the First National Bank of Carmichaels, was pre-sented with a gift by banquet chairperson Sara L. Ruth in recognition of his many years of service to the Chamber and the support given by the bank.

Also honored were Richard L. Baily, who served as first president when the Chamber was organized in 1935, and Charles I. Donley, the oldest member of the Chamber, who served as president in 1936. Stephen McCann, Chamber vice president, served as master of ceremonies for the dinner-

Other past presidents attending were Joyce Peccon, Zigmond Bokat, Louis Pascuzzo, Greg Peccon, John Brodak, Wayne M. Long and Joseph R. Katusa.

The address of welcome was given by President John Brodak, who stressed the need for broader participation by members in chamber activities.

"Basically there are always a few people who are willing to do the job that has to be done," he said. "Business people owe a responsibility to their community which can be expressed through working in the Chamber of Commerce."

Race Wide Open For Chairman Of County Dems

race for chairmanship of the Greene County Democratic party appears to be shaping up for the party's organizational meeting on Saturday,

As many as six people have been named as possible candidates to succeed William C. Groves of Carmichaels, who has held the position for the last five years and is not seeking re-election.

They include Charles A. Barbe of Greensboro R.D.1, a veteran committeeman in Monongahela Township; James Harris of Waynesburg, legislative aide to state Sen. J. Barry Stout; Gregory A. Niverth of Jefferson R.D.1, a former long-time committee member in Morgan Township, and Jack W. Whitlatch, a member of the of supervisors in Richhill Township.

The meeting of the 96 county committee members who were elected in the primary earlier this month will be held in the community building at the Greene County Fairgrounds at 7 p.m.

The election is held on a biennial basis to select a chairman, vice chairman, treasurer and secretary to serve two-year terms. Present of-ficers, in addition to Groves, are Genevieve Morrow of Waynesburg, vice chairman; Mike Cvetan of Crucible reasurer, and Delores Kennedy of Gilmore Township, secretary.

Under terms of party bylaws, the president of the county women's organization is automatically vice chairman. One of the things which will have to be sorted out, Groves said, is that there are now two women's organizations in the county with formation last year of a second group in Carmichaels.

Grove said he is still standing firm on the decision he made several months ago not to seek re-election because he wishes to devote more

The assembly race between H. William DeWeese and Joseph Pawlosky is expected to have an impact on the election since it was won by such an unexpectedly large ma-jority by DeWeese, even though Pawlosky, as a former county com-missioner, had the support of many members of the county committee.

Awards Sewer Contract

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township Sewer Authority Tuesday night awarded a contract for the extension of a sewer line in the Arbor Terrace section of the township.

Bryan Cole of Waynesburg was awarded the contract on the basis of his lowest bid of $6,572. Plans call for extending the six-inch line for 520 feet to several building lots owned by Jane Williams along Old Route 21.

Other bidders were John Higgins, 7,450; Robert Shipman, $8,886 and Randy Main, $11,998. The contract will not be formally approved until it is reviewed by the board of supervisors and an assessment ordinance

In other action, the authority directed its solicitor to write a letter to Russell Cowell expressing the au-thority's intent to extend sewer lines to a point near the Curry Home within two years. Cowell is contructing new homes along the Garards Fort Road. The authority said the extension plans are contingent on "third party" litiga-

Area Jobless Rate Rose

WAYNESBURG - The Pennsylvania Office of Employment Security has released job statistics which indicate that Greene County's un-employment rate increased from 14.7 percent in January to 16.2 percent in February.

The report indicates that 2,200 peo-ple in a labor force of 13,500 were without jobs in February, the latest month for which statistics are available. Of the 11,300 people who were working in the county, 3,800 were in the mining industry, 600 in manufac-turing, 2,200 in federal, state and local government, 1,500 in services, 200 in finance, insurance and real estate, 1,600 in wholesale and retail trade, 100 in contract construction, and 900 in business manager of the East Dunkard Water Association, pre-sented the appeal on behalf of resi-dents of his community.

The association has obtained $475,000 toward a project with an estimated cost of $510,000, which would include replacing of existing water lines, installation of new fire hydrants, and a new new 425,000gallon water storage tank to replace the present 325,000-gallon tank, which is in very poor condition. Bulk of the cost will be met by a

The commissioners said that since last week, when they tabled a bill of $4,930 for March from Farview State Hospital, they had checked with the court and had learned that present law makes counties liable for the payment of care for individuals who are committed to the institutions as a result of criminal charges. The state picks up the bill in non-criminal committments.

