Degrees Conferred At 133rd Commencement

By Stan Diamond, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — The first Master of Business Administration degrees were granted by Waynesburg College Sunday during its 133rd commencement exercises. The college began its MBA program in January 1983.

The graduate degrees were awarded to Terry Michael Ferek, who received his B.S. degree from Indian University of Pittsburgh; Jeffrey Lee Neubert, who received his B.S. degree from Bluefield State College; and Robert Mitchell Schubenski, who received his B.A. degree from Washington & Jefferson College.

College President J. Thomas Mills officiated at his first commencement exercises at Waynesburg. He was announced as the new college president during commencement last year. He conferred degrees in course and gave the valedictory to the seniors. A total of 133 students received baccalaureate and associate degrees Sunday.

Commencement speaker was veteran Pittsburgh newscaster and current news anchorman for WTAE-TV Paul Long. His address was on "Television and Technology," but broadcasted a strong message to the graduates, that communications, the ability to make yourself understood in whatever the endeavor, was an overriding factor in making that endeavor successful.

Long received an honorary Doctor of Public Service degree.

The Rev. Robert M. Sheehan, educational consultant for the Washington and Redstone Presbyteries of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) delivered the baccalaureate sermon earlier in the day. He received an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree.

Also honored was Sol Levine, of Fairfax, Va., a chief engineer with the Navy Department, who received an honorary Doctor of Science degree, and Waynesburg Attorney Ewing B. Pollock, president of the college's board of trustees, who received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree. Both earned B.S. degrees from Waynesburg College.

Among the many accomplishments of Levine, a 1938 graduate of the college, was the invention and design of the first electronic depth finder which was later installed on all U.S. Navy ships. He also participated in the design of the USS Nautilus, the world's first nuclear-powered submarine, and also led the research team that designed the rockets used in the Gemini space program. He has also authored four books and earned advanced degrees from two universities.

Pollock has served as president of the college board of trustees for nearly 14 years and was first elected to the board in 1959. He is a 1942 graduate of the college and earned his law degree from the University of Pittsburgh. He is a partner in the law firm of Pollock, Pollock, and Thomas.

Giving the class Valedictory to the College, Lisa Ann Lemley thanked the college for providing her with an excellent education. "I have received an excellent education and learned to live and work with all kinds of people. I stongly believe Waynesburg College is one of a very few where students can get individual attention."

She said the college has provided the graduates with the knowledge, "now we must supply the drive and ambition to climb the rungs of the ladder." But she cautioned her classmates to be attentive to feelings of others and not to step on fingers on their way up.

commencement exercises were held out of doors in front of Miller Hall, the college's administration building.

In his commencement address, Long told the graduating class that there was almost nothing they could not achieve if they really wanted it and were willing to devote all their energy and intelligence to it, but that they would not get there simply by wishing or hoping.

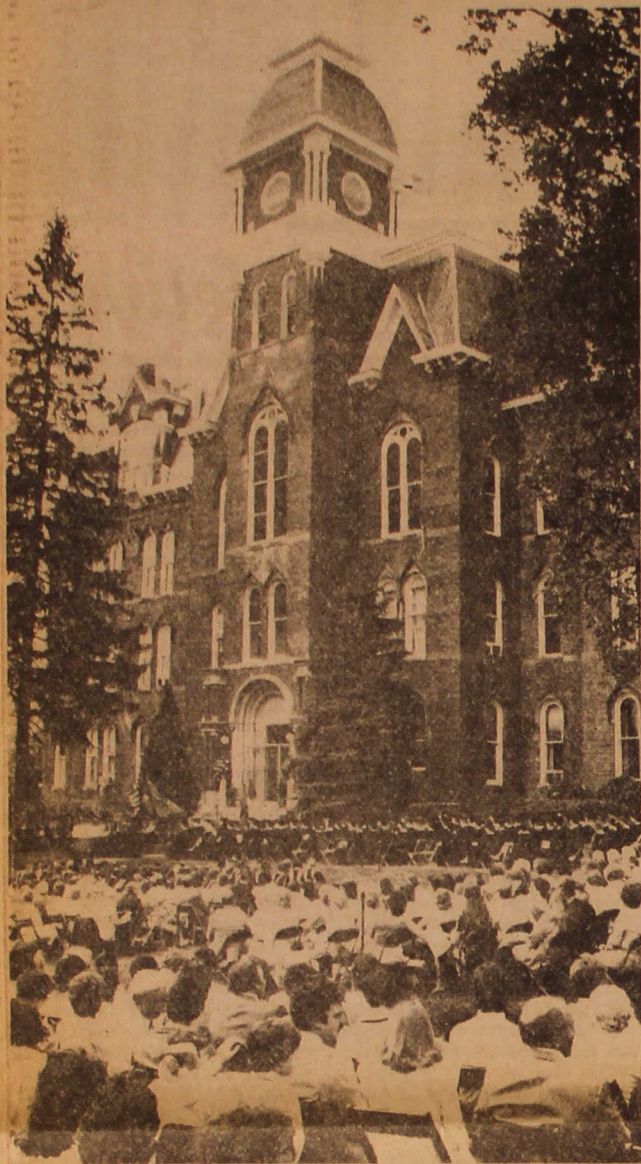

"If you are to succeed, you will continue to learn for the rest of your life," he said. "You will ask questions. You will read books. And you will work. From now on, there will be lots of work."

Long told the Waynesburg graduates that if they have chosen well the life's work well it will not be drudgery, but gratifying and enjoyable.

But whatever their chosen field of work may be, Long said they will find that they will be influenced by a small silicon chip because we have become heirs to an abundance of opportunities swept in on a tide of technological revolution.

