Federal Money Offered

WAYNESBURG — Greene County property owners who have old abandoned mine sites on their land may get the opportunity to have the land restored without charge — but only if they act promptly.

Martin A. Niverth Jr., district manager of the Greene County Conservation District, said the federal government recently made additional funds available under the Rural Abandoned Mine Program to reclaim abandoned mine lands which existed prior to 1977, provided they fall into the Priority One classification.

Priority One sites are those which pose a threat to health or safety, or both. Examples of this would be open shafts, burning areas or areas which have steep dropoffs.

Niverth said that Greene County is estimated to contain approximately 1,000 acres of abandoned mine lands, many of which fall into the Priority One category. Two such sites in the county were reclaimed during the past year, but no applications are currently pending from the county.

"Greene County is in real danger of losing out on some free federal money," he said. "Open mine entrances, burning slag piles and high walls exist in many places in the county. If these situations were created before 1977, the landowners could very possibly get them rectified free of charge if they only make an effort to apply through the Rural Abandoned Mine Program."

The corrective program provides 100 percent cost share with money accumulated by the federal government through a tax of 15 cents per ton on deep mined coal and 35 cents per ton on strip coal.

Niverth said the Conservation District has to depend on public support to make the program work as effectively as possible for the county.

"The district is not sufficiently staffed to inventory the entire county effectively," he said. "Landowners know their ground better than we do and are able to supply us with information as to the location of these sites. If they contact us, we can then meet with the landowner to discuss application procedures and get the ball rolling."

"After all, Priority One abandoned mine lands are not only dangerous but they serve no purpose economically. If we can fix them without charge, so much the better for everyone."

Niverth pointed out that the application for funding must come from the property owner, with the Conservation District standing ready to assist in any way possible. He said that property owners with such land are encouraged to call the Conservation District office in Waynesburg at 852-1171, extension 319.

"The recent federal appropriation cannot take care of all the abandoned mine problems that exist in Greene County," he said. "But we should take advantage of every free dollar that is made available to us. If we don't, you better believe that someone else will."

Farmers Sue Contractor Over Pond

WAYNESBURG — Owners of a 325-acre farm in Aleppo Township brought suit in Greene County Court Friday to recover damages for an improperly constructed farm pond.

Dorothy L. Black, Shannon G. Black, Oliver D. Black and Janice Black claim that the pond, which was built in late 1980, does not hold water and that the dam is breaking down because of poor workmanship. They are asking for damages in excess of $10,000 from William S. Hopkins and his company, Hopkins and Sons of Waynesburg R.D.6.

The complaint states the property owners paid $6,800 to have the dam built to provide a water supply for their livestock. It claims the builder failed to follow Soil Conservation Service specifications and also built the dam 20 yards away from the staked-out location, putting it next to a rock layer, with the result that it leaks despite efforts to repair it.

The plaintiffs are seeking to recover the cost of building the dam, plus $400 they said was spent to drain water from a cornfield which was flooded by water from the pond. They also are asking compensation for $3,600 they spent since 1981 to rent pasture for their cattle, an expenditure they state would not have been necessary if the pond had been properly built.

The countryside around Rutan looks dormant these days in anticipation of the coming winter season. The hillsides sport bare trees and the fields where corn once stood tall have been cut until planting time in the spring. Even the South Fork of Ten Mile Creek runs silently.

Members Out Of Work

Construction Local May Leave UMWA

WAYNESBURG — The few members of the United Mine Workers Construction Local 1846 who are still active are currently looking at the possibility of leaving the UMWA.

A few years ago there were two construction locals in Greene County however one has all but disbanded and the other is facing a crisis. Of the 487 members in local 1846, only 70 or so are working. Local 1834 is no longer active.

The mine construction workers joined the United Mine Workers in 1974 and once boasted of more than 25,000 membership. However, the membership has fallen to less than 2,000 in recent months.

Over the years, the construction locals worked under contracts similar to those of deep miners but held separate negotiations with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association (BOCA).

Verdict Upheld

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court has affirmed a jury verdict returned in July which held the C&J Coal Co. liable for the payment of $185,000 to an equipment dealer for the purchase of an International Harvester "payloader" used in strip mining.

The suit was brought against the coal company, owned by Charles Balazick Sr. and Charles Balazick Jr. of Clarksville, by the State Equipment Division of Secorp National, Inc., which claimed the defendants had failed to fully pay for the $370,000 machine.

The defendants contended the equipment was defective in that it had a "bucket wobble."

Following the trial, the defendants filed for a new trial on the grounds that the jury had erred in finding that use of the machine by the defendant constituted acceptance of the equipment.

The court, in dismissing the motion, noted that the jury had specified in its verdict that the machine was not defective and added the finding of continued use of the machine as an explanation of its verdict.

With dismissal of the defendants' motions, the court directed that judgment be entered against the defendants for the amount of the verdict plus interest from the date of the purchase in 1980, bringing the total amount to $227,730.

J-M School Repairs To Raise Tax 8 Mills

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

JEFFERSON — The Jefferson-Morgan school board Monday night, following a short reorganizational meeting, unanimously approved a $3 million renovation of the high school building which will call for a tax increase.

The renovation, which has been discussed for over a year, will cause the current 99-mill school tax to be increased by eight mills for the next 25 years to generate the $1.6 million local share.

State reimbursement will be $1.4 million. The renovation will add another 30 years of use to the school which was first occupied in 1955.

