit and later authored the pictorial book, "Waynesburg: Prosperous and Beautiful." High's interesting life is depicted through newspaper articles about him, show programs and posters. On display are the original copper engraving plates used to reproduce the photographs for the book as well as a song written by his wife.

Also included in the history show are a 1797 layout of the town of Waynesburg, perhaps the first map of the borough, and one of the earliest Waynesburg College diplomas. A number of songs, written by members of the Waynesburg College faculty and administration, have been recorded.

Randolph also has salvaged material from architect John Pauley's house. Among his sketches are the statue of General Greene for the county courthouse and the way he envisioned the Waynesburg College campus to look in the future.

Many of the items that are a part of the show have been donated to the college museum. Some of the material, however, is on loan, including rare deeds from the collections of Jane Sayers and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Behm.

The Rev. Mary Elizabeth Zook recently donated two valuable books to the museum which had been in her husband's family for many years. The books include a 1876 Caldwell Atlas and the third volume of the Horn Papers map book.

Also on Friday, at 8 p.m., will be a special showing of the Charles Silveus' films made during the early 1900s. These films of local scenes will be shown at 8 p.m. by Bill Molzon, director of audio-visual services at the college.

County Questions State Hospital Bill

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Commissioners, at their regular weekly meeting Thursday, refused to pay a bill from Farview State Hospital until the possibility of state help is explored.

A county resident was recently sent to the facility for the criminally insane and it is costing the county $290 per day.

Farview's bill of $4,930 for March was included in a stack of bills being considered at the meeting. Commissioner Dan Baily voted to pay all the bills with the exception of Farview while Commissioner John Gardner approved paying because the county is responsible and could be ordered by the court to pay eventually anyway.

Baily said it was his understanding the costs of maintaining a patient at Farview could be paid by the state Department of Public Welfare if done in a certain manner by the court.

During a brief news conference in his office following the regular meeting, Baily made it clear to reporters that he was not opposed to the Mental Health/Mental Retardation programs but was opposed to this type of county assistance.

"It's a legal ploy by attorneys for their clients to send repeat offenders to such facilities," Baily said. "There are starving children who could use this money."

"Many county agencies could make better use of this money. I am against a judicial system that forces taxpayers to pay for such services," Baily said. He added the county does not have the finances to support such prisoners and the state should shoulder the burden.

The commissioners were attempting to schedule a meeting with Judge Glenn Toothman to discuss the issue later in the day.

In other action, the commissioners:

Accepted the resignation of Carolyn Marshall, a case worker in Child Welfare Office effective Monday, April 30. Ms. Marshall intends to pursue her master's degree.

Property Owner Stalls Water Line

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township Supervisors learned Monday that the water line extension project along Route 21, west of Waynesburg, is being stalled for lack of a release by one property owner.

The reluctant property owner is one of four who brought suit against Emway Resources several months ago claiming mining operations had ruined their water supply.

Emway, which operates Emerald Mine in West Waynesburg, has agreed to donate $40,000 toward the water line extension and also to provide $43,000 in low-interest loans to customers along the line. However, the coal company insists the property owners drop their lawsuit because the new water line would settle the issue.

Three property owners have agreed to drop the suit, but the fourth has not signed and will be out of town until next month. In the meantime, the contractor is ready to move on the $150,000 project.

In other action, the supervisors adopted a holding tank ordinance which regulates the operation of temporary sewage treatment methods. The ordinance will be enforced by the Franklin Township Sewer Authority.

The board changed the date for opening and awarding of bids for the township's insurance package from May 14 to May 28.

Rob Kuchar, representing Community Preservation Inc., brought the supervisors up to date on the most recent $100,000 rehabilitation grant from the state Department of Community Affairs. It is the second such grant received by the township to upgrade homes in West Waynesburg. Applications will not be available for several weeks.

Red Tape Compounds Health Problem

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — Larry is a 38-year-old former coal miner with a terminal disease.

From friends, relatives and neighbors, he is receiving all sorts of help. From his government, he is receiving bureaucratic red tape that threatens to make him another welfare case.

Larry, a native of Waynesburg, has a family history of Huntington's chorea. The disease has claimed the life of his father, grandfather, uncle and aunt in recent years.

