County Shivers Under Onslaught Of Arctic Air

WAYNESBURG — Greene County slowed to a virtual standstill Monday in the wake of an arctic blast which produced an official temperature reading of 17 degrees below zero, aggravated by gusting winds which resulted in a chill factor of 50 to 60 degrees below zero.

Greene County Memorial Hospital reported three cases of frostbite, the first in three years, with one of them being serious enough to require hospitalization of an 80-year-old man.

All schools in the county were shut down Monday and will remain closed Tuesday in the face of weather forecasts which called for another frigid morning before temperatures begin to moderate later in the day.

County employees who managed to get to work were sent home at 1 p.m. due to the cold weather and a water line break in the courthouse, along with lack of adequate heat in several offices in the old county office building.

The trial of a civil case which had been scheduled for Monday had to be postponed when many members of the jury panel were unable to report for duty because their cars wouldn't start.

A meeting of the Jefferson-Morgan School Board which was to have been held Monday night was postponed for one week — one of many such postponements necessitated by the weather.

Weather observers at the Waynesburg sewage treatment plant reported the -17 reading was recorded about 6 a.m. Monday.

"It wasn't a record for the date though," weather observer Sam McCullough said. "By coincidence the lowest reading we had last year came on the same date (Jan. 21). It was 20 below zero, but most people have forgotten about it because there was no wind with it and it didn't seem anywhere near as cold as it did today."

Emergency room personnel at Greene County Memorial Hospital said they felt the wind chill was the big factor in three frostbite cases they treated.

While they withheld names, they said the most serious case involved an 80-year-old man from the Ryerson Station area who walked a half mile to a neighbor's house to get help 10 hours after the heat in his house had gone off and his water pipes had frozen.

"We dictated early treatment over the phone and then had him brought in for further treatment," they said. The man was admitted for continued treatment of frostbitten toes.

Less serious cases involved a newspaper delivery man who had to walk a considerable distance for help when his truck became stuck in the snow, and a 19-year-old man who suffered frostbite after being outside for five minutes attempting to start a car.

Equitable Gas Co. reported that gas consumption more than doubled during the past weekend. As an example, the Pratt Station east of Waynesburg saw its output increase from 45 million cubic feet of gas a day to more than 104 million cubic feet, necessitating purchase of gas from both Columbia and Texas Eastern to meet demand.

West Penn Power Co. reported that a 100-amp line fuse blew at 9 p.m. Sunday, leaving some 100 customers on Route 19, between Waynesburg and Ruff Creek, without electricity from 9:30 p.m. Sunday to 12:43 a.m. Monday.

Another 66 households in the Marianna and Beallsville area were left without power Sunday morning when two phases of a 25,000-volt transmission line snapped. Power was restored to 50 of the homes within three hours, but the remaining 16 were without power for 12 hours.

Other outages affected 40 mobile homes in the Reeseman Trailer Court on Route 188, between Waynesburg and Jefferson, and several individual homes.

Earlier in the week, classes in the West Greene School District were canceled and those in the county's other four districts operated on a two-hour delay due to weather conditions Tuesday morning.

While the temperature at 7 a.m. stood at 14 degrees, as recorded at the Waynesburg sewage treatment plant, gusting winds produced a wind chill factor of 15 below zero. In addition, 1.2 inches of new snow fell on top of the 3.25 inches already on the ground to create hazardous driving conditions.

"We always call for a two-hour delay when we know the chill factor will be 10 below zero or lower because we don't want children standing out in that kind of cold waiting for a bus," said Paul Polink, West Greene superintendent. "Then when we learned that some of the back roads were hazardous we decided to cancel entirely."

Officials in the Carmichaels Area, Central Greene, Jefferson-Morgan and Southeastern Greene districts said that the two hour delay enabled them to get students to their classes with no problems.

Gateway Reopen Possible

WAYNESBURG — Officials of Diamond Shamrock Coal Company have announced the possibility of resuming operations at the Gateway Mine in Greene County next month.

Coal officials are reviewing the situation and the market before making definite plans.

Buzz Riggins, manager of communications for Diamond Shamrock, said this week, "We are taking a position of examining the current market situation. If market indicators are favorable we would take a hard look at resuming operations."

Diamond Shamrock furloughed 485 miners last September citing huge stockpiles of coal above ground.

However, at that time about 70 employees of the 555 employed there were retained for maintenance purposes.

In announcing the layoffs last fall, the Kentucky-based coal company predicted at least a two-month layoff. The mine, formerly owned by J&L Steel, has been operation since 1962. However, the new shaft at Ruff Creek has been in operation for only five years.

Officials of United Mine Workers Local 6330 have not been formally advised of company plans, although the union and company have been in contact recently.

Too Cold To Venture Out

Most people took to heart the National Weather Service's warning of "life threatening" conditions as seen by this photograph of High Street in downtown Waynesburg Sunday afternoon. With temperatures dipping below zero, most residents preferred to stay indoors, making the main street in town a deserted place.

Supervisors Face Comparable Pay Issue

WAYNESBURG — As president of the Greene County Association of Township Officers, William C. Groves of Carmichaels is a strong advocate of the principal that a township supervisor should receive a fair wage when he works on township roads.

It's an issue that he regularly brings up at the association's annual meetings, but one which remains unresolved if "fair wage" is construed as meaning that all supervisors in the county should receive approximately the same compensation in their capacity as roadmasters.

Those who do road maintenance — and that includes virtually every supervisor in the county's 20 townships on either a full-time or part-time basis — do so as a township employee, separate and apart from their function as an elected official.

While they can hire themselves as roadmasters, responsibility for setting the wages they will receive lies with the township auditors, who meet on the first Tuesday of January each year to set the pay scale for the supervisors. The supervisors, in turn, set the rate of pay for any other employees the township might hire.

The only criteria the auditors have is a provision in the township code which stipulates that wages be no higher than the rate paid for comparable work in the area.

It's obvious that they interpret it in different ways because a survey of the 20 townships shows that hourly wages for supervisors who work on the roads ranges from a low of $5 to a high of $10.50.

"I don't know that anybody knows what 'comparable work' means,"

Groves said. "Should it be the wages paid by private contractors, wages in other townships, or the pay which PennDOT employees receive?"