Commissioner John Gardner pointed out that the county has been billed a total of $20,000 for care of the two individuals to date this year, of which $9,000 has been paid.

Hospital Receives Bids

WAYNESBURG - Greene County Memorial Hospital has received an apparent low bid of $2,366,000 for construction work involved in a $5.8 million expansion and renovation program at the hospital.

The bid from the McAnallen Corp. Washington, covers all phases of the construction work, which will provide the hospital with 14,000 square feet of new space and 9,000 square feet of Assistant Hospital Administrator

Steven Mariner said five bids ranging to a high of $2,434,000 were received. They have been referred to the firm for 60 days, which will give the hospital time to complete financial arrangements before awarding a contract. Financing will be handled by a Greene County Hospital Authority which will be created through the county commissioners under provisions of the Municipal Authorities Act of 1954. No county funds will be involved.

PP&L Sells Coal To Missouri Firm

Power & Light Co. announced Friday it has signed a letter of intent to sell its wholly owned subsidiary, Pennsyl vania Mines Corp., to Arch Mineral Corp. of St. Louis, Mo.

Under terms of the sale, Arch Mineral will receive a long-term lease on about 160 million tons of coal reserves in Greene County.

The company said the price for the coal mining unit would be slightly above book value, which hasn't been determined. The coal mining unit supplies PP&L with about four million tons of bituminous coal a year.

The agreement also calls for Pennsylvania Power to purchase between four and 4.5 million tons of coal annually from Arch Mineral, most of which would come from Greene

Churches Join In Campaign

WAYNESBURG — Ten churches have registered their Sunday schools for the 1984 six-weeks Enlargement Campaign sponsored by the Greene County Sunday School Association in coopration with the Pennsylvania State Sunday School Association.

This year's overall theme is "Focus on the Bible," a follow-up emphasis of the Year of the Bible in

The theme for Sunday, April 29, is "Bring Your Bible and a Friend." The purpose is to establish a focus on the Bible as the textbook of the Sunday school. The scripture basis is Deuteronomy 31.7-13.

The theme for May 6 will be "Studying the Word of God" to make the student aware that the Bible is a necessary tool for daily living, ac-cording to the association. The scriptural basis is I Timothy 4:11-16.

Matt was one of those individuals who form the backbone of a com-respective programs. Long before little leagues became organized, Matt was always good for a handout to help youngsters in some endeavor.

Matt was always quick with the

Room For New Beginnings In Democrat Organization

When the 96 members of the Greene County Democrat Committee meet Saturday night to select a party chairman, it will be far from business as usual.

The county party organization, which in the past has been plagued by internal strife, is in a state of flux.

The solid victory recorded by H. William DeWeese in defeating Joseph Pawlowsky for the Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives in the 50th District, together with the decision of Party Chairman William C. (Bill) Groves not to run for re-election, has set the stage for major changes in party leadership.

Although the organization made no endorsement in the House race, most of the party leaders and workers, as well as county officials, were solidly in the camp of Pawlosky during the campaign which preceded the April election. There was nothing surprising about that since Pawlosky had just wound up three terms as a county commissioner and had always been active in party leadership.

And yet DeWeese and his campaign team of energetic volunteers, most of them youthful and inexperienced, made a shambles of the election by capturing 72 percent of the Democratic vote in the county. They worked hard, and while the win was not unexpected, the fact that it turned into a rout came as a complete surprise.

Groves, who has served as chairman for five years, announced even before the primary was held that he would be stepping down. There is no clear-cut favorite to succeed him, with as many as six names having been suggested as possibilities, none of whom have previously played prominent rolls in party leadership.

The party has been plagued by growing apathy and lack of direction since the days when the party chairmanship was a position of power in terms of dispensing patronage and jobs. Those days are long gone, but party thinking has not adjusted to the change and the divisiveness which the spoils system engendered have never disappeared. As a result, the party has lost effectiveness and funding has become a major problem.

There is unquestionably a need for new beginnings and new directions. Saturday's chairmanship election should provide the clue on whether it will be forthcoming.

State Program Will Start Soon

WAYNESBURG - Application forms for Pennsylvania's new senior citizen prescription drug co-pay program will be mailed during the next two weeks to some 400,000 senior citizen households in the state, according to Rep. H. William DeWeese of Waynesburg.