Huntington's is a progressive disease that ultimately proves fatal. Larry has had symptoms for the past eight years but was steadily employed until Sept. 22, 1982, when his failing health forced him to quit work.

When his unemployment benefits neared an end, Larry began seeking help from the Social Security Administration. It has since become a frustrating odyssey involving doctors in Pennsylvania, New York and West Virginia; well-meaning politicians; a judge on the bench, a judge off the bench and tests and more tests.

But he is still not receiving help from the government.

Larry applied for Social Security benefits almost immediately and the first letter from the government was specific, "You must reply within five days." Despite the government's request for quick action on Larry's part, the government has been "fighting" Larry's claim for over a year and half.

Knowing a complete medical history would be necessary, Larry went to a doctor in Morgantown in September 1982. The doctor found progressive Huntington's disease with early dementia and said there was gait disturbance, altered mental status, rigidity, muscle tone changes, ataxia, tremor and speech disturbance.

This medical exam was followed by psychological testing on Oct. 15, 1982. This doctor found evidence of organic brain dysfunction and said there was an impairment of intellectual functioning of a chronic nature. "He has difficulty in understanding directions and in performing mildly complex tasks," doctors said.

From Oct. 31 to Nov. 11, 1982,

Larry was hospitalized at a clinical research center in New York where he received experimental drugs. There is no known cure for the disease.

While he was in the New York facility, the Social Security office rejected his application and said in part, "You are able to stand for six hours a day and are capable of lifting up to 20 pounds." They suggested he find a job in another sector.

Another psychological test in December revealed increased preoccupation and decreased social interest and involvement. It also revealed his motor functions were consistently down.

Larry's family wrote to their congressman in February and received some pamphlets about the disease a month later—but no offer of help in the case.

Larry's appeal was turned down in March 1983, and he hired an attorney to fight for him. He eventually appeared before the judge, who admitted not knowing anything about the disease and was again turned down.

Larry went back to the New York clinic from June 12-17 for more treatment and a six-month re-evaluation. Doctors affirmed the experimental drugs had no adverse effects but their discharge diagnoses included Huntington's disease, peptic ulcer disease, sinusitis and possible abuse of Excedrin and Sudafed taken to combat the chronic headaches.

The family found a friend who had a friend, a judge no less, who specialized in fighting for Social Security benefits. They talked to the Georgia judge over the phone, and as requested, sent all the data collected during their battle. That was months ago. They have never heard from the judge.

The administrative law judge, sitting in Pittsburgh, denied the benefits although in his report stated, "the claimant suffers from a severe neurological impairment."

Larry contacted another lawyer several weeks ago but has heard nothing new about his case.

The battle continues.

Water System Started

BOBTOWN — Thanks to a pair of state grants totaling $450,000, renovation of the Bobtown water system has started, but officials of the East Dunkard Water Association are still facing problems.

After receiving a $50,000 grant from the state Department of Commerce, Dunkard Township and the water association matched the grant and began replacing old lines and installing hydrants behind the Bobtown Elementary School.

Because of the bad weather, progress has been slow since the project started in December. New hydrants installed on the eight-inch line along Grant Street now enable the fire company to fill its 750-gallon pumper truck in less than half the time it once took.

A $400,000 grant from the state Department of Community Affairs under the federal Emergency Jobs Bill Act has been received to renovate the remainder of the community's water distribution system.

Included in the plans is the replacement of the 325,000-gallon storage tank with a new one with a capacity of 425,000 gallons.

However, the association is concerned with rising material costs including pipe which cost $3.12 per foot in December now costing $4.17 per foot. Also, according to association officials, some residents have complained about street conditions in work areas.

Mark D. Brozik, project officer, will address the Greene County Commissioners at their regular meeting Thursday in an attempt to receive $25,000 in county aid. Brozik said without the county aid, cutbacks will be necessary to insure the success of the project.

Brozik has also appealed to residents to do their fair share when it comes to purchasing rights-of-way for the new lines.

Because government funds are being used, federal law requires a professional appraiser be hired to determine the fair market value of all rights-of-way.

However, according to Brozik, there is a "hitch" in this process. "We have no money for rights-of-way purchase," he said.

He added, "It is my opinion no one should profit from the needs of others. For every $100 we must pay for a right-of-way, 50 feet of water line will have to be reduced from eight to six inches."