Groves, who is also a supervisor in Cumberland Township, noted that a supervisor may be overseeing the work of township employees at one point, and in the next hour may be operating a $50,000 piece of equipment. Or he may be wielding a pick or shovel as a laborer.

Another complicating factor is that some supervisors work part time and others full time. Some work in townships with small budgets while others work for big townships with big budgets.

But Groves strongly feels that a supervisor who works 10 hours a week in a small township with relatively few miles of road to maintain is doing the same job as one who works full-time in a large township, and should be compensated on a comparable basis.

"I can't say that all townships should pay the same rate because budgets have to be taken into consideration, but auditors should certainly look at what others are paying," he said.

There is not only a wide range in wages, but also in fringe benefits in

WERC's Work Not Yet Done

WAYNESBURG — The Waynesburg Economic and Revitalization Committee (WERC), in a special meeting held the day after they were for all intent and purposes dissolved by borough council action, voted to continue in business until the end of the month.

In a surprise move Monday night borough council voted to administer a recently approved grant from the Department of Community Affairs. The grant application had been prepared and submitted by WERC several months ago for the purpose of renovating old homes in a certain section of the borough.

WERC is completing final details of a DCA-funded project which removed utility poles and wires in the downtown section and also provided aid to store owners for renovating store fronts in a two-block section of High Street. New traffic signals were also a part of the project.

During the special meeting, WERC president John McCall cited a lack of communication between council and WERC over the past several months and called it "very disappointing."

"Neither the past borough manager nor the councilmen showed much interest or become actively involved in the grant projects," McCall added.

McCall said: "We are governed by the borough. From my viewpoint, whether it's right or wrong, the borough can do this."

Members discussed what possible action, if any, they could now take in light of council voting to administer the current grant. Bill Morris, vice president of WERC, said, "In my personal opinion, I have no inclination to fight council. Let them have it if they want it." Morris wished council luck and promised a smooth transition.

Members voted to give council a report on the current status of work still being done by the committee.

In winding down the High Street project, WERC voted to award a contract to M&K Electric Co., not to exceed $3,000, for the removal of the poles and wires remaining in the two-block project area. Private funds will pay for at least a half of the expenses.

Voters May Lose Privileges

WAYNESBURG — More than four percent of Greene County's 17,224 registered voters stand to lose their voting privilege for failing to go to the polls during the past two years.

The county registration office will mail voter cancellation notes this week to 755 residents who have failed to meet the legal requirement of voting at least once every two years to keep their registration active.

Included with the notice is a postal card which, if filled out and returned to the registration office at Waynesburg, will serve to keep the registration active. The card can also be used to indicate a change of address.

Southeastern Greene Board Acts

School Superintendent Elected

By Christie Molzon, Staff Writer

MAPLETOWN — Charles Wyda, assistant superintendent of the Southeastern Greene School District, was elected district superintendent at the school board meeting Jan. 8. The move becomes effective July 1.

Wyda replaces Superintendent Gerald Marcinak who was informed last month that his contract would not be renewed. Speaking last night, Marcinak said, "I was never asked, but if I had been asked, I would've said I was no longer interested in being superintendent of the Southeastern Greene School District."

After the meeting, Wyda said he had been "definitely interested" in the job.

In a related move, Bob Long, a former head teacher for the Bobtown and Glassworks elementary schools, was named elementary principal. The board voted to eliminate the position of assistant superintendent in favor of an administrative structure of superintendent, high school principal and elementary principal. The superintendent will assume the duties of the assistant superintendent with Long's duties including overseeing both the Bobtown and Penn Pitt elementary schools.

Wyda has served the Southeastern Greene School District as assistant superintendent for the past 11 years. He also served as a guidance counselor and high school principal there. He studied at the University of Indiana in Bloomington, Fairmont State College and did graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh and then West Virginia University, where he received his masters degree in guidance and counseling. He and his wife, Katherine, reside in Pt. Marion and are the parents of four children.

Long, who lives in Carmichaels, served as head teacher for 12 years at the Glassworks school and for 10 years at Bobtown before the position was eliminated. In naming him elementary principal, the board said his salary would be negotiated.

Faced with the possibility of overspending this year's budget, the board agreed to put a freeze on the purchase of textbooks or supplies and it scheduled a work session for Jan. 29 to discuss the problem.

Board President George Biletz called for the motion and recommended that every purchase be put in writing and then signed by a principal, the business manager, and the superintendent. "If it's not in the budget, we don't have the money for it," Biletz said.

Marcinak urged the board to begin planning now for next year's budget by preparing inventories and supply requisitions. "If there's any vibrations coming to the superintendent that he's overspending you better take another look at (the budget)," he said. "You inherited a financial difficulty and we adopted a very shallow budget. We have categories right now that are overspent."

Marcinak also requested compensation for the extra work he has done this year on managing the district's transportation and food service programs, reminding the board that it discussed giving him more money when it added the programs to his work load. "I expected compensation but half the year's gone and no one's talked about it," he said. The board decided to table the matter and Bob Headlee noted that with the district's current financial problems there might not be any money to compensate him.

Voting "with reservations," the board approved payment of $129,045 to Robert Scheeren, architect for the Penn Pitt project, and payment of $7,500 to William Garlick, general contractor, for painting at Bobtown. Last month the board had balked at making the final payments, claiming the work was not satisfactory.

In other business, the board:

- Agreed to pursue the possibility of having gas wells drilled at the high school and Penn Pitt school, at no cost to the district, by the EEI Geophysical Co.
- Named member Adam Novak as representative to the vo-tech board for a two year term;
- Set Sunday, June 2, as the high school graduation date;
- Heard reports from Wyda and Bill Guappone on the TELLS testing program. Marcinak noted the district will receive $12,822 for the remediation program.

Armed Trio Removes Children

WAYNESBURG — State police at Waynesburg have issued an alert for three people who forcibly removed two children from a trailer home three miles east of Waynesburg.

Warrants have been issued for Donald Wayne Stephens, 46, and Irma Loraine Stephens, 28, both of Jamaica, N.Y., and an unknown third person on charges of burglary, simple assault and criminal conspiracy.

Police said three people went to the home of Valerie D. Conaway at Rohanna's Trailer Court at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, where the unknown man got into the house on the pretext of being a delivery man.

