County Planners Give Nod To Restaurants, Store

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Site plans for two new restaurants and a catalog store and applications for community improvement grants being submitted by four municipalities were reviewed by the Greene County Planning Commission at its monthly meeting Monday.

Conditional final approval was given to site plans for a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant and a general menu restaurant, as well as for a Sears Catalog store, all of which will be located in Franklin Township near Waynesburg. Franklin Township supervisors also discussed the new stores at their meeting Monday. (See story on Page B-1.)

Planner Valerie Cole was authorized to issue final approval notification as soon as anticipated letters of approval are received from the Soil Conservation Service, Franklin Township supervisors and the Department of Environmental Resources.

The Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant will be erected by Fred and Richard Martin of Philippi, W. Va., who already operate two franchises in West Virginia. It will be located at the intersection of Route 21 and the entrance road to the Greene Plaza Shopping Center, two miles east of Waynesburg.

The Martins said they expect to begin construction as soon as there is a break in the weather with an aim to having the restaurant open by this spring.

John Christopher, who operates the Chicken House Restaurant in Morrisville, received conditional final approval on a new restaurant building to be built across Route 21 from his present location, where the former Morgan Auto Parts building stood. It will be called the Iron Skillet Restaurant.

Christopher also hopes to begin construction as soon as weather permits and will erect a building containing 7,000 square feet.

Maureen Rohanna, who operates the Sears Catalog store at the corner of High and Porter Streets, submitted plans for a new store and warehouse to be located along Route 21 opposite the Greene County Fairgrounds, at the intersection with Park Avenue, the road which provides access to the county tennis courts and swimming pool.

She said that lack of adequate parking at the present location is the principal reason for the move, but added that the building might not be erected "for a year or two." She also said that care is being taken in the form of the type of building to be erected and landscaping to be provided to assure that the structure will blend in as much as possible and not create a problem for owners of homes in the area.

She added that most of her business is done by telephone, with most traffic generated by individuals coming to pick up merchandise. "We have very little walk-in business," she said. But she did say that a tractor-trailer brings in merchandise three mornings a week.

James Conrad, a resident of the area, expressed fear that the store would add to an already existing problem of safe access to Route 21, because there is no traffic signal at the intersection.

County Commissioners L. R. Santore, who was at the meeting, agreed that a traffic signal is badly needed and suggested that action be initiated to see if the Department of Transportation would approve one.

Final approval was given to Carnegie/Tembec for the erection of an office and laboratory building at the site of its new natural gas fractionation plant off Route 188, near the county fairgrounds.

Letters of intent from five municipalities to apply for money from the Department of Community Affairs under the Small Communities Development Block Grant program.

The Borough of Greensboro will seek $247,800 for 3,100 feet of new six-inch water line and eight fire hydrants on Main Street, as well as upgrading of sidewalks and curbs.

Morgan Township will apply for a grant of $245,000 for laying of two miles of eight-inch water lines, with nine fire hydrants, along Route 221 to the Gateway Coal Mine just beyond the village of Lippincott to eliminate a water supply program for both Lippincott homes and the mine.

Center Township is applying for a grant to help offset the cost of a $625,000 project that would provide municipal water service to Rogersville, where wells are undependable and where there are no fire hydrants.

The line would be laid from a point near East View, where a new Franklin Township line will terminate, and it would involve the laying of 17,000 feet of 12-inch line and 4,000 feet of 6-inch line, along with the installation of 18 fire hydrants, to serve 100 homes, a rest home and several businesses.

The Borough of Clarksville is applying for a grant to raze four vacant and dilapidated houses and rehabilitate 32 others. It would make both grants and low-interest loans available to eligible property owners, with no amount mentioned in the application.

The fifth application will come from Franklin Township, which is applying for a grant of $230,000 to lay two miles of 8-inch water line and place nine fire hydrants to serve the community of Blairtown on Route 218, just south of Waynesburg, and the Emerald Mine portal and bathhouse.

It was noted that while Franklin Township has been assigned a separate allocation under the Community Development Block Grant Program, the other four municipalities will be competing for the some $250,000 assigned to Greene County for use of the smaller municipalities in the county.

In other action at the meeting, the planning commission approved a lot-split under which Russell Cowell of Franklin Township will be purchasing 40 acres of land along Route 19, south of Waynesburg, from Mary M. Rinehart as the site for a house.

Commission Chairman Robert Lang appointed Byron Hughes, Marian Rush and John Titus to a nominating committee to nominate commission officers for 1985.

Regular meetings will continue to be held at 7:30 p.m. on the fourth Monday of each month in the commissioners' meeting room of the County Office Building.

Surprise Motion At Jeff-Morgan; Ben Parker Field?

By Stan Diamond, Staff Writer

JEFFERSON — Although the Jefferson-Morgan School Board Monday night conducted priority business such as approving significant secondary curriculum additions and giving district tax collectors their first raise in 12 years, a motion at the end of the meeting made almost comical by its unexpected presentation will be what's remembered.