He gave a general history of communications, both written and electronic, and at times defending the electronic news media by saying it does not tell you how to think or for whom to vote but what it does do is hold a mirror up to the society for you to help make your decisions.

County Projects Seeking Federal Aid

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County planning commission, at a busy meeting Monday night, reviewed proposed road, water and sewage projects for which federal and state funds are being sought, certifying that none conflict with existing county development plans. The nine projects would cost more than $2.2 million.

Largest of the projects involves renovation and resurfacing of Route 18 between West Waynesburg and Sycamore at an estimated cost of

By Stan Diamond, Staff Writer

JEFFERSON — After knocking off 1.6 mills of a proposed 11.6-mill real estate tax hike, the Jefferson-Morgan School Board Monday night adopted a $4.2 million operating budget for the 1984-85 school year based on a 99-mill real estate levy — an increase of 10 mills.

The board cut $23,457 from the tentative budget to bring the new budget total to $4,242,660. The budget is $152,482 higher than the current year's budget. The budget money trimmed was earmarked for purchase of a computer system for administrative use. The computer will be leased instead.

Other taxes levied in the district are a 1 percent realty transfer tax, $10 occupational privilege tax, 1 percent earned (wage) tax, all shared with three boroughs and two townships, and a $5 per capita tax.

The largest category in the budget is instruction, at $2,284,270, which includes all teacher salaries, all teaching supplies and equipment, pupil personnel, library, legal and health services. At $1,444,324, support services is second for expenditure size. It includes all administrative salaries, administration expenses, transportation and plant operation.

$1,360,000. The Department of Highways had applied to the Federal Transportation Department for a grant of $1,156,000 in anticipation that the work can be done this summer.

The Southwestern Pennsylvania Water Authority has applied for a grant of $75,000 from the Department of Community Affairs (DCA) for a $178,000 project involving laying of an additional 12-inch line across the Monongahela River to provide a backup transmission line from its water treatment plant in Fayette County to insure against interruption of service to its 5,188 customers in Greene County.

Carmichaels Municipal Authority is seeking a $75,000 DCA grant for a $159,000 project to install 3,500 feet of additional line and to install six additional fire hydrants.

The Franklin Township Sewer Authority is seeking a DCA grant of $75,000 for a $155,000 project involving the laying of an additional 3,300 feet of line.

The Franklin Township supervisors have applied for a grant of $52,500 toward a $70,000 job involving installation of 2,200 feet of water line and installation of two fire hydrants in Morrisville.

Morgan Township supervisors have applied for $30,000 toward the estimated $40,000 it would cost to install a six-inch water line and three fire hydrants to serve residents of the Burson Plan.

The Dunkard Valley Joint Municipal Authority is seeking $75,000 of the $103,000 it will cost to upgrade existing water mains and fire hydrants in sections of Greensboro and the Seventh Pool area of Monongahela Township.

The Washington-Greene Community Action Corp. has applied for $52,000 from the U.S. Transportation Department for the purchase of a minibus equipped with facilities for the handicapped to be used in its rural transportation program.

Cumberland Township has applied to the Department of Commerce for half of the $82,060 it will cost to complete installation of a new sewage system at Carmichaels.

In other action, the planning commission gave preliminary approval to a plan by the County Department of Parks and Recreation for construction of an addition to the bathhouse at Central Swimming Pool, Waynesburg.

Allen Hughes, director of the parks department, said the addition would be used as headquarters for the department, which now has its office in the old County Office Building which

Local Man Wins Presidency Of State Elks Organization

PITTSBURGH — John R. Gusic of Waynesburg was installed as president of the 91,000-member Pennsylvania Elks State Association of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks at the 78th annual convention held this past weekend in Monroeville.

Gusic, a member of Lodge 757 in Waynesburg, is the first member of the 82-year-old Waynesburg lodge to attain the state presidency.

Several other Elks from the district were named to state offices including Barry Marshall, of the Charleroi lodge, who was named president of the Southwest District. Albert Protin, also of the Charleroi lodge, was named state tiler; Robert Davis, of the Monongahela lodge, was named state chairman of the Drug Awareness Committee; Joseph Scandale, from the Washington lodge, was named western vice-chairman of the National Foundation and William J. Hamilton of the Monongahela lodge was named state chairman of the Resolutions Committee.

During the four-day convention, contributions of more than $108,000 were made to the Elks National Foundation which is the trust fund of the national organization. Each state shares proportionately to their participation.

Pennsylvania last year received $60,000 toward its major project, the Cerebral Palsy Home Service Program. The program includes 22 mobile units staffed with registered nurses throughout the state. The nurses visit homes of those suffering from developmental problems.

This program is separate from the national and state Cerebral Palsy organization. Although cooperating with these agencies, the Elks program is sponsored solely by membership.

The annual march for this project was held Saturday afternoon and more than $400,000 was contributed by state lodges. Since its inception 21 years ago, the Elks have raised in excess of $4,500,000.

An additional grant of $60,000 was received from the foundation for the state scholarship program.

Torch Bearer Has Local Ties

WAYNESBURG — Greene County didn't have a local runner in the Olympic torch relay when it came through the county Thursday afternoon, but it had the next best thing.

John Balaban, a 23-year-old employee of American Telephone and Telegraph, found lots of aunts, cousins and other relatives among the hundreds of people lining Waynesburg's High Street when he carried the aluminum torch through the borough shortly before 4:30 p.m.