In preparation of the necessary legal proceedings, the board hired the architectural firm of Foreman-Bashford of Zelenople; Russell, Rea & Zappala, Inc., as investment

Board Meets, Reviews Applications

WAYNESBURG — An application from John McNay of Sycamore for permission to use the paved area around the former South Ward School building for the parking of cars was tabled Monday by the Waynesburg Zoning Hearing Board.

McNay said the grounds are being used for parking by the Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA), which has leased a former supermarket building on West High Street for office use by federal mine inspectors. While McNay owns the building, he does not own the adjoining parking lot and must furnish other parking facilities.

The zoning board pointed out that a borough ordinance requires approval by both the borough solicitor and borough council where commercial property does not have integral parking available and secondary parking facilities must be established. They told McNay they would act on his application when the required approval has been obtained.

In a related matter, the board took no action on an application by McNay for a multiple dwelling permit for the South Ward building, which is located on South Morris Street.

McNay said he still has developers who are interested in converting the building into apartments and would need the permit before any negotiations could be finalized.

The board said it could not act on the request until a plan has been submitted setting forth the number of apartments to be developed, and until it has a chance to explore the future status of the building in light of the fact that it has been condemned.

An application from Thomas and Barbara Andrews of Waynesburg R.D.5 to continue a non-conforming use at 554 North Richhill Street was approved. The house has contained three apartments since before the zoning ordinance was enacted in 1969, making granting of the permit to the new owners a matter of routine.

Jack McCracken was granted a permit to install a showroom in the former Henderson garage building behind McCracken's Pharmacy on East High Street. The building is currently being used as a warehouse for the pharmacy. McCracken also said he eventually hopes to install offices in the building.

An application for location of a "Women In Need" office at 230 East High Street was approved.

bankers and Charles Brodbeck of Berkman, Ruslander, Phol, Lieber and Engle as bond counsel.

Plans call for construction to begin by June 1 with the work to be done through the summer of 1985, early fall and then continue during the summer of 1986. It is hoped all the work can be completed within 15 months.

According to Superintendent Kenneth Macek, the renovation calls for major work on the roof, furnaces, classrooms, ceilings, flooring and lighting.

Long-range improvements have been discussed for the past several months with private citizens, students, faculty, board members and administrative staff taking part.

"This is not a sudden decision. We have been studying various plans for over a year," Macek said after the meeting.

This marks the first renovation at the high school, with the exception of a $27,000 roof project about 10 years ago. Board members looked into the possibility of borrowing the necessary money, but found it was much cheaper to approve the state recommendations in order to receive state reimbursement.

During the reorganization, Stanley Fower was once again elected president of the board, marking his 18th straight year as president. Fower is a 30-year veteran of the board.

Clarence Virgin was elected vice president by a 4-3 margin over Dr. Stanley Falor.

The board voted to continue meeting at 7 p.m. on the third Monday of each month in the high school cafeteria.

In other action, the board: Approved the transfer of $10,000 from the general fund to the cafeteria and federal fund account to meet payroll expenses until subsidies are received next year.

Cited elementary school teacher Melissa Gilliland for having been awarded a grant to study elementary science at Penn State University next summer.

Approved ski trips to Hidden Valley on Dec. 14 and Jan. 18 noting students would be missing morning sessions because of in-service days.

County Decides To Let Airport Grant Pass By

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County commissioners have decided to give up a $126,000 grant from the Federal Aviation Administration for a taxiway extension at the county airport because the county can't afford the $100,000 or so it would take to build another block of T-hangars.

The previous board of commissioners applied for and received the grant in 1983 based on a commitment to put up a building containing 10 additional T-hangars. They did so because hangar rentals are a major source of revenue at the airport and because the existing 35 hangars are insufficient to meet the demand for space.

The FFA grant would have provided 90 percent of the cost of extending the taxiways to provide access to the proposed new block of hangars. The state Bureau of Aviation and the county would have each contributed five percent of the cost.

Bids for construction of the taxiways were taken in the fall of 1983. Only one bid was received, and it was rejected because it exceeded the cost estimate. The present board of commissioners, which took office in January of this year, did not advertise for new bids and the grant is due to expire at the end of the year.

Board Chairman L. R. Santore said that Greene County Industrial Developments had explored the possibility that a private investor might want to build the T-hangars but had been unable to come up with a prospect.

"The county just can't afford to spend the $100,000 it would take to build the hangar. We would have been willing to work out an arrangement with a private investor but since one can't be found we'll have to relinquish the grant," he said.

In another matter involving the airport, Santore said the county has received no information on a recent announcement by the Department of Transportation of approval of a Statewide Airport System Plan which includes a proposal to extend the airport runway and major improvements to the administration building.

"We know no more than we read in the newspapers," he said. "Improvements proposed for our airport are apparently based on a needs survey made several years ago and there is no reference to any money being made available."

Local Woman Leaves $50,000 For Cat

WAYNESBURG — Provision for a $50,000 trust fund to provide for care of her cat is included in the will of a Waynesburg woman who died earlier this month.

The provision is part of the will of Norma Jean Blackhurst, who died on Nov. 2 at the age of 61. She was executive director of the Greene County office of the state Public Welfare Department, a position she held since 1978.

Her husband, Donald C. Blackhurst, died in 1979 and her closest relatives were four cousins.

The principal bequest in the will provides that the executor of her estate set up a fund of "at least $50,000" to care for her 13-year-old cat for the rest of its life. It provides that interest from the fund and as much of the principle as necessary be used for that purpose.