Once inside, they said, he pulled a revolver and forced Mrs. Conaway into a rear bedroom, after which the other two suspects entered the house. They said Stephens then pulled a hunting knife, threatened Mrs. Conaway, and tied her with rope.

They then took two children, ages 5 and 7, and fled in a brown van. Police said the youngsters are children of David Conaway and Irma Loraine Stephens by a prior marriage.

The unknown assailant was described as being a white male in his twenties or early thirties; 5 feet, 11 inches tall, with brown hair and weighing approximately 250 pounds. They said he had five or six pierced earrings in his left ear.

Firemen Called

BOBTOWN — An overheated chimney Wednesday night sent Bobtown volunteer firefighters to the home of Don Whyte, Taylortown.

Fire Chief Paul Novak said there was no appreciable damage done to the home. Firefighters received the call at 6:10 p.m.

Consol Makes Gift To College

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg College has received an atomic absorption instrument from Consolidation Coal Co. that will be used for instruction and research in the college's Department of Chemistry.

The instrument represents an important addition to the department, according to Dr. Robert LaCount, chairman of the chemistry department. "This atomic absorption instrument allows us to determine metallic elements in trace quantities in water," LaCount said. "In instrumental-analysis courses, for example, we will use this equipment to identify a variety of metal ions in water at the parts per million level."

An atomic absorption instrument also has applications in geology, where soils can be dissolved in acid for analysis, and in biology, where blood analysis can be completed to identify potassium, sodium and calcium.

LaCount said the instrument is an atomic absorption spectrometer with a data system, making the equipment very flexible. The unit is being used by several seniors in their research projects, and many students majoring in medical technology take quantitative analysis courses and would use the instrument.

LaCount noted the atomic absorption instrument is one of many pieces of sophisticated scientific equipment that students at Waynesburg College use. "We believe in the 'hands on' approach to learning and research," he said. "Students at the college get to use equipment, including laboratory equipment that is interfaced with computers."

Waynesburg College offers both an academic major and minor program in chemistry. Under the chemistry major are four program options: chemistry, chemical management, a health profession option that can prepare a student for medical or dental school, and a secondary education option. All four program options are approved by the American Chemical Society.

Central Greene Directors Cut Tax Collectors' Pay

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — The Central Greene School Board moved Jan. 8 to stabilize its tax collection costs by changing the way tax collectors are paid and freezing their compensation for the next four years.

Rather than being paid a percentage of the property taxes and per capita taxes they collect, the six elected tax collectors will receive fixed annual salaries based on their 1984 compensation.

Total 1984 compensation was $84,200 — $23,500 for the tax collector in Franklin Township, $12,070 in Perry Township, $9,385 in Washington Township, $13,080 in Wayne Township, $12,185 in Whiteley Township and $13,980 in Waynesburg Borough.

In the past, the collectors received 2.5 percent of the first $250,000 collected, 2 percent on the next $250,000, 1.5 percent on the next $250,000 and 1 percent on everything above $750,000.

Walter Stout, district business manager, said the compensation currently amounts to 1.95 percent of taxes collected, which is somewhat higher than the state average. He noted that compensation has been gradually increasing in all six municipalities due to increases in the assessment base and the property tax millage.

He noted that in Franklin Township, the assessment base stood at $12 million five years ago and has risen to $20 million.

"With the fixed salaries, the compensation will remain stable for the next four years even if the assessment base and millage continue to rise," he said. "We would like to see our tax collection costs come down to about 1 percent."

Another factor in the decision was the recent acquisition of computer printed tax notes, which relieves the collectors of the burden of manually writing all the information included on the tax notice.

The change was made at this time because the school code requires boards to take formal action prior to Feb. 15 of a municipal election year if there is to be a change in the method of compensating elected tax collectors. Thus, candidates running for the office know what their pay will be.

Much of the meeting dealt with matters involving personnel.

The board accepted the resignation of Curtis Griffin as assistant junior high football coach and appointed John Barber as assistant high school baseball coach.

The resignation of Lori Aldhizer, a third grade teacher at the Perry School, was accepted effective Feb. 27. Nancy G. Fahey was hired as a part-time Spanish teacher at the high school.

Bruce Lemley, a kindergarten and first grade teacher at the Perry

School, was granted an extension of his sabbatical leave through the second semester, with Jane Schrock being named to continue as long-term substitute in the position.

Debbie Iams, who has been serving as guidance counselor at the middle school while Raymond Murdock was on sabbatical leave for health reasons, will continue in that position for the second semester since Murdock will be using accumulated sick leave days during the semester. Barbara Gernert will continue as reading teacher at the school until Mrs. Iams returns.

The board accepted the resignation of Carol Harrison, classroom monitor in the middle school special education program, effective Jan. 25. The position will be posted.

The board also:
 ✓ Awarded a $2,070 contract to Greene Lawn Care to lime, fertilize, aerate and overseed the high school football field.

✓ Awarded a $6,301 contract to George Sirakos of Pittsburgh, the low bidder, to furnish three sets of exterior doors and hardware for the high school.

WAYNESBURG — In past years the Greene County Unit, American Cancer Society, has sold Daffodils as a fund raiser and think spring event.

The semi-formal ball is scheduled for 8 to 12 p.m. Saturday, March 2, at the Waynesburg Elks Lodge. Music for dancing will be provided by Lou Lawrence and his orchestra. Plans are for the Daffodil Ball to become an annual event for the Greene County Unit.

Local Student Returns From Netherlands

WAYNESBURG — Kurt Marisa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Marisa of 130 Crago Avenue, Waynesburg, and a 1983-84 Rotary Foundation graduate scholar, has recently returned from a 17-month study at the Institute of Social Studies (ISS) at The Hague in the Netherlands.

A graduate of Waynesburg Central High School, he obtained his bachelor of science degree in economics and a bachelor of arts degree in international studies from West Virginia University in 1982.

At the conclusion of his studies in December 1984, Kurt received a master of arts degree in International Development Studies. His studies focused on the internal and international political factors that influence the social and economic development of nations in the world community.

His primary area of interest was in the politics of nuclear weapons which formed the basis of his master's thesis which was titled, "The Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons: Implications for World Security."

