Firm Eyeing Old County Building

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — A development company from the Allentown area has obtained an option to purchase the Old County Office Building here with the intention of converting it into an apartment building for the elderly and the handicapped.

At their meeting Thursday, the Greene County commissioners executed an option agreement to sell the six-story brick building for $100,000 to the Sassafras Corp., which is part of the Kenneth Grosse Development Group of Souderton.

The company has agreed to pay $5,000 for the option, which is subject to execution by no later than Sept. 30, 1985. The commissioners said the $100,000 purchase price exceeds the building's appraised value, which established the minimum amount the county could accept for the property.

Shelter Associates Inc., also part of the Grosse company, has already filed an application with the Farmers Home Administration for a $757,008 loan at 1 percent interest to cover 95 percent of the cost of purchasing and renovating the property.

Karl Gabler, president of Shelter Associates, said that obtaining FHA financing is essential if the project is to be carried out.

"A Farmers Home representative has already examined the building and found it to be eligible and generally acceptable," he said. "We are about 90 percent through the preliminary process and will file a pre-application for the loan by the end

Former County Man, 91 Gets Quintuple Bypass

PITTSBURGH — A 91-year-old former Waynesburg resident, described by his family as "very alert" and "unusually strong" appeared to be doing well Friday, a day after becoming one of the oldest patients in the country to undergo quintuple bypass surgery.

Physicians for Worthy R. Scott, who now resides with his daughter in Pittsburgh, said it would have been "somewhat prejudicial" to deny him the operation simply because of his age.

"It (age) certainly was a factor. But we felt ... to withhold surgery just because he was chronologically 91 years of age would be somewhat prejudicial to him since his other organs were normal and he was an alert man prior to his hospitalization," Dr. Ross DiMarco said.

DiMarco performed the four-hour operation Thursday evening at Pittsburgh's Mercy Hospital.

There is an attitude among some "that at a certain age, one should be ready to die gracefully and make room for the next generation," said Joyce Bermel, managing editor of The Hastings Center Report in Hastings On Hudson, N.Y. The research center focuses on ethical, moral and social issues primarily involving medicine.

Age alone, however, should not be a factor in deciding whether to perform surgery, Ms. Bermel said.

"You never know if someone at the age of 50 is going to drop dead after one year," she said. "A man of 91 can be living a life that is very valuable to him, to his family."

Scott, a retired accountant with a history of heart trouble, had been suffering from coronary insufficiency, a blockage of coronary arteries which was depriving the heart muscle of blood, according to DiMarco.

In Scott's case, five arteries were reconstructed. He was expected to remain in the hospital for at least two weeks.

"He still remains quite guarded, of course. But I would say he is progressing as we'd expect someone of that age who's had that degree of surgery," DiMarco said.

About 500 heart operations are performed at Mercy each year, of which 10 percent involve five or more bypasses, the doctor said.

Scott is the oldest patient ever to undergo heart surgery at Mercy, he said.

"We proved that age alone is not a valid reason to rule out good surgical management," said Dr. Ronald Pellegrini, the hospital's chief of thoracic and cardiovascular surgery. "It is significant that we can fix up old people regardless of their age."

Doctors and relatives agreed on the operation because Scott was in otherwise good health and led an active life.

"He understood the risks. Basically, the risks of not having the surgery would probably mean he would go on and have a heart attack. It was our feeling the risk of heart attack far outweighed the risks of surgery," DiMarco said.

"We did some long and hard thinking," said Scott's daughter, Janet Lively, 63. "His alternative was that he was going to have a heart attack. In that case, he could end up being an invalid. If you know my father, he doesn't want to live that way."

Scott, a widower with eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, moved from Waynesburg last year to reside in Pittsburgh with his daughter and her husband, John Lively, after he suffered his first heart attack in May 1983.

"He's a very unusually strong man," Mrs. Lively said. "It took a lot of courage to do what he did."

Scott, who worked for many years at the former Burns' Appliance Store in Waynesburg and later at the appliance store operated by John Gardner. He is one of the oldest alumni of Waynesburg College, having graduated in 1916. While he was born on Muddy Creek, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Columbus Scott, he resided most of his life in Waynesburg. He has one son, Blair Scott of Baldwinsville, N.Y.

Court Orders Fuller Hearing

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Pennsylvania Superior Court has directed the Greene County Court to hold an evidentiary hearing to determine if the jury which convicted a Waynesburg Borough police officer of involuntary manslaughter improperly had knowledge of the officer's involvement in a prior police brutality case.

The ruling was handed down Friday on the appeal of Michael J. Fuller, 27, Waynesburg, who was convicted on March 3, 1982, in connection with the accidental shooting of Celia McGilton of Waynesburg while he and another patrolman were responding to a "man with a gun" call involving the victim's husband, Paul A. McGilton.

During the trial, the officers testified that Fuller fired two shots when McGilton came to the door of his apartment with a shotgun in his hand. One of the shots went through a wall, struck and killed Mrs. McGilton, who was out of sight.

Fuller, who is no longer on the police force, was sentenced on Aug. 21, 1982, to pay fine of $1,500 and was placed on probation for six to 12 months.

The only part of the appeal which the Superior Court has agreed to consider is the argument that at least some members of the jury could have been biased against Fuller because they were aware that he was one of the defendants in a prior case in which civil damages were awarded to a man who brought suit for police brutality and malicious prosecution.

"Appellant (Fuller) alleged and offered to prove through testimony of a jury that the jury at least had knowledge, and possibly considered, the fact that appellant had been involved in a prior police brutality case," the Superior Court opinion states. "This was despite the fact that the court excused all prospective jurors who admitted to such knowledge on voir dire. No evidentiary hearing was ever held.

"As a rule, a juror may not impeach his or her own verdict after the jury has been discharged. The exception to this rule, however, permits discharged jurors to testify as to the existence of outside influences during their deliberation. Thus the appellant should be afforded a hearing at which he may present evidence of extraneous influences that might have affected the jury during their deliberation."

The Superior Court retained jurisdiction of the appeal, with the assumption that it will hand down a decision after it has been furnished with results of the evidentiary hearing.

Justice Joseph Del Sole filed a dissenting opinion in which he made the point that mere belief that the jury may have had knowledge of the prior case is insufficient to warrant an evidentiary hearing — the same point which was made by the Greene County Court when it refused to grant Fuller a new trial.

"Merely alleging the consideration of an outside matter which may have influenced the jury's decision is not sufficient to warrant an evidentiary hearing," Del Sole said. "There are no affidavits from jurors; there is nothing in the record to support the charges."

Waynesburg Drug Case

Lawyer Is Held For Trial

WAYNESBURG — A voluntary statement that Waynesburg attorney Robert D. Berryman gave to borough police five months before his arrest was used by the state Thursday to convince District Magistrate John Watson of Waynesburg to hold Berryman for trial on 15 counts of possession and use of cocaine.

Detective David Clark said Berryman made the statement on Feb. 21, 1984, when he was brought in for questioning on the basis of information provided by Stuart Summersgill of Waynesburg, who triggered investigation of the alleged drug ring "after his vehicle was burned over a cocaine deal."

In the statement, which was read into the record at the hearing over the objections of defense counsel Leonard Sharon, Berryman admitted to using cocaine on a number of occasions between Jan. 1, 1983, and Feb. 3, 1984.

Sharon objected to the fact that the information filed against his client listed no dates for the alleged offenses, and argued that an unsupported statement required corroboration from other witnesses to be used against a defendant.

In Berryman's case, the only corroboration came from William Henderson of Sycamore R.D.1, who stated that he had used cocaine with Berryman on one occasion. Henderson also testified that on Feb. 3 he was at John Balsamo's pizza parlor in Waynesburg when Balsamo took Berryman and another man to his office upstairs. He said he later asked Balsamo what was going on and Balsamo put a finger to his nostril and sniffed, which indicated to Henderson that cocaine was being snorted.

Sharon argued that each of the 15 charges constitutes a separate crime, and that the statement could not be entered in evidence unless the remaining 13 counts were substantiated.

But Watson upheld the position of Assistant Attorney General Gary Mogil, who contended that if reliability can be shown on one or two counts the confession can be used to establish the additional crimes.

In his statement, Berryman, who served as attorney for the pizza parlor, told police that he was furnished with cocaine without charge on a number of occasions by Balsamo. When asked by Clark why he was given the cocaine, Berryman responded: "John is not happy unless he is giving you something."

Henderson, who is a principal witness for the Commonwealth, conceded under cross examination that he agreed to testify under a plea agreement which provides that he will get a two-to-six year sentence in return for his cooperation.

The hearing Thursday involved the charges on which Berryman was first arrested on July 20. He was later charged with corrupt organization and criminal conspiracy and has already been held for court on those charges.

They stemmed from Henderson's testimony that Berryman loaned Balsamo $1,500 for a cocaine purchase which was made in Brooklyn, N.Y., early in February of this year. He said he overheard Balsamo and Berryman discussing the matter on Feb. 3, and that Berryman volunteered to loan Balsamo the money when the latter said he was short of money to provide the $8,000 needed to purchase four ounces of the drug.

No Tax Hike Planned By Carmichaels

CARMICHAELS — No tax increase was called for in the tentative budget approved Monday evening by Carmichaels Borough Council.