Brozik stopped short of asking for free right-of-way but urged residents to do "the right thing, pitch in and help make this project a success."

The entire project must be completed by Feb. 28, 1985.

Foreman 'Lucky To Be Alive'

NEMACOLIN — "I'm lucky to be alive."

These words were spoken by 32-year-old Joe Hardy from his hospital bed at Monongalia Hospital in Morgantown, W. Va., Wednesday afternoon.

Hardy, a foreman at Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp.'s Nemacolin Mine, was one of four men injured in a roof fall at about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. Hardy was admitted to the hospital with a fractured leg and also multiple abrasions and contusions. He was trapped for over an hour.

J.H. Whisman, 54, of Greensboro was treated at Uniontown Hospital at 10:45 p.m. for leg and hip injuries and then released. Whisman is a roof bolter.

Frank Martin, 54, of Lemont Furnace was admitted to Uniontown Hospital at 10:35 p.m. for leg, hip and pelvis injuries. Following surgery Wednesday, he was transferred to Allegheny Hospital in Pittsburgh and was listed in fair condition.

Bob Shinsky, 27, of Uniontown, was taken to Uniontown Hospital at 12:09 a.m. and following treatment for a shoulder injury was released.

Hardy said Wednesday afternoon he wasn't sure exactly what happened. He also said no other men were in the area when the accident occurred.

Company officials, along with state and federal mine officials, were still investigating Wednesday and were not ready to make an official report.

Consol's Gift To College Backs Recreation Center

WAYNESBURG — A $25,000 leadership gift from the Consolidation Coal Company in support of the new recreation center has been received by Waynesburg College.

The gift represents the third major gift made by Consolidation Coal Company to Waynesburg College over the past three years. The presentation was made by Paul Stanek, vice president for industrial relations; Rick McMillan, manager-manpower services, and Dave Pattison, president of Fairmont Supply, Inc.

Consolidation also made a $3,000 gift to the college in support of the college's mine management program.

Dr. J. Thomas Mills, president of the college, accepted the gifts on behalf of the college. He called the gift "another major step toward the completion of the recreation center project."

"Consolidation Coal has played a major role in the college's efforts to improve recreational facilities for its students and the community. Two of three phases of the project have been completed, without substantial borrowing, and the completion of the third phase is within reach," Mills said.

He added, "This leadership gift for our recreation-center capital campaign is an indication of Consolidation's support of our programs and objectives at Waynesburg College."

In addition to major corporate and individual gifts, the college has received more than $600,000 in pledges from alumni. "These pledges, which are being fulfilled, were one of the reasons why the trustees of the college went ahead with phases one and two," Mills said.

The board voted in February to proceed with the third and final phase of the project.

Phase one of the recreation center project included renovation of the existing college gym and was completed in the fall of 1982. Phase two, the construction of a new building, was started in the fall of 1982 and completed last spring.

Phase three, the completion of the interior of the new building and the purchase of equipment, will be launched when funding has been secured. The college has received several gifts in support of the recreation center recently.

Waynesburg Enrollment Has Increased By 18 Percent

WAYNESBURG — The number of freshmen and new students who have paid deposits for the fall semester at Waynesburg College has increased 18 percent over the same time a year ago and 33 percent over the same time two years ago. According to figures released by Tim Thyreen, director of admissions at the college, there has been an upturn in the number of students who have decided to attend Waynesburg College. "When students or their parents submit their deposit that's a strong indicator that the student has decided on a particular college," Thyreen said. "We are encouraged that an increasing number of students are selecting the opportunities at Waynesburg." He pointed out that in 1983, Waynesburg College had an enrollment increase of more than 12 percent.

"Part of the increase is the result of our four-year degree program in nursing," Thyreen said. "We also have added a program in visual communication and a master of business administration program, and made a number of changes in our other programs."

He added that the college is continuing to work on developing opportunities for students to prepare for careers or further study, and pointed out that several of the programs at the college are among those career fields named recently as being among the fastest growing in the coming decades. A study done by Northwestern University identified the fastest growing fields. Among them are computer science, chemistry, economics, finance, accounting, marketing and business administration — all programs offered at Waynesburg.

It's Time For Reason

The Greene County Historical Society is facing an organizational crisis that goes far beyond the membership.

