Future Restaurateurs Apply For Permit

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — A Waynesburg couple applied to the Waynesburg Zoning Hearing Board Monday for permission to establish a restaurant in the Parkinson House located at 61 North Richhill Street, just north of the Waynesburg IGA store.

Bret and Chris Phillips, who own the Lookin' Good shop on South Washington Street, said they are negotiating to purchase the property provided they can obtain the necessary variances to operate the restaurant in what is an R-2 residential zone.

They said they would make no changes in the exterior of the large said they planned to obtain a restaurant liquor license to be able to serve drinks with their meals. They noted there is ample space on the property to provide the required parking spaces.

They presented statements from the owners of adjoining properties which said they had no objection to the proposal.

Since the zoning ordinance does make a restaurant a conditional use in an R-2 zone and since one of the persons who would be an owner would reside on the third floor of the building, the zoning board suggested that they apply for permission to operate a home occupation rather than going Parkinson property.

A hearing on the application for a home occupation will be held at the next board meeting on Sept. 19.

In other action, the board approved continuation of a non-confirming use in a house at 422 North Richhill Street to permit its sale as a two-family dwelling in a single-family R-1 zone, provided that approval can be obtained from the owner of an adjoining hourse.

Waynesburg real estate agent David Arnold said that the property, owned by the Mary Hoge estate, had been set up for two apartments prior to passage of the zoning ordinance in 1969.

Jobless Rate

Action was deferred on a similar request by Arnold for a house at 203 East Greene Street which is owned by Walter Perrin and was formerly occupied by his mother, the late Margaret Pererin. The board will act on the request when a question regarding off-street parking has been resolved.

Zoning Inspector David Gregg reported he had approved installation of a sign at Dave's Auto Body shop at 578 East High Street. The new sign will replace a Honda sign which is now

J-M Gets Ready For School Year

By Stan Diamond, Staff Writer

JEFFERSON — Jefferson-Morgan School Board Monday night cleared up several matters for the start of the 1984-85 school term, which will begin Monday, and filled two staff positions.

Sandra D. Whetsell of Mather was elected to fill the guidance counselor vacancy created by the retirement earlier this year of John Titus. Ms. Whetsell had been a secondary school math teacher in the district for the past two years. Her salary was set at $16,500, the third salary step on the district's contract with its teachers, plus pro-rated salary for 20 additional days for an approximate total salary of $19,000.

The board approved posting the secondary school math teaching position as open.

Following approval of the resignation due to retirement of elementary school teacher William Crable of Mather, the board elected Janet Caputo of Fredericktown to fill the position. Her compensation was set at the base salary of $13,835. Crable had been a teacher in the district for the past 33 years. To ready the district for the new

To ready the district for the new term, the board approved a list of bus drivers, student teacher list as provided by California University of Pennsylvania and a substitute teacher list

A contract to provide transportation for five to nine district students attending the Glad Tidings School, McClellandtown, for the 1984-85 term was approved at a cost of $30 per day for a total of $6,000. Other private schools to be served by the district's regular transportation will be the Greene County Christian School, Carmichaels, where 16 students attend, where four district students attend.

District Superintendent Ken Macek reported that a teacher inservice day will be held Friday, with the first day of classes to be the following Monday. Classes will begin the same time as in previous years, and the first day will be a full school day. A total of 1,293 students are enrolled for the new term, of which 593 are secondary students and 700 are in the elementary grades, which includes 92 kindergarten students.

For the third year the board approved participation in a Boy Scouts of America Career Awareness program for all freshmen at a cost of $2 per pupil. The program provides approximately 30 speakers from different career areas who will speak to the students during six day-long sessions held throughout the school year.

The board again approved complimentary tickets for athletic events to be made available to senior citizens in the district. The tickets are available at the high school office. Athletic ticket prices are $2 for adults and $1 for students if purchased at the gate or 50 cents for students if purchased in advance.