The will also provides for bequests of $5,000 each to the First Christian Church of Waynesburg, where Mrs. Blackhurst was a member, and to the Humane Society, as well as three bequests of $2,000 to individuals.

Following the death of the cat, money remaining in the trust fund is to be added to the residual estate, which is to be divided equally between the Christian Church and the Humane Society.

Size of the estate has not been determined.

Local Man Guilty Of Robbery

By Jim Moore, Staff Writer

WAYNESBURG — An armed robber, who the victim claims went into the bathroom and donned a mask after being in the house for several minutes, was found guilty by a Greene County criminal court jury Thursday.

Albert Minor of 1085 East High Street was arrested by borough police on Aug. 9 and charged with taking $22 from retired college professor Lester T. Moston at his 498 Second Avenue home.

Moston, the first of six prosecution witnesses, told the court Minor came to his back door on the evening of July 27 and presented himself as an insurance investigator. Moston's car had been involved in an accident several weeks earlier.

After a few minutes of small talk about the accident, Moston said Minor asked to use his bathroom. When Minor came out of the bathroom, Moston said he was wearing a bandanna around the lower part of his face and was carrying a gun. "He demanded all my money," Moston said.

Moston told the court he grabbed the gunman's wrist and tried to shake the weapon loose but realized he was not strong enough. Moston said he was pushed back onto a bed twice.

Sharon Taylor of Waynesburg, who was watching through a window from a house next door to Moston, told the court she watched Minor acting suspiciously in Moston's driveway and then walk between the houses to the rear of the home.

Miss Taylor said she knew the gunman to see him but did not know his name at the time. She later checked with someone and after learning his name reported the identification to borough police chief Tim Hawfield.

Blanford Fetterman, 23, of Waynesburg was called to the stand and related how he overheard Minor talking about the robbery and how he had used a mask and a gun. Fetterman said he was in a car with Minor and two other individuals at the time.

Also called by the prosecution was Elsie Jenkins of Jefferson who testified she too overheard Minor talking about the robbery several days after it occurred.

Jim Minor, 15, brother of the suspect, was called to the stand by District Attorney Charles Morris and described a BB gun he owned but has not seen lately. Minor described the gun and the cocking motion described in Moston's testimony.

Hawfield related his investigation of the incident from the time he received the initial call on July 27.

Minor took the stand in his own defense and admitted being at the Moston residence on the night in question. However, Minor said he went to the Moston home to borrow a car and after being denied the use of it, left the home without incident.

The defense based its case primarily on Moston's inability to definitely identify Minor as the man who robbed him.

The jury returned the verdict within 40 minutes after getting the case. Judge Glenn Toothman postponed sentencing of the defendant pending the possible filing of post-trial motions.

A major bridge reconstruction project in Rogersville to replace the span that carries Route 21 across Ten Mile Creek is on schedule. The portion of the bridge for the east-bound lane has been completed. Work is now in progress to construct bridge wings and abutments for the bridge deck for the west-bound lane. The project was begun this summer.

'Santa' Opens Shop Here To Help Needy In County

WAYNESBURG — Several Greene County organizations are banding together as "Claus and Company" to provide Christmas toys to families which may not be able to afford the luxury of buying them for their children.

"With the large number of unemployed families and other needy persons in the county, Mr. Claus will try to ease some of the problems by operating a branch of his workshop in the basement of the Old County Office building in Waynesburg," said Barbara Coccari, Catholic Charities counselor who is helping to coordinate the collection and distribution of toys in the county.

The workshop, located in the former Parks and Recreation Department office, will be open from noon to 2 p.m. daily, starting Friday, where donations of both new or used toys will be accepted.

Claus and Company's first order of business will be to repair and clean toys that were salvaged from the Busy Bee fire earlier this year. St. Margaret's Church in Greentree already has called to offer a "load" of toys collected in its parish.

Jim Kirby, president of the local ABATE chapter, said his group will again be involved in collecting toys for Christmas, as it has for the past five years.

"I don't know if we'll have a swap meet like we have in the past, but we will be collecting toys for the program," he said.

The Tri-County Leathernecks have already started to collect toys under their "Toys for Tots" program. Ivan Modrick, president of the association, said the group is working toward a mid-December distribution of toys.

Coccari said she is hoping to set up several points throughout the county where needy families can pick up toys.

"Mr. Modrick has planned to distribute in Waynesburg and Carmichaels and we would like to see a couple of other sites in outlying areas to make it unnecessary for needy families to spend money for gas to get free toys," she said. More information will be available on distribution plans once the toys are all collected, sorted and ready, she said.

Helpers at the workshop are interested in recruiting more volunteers to make it possible to meet the mid-December distribution dates. Any individual from Busy Bee, ABATE or any group which has worked on the toy give-away in the past is welcome to help.

Any individual or group who would like to work on toys, do toy collections or help Claus and Company in any way with the Christmas effort can call 627-9784 or drop in at the workshop between noon and 2 p.m. after it opens on Friday.

House Employee Earns $46,000

DeWeese Wants Probe Of 'Ghost Employee'

HARRISBURG (AP) — A Democratic lawmaker has called for a probe to find out why a House employee who works in the Capitol three days a week gets paid nearly $46,000 a year.

Rep. H. William DeWeese, D-Greene, asked for an investigation concerning Austin Lee, executive director of the chamber's Bipartisan Management Committee. The request was made in a letter to House Speaker K. Leroy Irvis that was released Wednesday.