His aunt, Rose Balaban of Waynesburg, ran to the center of the street to give him a long-stemmed rose. Another aunt, Frances Balaban Plava of Adah, and her three-year-old grandson, Michael Patetucci of Perryopolis, were on hand with American flags. Other family members were taking pictures.

Balaban, a member of the A.T.&T. team which forms the nucleus of the cross-country runners carrying the torch to Los Angeles for the opening of the July Olympiad, was given the honor of carrying the flame through Waynesburg because it was for many years the home of his parents, Margaret Mosier Balaban of Harrisburg and the late Thomas Balaban.

The torch cavalcade entered Greene County south of Mt. Morris at 2:30 p.m. and followed Route 19 through Waynesburg to Washington, where members were scheduled to remain overnight.

While the largest crowd of spectators was in Waynesburg, the torch bearers were met by spectators along the entire route.

Balaban's Aunt Rose, widow of Dr. Edward Balaban of Waynesburg, noted that there are a lot of relatives still residing in the area since her husband was one of 13 brothers and sisters and the runner himself is one of a family of 13.

"When we have a family reunion, a lot of people get together," she said.

Family Escapes

CARMICHAELS — A Carmichaels couple, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bursee, and their two young children managed to escape from their home which caught fire Thursday night.

Carmichaels-Cumberland Township volunteer firemen were called to the fire at Route 21 Homes at 7:15 p.m. The mobile home is owned by Route 21 Homes.

The Bursee's were in the back portion of the home and their children, ages two and four, were in front. When the parents came out of the back, they saw the smoke and were fortunate to get the children out but were unable to save any of their possessions.

Other resignations accepted by the board were John E. Titus of Jefferson, longtime guidance counselor, and school physician Dr. Clarence W. Grimes of Rices Landing. He has been school physician for many years. Another resignation accepted was that of school custodian George Monas of Jefferson.

Board member Karen Sabo of Mather was elected as board treasurer. The board accepted her resignation as vice president and elected board member Dr. Stanley Falor of Waynesburg R.D. to the position.

open the new facility, the commission directed that a letter be sent to the developer and his attorney requiring that all conditions be met within 60 days and that the facility not be opened until they have been met.

The letter will advise the builder, Robert Mitchell of Morgan Township, that the commission will initiate legal action if he fails to comply. The facility is located along Route 211, east of the Greene County Country Club.

Mrs. Cole discussed the updating of the 12-year state highway plan for Greene County, noting that emphasis will continue to be placed on replacement and renovation of bridges. She said the commission will continue to press for improvements on Route 19 in Morrisville to reduce traffic congestion and for construction of the above grade crossing over the railroad tracks at the foot of Morgan Street in Waynesburg.

The commission also approved several revisions in plans for the addition to be built at Greene County Memorial Hospital; approved lot split variations for Earl Cook of Aleppo Township and Ray Ward of Jefferson Township; received a report from Assistant Planner Debra Hook that six lot splits were approved in April and 10 to date in May, and gave approval to the Center Highlands development in Center Township, provided that the developer, Kenneth Willison of Waynesburg, obtain the necessary DER and Conservation District approvals for lots to be developed.

College Developing Nursing Laboratory

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College is continuing development of facilities for its new Department of Nursing with construction of an audio-visual center and a nursing skill laboratory in the Paul R. Stewart Science Building.

Dr. Catherine Malloy, director of the nursing program, and Dr. Sue Reitz, associate professor of nursing, said the nursing skills laboratory provides a simulated hospital environment which includes 10 hospital bed units.

McCall was again retained as school district solicitor.

The board accepted a proposal from the Pittsburgh investment firm of Russell, Rae and Zappala as presented by Stephen Drizos and approved a tax anticipation loan resolution to invest $960,000 at the borrowing rate of 8 percent. One percent of the borrowing rate goes to the investment firm. Drizos said the board could expect to sell the notes in July at an interest rate of at least 11 to 11½ percent. He said the district could conservatively expect to make $23,000, but said it probably would be closer to $30,000. This is the third year the district has entered into such an agreement.

Teaching positions approved for posting as open included those for high school English teacher and elementary reading specialist.

Teachers approved for permanent contracts following two years of satisfactory teaching were John Bayer, senior high biology, and Sandra Whetsell, junior-senior high mathematics. Charles Barno was re-elected as athletic director.

The board renewed its cafeteria operation contract with Custom Management Corp. as a no-cost operation to the school district. School lunch prices and a-la-carte items will remain the same for the 1984-85 school year.

The board approved a contract with the University of Pittsburgh and Dr. Charles Gorman as a consultant for the 1984-85 school year. The contract of $3,000 includes visitations, in-service training of the Long Range Planning committee and research evaluations from the university.

"It is my opinion, and that of the board, that the help Dr. Gorman has given to us has been of great value to the Jefferson-Morgan district and is money well spent," district Superintendent Kenneth Macek said.

Macek also informed the board that state-required student testing will be in the areas of math, science and language arts. He said this is part of the Governor's budget proposal and expected there would be required remediation for students who don't meet the standards. The first year testing will be in the spring with testing thereafter being in the fall of the year.

In a related matter, the board received and officially approved the final student performance and credit graduation requirements which include the new Chapter 5 State requirements. Although the new state rules only require 21 credits for graduation, graduation credit requirements in the Jefferson-Morgan district will be 23%, because the board requires courses in communications and problems of democracy. The increased credit requirements will go into effect for freshman students.

demonstration table, sinks, a modular nursing station and a computer terminal. It will be used for lectures and demonstrations.

The audio-visual center will include 10 study units equipped with monophonic headsets and two computer terminals.

Waynesburg College received initial approval earlier this year from the Pennsylvania State Board of Nurse Examiners to offer the four-year degree program in nursing that will lead to a Bachelor of Science in Nursing degree.