The board passed a motion that bylaws in effect for the school's cheerleading program should be followed in selection of a captain or head cheerleader for the squad. The action came following a complaint that the squad captain for the cheerleaders had been selected by the advisor with no suggestions from squad members. The complaint was that rating sheets for squad captain had not been distributed as in prior years. The sheets allow squad members to voice their opinion on squad captain selection, but are not considered votes for the position. The bylaws state the advisor has final choice for the position.

W. Greene Shapes Up For School Year

GRAYSVILLE — Administration in the West Greene School District reported just about everything is ready for the start of school at a short school board meeting Thursday night.

Superintendent Paul Polink said school will start Monday, Aug. 27, with an in-service day for teachers and staff on Aug. 23. He said particulars about the opening will be in the

LORNA VARNER

Waynesburg Girl Named State 4-H Award Winner

UNIVERSITY PARK - Lorna Varner of Waynesburg R.D.3, who has compiled an outstanding record in 4-H activities, has been named state Clothing Award winner in the 1984 4-H National Awards Program.

As state winner she will be eligible to attend National 4-H Congress in Chicago Nov. 25-29.

Support for the Clothing Award is provided by the Greene County 4-H program, Pennsylvania Friends of 4-H, Coats & Clark Inc. and Viking Sewing Machine Co.

Carroll L. Howes, associate 4-H

youth program diretor at Pennsylvania State University, who announced the award selection, said Miss Varner was judged on the basis of project work, leadership ability and participation in county and state activities. She was selected from among the more than 145,000 youth who annually take part in the Extension Service cational 4-H program.

Miss Varner, a daughter of Ralph and Donna Varner of Waynesburg R.D.3, is a freshman at Lock Haven University. She has been a 4-H member for 11 years.

She has served as president and vice president of the Greene County 4-H club. She also assisted with club activities and events as a teen leader; completed projects in sewing and agriculture; took part in the fashion revue, and participated in the Leadership Congress and Livestock Expo.

She is one of 45 Commonwealth 4-H members selected as state contest winners in various project categories

It isn't a very long sentence. As the judge said: "It will give you time to k....to make some long-overdue decisions about your life."

But there are better times and places to do our thinking.

This young man and his parents realize today why our churches and synagogues place so much emphasis on early and continuing religious education. Learning of God, of his will and his way, guides our thinking and our growing in the right direction.

Worship and religious training should have priority in your family's life

First And Last Crouse Teachers Applaud Restoration

who were key figures in the history of Crouse School in Center Township were on hand Wednesday — one physically and the other in spirit — when the Crouse Schoolhouse Association began the task of restoring the one-room building on Route 18 east of Alene Stockdale of Rogersville, who was the last person to teach at the school before it was closed at the end of the 1959-60 school year, was one of the people who helped with a picnic held on the school grounds Wednes-day evening to mark the start of the restoration project.

Retirement Home in Greensburg. "I'm glad they're going to preserve the building."

The Crouse Schoolhouse Associa-tion, a satellite of the Greene County Historical Society, was formed for the specific purpose of renovating and preserving the building as a memo-rial to the time when dozens of one-room schools dotted the landscape in Greene County.

Association officers are Paul

William Throckmorton, elemen-tary school supervisor of the West Greene District and also an alumnus of Crouse School, said the association is looking for members and also hopes to get contributions to assist with the restoration cost.

"Even though the work will be done by volunteers, there will be expense involved," he said. "While the building is sound structurally, it has stood empty for years and is pretty well vandalized."

The first job being undertaken is replacement of the roof and windows and installation of a secure door to keep intruders out. The association is also looking for a bell to replace the one stolen from the belltower and a pot-bellied stove. Slate chalkboards also are needed to replace the original ones, which thieves stripped from the Throckmorton said desks and some of the other furnishings were removed some time ago to the his-torical society museum, where they have been stored pending completion of the restoration.

Throckmorton explained that the building is still the property of West Greene School District and will be used in part by the district.

We are planning to take groups of grade school students there to give them the experience of the one-room school," he said. "It will give them a feel for the type of education that their grandparents experienced."