"I think it is, an abomination for any one person to make well over $45,000 per annum of taxpayer money for three days work and then to race back to his personal law practice in Philadelphia for Thursday and Friday," DeWeese wrote.

The lawmaker said that "if Democrats were behaving like this a few years ago they would have been called ghost employees."

Lee, in a telephone interview, said he earns $45,936 as executive director of the committee, which consists of House legislative leaders. The panel oversees offices of the chief clerk and comptroller in the House, he said.

Lee said he typically is in Harrisburg three days a week but also does work for the House when he is in Philadelphia, where he has an active law practice. On the average, he spends two hours a day when in Philadelphia on legislative matters, he

Pleaders Sentenced

WAYNESBURG — Defendants in two criminal cases were given jail sentences when they entered guilty pleas in Greene County Court Monday.

Darla Cummins, 32, of 74 Naser Avenue, Washington, was sentenced to 11½ to 23 months on 18 separate counts of forgery. She will serve the sentence in the Washington County jail after completing a sentence already imposed by the Washington County Court.

She also was ordered to make restitution for $1,650 in merchandise purchased with the checks from stores in the Waynesburg area. The 18 checks on the bank account of a Washington woman who had died were cashed in a three-day period from March 15-17, 1984.

Thomas Whitmer, 24, of Prosperity was sentenced to serve 6-to-12 months in the Greene County jail and also was fined $100 on a charge of receiving stolen property. Because of his employment he will be permitted to serve the sentence on weekends.

The charge stemmed from sale of a van which had been stolen on July 12 from Paul D. Chafin of Pittsburgh.

A guilty plea also was accepted from Clyde Puckett Sr., 59, of New Freeport R.D.1, who was charged with incest, rape and involuntary deviate sexual intercourse. Sentencing was deferred.

In another criminal court development, a jury was selected for the trial of Louis Clinton Czako, 34, of Waynesburg R.D.4, with the trial being scheduled to begin this (Tuesday) morning.

Czako is charged with aggravated assault for the alleged beating of his 12-year-old son, Steve Czako, on April 12, 1984.

Local Horseman A Winner

WASHINGTON — Dave Palone, 22, of Rices Landing, winner of the John Simpson Sr. Drivers Championship earlier this month, continues his winning ways at The Meadows both as a driver and a trainer.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Palone and a 1980 graduate of Jefferson-Morgan High School, the young horseman has won 75 races as a driver and the horses he has trained have won 41 starts.

On Nov. 2, Palone was one of eight drivers entered in the Drivers Championship. He was elected by the fans to participate in the ninth annual competition.

Palone brought home three winners in the eight-race card and collected 196 points. Drivers collected a certain amount of points for finishing in the top five in each race.

He became the youngest driver to ever win the championship. He will be automatically entered in next year's competition as the defending champion.

Palone first showed horses in local 4-H events at the Greene County Fairgrounds when he was 12 years old. After his father purchased a trotting filly, Palone began training the horse on Saturdays.

He began harness racing at the age of 16 and now appears to have a future in the sport.

He is now training 10 horses at The Meadows and his day begins at about 7 p.m. He is back at the track by 6:30 p.m. to pursue his other career as a driver.

At the beginning of this week, Palone has had 564 starts, winning 75 races. He finished second 76 times and third, 83 times. He is ranked 12th among the many drivers at The Meadows.

As a trainer, Palone horses have gone to the gate 240 times and have finished first on 41 occasions. He also has 38 second places and 43 third place finishes. He ranks eighth on the trainers' board.

Veteran track announcer Roger Huston is a big fan of young Palone and said recently, "From the very first month he started driving here, which was the fall of 1982, I said this young man was going to be good."

"He seems to make all the right moves when he is driving. He's getting catch drives and is winning many of them," Huston added.

"He is moving right up the ladder. I think he is going to be one of the future stars of The Meadows," Huston said.

Edward Chess New President

Carmichaels School Board Reorganizes

CARMICHAELS — Edward Chess was elected president of the Carmichaels Area School Board for a one-year term at its reorganizational meeting Monday night.

His election came on the second vote because on the first ballot Chess and Henry Bacon both received four votes. Board member Robert Hathaway was absent from the meeting.

The board was divided 4-4 and unable to elect a vice president. James Clovis and James Hathaway both received four votes in two ballots, so that election was tabled until the next meeting.

The meeting date was again set for the third Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. John Stets was retained as board solicitor with Milinovich and Co. as district auditor.

Chess then chaired the regular board meeting. After an executive session, during which the board met with Athletic Director John Krajnak and the football coaches, the board voted to begin a football program for the junior high school. The junior high team will include eighth and ninth grade students only and will begin in 1985 as a pilot program to see whether it will be successful.

The board approved putting out the food service contract for bids. Custom Management Corp. now has the contract and business manager Louise Pascuzzo explained that the contract must be bid for next year because the three-year contract with the company has ended.

Chess appointed a negotiating committee with James Clovis as chairman and members Erma Jean Thomas and Gerald Fortney. They will begin to negotiate the district's contracts with the professional and non-professional employees which expire June 30.

The board approved a sabbatical leave for the next academic year for Renee Turner, physical education teacher, for travel and schooling but refused permission for a teacher to attend the International Reading Association Convention in New Orleans at the district's expense. This request was made by Dr. Dolores Zoldos because the teacher had been chosen to conduct a workshop at the convention and Dr. Zoldos said it was a honor for the district.

David Stuvek made a motion to increase the salary of Senior High School Principal William Harr to equal the salary of the next highest paid administrator, said to be $27,500. That motion failed by a vote of 4-2 with two members abstaining.