Borough property taxes will remain at 14 mills, with one mill for fire protection. One mill produces revenue of $1,647.

The borough also shares a 1 percent earned income tax with the Carmichaels Area School District and is expected to produce $15,000, which is down $5,000 from the 1984 budget. Council President Betty Morris said the new figure was based on receipts from 1984 and reflects high unemployment in the borough.

The borough also received $6,000 in state highway aid and $7,437 in federal revenue sharing funds.

Total expenditures at $82,067, while income is projected at $76,709. Council members present denied there would be a deficit, stating that the apparent shortfall would be made up if necessary by use of funds in the money market account amounting to $23,407, which is included in the budget under capital reserve.

The major expenditure is for police protection, which is budgeted at $31,832. Street maintenance is pegged at $18,095 and administration at $15,070.

Con Artist Sought

WAYNESBURG — State police are looking for a quick change artist who "flim-flammed" a clerk out of $50 at the Trapuzzano Pizzeria and Restaurant in the Waynesburg Plaza shopping center in Morrisville.

Police said the man was a black male, about 30 years of age. The incident happened at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Money Arrives For Food Bank

WAYNESBURG — A January food distribution to the unemployed and others in emergency situations was assured Monday when the Greene County Food Bank received its overdue allocation of $41,600.

"This is the check we should have received in September," Food Bank Coordinator Barbara Cocciari said. "Now we'll be able to pay the $7,500 indebtedness we incurred in November and December and will be in good shape for January."

State Treasurer R. Budd Dwyer said funds for the emergency food assistance program comes from $8 million appropriated by the Pennsylvania Legislature to alleviate hardships brought about by job layoffs. It funds the Food for the Unemployed and the Crisis Intervention programs operated by community emergency food programs.

Cocciari said that current allocation will fund the program through June.

Two Drug Suspects Face Additional Charges Here

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Two of the suspects in Waynesburg's ongoing drug case were bound over to court on additional charges following a hearing Wednesday before Magistrate John Watson of Waynesburg.

John Giovanni Balsamo, 33, and David E. Smitley, 35, both of Waynesburg, were held on charges of corrupt organizations (racketeering) on the strength of testimony presented by William R. Henderson, 41, of Sycamore R.D.1 concerning trips made to Michigan, Canonsburg and Brooklyn, N.Y. to purchase marijuana and cocaine, most of which was later resold in Waynesburg.

Most of the emphasis at the hearing was on trips to Brooklyn in August, September and November of 1983 and February of 1984, during which a total of 19 ounces of cocaine was purchased at $2,000 an ounce. Henderson said he, Balsamo and Smitley made three of the trips.

He testified that money for the purchases were provided by Balsamo. Henderson's role was to evaluate the cocaine, which he found to be 90 percent pure; to cut it by as much as 50 percent with the addition of another powder; to package for resale in smaller amounts; and to do most of the selling.

He estimated that with the cutting and resale at the same rate of $2,000 an ounce, the operation netted about $100,000, even though he and Balsamo used part of the cocaine.

At first, he said, he took the drugs to his house to cut and package, but later took them to the pizza shop which Balsamo operated on High Street. "Different people would come in and we would sell it to them," he said.

The witness also said he made two trips to Jackson, Mich., where he had formerly lived, to purchase marijuana. He also said he and Smitley made another trip to Michigan after he was called by Waynesburg Attorney Robert Berryman. "He told us he had been questioned by the police and advised us to get out of town," Henderson said.

He also said that Berryman furnished $1,500 for the last purchase of cocaine made in Brooklyn, and that the dealer there advanced $1,000 in credit which was paid in March 1984. In support of the contention, the prosecution produced a certified check for $1,000 made out to a Joe Passamonte.

Henderson, who was arrested for possession of cocaine on one of the trips to Michigan, subsequently pleaded guilty to the charge and was serving a 90-day jail sentence when Waynesburg police filed charges against him on July 23, 1984.

Defense attorneys waived testimony by Lt. David Clark, of the borough police department, and by Mike Conklin, 24, of Waynesburg, who, like Henderson, has been testifying for the commonwealth. They did so after Deputy Attorney General Gary Mogil, who is special prosecutor in the drug cases, attested that their testimony would be repetitive of what they gave at prior hearings, as was much of Henderson's testimony.

Introduced into evidence by the commonwealth were the cashier's check to Passamonte, excerpts from Berryman's and Balsamo's bank accounts and telephone call records between Waynesburg and Jackson, Mich.

Balsamo is being held in the Greene County Jail in lieu of $370,000 charges on multiple charges which were filed previously. Smitley has been released under $80,000 bond.

Judge Rules Fence Must Remain Down

WAYNESBURG — Greene County Court ruled Friday that a fence which had been erected across the driveway to a home in the Sycamore area must remain down until a legal dispute over ownership of the property which the driveway crosses is settled.

Following a brief hearing, Judge Glenn Toothman ordered continuation of a preliminary injunction issued on Wednesday which forbids Robert A. Brown of Sycamore R.D.1 from barring access over the road to a house owned by Monongahela Railroad Company, which the railroad rents to Alan R. and Jessie Morris.

Brown, who erected the 350-foot-long fence along Route 18 as a line fence, contends he owns the property and offered to produce a survey to prove his contention. His attorney said he has been attempting to negotiate with the railroad since August 1983 and has obtained no response.

He also said that the Morris family has been using another road to gain access to their house for the past 15 months with no problems and that there was no reason for the railroad to tear down the fence.

He also pointed out that if access is given, only a 20-foot section of the fence needs to be removed, not the entire fence.

The attorney for the railroad argued that the alternate road is through a field and has become virtually impassable because of mud, to the point where an oil delivery service has refused to cross it to deliver heating oil to the Morris family. He also said the Browns had smeared grease on the fence to prevent children from the Morris house from climbing it to get to a school bus stop.

The railroad contends that the strip of land on which the fence is erected, which abuts its property, is not owned by Mr. and Mrs. Brown, but is part of the highway right of way.

The court declined to hear testimony or arguments on the merits of the ownership dispute at this time, but indicated that a complete hearing would be scheduled at a later date.

One Last Hurrah

Waynesburg Yellow Jackets Will Play Their Final Game In College Gym

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

They are referred to as pits, holes and band-boxes. Actually, in the game of basketball, the proper term is court. The generic, brightly-lit, all-purpose facilities are not included here. This spot is reserved for places like Pauley Pavilion, Rupp Arena and College Gym.

College Gym? Yes, College Gym in Waynesburg. Ask a District 18 coach if the place is hard to win in and he'll swear the place is haunted. Ask another and he'll call it a beehive.

Whatever the case, unless UCLA or Kentucky roll into town, opposing teams usually leave Waynesburg's College Gym with bruises.

And quite often, during Yellow Jacket head coach Rudy Marisa's 16 years, with a loss.

Tonight, when Waynesburg hosts rival California University in the storied brick building, it will be for the last time. According to Marisa and Waynesburg's sports information director Ed Marotta, this is it.

A new gym, built adjacent to the existing College Gym, is completed and bleachers are being installed. The new gym should be ready when Waynesburg resumes its schedule at home Jan. 10 against Geneva College.

"This probably will be the last game there," said Marotta, "assuming that as long as the new facility is open, we will play in it. All indications are that we will in January. This should be the last regularly-scheduled intercollegiate game in the old gym."

And so, an era ends. After so much success, after so many intense, close and crowd-pleasing games in College Gym, tonight's game will be the last.

Marisa, caught up in the emotion of preparing for California, had trouble being sentimental about the place. Smiling, and loosening up a bit as memories flooded back, he finally broke down.

"Yeah," Marisa sighed, "I have spent a lot of hours over the years in the place. I would expect I'll always have a special feeling about what I've done there. It's where I've spent my career. This is where I've done my work, earned a living for my family and where many young men have earned a chance to become better people in life... and play basketball. That part of it is special."

Adding to the mystique of gym is Marisa's profound success. Not only was his team winning, it was championship caliber. The Jackets won so much, in fact, they made two trips to the NIAA national tournament in Kansas City, Mo.

"Obviously winning the two district titles in '81 and '84 rank up there pretty high in my thoughts," Marisa said. "But I've had so many individual memories and games where we were underdogs that it's hard to single out particular games."

Marisa can remember, however, when he started to make things rock in College Gym. It was around 1973.

"It started when Kevin Bealko and Jim Keller came in as freshmen," he said. "Their clean-cut image, personalities and outstanding basketball ability was obvious their first year. It was several games into their freshman season when we won over some good opponents that people realized we had a good team."

And thus the Greene County love affair with Waynesburg basketball at College Gym began.

"The beginnings of the gym were humble," said Harry Anderson, a 1939 graduate of Waynesburg College. "Students did two house-to-house canvasses to get (financial) support for the project. It went very well. I remember one guy, a baker in town, giving me $10 and that was big money. I asked him, 'Are you sure you to give that much?' He insisted."

Originally intended to be a community gymnasium, the cornerstone was laid in 1935 with the WPA (Works Project Administration) doing much of the work.

The backers couldn't raise the Celebrations like this, when Waynesburg defeated Westminster for the District 18 championship last March, have been common in the old College Gym.

needed money to complete the gym, so the college, then under president Paul Stewart, took it over.

According to Anderson, a retired postmaster, the gym was first used around 1940 for intercollegiate athletics. Before that Waynesburg played games in the nearby National Guard Armory.