Apartment Complex Nears Completion

CARMICHAELS — Construction of a 50-unit apartment building for the elderly in Carmichaels is nearing completion.

Louis DeMola, executive director of the Greene County Housing Authority, said he plans to schedule an open house early next month to permit prospective tenants and others to tour the facility, which is located on old Route 21 just west of Carmichaels. Occupancy will begin shortly thereafter.

Westmoreland Construction Co., South Greensburg, is general contractor for the $1.9 million project.

The building contains 50 one-bedroom apartments, with five of them being designed for the handicapped. The front section of the building is a one-story structure, with a two-story wing at the rear. A community room and other service facilities are included.

"There's still some work to do on the inside and landscaping has been delayed by weather conditions," DeMola said, "but we hope to have the building completed in time to hold the open house during the first week of June. The date will be announced."

Units are available for rent to individuals or couples who are 62 years of age or older. Federal guidelines prescribe annual income limitations of $11,500 for a single person or $13,200 for a couple, but a 10 percent leeway is permitted and there are other factors that could influence eligibility.

"My best advice is that interested persons check with us and we can review their situation and tell them if they are eligible," DeMola said.

The housing executive said that a number of applications have already been received, but that vacancies still exist. Applications will be accepted at the open house. In addition, interested persons can apply by contacting the Greene County Housing Authority office located in the Avalon Court building on East Greene Street, Waynesburg.

Two Face Court After Hearing

WAYNESBURG — A man and woman facing prostitution charges as the result of an alleged sex party at the Twin Angels Tavern near Jefferson were bound over to court Wednesday following a hearing before Magistrate Ruth Hughes.

David S. Kawelkewicz, 34, of Charleroi has been charged with promoting prostitution and Gloria Irwin, 40, of Pittsburgh has been charged with prostitution. Kawelkewicz is free on $5,000 bond and Irwin on $2,500 bond. Their bond was continued.

Trooper Ralph J. Nevala, assigned to the vice squad at the Carnegie Barracks, testified he arrived at the tavern at about 10 p.m. on Feb. 19 and said there were about 100 patrons at the bar.

He told the court that two women, one of them the defendant, engaged in live sex acts with each other and with bar patrons. The officer said Kawelkewicz coordinated the show and handed various stage props to the women while the show was being presented.

During an intermission, Trooper Nevala said he engaged in conversation with Irwin at the bar. "She told me she had to leave because she was offering sex in the women's rest room," Nevala told the court. "When questioned further about the services being offered, Nevala said Irwin told him, 'Go see Dave my manager.'"

According to the trooper, Kawelkewicz said the woman was offering oral sex for $20. Nevala said he observed a line of men give Kawelkewicz money and then proceed to stand in line at the rest room door.

During cross examination by defense attorney Herman Bigi, the officer admitted he never saw Irwin engaged in sex activity. The trooper also stated he was not approached but began the conversation with Kawelkewicz at the bar.

Nevala said he was accompanied by another state police officer but the officer was not called to testify.

Shannopin Buys Pittsburgh Coal

WAYNESBURG — The Shannopin Mining Co. has completed the purchase of a 121 acre tract of Pittsburgh seam coal in Dunkard Township which it hopes will provide access to unmined coal which remains in the former Robena mine.

The company is gambling that it will be able to cut five entries through the tract it has acquired for $15,000 from the Greene County Tax Claim Bureau. The Tax Claim Bureau has held the coal since 1967 for non-payment of taxes.

The coal is known as the Cumpston tract and is located in the Willow Tree area of Dunkard Township. It was once part of the former Maple Creek Coal Co. field.

Owners of the coal stopped paying taxes on it when it became apparent that the coal was laded with major rock faults which prevented economical mining. As a result, it never attracted any bids when it was offered at delinquent tax sales.

Shannopin Mining Co. engineer Harvey Lewis is hoping the company will be able to avoid the faults in driving entries through the tract to the adjoining coal which is at the far end of the Robena field, which it would then lease from Consolidation Coal Co.

The Robena mine was closed earlier this year after it was purchased from U.S. Steel by Consolidation.

If the plan works, Lewis estimates that the additional reserves of coal would extend the life of the Shannopin mine at Bobtown by from eight to 12 years. If it doesn't, the Robena coal will be declared unmineable and will be taken off the tax rolls.

The $15,000 which the Tax Claim Bureau received represents approximately one-fourth of the back taxes which are due on the tract. Proceeds from the sale will be distributed on a pro-rata basis among the county, Southeastern Greene School District and Dunkard Township on the basis of the taxes they are owed. The coal will also be placed back on the tax rolls for 1985.

The county, school district and township all approved the transaction, partially because the plan, if it succeeds, would help protect the jobs of people employed at the Shannopin mine.

Name Coaches

WAYNESBURG — Raymond Natili and Mary Mosley, both experienced coaches and teachers at Immaculate Conception High School in Washington, have been named to head the intercollegiate women's volleyball program at Waynesburg College.

The appointments were announced by Dr. J. Thomas Mills Jr., president of the college. He said that Natili and Mosley will share duties and responsibilities as co-coaches in the women's program.

Rudy Marisa, director of athletics, said Natili and Mosley are "experienced and dedicated coaches who really understand and demands of coaching. We are pleased to be able to add these two very capable persons to our department."

He pointed out that each of the two has won "Coach of the Year" honors recently. Natili was named Washington County Coach of the Year in 1980 and Mosley was girls' basketball coach of the year in 1982.