The Institute of Social Studies is one of 14 international universities in Holland. The small student body of 350 represents nearly 70 countries, primarily Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Because of this, Kurt received the dual advantage of attending a university in a foreign country where his academic colleagues hailed from a diverse spectrum of world cultures.

The only American student at ISS in 1983-84, Kurt said he believed it was a stimulating challenge for him to represent his country in as favorable a light as possible and to adequately fulfill his function as a Rotary ambassador of goodwill from the United States.

Kurt immensely enjoyed his stay and travel in The Netherlands. He also took the opportunity to travel extensively in Europe.

His three months of travel took him to most of the countries of western Europe, including West Germany, Spain, Italy, England and the micro-state of Liechtenstein. He also visited North Africa and several eastern European countries, including East Germany, Hungary, Romania and Yugoslavia, where he attended the 1984 Winter Olympics at Sarajevo.

According to Kurt, one of the things which struck him most during his study and travels in Europe was the amount and intensity of misguided and blatant "anti-Americanism" and misconceptions of the United States in third world countries as well as in eastern and western Europe.

These feelings were directed at the Americans as individuals, the American way of life and the U.S. system and government, he said.

Kury, who is planning a career in the U.S. Foreign Service, will be available during February and March to speak about his experiences to Rotary Clubs in District 733. His topics could include his impressions of Holland and study at the international university; the field of international development studies or nuclear weapons politics and the roots, manifestations and types of anti-Americanism and misunderstandings of the United States around the world.

On request he can also show a slide presentation of the Netherlands and several other European countries.

For additional information, you may contact him by calling 412-627-8869.

Countians Roll In Blue Ribbons

By Phyllis K. Ross, Staff Writer

HARRISBURG — The 69th annual Farm Show will long be remembered in Greene County. So far, their exhibitors have been winners all the way.

Wednesday was no exception at the Farm Show Arena in Harrisburg as Greene Countians were taking championships in both the large and small arenas.

Two beef breeders from Greene were named premier breeders in the beef competition, held Wednesday in the large arena.

In the Shorthorn beef breed, the premier breeder honor went to Woodside Farm, owned by the Bradley Eisiminger family of Waynesburg R.D.3.

Premier breeders in the Horned Hereford division were brothers, William and Earl Renner, also of Waynesburg R.D.3.

Another Greene Countian, Tracey L. Brookover of Mt. Morris R.D.1, won reserve champion in the junior sheep show with her yearling Suffolk ewe.

Earlier in the week the Orndoff family of Waynesburg R.D.3 won it all, or almost all, in the draft horse competition with their Belgians.

They showed the winner in the 3- to 4-year-old stallion group, the senior champion stallion, the any-age stallion, the yearling mare, the mare foal, the any-age mare, the junior get of sire, produce of mare and two-mares-belonging-to-one-exhibitor classes.

Also on Monday, Dale Crouse of Prosperity R.D.1 showed a Corriedale spring ram lamb to its championship. Crouse also showed the winner and the second place ewe in the Corriedale spring ewe lamb class, and the winner of a pair of ewe lambs. He placed second with his registered Corriedale flock.

In the Junior Sheep Show, Becky Black of Avella R.D.1 showed a Suffolk ewe to its reserve championship.

As expected, Jay McCarrell of Eighty Four was the big winner in the hay competition. In addition to winning both the grand and reserve championships, he won first with his alfalfa, later cutting, grass mixed first and second cutting, timothy, mixed grass, later cutting, and mixed more than 50 percent legumes.

In the family living competition, where 4-Hers exhibit clothing they have made, a state award for outstanding construction went to Kathy McWilliams of 331 Trinity Drive, Washington.

Daughter Of Former Countians Is Co-Author Of New Diet Book

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Linda Lackney Broda, the daughter of former Waynesburg residents, and Zoe Ann Komaransky have authored the book, "The World's Most Convenient Diet," that will be reviewed in the March issue of Woman's Day magazine.

Ms. Broda is the daughter of Al and Martha Lackney and the granddaughter of Mrs. Delilah Summersgill, 438 Braden Street, Waynesburg.

The book features convenience foods and simple meals incorporated into a weight-loss program. The co-authors have found the idea very well received.

The two dietitians have also been signed to a book tour that will include appearances in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Meanwhile, both continue their work in Cleveland at the University Circle at the Community Dialysis Center.

Ms. Broda graduated with honors from Kent State University with a bachelor of science degree in nutrition. She went on to complete a dietetic internship at University Hospitals of Cleveland while attending graduate school at Case Western.

Since receiving her master of science degree in nutrition, she has worked for the past several years with kidney patients on hemodialysis.

Ms. Broda has been active in many professional organizations, including the Cleveland Dietetic Association, Ohio Dietetic Association, Kidney Foundation of Ohio and the Northern and Eastern Ohio Renal Dietitians.

In 1983, she received the award for "Recognized Young Dietitian of the Year" by the American Dietetic Association. She has had several articles published on various aspects of nutrition for kidney patients.

Waynesburg Native Rides To Victory

FLORENCE, Ky. — Steve Neff, formerly of Waynesburg, is making headlines at Latonia Race Track.

He always dresses in the front stall of the Latonia jockey room. Maybe that's because he wants to be noticed.

The 33-year-old native of Waynesburg is doing his share of re-writing the record books — but few people are noticing.

"I rode in the Breeder's Cup (he finished 10th aboard Smart 'n Sharp) and was in front until the quarter-pole," Neff said, "but I'm still unknown around these parts."

Not for long.

Neff, currently residing in nearby Ft. Mitchell, is the defending Latonia riding champion for the Winter/Spring session. A year ago, he rode 73 winners, a Latonia record for any male jockey, in 77 dates for his first Latonia title.

He's like to repeat the trick this season.

"I think my problem was that I've never really operated on a racing circuit before," he said. "I've more or less decided on the Latonia-River Downs circuit for the next few years. That will help get my name around these parts."

His name is already in the Latonia record book and he plans on making more space in for his name.

He rode his 100th winner in 1984 at Latonia on Sunday, Dec. 30, in the sixth race aboard Miss Bolt. It was an up-and-down year for Neff; that started on top and finished almost near the top spot again.