The U.S. Army Air Forces 8th Training Unit, then stationed on the college campus, used the gym in 1943-44 for training purposes. Two years later, just after the reign of legendary football and basketball coach Frank Wolf, a men's dormitory was opened in the building and since then it has been used busily by the college.

Ironically, the old and new gyms were designed to hold a pool in the basement. Neither has.

Major renovations on the gym, according to Marotta, included a new wood floor in 1968, new lights in 1969 and a general overhaul, including new locker rooms, in 1982. A smaller gym, on the Franklin St. side, was built by money raised by the college's student senate.

"The new gym will be an improvement," Anderson said. "It will be a nice facility. People liked the old place because it was small and you were close to the action. It just wasn't big enough for the big events. And lately Waynesburg has had some big events in basketball."

The new gym, which has a synthetic floor, will seat approximately 1,400.

The gym wasn't always a place to socialize and watch exciting basketball. From 1928 to 1951, through six head coaches, the basketball program was successful but took a back seat to King Wrestling.

High school wrestling in Greene County is revered, and so was the college's successful wrestling program. And because of that closeness, Marisa and his team aren't the only ones who will miss the old gym.

"Hey, that place gave some people fits," said California head coach Tim Loomis, whose team has battled the Yellow Jackets many times there. "It's small, hot and loud. Fortunately, our kids seem to handle that atmosphere well. We play in some big places that are just as loud but it probably does intimidate some teams and some kids. It's like a band-box."

"We've played in places worse," Marisa said. "Up at Behrend... my seniors last year said they were glad it was the last time they had to go there. There are many places hard to win in. But I've always said it comes down to talent, coaching and playing hard. If you do those things the place doesn't make any difference."

"I do agree that teams get intimidated by crowds. My own team has. But not all the time. You become oblivious to the place you play in. There isn't a whole lot of nostalgia. You have to approach it as another game."

"The new gym... we'll be in it probably in January," he said. "It was built because the students need less conflict for use of the floor. We have varsity sports and intramurals. We have two floors now instead of one," Marisa added.

You have to wonder, though, if the new floor will be as homey as the old.

"I don't think the floor ever won a game for us," Marisa said. "Certainly you get used to shooting in a place and the noise, but it doesn't make that much difference. We're just going to go out tonight and play well enough to win."

And in the old College Gym, that wouldn't surprise anyone.

And because of that closeness, Marisa and his team aren't the only ones who will miss the old gym.

"I always said they would get good crowds someday," said Bob Wendel, a 1976 graduate of Waynesburg and a statistician for Marisa. "It started picking up in the old gym when I was there, then they went to the playoffs the year after I left."

"When I left, they were doing well. I said to Rudy one day that 'maybe someday they'll build a gym for you.' Well, they've got it."

Wendel, now an ordained minister, says Marisa deserves much of the credit for Waynesburg's success.

"He was so dedicated," said Wendel, who even wrote game stories for the college newspaper. "It took awhile because that area is known for wrestling. He got some good players in there and it took off."

"I'm glad they finally got the new facility. They're keeping up with the Joneses. The old place had a great atmosphere but a new gym is impressive. It helps the publicity, recruiting and generates a positive attitude among the students. It also helps bring the college and community together. And God, they're close already."

The town and the college certainly are close. That's one fact Marisa relishes.

Possible Buyer For Building

Gabler said his company feels the building is an "excellent structure which is ideally located" for use as an apartment building for the elderly. Renovation is expected to provide from 26 to 28 efficiency and one-bedroom apartments.

The commissioners paid tribute to Louis DeMola, executive director of the Greene County Housing Authority, for the role he played in locating the buyer and acting as an agent for the county in arranging for the sale.

Gabler said a new company, County Towers Associates, will be formed by Grosse to handle the Waynesburg project. He also said the county housing authority will be appointed to manage the apartment after it is built.

"Our investigation indicates the housing authority has done an excellent job in Greene County and we are pleased it is willing to accept management responsibilities," he said. County Tower Apartments has been selected as the name of the new building. His company hopes to be in a position to begin renovation of the building by early fall of next year.

Gabler said the Kenneth Grosse Development Group is a limited-profit company which already has between 800 and 1,000 units in Pennsylvania, most of them in the southeastern part of the state.

"Most of our projects are small ones of between 30 and 40 units," he said.

DeMola, who attended Thursday's meeting, said the apartments would be rented on the basis of 30 percent of gross income.

In other business, the commissioners agreed to consider a request from the Cumberland Township Parks and Recreation Authority for surfacing of the entrance road and driveway in Wana-B Park at Carmichaels, where the Eastern Greene County swimming pool is located.

Paul Blasinsky, a member of the authority, said the Cumberland Township supervisors have agreed to apply tar and chips and to absorb half of the estimated cost of $5,000 to $7,000.

Blasinsky said the U.S. Army Reserve engineering unit that has been assisting with the development of park facilities has completed its work, so heavy equipment will no longer be using the road.

"The road and park are very dusty and in bad condition," he said, adding that the dust has presented a big maintenance problem at the pool. He also said the authority now has facilities worth $150,000 in the six-acre park, all of them installed without outside financial assistance.

"We've come a long way, but it's still just a beginning," he said.

Zigmund Bokot, another authority member, asked the commissioners for assistance in solving a problem created by connecting the swimming pool backwater system into a three-inch perforated sump pump line in the park, a situation which creates a large marshy area when the pool water is discharged into the line.

The commissioners agreed to have the county Department of Parks and Recreation investigate the situation and make a recommendation.

Byron A. Hughes of Graysville was re-appointed to the Greene County Planning Commission. Two vacancies on the commission — one created by the resignation of Terry Grimes of Waynesburg and the other by a decision by H. B. Arrison of Mt. Morris to decline re-appointment — will be filled within the next few weeks.

Stephen McCann of Carmichaels was re-appointed to the housing authority for an additional five-year term.

The commissioners executed an agreement with the Pennsylvania Association of County Commissioners covering administration of the county workman's compensation program. While the rate will increase from 1 percent to 1.25 percent, the commissioners said it is still far below the state administered rate of 5 percent.

A three-year contract was executed with Infocon Corp. of Ebensburg for computer services covering the assessment department and voter registration department. The Tax Claim Bureau will be added to the contract.

College Newspaper Celebrates Sixtieth Year Of Publishing

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg College student newspaper, "The Yellow Jacket," celebrates 60 years of publishing this week with a special anniversary edition.

The Dec. 12 issue of the paper is a composite of news stories, features, sports and special columns from former "Yellow Jacket" editors over the past 60 years.

The 60th anniversary edition is being distributed to college students this week.

Mark Lawrence, the current editor of the paper, said the 6,500 press run of the paper is the largest amount of "Yellow Jacket's" ever printed.

Many of the additional copies will be mailed to alumni and used for recruiting purposes by the college Admissions Office.

Work on the 60th anniversary edition began last year. Staff members spent time researching articles from previous issues of "The Yellow Jacket" and former editors were contacted and asked to submit columns on college life when they attended Waynesburg.

The student newspaper began in 1891 as the monthly "Waynesburg College Crayon" and later was named the "Collegian." But in December 1924, the editors renamed the paper "The Yellow Jacket" to reflect the college's mascot and gradually the paper went from publishing quarterly to weekly.

Today "The Yellow Jacket" remains a weekly newspaper with about 30 students as regular staff members. Costs for publishing "The Yellow Jacket" come from student activity, fees and local advertising. A publications board oversees selection of the editor and policies, but the paper has remained an independent student activity since its beginning.

Dr. William Sipple, chairman of the English Department, is the current advisor.

Lawrence said a limited number of copies of the special edition are still available on a first-come, first-served basis. The newspaper office is located on the third floor of the Buhl Humanities Building.

Dr. William Sipple, left, Mark Lawrence, and Donna Helms, a reporter for "The Yellow Jacket," look over the 60th anniversary edition.

Council Meets To Help The Area Jobless

WAYNESBURG — Members of the Advisory Council to the Greene County Assistance Centers for the Unemployed met recently in Waynesburg to discuss ways to generate more community involvement in aiding the county's unemployed.

The council represents a cross-section of Greene County residents who are concerned about the problems faced by the jobless. Its members are Margaret Antonelli, Richard Black, Anne Bargerstock, Naomi Rush, Eleanor Musick and Wendy Saul.

They work with people who staff the Assistance for the Unemployed established in 1982 as a joint effort by the boards of commissioners in Greene and Washington counties. Since then, thousands of unemployed have contacted the centers to seek assistance with problems relating to lack of job.

The centers, in addition to making counseling available, provide information on employment referral, financial assistance, housing problems, medical care, child care, job retraining, drug and alcohol services, legal matters, budget planning, food banks and clothing assistance.

Those seeking assistance should contact an assistance center for information and referral. Once this is initiated, the unemployed person is directed to the appropriate department or agency for service.

There are 17 assistance centers in Greene and Washington counties, each of them staffed by professionally trained personnel from various health service agencies.

In Greene County, the assistance centers are located in the Carmichaels Clinic of Centerville Clinics, Inc., 966-5081; Wayne Township Community Center in Brave, 627-9784; Southeastern Greene Community Health Center, Greensboro, 943-3308; Bobtown Health Center, 839-7420, and the Greene County Office Building at Waynesburg, 852-2893.