The motion by Clarence Virgin stunned other board members as well as the administration simply because of its completely out-of-the-blue nature and because it was something all other board members thought should be given just a little more ceremony.

Virgin's motion was to name the district's football field for Ben L. Parker, who was head football coach from 1936 through the 1954 season with the exception of the 1945 to 1947 seasons. His record stands at 122 wins, 14 losses, and 11 ties. He also served as high school principal from 1945 to his retirement in 1971 following which he was elected for one term as State Representative from the 50th Legislative District.

The board certainly wasn't against the motion, but they tried in vain to have Virgin hold off until the board's February meeting to allow time to come up with a fitting name, a formal resolution, and be able to have Parker attend the meeting and to be presented with a plaque. Virgin would not be denied, and the board passed the motion but will tie it with more formality at next month's meeting.

The curriculum changes for the junior-senior high to go into effect next year were made to fill out student schedules with more class work and less study hall time created when the district changed to an eight-period day last year. The additions for the seventh grade-students will be a nine-week study skills class, and a one-semester computer science course. The eighth-grade students will get a nine weeks computer science course in word processing and a one-semester course in analytic thinking.

In the senior high, Latin I, math I, II, and II, and computer science courses will be added as well as a foods course and one on decisions for marriage and independent living in the home economics department.

District Superintendent Kenneth Macek said no new staff will be required for the additional courses. He said the additions also complete the new state requirement for computer courses to be added to curricula.

In a related matter, curriculum guidelines for the elementary program revising the math and social studies courses and adding elementary health were submitted for review as required by the state.

With little hoopla, it was announced the district was terminating a lease between the State Public School Building Authority and the Jefferson-Morgan School District for the district's junior-senior high school building. Cutting through the terminology, it means the district has paid off its 30-year mortgage. "I started on the school board the year we entered this building," commented long-time board president Stanley Fowler. "It's been 30 long years."

The district also has just entered into a $3 million renovation of the building. In reviewing the project announced in December, Macek said the district has submitted the first two building PlanCon sections to the state, which have been approved. They include enrollment projections, and reimbursement rates. "The project qualifies for 50 percent reimbursement which is a very good place to be," Macek said in his report. He also outlined that the board and architect would be reviewing project drawings and proposed changes during a meeting sometime the second week in February.

The district's five tax collectors were given their first raise since 1972. The board approved them for a percentage of taxes collected increase from .0076 percent to .0093 percent. It raises the lowest salary of the Clarksville Borough tax collector from $800 to $1,400 and the highest current salary received by the Jefferson Township tax collector from $6,000 to $7,000. It will increase the district's cost from $12,975 to $17,575. The increase is through 1989.

Because the district closed schools for two days because of the recent cold weather make-up days were added for Friday, February 15, and Wednesday, April 3.

The board's meeting next month was changed from its regulary scheduled Feb. 18 date to Monday, Feb. 25 because of President's Day.

Board member Karen Sabo was re-appointed as the board representative to the Joint Operating Committee of the Greene County Vocational-Technical School.

The board hired Allen K. Grim, of Rices Landing, as a custodian. In other personnel matters a maternity leave requested by Charlotte Kuharic, an elementary teacher, was granted.