Projects For Humanity Are Goal Of Local Group

WAYNESBURG — The possibility of initiating Habitat for Humanity projects in Greene County was further explored by 35 people who attended a planning meeting Thursday evening at St. Ann's Church in Waynesburg.

As a result of the meeting, a steering committee was formed with the objective of introducing the idea to county churches early next year.

"We hope to be in from 30 to 35 churches by January," said the Rev. John Dorean, pastor of the Jefferson Baptist Church. Dorean and Charles Baily of Waynesburg are spearheading the Greene County campaign.

Habitat for Humanity, founded 15 years ago at Koinonia Farm in Georgia, has developed low-cost housing projects in 12 underdeveloped countries throughout the world as well as in many parts of the United States.

The group builds or restores houses at low cost by using seed money and volunteer labor, and then sells them at cost to families who could not otherwise aspire to home ownership. Mortgages are offered without interest, with the monthly payments being used to create a revolving fund to build more houses.

The potential buyers are expected to contribute 250 hours of volunteer labor during the house's construction.

Thursday's meeting was held as a follow-up to meetings earlier this month during a visit to the county by Millard Fuller, the Georgian who was co-founder of the worldwide program.

"Love in the Mortar Joints," a slide show telling the Habitat for Humanity story, was shown at Thursday's meeting.

Five of those attending volunteered to meet with ministeriums in the county to show the film to county ministers, since the program depends heavily on support from churches of all denominations.

The Rev. Ron Evans of Ruff Creek will meet with the West Greene Ministerium; Bob Bishop of Waynesburg with the Waynesburg Ministerium; John Murphy of Jefferson with the Southeastern Greene Ministerium; the Rev. Carmen Niesley of Waynesburg with the Carmichaels Ministerium and Cheri Kuharcik of Jefferson with the Jefferson-Mather Ministerium.

The meetings will the min-isteriums will be held with the goal of scheduling exploratory meetings at individual churches.

"We're really excited about the prospects at this point," Dorean said, adding that the steering committee will explore the possibility of obtaining private, church and foundation funding to establish the basis for a revolving fund to finance construction projects in Greene County.

"Because of the press of holiday schedules, we'll probably be making contacts this month and then moving ahead on the program in January," Dorean said.

Hospital Staffers Retire

WAYNESBURG — Four members of the Greene County Memorial Hospital staff who have retired were honored at the hospital's annual pension banquet recently. The four had a combined work record of 95 years and five months of service to the hospital.

Ninety members of the hospital board, administration, staff and previous retirees attended the banquet. Joe McHugh, a professional storyteller and songwriter who recently moved to the Sycamore area, entertained.

Hospital Schedules Screenings

Monongalia General Hospital in Morgantown, W.Va., has scheduled HealthScreen visits at seven area locations next month.

HealthScreen is a series of tests for common health problems, designed to help detect such problems in their early stages. HealthScreen is also helpful in making the public more aware of potential health problems, and offering assistance in developing more healthful lifestyles.

Tests offered include a breathing test, blood pressure check, heart risk evaluation, vision check and assessment of body fat, weight, height and general condition at no charge.

An electrocardiogram will cost $3 and 36 tests from a simple sample of blood for $14. The multiphasic blood test is free to Medicare patients.

HealthScreen tests are administered by health care professionals from Mon General Hospital, including nurses, laboratory and respiratory therapy personnel who work under the direction of HealthScreen adviser Robert Scarr, a Morgantown physician.

No appointment is needed. Screenings have been scheduled at the following locations:

Shannopin Civic Club in Bobtown on Dec. 4 and 5; VFW in Masontown on Dec. 6 and 7; Rices Landing Fire Hall on Dec. 10 and 11; East Franklin Grange Hall on Dec. 12 and 13; Harvey's Grange in Graysville on Dec. 17 and 18, and New Freeport Fire Hall on Dec. 19 and 20.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following Fact and Folklore column was first published in 1968.

A broody, reminiscent sort of mood had fallen over the old Waynesburg and Washington railroad station along with the first snowfall of the 1968-69 season by midday last Sunday.

The light, two-inch covering still possessed most of its initial immaculate whiteness as though making a brave attempt to cover the blackish mixture of earth and cinders which still keep working their way up to the surface near the old freight platform on the west end of the former baggage house.

But it couldn't hide the tree-like bushes which have all but covered the face of the once well-kept ticket office, nor the bits of loose roof covering which flapped in the wind, a broken window here or there and the weeds which long since took possession of the fringes of the venerable structure.

The fact that the snow also signified the rapid approach of the Christmas holidays intensified the poignancy of the broody mood which seemed to envelope any stroller blessed (or cursed depending upon one's viewpoint) with memories of the old railroad's glory days.

"The depot," as the station was also incorrectly called, took on a special atmosphere at Christmas time during the very early 1920's when Waynesburgers of college age started going to out-of-town schools to a greater extent than ever before.

For all except those going to nearby schools such as Washington & Jefferson, Carnegie Tech or the University of Pittsburgh, the Christmas vacation would be their first visit back since they left in September.

And since the "Waynie" was the only transportation in and out of Waynesburg at that time of year, friends as well as family members of returning undergraduates would be at practically every incoming train to greet them.

Including the time just prior to World War I it was the athletes such as Jim Creel on the W&J football team; Paul Ross, a varsity basketball player at Pitt; Jim Farrell, George Black and Jim Pollock, who were prepping at Bellefonte and Kiski academies that attracted the most attention.