The program, known formally as the Pharmaceutical Assistance Contract for the Elderly (PACE), is set to begin operation July 1. It will eventually provide prescription assistance to an estimated 600,000 older adults,

Under the PACE program, Penn-sylvania residents who are 65 or over with incomes of less than $9,000 (single) and $12,000 (couple) will be eligible for prescription assistance funded by the state lottery. Those eligible will be required to pay the first $4 of each prescription for drugs and medicine, with lottery funds paying the rest of the costs.

over who received rent and property tax rebates in 1983, since qualifications for both the rebate and PACE programs are similar. DeWeese said the mailing sbegan April 16 and will be sent at intervals to allow for an orderly flow of completed applications back to the contractor administering the program.

The second phase will begin following the mass mailing. It will involve distribution of forms to Area Agencies on Aging, senior citizen centers and pharmacies. The Department of Aging estimates this phase will be completed by the end of May.

Senior citizens whose completed forms are approved by the contractor will receive written notices stating approval has been made and they will be issued special PACE identification cards during the last week of June. The ID card will resemble a credit card and must be presented to a pharmacist when purchasing medicaing the rest of the costs.

The 400,000 applications will be sent directly to eligible persons 65 and tions under the program.

DeWeese emphasized that the cards will not be valid until July 1.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

Frank Downey.

Editors note: The following Fact and Folklore column first ran in the Republican on April 29, 1965. This particular column, though written 19 years ago, brings into focus a major renovation project nearing completion of a two-block section of Waynesburg's High Street to retain the late 1800s and early 1900s look of many of its buildings.

The old expression that "April Showers Bring May Flowers," isn't — unfortunately — too true in Waynesburg any more.
At least, that is, in the heart of the town where an accelerated rate of urbanization in or on the edges of the "downtown" section is gradually de-stroying the intimate sense of charm and beauty which at one time was its most cherished heritage.

A score or possibly more of once fine lawns and flower gardens have disappeared under bulldozer blades in the face lifting job which some contend is progress and others decry as mere change

Viewpoint is the determining factor with perhaps just enough overlap both ways to make it a matter to be approached with careful thought.

One of the first of such fine green-swards to go was that on the Timothy Tim" Ross property in the East

One of the most recent to disap-pear was that at the home of the late Judge James Inghram, long time judge of the Greene County courts, which was located at High and Morris

For many years it was tended with a kind of loving care by the late Kirby. Tate which was little if anything short of tenderness. Or at least as near to tenderness as a person can get with grass and flowers.

As in the case of everything else which came under the direction of the Judge, the lawn and flower beds were cared for on a definite schedule in accordance with the growing seasons of the various plants, shrubbery, etc.

And the community owes a debt of gratitude to the present owners of the property for recapturing some of its charm with fine plantings of spring bloomming flowers in well planned permanent flower boxes arranged to fit nicely into the decor of the new bank building erected on the site.

Two of the more pretentious lawns fronting on High (Main) Street which have so far continued to fulfill the ancient poetic expression that "a thing of beauty is a joy forever," are those at the Denny home on the west end of the street and the J. Conrad Huffman property a short distance past the borough line on East High

Both are real gems and both were arranged by professional landscape architects who each did masterful fulfillments of their assignments.

With one located at one end of the town's principal street and the other at the other end, they stand out at this season of the year like emerald jewels in a sea of commercial developments. Up in the central portion of the town there is one establishment which during this particular season of the year in the "Old Days" would soon be ready to burst forth in its greatest

The Courting of Marcus Dupree,' by Willie Morris. Doubleday. $15.95.

College football recruiting is a crazy business. For the top players in the country, it can turn into a circus. During 1981-82, the circus was held in Philadelphia, Mississippi, where the main topic of conversation was Marcus Dupree; where would he decide to go to college?

Whillie Morris was serving as writer-in-residence at the University of Mississippi when he started hear ing about Marcus Dupree, and cided there was a book in the making. Morris is a Mississippi native who served as editor of "Harper's" magazine in New York City, wrote several books, and then decided that you can go home again.

In this book, Morris spends as much time coming to terms with his roots as he does writing about football. His theme is neatly stated in the sentence, "The years of young marcus Dupree's lifetime had witnessed a subtle revolution in the Deep South, and in the America of which it

The theme takes 450 pages to dewelop, a subject which covers murder, integration, football, Morris's social life, and his dog. And, of course, marcus Dupree, who remains an enigma. Morris spent a lot of time with Dupree, found him unfailingly polite, careful about what he said, family-oriented, and likeable. The book ends before his defection from Oklahoma to the United States Football League, but you can almost see it coming, in the wavering in-decisions, pride, and will to succeed which afflicted his college recruiting.