Mrs. Stockdale recalls that even as late as 1959 she had four different grades under her at the Crouse School. She taught there from 1949 until the closing in the spring of 1960, and for most of those years had students in all eight grades.

Cooperation Could Ease Developmental Problems

The Greene County Planning Commission is running into problems with administration of the county's site plan review

The ordinance, which is fairly new, requires that the planning commission review plans for commercial developments in the county to make sure that they meet standards for interior roads, parking, highway access, sewage treatment environmental concerns and related matters.

In addition, the review provides a double check to make sure that required permits have been received from appropriate state and local authorities. Construction is not supposed to begin until the review has been completed and the plans have been approved. At its last meeting, however, the planning commission was placed in the position of being asked to review a plan for a post office building at Dry Tavern which is virtually completed. It also reviewed plans for a new bank at Dry Tavern where a groundbreaking program had already been held.

In both cases, the developers were not aware of the county ordinance at the time they began to build, although they had received permits from township officials.

On top of this, the planning commission staff has been made aware of several other commercial developments in the county which are already well underway without benefit of plan review. They will be checked out, but if violations are discovered it will be much more difficult (and probably more expensive) to correct them than it would have been in the planning stage.

The obvious answer to the problem would seem to be better cooperation between local municipalities and the county

The planning commission, with its small staff, has no way of policing the entire county for new developments. But township and borough officials are required to issue permits of various kinds and they are aware of what it going on within their

If local officials would make developers aware of the county regulations a lot of problems could be avoided.

Commissioners To Sell Office Building

Countians To Take Part In Major Cancer Study

WAYNESBURG - During the -first two weeks of September, a group of Greene County residents will call on friends and neighbors to complete the first phase of followup work to Cancer Prevention Study II — a large-scale, long-term research project of the American Cancer Society.

The study, the largest of its kind ever undertaken, will examine the lifestyles of more than 1.2 million Americans to learn how cancer is linked to such personal and environmental factors as nutrition, drugs, occupational exposures, pollution, low-level radiation, low tar and nicotine cigarettes and passive smok-

'Although the scientists are not able to report on definitive findings about cancer development and prevention this early in the study, data from this first followup will allow them to make preliminary analysis about potential cancer risk factors in our lifestyles and environment," said Ann Jacobs, chairman of the Greene County Unit of the Cancer

Information obtained in this followup and subsequent ones will be added to baseline data already col-lected and computerized. It will enable researchers to begin the process of data analysis. Two other followups are scheduled for September 1986 and 1988. At that time, the society might decide to extend the study into the 1990s. Cancer Prevention Study II began in September 1982 when 75,000 "volun-teer researchers" of the society enrolled more than 1.2 million Americans as participants.

In Greene County, 25 volunteers enrolled 404 residents, primarily families and individuals whose whereabouts would be known to them over a long period of time

During next month's followup these same volunteers will check with individuals they enrolled to verify addresses and any name changes They also will report on the deaths of any study participants since the startup. This information will update the CPS II data bank, which stores all the information contained in the questionnaires.

We intend to keep track of all participants during the course of the study," Jacobs said. "Because of the energy and dedication of volunteers involved in the study, and the overall interest in cancer prevention expressed by the participants themselves, our followup goal of 100 per-cent should be easily reached."

By the completion of the third followup, sufficient mortality records will have been accumulated, Jacobs explained. At that time an analysis of suspected cancer risk factors will be made by comparing the number of deaths attributed to various cancers to answers in the questionnaires.

the meantime, preliminary analysis of various topics covered in SPC II questionnaires will be made. Researchers, for instance, will examine current American eating habits, paying special attention to the consumption of those foods thought to lower cancer risk. They also will evaluate the public's use of products such as artificial sweeteners and vita-mins and learn how smoking habits compare among various occupational

The first analysis obtained from Cancer Prevention Study II was a report on changing smoking patterns among Americans. Presented at the Fifth World Congress on Smoking and Health in July 1983, the report documented a switch to filter cigarettes and low-tar bands among smokers.