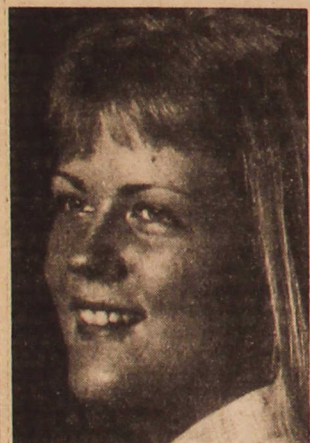

Jobless persons seeking assistance can call the center nearest them or the central administrative office at Washington, 222-8650.

Car Overtakes

A Graysville woman escaped serious injury Wednesday afternoon when her car overturned on Route 21, five miles east of Graysville.

State police said Maryann Williams was treated by a private physician for minor contusions and abrasions received in the accident which happened at 3:40 p.m. Investigating officers said she lost control of the car after rounding a slight curve in the highway. Police said the car began to fishtail and the right rear of the vehicle struck five guardrails before overturning.

Volunteer firefighters from both Graysville and Wind Ridge were called to the accident scene.

IN PILOT PROJECT — A Greene County woman was part of the first international transmission in the history of language instruction. Robin A. Matteucci, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Renardo A. Matteucci of Rices Landing R.D.1, participated in the experimental project conducted recently at Dickinson College in Carlisle, where she is a junior. She was one of 27 Dickinson students enrolled in intermediate-level German language classes who had an hour-long conversation in German with staff members at the National Maritime Museum in Bremerhaven, West Germany, by means of an international satellite transmission that traveled approximately 200,000 miles through space. The satellite broadcast, the first of its kind, was part of a pilot project developed by the National Committee for Internationalizing Education through Satellites, based at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. The project is designed to give students an opportunity to converse with native speakers of the language they are studying, as well as to experience other cultures while still in this country.

LETTERBOX

Scholarship Fund Established

On Oct. 6, Chuck Williams, Waynesburg College Class of 1956, attended homecoming activities. This was the usual custom for Chuck and several of his friends.

As you know, old friendships have a unique flavor and Chuck brought out the best of that flavor as he greeted us. To know him had always been a personally rewarding experience and again his smile and genuine appreciation of other people was making this day something special.

On Oct. 7, news of Chuck's death in a tragic auto accident was announced. His family, friends and associates found it hard to believe that we had lost such a significant person in our lives so abruptly.

We talked of Chuck at the funeral and of the effect he had on other people. It became apparent that he was someone very special. We began to realize that he had left all of us an abundant legacy of fine and pleasant memories, exceptional in both number and quality. His legacy had been built on a unique ability to care for others, apparently without exception, and his great capacity to enjoy life to the utmost by sharing his happiness without reservation. He didn't preach "loving others," he simply lived it so very effectively.

We are taking steps to have those characteristics remembered and perpetuated by establishing the "Chuck Williams Memorial Scholarship Fund."

Because of Chuck's love for Waynesburg College and his success in the athletic programs, the scholarships will be related to those programs at the school for a qualified student.

We are asking you to join us in funding this special memorial scholarship fund established to honor and preserve the memory of Chuck (Monk) Williams.

Please address your correspondence and contribution to: Chuck Williams Memorial Scholarship Fund, Endowment, Waynesburg College, Waynesburg, 15370.

Thank you for caring too.

Planners Okay Lot Variances

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Planning Commission approved lot split variances on two properties at its meeting Monday evening.

The commission approved the sale by Virginia Usnick of 36 acres of land in Morris Township to William Staun, with the variance being required because it was the second sale of land from the Usnick tract within one year. County Planner Valerie Cole said Staun is buying the land to expand his present 95-acre tract for agricultural purposes and does not plan residential development.

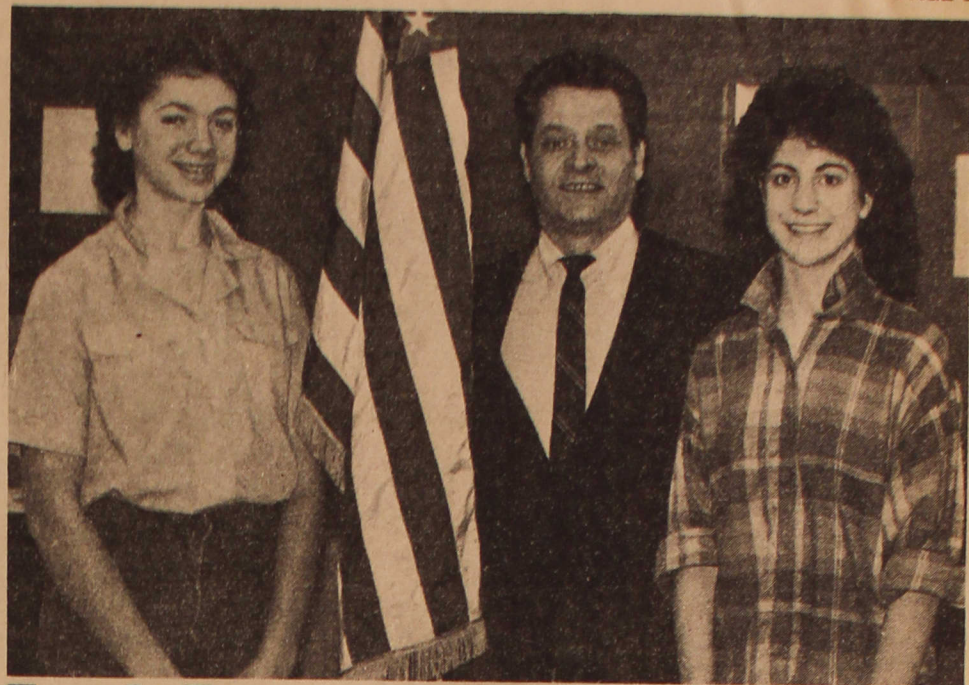

In Cumberland Township, Edward Boord was granted a variance to sell 15 acres of land to Frank and Mary Polander, who are buying the tract to add to their property, and 1.8 acres to Kenneth Boord, again with no new residential development being contemplated.

Acting as clearinghouse agency for the county, the commission approved plans by Leeland Development Co. of Dilliner to upgrade and expand its coal loading facility along the Monongahela River at Dilliner.

The DER announced last week that the company has been awarded a $500,000 low interest loan to cover the cost of constructing a concrete pad for the storage of coal, for a coal conveyor and for the purchase of two high lifts.

Final approval was given to construction of an automobile agency building in Mt. Morris by the Mt. Morris Motor Co., trading as Mountaineer Honda. The approval was given in light of a letter from the Perry Township supervisors that they have granted a right of way across township land for the access road to the property.

The resignation of Waynesburg attorney H. Terry Grimes as a member of the commission was accepted "with regret," together with an expression of appreciation for his services to the agency. Grimes' resignation, which was announced earlier, will be effective Dec. 31.

Fire Destroys Area Home

WAYNESBURG — A two-story frame house on Sugar Run Road, a mile south of Waynesburg, was destroyed by fire early Monday morning.

Waynesburg Fire Chief Pete Walker said no one was in the house when the blaze began. The dwelling was completely involved by the time firemen arrived on the scene at 7 a.m. One fireman suffered burns on his shoulders when an electrical line fell across a hose and vaporized it.

The house is owned by Rosa Morrison, who was reported to be in Puerto Rico with her four children — 10-year-old triplet daughters, Lana, Iona and Tanya, and a son, Peter, 11.

Walker said the fire apparently broke out in the living room of the four-room house. He estimated the loss at $25,000.

Cause of the blaze was not immediately determined. Walker said that the state police fire marshal has been asked to investigate.

Fireman Robin Roberts was treated at Greene County Memorial Hospital for second degree burns on his shoulders. He and fireman Scott Collins were waiting to enter the house and were caught between the downed power line and the fire. When the hose was vaporized by the power line, the belts on Roberts' air pack melted and his fire coat caught fire.

A neighbor, Steven Dulaney, said a passing motorist spotted smoke coming from the house shortly before 7 a.m. and awakened him, asking him to turn in the alarm. Dulaney said he had heard the owner's husband, Gary Morrison, leave the house and drive away about 10:30 p.m. Sunday.

While the shell of the house was still standing after the blaze was brought under control, it had been gutted and all of the contents destroyed.

Jury Finds Man Guilty Of Incest

WAYNESBURG — A Butler County man was found guilty of incest Wednesday by a Greene County Criminal Court jury.

The jury, however, returned a verdict of innocent on a charge of rape.

The verdict was returned late Wednesday afternoon following a three day trial of James Robert Puckett, 23, of Evans City, formerly of New Freeport. He was charged with forcing sexual intercourse on his sister.

Principal witness for the commonwealth, in addition to the girl, was the defendant's father, Clyde Puckett Sr., 59, New Freeport, who has already pleaded guilty to rape, incest and involuntary deviate sexual intercourse.

The defendant, who denied the charges, was supported by testimony of other family members in his contention that his sister concocted the story to get even with him for forcing her to move back to her parent's house after she had been living with another brother and his girlfriend.

With return of the guilty verdict on incest, the court increased the defendant's bond. He had been free on a percentage $10,000 bond. The court directed that he be taken to the county jail until he can post a $20,000 cash or property bond.