During that recruiting, with Morris and his dog staying at a local hotel to watch, we find out about NCAA violations, secret trips, meet super-salesman coaches, follow cars following other cars, and watch pick-up trucks following both.

We follow the Philly Tornadoes as they have a rough year. Dupree breaks Herschel Walker's high school records, and begins to attract crowds wherever he goes. When he ran, "The crowd was seized with that palapable electricity... even the enem partisans seemed to acknowled they were in the presence of one of the great athletes of America."

The high school officials try to protect their most famous student, and almost succeed. When Morris went to the school to introduce himself as a writer, he found, "Principal Gregory was rather wary with me at first. In one of our early conversations I believed I heard the whir of a assumed an air of innocence which acquired from the Methodist

Youth Fellowship." School officials knew that the pressures on such a 17-year-old boy can be unbelievable - from alumni, big-name coaches, national media. Morris says, "Perhaps through Marcus Dupree's struggles and hopes to fulfill his monumental promise, we Americans could understand much in ourselves." Parallel in the book to Dupree's story is the story of the three young Civil Rights workers who were murdered in the same town. It was in 1964, when Duyporee was a month old, that the murders focused national attention on Philadelphia, along with the later convictions of the local sheriff, deputy, and several others for the

The townspeople were understand-ably relieved that this time the national attention came for their star football player, although, Morris says, "The darker past always seemed to exist there silently for them in the shadows."

Lee Looks To Waynesburg

By Tom Rose, O-R Sports Editor

The point guard position has be-come a hallowed tradition at Waynesburg College.

Through the past eight seasons it has been manned by two stellar com-petitors, Rod Wheeler and Ray Natili. In every sense, they were assistant coaches wearing orange and white

But time has pushed their careers out of College Gym and into the record books. With Natili's impending graduation, Waynesburg basketball coach Rudy Marisa realized his pressing need was to find someone to

After narrowing his choices to three colleges, Indiana (Pa.), Edinboro, and Waynesburg, the 5-11 Lee has decided to attend Waynesburg.

And Marisa couldn't be happier.

I think what most attracted me to Kevin is his maturity and excellent attitude," Marisa said in a telephone interview Wednesday night. "He's a good athlete and a good person. "That Kevin's stock shot up so high toward the end of the season stems from the fact that we went to the (WPIAL and PIAA) playoffs," Charleroi head coach Phil Pergola said. "But Kevin was an excellent player in December, he's done some tremendous things for us ever since he was a sophomore. We're not a basketball power year in and year out but when you win 22 games in a row people start noticing. And you can't help but notice Kevin Lee.

"The Frazier game certainly had to be a highlight but he was outstanding in the playoffs against Freedom and Erie Academy. He wanted the basketball and he felt nobody could deny him from what he wanted to do. I really think some people missed the boat on him. He's a good point guard and a good kid.''

Melanie Mills Wed To William Becker

The First Methodist Church of Waynesburg was the setting for the April 21, 1984, wedding of Melanie Mills and William Kurt Becker. The Rev. David Biondi of Pittsburgh heard the double exchange of vows at 3:30 p.m. Tim Howard of Brave was the organist and Joan Rush Waynesburg the pianist. Mrs. Dan Troxell was the soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry R. Mills of Waynesburg R.D.4. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Becker of Grant Park, Ill.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor-length gown of lace over taffeta fashioned with a fitted bodice, Mandarin neckline and long sleeves. The sheer oke was adorned with sequins and the full train gathered into a bustle. A cloche held her long illusion veil which was edged with lace.

She wore diamond earrings, a gift from the bridegroom and a diamond necklace loaned by a friend. All bridal traditions were observed in her attire. She carried a white Bible topped with white lillies and satin and taffeta streamers.

"I have a lot of fond memories of Greene County," he said. "Generally speaking it's been pretty good here. My wife and I have made many good friends."

Deiger paid tribute to the people who have served as his deputies dur-ing the past 10 years, noting that they have been of great assistance in handling an increasing work load.

"When I started here it was a relatively light work load. Over the years, fishing, boating and pollution have all increased and there is plenty to keep you going all year now,"