After winning the Latonia title in April, his first at the Northern Kentucky oval, he moved across the river to Cincinnati to race at River Downs. He rode 41 winners to finish second in the standings for the first River Downs meeting.

Then he broke his leg, but managed to come back with 23 winners for fourth place. He split his time during September, riding at Darby Downs at Grove City, Ohio, and Latonia and managed just one winner in six Latonia starts.

He returned to Latonia to get beaten for the riding championship during the Holiday Meeting and in the very last race, on the final date of the meeting, Mike McDowell edged Neff for the crown.

Neff credits his most recent success to trainer George Arnold. "He rides me on everything he has," Neff said. "I appreciate his confidence in me."

Steve Neff doesn't talk much. However, he's making most of the noise these days on the racing strip. He may well wind up being Latonia's all-time leading career winner.

Elimination of WERC Calls For Explanation

Waynesburg Borough Council's action in pulling the rug from under the Waynesburg Economic Revitalization Corp. (WERC) came as a complete surprise and left a lot of unanswered questions.

Apparently no one outside of council — and certainly not members of the WERC board of directors or its executive director — had any advance warning that council intended to take over administration of a $510,000 housing rehabilitation grant which WERC received in March of last year.

Since the action was accompanied by an announcement that council would also assume responsibility for applying for any future grants, it effectively put WERC out of business.

WERC came up with the idea of applying to the state Department of Community Affairs for the Small Communities Program grant with the idea of using part of the money to establish a shelter home for the frail elderly and the bulk of the money for loans and grants to renovate housing in the northeastern quadrant of the borough. The borough agreed to the proposal and utilized the services of Gaydos/Chambers of Uniontown to prepare the grant application.

The DCA approved the grant in March 1984, largely because of the innovative shelter proposal, earmarking $150,000 of the $510,000 for purchase and remodeling of a large house on High Street by the Area Agency on Aging, which will operate the shelter.

The balance of $360,000 was left for the rehabilitation of housing, and WERC was just now moving into a position to accept applications from homeowners for loans and grants.

If there was any reason why council was dissatisfied with WERC's performance it was not made known when council took its action last week.

The agency certainly performed well in carrying out the downtown rehabilitation project which was financed by a $463,500 federal grant received in 1982, and there was no hint it was not doing an equally good job with the latest project.

If the action was taken out of personal animosity toward WERC's executive director, as has been rumored during the past week, it should be brought into the open.

A special meeting of council is scheduled for this evening for the express purpose of enlightening residents about the future of the rehabilitation project. It certainly should include full disclosure of the reasons council had for eliminating an agency which most people seemed to feel had provided the community with a valuable service.

AROUND TOWN

By THE STAFF

The Waynesburg Republican would like to hear from out-of-state readers who would like to have a newsy item published about local folks.

Congratulations to the jazz ensemble at Waynesburg Central High School for having been invited to the inauguration in Washington, D.C. They were rated "superior" for their performance. Knap's Battery, a Civil War re-enactment group, was to have participated in the parade which was cancelled because of the extreme cold.

Local tow-truck operators are doing a thriving business because of the cold. Service stations are also busy and selling lots of antifreeze, radiator hoses, etc. Many snow shovellers are going door-to-door and doing a thriving business as well.

New births include a daughter, Ali Marie to Mr. and Mrs. James Morris Jr. of Carmichaels born Jan. 10 in University Hospital, Morgantown, W.Va. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Robinson of Waynesburg and Mr. and Mrs. James Morris of Carmichaels. Also a son, Ivan Cody was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. (Luther) Moore of Clarksville on Christmas day in University Hospital. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ira O. (Bus) Moore of Waynesburg and Mr. and Mrs. John Lorence Sr. of Clarksville.

Marshall Lemley of Zephyr Hills, Fla. is again busy planning for the eighth annual Greene County Night in Florida to be held at 5 p.m. Saturday, March 2 at the Largo Elks Club at 3054 East Bay Drive. Reservations are to be made by Feb. 23 by contacting Marshall at 1618 Santee Lah Drive, Zephyr Hills, Fla. 34248.

In servicemen news, Marine Lance Cpl. Barry J. Miller, son of Bob Miller, 800 Sherman Avenue, Waynesburg, was promoted to his present rank with the 4th Marine Division at Wheeling. Airman Richard T. Majernik, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Majernik of Waynesburg, graduated from the U.S. Air Force aircraft maintenance course at Sheppard AFB, Texas. He will be stationed at Johnson AFB, N.C. Master Sgt. Rafael Gomez Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Rafael Gomez of Carmichaels, has re-enlisted for four years in the U.S. Force. He is stationed at the RAF base at Upper Heyford, England. Jeffrey L. Frye, son of Janet Frye of Rogersville, has been promoted to the rank of senior airman in the U.S. Air Force. He is stationed at Fairchild AFB in Washington.

The colonel is coming to Waynesburg. Kentucky Fried Chicken will be erecting a new facility at the Greene Shopping Plaza, adjacent to the Carmichaels bank's drive-in. The owner has two other franchises in Phillippi and Grafton, W.Va.

The extreme cold this past Monday even shut down the Greene County Court. Although the lawyers were present for a civil trial, there was a lack of jurors to begin the case involving an insurance argument.

18 Below Matches Record

The record low temperature for the area of 18 degrees below zero was set Feb. 10, 1899. It was matched twice — in 1963 and again on Jan. 17, 1982.

Circumstances in February 1899 were remarkably similar to those experienced here in the past few days, when the "Alberta Clipper" brought snow, high winds and frigid air down from the northwest.

On Feb. 9, 1899, the Washington Reporter noted that the cold that had gripped the Dakotas the day before had reached this area, causing the mercury to dip below the zero mark. The edition noted that 10 to 12 inches of snow had fallen the previous day, and high wind was whipping snow into deep drifts, making it difficult for farmers to reach market.

Reports of the temperature in rural areas of the county and in Greene County were frightening. The mercury dipped to 28 below in Claysville, minus 38 in West Arny and at Swarts in Greene County, to 40 below in Lagonda and to 42 below at the Hackney station of the Washington and Waynesburg Railroad.