Skills Tested

FFA members from Waynesburg Central and West Greene high schools learned the proper way to shear sheep at a sheep shearing school sponsored by the Greene County Cooperative Extension Service Friday and Monday. At the turn of the century there were over 200,000 sheep in the county but today there are fewer than 15,000 and, therefore, fewer people who know the art of shearing them.

The 16 boys got the added benefit of learning from a master in the business, Earl Cole of Brave Star Route, who has been raising sheep for 52 years and learned how to shear sheep with hand scissors instead of the electric ones in use today. Today Cole has about 225 sheep and his 13-year-old dog still herds them despite the loss of one of her legs.

Robert Haines of Waynesburg Central, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Haines of Spraggs R.D.1, won the sheep shearing contest held to climax the program by scoring 94.25 out of a possible 100 points. Placing second through fifth were Charles Whipkey, Mike Main, Randy Lemon and Troy McCullough, all students at West Greene High School.

The boys were judged on the amount of time it took, the condition of the sheep and the fleece, and the sheep's general appearance. County Agent William Brown served as instructor for the school.

"The Ultra Secret," by F.W. Witerbotham. Harper & Row.

Since this book was published in 1974, it is old news. But it still has a better story to tell than most people could invent.

Group Captain F.W. Witerbotham, of the Royal Air Force, was in charge of "security and dissemination" of official secrets during World War II. German secrets. We had messages from Hitler to Rommel in Africa, sometimes before they got to Rommel. The British had broken their code.

How did they do that? We can thank the Polish.

In a plot worthy of the masters of spy fiction, a young Polish mechanic started the chain of events. The author says, "in 1938 the man was employed in a factory in Eastern Germany which was making what he rightly judged to be some sort of secret signalling machine. As a Pole, he was not very fond of the Germans anyway, and, being an intelligent observer, he took careful note of the various parts that he and his fellow workmen were making."

When the Germans sent him back to Poland, "He got in touch with our man in Warsaw. The Gestapo in Poland were active, and so he was told to lie low. In due course the young Pole was persuaded to leave Warsaw and was secretly smuggled out under a false passport with the help of the Polish Secret Service." He then started building a wooden mock-up of the secret machine. The British

"backroom boys" quickly identified the thing as "some sort of improved mechanical cypher machine called Enigma."

The British then decided to get themselves one of the machines. Matter-of-factly, the author says, "We knew where the factory was and all about its security methods, and that there were still some Poles working there under German names. However, the Polish Secret Service thought the scheme might stand more chance of success if we gave them the money and they did the job. They knew the terrain and the people much better than we did, so we gladly agreed."

I'd like to read the Polish version of the heist, but this author skips those details. It wasn't long until one of the Enigma machines was in England, and the British were in on the network which "was destined to carry all the secret signal traffic of the German war machine."

The British named these intelligence codes "Ultra," and though the stolen machine Churchill was soon reading Hitler's most secret messages. One British operator had studied all of Hitler's numerous speeches, and was able to recognize any message he sent by its style. They read so many that the author claims that when Rommel left Africa, he felt like he had lost a pen pal.

He also says that the advance knowledge of German troop movements was the only thing that enabled the British army to escape from France in 1940. And that knowing Goering's bombing strategy helped to save the small Royal Air Force from extinction.

This was vital, since, "To those of us who knew the score, the total surrender of British depended on whether the RAF could prevent the Luftwaffe wiping out or grounding our air squadrons."

"Let no one be fooled by the spate of television films and propaganda which has made the war seem like some great triumphant epic," he concludes. "It was, in fact, a very narrow shave, and the reader may like to ponder, while reading this book, whether or not we might have won had we not had Ultra."

Waynesburg Horse Show
Fun For A Good Cause

Spectators who attend the Waynesburg Horse Show this weekend may not realize it but they will be helping a lot of people while they are having a good time.

Since it was organized in the 1950s, the Horseman's Association of Greene County has contributed more than $60,000 to various civic, charitable and fraternal organizations in the county — all of it coming from proceeds of the 28 annual horse shows it has held.

The 1984 show opens this evening at the Greene County Fairgrounds and runs through Monday afternoon. As always, the show is expected to attract entries from throughout the eastern United States. The more than 400 horses will compete in 88 events which are jammed into the six sessions.

Considered a social event as much as a sporting event, the annual show unofficially opens the season for horse lovers in a five-state area. It has established a reputation as one of the finest within a 100-mile radius.

Fair Manager Walter Christopher points out that it gives local horse lovers a chance to see very fine animals. "These are people who bring a $50,000 horse to show. They are highly-groomed animals that receive the attention of a movie star," he said.

Christopher also observes that the horse show has a substantial impact on the community in that horse owners and show fans regularly spend thousands of dollars at motels, restaurants, grocery stores, service stations and other businesses.

The Horseman's Association has some 50 members, but like most organizations only a few of these do most of the work necessary for staging the show. "Unfortunately, a lot of us are getting older and it becomes more difficult every year," he said.

The Waynesburg Horse Show has become a fixture and a tradition, something which a lot of people look forward to with expectation every Memorial Day weekend. The money it generates for charity is a nice bonus, and we hope that some of the younger people will become involved and it will continue for many years to come.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

Editor's Note: The following column was first published in 1979

An anonymous philosopher is credited with the profound statement that "the only thing constant is change," and the longer time goes on the more truth seems to be contained in those half-dozen words.

For instance, take Memorial Day. At one time Memorial Day was considered as safe from change as the eighth grade arithmetic book and all of the rules of addition, multiplication and that scourge called "long division."