Sentencing was deferred pending the filing of post-trial motions.

Tool Theft Probed

State police are investigating the theft of tools from a concrete block building located along LR 30069 in Greene Township and owned by Three T. Oil Co. of St. Clair Shores, Mich.

Investigating officers said the locked building was broken into sometime Thursday or Friday and an undetermined number of tools were taken. No value of the stolen property was given.

IRS Has Money For Local People

PITTSBURGH — The Internal Revenue Service has 571 checks, several of them for Greene County residents, worth $171,000 that it is trying to deliver to western Pennsylvania taxpayers.

The checks are the tax refunds owed western Pennsylvanians for their federal income tax returns for 1983 and previous years.

The refund checks range in size from $1.06 to $4,958.13. Of the 571 checks, 24 are for amounts exceeding $1,000.

According to IRS officials, there are several reasons why the IRS has been unable to deliver the checks. In some instances, taxpayers may have moved or changed their last name during the year and failed to notify the IRS. Some returns were mailed with incomplete addresses or the taxpayer's handwriting was illegible.

Listed from Greene County are James W. and Lorraine L. Swaniger, James and Carol Thomas and Rodney Morris, all of Clarksville; Kathy S. Greenwalt of Greensboro; Nancy E. and Mark A. Ferguson-Segall of Jefferson; Mitzi Jo and David B. Halbert of Mt. Morris; Sanford K. Swift III of Nemaconlin and from Waynesburg, Tracy Burns, Herman and Juanita Hylkema, Michael D. Richards and Rita M. Thomas.

County United Way Allots Money For 1985

WAYNESBURG — The board of directors of Greene County United Way established allotments for agencies for 1985 and elected three new members to the board at a meeting Tuesday in Waynesburg.

The meeting was held at the Greene County Office Building with President Archie Trader presiding.

Nancy Davis, superintendent of the Central Greene School District and allocations committee chairman, presented the report of the allocations committee for the distribution of $79,009.

The recommendations, which were adopted, allocate $7,500 to the American Red Cross; $2,000 to AMI, Inc.; $3,000 to the Boy Scouts of America/ATC; $4,250 to CARE, Inc.; $9,000 to Catholic Charities; $200 to the Greene County Council on the Arts; $4,500 to the Southwestern Pennsylvania Easter Seal Society; $6,500 to the Greene County Association for Retarded Citizens; $3,000 to Girl Scouts of Southwestern Pennsylvania; $7,500 to Greene Valley Farms; $6,000 to the Greene County Library System; $1,500 to Multiple Sclerosis; $3,800 to Parents Anonymous; $809 to United Way of America, and $4,000 to the Washington-Greene Community Action Corp.

Another $12,088 was earmarked for United Way administration and campaign expenses and $5,279 was held in reserve for contingencies. An additional $783 in designations to the United Way's Project Helping Hand was placed in a reserve to be distributed in 1985 by a special committee to be named by the president.

One agency, Greene Valley Youth, did not request funds for 1985.

Total allocations mark the highest level of allotments in the Greene County United Way's history and reflect, in part, the success of the campaign in Greene County and throughout southwestern Pennsylvania.

Trader announced that the allocations committee and board of directors will institute further procedures for 1985 that will improve the operation of local charities and enhance United Way accountability.

Charles Beiter Jr., chairman of the nominating committee, placed the names of three individuals in nomination as new board members and all were elected unanimously. They are Michael Flinn, administrator of Greene County Memorial Hospital; Ruce Macera, librarian at Flenkner Memorial Library, and Walter S. Stout, Central Greene School District business manager.

Beiter said his committee is seeking additional nominees for membership on the board of directors. Individuals nominated must be United Way contributors and must be willing to devote time to the United Way program.

The names of suggested members can be submitted by groups or individuals and should be made in writing by Jan. 7, 1985, to the Nominating Committee, Greene County United Way, 90 East High Street, Waynesburg, Pa., 15370.

The annual meeting of the organization is set for Feb. 26, 1985.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

This column was first printed in October, 1971.

Two or three generations ago most every youngster was familiar with that nursery rhyme which implored Little Boy Blue to "Come Blow Your Horn, the Sheep are in the Meadow and the Cows are in the corn."

The modern version, however, might easily sound something like:

"Handy Man, Handy Man, Wherever You Are, Hustle Back in a Hurry with Saw and Hammer in Hand and also a wrench, Cause the doors and windows are all sticking and the faucets are leaking as though they've never been fixed before."

For the benefit of the younger generations, the Handy Man is now virtually an extinct species of individual. A good one would be a choice collector's item worthy to adorn any collector's display case and at the same time be far more functional than a mere conversation piece.

A Handy Man was the most aptly named personage in the close knit community life of an earlier era.

He was a fellow who seemed able to do a little bit of almost any kind of work that had to be done to keep a household or a business running smoothly.

He took up the gap between the skilled performance of a regular carpenter, plumber, paper hanger, painter or any other kind of a craftsman and those who had no more hope of being able to do that sort of work than a Holstein heifer has of being a ballet dancer.

In other words, he could make almost any sort of a gadget of facility work especially like jammed bureau drawers, doors or cupboard locks as well as clocks, gas or electrical appliances, kid's wagons, etc.

He was also the best fellow in the neighborhood to get grandma's favorite rocking chair going again when the braces would come loose in one of the rockers or some equally annoying malfunction occurred.

That, in fact, was the thing which in modern slang was "their thing," to repair the gadgets that annoyed everyone when they wouldn't work.

And one of the best things about those old boys was the fact that none of them ever charged much for what they would do.

Money always seemed of secondary importance to them as compared to the kick of being able to do something that few if any others could do. They were generally quite ingenious and often times could seemingly make something out of nothing in a mechanical way. They were sort of a forerunner of the present day corps of auto mechanics, the high voltage appliance servicemen and the army of do-it-yourselfers in every phase of leisure time work.

Probably the most famous of all local handy men was the late "Brownie" Manahanna, a little fellow whose grandfather helped lay out the town of Waynesburg and was prominent in starting in Waynesburg College.

Doubtless the award for being the most quaint was Abe Kimble. He was also a dwarfish type with a kind of perpetual grin who lived on West Elm Street for many years prior to World War I.

Typical of the self-confidence which exuded eternally from a bonafide Handy Man, Abe eschewed a tape measure or even an ordinary ruler. Instead he literally went by rule of his thumbs as he wore a vest winter and summer alike and calculated all distances by the number of spans between his thumbs and he held them in the armpits of his vest.

Once on a hot summer day, he had carefully measured the widths of a glass required in a window as a replacement for a broken pane.

He was walking up Richhill Street, the story goes, his thumbs carefully held in the armpits of his vest, when he met a friend, became involved in a conversation and started gesturing with his hands.

Suddenly he realized what he had done and exclaimed "Oh, Gosh, you made me lose my measure," as he started back to the house to measure the window again and resume his journey to Jess Ross' drug store for the glass.

Bill Stewart, who besides being a handy man, also invented an herb salve which was very effective. He never did let anyone know how to make it and took its mixture to the grave with him.

Greene Vo-Tech Hires Solicitor

WAYNESBURG — Equipment was purchased for three educational areas, a job skills program was approved for seniors, and a school solicitor was hired Thursday by the Joint Operating Committee of Greene County Vocational-Technical School.

The Waynesburg law firm of McCall and Stets was rehired as school solicitor, with details of the working agreement to be made at a later date.

At an earlier meeting, the committee had voted to advertise for bids for a solicitor. Then, at a special meeting on Dec. 5, the committee said it had received proposals from two other law firms in addition to McCall and Stets, but tabled action until the proposals could be studied. They did not, however, open the proposals during the meeting.

The committee voted to purchase two IBM PC Junior computers from Computer Land, Pittsburgh, at a cost of $877 each as well as one $299 printer and $505 in software. The Computer Land price was the lowest of several reviewed by the committee. The computers will be used in the computer-communications skills class.

Pat's Discount of Waynesburg was awarded the contract to provide a portable ice machine for the school's food service program. The firm's bid of $749 was the lowest received.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

A woman who wishes to remain unidentified volunteered to shake the bell at the Salvation Army kettle in front of a local mall last week. She got a fresh cup of coffee and was ringing the bell with one hand and holding the cup in the other when a man walked out and dropped a quarter into her coffee cup. He was quite surprised when the coin caused such a splash but was wasn't as surprised as the volunteer.

Two county Marines recently took part in special military exercises. They were Cpl. John Stanish, son of Mrs. and Mrs. John Stanish of Nema-colin and Pfc. Stephen Riddell, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Riddell of Jefferson. Both are members of the 2nd Tank Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Carolyn Martin of Waynesburg attended graduation exercises last week at Ft. Jackson, S.C. Her son, Pvt. William H. Scritchfield was "outstanding trainee of the cycle" of the 2nd Basic Training Brigade.

An indication of the generosity of local citizens was quite evident this past weekend when the Tri-County Leathernecks distributed more than 1,000 toys to the needy and still had some left over. They continued the distribution for the next three days. This was in addition to other toy programs by several organizations in the county.

Monday was such a beautiful day, with temperatures in the 70s, that the courthouse wall was crowded with the usual "girl watchers" and sidewalk superintendents. There was talk of holding picnics and possibly going swimming in the afternoon.