Because the society operates a 52-room museum which has gained a fine reputation over the years, the future of the society and its facility near Waynesburg concerns many of us in the tri-state area.

For too many years, valuable items of historical significance were crammed into a small room on North Morgan Street. Eventually, the society obtained the former county home and 19 acres of land in Franklin Township.

Thanks to public donations and the thousands of hours of volunteer labor by a few individuals, the local museum has gained a well-deserved reputation for its many exhibits and fine library. To place this facility in jeopardy, for any reason, is incomprehensible.

Three members of the society filed an equity action in Greene County Court last week asking the society be placed in receivership until reorganization changes are made.

The action follows the resignation of several directors and key personnel earlier this year.

It is only natural there would be disagreements between individuals but perhaps these same individuals are overlooking the common good. There are no disagreements that can't be resolved by reason.

Too many people have worked hard over the years in making this museum a reality to have the whole thing fall apart at this late date. It is a time for reason.

It is unfortunate, in a way, that the issue had to be brought before the court but if this is the only way to solve the issue—so be it.

My friends Mazy and Honey Bunch dropped in for coffee the other day. "Do you know Saul Bellow?" Mazy asked me.

"Certainly," I replied. "He was here just the other day, along with Joyce Carol Oates and Norman Mailer. They were looking for a fourth for bridge..."

Honey Bunch threw a spoon at me. "Be serious," Mazy told me. "Honey Bunch wants you to do a favor for her."

"Does she want a date with Norman Mailer?"

"Will you stop that?" Mazy yelled. "Honey Bunch has this problem..."

"Honey Bunch always has a problem," I said, "and it's very seldom that I can solve any one of them." "Well, all she wants you to do this time is introduce her to Saul Bellow."

"I hate to say this," I said, "but I don't know Saul Bellow. Why doesn't she ask for someone who would be easier to get to, like Nancy Reagan or Jackie Onassis or Jane Fonda? I'd have about as much chance of introducing her to them as I would to Saul Bellow."

Honey Bunch started to cry. "I'm sorry, Honey Bunch," I told her. "But I don't understand why Saul Bellow suddenly means so much to you."

"Well, Honey Bunch has written a book," Mazy explained.

"Good Grief," I said.

"And she hasn't been able to get it published," Mazy went on.

"That's not unusual," I said.

"Almost all writers have trouble finding publishers."

"But Honey Bunch says that Saul Bellow could help her, if she could find him."

"I suppose he could," I said. "He probably knows a lot of publishers. But what made Honey Bunch think of it?"

"Well," Mazy said, "Honey Bunch read about it in the paper. A writer named William Kennedy has just won the Pulitzer Prize for his book, 'Ironweed.'"

"Does Honey Bunch think her book will win a Pulitzer Prize?" Mazy said. "She read that nobody would publish Kennedy's book for four years. A dozen publishers had rejected it."

"I know the feeling," I said. "It happens all the time."

"Yes, but Saul Bellow got mad about it, and wrote to his publishers. He told them they ought to publish the book, and so they did."

"That was very nice," I said. "But I suppose Saul Bellow has more influence with publishers than most people do. Publishers probably tend to listen to authors who have won the Nobel Prize, I mean. But I'm afraid I don't know how Honey Bunch is going to get him to do that for her."

"Honey Bunch says that her book is a lot like Kennedy's, though. So it ought to have a chance. She says that Kennedy's book is about Albany, New York..."

"...and Honey Bunche's book is about..."

"Waynesburg and Carmichaels," Mazy said.

"I was afraid of that," I said. "I hate to tell you, but even if I knew Saul Bellow, I don't think I'd ask for help on that one."

Fact and Folklore
John O'Hara

Editor's Note: The following Fact and Folklore column first ran in the Republican on April 23, 1964. It is still appropriate and timely today.

The job of spading, once considered worthy of any man's efforts, appears to be slipping into the limbo of other lost skills and customs from an earlier day.

And it's all because of that noisy little device known as the garden tractor.

Scarcely any handkerchief sized garden plot seems to be justification enough now for the man of the house to rush to the nearest dealer with a figurative message sticking in his teeth telling the clerk that the man does indeed want a garden tractor.

Being a business man and not an amateur gardener the dealer sells the gardener the biggest size tractor for which the gardener will strap himself for months to come and thus another old time spader will be under the banner of the internal combustion engines.