But now even the original date of May 30 has been all but forgotten and the day is always observed on the last Monday of May. That was after the public became so mobile by owning their own cars that lawmakers thought it would be nice to give them a chance to enjoy long weekends by rescheduling holidays to fall on Mondays. In Waynesburg and most small towns, the observance of Memorial Day followed a formula as rigidly observed as the date of the holiday itself.

The entire morning was given over to decorating the graves of veterans of all wars and to patriotic speeches paying tribute to their sacrifices, attentively heard by large crowds.

One of the very special extra touches that "Waynesburgers," especially the school kids look forward to on Memorial Day, was an old-time martial band headed by an elderly man named Asa Sellers who walked with a distinct limp but never allowed it to keep him from marching in the parade as long as he could hoof it up Main Street.

It wasn't until he and others in the small group consented that they began riding in a horse-drawn wagon and later, near the end of the band's existence, in a flat-bed truck.

Then they could be seen by all with no cab to muffle their stirring music or the rapt expressions on their faces as they tooted and drummed out the old time martial music of the Civil and Revolutionary Wars.

There was a conventional town band, of course, which gave a concert on the courthouse square after the parade and visitation to the cemeteries.

For the young fry, however, it was the staid tones of the martial band that made Memorial Day one to be remembered. Whether it was the music itself, the detached way in which they played without benefit of any music scores, or the aura of the Revolutionary War they seemed to exude, no one ever knew.

They were a hardy group and still kept going for about a decade after World War I. But gradually they followed the trail of the old soldiers who just gradually faded away.

Once automobiles came within reach of everyone, including the kids, most everyone became mobile on Memorial Day. Also, the double header baseball games played by Wayneburg College on that day faded from the scene as basketball and football replaced it as the major sport.

Now Iliigh (Main) Street is virtually deserted on Memorial Day. But golf courses and swimming pools are jammed for the entire weekend, leaving only the memories of the early day parades, the potato salad for the family picnic suppers in the evening, and the flags that decorated the lawns and houses of almost every place in town.

All of which proves, once again, that the most constant thing of all is that it is an ever-changing world.

Nemacolin Native Held
Prisoner In Belgium

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Thomas Zaubi, 41, formerly of Nemacolin, would rather have joined his classmates at commencement exercises at Waynesburg College this past weekend — it would have been his 20th reunion.

Instead, he is staring at the walls of a prison in Brussels, Belgium, where he has been held since early March. He was arrested by Interpol when he got off the plane at Brussels airport. He was on a business trip for IBM.

He is being held as a fugitive because he faces an 11-year prison sentence in Denmark after being tried in absentia in 1978. He was found guilty of kidnapping his own children.

What started out as a vacation romance between a U.S. Air Force officer and a Danish nurse in 1968 has turned into an international legal battle involving three nations. Although it began with a young couple falling in love on a beach in Spain, there are now senators, congressmen, religious leaders and a Danish businessman of dubious morals involved.

Zaubi could have been enjoying the festivities of a graduation weekend under sunny skies in Waynesburg this past weekend. Instead, he stared at the walls of a prison cell that contains a plastic bucket for a toilet.

He is allowed a three-minute shower once a week. According to a recent letter to his sister, Benita Lawrence of Lorain, Ohio, "It's bread and butter for breakfast, boiled potatoes and thin soup for lunch and bread and stale cheese for supper." He wears rags for clothes.

He was finally granted a hearing earlier this month on Denmark's extradition request. It is now up to the Belgian minister of justice if Zaubi will be turned over to Danish authorities.

Zaubi has plenty of time to reflect on his nine-year legal battle over custody of his two children, Tommy Jr., 14, and Kirstine, 11, following his divorce in 1975.

It all began in the spring of 1968 when Zaubi was stationed with the U.S. Air Force in Spain. He and some friends went to the beach where he met Marianne, a Danish nursing student who was on vacation. They fell in love and were married in May.

Five months later Zaubi was discharged from the Air Force and the young couple came home to Nemacolin to visit Zaubi's parents. Following a short visit, Zaubi and his wife lived for a short time in Denver, Colo., but returned to this area when he obtained a job with McGraw-Edison and she found work in a local hospital.

FIRST CHILD BORN

Their first child, Tommy Jr., was born in 1970, but Marianne was becoming homesick. They returned to Denmark and Zaubi found a job with IBM in Copenhagen.

According to Zaubi, they agreed to stay in Denmark for only a few years until after they had their second child. Marianne was later to dispute this and said they never intended to return to the U.S. Kirstine, their second child, was born in 1973.

A year later, the family returned to the U.S. and lived with his parents for a short time. Zaubi was able to transfer to the IBM office in Cleveland and they moved to Lorain, a few streets away from his sister.

Marianne returned to Denmark presumably to close their apartment and visit her family. However, she initiated arrangements to obtain a divorce and temporary custody of the children.

She returned to the U.S. and one day while her husband was at work, she took the children and fled. According to testimony, Marianne called her aunt who was working in the Danish embassy in Washington, D.C., and an embassy car was dispatched to Lorain.

Zaubi's sister happened to stop at her brother's home to visit that day and when she noticed Marianne and the children were gone, she called her brother at work.

Zaubi learned someone from the Danish Embassy in Washington, D.C., had taken Marianne and the children. Marianne had an aunt working in the embassy at the time.

Zaubi flew to Washington immediately and contacted the Immigration office in an effort to keep his wife and children from leaving the country. It was too late. He went to Denmark and found his family at Marianne's home. He once managed to get close enough to the speak briefly with his son, but Marianne spotted him from a window and within minutes he heard police sirens. "I took off when I saw the machine guns and dogs," he later told a reporter.