By the same token, the younger fry — those attending both the government and private military schools — stirred the imagination with their newly-acquired posture and resplendent dress uniforms.

The equally well-kept station buildings and platform of those days, even in the drab and often slushy winter season, seemed to provide an appropriate showcase for that particular group which from time to time included George Elms, now a retired brigadier general and who was one of the first from this section to attend West Point, followed a few years later there and in his career by Boyce Carroll.

From Annapolis in those days came Charles McCall before later transferring to Pitt and afterward by Lewis Sayers and Arthur Stafford, each of whom also went on to service careers.

Neither that list nor the names to be mentioned from other colleges and universities is intended as a complete one but rather just names which came quickly to mind while strolling along the siding on which they would joyously arrive when they'd "get back home" for Christmas.

The Penn Staters in those and slightly earlier days included Bill Harkins; the two older Sayers brothers, Edwin and Frank and their cousin Jim; the Hawkins brothers, Harold and Jim; Bill Finch, who was one of the five victims in 1925 of the Downey House Fire; the late Alex Purman, and the four Kyle brothers, Dick, Charley, Bill and Emory and Albert Black, who were Greene County's first students to pioneer into New England when they went to Amherst College in Massachusetts.

About the same time Ted Hughes was at the Wharton School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania; John Penn, later a noted securities analyst, was at Columbia; the late Lewis Waddess was a Rensselaer Poly Tech at Troy, N.Y. and a host of others at other schools.

The first Waynesburg coeds were also starting to enroll in out-of-town schools in greater numbers at that time. Among them were Ada Cowan at Carnegie Tech, later one of Pittsburgh's top social workers; Leah Crago at Holton Arms in Washington, D.C., where her father the late Col. Thomas Crago was serving in Congress; Wilma Sayers at Wilson College; Miriam Knox at Vassar; Margaret Sayers and Virginia Debolt at Allegheny and Katherine Norris at Columbia — to name only a few.

Their names though, were just those that rose first from memory's mists as the weary scene of the now-forsaken station, long since bereft of its former glory, stands like a silent sentinel over the scene which time has long since passed by, to return no more.

Management Positions May Be Eliminated

PITTSBURGH — Consolidation of U.S. Steel's Frick and Cumberland mining districts into a new Northern Division mining district could mean the elimination of approximately 25 management and white collar jobs. The Pittsburgh-based corporation has confirmed that the Frick District offices in Uniontown will be closed after the first of the year and that Cumberland District administrative employees will be relocated from the district's present office located at the Cumberland Mine in Kirby.

Approximately 75 persons work at the Frick District office, which has been located at Uniontown for many years. Another 25 work at the Cumberland District headquarters.

A U.S. Steel spokesman said the new Northern Division office will be located at some point centrally located between the Maple Creek Mine in New Eagle, Washington County, and the Cumberland Mine in Kirby. He said the exact location is still under consideration, despite reports being circulated in Uniontown that it will be established at Washington.

Consolidation of the two districts, which was first announced in September, is being made as a money-saving move. The Frick District no longer has any mines in Fayette or Greene Counties, and the Cumberland District is responsible solely for management of the mine at Kirby.

The Mt. Braddock Mine, which was sold in 1983, was the last U.S. Steel mine in Fayette County. The Dilworth Mine at Rices Landing and the Robena Mine near Carmichaels, both of which were sold this year, were the last Frick District mines in Greene County.

The spokesman confirmed the consolidation could result in the loss of some 25 jobs through elimination of duplicated positions.

The Waynesburg College Yellow Jackets opened their 1984-85 basketball season this past Saturday night and defeated the Wheeling College Cardinals. Rudy Marisa's team played to a nearly-full house despite the disappointment of playing on the "old" gym floor instead of the new one which still awaits bleachers.

Local restaurants have been doing a land-office business what with the deer hunting season in full swing. There have been some big bucks reported taken in the West Greene area. A father and two of his sons, each downed a buck on the same day last week.

Borough secretary Dreama Swanson has had a run of bad luck. She wrecked on her car on Route 218 a few weeks ago while en route home. After a month in the shop, her car was finally returned. She moved to town last Saturday and her car was again wrecked, this time by a hit-run driver.

Joe Russo, former restaurant owner and now a tipstaff in the Greene County Court, is going around showing pictures of his granddaughter who recently was featured in a department store catalog modeling clothing. The young lady is the daughter of Joe's daughter Mary. Joe was an interested viewer of the recent television mini-series, "Ellis Island." He came to the U.S. from Italy as a small boy and was processed through Ellis Island.

Bill Hogue, formerly of Waynesburg, and now national sales manager for Lantz, will be taking a bride later this month in Charlotte, N.C. He was employed by Sartton's Printing Co. many years ago before accepting a position with the well-known snack company.

Don't Shoot The Bobcats!

WAYNESBURG — State game protector Steve Kleiner has issued a caution to county residents in light of a recent report that a bobcat, or bobcats, are in the area.

Kleiner said he doubts if there are bobcats in the county but if there are, it is illegal to shoot one since they are protected by law. Shooting one could result in a substantial fine.

Although residents in south Franklin Township, along Route 218, reported last week they have seen and heard the bobcat, Kleiner told the Observer-Reporter Thursday he has never received a confirmed report nor has he personally noticed any signs of a bobcat in Greene County.