Roy Hale, wife of the former Ann Moore of Waynesburg and the son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Moore of Avalon Court, has accepted a position with President Reagan's inauguration team. He most recently handled the financing of the re-election committee.

Verdict Given

WAYNESBURG — Charles V. Booth Jr., 42, of 155 Woodland Avenue, Waynesburg, was convicted in Greene County Court Thursday of driving while intoxicated.

The jury verdict was returned at 11:30 a.m., two hours after the trial began. The state produced a breathalyzer test reading of .20, twice the legal requirement for presumed intoxication, as the basis for its case.

Booth, who was arrested on Aug. 2 by Waynesburg Borough police, will be sentenced at a later date.

Ordinance Needs Review

The Waynesburg Zoning Hearing Board has run into a lot of tough problems in recent months.

Disputes over the permitted size of signs erected by commercial establishments, standards set for home occupations, failure of property owners to obtain a permit for non-conforming uses which were in existence when the zoning ordinance was adopted in 1969, and requests for the establishment of multi-family dwellings in areas zoned for single-family homes have all contributed to the headaches experienced by the board.

In many cases the problems have been generated by ambiguities in the ordinance make clearcut decisions impossible.

Where the regulations are open to more than one interpretation, the zoning board has attempted to use common sense and make decision they feel are in the best interest in the neighborhood involved. But inevitably that makes for hard feelings among those the board rules against.

It with this in mind that the zoning board has decided to completely review the ordinance and suggest changes which borough council should make to clarify the language in some of the more controversial sections.

It's interesting to note that one of the more controversial decisions — one which has resulted in a lawsuit — was made with regard to a house on the north side where three college students had rented an apartment in a house. When neighbors complained that they were using it as an unofficial fraternity house, the zoning board ruled that the owner was in violation not only by having two apartments in the house for which no permit had ever been obtained, but that she was in effect operating a rooming house by renting one of the apartments to one student who then took in other students.

The same house figured in the same problem in 1971, when the zoning board in office at that time ruled that it could not control such situations because the ordinance described a family as "one or more persons occupying a dwelling and living as a single housekeeping unit and doing their own cooking on the premises." That board suggested that the ordinance be revised to add the words "any number of persons related by blood or marriage" to the description of a family.

But once the pressure was off, the change was never made and the ordinance still contains the original definition of a family, coming back to haunt the present board.

This time the borough should make sure that the zoning ordinance receives the complete review it has needed for so long.

between the bookends

by marcia mckenna biddle

Some people say that there are a lot of "characters" in Greene County. I would of course be the first to deny this slander. (And hope that lightning doesn't strike me.)

In his "History of Greene County, Pa.," published in 1882, Rev. William Hanna seemed to run across quite a few of these "characters" in his travels, and he immortalized them in print.

One character stood out, even in a book filled with stories of, uh, unusual behavior. Rev. Hanna was even moved to call him "deranged," even though "his mental aberrations were only occasional."

According to Rev. Hanna, poor old William McNerlin, or McNurlin, lived about four miles from Waynesburg, "near the road leading to Washington," and "was a very singular man."

Rev. Hanna said that he once saw old William himself. It was "in Fayette County, in an old Lutheran church, where he unexpectedly made his appearance, walking slowly up the aisle, with his coat and pants turned wrong side out, while his straw hat was filled with turkey and chicken feathers."

He listened intently to the sermon, "until something was uttered that he did not believe, when he clenched his fist and raised his arm in a threatening attitude, and said, 'Now that ain't so; now, don't say that again.'"

"To this the preacher aptly replied, 'You sit down, Mac, and I won't say it again.'"

It was said to be in the summer of 1828 that poor McNerlin went to his neighbor's farm and held his own revival meeting. He climbed to the top of a hickory tree, then, "drew in the top branches and withed them together in the center so as to form a platform, which he mounted." From his elevated position of 25 or 30 feet, "he began to preach. His stentorian voice could be heard a long way off and he continued his harangue from early morn until noon with no auditors, though it was the Sabbath Day."

Rev. Hanna insisted that there was nothing really wrong with the man, except occasionally, and even then he fit in rather well. And indeed, "Most of the time he was exceedingly bright."

But you had to watch out for certain signs. "The first evidence of the coming on of one of these periodical visitations," the author said, putting it politely, "was that he would take his position on some rising ground, and there mark out the course he proposed to travel, which was always in a straight line, crossing hills, fences, creeks and even haystacks, if they stood in his bee line."

McNerlin, then, demonstrated determination and singleness of purpose, qualities which are greatly to be admired. No mention is made of the number of ruined haystacks he left in his wake as he climbed over them, feathered hat and all.

Well, "In this way he would often travel until he was sometimes nearly one hundred miles from home. When the hallucination would pass off, and reason again ascend the throne, if he could find his reckoning without inquiry he would preserve a profound silence. On one occasion he had almost reached Lake Erie, and when he became sane again, he was in a dense forest, with no human abode in sight."

Now, here is a man who set his course and stuck to it, whether it took him to Lake Erie or not. That's the kind of guy we like.

Audit Commends Central Greene

HARRISBURG — State Auditor General Al Benedict has given officials of the Central Greene School District high marks for their performance in managing school operations.

"The fine job done by Central Greene officials deserves to be publicized," Benedict said Thursday in an audit report on district operations through July 23, 1984. "The district complied with all rules and regulations in accordance with the Public School Code."

No new violations or recommendations were noted in the report, and Benedict commended the district for correcting problems encountered during the prior state audit. As previously recommended:

Professional employees were properly certified for their assignments.

Two administrators and one teacher had not been properly certified for the positions they held during the prior audit period.

The district budgets for the current audit years were not overspent in any classifications.

Waynesburg Wins Rematch With California

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

WAYNESBURG — The cast here Thursday night was full of interesting characters.

On one side of the fray was the injured giant of a team still recovering from a debilitating loss of its star player. And on the other side, the foe. Once the weaker of the two and now clearly the stronger, it was riddled with the problems that accompany placing very young people in tough situations.

Still, the drama unfolded pretty much as expected.

Waynesburg College's basketball team, playing perhaps its best game, barring turnovers, of the season, defeated a gutsy California University team, 88-73, in the last game ever at College Gym.

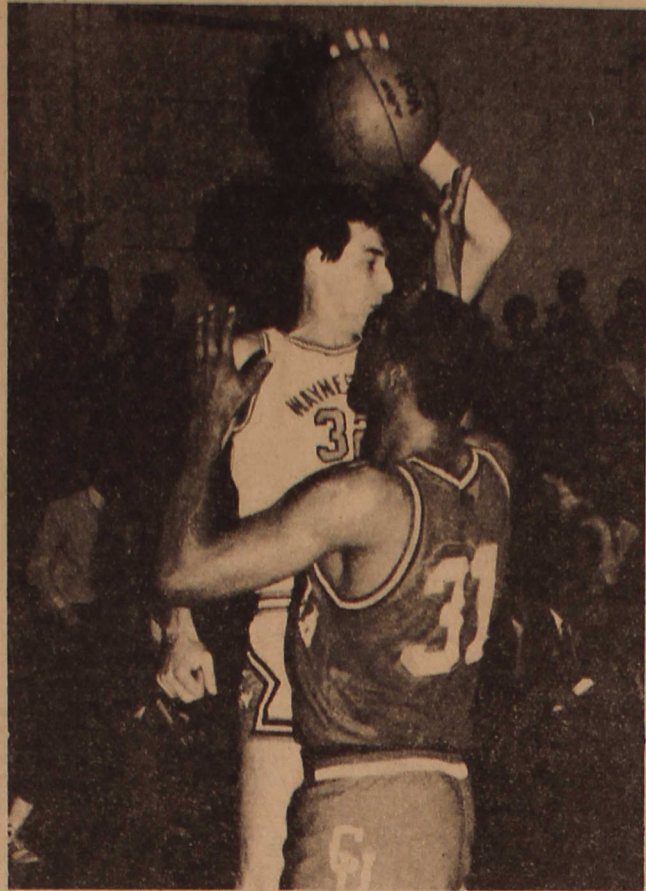

And there was plenty to get excited about. Both teams, while not sending out reservations just yet for post-season playoffs, made definite strides in improving on their current problems.

Only the Yellow Jackets' seemed to handle it a little better. Led by Harold Hamlin's breath-taking performance, which included a game-high 32 points, Waynesburg improved its record to 3-2 heading into the holiday break.

And as Rudy Marisa, head coach of Waynesburg, stressed, he has every reason to be pleased with the victory.

"I have no reason to be anything but elated," Marisa said. "I started two freshmen, (Chris) Greene and (Kevin) Lee with two solid guys and we beat a good team. We were very embarrassed down there (a 95-81 loss to the Vulcans at Hamer Hall Dec. 3). We played poorly there so why wouldn't I be happy about this."