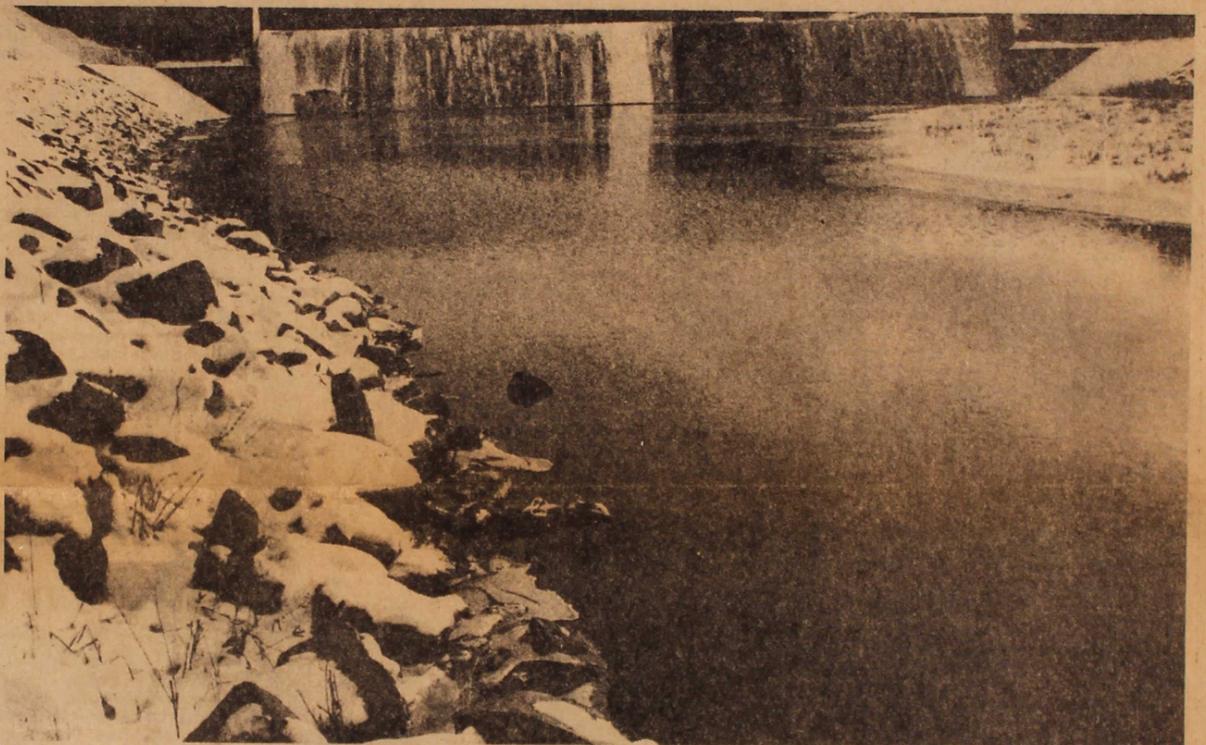

District tax collector's was given exoneration from further efforts to collect taxes from their delinquent tax payer lists. The names of the delinquent tax payers for 1983-84 will be turned over to a tax collection agency for collection. The exoneration of local tax collectors is so they are able to clear their books after having exhausted all their means to collect those taxes.

Fayette County Truck Driver Files Lawsuit Against GARC

WAYNESBURG — A Fayette County man who claims he was permanently injured when he swerved his coal truck to avoid hitting a van carrying retarded citizens brought suit in Greene County Court to recover damages "in excess of $10,000."

The action was brought by Gerald Elliott of Fairchance, naming as defendants Charles L. Phillips of Waynesburg R.D.1, the Greene County Association for Retarded Citizens (GARC), and the Washington-Greene Community Action Corp.

The complaint states that Elliott was driving his coal truck east on Route 21 on May 19, 1983 when Phillips, coming north on Route 88, ran

WERC Replaced In Waynesburg

By Bob Eichenlaub, Greene County Editor

WAYNESBURG — Waynesburg Borough Council said last Tuesday that it took administration of a $510,000 housing rehabilitation grant away from the Waynesburg Economic Revitalization Corp. because it was concerned about a premature salary payment.

Council said $8,087 in salary had been paid to WERC Executive Director Robert Lang before grant administrative funds were in place to back the expenditure.

The special meeting was held to shed light on recent council action to take over administration of the new program and, in effect, put WERC out of business as soon as it completes the few details remaining in the downtown rehabilitation project that began three years ago.

Councilmen Kenneth Fox and Frank VanCleve explained that since last May, when administrative funds for the downtown project were exhausted, Lang has received his salary from the borough general fund without council's authorization, calling it an advance drawn on funds to be provided by a new grant.

"We have no positive assurance that these payments will be covered, all or in part, by administrative funds provided in the new housing rehabilitation grant, despite the assurance of WERC that they will be," Fox said.

He also said the housing rehabilitation program is projected as a 24-month program, and that the payment of $8,087 has already cut deeply into the $20,000 allocated for the program administrator's salary "before the first nail has been driven."

He added that although council has requested time sheets from WERC to support the expenditure, they have not been forthcoming.

It is for this reason, he said, that council decided on Dec. 15 to stop payment of the administrator's salary and to work out an arrangement with Gaydos/Chambers of Uniontown under which they will take over administration of the program for a fee that will allow completion of the project within the limits of the administrative budget.

VanCleve said that since May, borough council as a body has approved payment of Lang's salary along with other general fund expenditures without knowing they were not backed by grant funds in place in borough accounts.

He added that Lang asked to be put on the agenda for council meetings in the first two months that the payments started, but subsequently requested that he be removed from both agendas.

"It was brought to my attention sometime midsummer that the cash position of our general fund would be improved when we received reimbursement for the wages already paid out to Mr. Lang by the borough secretary," VanCleve said in a prepared statement, adding that he had passed the over the remark because he was not told that the money would be drawn from a different grant than the wages had been coming from in the past.

He added that on Dec. 12, Fox advised him that he felt the borough had paid out the money improperly and that there was some question in his mind as to the borough being reimbursed for the expenditure.

VanCleve and Fox then advised other council members of the situation, leading to council's action at the Jan. 14 meeting to remove WERC from the grant program.

Charges Filed Against Owner Of Dead Cattle

DILLINER — Charges of cruelty to animals were filed Tuesday against Robert Donley of Dilliner after agents with the Washington County Humane Society discovered 14 cattle which had apparently starved to death on his farm.

Dave Sutton, an agent for the Humane Society, said the charges were filed with Magistrate Emil Bertugli in Carmichaels.

Sutton and Humane Society Director Sandra Thompson toured the large farm near Bald Hill in Dunkard Township Tuesday afternoon and located six dead cattle. On Monday, Sutton and a state police trooper had found eight carcasses. Their search was prompted by a weekend tip that there were many dead cattle on the 500-acre farm.