In 1975 the Danish courts dissolved his marriage and awarded the mother custody of the children. The court permitted him to visit the children every other Sunday for three hours. It was during one of these visits that his children revealed their grandfather was sexually abusing them.

The alleged abuse charges had a familiar ring to Zaubi. His wife had told him shortly after they were married that her father had raped her when she was 4 and continued to do so until she was 12. As a result, Marianne said she had been under psychiatric care until she was 18.

Zaubi reported the alleged sexual abuse to Danish police but authorities said they could not accept the word of small children. Marianne's father is a well-known importer-exporter and stock broker.

FLEES COUNTRY

Zaubi decided to take things into his own hands. He took both children from their preschool classes in October 1977 and fled to the United States. Danish police filed kidnapping charges and he became a fugitive.

He returned to his parents' home in Nemacolin. His wife began legal proceedings in the Greene County Court to have the children returned to her. She also claimed the children were now naturalized Danish citizens.

Following a lengthy hearing that included testimony about the sexual abuse charges against the children's grandfather, Judge Glenn Toothman awarded custody to Zaubi.

Although the court ruled that Mrs. Zaubi would be allowed visitation during the summer months and Zaubi was to pay air fare and $200 per month for support, Mrs. Zaubi never took advantage of the rights.

During the next two years, Tommy Jr. joined Little League baseball and Kirstine joined the Girl Scouts and took dance lessons. Members of the family were constantly watching and guarding the children during this period.

Marianne returned to the U.S. in 1980 and took her case to the state Superior Court. The high court agreed with Marianne and said the Danish court's decision should be respected.

Zaubi then appealed to the state Supreme Court, but the court was divided 3-to-3, thereby deferring to the lower court's decision.

At this point, Marianne began making arrangements to return the children to Denmark. Zaubi immediately appealed to the Third U.S. District Court of Appeals which ordered Marianne to remain within the confines of western Pennsylvania until the appeal could be argued.

It was too late. Marianne drove the children to Chicago and then flew to Copenhagen by way of Toronto, Canada.

This occurred in November 1980. In the months that followed, Zaubi's father and grandfather died. His mother had to undergo emergency surgery and it wasn't until the spring of 1981 that he resumed his custody battle. He left home and told his sister, "I won't tell you or mom where I'm going for your own good."

A few months later, his sister received word that Zaubi had been successful in getting Tommy Jr., but not Kirstine. Mrs. Lawrence said she began receiving calls from people who said they were inspector so-and-so asking where they could find her brother. Other family members were receiving such phone calls as well.

A year and a half passed and then Mrs. Lawrence received a call from an IBM attorney in Brussels saying Zaubi had been arrested.

Family members have been working day and night in seeking government help. One of the first to enter the case was Congressman Austin J. Murphy who immediately sent a telegram to Belgium officials on behalf of Zaubi. Rep. Murphy followed the telegram with a detailed account of the case and pleaded for the refusal of extradition to Denmark.

Ohio senators have appealed for Zaubi's release and Mrs. Lawrence also enlisted the aid of the most Rev. A. James Quinn, auxiliary bishop of the diocese of Cleveland.

Zaubi appeared before Jean Gol, minister of justice, earlier this month and, according to family members, Zaubi's attorney presented a good case. However, the possibility of extradition rests entirely with the minister of justice. Family members have requested the public react by sending messages to the minister at Place Poelaert No. 3, 1000 Brussels, Belgium.

FINALLY CONTACTED

Members of the family finally managed to get a phone call through to Zaubi last week and talked briefly. It was his first contact with family since his arrest.

Zaubi claims the Danish government is now trying to say he is Danish and government officials are misrepresenting his role in the U.S. Air Force. Zaubi has claimed all along the Danish government has taken an illegal role in the custody fight.

Saying he is a realist and not a fatalist, Zaubi has made arrangements for his last will and testament and for the handling of his personal effects.

Carmichaels
Presents
New Budget

The Carmichaels Area School Board Thursday night presented a $4,298,866 "phantom" budget and last week their board president will resign his job with the government to bring an apparent end to a legal dispute.

Following a brief executive session, the board quickly presented the budget proposal without public comment and then adjourned.

The proposed budget is $509,000 higher than last year but there was no evidence of how the expenses would be met. Citing new accounting procedures, the board said after the meeting it would determine the millage rate at a later date.

With a $3,789,532 budget last year, residents paid 77 mills.

An expenditure sheet was made public, revealing it would cost $2,650,727 for instruction next year. Support services would cost another $384,008, non-institution costs would be $75,989 and debt service, $137,640.

The $5 per capita tax, $10 occupational privilege tax and $5 occupation tax will remain unchanged. The board did not present a data-sheet on expected revenues.

Board President Henry Bacan, a coal mine safety and health inspector, was recently charged with violating the federal Hatch Act which prohibits federal employees from running for public office. He faced sanctions ranging from a 30-day suspension without pay to termination from government service.

In a statement presented to the board prior to the meeting, Bacan said: "For 18 years I have served on this board with only one purpose in mind, and that has been to serve the people of this district in seeing that their children receive a proper education."

"Because of the Hatch Act, I am now going to have to make a decision whether to remain on the board or not. For 18 years, I have been on this board; but for over 40 years I have been working and it seems to me that I have worked as long or longer than most men in my same occupation."

"So I have come to a decision that I should have made for my own benefit some time ago. Effective June 1, 1984, I will retire from my employment and will devote full time to my business ventures."

West Greene's FHA Wins Second Place

ROGERSVILLE — Nabisco Brands, Inc. has selected the Future Homemakers of America at West Greene High School as a national runner-up in the Fleischmann's Yeast "Share the Health" contest.