RECUPERATING

Earle Headlee, a former Greene County teacher and insurance agent of Greensboro, who now lives in Annadale, Va., is recuperating from surgery. Cards may be sent to him at National Orthopedic Hospital, Anderson Clinic, Room 5307, 2465 Army-Navy Drive, Arlington, Va., 22206.

Habitat For Humanity Program Makes Sense

Members of several churches in Greene County are stirring interest with their idea of initiating Habitat for Humanity projects in the county.

The non-profit Christian ministry is dedicated to helping poor people improve the conditions in which they are forced to live by providing them with decent, low-cost housing.

Financed completely by church and private contributions, the Habitat ministry focuses on building new homes or renovating sub-standard housing for families with limited incomes.

Construction is a cooperative effort involving both volunteer workers and recipients of the houses, who purchase them on a non-profit, no-interest basis. Capital used to build or renovate a house is returned to the fund through the owners' monthly payments, providing money for additional construction.

Habitat for Humanity, which began at Koinonia Farm in rural Georgia 15 years ago, has already been successful in many American communities and in 12 underdeveloped countries throughout the world. It gained national attention in September when former President Jimmy Carter, who is an active member of the organization, joined other volunteers working on a rundown tenement building in lower New York City.

The campaign to bring the program to Greene County is being spearheaded by the Rev. John Dorean, pastor of the Jefferson Baptist Church, and by Charles Baily of Waynesburg. They are enthusiastic about the acceptance they have received to date in their efforts to involve churches of all denominations in local programs.

Other than the opportunity it provides for the practice of Christian principals, one of the obvious advantages of Habitat for Humanity is that it makes ownership of a decent home available to persons who otherwise might be forced to spend their lives in sub-standard housing. And the fact that the purchaser helps with the construction is intended to foster the feeling of pride and dignity which goes with owning a home.

In a time when most people look to government to solve such problems, Habitat for Humanity has a refreshing approach which makes a lot of sense.

Doctor Will Speak On Alcohol Effects

WAYNESBURG — Dr. Patricia K. Eagon, an assistant professor in the Department of Biochemistry at the University of Pittsburgh, will speak today at Waynesburg College.

Dr. Eagon, a native of Waynesburg and a graduate of Waynesburg College, will speak to the American Chemical Society Student Affiliate on "Sex Hormone Binding Proteins in Liver: Effects of Chronic Alcohol Intoxication."

Her talk is set for 11 a.m. in the Stewart Science Building and is open to the campus and community.

Dr. Eagon, who received an award for her alcohol research from the veteran's administration, has worked as a research chemist at the Veteran's Administration Medical Center in Pittsburgh since 1982. She joined the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh's Department of Medicine, Division of Gastroenterology in 1980 as an instructor and was named an assistant professor in 1981.

She has published more than 20 articles in recent years and developed research proposals for more than $500,000.

After earning a bachelor of science degree in chemistry from Waynesburg College, Dr. Eagon earned a master's degree from West Virginia University. She earned her doctoral degree in biochemistry from the University of Pittsburgh, where she also did post-doctoral work in physiology and biochemistry.

Motorcross Lawsuit Is Moved To Greene

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court has been assigned jurisdiction in a lawsuit filed by a motorcyclist who was injured more than two years ago at the High Point Raceway near Mt. Morris.

The lawsuit, asking damages "in excess of $20,000," was originally filed in Allegheny County Court by William Randolph Kress, 21, of Mars, Butler County.

Named as defendants are Davis Coombs of Morgantown, W.Va., trading as the High Point Raceway; the American Motorcyclist Association of Westerville, Ohio; the Mon Valley Competition Riders, Morgantown, W.Va.; Jack A., Robert C. and Evelyn Holbert of Mt. Morris R.D.1, owners of the land on which the raceway is located, and George Quay of Beaver Falls, trading as Keystone Motorcross.

The complaint states that on April 18, 1982, Kress was thrown from his motorcycle and suffered a fractured left ankle while in a practice run preceding a motorcross race. The fracture left him crippled, the complaint states.

The Allegheny County court handed down an order on Nov. 21 transferring the case to Greene County in response to a petition by the defendants that the Allegheny County did not have jurisdiction since none of the participants in the lawsuit resided in that county.

Library System Adds Films To Collection

WAYNESBURG — Operation Outreach, the audio-visual department of the Greene County Library System, will conclude its fall program of free noontime film showings on Monday, Dec. 3.

The concluding film, to be presented at 12:15 p.m. at the Operation Outreach office at 54 Church Street, Waynesburg, will be "The Living Jungle." It studies the intricate relationships between plants and animals in a tropical rain forest.

Outreach Librarian Sue Turner also announced that four new filmstrips with cassettes have been purchased. They are Frank Lloyd Wright's "Fallingwater," for adults, and three filmstrips for primary and intermediate children — "Thidwick the Big-Hearted Moose," "The Nightgown of the Sullen Moon," and "A Medieval Feast."

Other recent purchases include eight listening cassettes, three volumes of poems and tales by Edgar Allan Poe, two volumes of stories of Sherlock Holmes, "A Child's Garden of Verses" by Robert Louis Stevenson, "The Littlest Angel" and "Bells of Christmas" by Charles Tazewell, and "Peter and the Wolf" and "Tubby the Tuba" narrated by Carol Channing.

These items may be borrowed with a valid library card from the Greene County Library System.

Also available to library card holders are Polaroid cameras which can be borrowed for use during the holiday season. The borrower must provide the film.

Conklin To Ask For Continuance

WAYNESBURG — Michael Conklin, 24, of Waynesburg is expected to appear before an Allegheny County judge Tuesday to formally request a continuance in his trial for kidnaping and criminal conspiracy.