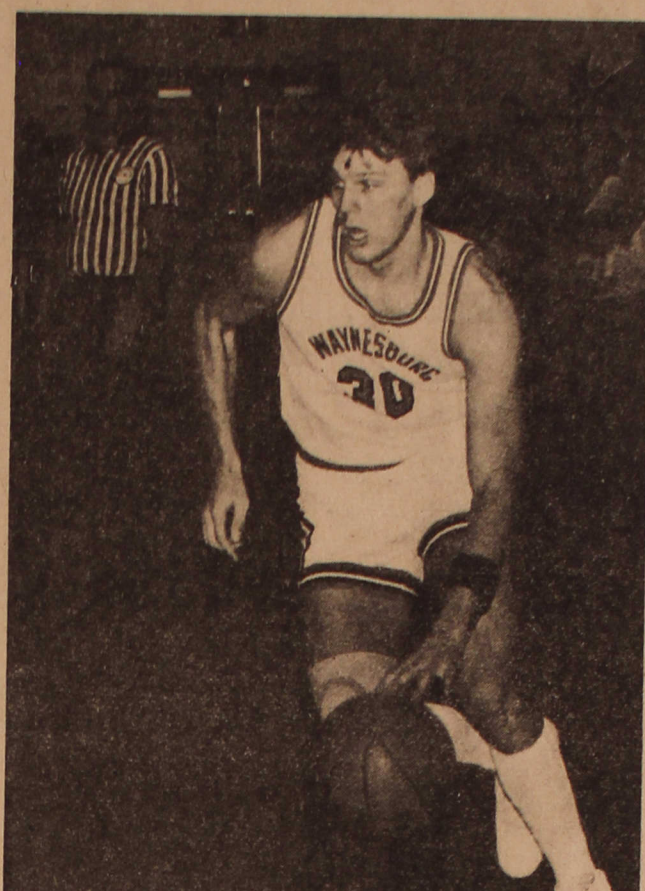

"I know I said this once and probably twice, in my opinion they were the very best team in the state conference and unfortunately their boys got hurt.

Waynesburg's Rich Puskar and California's Maxie Wiley fight for the ball.

But that only reduced themselves to the best in the conference." So Marisa was pleased — in some respects. Hamlin, in particular, gave him good reason. The 6-6 sophomore scored 20 points in the first half as Waynesburg built a 45-38 lead at intermission. He added 12 more in the second half and didn't miss a shot from the field until 6:16 into the last half. Hamlin missed only one more shot in the game and finished 13 of 15 from the field, six of six from the free-throw line while making seven steals, blocking four shots and grabbing eight rebounds. And for a while it seemed like Hamlin was in a shootout with California's dynamo guard Cliff Mitchell. The 5-9 junior, who usually plays point guard, moved all over the court trying to make up for the loss of Michael Wilson and buried long-range jumpers to keep his team close.

Mitchell finished with a team-high 28 points but amazingly most came from the 20-foot range. And he was 14 of 27 from the field.

But after Hamlin and Mitchell, it was a different story. Waynesburg's depth and California's foul trouble dictated the flow in the second half.

"They had too much support for us," said Vulcan head coach Tim Loomis. "We made Cliff and (Demetrius) Styles do too much at the end. You can talk about it but we just had a difficult trying to bring youngsters in. . . I'm more proud of this group than any I've ever walked off the floor with."

"They should have blown us out of the game but they didn't. They got the points at the end. They couldn't blow us out."

Waynesburg couldn't blowout California (4-5) in the close first half. The teams were tied 16-16 with 13:01 left in the half when the Jackets started to get a lead. The biggest the Waynesburg lead got before halftime was 41-31 on a layup by Rich Puskar.

California opened the second half with a press and made a comeback and actually took the lead 48-47 on a steal and layup by Mitchell with 17:50 left.

At that point, the Jackets' Paul Stanley and Hamlin took over. Hamlin scored three baskets to give Waynesburg the momentum and Stanley scored nine of his 19 points in a four-minute span and gave his team a 72-68 lead.

Maxie Wiley added 15 points and 11 rebounds for California.

Burgettstown led, 24-20, at halftime but a 13-2 run by Carmichaels in the third quarter gave the Mikes a 33-26 lead. The Blue Devils had a 16-10 advantage in the final eight minutes but it was not enough.

Boys Basketball

BENTLEYVILLE — Carmichaels High School entered Tuesday night's basketball game at Bentworth with a winless record.

When the game ended, the Mikes were still without a victory in four exhibition contests. But the 73-65 triumph wasn't an easy one for the undefeated Bearcats.

The Mikes played Bentworth (4-0) on even terms during the entire first half and trailed at halftime only 37-36.

The game remained in doubt through the third quarter with the Bearcats taking a 55-53 edge into the final period. Bentworth then clinched the win with an 18-12 margin in the last eight minutes.

Four Bentworth players scored in double figures, led by Tony Brovey with 22 points. Tom Hollandsworth and Dave Conn added 17 apiece and Dan Conn scored 11.

Mark Meiter led four Mikes in double figures with 21 points. Brian Blasinsky scored 15; Roger Waters 12 and John Tekavec 10.

Raiders 93, Mikes 63

WAYNESBURG — A strong and well-balanced scoring effort led Waynesburg Central High School to a 93-63 rout of Carmichaels in an exhibition basketball game Friday.

Center Mark Dukate, who scored 28 points, including 13 field goals, led the Raiders, who improved their overall record to 3-1.

Dukate wasn't the whole show, however. Pete Walker had 19 points; John Adams 18 and Steve Stuck 12.

Mark Meiter, with 25 points, and Roger Waters, with 16, paced the Mikes, who have a 0-3 record. Four Carmichaels players left the game on fouls.

Blue Devils 75, Rockets 42

BURGETTSTOWN — Sophomore Mario Bongiorno poured in 30 points Tuesday night to lead unbeaten Burgettstown High School to a 75-42 exhibition victory over Jefferson-Morgan.

John Gabrielli scored 14 points and John Treibsch 12 for the Blue Devils, now 4-0.

Art Cage scored 18 points for the Rockets.

Burgettstown jumped out to a 20-8 lead after one quarter and increased its lead to 17 points, 38-21, at halftime.

Lions 77, Rockets 51

JEFFERSON — South Fayette High School got double-figure scoring performances from four players Friday night when the Lions downed Jefferson-Morgan 77-53, to raise their exhibition basketball record to 3-1.

Frank Morelli's 24 points led South Fayette while Thyron Prothro scoring 16 and Rich Revis and Paul Prevade 13 apiece.

Art Cage scored 16 and Jerry Simkovic 14 for the Rockets, who have an 0-3 record.

wrestling team.

Neither did Trinity. In typical Trinity fashion, the Hillers downed Waynesburg, 40-13, in their Section 7-AAA opener here Tuesday night.

For the Red Raiders, it also happened to be their season opener. And head coach Joe Ayersman easily could have mentioned many other teams he would have rather opened the season against.

"I'd rather have two or three matches under our belt," said Ayersman, who is one victory away from becoming the winningest wrestling coach in Waynesburg history.

"We have a lot of green boys in there."

But Ayersman did take some solace in the fact the Hillers (2-0 overall) provided Waynesburg with a true test of its progress.

"It's a good one to open up with in that we get to see what we have to do. We can see our strengths and weaknesses," Ayersman said. "We have to work on everything, particularly on the bottom. They controlled us on the bottom; they were riding us with their legs."

"They're tough. Trinity came to wrestle and took it to us."

The Hillers didn't waste any time. They took a quick 17-0 lead on a fall by Bill Boardley over Milt Morris at 98 pounds; a 13-0 superior decision by Mike Ferrari (105) over Scott Blair; and another fall by Tim Bigler (112) over Paul Weber.

"What we had to do, especially wrestling away, was take advantage in the lower weights," Trinity head coach John Abajace said. "We had to keep the home team from getting the momentum going."

He was definitely pleased with what he saw.

"We got a much better performance tonight out of Tim Bigler," Abajace said. "As a matter of fact, we got much better performances at 98, 105 and 112."

Ayersman will agree with that. "The first three matches were just too much," he said. "They got the ball rolling."

The Red Raiders finally got on the scoreboard when Shane Cole (119) pulled out a 6-2 decision over Chris Petronka, subbing for Mike McClenathan who is out with the flu, by scoring all six points in the third period to erase a 2-0 first-period lead by Petronka.

"Chris didn't realize he'd have to wrestle until yesterday (Monday)," Abajace said. "He really had to cut the weight and did an excellent job as long as he could go."

Dave McWilliams (126) then cut the Hillers' lead to 17-6, registering an 8-2 decision over Brian Brookman.

"Brian's not wrestling anywhere near his capabilities," Abajace said. "But he's had some tough competition. McWilliams is an excellent wrestler. Before the year is over, he'll (Brookman) win his share."

Trinity immediately struck back with three consecutive victories by Bob Sroka (132) and Alan King (138) on 5-1 decisions and Tom Wright (145) on a fall. That gave the Hillers a 29-10 lead and all but secure the win as more. After our first two games we haven't had that spark."

And that fact is scary, especially for teams that still have to play Washington.

"We have to keep getting better as the year goes on but tonight was a step backwards," Faust said. "Glenn said he would be happy if his team came in here and played well and that's the way I felt about it. Yes, a win is a win but I'm not satisfied with the way we played. Maybe I'm not doing a good enough job motivating. We'll find out tomorrow in practice."

Still, Wash High played well enough to win. Led by senior Chris Popeck's team-high 21 points, Washington controlled the game from the opening tipoff.

Junior Ron Moore led the Little Presidents (4-0) on the boards scoring 18 points and grabbing 15 rebounds while center Brian Davis grabbed 15 rebounds and Jim Griffin 11. Mark Popeck had 12 points.