Class efforts were directed by teacher Jessie Leidecker.

For entry, participants were required to design and implement a community-based project in nutrition education. After determining the nutritional needs of a selected target group, students developed menu plans based on their findings and shared results with members chosen for the study.

In the past, selected community groups have included the elderly, the overweight and persons on special medical diets. The contest was open to junior and senior high school home economics and health related classes throughout the United States.

For their entry, "The Enchanted Forest," the 16 students developed a nutritional awareness program for the educable mentally retarded (EMR) class in their school.

Their project included a puppet show as well as individual lessons, and the content included nutrition, exercise and vegetarianism. They designed one week's menu and had them analyzed by computer.

The students also prepared mini-lessons for the radio and a videotape of the puppet show which was aired on two local television stations.

The winning class will be awarded a check for $300 in scholarship funds and a pizza bash will be arranged for the winners. For her participation, Ms. Leidecker will be awarded a dinner for two.

Rules folders for next year's contest can be obtained by writing to: Nabisco Brands Educational Service, Drawer "A", Madison Square Station, New York, N.Y. 10010.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sanner of Carmichaels. The bridegroom is a son of Mrs. Loretta Grable of Carmichaels and John Audley Grable of Marianna.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor-length gown of white chantilly lace over white satin with a Victorian neckline trimmed in white satin. Her headpiece was a wreath of blue and white apple blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white carnations, blue daisies and baby's breath.

Mrs. Shelley Anderson of Carmichaels attended her sister as matron of honor. Best man was John (Casey)

MRS. JOHN A. GRABLE

Barr, King Married

JEFFERSON — The Jefferson Presbyterian Church was the setting Saturday, May 12, 1984, for the wedding of Kimberlee Dawn Barr and Winson Porter King.

The Rev. Francis Browne officiated the double ring ceremony at 2 p.m., with Blanch Snow serving as organist.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Barr of Mt. Morris Star Route, Waynesburg. The bridegroom is a son of Mrs. Naomi L. King of Waynesburg R.D.1 and the late Dr. Vinton P. King.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a candlelight ivory gown of schiffli embroidered English net with a fitted bodice featuring a high Victorian neckline ending in a deep V-yoke ruffle of Venice lace and long bishop sleeves. The full skirt, enhanced with satin ribbon and Wedgewood lace, flowed into a multi-ruffled chapel train.

Her lace headpiece featured a triple-tiered veil with lace to match her gown. She carried a colonial bouquet of Sonja roses, miniature white carnations and baby's breath with satin streamers.

Bridesmaids were Mary Ione Teagarden and Nora Lynn Teagarden of Waynesburg, cousins of the bride. They wore lilac gowns with matching halos and carried colonial bouquets.

Clifford Walker of Carmichaels served as best man. Ushers were William P. King of Penn Hills and Gegory L. King of Waynesburg, brothers of the bridegroom.

A reception was held at the Waynesburg Moose hall.

The bride is a 1975 graduate of Waynesburg Central High School and a 1979 graduate of Waynesburg College. The bridegroom graduated from Jefferson-Morgan High School in 1975 and from Waynesburg College in 1979.

Following a wedding trip through eastern Pennsylvania, the newlyweds are residing in Waynesburg.

Triple Play Is Team's Specialty

WAYNESBURG — Minor league coach Ron Jesso not only sees double once in a while, he sees triple — but there's a perfectly valid reason.

For the first time in the history of the Little League program in Waynesburg, there are triplets playing. The situation is made more unusual by the fact all three triplets are girls.

Lana, Iona and Tanya Nieves are the 9-year-old daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Morrison of 73 South Cumberland Street, Waynesburg. They attend East Ward Elementary School.

Born in Hawaii, the girls have been residents of Waynesburg since they were one year old.

According to their mother, Rosa, who is employed at Cumberland Mine, the girls are enjoying their first season. League rules say each player on the roster must play at least three innings, therefore each girl is assured of playing time.

Their 11-year-old brother, Peter, is also on the team.

During a league game Monday night, one of the girls stepped into the batter's box and a member of the opposing team yelled, "Hey, that girl already batted once." It was her sister, of course, but the complaint was understandable.

Girl players are not unusual in the Waynesburg minor league with at least two dozen on the rosters of the nine teams. However, the majority of the girls drop out when it's time to advance to the Little League teams.

Lechner Catches On At Lafayette

Dreams die hard in the world of high school and college sports when expectations become unrealistic.

Reality is an ambiguous term when it comes to talent, potential and performance in young athletes and assessment of those variables is very subjective.

Lucky for Carmichaels High School's J.L. Lechner, part of his dream is still possible. In his dream, Lechner envisioned dribbling, shooting and winning for some college basketball team like he has for the Mikes the last four years.

Problem is, local college coaches didn't necessarily think Lechner could be a great college basketball player. Legitimate full scholarship offers "didn't come in like I wanted," Lechner said. "A coach told me if I was faster there would be no problem playing major college basketball. He liked the way I played, though."

But not enough. And, obviously, neither did a lot of other coaches. Lechner averaged 31.3 points for Carmichaels this past season, but at 6-1 he was neither a natural point guard nor a pure shooting guard.

So, despite his prowess in basketball, which allowed him to win the Washington-Greene County scoring race the past two seasons, Lechner won't be playing college basketball.

Instead, he will be playing college football.

That's right, football. Lechner signed with NCAA Division I-AA Lafayette College in early May and is expecting to play wide receiver for the Leopards.

Lechner's 4.7 speed in the 40-yard dash is more than adequate for a receiver and he expects to play his freshman season for Lafayette head coach Bill Russo.