All but two of the cattle were calves. Sutton said one of the calves was taken to a veterinarian for an autopsy. Although Sutton said he believed the autopsy would reveal the animal had starved to death, he noted the recent cold weather could have been a contributing factor since Donley did not have a barn or any type of shelter on the property. Donley told Sutton that his barn was destroyed by fire 12 years ago. The humane society agent added that some of the animals had probably been dead for three weeks or more.

"He was very cooperative," Sutton said of Donley, who told officials that he had been farming for about 50 years. "All he kept saying was he made a mistake."

Sutton said there was hay and feed available for the approximately 110 cattle on the farm but that Donley's tractor had not been working.

The Humane Society has given Donley until Friday to have his herd looked at by a veterinarian. Donley reportedly told Sutton he would be taking the cattle to an auction in Maryland over the weekend.

Sutton said the Humane Society will monitor the situation and will return to the farm on Monday to see a bill of sale for the remainder of the cattle.

Extension OK'd For Drug Case

WAYNESBURG — Judge Glenn Toothman Thursday approved an extension of the "180-day rule" in cases involving two defendants in a drug investigation in Waynesburg Borough.

Gary Mogil, representing the state attorney general's office and the prosecutor assigned to all cases involving the investigation, had made the request for the extension.

As a result of Toothman's ruling, the Commonwealth will have until March 31, 1985, to bring John Balsamo, 33, and Dave N. Smitley, 35, both of Waynesburg, to trial on various drug-related charges.

Balsamo remains in Greene County Jail in lieu of $390,000 bond on several charges. A detainer has also been filed by immigration officials who have charged him with being an illegal alien.

Smitley posted $80,000 bond and is free.

Two other principals in the drug investigation, William Henderson, 42, of Sycamore and Michael Conklin, 24, of Waynesburg were in court with their attorneys Thursday and waived their right to the "180-day-rule" which says a defendant must be brought to trial within six months of arraignment.

During lengthy testimony by Lt. David Clark of the Waynesburg Police Department, the chief investigator outlined his investigation of the local drug scene which began in April 1983.

Clark told the court he has been working with various FBI agents and agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency, state troopers in three states and various other police officials in New Jersey, New York,

Washington Woman Earns State Education Award

WAYNESBURG — Mary Grzanka, who always dreamed about going to college, has been named an "Outstanding Adult Student in Higher Education" in Pennsylvania.

The Washington resident, who is a junior at Waynesburg College, is one of 10 students in Pennsylvania to receive the award, which is given annually by the Pennsylvania Association for Adult Continuing Education.

The presentation was made by James Harris, administrative assistant to state Sen. J. Barry Stout, at a luncheon meeting Friday at the Waynesburg Elks Club.

Mrs. Grzanka was nominated for the award by Nancy Ferrari, a counselor in the Act 101 program at Waynesburg College. Mrs. Grzanka is a student in the Act 101 program, which is an academic support program funded by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

To be nominated for the award, students must have overcome difficult circumstances to attend college, been supportive of other adult students, played a part in sensitizing the institution to the needs of the adult student, have clearly defined goals, and have played an active role in the college.

In her 2½ years at Waynesburg College, where she is a psychology major, Mrs. Grzanka has been an active campus leader. She has served as president of Avant Garde, an organization that works to help meet the needs of non-traditional students, and has continued to work for improved services for all students.

"I always dreamed about going to college, even during my high school days. But due to my father not believing in education for women, and a lack of funding, I put my dream away.

"In my heart I guess I always knew that some day I would do it. In the meantime, I married, raised three children and had a career. The dream still persisted.

"Now I am a grandmother and my "someday" has arrived." She works with older individuals who are considering returning to school after long absences from the classroom, reassuring them that a lack of confidence, or fear, isn't at all unusual.

"The first time I came to Waynesburg it took three trips before I had the courage to go into one of the buildings," she recalls. "But I overcame that fear. I did it and you can too," she tells prospective older students.

A Dean's List student and a member of Psi Chi, the national honor society in psychology, Mrs. Grzanka has volunteered to help in the college's Student Life office during preparations for the annual New Student Orientation programs. She continues to work on special projects for Avant Garde and the college student senate, living near the campus during the week and seeing her family in Washington on weekends.

Her husband, Bill, and two of her children, Bill and Patty, were present for the presentation luncheon, which was attended by some 50 people from the college.

Charles A. Beiter, director of the Act 101 program at the college, served as master of ceremonies for the program, noting that Mrs. Grzanka "left a very prestigious and well-paying job to pursue a career in human services."

"Mary is an exemplar of what adult learning is all about," he said.

G. Wayne Smith, academic dean at the college, presented Mrs. Grzanka with a letter from college President J. Thomas Mills, who was out of town, and noted that her accomplishments represent "Waynesburg College at its best."

In his letter, Mills congratulated her on her achievement. "You are an example to every person who has a seemingly impossible dream," he said.

Ms. Ferrari reviewed the accomplishments of the honoree, citing her substantial contributions to the college and to the community. "If learning is doing, Mary is a learner," she said.