Waynesburg, however, didn't play its best game coming off an emotional win over rival Carmichaels Friday. The Red Raiders (3-2) were out-rebounded, 42-29, and gave Washington too many chances on offense by allowing second, third and fourth shots.

"I don't think we had an offensive rebound in the first half and on defense. . . I don't think we played as well as we can," mused Kyle. "But one of the best things Wash High does is grab and scrap for the ball. They don't have any 6-5 centers or forwards but they mix it up and dive for balls. "You can't hold the ball against them, you have to be aggressive. The

Quick WHS Tops Raiders

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

When they left the Washington High School gym Tuesday night, most of the players and coaches were somewhat disappointed.

Oh, there was a winner. Wash High defeated Waynesburg Central in rather ho-hum fashion, 80-53, but there was more to the game than the score.

Washington head coach Ron Faust said his team played poorly, for the most part, and Waynesburg head coach Glenn Kyle said his team played poorly.

The difference, as usual for the Little Presidents, was their overwhelming quickness.

WHS used that quickness to offset a horrendous 31-percent shooting effort in the first half and built, mostly on hustle, an 11-8 lead after the first quarter and a 36-17 lead at the half.

After that, it was never close. But Faust is very concerned with the effort, or lack of the mental part of it. Washington blew out Monesson and Bethel Park to open the season but its win over Trinity and last night's win didn't impress Faust.

"I'm disappointed that at times we didn't play as a team," said Faust. "They know it and I know it. We're honest with each other. If we're going to go anywhere this season we have to play as a team. In the third quarter, when I put three of the starters back in, we did play well but other than that we didn't."

"Right now all that garbage about being state champions isn't helping things. We have to get our heads in it

Waynesburg would have needed falls in the final four weight classes to pull out a victory.

Dirk Cole (155) and Scott Longwell (167) captured a 9-1 major decision and 11-7 decision, respectively, to end Waynesburg's scoring.

"Shane, Dirk, Longwell and McWilliams all did a good job," Ayersman said. "Dirk Cole and Longwell have real good backgrounds. They were both undefeated in junior high."

Leland Ferarri (185) and heavy-weight John Klimkowski finished the night the way it started for the Hillers. Ferrari dominated his match against Doug Higgins, winning 19-6, while Klimkowski pinned Mike Bussey at 1:06.

The Red Raiders, who have been decimated by injuries so far this season, continue section action Saturday at McGuffey. And they know they must wrestle better if they want to even their record.

"Outside of four or five boys, we didn't wrestle very good," Ayersman said. "We have to work a lot harder. We still have a long way to go until the end of the season."

"Some of the guys perhaps will drop a weight and we'll bring in one or two sophomores. I think with Dirk Cole and Longwell, and if we can bring in Bill Corbett at 185 and move Higgins down to 167, we can start building for the next two years."

State FFA Awards

WAYNESBURG — The Future Farmers of America Chapter at Waynesburg Central High School has been notified five chapter members will be awarded the Pennsylvania State FFA Keystone Degree.

Divorces Granted

WAYNESBURG — Two final decrees in divorce were handed down Thursday by the Greene County Court:

Robert C. Hall, Prosperity R.D.2, from Lynn B. Hartman Hall, Brownsville. They were married July 12, 1980. There are no children.

Raymond Eldred Hoalcraft, Waynesburg, from Ramona Pump Hoalcraft, address unknown. They were married Dec. 22, 1974. There are no children.

first two times down we pushed the ball inside, we turn around and get the ball stripped. You tell the kids about it but it's hard to stop."

Waynesburg did stay close at the start, though, as the game's high scorer, junior Steve Stuck, drilled four of his 22 points. WHS led by only three after the first eight minutes.

But then Washington forced a few turnovers and played better in the second quarter to outscore the Raiders, 25-9, and take a 19-point lead at intermission. WHS pulled away, 62-31, in the third via the fastbreak.

Mark Dukate added nine points and seven rebounds for Waynesburg while Pete Walker had eight points and nine rebounds.

"Tonight we had a lapse," Kyle said. "They are the state champs and maybe it was a mental thing. We have to start overcoming that. We were making strides and now. . . well, we have to get back on track."

"Washington has a lot of poise. They are a team that walks out there and thinks they're never going to lose. We've gone into games confident this year but tonight I don't think the kids thought they could win. We just have to win a couple big games. Hey, we're still 3-2 and I think that's the best start we've had since I got here."

Waynesburg's Tim Jackovic didn't play after suffering a slight concussion in the last game. He is expected to play Friday against Chartiers-Houston.

Washington's point guard, Sean McKenzie, missed the game with the flu. He could play Friday against South Fayette.

Waynesburg College Coach Explains Coaching Philosophy

WAYNESBURG — Coach Rudy Mills, head basketball coach at Waynesburg College for the past 16 years, reviewed his coaching philosophies for members of the Waynesburg Rotary Club at a recent meeting.

Marisa, a graduate of Penn State who has a winning average of more than 750 games in college basketball, also serves as athletic director at the college.

The coaching profession, Marisa said, "Soon becomes an obsession, not only to win, but also to achieve goals." His job is to "develop a team from a group of 18-year-olds assembled from various backgrounds and communities, and to weld all of these young men into a cohesive playing unit capable of winning games."

Marisa stated he stresses "good" qualities which he feels are essential if the typical athlete is to be able to meet life's challenges: personal character, team play, honesty, spirit of cooperation, self-discipline and dependability.

"Added to these," he said, "is that word 'maturity,' sometimes hard to define but, nevertheless, important to these young men."

Marisa prefaced his comments on coaching with a "thank you" to the club for its support in his son Kurt's enrollment at the International Institute in the Hague, Holland, through the Rotary International Foundation. Kurt is nearing the end of a 15-month program at the Hague University and will return home later this month. Marisa and his family visited Kurt in August, and toured 12 counties.

In other business, Dr. J. Thomas Mills, president of Waynesburg College, introduced several students from the school who comprise the charter group for the formation of a Rotary sponsored club for college level persons to be known as the "Waynesburg College Rotaract Club." Assisting Mills in serving as sponsors for the new organization are Dr. J.E. Victor Carlson, alumni relations, and faculty member Dr. Robert LaCount.

Those students attending the Rotary meeting included Tony Makin, Donald Ruggery, Brian Griedel, Stephen Blum, Robert Zielinski, Timothy Matthias, John Candor, Tim Morton and Ferd Dolfi.

Rotarian David Cumberland gave a brief report on the 75th anniversary dinner held Dec. 3 by the Pittsburgh Rotary Club, featuring the president of Rotary International, Carlos Canseco of Mexico, as principal speaker. Also attending were Rotarians Michael Mulholland and Thomas Milovich and their wives. Jose Ruben Proana, youth exchange student from Ecuador, also attended.

Everything But Kitchen Sink In Library Plans

CARMICHAELS — Everything but the kitchen sink was included in plans for the new addition to Fleniken Memorial Library, Carmichaels.

When the original plans for the community meeting room were drawn up, they called for the installation of a sink and plumbing with cabinetry. But the building committee was forced to make some cut-backs due to budget restrictions so the sink was "put on the shelf."

Now, thanks to some community-minded citizens, the kitchen sink will be installed after all.

The David Smith family of Carmichaels will donate a commercial-size sink and Lucille B. Butler, owner of Carmichaels Newsstand, is providing money for the plumbing fixtures, cabinet framing and all needed hardware.

Arthur M. Bell, an unemployed plumber and welder, with a little help from Larry Mecera, also unemployed, will donate all labor necessary to install the sink and put in the cabinetry.

"This keeps my skills active and at the same time gives the library something back for all the pleasure our families have received from it," Bell said.

Librarian Ruth Mecera is overwhelmed.

"If you've ever tried to wash 20 preschoolers after a finger-painting session you might get some idea as to how the staff appreciates having this addition to the community room completed," she said.

Court Hearing Scheduled On River Buffs Petition

WAYNESBURG — The Greene County Court has scheduled a hearing for Feb. 1 on a petition by the Monongahela River Buffs Association. The petition asks the court to dismiss a judgment filed against the association by the Borough of Greensboro for failure to renovate or tear down the old Monongahela House hotel building in Greensboro.

In the meantime, the court has continued the preliminary injunction it imposed when the association filed a petition in November to have the $3,548 judgment set aside. The judgment represents fines and costs assessed by the borough since July when the River Buffs were found guilty of violating the borough nuisance ordinance by permitting a potentially dangerous situation to continue.

The River Buffs purchased the century-old brick structure in 1980 with the intention of restoring it for use as a river museum, but since that time has not had the financial resources to carry out the project.

It has been fighting the borough's efforts to have the building demolished on the grounds that it is a historic structure which played host to many prominent figures, including Ulysses S. Grant and James A. Garfield, during the years in which it accommodated passengers from river packets plying the Monongahela River.

The borough, which noted that the building had already been condemned for two years when it was purchased for $6,000 by the River Buffs, has already taken action to solicit bids for razing the structure.

The borough solicitor said he believes the court action involving the judgment will have no effect on council's plan to have the building torn down, since the judgment question is the only one before the court.

Council's position, as set forth in its action to the court petition, is that the building does not have sufficient historic value to qualify for any type of funding for its preservation.