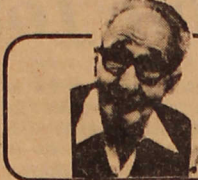

"The station agent at that place, a reliable gentleman, reports one of his thermometers having burst," the Reporter stated.

The newspaper cited a shortage of gas and coal, forcing the closing of some schools and factories. On the W&W Railroad, many seats were reported empty, as "everyone who could afford to was staying at home." Traffic, mainly horse-drawn sleds, was reported very light.

"Overcoats were worn by many men, right in the house, where in a number of families members remained in bed rather than move about in cold rooms," the article stated.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

EDITOR'S NOTE: With a recent decision by the Greene County commissioners to sell the old County Office Building to a firm which plans to convert it into apartments for the elderly, the Republican is republishing Fact and Folklore columns which first appeared in February 1973 which relate to the building. The follow-up article will appear next week.

When former Judge J. I. Hook of the Greene County Courts walkout of the County Office Building for the last time recently, it marked the end of a long, long trail of poignant memories which reflect more than a half century of the day-to-day life of Waynesburg and the county.

The six-story brick building was erected after the turn of the century as the home of the fledgling People Bank. Then, as yet today, it towered over the neighboring structures on High (Main) Street, even though slightly dwarfed by the cupola of the courthouse across the street where the statue of Gen. Nathaniel Greene stands on the highest peak.

Judge Hook first moved into the building after fire destroyed the former American National Bank, on the site of the present Long building, in 1914.

Many other attorneys along with several physicians and professional men were already tenants of the town's one and only "skyscraper" which was the pride of the townspeople. It was regarded as a forerunner of others sure to follow when the Pittsburgh Coal would be "opened up" (developed).

At that time everybody said Waynesburg would become another Uniontown. But fate, through the lack of railroad transportation, decreed otherwise.

Thus the People Bank Building, as it was known until purchased as a county office building in 1950, became the nerve center of much of Greene County's legal business, medical practice, educational administration, agricultural extension activities, the administration of justice in various squires' offices, and a newspaper bureau.

The six-story structure soon became a figurative beehive of activity in which the skills and special capabilities of its highly varied occupants touched all aspects of everyday life.

In contrast to the more relaxed atmosphere which prevailed elsewhere through the town in those days when customers in stores "bought" rather than being sold or "merchandised," and the pace was deliberate, a feeling of tension and hustle pervaded most of the offices in the bank building.

The barristers dominated the scene to a considerable extent as it was a time when many big coal deals still gripped the imagination of many and the court calendars were filled with lawsuits every term of court. Some of these were dragged on for years in a few cases, but there seemed to be a plethora of them at all times.

Up near the top floor was the sedate firm of Kyle and Reinhart, including W.J. Kyle, then a young attorney originally from Iowa, and P.D. Reinhart, whose roots were deep in Greene County.

Others included that of Martin and Garrison. Martin was Edward Martin, then a fledgling barrister, who was later to become both a Pennsylvania governor and one of its U.S. Senators, as well as Colonel of the 110th Infantry in World War I and Major General of the 28th Division in World War II.

His partner, J.A. Garrison, known locally as "Boss" Garrison, helped launch Gen. Martin on his political career.

A neighboring barrister, Atty. Samuel M. Smith, who had come to Waynesburg from nearby Jefferson, became a legend in his own right through his acumen in the handling of estates and his astuteness in all Orphans Court proceedings.

In later years, his junior partner, a World War I veteran from Canonsburg, J. Ernest Isherwood, rose to State Commander of the American Legion and became nationally known for his oratorical skill, not only on Legion and patriotic matters but on public affairs generally.

A fatal illness at the height of his career short circuited what the state's most astute political observers said was a certain path to the governor's chair in those days of Republican domination of state politics.

One of three later associates in the Smith office, Thomas Balaban, originally from Brownsville, became state insurance director and parliamentarian for the House of Representatives. Another, R. Stanley Smith, a cousin of the firm's founder, served as a county commissioner, president of the State Fish Commission, and state president of the Izaak Walton League of America.

The third associate, Anthony Marion, born and reared in Mather and the first to enter the legal profession from his home town, continues the Smith office to this day and also is counsel to the present county commissioners.

Shortly after moving his office to the Peoples Bank in 1914, Judge Hook formed a partnership with J.R. Scott, a member of another Greene County family who oke that of the Hooks is embedded deep in Greene County history. Together they made a matchless team because of their diverse personalities.

Hook, a large man who moved in deliberate, long-considered manner with heavy emphasis on thoroughness with no detail overlooked, exemplified the power and majesty of the law. Scott, by contrast, worked with the rapidity and decisiveness of a terrorist. Action was his forte and as he once told an associate who had complimented him on his courtroom ability, "I always believed in getting a case underway, to try one procedure or another, and if it wasn't the proper one for that occasion to use another."

Other individual attorneys with offices in the Peoples Bank Building at various times included Carl Crawford, an expert in courtroom procedure; Harry Huffman, an acknowledged expert as defense counsel; Albert Nichols, who once served as district attorney; William King; Edward Patterson; the father-son team of S.M. and Wood Williamson, and others who will be recalled in next week's article which will also listing physicians, educators and others.

Next week's installment will also include a story on a country doctor who told the then governor of Pennsylvania (not Ed Martin) to "go to Hell," and a small-time actor who borrowed an old time Oliver type-writer for typing scripts only a few years before he became one of the world's first famous radio comics.

letterbox Democrats Seek Charter

A considerable controversy has erupted in the Greene County Democratic Party over the arbitrary decision of recently elected County Chairman Jim Harris to forbid a group of young Democrats from receiving a formal charter from the Democratic State Committee in Harrisburg. All that is necessary for the charter's existence is Mr. Harris' signature.

Perhaps some background is in order. Bill Groves, former county chairman, urged some of the younger committee people and their friends to organize, register voters, and participate actively as a club similar to the Democratic Women's Clubs at Waynesburg and Carmichaels. Chartered Young Democratic Clubs have been active all over the state for many years; U.S. Rep. Austin J. Murphy was the president of the Washington Young Dems in years gone by, and State Sen. J. Barry Stout (as well as Mr. Harris) have also been involved in similar organizations. Many committee people and local officials (including myself and Greene County Commissioner Dan Bailey) have agreed in principle to the charter. Mr. Harris continues in his obstinate rejection.