"I've worked and waited 30 years for this and I'm almost there," Mrs. Grzanka said in a brief acceptance speech, during which she expressed her thanks to members of her family for their support and to all those at the college who had helped her along the way.

This is the third time that a Waynesburg College student has received the "Outstanding Adult Student in Higher Education" award. Myra Gibson received the award during the 1982-83 academic year and Rebecca Henderson during the 1983-84 year.

Post Sues Local Firm Over Dolls

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — A Greene County company has been sued by the Saturday Evening Post Co. for alleged violation of copyright law in the manufacture of Norman Rockwell dolls.

The suit was filed Jan. 17 in U.S. District Court in Indianapolis against Rumbleseat Press of Greensboro.

The Post claims Rumbleseat has continued to make porcelain Rockwell dolls even though its previous license agreement had expired after Dec. 31, 1983.

The case also has been under arbitration, which the Post said the Pennsylvania company was trying to end.

The Post suit states that Rumbleseat's "continued manufacture, promotion, advertisement and sale of the porcelain doll products violates the plaintiff's copyright and constitutes unfair competition."

The Rumbleseat Press Co. is owned by Mary Moline, of Greensboro, who is out of the country and could not be reached. Her attorney said, however, that she would have a response to the suit when she returned.

Franklin Board Awards Contract For Water Line

WAYNESBURG — The Franklin Township Supervisors Monday awarded a $197,493 contract to Alden Construction Co. of Verona to build a 6,000-foot water line extension to East View.

Alden was the lowest of nine firms which submitted bids on January 14. The project calls for a 12-inch water line through East View and possibly to the Center Township line.

Most of the work will be paid for through a $200,000 grant from the state Department of Community Affairs.

A meeting of township officials and property owners involved with the extension will be held at 6 p.m. Monday, Feb. 11, in the township municipal building. All phases of the project will be discussed, including right-of-way agreements.

In other action, the supervisors approved payment of the annual $2,500 appropriations to Greene County Industrial Development and the township's recreation board. A $500 appropriation to Bowlby Public Library was also approved.

Many Townships Ignore Comparable Pay Doctrine

Being a member of a board of supervisors in Greene County can involve a wide range of responsibilities.

In most of the rural townships it usually involves little more than taking care of a network of secondary roads — and even there the burden of responsibility depends on whether the township has a large or small road system.

In townships with larger populations, being a supervisor typically involves a lot more, including administration of a much wider range of municipal services which can include overseeing of planning and zoning functions, water and sewerage systems, municipal codes, and occasionally police departments.

And yet the second class township code provides that all supervisors receive the same compensation in their capacity as municipal officials — $25 for each meeting they hold to deal with government affairs.

But when a supervisor also works on the roads as a township employee — and virtually all supervisors in the county's 20 townships do so — the equal pay doctrine breaks down badly, with their pay ranging from a low of $5 an hour to a high of $10.50 an hour.

The wide variation results from the fact that compensation of supervisors as roadmasters is set by the township's elected board of auditors, and the only thing they have to guide them is a provision in the code that the compensation be no higher than that paid for comparable work in the area.

In rural townships, with conservative auditors, low taxes and small budgets, the pay is almost invariably lower than it is in a more urban township. And yet their supervisors do the same type of work as their more fortunate brethren.

Bill Groves, president of the Greene County Association of Township Officials, has been talking about the problem of a "fair wage" for years but has made little headway in bringing about change, primarily because each township is an independent unit which is generally unaware of what others in the county are doing.

Groves does not advocate one pay scale for supervisors in every township because he recognizes that the financial capabilities of municipalities vary, but at the same time he feels that auditors are often too conservative in the matter of paying their supervisors.

When you consider that some townships are getting along with 2 or 3 mill property tax levies while paying their people well below the usual scale for road work, you realize that he has a valid point.

Young Democrats Ask Recognition

At a previous Greene County Democrat Committee meeting, our former county chairman, Bill Groves, appointed a few young committee men to reorganize the "previously recognized" Greene County Young Democrats. Research on this matter began and all the formal steps for this project were taken. In June 1984 an organizational phase meeting was held at the Greene County Fairgrounds with 24 other interested young people.

To date we have served the Democrat Party in numerous ways, beginning with a registration drive. On July 26, with permission from the current county chairman, Jim Harris, we constructed a voter registration booth. On July 29 we participated in Rain Day festivities with our booth; we traveled to the Jacktown Fair in Wind Ridge, the Greene County Fair in Waynesburg and the King Coal Show in Carmichaels. We registered over 200 voters. We then worked in cooperation with the Democrat Party on the annual fund-raising Democrat Picnic; we urged young people to attend and donated our time in various ways to make the picnic a success. For the fall election we supported the entire Democratic slate by volunteering our time at Democrat headquarters and also at the polls.

While participating in all of these events many inquiries were made. Who are the Young Democrats? What is their purpose?

The goals of a Young Democrat Organization are as follows: to encourage young people to become politically involved, to stimulate in young people an active interest in governmental affairs, to preserve the dignity of democratic representation in Greene County and, finally, to provide a learning experience for the development of leadership abilities for the future.