Cancer Prevention Study II is equal in size, but wider in scope, than the first study which was conducted by the American Cancer Society from 59 to 1965 and then extended to 1972. That study identified many factors related to the development of cancer and other diseases and is best remembered as the study which sup-plied conclusive evidence to link cigarette smoking to lung cancer, heart disease and other circulatory

Thanks to the foresight of a number of community minded indi-viduals, along with the volunteer fire companies at Carmichaels, Nemacolin and Crucible, Greene County has for more than 30 years played host to the Pennsylvania Bituminous Coal Show

It started back in 1953 when miners were being put out of work by mine mechanization as a means of focusing attention on the importance of the industry, and has grown constantly larger ever since. From small beginnings it has become one of the state's major events in a salute to one of Pennsylvania's basic industries.

The growth it has achieved could not have been forseen, especially since it has been done without the help of professional directors or consul-

Instead it has been a do-it-yourself project in which enthusiasm and lots hard work on the part of many individuals has more than made up the deficience of show business expertise which sometimes gets so professional that it hinders rather than halps a promotion of this sort.

It is a pleasant blend of entertaiment and instruction which has en-riched the life not only of the community of Carmichaels itself but the entire area. It has become an integral part of late summer in Greene County. In fact, it has been around long enough now that old-timers are telling younger people about early festival years.

Then as now, the Coal Show focuses attention on Greene County coal miners whose skills over the years have provided fuel for major steel companies and power plants.

Most of all, and above all else, the Coal Show at Carmichaels pays its highest homage to the courageous men and women who left their homelands in all parts of Europe to settle in this southwestern corner of the Keystone state, there to mine coal from its first deep mines.

For it is these men, along with their wives, their children and their children's children, who areally are the coal industry rather than the multi-million dollar machines and the systems by which the industry operates.

It has been their skill and their courage in entering the underground pits which has made the machines and the system function. They have fought the good fight in advancing technical skill, in achieving better underground safety, and in obtaining just wages. just wages.

They came here in search in riches but they, in turn, have enriched their adopted land with their skills, their families, and their day-to-day role in Greene County's part of the great

We've talked about it but have decided to try to get along with the ratio we now have," Santore said. "We think we can stick with the 30 percent ratio and 20 mill tax levy by cutting back out operating costs as

Cumberland Mine Team Wins First Place In Rescue Contest

CARMICHAELS - One of two mine rescue teams representing U.S. Steel's Cumberland Mine in Kirby took first place in the annual Pennsylvania State Mine Rescue Contest held Saturday in Carmichaels as part of first-day activities of the 1984 Penn-sylvania Bituminous Coal Show.

Twenty-one teams from bituminous coal mines throughout the Commonwealth competed in the all-day event sponsored by the Pennsylvania Bituminous Safety Association. It was staged in five mock mine working sections laid out on the Carmichaels Area High School athletic

Competing teams were required to enter a mine where an explosion had occurred to assist surviving miners, if any; establish fresh air flow if necessary, and evaluate conditions inside the mine and record those conditions on a map of the mine. They were judged on both speed and accuracy in dealing with conditions as they found

The Cumberland No. 1 team was charged with just four discount points charged with just four discount points and took first place: Team members were Bob Bohach of Waynesburg, briefing officer; Kenneth Murray of Carmichaels, captain; Gary Klinefelter of Waynesburg, mapman; Rod Muchnok of Scotdale and John Chambers of Carmichaels, gasmen; Wayne Nisely Jr. of Carmichaels, tailman, and Don Laurie of Morgan-town, W.Va., training officer.

Charles O'Dell, representating National Mine Service, presented the team with the first-place trophy, assisted by 1983 Coal Queen Vanessa Davidson of Carmichaels. Each member of the team received a plaque from the United Mine Workers

Second place with six discount points went to the Keystone No. 1 team of the Rochester and Pittsburgh