People will recall the network camera crews capturing the Reagan victory. Young voters had obviously made a difference. In former days, in county courthouses around the country, a few men would sit in a small side room off the main corridor and draw up a slate for every office from Recorder of Deeds to State Senator. These days are gone. The decline of patronage, coupled with the rise of a professional Civil Service and the public service unions, militate against "politics as usual." The old days are as distant as the dinosaurs.

Mr. Harris, a newcomer to Greene County politics, initially sought election to the state house in Washington County in the 1982 primary; he was vaporized. It would appear that he must fear any competition by his control (whatever that means) of the local Party from these young people. His moving to Greene County to advance his political fortunes has made him very insecure; hence, his opposition to the proposed charter to the already-organized Greene County Young Democrats.

In the last century, King Leopold of Belgium attempted to administer the former Belgian Congo (now the Republic of Zaire) as his personal property. This African empire spanned hundreds of thousands of square miles of jungles and rivers. Its control by one man proved impossible, and Leopold was compelled to surrender his claim to the Belgian people in the early 1900s.

Similarly, it's high time that the pathetic pretensions of this would-be Leopold disappear. His energies ought to be merged with those of the Young Democrats in the pool of the common struggle for the party. He should grant the charter at once to these young people who registered hundreds and hundreds of voters at our fairs and festivals.

In furthermore call upon Mr. Harris to debate this entire question with me at the next meeting of the Greene County Democratic Party — should he have the good sense and "democratic" spirit to call one.

My friend Mazy dropped in for coffee the other morning.

"Where's our friend Honey Bunch?" I asked.

"That's what I'd like to know," Mazy said. "She's not home yet, and I'm beginning to be afraid that we should notify the FBI, or somebody."

"Where did she go?" I wondered. "I guess I haven't heard from her in a couple of weeks."

"I know. Nobody has. She left in such a hurry she didn't stop to say good-bye to anybody. I just hope she's not in jail."

"Why would she be in jail?" I shuddered.

"Well, she started out for the inauguration..."

"On, no," I said, holding my head in my hands.

"Yes," Mazy said. "She heard they were advertising for performers to be in the events down there, and she decided to try out."

"Good grief," I cried. "She's not qualified for something like that."

"Yes, she is — she doesn't belong to the actors' union, and that's what they wanted. You know — people to work for nothing."

"So I heard. But I suppose they also wanted people with some demonstrable talent."

"She took along her harmonica," Mazy said. "She's learned to play 'Yankee Doodle' on it."

"And they advertised for All-American looks," Mazy went on, "and Honey Bunch said she has the freckles for it."

"Like Mickey Rooney," I muttered. "And you say you haven't heard from her since she took off on this escapade?"

"No. I looked for her on television, but I didn't see her performing at all."

"I'm not too surprised at that," I said. "Where else could she have gone?"

"I'm really afraid she might have tried to go to the inaugural ball," Mazy said.

"You don't think she was trampled in the crush?" I cried.

"I don't know, but I'm afraid of something like that."

"But surely she didn't have an invitation to the ball, did she?"

"Of course not."

"Then there's nothing to worry about," I said soothingly.

"Yes, there is. What if she somehow got herself an invitation, and actually went to one of the balls?"

"That would be very nice," I began.

"No!" Mazy shouted. "She wouldn't realize the danger she was in! I read in the papers that the tickets to the balls were divided by states. People from certain states were supposed to go to the balls assigned to them."

"So?"

"So, Pennsylvania was assigned to go to the ball with Texas and Alabama!"

"No!" I cried. "She might as well be assigned to Russia and China! What would they do to her if she started playing 'Yankee Doodle' on her harmonica?"

"Not only that. Knowing Honey Bunch, she might have started playing 'Hail to the Lion,' or 'Hail to Pitt,' too."

Curry Home Party Is Appreciated

I would like to re-enforce the thoughts in Brenda L. Baysinger's recent letter about the Halloween party at Curry Home and add to that, the thanks for family members and friends of all the residents for the Christmas party.

The love and devotion of the administration and staff at Curry Home is reflected in the success of these affairs. The success is the result of the hours of planning, the after-hours of work, the involvement and coordination of all personnel and the participation of their personal families in the special activities and events, above and beyond the daily care needs and concerns of the residents.

Yellow Jackets Face Tough St. Vincent Team

Harold Hamlin and Waynesburg are looking to make up some ground against St. Vincent Wednesday night.

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

In the world of sports jargon, coaches find several ways to create advantages for their teams. One way is to make an opponent look unbeatable then gain a big psychological boost from defeating them.

Waynesburg College head basketball coach Rudy Marisa and St. Vincent head coach Bernie Matthews were at their best Monday night. Each could be the public relations director for the other's team.

"In our district, I would probably classify Waynesburg and Pitt-Bradford as the teams with the most outstanding talent and depth," Matthews said. "They have the talent to win the whole thing and right behind them are Point Park and Westminster. But believe me, Rudy has the talent to win."

Marisa fired right back: "They are an experienced team with I think all of their starters back. They are smart players and they can shoot. Plus they are quick. What more can you ask for from a team?"

"They beat Geneva by 13 points the other night and they have beat Geneva, Pitt-Bradford and Point Park in their last three games. They are averaging 83 points in their last three games."

So, according to the coaches, Waynesburg and St. Vincent are powerhouses. Well, that's accurate if records are good indicators.

Waynesburg has won six of its last seven games and has a 7-3 overall record. St. Vincent is 9-6 overall.

The Yellow Jackets are also right behind St. Vincent in the District 18 standings at 4-1 while the first-place Bearcats are 5-1.

That makes Wednesday night's 8 p.m. game between the two college teams important. And in addition to those facts, it also has an intense rivalry.

"It's a great rivalry," says Matthews. "The two teams play hard and as far as teams executing, these two traditionally play a sound game. I'm really looking forward to it."

Matthews has reason to be optimistic. His starting lineup is a veteran one with one senior, three juniors and a sophomore. Forward Randy Jordan (6-4) is the Bearcats' high scorer averaging 15 points and a returning second-team All-District player while center Mo Hill (6-7) is averaging 12.

Forwards Marty May (6-4) and Shawn O'Barto and guards Mike Matthews and Al Guist average between seven and nine points each.