Now that our membership has more than doubled, we are asking to be recognized and accepted as a part of the Greene County Democrat Party. We are asking you, Mr. Harris, to sign our application for charter; if we are legally affiliated with the Greene County Party and the Pennsylvania Young Democrats, together we can make Greene County and Pennsylvania a place to be a proud Democrat.

To The Editor:

In the spring of 1983 a friend invited me to a "Meet Your Candidate" night for the commissioner race sponsored by the Greene County Democrat Committee.

I listened to the speeches and talked with the candidates and was able to make a decision on which candidates I would support. If I had not attended this function I would have relied on the news media and local gossip.

I was grateful to my friend for inviting me and I am now more interested in the politics of Greene County because of this one evening. My friend told me he and several others were asked to reorganize a group of young Democrats.

The purpose of the Greene County Young Democrats is to help the established Democrat Committee register voters and help with fund raising. But most of all to get more young people interested and involved in local politics.

I don't understand why Mr. Harris objects to this club being chartered officially. It can only strengthen the Democratic party in Greene County. It seems to me he would appreciate our time and energy to help him and all the committeemen. We registered hundreds of voters this past summer and attended the Greene County Democratic picnic and Christmas party to show our support.

We want to be officially recognized locally, statewide and on the national level. We need Mr. Harris to sign the charter application. We have the support of other committee members.

If Mr. Harris has just reasons for not signing our charter, why doesn't he meet with the other committee members and discuss it. It doesn't seem fair that our club should not be recognized on all levels because of one man's personal decision.

Fact and Folklore

John O'Hara

EDITOR'S NOTE: This week's column continues reminiscences on the old County Office Building which were first published in February 1973.

Continuing the story of the Greene County Office Building, originally the Peoples Bank Building, and the part it played in the day-to-day life of Waynesburg, it should be noted it was highly popular with doctors as well as with the attorneys who were mentioned last week.

Among the physicians there during the 1920's were such representative members of the profession as Dr. G.M. Scott, more informally known as "Cell" Scott; C.W. Spragg and later Dr. Scott's nephew, Dr. Donald Jacobs; Dr. H.C. Scott, also known as Harry Scott, and Dr. R.W. Norris.

All were general practitioners first in the tradition of the old time family doctor or country doctor, merely because they happened to be practicing in a small town.

They represented a variety of medical schools and were deeply dedicated to the highest ethical concepts of the profession. They made house calls at most any hour of the day or night and enjoyed a fine rapport with their patients, all of whom they knew personally. Also in many cases they had cared for families one or two generations back.

Dr. H.C. Scott was also a surgeon and somehow or other compressed enough hours into the night — often far into the night — to have an extensive general practice as well.

Dr. Spragg, a large, brawny man with a farm background through his pioneer ancestors, had a great flair for the dramatic. He was much given to quoting his favorite philosophers and poets and could have become an accomplished character actor if he had not been a doctor.

He was a great admirer of Theodore Roosevelt and was one of the original Bull Mooseers with "T.R." formed that splinter group from the national Republican organization. From that affiliation he formed a friendship with Gifford Pinchot and was Pinchot's leader in Greene County when the latter was elected governor.

The only patronage he wanted was to name the state dog law enforcement officer for Greene County, a favor which Pinchot for some reason failed to grant.

A few years later, while on a subsequent campaign trip into the county, the governor led his entourage up the stars of the bank building to call on the man he described as "my good friend Dr. Spragg." The two men met in the second floor hallway but Dr. Spragg brushed Pinchot aside.

"Don't you know me, Dr. Spragg," the astonished governor shouted. Rushing right on down the hall, Dr. Spragg shouted back, "Hell no, nobody wants to know a damned old S.O.B. like you."

"Only in Greene County, as Delvin Miller the harness tycoon often said, 'would somebody tell off a governor of his state like that.'"

The dental profession was chiefly represented in the Peoples Bank Building by the late Dr. W.C. Brown, who practiced in the same office on the second floor overlooking Main Street from the time he was graduated prior to World War I until his death in the late 1950's. He was a brilliant practitioner and for years he and Drs. G.N. Scott and Don Jacobs shared their waiting room.

Education in Greene County had much of its overall planning done in the upper floors of the Peoples Bank Building where a continuing procession of county superintendents of school had their office.

These included Harry Freeland, Kent Kelley, D. C. Longenecker and William Hartley and educational specialists such as Stanley Manifold, Fred Gillogly and W. Walter Montgomery. The office has been discontinued in the regional re-alignment of the State Department of Public Education.

Greene County's agricultural extension office has been quartered in the building since it was established about 1920 with G.F. Bedell as the first county farm agent.

The insurance industry was represented by M.B. Patterson, a long-time representative of various life and other insurance companies whose office was near the head of the stairs on the second floor.

Many of the building's most colorful events transpired in the office of Justice of the Peace Edward R. Patterson, originally on the second floor and later in the rear of the first-floor rooms later occupied by the county election bureau. Court ran through all seasons and sometime through all hours of the day and night, particularly during prohibition.