And in such easy to do, casual fashion, one spader after another leaves the ranks of those who like to do things "the old fashioned way."

Spading, as most everyone knows, is the absolute ultimate of simplicity.

On the remote chance some few readers may never have had the opportunity to learn, spading consists simply of pushing a shovel or a pronged spading fork into the ground with just enough force to fill the shovel with earth and then upturn it in front of himself.

In earlier years grade school youngsters made spending money spading up small garden plots each spring and many of the "handy men" who were around took on the big spading jobs. It was done either by the hour or by a verbal contract.

Spading, by the way, could sometimes give an index or at least a clue, to the spader's personality.

The strict realist could always be spotted. He would start at one end of a plot and then spade back through its longest dimensions.

He managed to keep his spading line — the break through into the solid ground — as straight as possible right down through to the end of the plot.

Neurotics, on the other hand, seldom kept their spading line straight but instead, quickly found themselves spading at an angle, which let them kid themselves they were actually doing more work than they really were.

Others liked to spade the slowest in the center of the plot so they could get a least some point of their newly turned earth to the end of the plot pronto.

One of the most meticulous spaders in town was the late Phillip Rush, who was employed by the late Samuel P. Hooper to work around his tobacco shop up town and also to take care of the garden.

The Hoopers owned from an alley in the rear all the way down to Elm Street in front of their home. In the garden, Rush started spading in the Fall as soon as the garden stuff was removed and burnt off so the ground could freeze and thaw through the dreary winter.

Rush was slow and methodical but practically perfect. He worked with the quiet, almost perpetual pace that a grandfather's clock ticks off the seconds and it was a joy to see him at his labors.

On the other hand, the late Charles Workman, a small skinny fellow but high keyed, was one of the very fastest men in town at handling a spade and did an equally as good a job as Rush.

Now, though, the little "put, puts" have changed all that and nobody, but nobody, but practically nobody, ever spades any more — to seal the passing of another American small town custom.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

The death last week of Gen. Mark Clark was especially felt by Charles Hogue of Waynesburg who served as the general's driver during World War II in Europe. General Clark was the last of the major military leaders who served during the war.

The soldier huts in the recent "George Washington" mini-series on television were constructed in Greene County and then reassembled at Valley Forge. A feature story on the project was published in Sunday papers this past weekend.

Among those heading south this week for golfing were Butch Levine, Dave Wermlinger, Jack Bryan and George Gregg. They probably met Bill Meighen and son Jim on the way back from the same area.

Gary E. Deiger, state waterways patrolman in Greene County for the past 10 years, has been transferred back to his home area in Mercer County. His replacement has not been named but is expected to be a new agent graduating from school this spring.

Natalie Moore, daughter of James L. and Barbara S. Moore, of Waynesburg, has accepted a position with the Uniontown Evening-Standard. She will be leaving the Conellsville Cour-rier. Ms. Moore is a graduate of West Virginia University.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Shultz have returned from their Florida home while Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Pincus have also returned from a California winter to visit local friends.

The northeast corner of High and Liberty Streets in Waynesburg is taking on a new look this week. The site of a fire which destroyed the East End Restaurant, the ruins have been removed and fill placed for the eventual construction of a mini-park by new owner Jack McCracken.

College, Hospital Plan Health Day

WAYNESBURG — The Nursing Department of Waynesburg College and Greene County Memorial Hospital announce the first Women's Health Day will be held Friday, May 4, in the Stewart Science Building at Waynesburg College.

The event is being offered free of charge to women in Greene County and the surrounding area. Speakers and displays will provide women with an opportunity to become informed on a variety of health-related topics and to learn about the many community services and resources available to them.

The day-long event will begin at 9:30 a.m. and conclude at 4:30 p.m.

Speakers, whose topics include biofeedback, premenstrual syndrome, exercise and physical fitness, alcohol and drug dependent families and others, have been scheduled throughout the day on an hourly basis. Presentations will include adequate time for questions.

Seventeen area health related agencies will provide displays with information about their programs and services and educational materials on a range of health topics important to women. An audio-visual room will be available for participants to view films or slide programs that describe specific health problems or conditions.