"We have a balanced attack," Matthews said. "We have no superstars so we have to spread it out."

Waynesburg is led by 6-5½ senior Paul Stanley, who is averaging 24 points a game and 6-6 sophomore Harold Hamlin, who is averaging 23. Point guard Tim McConnell, a transfer from Geneva who has moved into a starting role after becoming eligible Jan. 1, is averaging 11. Don Crawford and Rick Puskar, a transfer from Penn State-Fayette, will also start Wednesday.

"We don't have a Stanley or a Hamlin that can score 20 to 25 a night," Matthews said. "Hamlin is a legitimate Division I player and Stanley is a scorer. Waynesburg can also go deep, eight or nine players."

Marisa, while conceding the fact his team has been successful this season, says he's still searching for the right combination. "What I've been waiting for is one guy to step forward and show he is ahead of the other players. If we could get that we'd be much better off. We have 14 games coming up in the next 30 days so we have to use a lot of players but I'd like someone to make a move."

Young Jackets Find The Way To Victory

By John Barker, O-R Sports Staff

WEXFORD — When asked about his team's ability to win despite its obvious youth and inexperience, Waynesburg College head coach Rudy Marisa offered a look of befuddlement and a slight pause.

Perhaps the fact that the Yellow Jackets, with their 72-67 District 18 win against LaRoche Wednesday, have won two critical games on the road over teams expected to battle for the top spot in district, slipped past him.

Marisa's team, despite the youth and inexperience, has learned to win. And against rival LaRoche at Carson Middle School, the Jackets did it with variety — something Marisa thinks may not work down the road.

The Red Devils probably don't see much wrong with Waynesburg's present system of shuffling players, though. Uncharacteristic as it is for a Marisa-coached team, it is working.

"It's a credit to them that we are performing as well as we are," Marisa said after the Jackets improved their record to 4-1 in the district and 7-3 overall. "We have been playing a lot of people and I'm looking for a player or two to step forward and play very well.

"The winning does feel good but the more you win the tougher it gets. Just in today's paper Coach (Jerry) Conboy said after winning a game that the teams to beat are Westminster, Pitt-Bradford and LaRoche. People aren't even considering us and we're winning. If we keep winning while we're trying to find ourselves then that's great."

The win was especially impressive coming off a five-point loss to West Liberty Monday night and considering the Jackets were playing a rejuvenated LaRoche team.

The Red Devils played with 6-5 center Don Matthews after he sat out the first half of the season. Matthews made LaRoche a much better team than its record indicated.

Against the Jackets, Matthews grabbed important rebounds and poured in a game-high 21 points. It wasn't enough, though, as LaRoche fell to 0-4 in the district and 2-8 overall.

"They have all their troops back now and have a full complement of players," Marisa said. "They are talented to the extent that I said in the beginning of the season I said I think they can win the district and I still do. They are still getting healthy and back together and they are big."

But Waynesburg was just a little better Wednesday night. Especially in the last few minutes.

Waynesburg led most of the game, including a 43-38 advantage at the half. It held its biggest lead, 54-45, with 14:37 left in the game.

But these games between Waynesburg and LaRoche are rarely blowouts. LaRoche showed why. Using a press, the Red Devils forced Waynesburg to commit numerous turnovers midway through the second half and mounted a comeback.

LaRoche outscored the Jackets, 10-2, for 3:50 to climb back in the game. A drive to basket and a layup by Chuck Collins snapped Waynesburg out of its slump and kept LaRoche from getting a bigger lead than 57-56 with 10:13 remaining.

Paul Stanley made the big difference at the end, keeping Waynesburg's small lead with four clutch free throws, first with 1:31 left to give the Jackets a 66-62 lead and second with 0:14 left for a 68-65 lead.

Waynesburg point guard Tim McConnell then sealed the win by stealing the ball of LaRoche's Kike

HAROLD HAMLIN

Rivera and making two free throws after being fouled.

"It was a coaching mistake on my part," said LaRoche head coach John Pasquinelli. "A couple of times we should have ran different offense and we didn't and we didn't stay with the man-to-man defense. We should have because it bothered them in the second half and got us back in the game."

"We got the lead and went to a zone and they found their poise. They put a lot of pressure on us after that with traps and we didn't react well and step out of them up closer to the lane."

Harold Hamlin led the Jackets with 20 points and 10 rebounds while Stanley scored 15 and McConnell 11. Levi Witherspoon scored 14 for LaRoche while Greg Mohr had 12.

Maintenance worker at the Greene Health Care nursing home works on broken sprinkler line.

Nursing Home Wing Flooded

WAYNESBURG — One wing of the Greene Health Care nursing home near Waynesburg was flooded with water early Tuesday morning when a frozen line burst in the fire sprinkler system.

None of the 99 residents were in the part of the building where the break occurred, having previously been moved to other wings because of a heating problem, according to Tom Boyd, administrator of the 120-bed nursing home.

"It's a mess to clean up, but it hasn't affected the care or comfort of any of our residents," Boyd said.

The break occurred at 2 a.m. in a joint of a one-inch cast iron water line above the ceiling in the hall of one of the home's five patient wings. The line carries 1,000 pounds of water pressure and the burst blew out a section of the pipe, flooding the floor of the hall and the 12 patient rooms in the wing. It completely inundated the patient room closest to the point of the break.

Richard Cole, maintenance manager at the nursing home, said he was able to turn off water to the wing within three minutes after the break occurred to reduce the amount of damage. No damage estimate has been made.

Waynesburg volunteer firemen were called as a precautionary measure to make sure that the water had not created any electrical problems which would endanger the safety of the residents.

"There is a prescribed routine we follow in any emergency and it was carried out to the full," Boyd said.

The administrator said patients in both the flooded wing and a companion wing had been moved to other parts of the building on Sunday when sub-zero temperatures caused problems with the heating system, resulting in an inadequate amount of heat in the two wings, a condition which he feels led to freezing of the sprinkler line.

The new facility, which accepted its first residents in March of last year, is located in the Rolling Meadows section of Franklin Township, east of Waynesburg. The home is owned by Beverly Enterprises of Pasadena, Calif., which operates 900 such homes throughout the United States.