Frequently there would be mass arraignments of big and small fry bootleggers, booze runners nabbed on highways, and from brawls in patch towns and boarding houses which were spawned by private land owners off limits of "company" property in the new mining areas.

That was also the day of the "roving constables" who went far afield from their own bailiwicks to collect handsome mileage fees.

The Waynesburg bureau office of the Washington Observer was level with the top step of the stairs leading to the second floor and it was often the gathering place for doctors, attorneys and other occupants of the building during "bull sessions" after their day's work was done.

The late J.L. 'Lew' Fulton, the Observer's first Greene County correspondent, "chaired" the lively arguments, meanwhile pecking out his grist of daily news events from Waynesburg and Greene County.

"Visiting firemen" in the form of out-of-town reporters who came to town on particularly big stories generally made their headquarters there. Among them were such as Guy Ralston, a home-town Waynesburger who became a top staffer on various Pittsburgh papers; Bill White, former city editor of the Pittsburgh Press; Chet Smith, long-time Press sports editor, and George Swetnam, a Press columnist who authored a book on area folklore.

Also Joe Shuyman, late editor of the Post Gazette, and the former Anna Jane Phillips, one of Pittsburgh's first woman general assignment reporters and who is now Mrs. Shuman.

In the very early 1920's a young fellow from Chicago who came to town to produce a home talent minstrel show for the Elks Club dropped into the Observer office every day to write a publicity story for the show, as he also did the other years he visited here.

His name was Charley Correll and for a few years he was forgotten here as the fad for home talent shows died out. They he was suddenly remembered anew and never forgotten when he became internationally famous as the Andy in the world's most famous radio team of "Amos and Andy." The character of Amos was played by Freeman Gosden, who was also in Waynesburg for the last of their minstrel shows.

The annual Greene County picnic for former residents who now make their home in Arizona, and for county residents who are winter visitors to Arizona, will be held Sunday, Feb. 24.

The event, which has drawn as many as 150 persons in past years, will be held at McCormick Railroad Park, Scottsdale, Ariz. It will start at 12 noon, with the picnic dinner scheduled for 1 p.m.

Additional information can be obtained from Harry R. Dunn, 3825 East Mullberry Drive, Phoenix, Ariz., 85108 (602-955-4595) or Betty Connor, 8052 E. Del Caverna Drive, Scottsdale, Ariz., 85258 (602-998-5470).

"Everyone is invited, winter visitors, former Greene County residents, friends and relatives. We also welcome those from neighboring counties or anyone else who wants to come," Dunn said. "Bring a picnic style lunch and enjoy an afternoon of fellowship."

The Washington-Greene County Lions Leader Dog Club met recently at the Greene County Fairgrounds to discuss plans for the year. The club decided to meet on the third Wednesday of each month with the meetings being held alternately in each county. The next meeting will be held Feb. 20 at the home of Trisha and Linda Ogburn in Washington. Anyone interested in the program should contact Chuck or Linda Henderson at 627-9525.

Finally, one Monday, Jan. 28 the weather got above freezing in Greene County and some of the snow was melted from the sidewalks. Township workers have been having a tough time finding places to push snow on the high, wind-swept ridges. Some places require a snow blower.

In local servicemen news: Capt. Charles A. Harry of Waynesburg and Spec. 4 Kenneth Phillips of Greensboro were a part of the NATO-sponsored exercises in Germany. Following basic training, Airman William R. Vedis Jr. of Waynesburg will be assigned to Chanute Air Force Base, Ill. and Pvt. William Scritchfield of Waynesburg is waiting assignment. Airman John Wilkes of Jefferson will be assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base in Texas.

Although we complain about the weather, we could be residents of Preston County, W.Va. and really have troubles. There are 20-foot snowdrifts over most of the county and many families have not been out of their homes for several days. Emergency crews are using all-terrain military vehicles to reach some farms.

Ben Franklin officials have started work in the former G.C. Murphy Co. store on West High Street and could be in business by April. The community will soon be putting out the welcome mat for Kentucky Fried Chicken which plans to locate in the Greene Plaza Shopping Center.

Look for the Waynesburg College Yellow Jackets to be ranked high in the NAIA basketball rankings this week following an unbelievable two game stretch in which they converted 54 of 61 attempts. In winning both games, the Jackets made 34 of 40 against St. Vincent and 20 of 21 against Pitt-Bradford.

Being A New Mom Or Dad Is Not The Easiest Of Jobs

It's not easy being a parent.

There's no set of rules to follow that insure success. All new parents wonder if they are taking care of their new child properly. If the child is a first-born, the concerns are greater. After the first child parents feel somewhat more comfortable dealing with problems.

Preschoolers offer new challenges. Knowing what activities will promote physical, emotional or intellectual growth are important. Understanding what factors should be considered in selecting a day care center is essential. It's difficult to make decisions unless information is available.

Penn State has two learn-at-home series that are helpful to parents. One is called, "Off to a Good Start — You and Your Baby." The other is "Toddler Topics."