Area women are invited to attend all or part of the day's activities. Scheduling of events has been arranged to accommodate women who may only be able to attend on their lunch hour or prior to or following a work shift.

Dr. Catherine Malloy, chairman of the department of nursing at Waynesburg College and one of the event's organizers, expressed the importance of the need for women to become better informed about things which influence their health and to become better health care consumers. She noted that this program is offered as a community service to achieve that goal, and serves as a good indication of the cooperation among Waynesburg College, Greene County Memorial Hospital and local health care agencies and providers.

For additional information about Women's Health Day, contact the Community and Patient Relations Department at Greene County Memorial Hospital, 627-3101, Ext. 532.

Under the Crucible Small Cities Block Grant, payments of $7,975 and $42,901 were approved to be made to Water and Waste Systems, the primary contractor of the new sewage facility. The bill had previously been approved by the project engineer.

Turkeys On The Loose

By Joe Parry.

The wild turkey.

This bird has but one equal among big game species to the avid hunter, and that's the whitetailed buck. But for now, springtime and gobbler season, the deer will lose the limelight to this elusive bird which at one time was in serious trouble.

At the turn of the century there were approximately 5,000 turkeys roaming the oak-laden ridges of the Commonwealth. That's a far cry from what the state flock numbers today, over 100,000 and growing, thanks to the true sportsmen of the country.

With the spring gobbler season set to open, the reports from Pennsylvania Game Commission headquarters state that 12,000-14,000 birds are expected to be harvested during the 18-day season from April 28 through May 19. Winter mortality was, according to Ted Godshall of the PGC, "practically non-existent."

The spring turkey season was designed 17 years ago to make maximum use of a renewable resource and, by the time May rolls around, most turkeys have mated and fulfilled their primary purpose. The gobblers may be harvested in great numbers without jeopardizing future populations.

A newcomer to the sport might be intimidated by the mystery of calling the turkeys. But there's little to mastering the call, which is required by Game Law in spring turkey season. A good box call, such as the ones made by Jim Smith of Summerville, may be mastered in a few hours.

And hunters must avoid any movement while on stand. Camouflage and remaining absolutely motionless are far more important than expert turkey talking. Another secret to success is not calling too much.

Once a hunter has his bird coming in, it's important to remain still and quiet with the shotgun in a ready position. More often than not, these birds will move the last 30 yards without making a sound and the hunter must be ready, any movement will spoil his chances.

Our two-county area has received a trap and transfer stocking in recent years. It was the reason why the fall hunting season was closed in the district, the Game Commission wanted the turkeys

Harvey's Grange Presents Community Citizens Award

GRAYSVILLE — The Rev. Garvin M. Hupp, pastor of the Wind Ridge, Rogersville and Holbrook Christian churches, was awarded the Community Citizen Award by Harvey's Grange 1444 at an open house meeting Wednesday night.

Approximately 75 people attended the meeting to honor Hupp, who has served as pastor of the three churches since 1971.

The award is presented by local granges in recognition of a non-grange person, persons, or group in the community who have contributed to the welfare, happiness and betterment of the community. The recipient of this award is selected by the members of the grange.

Hupp was one of a class of four ministers ordained in August 1953 at the Elm Grove Christian Church, Elm Grove, W.Va., by the Rev. Thomas Ullom and elders of several area churches.

He served as minister of the Christian Church of West Alexander for five years before going to the West Middletown Christian Church for 17 years. He served the Third Street Chapel in Moundsville, W.Va., for over a year prior to the sale of that building to another congregation.

Hupp came to Greene County in 1971. He is a member of the West Greene Ministerium and the Waynesburg Ministerium. He also contributes his time to the Bible Release Program in the Graysville area, the Camp Ministry at Ryerson Station State Park and the Wind Ridge Area Cooperative Vacation Bible School. He is a member of the International and World Christian Endeavor Society, and has traveled with it to the Holy Land and throughout the United States.

Members of each of the three churches Hupp serves spoke about his service to the community, noting that he not only serves as a pastor, but as a Sunday school teacher, an elder, and leader and organizer in special activities of each church, such as youth meetings and revivals. His many visits to the sick were also noted. "He puts legs on his prayers," one woman said of him.

Special music in the Lecturer's Program was given by choirs from the Wind Ridge Christian Church, Rogersville Christian Church and the Holbrook Christian Church.