Conklin, who along with Dr. Grover Phillippi, is accused of abducting a Mt. Lebanon stockbroker last December, will be represented by Waynesburg attorney John Stets.

Phillippi was granted a continuance last week after being hospitalized in a Baltimore, Md., hospital. Conklin has been offered a plea bargain to turn state's evidence in the case against Phillippi.

West Penn Seeks Rate Hike

West Penn Power Co. filed Friday proposed base rates with the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission which would increase the overall cost of electric service by about 15 percent, effective Jan. 29.

If the PUC elects to suspend the rate request for the full statutory period, the new rates would not go into effect until Sept. 1.

According to a West Penn spokesman, the last rate increase was in 1982.

For the average residential customer who does not heat electrically, bills would increase about 17.2 cents per day, or slightly more than $5 per month. For those customers who heat electrically, bills would go up about 41.3 cents per day, or about $13 per month.

The new rates would provide West Penn an additional $95,824,000. Said West Penn President Franklin L. Morgal, "The overall kilowatt hour cost of electric service to West Penn Power residential customers is about 4.4 percent lower this October than it was two years ago because of changes in the company's Energy Cost Rate. Our customers now pay the lowest rates for electric service among the major electric utilities in Pennsylvania and the northeastern United States."

Morgal said the rate request became necessary because of general cost increases and investments in electric service facilities needed to meet the demands of West Penn customers for electricity.

"For example," he said, "our participation in the Bath County (Va.) pumped storage project will not only provide energy to meet peak customer demand but will also provide other benefits to our customers at a cost substantially less than other types of power generation."

Jackets Roll Past Wheeling...

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

WAYNESBURG — It was little surprise to Rudy Marisa and his Waynesburg College basketball team Saturday night that the visiting Wheeling Cardinals provided a frustrating and intense season opener.

What did surprise the 16th-year head coach, however, was the rather impressive fashion in which his team took control of the game from a team that prides itself on controlling tempo and games.

Waynesburg, after a lethargic first half, cruised past Wheeling, 65-49, at College Gym, and for an opener the Yellow Jackets did much to dispel the pre-season worries of losing three starters from last season.

"I would like to believe that the final score is a good indication," Marisa said, reserving accolades for future performances. "I'm not sure if tonight's game was a true indication. It helps to get off with a win but it doesn't tell us anything."

It wasn't bad, though. In fact, it was vintage Waynesburg.

The Yellow Jackets played a close first half against Wheeling (2-3) before taking control of the game. Wheeling's slow-down offense turned the first 20 minutes into a passing drill.

The slow-down started with 4:40 remaining in the half and the Jackets leading 17-14. They had built the lead on the strength of team scoring.

Senior Paul Stanley drilled Waynesburg's first two points with an 18-foot jumper before freshman point guard Kevin Lee scored on a fast break. Sophomore Harold Hamlin, who finished with a game-high 17 points, gave Waynesburg an 11-4 lead on a slam dunk.

Minutes later Wheeling point guard Tom Conroy, who scored 19 points against Waynesburg last season, got his second foul and Cardinal head coach Jim O'Brien told his team to go into a delay.

"We had no choice," said O'Brien. "With Tim having the two fouls he was on the bench and we had to slow the game down. We wanted to make the game shorter."

It worked. Leading 17-14 when Wheeling started the stall, Waynesburg moved from guard to forward this season.

The Jackets then pulled away when Hamlin scored seven straight points for his team and Stanley, who finished with 13, followed with three more for a 49-35 lead. Wheeling, meanwhile, shot poorly and was outrebounded, 23-14, by Waynesburg, which shot 61 percent from the field.

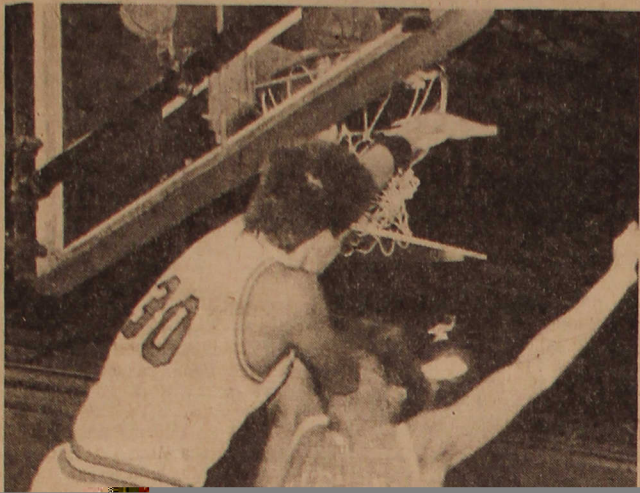

"I thought we certainly didn't shoot the ball very well," O'Brien said. "But it was a combination of things. We didn't take good shots or patient shots. It was those two things."

"And when you start with a couple of bad shots your confidence goes. We were shooting about 49 percent after four games."

Freshman Chris Greene gave Waynesburg a lift late in the game, scoring eight of his 10 points in the last 13 minutes, while Lee, attempting to replace the graduated Ray Natili, made few mistakes and only a couple turnovers.

"At times Kevin could have scored but chose to give up the ball," Marisa said. "Sometimes he overpasses the ball instead of scoring himself. While that could be a problem, it is refreshing to think of him as a team player."

"Chris has had no formal background, so he's a jewel in the rough. I think he'll make a contribution."