Designed for both mothers and fathers, "Off to a Good Start — You and Your Baby" offers a wide variety of useful ideas and hints to help you relax and enjoy being part of your child's growth and development. Subjects range from nutrition and feeding habits to stages of physical and mental development, safety, siblings and toys.

You are encouraged to make notations about your baby's growth and development. These notes can be a great help to your doctor when your child is sick, but they can also be a source of fascination to your children as they grow older and want to know what they were like when they were small. Since this series covers the first two years of a child's life, you have many remembrances.

"Toddler Topics" has been a high popular series for many years. All articles in this six-week series are written by extension home economists in nine southwestern counties of Pennsylvania. This year the series covers topics such as grandparents, books and reading, child care, health, learning activities, food, learning disabilities and toy selection.

In addition to the short articles, there is an activity page prepared by Jim VanHorn, family living specialist at Penn State. This series is useful to not only parents, but also to grandparents or anyone who cares for preschool children.

In the business of parenting there seems to be many positive ways of dealing with problems and concerns. Parents need all the help they can get, and some very good help is available in both of the learn-at-home series of materials which are available from the Greene County Cooperative Extension Service office at Waynesburg.

The "Off to Good Start" series cost $2. The "Toddler Topics" series is free.

Hogue Comes To The Yellow Jackets' Rescue

By Tom Rose, O-R Sports Editor

WAYNESBURG — For Theron Hogue, it was a matter of patience.

While the quest continued for the elusive fifth starter, and third scorer, on the Waynesburg College basketball team, Hogue kept his poise. Even though he was a major contributor to the Yellow Jackets' NAIA-District 18 championship last year as a freshman, he seemed to be chained to the bench this season.

But given his chance in Saturday night's District 18 game between the Jackets and Pitt-Bradford, Hogue may have proved that the answer to Waynesburg coach Rudy Marisa's missing fifth starter may have been staring him in the face all along.

Hogue contributed a career-high 15 points, seven rebounds, three blocked shots, a pair of steals and a much-needed offensive lift late in the first half to lead Waynesburg to a 78-66 victory over the visiting Panthers. The victory, coupled with Point Park's 66-64 loss to Geneva, solidifies Waynesburg's lead in the district standings at 6-1.

"No, I wasn't worried about not playing much," Hogue said with a soft smile parting his lips. "I just felt that the coach wanted to see everybody play, give everyone a chance to see what they could do. I never felt that I was being pushed to the back. I never felt left out."

He certainly wasn't left out of the Waynesburg offense, as he entered the game midway through the first half with the score tied 16-16. Hogue, a 6-4 guard-forward, then scored 10 of the Jackets' next 12 points to key a burst that Pitt-Bradford never recovered from. Waynesburg bolted to a 30-20 edge and extended it to 39-26 at halftime.

"The guys consider him as one of our more steadier players, one of our consistent guys," Marisa said.

"Maybe we keep looking for more explosive things and that's why we keep trying a number of people. But his teammates and my assistant coaches (Larry Marshall and Rich Relich) also recognize Theron as a steady performer, someone you can trust, a team player."

Hogue's offensive contribution (six of seven shots from the field and three for three from the foul line), added some balance to a lineup that has been carried by senior Paul Stanley and sophomore Harold Hamlin. Stanley led all scorers with 21 points while Hamlin had 18 points and 12 rebounds. "Ever since I've been here the coach has done the right things for me," Hogue said. "I went to Kansas City with him. And he's still doing the right things." Stanley and Hamlin also had their individual moments, as Hamlin had a pair of crowd-pleasing dunks and a personal eight-point run in the first half while Stanley's consistent shooting forced the Panthers into a pair of gimmick defenses in the second half.

"We thought we had them confused with the box-and-one (on Stanley) and triangle-and-two (on Stanley and point guard Tim McConnell) but with Stanley and Hamlin it's almost impossible for mere mortals to stop them," Pitt-Bradford coach Dick Danielson said. "I've seen everybody play in the district and I think Waynesburg has the best talent. But I'm not disappointed in the way we played. Twelve points is not the true difference between these two teams."

Pitt-Bradford, 4-5 in the district and 12-8 overall, fashioned several comeback attempts in the second half and moved within six points (62-56) with 2:24 left on a driving layup by Jerry Lawson. But Waynesburg's foul shooting remained uncanny — the Jackets converted 20 of 21 tries — and held off the Panthers' rally by sinking 14 free throws in the stretch.

"Waynesburg's shooting is just incredible," Danielson, who's leaving UPB at the end of the season to take over as athletic director at Western New Mexico University, said.

Jonathan Orr led the Panthers with 16 points while Caldwell Coleman added 14 and Lawson 11. Greg Harris, the team's leading scorer with a 19-point average, was held to just six.

"We played slow in the first quarter but picked it up in the second," said Waynesburg head coach Nick Mandich. "They had a box on Tammy so we pulled it out and made them play man-to-man. Once they did that we started moving and got some baskets underneath. Plus, we have seven girls who are really in the flow and contributing. That has made us a better team."