Danny Morris presented a piano solo with a violin solo by Charles Williamson and a harpsichord solo by Jean Lantz. The members of Harvey's Grange presented a skit, "Why Join the Grange?"

Area Man Sues 2 Insurance Cos.

WAYNESBURG — Alvan D. Allison of Mt. Morris R.D.1 has filed suit in Greene County Court against two Morgantown insurance firms charging they have failed to fully settle his claim.

Named as defendants were Morgantown Hospital Service, Inc., and Medical-Surgical Service, Inc.

Allison was involved in a traffic accident on May 3, 1984, on Interstate 79 and subsequently had medical bills totaling $36,479. According to Allison's complaint, no-fault insurance laws in effect at the time required bills be paid within 30 days or an 18 percent interest rate will be added.

Allison said he submitted the bills in June but did not receive a payment until Sept. 15. He further claims the firms have refused to pay the additional $1,444 in interest and costs.

Police said Charles T. Phillips, 66, of Waynesburg, was traveling south on North Porter Street and Mohammed H. Al-Yami, 26, of Waynesburg, was following on his motorcycle.

When Phillips slowed to make a right turn onto Race Street, the vehicles collided.

First Service Held In East View Church

EAST VIEW — The congregation of the Assembly of God Church, which formerly met at Brave, will hold the first service in its new sanctuary at 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

The new church is located in East View, two miles west of Waynesburg on Route 21.

To celebrate Easter Day, the church choir will present the cantata, "Alive," at 9:30 a.m. under the direction of Richard Headlee with narration by Dale Headlee.

Choir members include Bill Cross, Geraldine Cross, Rick Cross, Shiela DeLaney, Rev. and Mrs. John DeNicola, Mr. and Mrs. Mark DeNicola, Jackie Eddy, Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Headlee, Richard Headlee, Dale Headlee, Melvin Headlee, Patricia Headlee, Donnie Headlee, Jodi Headlee, Sandra Marling, Dawn Rush, Tammy Rush and Mary Martha Stickle.

The evening service will begin at 7 p.m. and will include special music by various members of the congregation and a message by the pastor, John DeNicola.

The church was organized Dec. 9, 1930, under the leadership of Pastor W.C. Long. The first advisory board to serve included Ray Strosnider, Harry Snell, Margaret Eddy, Ray Moore, M.E. Conaway, Jesse Weaver and H.W. Kent.

Former pastors include W.C. Long, John Horn, Janie Renner, P.A. Wells, Charles Parrish, Samuel Freno, Irving Howard, Alvin Bradfield, David Glunt and John DeNicola, who has served since Oct. 1971.

The church began with tent meetings. As the congregation began to grow, it purchased the Maple Grove School in 1931. In 1965, a new addition was added to the building which has served the church to this date.

As the years went by, the nucleus of people who attended the church moved from the Brave area into the Waynesburg area and the need was felt for a church where the majority of the members lived.

In 1980, the congregation purchased eight acres in the East View area and in 1983 signed a contract with Hamilton Church Builders to construct the present facility.

Those serving on the advisory board are Mary Martha Stickle, secretary; Patricia Headlee, treasurer; and Rick Cross, Donald Headlee, Victor Evans, Carl Headlee and Roger Rush.

Bill Cross is Sunday School superintendent; Mr. and Mrs. Roger Rush, youth leaders; Sandra Cole, women ministries; Richard Headlee, choir director; Jodi Headlee, missionary director; Esther DeNicola, pianist; and Patricia Headlee, organist.

Ron and Karen Headlee are in charge of Children's Church.

Mexican Easter Fiesta

A three-week long social studies unit on Mexico culminated with a Mexican style Easter Fiesta for the 125 first graders at the East Franklin Elementary School in Waynesburg. During the study unit, the students in the five first grade classes learned how children in Mexico live, work and play and the general differences in their culture and that of the United States. They also learned several Spanish words. For the Mexican Easter Fiesta, the children all wore colorful paper ponchos which they had made and designed with Mexican symbols. On the opposite page, they can be seen testing their skills in the Mexican hat dance and then concluding the fiesta by breaking traditional Mexican pinatas. The pinatas — one in the traditional shape of a Mexican burro and the other in the general shape of an Easter egg — were filled with small toys, candy and gift certificates.
